NINETEENTH INDIANA INFANTRY, THREE YEARS.

Solomon Meredith, Colonel; regiment mustered in at Indianapolis July 29, 1861; mustered out at Louisville, Ky., July 12, 1865.

Officers, 43; men, 1,011; recruits, 447; veterans, 213; died, 267; deserted (unknown); unaccounted for. 451; total, 1,614.

NOTE.—A larger number is unaccounted for than in any other regiment.

The Nineteenth had not nearly so large a field of operations as some others, spending its whole four years in the Army of the Potomac But what it lacked in extent of territory was made up in severity of service. In sickness, in loss by killed and wounded and prisoners and death by disease, the sufferings and hardships of the Old Nineteenth were wonderful. Its first experience of battle was at Lewinsville, but by no means its last. At Gainesville and Manassas Junction. South Mountain and Antietam, and the terribly fatal attack on Fredericksburg, at Gettysburg and the fearful Wilderness campaign, ever in the post of danger and of death, the brigade composed in part of the Nineteenth, long before the battle of Gettysburg had richly earned the name by which it was known throughout the Potomac Army—"The Iron Brigade."

The history of the Nineteenth Indiana may be given in brief as follows:

Leaving Indianapolis August 5, 1861, it joined forthwith the Potomac Army August 9. At Lewinsville they were engaged with a slight loss of three killed and wounded, and three prisoners. They were in the engagement at Falls Church September 28, and wintered at Fort Craig, on Arlington Heights. The regiment spent the spring and summer until August in reconnoissances in Virginia, marching to Fredericksburg, to the Shenandoah Valley, to Warrenton, to Fredericksburg again, Spottsylvania and Cedar Mountain. At Gainesville, their loss was heavy —187 killed and wounded, and thirty-three missing.

Maj. Isaac M. May fell in that action. They were engaged at Manassas Junction, and not long after at South Mountain September 14, 1862, with forty killed and wounded, and again in the world-renowned conflict of Antietam September 17, 1862, with fearful hardships and heavy loss, their Lieutenant Colonel, Alois O. Bachman, being killed on that awful field of blood and slaughter.

October 6, Col. Meredith was promoted Brigadier General, and Lieut. Col. Samuel J. Williams became Colonel. The regiment fought in the attack on Fredericksburg December 13, 1862, and wintered at Belle Plain.

They marched to Gettysburg, arriving on the morning of July 1, 1863. A large part of the regiment was captured in that battle, and the poor sufferers spent weary months in those dens of unspeakable horror, the rebel prison-pens. The "Iron Brigade" opened the battle of Gettysburg about 9 o'clock in the morning of July 1, the Nineteenth being the regiment first engaged.

In the campaign of the Wilderness, during the summer of 1864, the Nineteenth was conspicuous in the sanguinary contest of that memorable period.

During the winter of 1864, a portion of the remnant of the Nineteenth re-enlisted as veterans. Col. Williams was killed in the Wilderness, and Lieut. Col. Lindley took his place.

The old regiments had become so reduced that a consolidation was effected in the fall of 1864. The Fourteenth and Twentieth were united as the new Twentieth. The Seventh and the Nineteenth were joined as the new Nineteenth September 23, 1864.

The two new regiments were again consolidated as the Twentieth October 18, 1864, with Col. William Orr as the commanding officer. The Twentieth was mustered out at Louisville July 12, 1865.

These regiments had in truth undergone a hard, severe, laborious, deadly service.

Great numbers were killed and wounded, and a far greater number died of disease, and still more were discharged for disability. Four regiments were consolidated into one, and only a meager few remained even then to recount the story of their achievements. Out of 5,801 men who had belonged to the four regiments, there were present at the final muster-out of the Twentieth Regiment barely twenty-three officers and 390 men. The soul shudders at the incalculable sacrifice of health and life, and the unspeakable burden of human suffering wrapped up in the bare statement of statistics given above—5,801 men reduced to 410. Alas! alas! how little knew or cared the reckless men who struck the fatal blow that opened the mortal strife what a bitter fountain of poisonous, deadly waters was by their fratricidal hand unsealed to pour its fatal flood widespread over the horror-stricken land!

TWENTIETH INDIANA, THREE YEARS.

We put the original Twentieth and the re-organized Twentieth in its various forms into one description.

STATISTICS.

Mustered in at Indianapolis July 22, 1861; Colonel, W. L. Brown; mustered out at Louisville, Ky., July 12, 1865.

The first duty performed by the Twentieth was to guard the Northern Central Railroad in Maryland. September 24, 1861, it was sent to Hatteras Inlet, N. C. Remaining there till November 9, they returned to Fortress Monroe. Lying in camp there till March, 1862, the Twentieth moved to Newport News, taking part in the conflict between the steamers Merrimac, Cumberland and Congress, keeping the rebel captors from taking possession of the Congress after she had struck her colors. May 10, 1862, it assisted in capturing Norfolk, joining afterward the Potomac Army in the Peninsula. On the 24th of June, it was severely engaged at the "Orchards," with a loss of officers and men. The regiment was in all the battles of the "Seven Days" except Glendale, or Frazier's Farm, losing heavily. Forming part of the flank guard of the Potomac Army across the Peninsula to Yorktown, they were sent to Alexandria, to the Rappahannock and to Manassas Plains, taking part in the battle there August 29, 1862, losing Col. Brown early in the action. September 1, the regiment was in the battle of Chantilly, moving thence to Arlington Heights. October 11, they undertook to intercept Stuart's cavalry raid, but were too late by ten hours. They were at Fredericksburg December 13, and took a chief part at Chancellorsville. They captured the Twenty-third Georgia, stronger in numbers than themselves. They moved to Gettysburg in time for the second day of that great battle, losing there the officer in command, the gallant Col. Wheeler. They joined in the pursuit of Lee to Manassas Gap, and were ordered to New York City to prevent threatened draft riots in that metropolis. The regiment returned to the Potomac; was engaged at Locust Grove and Mine Run, and went into winter quarters. January 1, 1864, the regiment veteranized and the veterans took their home furlough.

They crossed the Rapidan with Grant's army, and helped fight the battles of the Wilderness, Todd's Tavern, Po River, Spottsylvania, Tollopotanni and Cold Harbor. There the Fourteenth and the Twentieth were consolidated. They then crossed the James to the battles of Deep Bottom and Strawberry Plains, and then to the trenches before Petersburg, under fire every day, losing many men. Here Lieut. Col. George W. Mikel lost his life. October 18, 1864, the consolidated Nineteenth was united with the new Twentieth, taking the name of the Twentieth, and the commanding officer, Col. James Orr, from the Nineteenth. The new regiment lay in the works before Petersburg until spring, except in the advance on the Weldon Railroad. It took part at Preble's House and Hatcher's Run, and in all the engagements on the left from Hatcher's Run to the capture of Richmond. The last engagement by the regiment with the enemy was at Clover Hill, April 9, 1865.

The regiment shortly moved to Washington, and thence to Louisville. Ky., June 14, 1865. The men were mustered out July 12, 1865, numbering twenty-three officers and 390 men.

The following are the engagements of the Twentieth Indiana Infantry:

Hatteras Bank, Merrimac and Congress, Fair Oaks, Orchards, Gaines' Mill, Malvern Hill, Manassas Plains, Chantilly, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Manassas Gap, Locust Grove, Mine Run, Wilderness, Todd's Tavern, Po River, Spottsylvania, Tollopotanni and Cold Harbor; assault and siege of Petersburg, Weldon Railroad, Preble's House, Hatcher's Run, Clover Hill.

In comparing different regiments, it would be difficult to tell which one endured the hardest lot in the prosecution of the great civil war. In fact, comparisons are needless. The history of the whole war presents a wonderful and perhaps unprecedented record. The wars of Napoleon, or of Alexander the Great, of the Russian Czar Peter, of Frederick the Great, of Russia and the allies in the Crimean war, of the Austrians against the French, or of the French against the Prussians, scarcely rival our great North American war. War is terrible anywhere; but for long marches, bravery of attack, heroism of endurance and perseverance in execution, the war for the Union stands high in the annals of the world.

TWENTIETH REGIMENT, RE-ORGANIZED.

Regimental Officers—Major, Joseph T. Ives; mustered out as Captain Company A, December 5, 1864.

Company A—Captain, Joseph T. Ives, mustered out December 5, 1864; William W. Macy, transferred from Company I; mustered out with regiment.

Company A—Joseph A. Anderson, mustered out November 28, 1864; Thomas E. Barr, mustered out June 26, 1865; James A. Collett, mustered out March 11, 1865; Isaac Cherry, mustered out April 25, 1865; Lafayette Deardoff, mustered out July 12, 1865; John F. Flood, mustered out July 12, 1865; Florin V. Flood, mustered out June 13, 1865, as Corporal; Isaac R. Ford, mustered out May 31, 1865; Spotswood T. Foster, mustered out July 12, 1865; Joel Green, mustered out May 31, 1865; William R. Green, mustered out July 12, 1865; David Garringer, Corporal, mustered out July 12, 1865; William H. Harrison, mustered out July 22, 1865, as Corporal; James H. Hawkins, mustered out June 5, 1865; Peter Hester, mustered out July 12, 1865; William A. Houren, died October 18, 1864, of wounds received at Petersburg; Rufus King, Corporal, mustered out as First Sergeant July 12, 1865; Thomas Kirby, First Sergeant, promoted First Lieutenant, mustered out with regiment; Henry Knight, mustered out July 12, 1865; Henry Kirby, mustered out July 12, 1865; Thomas R. McGuire, mustered out July 12, 1865, as Corporal; Elias G. Moore, mustered out July 12, 1865, as Corporal; John Miller, mustered out April 25, 1865, disability; Henry Marshall, died in Salisbury Prison, N. C., February 12, 1865; John Mendenhall, discharged, disability; John Murray, Sergeant, captured at Yellow House August 19, 1864; Edward Packenham, from Nineteenth Regiment; John A. Pegg, mustered out February 1, 1865; David F. Pursley, mustered out July 12, 1865; Lafayette Pursley, mustered out July 12, 1865; George W. Rains, mustered out July 12, 1865; Milton Rains, mustered out July 12, 1865; Charles O. Rider, wounded at Wilderness; Benjamin F. Semans, mustered out; Michael Seagraves, mustered out July 12, 1865; Patrick Sullivan, record indefinite; Andrew J. Wood, Sergeant, transferred to Veteran Reserve Corps January 19, 1865, mustered out July 22, 1865; Levi Yost; William Zimmerman, mustered out October 29, 1864, as Sergeant.

Company C—Grear N. Williams, veteran, mustered out as Corporal July 12, 1865.

Company E—Elijah Bales, mustered out with regiment July 12, 1865; John Hank, mustered out July 12, 1865; Thomas Harris, mustered out July 12, 1865; James Lamly, mustered out July 12, 1865; John W. Moore, promoted Second Lieutenant; First Lieutenant; mustered out with regiment; Martin Phillips, wounded in the Wilderness, discharged May 22, 1865; William Phillips, record indefinite; Hugh M. Strain, mustered out July 12, 1865; Thomson Smelser, mustered out July 12, 1865; John Thomson, mustered out July 12, 1865.

Company I—William W. Macy, Captain, transferred to Company A, mustered out with regiment.

TWENTIETH RE-ORGANIZED—CONSOLIDATED.

First, the Fourteenth and Twentieth were united, making the Twentieth. Then the Seventh and the Nineteenth were consolidated, making the new Nineteenth. Lastly, the new Nineteenth and the new Twentieth were united, making a new regiment, still called the Twentieth, under Col. William Orr, formerly Lieutenant Colonel of the Nineteenth, the final consolidation occurring October 18, 1864. The new Twentieth remained in the works near Petersburg until the spring of 1865, except that they were sent on expeditions to cut the railroad communications of the enemy. Toward the Weldon Railroad it advanced to Stony Creek, engaging in the actions at Preble's House and Hatcher's Run. Thence to the fall of Richmond it was in the advance division of the Second Corps, and in all the battles till the surrender of Lee, the last being that at Clover Hill, Va., April 9, 1865. They marched to Washington City, moving thence to Louisville, arriving June 21, 1865, and being mustered out July 12, 1865, with 390 men and twenty-three officers.

Returning to Indianapolis under Col. Albert S. Andrews (Fourteenth Regiment), Gov. Morton gave them a characteristic public welcome, speeches being made also by Gen. Hovey, Dr. Everts and Chaplain William C. Porter, and, a few days after, they were discharged for their homes.

STATISTICS—TWENTIETH REGIMENT, RE-ORGANIZED.

Officers, 38; men, 868; recruits, 33; died, 44; unaccounted for, 56; total, 939.

TWENTY-FIRST INFANTRY, FIRST HEAVY ARTILLERY.

Mustered in at Indianapolis July 24, 1861—James W. McMillan, Colonel; changed to heavy artillery February, 1863; mustered out at Baton Rouge, La., January 13, 1866.

Officers, 80; men, 1,283; recruits, 2,028; veterans, 448; died, 392; deserted, 228; unaccounted for, 200; total, 3,839.

The following are the movements of the Twenty-first Indiana:

The first movement was to Baltimore, August 3, 1861, remaining till February 19, 1862.

The second movement was with Gen. Butler to reduce New Orleans, March 4, 1862. A part of the Twenty-first were the first to touch the wharf at New Orleans, May 1, 1862.

The third movement was to Baton Rouge, where the regiment remained till August, being engaged in the battle of Baton Rouge August 5, 1862, losing 126 men in three and a half hours.

The regiment spent the time from September, 1862, to February, 1863, in Louisiana and Texas, scouring the country and fighting rangers.

The regiment was mounted in February, 1863, and onward; and in July and October, 1863, two companies, L and M, were added. Ten companies were at Port Hudson, spending forty-two days in the siege.

Company F were mostly captured at Brashar City June 23. In the winter of 1863–64, a large number re-enlisted as veterans. They were furloughed home, and a magnificent reception was tendered them at Metropolitan Hall, Indianapolis, February 19, 1864. Companies G and H were up Red River with Banks.

In April, 1865, six battalions assisted in the investment and reduction of Mobile, with Forts Morgan and Gaines, and Spanish Fort.

After the war, the batteries were stationed at various places—Forts Morgan, Pickens and Barrancas, at Baton Rouge, as follows:

Companies B and C, at Fort Morgan.
Companies H and K, at Fort Gaines.
Companies F and L, to Fort Barrancas, Fla.
Companies I and M, at Fort Pickens.
Companies H, E and G were at Baton Rouge.
Company D was at Port Hudson.

In November, 1865, the regiment was ordered to rendezvous at Port Hudson. December 24, 1865, the first grand parade of the whole regiment of twelve batteries took place; and January 10, 1866, at Baton Rouge, La., the men were mustered out of service, the regiment containing some nine hundred and thirty men. Two hundred and forty of them came to Indianapolis for discharge, but seven hundred preferred to remain and be discharged in Louisiana, and it was so done.

The Twenty-first traveled, during its term of service, more than fifteen thousand miles, and was remarkably successful as to preserving the health and general efficiency of its members.

The only men known to be connected with the Twenty-first from Randolph County were some unassigned recruits, of whom not much information is given—none except what follows:

William J. Bremer, mustered out July 28, 1865; George Denny, died at New Orleans February 26, 1865; Charles H. Freeman, mustered out July 27, 1865; Harrison Hull, not known; John C. Leonard, unaccounted for; Stephen C. Lewis, record indefinite; William J. McQuistan, mustered out July 27, 1865; Jeremiah Rawlings, mustered out July 27, 1865; Mannon Street, record indefinite; Sanford A. Stephens, mustered out July 27, 1865; Samuel P. Strahan, mustered out July 31, 1865, as Corporal.

There are also two Randolph men in Company C, viz., Jacob Conkle, mustered out January 13, 1866; William A. Crouch, died December 15, 1864.

TWENTY-SEVENTH INDIANA INFANTRY, THREE YEARS.

Mustered into service at Indianapolis September 12, 1861—Colonel, Silas Colgrove; mustered out at Atlanta, Ga., November 12, 1864.

Officers, 40; men, 912; recruits, 116; veterans, 154; died, 275; deserted, 47; unaccounted for 52; total, 1,322.

The regiment left for active service September 15, 1861, only three days after their muster-in, and were soon transferred to Banks' army of the Shenandoah Valley. During the winter, they were encamped near Frederick City, Md., in huts built for the purpose.

The regiment moved, in March, 1862, into the Shenandoah Valley, joining in the pursuit of Jackson after the battle of Winchester Heights.

They were engaged at Front Royal May 23, 1862, retreating toward Winchester, and fighting in the fierce battle at that place May 25. Gordon's brigade, to which the Twenty-seventh belonged, was assaulted by twenty-eight rebel regiments. The brigade withstood the attack for three and a half hours, and repulsed it; but the force of the rebel army was so great that the Union troops were finally defeated. The regiment crossed the Potomac at Williamsport May 26, 1862, and, not long afterward, it marched back into the valley, and to Culpeper Court House, joining Pope's army, of Virginia. August 9, they were engaged at Cedar Mountain, as also at Antietam September 17, 1862, sustaining a heavy loss. After Antietam, they picketed the Potomac from Harper's Ferry to Opequan Creek, and lay, during the winter, near Fairfax and Stafford Court Houses. In the spring, the regiment crossed the Rappahannock and fought in the great battle of Chancellorsville, suffering great losses. It pursued Lee northward, and marched with the Twelfth Corps to Gettysburg, taking a prominent part in that great contest, and joining the pursuit of Lee to the Potomac.

In September, they were sent to the West with the Twelfth Corps, but joined the Twentieth, and were stationed at Tullahoma, Tenn., until spring. Some of the men re-enlisted January 24, 1864, and were furloughed home, coming back in time for Sherman's advance upon Atlanta. At Resaca, the regiment defeated the Thirty-second and Thirty-eighth Alabama, taking about one hundred prisoners, including the Colonel of the Thirty-eighth, and its battle-flag, its own loss being sixty-eight killed and wounded. They were in the whole Atlanta campaign.

November 4, 1864, the non-veterans were mustered out, and the veterans and recruits were put into the Seventieth, serving with that regiment through Georgia and the Carolinas, and, when the Seventieth was discharged, the men from the Twenty-seventh were attached to the Thirty-third till the muster-out of that regiment at Louisville, July 21, 1865.

The following were the officers in the Twenty-seventh from Indiana:

Colonel, Silas Colgrove, honorably discharged December 30, 1864, time expired; brevetted Brigadier General of Volunteers August 7, 1864.

Adjutant, Theodore F. Colgrove, promoted Major, mustered out November 4, 1864; re-entered service as Captain Company A, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Regiment; promoted Lieutenant Colonel.

Assistant Surgeon, Willis H. Twiford; promoted Surgeon; resigned July 16, 1864.

Col. Colgrove was the first Colonel of a three-years regiment that served through his term to the time of muster-out. There were nine in all of this kind, to wit: Col. Colgrove, Twenty-seventh; Col. Baker, Twenty-eighth; Col. Coburn, Thirty-third; Col. Ben Harrison, Seventieth; Col. A. O. Miller, Seventy-second; Col. Fred Kneffler, Seventy-ninth; Col. M. C. Hunter, Eighty-second; Col. Charles Murray, Eighty-ninth; Col. D. C. Thomas, Ninety-third.

TWENTY-EIGHTH INDIANA, FIRST CAVALRY.

Did service in detached parts in Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, West Virginia, Virginia, etc., doing much severe work and taking part in many battles.

Mustered in as follows:

Eight companies (A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H) at Evansville, August 20, 1861; Colonel, Conrad Baker.

Companies I and K were independent companies.

Company I was organized as a State company, for one year, April 15, 1861.

Mustered into United States service for three years, July 4, 1861.

Company K was organized at Indianapolis June 20, 1861, and afterward assigned to the First Cavalry.

Companies L and M were made up of drafted men, who served only nine months from November 1, 1862.

The only member from Randolph County in the Twenty-eighth was Assistant Surgeon George W. Bruce, mustered out June 5, 1864.

Officers, 51; men, 988; recruits, 301; veterans, 5; died, 131; deserted, 65; unaccounted for, 319; total, 1,488.

The members of the regiment were discharged at various times, as follows:

Companies L and M were discharged August, 1863.
Company K was mostly mustered out June, 1864.
Company I was discharged August, 1864.
Body of regiment was discharged September 6, 1865.
Companies A and B (recruits), discharged June, 1865.
Part of Company K (forty-three recruits), discharged in summer of 1865.

THIRTY-FIRST INDIANA INFANTRY, THREE YEARS.

William G. Smith, Company F, promoted Second Lieutenant, First Lieutenant. (Put down as private from Randolph County; as Second and First Lieutenant from Bloomfield.)

THIRTY-THIRD INDIANA INFANTRY.

Company G—Levi J. Linsey, mustered May 29, 1865.

Organized at Indianapolis September 19, 1861; John Coburn, Colonel.

Route of regiment—Louisville, Camp Dick Robison, Crab Orchard, Camp Wild Cat, London, Crab Orchard, Lexington, Cumberland Ford, Cumberland Gap, East Tennessee, Manchester, Oak Hill, Ohio, Danville, Lexington, Louisville, Nashville, Franklin, Columbia, Thompson's Station, Tullahoma, Shelby-ville, Murfreesboro, Manchester, Estill Springs, Cowan, Tracy Station, Christiana. Re-enlisted, 450 veterans, on veteran furlough—Buzzard's Roost, Atlanta campaign, with Sherman through Georgia and the Carolinas, Richmond and Washington City, reaching that place May 21, 1865; Louisville, mustered out July 21, 1865.

Commanders—Cols. John Coburn and Henderson, Maj. Miller, Col. Burton. Consolidated with it were the Twenty-seventh, Seventieth and Eighty-fifth; on the rolls, 1,500 men. The Thirty-third was a strong regiment, kept recruited and well together.

Officers, 43; men, 948; recruits, 886; veterans, 449; unassigned recruits, 492; died 267; deserted, 113; unaccounted for, 117; total, 2,875.

THIRTY-FOURTH INDIANA INFANFRY, THREE YEARS.

Mustered in at Anderson September 16, 1861; Asbury Steele, Colonel.

Re-enlisted as veterans, New Iberia, La., December 15, 1863.

Mustered out at Brownsville, Texas, February 3, 1866.

Arrived at Indianapolis with eighteen officers and 346 men February 18, 1866.

Publicly received at Soldiers' Home February 19, 1866.

Welcoming address by Gov. Baker.

Discharged from service February 19, 1866.

Officers, 42; men, 969; recruits, 357; veterans, 438; died, 236; deserted, 44; unaccounted for, 15; total, 1,806.

The route of the Thirty-fourth Regiment is given herewith: Jeffersonville, New Haven, Camp Wickliffe, Green River, Ky., Elizabethtown, Cairo, Ill., New Madrid, Fort Pillow, Memphis, White River, Aberdeen, Ark., Helena, Yazoo Pass, Milliken's Bend, Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Vicksburg, Jackson, New Orleans, Brashear City, Leche County, Carrion Crow Bayou, La., New Iberia, Pass Cavallo, Texas, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Home Furlough, New Orleans, Brazos Santiago, Texas, Palmetto Ranche, Brazos Island, Brownsville, Ringgold Barracks, Brownsville, Indianapolis.

The Thirty-fourth Regiment was employed on difficult, laborious service of many kinds. At the siege of New Madrid, Mo., they helped to clear a passage through a forest covered with water, for the guns, cutting down many of the trees several feet under the surface of the water.

They were at work for two weeks clearing the Yazoo Pass of the heavy timber felled by the rebels into the stream. They helped to build the bridges for the passage of Grant's army from Milliken's Bend to below Vicksburg.

They were everywhere an active, hardy, reliable body of men, a faithful, energetic, thoroughgoing regiment. The number of re-enlisted veterans from this regiment was greater than any other except two, viz., the Thirty-third and the First Heavy Artillery, and it had the greatest proportion of veterans of any regiment in the field.

The following are the men from Randolph County in the Thirty-fourth Indiana:

Company B—Benjamin Fouch, discharged February 4, 1865; Charles C. Heck, veteran, died at Brazos Santiago, Texas, January 17, 1865; Nicholas Heifner, veteran, mustered out February 3, 1866; Wesley S. Iliff, mustered out February 3, 1866, as Sergeant, veteran; William S. Reeves, veteran, mustered out February 3, 1866.

Company I—William B. Evans, died at New Madrid, Mo., May 25, 1862, accidental wounds; Nathaniel H. Gable, veteran, mustered out February 3, 1866, as Sergeant.

THIRTY-SIXTH INDIANA INFANTRY, THREE YEARS.

Regiment mustered in at Richmond September 16, 1861; Colonel. William Grose.

It left for the field soon after, with the Army of the Ohio, to Nashville, February, 1862; to Tennessee River and battle of Shiloh, March, 1862; loss, nine killed, thirty-eight wounded, one missing—total, forty-eight; siege of Corinth till the evacuation; eastward to Northern Alabama, and back to Nashville and to Louisville; pursued Bragg through to Kentucky; returned to Nashville; battle of Stone River—loss, 132; camped near Murfreesboro and at Cripple Creek; marched against Chattanooga; battle of Chickamauga, loss, 137; re-enlisted as veterans at Tyner's Station, Tenn.; went home on furlough February, 1864; moved in the Atlanta campaign with Sherman. Non-veterans mustered out at Indianapolis August 13, 1864. Pursued Hood's army north, and fought at Nashville, and chased him to Huntsville, Ala.; was joined with the battalion of the Thirtieth Regiment and went to Texas in July, 1865.

Mustered out at Victoria, Texas, November 25, 1865; reached Indianapolis December 6, 1865, with twenty-two officers and 180 men.

Public reception, December 7, 1865.

Final discharge of the members of the battalion.

Members of the Thirty-sixth Indiana from Randolph:

Assistant Surgeon Richard Bosworth, mustered out with regiment; had been Surgeon-at-Large for the State of Indiana, appointed in 1862.

Captain Company E, Samuel G. Kearney; resigned March 22, 1862.

Second Lieutenant, James R. Jones; resigned December 2. 1862. John Erwin, mustered out with the regiment.

Company K—Second Lieutenant, John S. Way; resigned February 6, 1862.

It may be that some of the men in the Thirty-sixth Regiment were from Randolph County, but none are so designated, and at least one company and many of the recruits have no residence assigned.

FORTY-SECOND INDIANA INFANTRY, THREE YEARS.

Mustered in at Evansville October 9, 1861; Colonel, James G. Jones.

Re-enlisted as veterans (215) January 1, 1864, at Chattanooga, Tenn. Mustered out at Louisville July 21, 1865.

Publicly received at Indianapolis July 25, 1865.

Addresses by Gov. Morton and Gen. Sherman.

Officers, 43; men, 976; recruits, 929; veterans, 215; died, 254; deserted, 60; unaccounted for, 119; total, 2,163; killed, 86; wounded, 443; prisoners, 100; mustered out, 846.

Publicly received at Indianapolis November 1, 1865—thirty-two officers, 530 men. Officers, 41, men, 936; recruits, 362; veterans, 409; died, 312; deserters, 62; unaccounted for, 20; total, 1,748.

Men from Randolph County in Forty-seventh Indiana:

Company B—Israel I. Rickerd, died at New Orleans, La., September 14, 1865.

Company C—James Overly, veteran, mustered out October 23, 1865, as Sergeant.

FIFTY-FOURTH INDIANA, ONE YEAR SERVICE.

This regiment was composed chiefly of nine-months drafted men and substitutes. It was organized in October, 1862, and mustered November 16, 1862, with Fielding Mansfield as Colonel. It was mustered out of service at New Orleans December 8, 1863.

Field of operations: Against Kirby Smith, Kentucky, 1862 (three months); Arkansas Post and Vicksburg, 1863; Louisiana, 1863.

The Fifty-fourth Regiment (one year service) moved from Indianapolis December 9, 1862, about three weeks after their muster-in, to Memphis, and was assigned to the Thirteenth Army Corps. December 20, 1862, it embarked with Gen. Sherman's army for Vicksburg, and reached Yazoo River December 26, 1862, taking part in the engagements at Chickasaw Bluffs, losing 264 killed, wounded and missing. After the capture of Arkansas Post, it moved to Young's Point and Milliken's Bend, and, being assigned to Osterhaus' division, helped to lead the advance against Vicksburg. They were at the battle of Thompson's Hill (Port Gibson); were placed as garrison for Fort Raymond; escorted prisoners to Yazoo River and to Memphis; returned to the siege of Vicksburg; advanced to Jackson, and helped to capture that place.

Soon after, they were taken to New Orleans, going with the expedition up Teche River to Opelousas and Vermillionville. They were mustered out at New Orleans, December 8, 1863, and returned to their Northern homes.

A considerable number of Randolph men were attached to this regiment in Company I, under Capt. Henry Carter, of Winchester.

Company I—Captain, Henry Carter, Winchester, commissioned November 1, 1862, mustered November 16, 1862; wounded at Vicksburg, and resigned February 13, 1863. First Lieutenant, Samuel P. Strahan, Winchester, commissioned November 1, 1862, mustered November 16, 1862; mustered out with regiment December, 1863; re-enlisted as private in Twenty-first Regiment (First Heavy Artillery) September 8, 1864; mustered out as Corporal July 31, 1865. Second Lieutenant, William P. Beeker, Winchester, commissioned November 1, 1862, mustered November 16, 1862, resigned April 24, 1863.

Men belonging to Fifty-fourth Indiana (one year):

Company I (Mr. Harshman says it was Company G)—Company mustered November 16, 1862. Thomas G. Mullen, Sergeant, mustered out December 8, 1863; Newton W. Needham, Sergeant, left service January 21, 1863; Andrew J. Daly, Corporal, died January 20, 1863, of wounds at Chickasaw Bluffs; William C. Heaston, mustered out December 8, 1863; Nathan Coats, Corporal, mustered out December 8, 1863; Elisha Lambert, Corporal, mustered out December 8, 1863; William M. Hughes, Corporal, died October 6, 1863; Joseph S. Jellison, Wagoner, died March 1, 1863; George S. Barker, left service January 21, 1863; George W. Boyer, discharged December 9, 1862; Lorenzo Byram, died March 20, 1863; Erastus Carwin, mustered out December 8, 1863; Gabriel Coats, killed at Chickasaw December 28, 1862; Elisha Conner, discharged December 6, 1862; Elihu Coats, mustered out December 8, 1863; Peter Coblentz, died May 26, 1863; Harrison W. Dille, mustered out December 8, 1863; Andrew J. Fisher, mustered out December 8, 1863; John Goodman, died July 15, 1863; Samuel P. Heaston, mustered out December 8, 1863; William R. Hollowell, mustered out December 8, 1863; Joseph G. Hindsley, mustered out December 8, 1863; Manasseh Johnson, mustered out December 8, 1863; Wesley Johnson, mustered out December 8, 1863; absent, wounded; Robert N. Porter, left the service November, 1862; Vincent Smith, left the service January 18, 1863; Edward Sizemore, discharged July 20, 1863; Daniel Vardeman, mustered out December 8, 1863, as Corporal; Walter Vardeman, mustered out December 8, 1863; John Wright, mustered out December 8, 1864; Samuel Witter, mustered out December 8, 1863; William Wickersham, died October 10, 1863; David Warren, died February 22, 1863; Edward J. Harshman, December 1, 1862, mustered out December 8, 1863; William Kizer, October 25, 1862; Albert Coats, December 1, 1862, mustered out December 8, 1863.

The officers were one Colonel, two Lieutenant Colonels, two Majors, two Adjutants, two Quartermasters, two Surgeons, four Assistant Surgeons, ten Captains, ten First Lieutenants, ten Second Lieutenants—in all, forty-five. The Colonel was Fielding Mansfield, Madison, commissioned Colonel October 29, 1862; mustered November 17, 1862; mustered out with regiment.

Twenty-seven of the forty-five officers continued through the whole term of service, being mustered out with the regiment; eleven resigned, one declined and four died—two of wounds and two of disease.

Officers, 41; men, 915; recruits, 33; died, 216; deserters, 81; not accounted for, 358; total, 989.

The Fifty-fourth had more men of whom no account is given than any other except the Nineteenth, which has 451 of that class.

FIFTY-FIFTH REGIMENT INDIANA INFANTRY (THREE MONTHS).

The regiment was mustered in at Indianapolis June 16, 1862, John R. Mahan, Colonel. Mustered out at Indianapolis at the expiration of the term of service. Duties performed, guarded prisoners at Camp Morton, and marched into Kentucky to assist in repelling the incursion of Kirby Smith.

Company F—Reuben B. Farra, Captain, mustered out with regiment; James Addington, Second Lieutenant, mustered out with regiment.

Probably a large number of Randolph men were enlisted in Company F of the Fifty-fifth Regiment, but the places of residence are not given and the men cannot be designated. Officers, 36; men, 603; recruits, 19; died, 4; no deserters; unaccounted for, 19; total, 658. The men in Company F, perhaps from Randolph County, are as follows:

John J. Adams, William Addington, Harris H. Abbott, Solomon Bartholomew, Joseph Biddle, Isaac Blansett, John W. Bolling, Joshua Boyds, George Bonnywell, Franklin Broy, James G. Bush, Harmon B. Bolling, James M. Clark, Thomas J. Clevinger, Beda B. Cowgill, Isaiah Cowgill, William Cook, Joseph Coffin, Price Craig, Samuel B. Crosier, Dennis Carter, James Dailey, James H. Rice, Walter Ruble, Alfred Runyan, Henry H. Sumption, Adolphus C. Shaffer, Samuel S. Sherrard, Charles Sheltmyre, Thomas Short, Calvin K. Taylor, Wilson Thomas, Noland Thomas, Jeremiah Vance, Noah Wirt, Samuel Winship, John Winship, Elijah Wood.

FIFTY-SEVENTH INDIANA INFANTRY (THREE YEARS).

Mustered in at Richmond November 18, 1861; Colonel, J. W. T. McMullen. Re-enlisted as veterans in East Tennessee January 1, 1864. Veteran furlough March and April, 1864. Mustered out at Victoria, Texas, December 14, 1865. Reached Indianapolis January 1, 1866, 23 officers and 168 men under Col. John S. McGraw. Officers, 50; men, 923; recruits, 464; veterans, 215; died, 267; deserters, 54; unaccounted for, 24; total, 1,652.

The Fifty-seventh was mustered into service at Richmond November 18, 1861. Moving to Indianapolis and remaining till December 13, it reported to Gen. Buell at Louisville; thence the regiment was ordered to Bardstown to join the Army of the Ohio, Sixth Division; soon it was moved to Lebanon, then to Munfordville by rail and to Nashville on foot, arriving in March. March 21, the Army of the Ohio set out from Nashville to join Gen Grant. The regiment arrived only on the afternoon of April 7, the second day of the battle, but engaged immediately, losing lightly. It remained through the siege of Corinth, and then marched into North Alabama, and about the middle of July, to Central Tennessee again, remaining near Tullahoma and McMinnville till September 1. Bragg's attempt on Louisville aroused fresh activity, our troops were ahead and Bragg fell back to be pursued through Kentucky and defeated at Perryville. The Fifty-seventh took part in all this work, and marched again to Nashville. Although the Fifty-seventh had been in few great battles, yet its work was severe; guarding trains, foraging, skirmishing, kept the regiment busy and produced much hardship.

At Stone River a loss was suffered of seventy-five out of 250 engaged. Col. Hines and Lieut. Col. Lennard were both seriously wounded. Until the spring of 1863, they were encamped near Murfreesboro, scouting, foraging, picketing, skirmishing and drilling severely and constantly. Before the capture of Chattanooga and the battle of Chickamauga, the Fifty-seventh was north of the Tennessee, but when the rebels left the town, the brigade to which they belonged took possession, and the regiment was selected as Provost Guard. They were relieved in time to take a prominent part at Mission Ridge.

After Chickamauga, the Fifty-seventh was assigned to Sheridan's Division and continued so to the end. That division went into East Tennessee against Longstreet for the relief of Knoxville. That winter campaign among the mountains of East Tennessee can hardly be equaled in the annals of the war. The army went stripped of baggage into the fight around Chattanooga, and marched forthwith from the pursuit of the foe, starting on their perilous journey of hundreds of miles with no preparation and scanty supplies. One mess of seven in one of the regiments had nothing to cook on but two old canteens, torn open and flattened out as a sort of pan. But it mattered little, as they had almost nothing to cook. They had to depend on the country and a poor show they found it. Cattle indeed were somewhat plentiful, and the beef supply was pretty good; but breadstuffs were scarcely attainable at all. In some cases, wheat bran was their only resource. And before the army returned to their comrades in Northern Alabama, many had marched their shoes off and nearly their clothes as well. But they had done what they had undertaken—cleared out Longstreet and relieved Knoxville; and the brave loyalists of that mountain country and the "Union" boys felt happy. As soon as they reached the main body of the army, abundant supplies were obtained.

January 1, 1864, the regiment veteranized almost to a man. Their veteran furlough was postponed till March, and from that they returned just in time for Sherman's advance upon Atlanta. In all that wondrous campaign, the Fifty-seventh was unwearied in their exertions to push the rebels to their utmost. At Rocky Face Ridge, Adairsville and New Hope, in the deadly struggles around Kenesaw, this regiment was among the bravest, and lost many officers and men.

After Atlanta, the Fifty-seventh was dispatched northward against Hood and made a part of Thomas' heroic army at Franklin and Nashville. When Hood's forces had been dispersed, this regiment camped at Huntsville for several months, moving to Bull's Gap, in East Tennessee, in April, 1865. After moving to Nashville in April and remaining there till July, they were transferred to Texas, and, on the 14th of December, 1865, were mustered out of service at Victoria, Texas, reaching Indianapolis January 1, 1866, with 23 officers and 168 men.

Worthily does the report of the Adjutant General pay a glowing tribute of praise to their achievements in the following noble words:

"The Fifty-seventh has seen much arduous service; its losses in battle have been heavy and its marches have been especially and exceedingly severe, having crossed the entire breadth of Kentucky three times and of Tennessee six times. It has behaved with great gallantry on every occasion, and has achieved an enviable record and an honorable fame."

Their officers were excellent men and thorough soldiers, and the regiment proved itself worthy of such commanders. Cols. McMullen, Hines, Lennard and Blanche have been seldom equaled and still more rarely excelled.

The members of the Fifty-seventh Regiment from Randolph County are as follows:

Company B—Daniel F. Anthony, discharged April 4, 1862, disability; Allen L. Chamness, veteran, mustered out December 14, 1865, Sergeant; William Fogleman, veteran, mustered out December 14, 1865, Corporal; Abraham L. Manning, veteran, mustered out December 14, 1865, Corporal.

SIXTY-NINTH REGIMENT INDIANA INFANTRY (THREE YEARS).

The regiment was mustered in at Richmond August 19, 1862; Colonel, William A. Bickel. Mustered out at Mobile, Ala., July 5, 1865. Public reception at Indianapolis July 18, 1865, with 16 officers and 284 men. Welcoming address by Gov. Morton. Officers, 42; men, 960; recruits, 98; died, 326; deserters, 61; unaccounted for, 21; total, 1,100.

The Sixty-ninth Regiment was hurried into the field, leaving the very next day, August 20, for Lexington and Richmond, Ky., and fought in the battle there, August 30, 1862, with a heavy loss of 218 killed and wounded, being finally captured in a body and paroled on the field. They were sent to parole camp at Indianapolis, but were exchanged in a few weeks, and, on the 27th of November, 1862, the regiment was sent to Memphis and down the river with Sherman to Vicksburg. They were in the battle and repulse at Chickasaw Bluffs, behind Vicksburg, losing slightly. They helped to capture Arkansas Post and camped at Young's Point, losing over 100 men by disease at that deadly spot.

March 30, 1863, the Sixty-ninth led the advance against Vicksburg. At Richmond, La., they built 2,000 feet of bridging in three days and the army moved across the peninsula in front of Vicksburg. April 30, the advance crossed at Hard Times Landing, and the battle of Port Gibson was fought the next day, the Sixty-ninth losing seventy-one in killed and wounded. May 16 they were at Champion Hills and May 17 at Black River Bridge; in the siege of Vicksburg to May 22, and at Black River Bridge during the rest of the siege. The Sixty-ninth was in Osterhaus' division, which uniformly led the advance in the operations east of the Mississippi before Vicksburg was invested.

The Sixty-ninth was in the siege of Jackson. August 3 they were sent to Port Hudson and afterward to New Orleans, to Berwick City and the Teche country, returning to Algiers and embarking in November for Texas. Matagorda Bay was reached December 1, 1863. The regiment sailed for Indianola February 13, 1864, and came back to Matagorda Island March 13, suffering a loss of two officers and twenty men by the swamping of a boat.

They left Texas for New Orleans in April, and marched thence to Alexandria, engaging in the fight at that place and joining in Banks' retreat to Alexandria. They encamped at Morganza until December, 1864, making various expeditions from that place. December 7, 1864, it was sent to Mobile Bay, and, on the 14th, joined the Pascagoula expedition led by Gen. Granger.

January 22, 1865, a consolidation was effected into a battalion with four companies, with Oran Perry for commander. January 31, the battalion embarked for Barrancas, Fla., and thence, March 14, went to Pensacola. March 20, they moved with Steele's expedition through to Florida and Southern Alabama, arriving in the rear of Blakely April 1, 1865. The Sixty-ninth fought in the attack on Blakely, April 9, and were sent to guard prisoners from Blakely to Ship Island. They returned to Blakely and marched to Selma. May 3, they were ordered to Mobile for Texas, but remained at Mobile.

They were mustered out at Mobile July 5, 1865, and, with 16 officers and 284 men, reached Indianapolis, and after a public reception, July 18, 1865, the members of the battalion were discharged and joyfully dispersed to their homes.

The Sixty-ninth left its dead in eleven States, and its services, though not so prominent as were those of some others, were severe, and, in many cases, attended with great hardships and suffering. Its death list was very large. Only five regiments have a greater one, and the per cent of deaths in the Sixty-ninth is greater than that in any other, as will appear by the following figures:

Ninth (three years)—Deaths, 351; men, 2,141; 16⅓ per cent.

Twenty-sixth (three years)—Deaths, 336; men, 1,997; 17 per cent.

Thirtieth (three years)—Deaths, 365; men, 1,408; 26 per cent.

Thirty-first (three years)—Deaths, 366; men, 1,886; 19⅓ per cent.

Thirty-eighth (three years)—Deaths, 353; men, 2,028; 17⅓ per cent.

Sixth-ninth (three years)—Deaths, 332; men, 1,100; 30 per cent.

Eighth Cavalry (Thirty-ninth)—Deaths, 239; men, 2,415; 14 per cent.

First Heavy Artillery (Twenty-first)—Deaths, 392; men, 3,839; 10 per cent.

Average per cent in the eight regiments, 16¾ per cent.

The Sixty-ninth is three times as high as that of the lowest of the eight regiments (First Heavy Artillery), 4 per cent more than the highest one besides, and almost double the average rate of the eight regiments.

The swamps of Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Alabama and Florida told fearfully against the lives of the poor fellows who followed the flag of the Sixty-ninth and in the soil of eleven once hostile (but now, let us hope, reconciled and friendly) States, these much enduring men have been laid to rest to await the Archangel's trump at the resurrection morn.

The Seventy-fifth Regiment was raised in the Eleventh Congressional District, and its place of rendezvous was Wabash. The men were mustered in August 19, and August 21 the regiment moved to Louisville, thence to Lebanon and back to Louisville. They marched to Frankfort, Scottsville and Gallatin, and back to Cave City in pursuit of Morgan. Their winter camp was near Gallatin, and in January, 1863, they moved to Murfreesboro, remaining until June 24, being engaged in scouting and other hard service. The Seventy-fifth was a part of the Second Brigade, Third Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, and they were known as the Indiana Brigade, all three regiments being from Indiana —Seventy-fifth, Eighty-seventh and One Hundred and First.

June 24, 1863, the regiment set out for Tullahoma, fighting the battle of Hoover's Gap as they went. This regiment entered the rebel works at Tullahoma first about July 1, 1863. It crossed the Tennessee with Rosecrans and fought at Chickamauga September 19 and 20, 1863, the loss being 17 killed and 107 wounded.

The regiment was stationed at Chattanooga for several months, taking a part in the battle of Mission Ridge, losing twenty-two killed and wounded. The winter was spent in and near Chattanooga, and early in the spring the regiment moved to Ringgold for the Atlanta campaign. April 27, 1864, Sherman ordered his troops to concentrate at Chattanooga.

We quote from the Adjutant General's report:

"On the 7th of May, 1864, Thomas occupied Laurel Hill. On the 12th, the whole army, except Howard's Corps, moved through Snake Creek Gap on Resaca. On the 15th the battle of Resaca was fought, and the same night the rebel army retreated across the Oostenaula. Near Adairsville, the rear of the rebel army was encountered, and a sharp fight ensued. On the 28, the enemy made an assault at Dallas, but met with a bloody repulse. On the 27th of June an assault was made upon the enemy's position on Kenesaw without success. On the 2d of July, Kenesaw was abandoned by the enemy. On the 4th, Thomas demonstrated so strongly on the enemy's communications as to cause him to fall back to the Chattahoochie River and cross that river on the 9th. On the 20th, the enemy sallied from his works in force, and fought the battle of Peach Tree Creek. On the 22d, a general battle was fought in front of Atlanta, the rebels being defeated. On the 28th, the enemy made another assault upon our besieging lines, but were driven back in confusion. The siege of Atlanta vigorously progressed with constant skirmishing. On the 25th of August, the bulk of Sherman's army moved by a circuit around Atlanta, struck its southern communications near Fairburn, destroying the West Point Railroad and the Macon Railroad. This caused the enemy to evacuate Atlanta on the 2d of September. On the 4th of September, the army moved slowly back to Atlanta, and rested in clean, healthy camps. Thus, after four months' campaign, ended one of the greatest achievements of the war."

During the Atlanta campaign the regiment marched and fought with the Second Brigade, Third Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, engaging in the battles of Dalton, Resaca, Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek and Jonesboro. The regiment had for a brief season a time of rest; but soon they moved to repel Hood's advance on Sherman's rear. The regiment marched in pursuit to Gaylesville, resting a short time on the Chattooga River. Returning to Atlanta, the Seventy-fifth set out with Sherman on his famous "march to the sea," and went the whole round through Georgia and the Carolinas, to Raleigh, and through Virginia to Richmond and Washington. And by that time the war was over.

The regiment took part in the grand review before President Johnson, Gen. Sherman and the rest of the magnates, marching in solid phalanx twelve deep for hours, "tramp, tramp, tramp," through the broad avenues of the Capital City.

They were mustered out at the capital June 8, 1865. The recruits were transferred to the Forty-second Indiana, and served with that regiment until its muster out at Louisville July 21, 1865.

Company F—Charles S. Butterworth, mustered out June 8, 1865; Samuel A. Force, mustered out June 8, 1865; Nathan B. Hickman, discharged February 28, 1863; George McCartney, mustered out June 8, 1865.

EIGHTY-FOURTH INDIANA, THREE YEARS.

Regiment mustered in at Richmond September 3, 1862; Colonel, Nelson Trusler; mustered out at Nashville June 18, 1865; reached Indianapolis June 17, 1865; was publicly received, with others, June 26, 1865. Addresses were made by Gov. Morton, Gen. Hovey, Gen. Wilder and others.

Officers, 43; men 906; recruits, 78; died, 207; deserted, 53; unaccounted for, 9; returned, 349; total, 1,027.

The Eighty-fourth Regiment was raised in the Fifth District, and mustered in at Richmond September 3, 1862, with Nelson Trusler, Colonel. Its first work was to aid in the defense of Cincinnati from the legions of Kirby Smith. Buell's army made the Confederate hosts to fall back, and the regiment was sent to Western Virginia, camping at Point Pleasant, Guyandotte, Catlettsburg and Cassville; at the latter place nearly three months. February 7, 1863, the Eighty-fourth sailed down the Ohio to Louisville, and thence to Nashville, encamping there until March 5. Thence they moved to Franklin, camping again until the 3d of June. Its times of encampment were occupied with scouting, reconnnoissances, skirmishes, and the like.

June 3, they marched to Triune. They were attacked June 11, but without success, by the rebels. Thence they marched through Shelbyville to Wartrace, encamping until August 12, and thence to Tullahoma and to Stevenson, Bridgeport and Chattanooga, arriving September 13. Camping at Rossville until the 18th, the regiment marched to the front and were posted on the left of the army of the Cumberland.

The Eighty-fourth was in the battle of Chickamauga both days, fighting bravely and losing heavily. Holding the key to Rosecrans' retreat, that division stood stubbornly and saved the army. The regiment was on picket duty opposite Lookout Mountain nine days and nights, and then moved to Moccasin Point and then to Shell Mound, remaining there until January 20, 1864. The Eighty-fourth was transferrred to the Second Brigade, First Division, Fourth Army Corps. The regiment marched to Cleveland, reaching the place February 6; thence on the the 22d to Buzzard's Roost, fighting there on the 25th. Returning to Cleveland, they stayed until the 3d of May, 1864. Sherman was now ready to march and fight his stubborn way to Atlanta, "the gateway of the South," and the Eighty-fourth was with him all the time, and were engaged in fifteen battles during that terrible summer, marching triumphantly at the last into the conquered city of Atlanta. After this campaign, the Fourth Corps was ordered back to the Army of the Tennessee; and they marched by way of Athens, Pulaski and Franklin to Nashville, fighting in the furious battle of Franklin on the way. Reaching Nashville December 1, they had barely time for a short respite before Thomas burst forth upon Hood with resistless power, scattering Hood's army to the winds. Our troops pursued for a long way, and returned at last.

Encamping at Huntsville, where it had ended its pursuit of Hood, the troops remained there until March 13, moving thence to Knoxville, Strawberry Plains, Bull's Gap and Shield's Mills. Remaining awhile, they went back once more to Nashville April 18, 1865. June 14, 1865, the Eighty-fourth was mustered out at Nashville, the recruits being assigned to the Fifty-seventh Indiana, serving in that regiment until its muster out in November, 1865.

Reaching Indianapolis June 17, a reception was held June 26, 1865.

Three companies belonging to the Eighty-fourth Regiment were formed chiefly in Randolph County. Company A, mostly from Farmland; Company E, chiefly from Deerfield; Company H, largely from Winchester. A considerable number of Company K also belonged to Randolph.

NINETIETH REGIMENT (FIFTH CAVALRY), THREE YEARS.

Regiment mustered in at Indianapolis September 9, 1862; Colonel, Felix W. Graham. Regiment mustered out at Pulaski, Tenn., June 16, 1865.

Officers, 51; men, 1,191; recruits, 522; died, 211; deserted, 125; unaccounted for, 99; total, 1,764. Battles, 22; marched by land, 2,400 miles; passed by water 1,000; captured prisoners, 640; killed, 35; died from wounds, 13; died in prisons, 115; died in hospitals, 74; wounded in action, 72; captured of regiment, 514; total casulties, 829.

The Ninetieth (Fifth Cavalry) Regiment was made up at different times.

Four companies were mustered in August, five in September and three in October, 1862.

The companies were sent to different places, C and F to Carrollton, Ky., and I to Rising Sun, Ind.; the others to the counties on the Ohio River.

A and G were stationed at Newburg, B at Rockport, D and L at Mauckport, E and H at Cannelton, K at Mount Vernon, and M at Evansville.

The whole regiment was united at Glasgow, Ky., in March, 1863, and were kept scouting and skirmishing on the Cumberland River. The regiment spent much of their time in Middle and Eastern Tennessee until February, 1864, engaging in exceedingly active, laborious and dangerous service, fighting many battles, some of them severe and fatal.

July 4, 1863, it started in pursuit of the rebel Gen. Morgan, then crossing the Cumberland.

They marched to Louisville, and were sent up the Ohio on steamers to Portsmouth.

July 19, 1863, the regiment headed Morgan's forces at Buffington's Island, and fought them there, scattering the rebels in every direction, killing aud capturing many, and taking also five pieces of artillery.

They returned to Louisville, and August 15 started for East Tennessee, crossing the Cumberland Mountains, and being the first Federal regiment to enter Knoxville.

In May, 1864, they crossed the mountains to Tunnel Hill, Ga., arriving May 12, 1864, and joining Gen. Stoneman. On the "Stoneman Raid," the Fifth Cavalry, after bravely holding the enemy in check for the escape of the main body, were surrendered to the enemy against the vigorous protest of Col. Butler, their commander.

These poor men were doomed to the horrors of Andersonville and other prisons only less abominable and deadly. The sad tale of their sufferings may be guessed by the terrible fact that 115 of their number died in prison.

The part of the regiment not captured remained at Atlanta after its surrender, performing guard duty until September 13, 1864, and they were then transferred to Kentucky, being at the time serving as infantry.

The regiment was at length mounted anew, and January 17, 1865, was sent from Louisville to Pulaski, Tenn. Here they scouted, captured bushwhackers and outlaws until June 16, 1865. The muster out then took place, and they were welcomed at Indianapolis June 21, 1865, at the Capital grove.

Companies G, L and M were transferred to the Sixth Cavalry, and were mustered out at Murfreesboro, Tenn., September 15, 1865.

Men from Randolph County belonging to the Eighty-fourth Regiment—Assistant Surgeon, George H. Russell, mustered out January 27, 1865.

Morton, Gen. Hovey; June 13, 1865, home.

NINETY-NINTH INDIANA INFANTRY, THREE YEARS.

Regiment mustered in at South Bend October 21, 1862; Colonel, Alexander Fowler; mustered out at Washington June 5, 1865.

Officers, 41; men, 859; recruits, 84; died, 178; deserted, 32; unaccounted for, 2; men at close, 425; total, 984; marched 4,000 miles.

The Ninety-ninth was recruited in the Ninth Congressional District, including, however, three companies from the Sixth District that had been raised for the Ninety-sixth.

In November, 1862, the regiment moved to Memphis, and November 25, on the Tallahatchie campaign. Returning, they were stationed on the railroad east of Memphis, at Lagrange.

May 6, 1863, the regiment moved to Memphis, and thence down the Mississippi to the siege of Vicksburg.

July 4, they started for Jackson. July 16, that town was evacuated and Sherman's army took possession. After lying in camp at Big Black River for several weeks, the movement to Chattanooga was begun. The Ninety-ninth formed a part of the column that struck out from Memphis and marched across Mississippi and Alabama into Georgia, through Corinth, Florence and Stevenson, to Chattanooga, arriving November 24. The battle of Mission Ridge was fought the next day, and the Ninety-ninth was engaged therein.

Chasing Bragg to Graysville, they turned eastward, and set out forthwith for Knoxville, to drive off Longstreet and relieve Burnside. The column accomplished their difficult march, nearly without blankets, and greatly lacking for clothing and shoes, without regular rations and cut off from supplies, many of the men barefooted, but cheerful in their destitute condition, they pressed resolutely onward to find Longstreet's legions fleeing from their approach, and bringing abundant rejoicing to the hearts of the troops shut up in the beleaguered town of Knoxville. The regiment returned, reaching Scottsboro, Ala., December 26, having made a desperate march of more than four hundred miles since driving the hosts of the boastful Bragg from the investment of Chattanooga.

They encamped at Scottsboro until February 14; marched into East Tennessee and back to Scottsboro, and on the 1st of May, 1864, set out as a part of Sherman's grand army on the movement to Atlanta and the sea.

The regiment was in nearly every battle through the entire campaign.

After the fall of Atlanta, Hood's army was pursued, and the Ninety-ninth had a march out and back of 200 miles. With the Ninety-ninth in Howard's Corps on the left, Sherman's victorious force swung loose from its moorings and moved boldly forward through the heart of Georgia, finding supplies as they marched. On a track sixty miles wide that conquering army moved, nor stopped nor stayed until in twenty-four days they had swept over 300 miles of travel and taken Fort McAllister, entered Savannah in triumph and opened communication with the shipping on the coast.

December 15, Savannah was occupied. Shortly the legions took up again their line of march, turning the head of their advancing column northward to capture Richmond and Gen. Lee, and end the war. Columbia was reached February 17, 1865. The Twentieth Corps gladly received the aid of the Ninety-ninth in the battle of Bentonville. Thence the road was taken to Goldsboro, Raleigh, Petersburg and Richmond. The brave soldiers who had made their march hundreds of miles to help take Richmond were balked of their purpose; for Richmond had been already taken, and Sherman's legions could only enter the rebel stronghold as a conquered city. Onward to the capital they pursued their unobstructed way, took part proudly in the grand review in the streets of Washington and were mustered out June 5, 1865, and going by rail to their own State and capital, they were joyfully received and cordially welcomed "home again." The Ninety-ninth had 900 officers and men, and 425 at mustering out. Though they performed much had service, including thousands of miles of weary tramp, tramp, tramping over Southern plains and valleys, yet health and strength, and, we may add, good hope and cheer, were preserved in a remarkable degree.

Company H—Elliot Budd, discharged February 1, 1863; John W. Baker, mustered out June 5, 1865; Joseph Clark, discharged January 1, 1863; James D. Dooley, mustered out June 5, 1865; John C. Denny, mustered out June 5, 1865; Adoniram Doughty, mustered out June 5, 1865; Burdine Dodd, mustered out June 5, 1865; John P. Dodd, mustered out June 5, 1865; Franklin B. Johnson, mustered out June 5, 1865; Henry T. Lamb, discharged May 5, 1863; Anderson Lamb, died at Memphis December 7, 1862; Lewis McDaniel, discharged March 13, 1865; William F. Parsons, discharged November 12, 1862; George L. Parsons, discharged February 20, 1863; Green M. Parsons, mustered out June 5, 1865; David Pennington, mustered out June 5, 1865; John B. Rolston, died at Memphis November 26, 1862; John Robins, transferred to Marine Brigade, April 13, 1863; Isah M. Shepherd, died at East Point, Ga., September 6, 1864, of wounds; William Wallton, died March 6, 1863; Jesse W. Wynn, mustered out June 5, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTH REGIMENT—MINUTEMEN—MORGAN'S RAID.

Late on the evening of July 8, 1863, word came to Indianapolis that Gen. John H. Morgan had crossed the Ohio near Corydon, Ind. Gov. Morton issued his call forthwith, and in forty-eight hours 65,000 men had answered the call. Thirteen regiments were organized, numbered from One Hundred and Second to One Hundred and Fourteenth inclusive.

The One Hundred and Fifth Regiment contained two companies from Henry and two from Randolph; Union, Putnam, Hancock, Clinton, Madison and Wayne Counties, each one company. Seven of the companies were of the Legion.

The regiment was organized July 12, 1863, Kline G. Shryock, Colonel, containing 713 men. They left instanter for Lawrenceburg. After marching around for several days in pursuit of Morgan, and finding that he had gone eastward through Ohio and beyond their reach, they returned to Indianapolis in just six days after they had quitted it, and were mustered out July 18, 1865. Men from Randolph County in One Hundred and Fifth Regiment:

SEVENTH INDIANA CAVALRY, ONE HUNDRED AND NINETEENTH REGIMENT.

(NOTE.—Much of the annexed statement is composed from material taken from a history of the Seventh Cavalry published some years ago, partly under the eye of Gen. Thomas M. Browne.)

This regiment was recruited by order of the Adjutant General of Indiana, dated June 24, 1863, one company being accorded to each Congressional District, and thirty days granted for the completion of the work.

Col. J. P. C. Shanks was appointed commander of the camp of rendezvous, called Camp Shanks. One hundred dollars were to be paid to each man—$25 in advance.

The regimental officers were: Colonel, J. P. C. Shanks, of Portland, Jay County; Lieutenant Colonel, Thomas M. Browne, Winchester, Randolph County; Majors, Christian Beck, Samuel E. W. Simmons, John C. Febles; Adjutant, James A. Pice; Chaplain, James Marquis; Surgeon, William Freeman.

Companies were recruited as follows:

Company A, from La Porte County, Capt. John C. Febles,

Company B, Randolph County; Capt. Thomas M. Browne.

Company C, Dearborn, Grant, Marion and Ripley Counties, Capt. John W. Senior.

Company D, Capt. Henry F. Wright.

Company E, Jay County, Capt. David T. Skinner.

Company F, La Porte County, Capt. John W. Shoemaker.

Company G, Vigo, Delaware, Franklin, Marion, Lake and Grant Counties, Capt. Walter K. Scott.

Company H, Marion, Grant and Tippecanoe Counties, Capt. John M. Moore.

Company I, Kosciusko and Marion Counties, Capt. James H. Carpenter.

Company K, Marion County, Capt. William S. Hubbard.

Company L, Wabash County, Capt. Benjamin F. Daily.

Company M, Madison County, Capt. Joel H. Elliot.

The regiment was mustered in at Indianapolis October 1, 1863, and mustered out at Austin, Texas, February 18, 1866.

Officers, 51; men, 1,151; recruits, 127; died, 243; deserted, 169; unaccounted for, 29; total, 1,239.

The regiment entered Camp Shanks, at Indianapolis, and remained under drill until December 6, 1863. At first, they were entirely untrained, and their experience presents some ludicrous adventures.

At their first parade, for instance, when the order was given to "draw sabers," the rattling caused by the movement frightened the horses out of all control, and they scattered and fled in every direction. But perseverantia vincit omnia (perseverance conquers all things), and before they left Indianapolis, their mounted parade was a scene that would be, even for a veteran cavalier, a sight to behold.

December 6, 1863, the Seventh Cavalry left Indianapolis for Cairo, Ill., moving thence to Columbus, Ky. Their first camp was near that town, and their first night in the field was spent in a pouring rain, which flooded the country and their camping-ground as well.

They marched to Union City, Tenn.; arrived December, 1863, and were there assigned to the First Brigade, Sixth Division, Sixteenth Army Corps—Brigade Commander, Col. George E. Waring, Jr., of the Fourth Missouri Cavalry.

The regiments in the brigade were the Fourth Missouri, Col. George E. Waring, Jr.; Second New Jersey, Col. Joseph Karge; Seventh Indiana, Col. John P. C. Shanks; Sixth Tennessee, Col. Hurst; Nineteenth Pennsylvania, Col. Hess; Second Iowa, four companies, Maj. Frank Moore; battery, Capt. Copperfair.

The regiments marched in detachments to disperse a body of rebels at Dresden.

December 23, 1863, Gen. A. J. Smith set out with his entire force for Jackson, Tenn., sixty miles from Union City, to drive away Gen. Forrest, remaining till January 1, 1864, that "terrible New Year's," when the thermometer changed, in Central Indiana, between 9 P. M. and 4 A. M., from forty-five above to twenty-six below zero, a change of seventy-one degrees in nine hours, or a fraction less than eight degrees each hour.

The regiment was on its return to Union City. The weather grew intensely cold, and the rain changed to a fierce and fearful sleet. Many were badly frozen, and some died from the exposure—among others, Alvah Tucker, of Company B, dying at St. Louis some time afterward. Even horses perished by the cold and fell dead in the road.

A detachment of the Seventh Cavalry had been left at Hickman, Ky., and Lieut. Col. Browne was sent there to take command.

January 7, 1864, the body of the cavalry, under Gen. Grierson, set out for Colliersville, in Southwest Tennessee, to join an expedition into Mississippi in aid of Gen. Sherman

Gen. Grant writes to Gen. McPherson, December 11, 1863:

"I will start a cavalry force through Mississippi in about two weeks, to clean out the State entirely of all rebels."

He writes to Gen. Halleck, December 23, 1863:

"I am engaged in collecting a large cavalry force at Savannah, Tenn., to co-operate in 'cleaning out Forrest,' to push on also into East Mississippi and destroy the Mobile Railroad."

Still again he writes to Gen. Halleck, January 15, 1864:

"Sherman is to move to Meridian from Vicksburg with 20,000 men and the co-operating cavalry force from Corinth. Banks is to push westward from the river, and, by these combined movements, it is expected to crush the rebel power in the South in the region of the Mississippi River."

Gen. Smith was ordered to start from Memphis by February 1, and to move straight for Meridian, Miss., having about seven thousand cavalry.

Gen. Smith remained near Memphis till February 9. Marching eastward, the army of seven thousand men concentrated near and east of the Tallahatchie River on the 17th of February. A slight engagement was had at Okolona February 18, and the Union forces were badly defeated February 20, retreating to Colliersville, reaching that point February 25, and arriving at Camp Grierson, near Memphis, February 27.

The whole movement was a sad, disgraceful failure.

On the day when Smith commenced his ill-starred retreat, Gen. Winslow, with the Union forces, was at Louisville, Miss., only forty-five miles distant.

The history of these events charges that the Generals commanding in that and the succeeding expedition in which the Seventh took part were entirely incompetent and inefficient, especially Gen. Sturgis in the expedition that followed.

The whole number of the regiment who were engaged at Okolona was 813, and the loss was one-tenth of that number—eleven killed, thirty wounded, five wounded and prisoners, captured unwounded, thirty-six; total, eighty-two. Loss from Randolph County, Lieut. Francis M. Way, wounded.

The regiment afterward engaged as part of a force of 8,000 men under Gen. Sturgis, who seems to have been unfit for his station. At Brice's Cross Roads, Miss. (Guntown), a severe battle took place, resulting in the defeat of the Union forces, June 10, 1864, and Col. Browne was wounded in the ankle.

The troops seem to have been, in these expeditions, brave and heroic, but the failure would appear to be charged upon the commanding General.

The Seventh Indiana, Lieut. Col. Browne commanding, was especially commended for heroic conduct. Gen. Grierson thus recognizes their brave and soldier-like bearing:

"Your General congratulates you upon your noble conduct during the late expedition, fighting against overwhelming numbers, in adverse circumstances, your prompt obedience to orders and unflinching courage commanding the admiration of all, turned even defeat almost into victory. For hours, on foot, you repulsed the charges of the enemy's infantry; and again, in the saddle, you turned his assaults into confusion. Your heroic perseverance saved hundreds of your fellow-soldiers from capture. You have been faithful to your honorable reputation, and have fully justified the esteem of your commander."

Three hundred and fifty were engaged, with a loss of eight killed, sixteen wounded and seventeen missing.

During the month of July, 1864, the Seventh Cavalry was sent to Vicksburg, and thence to Port Gibson and Grand Gulf, returning to Memphis and to White Station July 24, 1864.

Not long after, another expedition, toward Holly Springs and Oxford, was undertaken. During the progress, Gen. Forrest dashed into Memphis, remaining, however, but a few minutes. Gen. Smith returned to Memphis with the army about August 29.

About September 22, Gen. Price, with 14,000 rebels, entered Missouri from Arkansas, and the Union cavalry, including 500 men of the Seventh Indiana, under Maj. Simonson, started after him, marching over a large part of Missouri and into the Indian Territory. This pursuit was successful in driving Price across the Arkansas into Indian Territory; and the Seventh returned, part to St. Louis and part to Louisville, while the part that remained at Memphis did good service in that region, among other things capturing Dick Davis, the noted guerrilla chief, and the terror of the region.

December 23, 1864, Gen. Grierson started for Colliersville, Tenn., on his famous "cavalry ride" through Mississippi, moving with great rapidity and destroying vast stores collected for the rebel army at various points, as also railroads, factories, etc.

The expedition returned to Memphis about January 10, 1865.

A movement was made into Arkansas January 20, 1865, which succeeded in destroying considerable rebel stores.

Another expedition was sent from Memphis into Arkansas and into Louisiana, but what for no one but the projector knows, as the country traversed was execrable and worthless, and had never been and never could be occupied by a military force.

Upon the surrender of the rebel armies, the Seventh Cavalry expected to be disbanded, but they were sent to Texas, being carried by steamer down the Mississippi, and up Red River to Alexandria, La., reaching that point June 23, 1865.

Here a force was concentrating of 3,000 cavalry, to be sent to Houston under command of Maj. Gen. Custer, who seems to have been a pompous, vain and cruel officer. Only twenty-five years of age, he was a regular army officer, and seemed to regard private soldiers as machines to be used for his own caprice.

Two men were court-martialed for desertion, and sentenced to be shot. One suffered the fearful penalty. The other died from fright, in a curious manner.

Gen. Custer had decided to save the life of one, ordering him, instead, to Dry Tortugas for three years, telling the fact, however, only to his Provost Marshal. This officer, at the moment before the execution, stepped up to the commuted man to lead him away. Clapping his hand roughly upon the prisoner, the poor man, thinking himself shot, fainted away, and died shortly afterward from the effects of the fright.

During the march to Texas, Gen. Custer court-martialed two men for killing a runty calf, worth perhaps $1, and inflicted the penalty of shaving their heads, giving them forty lashes and marching them before the regiment on dress parade in this condition.

August 8, 1865, the troops set out for Texas, and the march was disagreeable to excess.

An account written by Col. Browne shows in a striking light the hardships of this desert march. An extract or two may be given;

"Monday, August 14—Weather warm, roads dusty, no houses, woods all pine, water very scarce and bad. Pitched my tent in a 'yaller-jacket's nest,' and swore blue blazes.

"Thursday, August 17—Pines and deer, bugs, snakes and gallinippers inhabit the whole face of the earth.

"Friday, August 18—Marched out of the woods into the woods and through the woods, and camped God only knows where; nobody to inquire of; in the woods all day and in the woods all night."

The command arrived at Hempstead, Texas, August 25, 1865, after a tedious, weary march of 300 miles.

Of this march, Col. Browne writes:

"During all this time, I did not average more than three hours' sleep each night, although we made short marches each day. To sleep in the day time was impossible. I was broken out as thickly as ever one was with the measles, from the bottom of my feet to the crown of my head; and, during the heat of the day, I felt as though I were pricked by a million of pins, and sprinkled with hot ashes on the bare skin. The "itch" is not a circumstance to the "heat." In addition to this, lie down when you will in these pine woods, and you are alive with all manner of bugs and creeping things in a moment, and each one of this army of vermin would scratch, bite, sting and gnaw you all the time. Then, though there was abundance of pine forest, there was no shade. The trees stood eighty feet high without a limb, giving about as much shade as so many tall gate-posts."

At Hempstead, the regiment was consolidated. Gen. Shanks was mustered out, and Col. Browne put in command of the re-organized regiment.

October 30, 1865, they left Hempstead for Austin, the State capital, arriving November 4, 1865. Here they remained till the muster-out, which took place February 18, 1866.

Proceeding to Galveston, the men crossed the gulf to New Orleans, thence by steamer to Cairo, and by rail to Indianapolis. A public reception and dinner were had, as being the last regiment "come home from the wars." Gov. Baker and Gen. Shanks made addresses, and Col. Browne responded; and the men were paid, and joyfully sought their homes, happy, indeed, that "the cruel war was over."

Position and movements: Camp Shanks, Indianapolis, two months; Union City, Tenn., December 6-24, 1863; reconnoissance toward Paris, Tenn., December 14, 1863; return to Union City; pursuit of Forrest, December 24, 1863, and onward; battle and defeat of Okolona, Miss., February 22, 1864; loss, eleven killed, thirty-six wounded, thirty-seven missing; total, eighty-four; the regiment was brave and heroic, but was overpowered by numbers; second movement against Forrest, June, 1864; battle of Guntown, Miss., June 10, 1864; the battle was lost, but the regiment was complimented by the General for its valor; pursuit of Price in Missouri, November and December, 1864; Grierson's expedition into Mississippi, December 21, January 5, 1864, 1865; camp at Vernon taken December 28, 1864; large quantity of rebel stores destroyed; sixteen railroad cars loaded with pontons for Hood, and 4,000 new carbines; Alexandria, La., June, 1865; consolidated into six companies July 21, 1865; Col. Shanks mustered out for disability October 10, 1865; Lieut. Col. Browne promoted Colonel October 10, 1865; mustered out at Austin, Texas, February 18, 1866.

A considerable number of the members of the One Hundred and Nineteenth were on board the ill-fated steamer Sultana, which was destroyed, with many hundreds of released prisoners going North, who had been allowed, in violation of all dictates of prudence, to crowd themselves upon that old hulk in their eagerness to reach their Northern homes. (See Sultana.) We should be glad to give a list of these men, but no such list is within our reach.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIRST REGIMENT, NINTH CAVALRY, THREE YEARS.

Organized March 1, 1864, at Indianapolis; Colonel, George W. Jackson.

Mustered out at Vicksburg August 28, 1865.

Officers, 48; men, 1,219; recruits, 67; died, 206; deserted, 126; unaccounted for, 20; total, 1,334.

The regiment left Indianapolis May 3, 1864, for Pulaski, Tenn., and was on duty there till November 23, engaged in the Forrest and Wheeler campaigns of the time. At Sulphur Branch Trestle, Ala., September 25, 1864, a detachment of the regiment lost, in an engagement with Forrest, 120 killed, wounded and missing.

On Hood's approach, the regiment fell back to Nashville, and the men were mounted and sent to the front. At Franklin, it suffered a loss of twenty-six officers and men. After Hood's retreat, they took up winter quarters at Gravelly Springs, Ala., from January 6 to February 6, 1865, and, at the latter date, proceeded to New Orleans. Turning over their horses, the Ninth returned to Vicksburg March 25. Remaining on duty there to May 5, they were remounted and employed in garrisoning posts in the interior of Mississippi. May 22, 1865, the regiment came again to Vicksburg, to be mustered out; but the act was not accomplished till August 28, 1865.

They arrived at Indianapolis September 5, 1865. A public reception was held for that and other returned regiments September 6, 1860.

The number of men on the muster-out was 386. April 26, 1865, fifty-five were lost by the explosion of the steamer Sultana on her homeward passage up the Mississippi, they having been paroled from rebel imprisonment. The survivors reached Indianapolis in May, and were mustered out as paroled prisoners of war.

Fairview Rangers—Captain, Cyrus B. St. John; First Lieutenant, James R. Jones; Second Lieutenant, John W. Barger.

Whether these companies of which the officers are given above performed any duty of any sort we are unable to state.

Many of the officers and men in them enlisted in active service, and spent more or less time at the front and elsewhere with the regiments in which they enrolled their names.

FORTIETH OHIO.

Since several persons from Randolph joined this regiment, we give a brief sketch thereof.

Organized at Camp Chase in September and November, 1861; Colonel, Jonathan Cranor. All of Companies E and G, much of Company I and parts of F and K are said to have enlisted from Darke County, Ohio. The following persons were from Randolph County, Ind.:

Company B—Recruited by Capt. Reeves, promoted Major; Lewis Addington; William Brown, died March 19, 1863, at Piketon, Ky.; Martin Cox, John Ferrell, Jabez W. Freestone, veteran, died shortly after the close of the war, and buried at Portland, Jay Co., Ind.; George Hollowell, William Ingle, Corporal, killed at Kenesaw, Ga., before Atlanta; James Mendenhall, Joseph O'Neall, Lewis Phillips, Isaiah Regan, Drum Major; John Spotts, died in Georgia; two more, also, whose names were not obtained.

An amusing occurrence took place with one of the above, Lewis Addington, which may not be amiss to relate. After the regiment had veteranized and as they were coming home on furlough, when they were at Nashville, Tenn., Addington, seeing a boy peddling milk, kicked his bucket over, spilling all the milk.

He was arrested and kept so long that the other boys went home, had their furlough, returned to the front and were mustered in as veterans. Addington was not on hand, and, of course, remained a non-veteran. When he returned, instead of becoming a veteran, he simply served out his original time and was mustered out of the regiment. Speaking of the kick, he said: "Boys, that was the luckiest kick that I ever made in my life."

The movements of the regiment were as follows: Left Camp Chase for Kentucky December 17, 1861. Started for Sandy Valley via Mt. Sterling and McCormick's Gap December 26, 1861. Arrived at Paintsville January 8, 1862. Assisted in driving Gen. Humphrey Marshall from Kentucky in January, 1862. Skirmished at Pound Gap, Eastern Kentucky, March 16, 1862. James A. Garfield, Colonel, was commander of the brigade. Joined the Army of the Cumberland at Nashville, Tenn., February 28, 1863. Joined the Army of Kentucky at Franklin, Tenn., March 6, 1863. Had severe fighting near Franklin April 10, 1863. Stationed at Triune, Shelbyville, Wartrace and Tullahoma, Tenn., summer of 1863. In the battle of Chickamauga, Tenn., September 19, 20, 1863; in the fights round Chattanooga November 24, 25, 1863; veteranized in January, 1864; Atlanta campaign, Ga., summer of 1864, doing severe and successful execution; Franklin and Nashville in December, 1864; consolidated with the Fifty-first at Nashville; pursued Bragg to Huntsville, Ala., and returned to Nashville; ordered to Texas in June, 1865; mustered out at Indianola, Texas, October, 1865. Returned their flag to the ladies of Greenville November 17, 1865; flag now in possession of Mrs. I. N. Gard, Greenville.

RECIPITULATION.

The following is the number of men in the different regiments set down to Randolph County:

Total credit to Randolph, or supposed to belong thereto, 2,373.

This list is, of course, partly uncertain. Most of the persons named are known to have belonged to Randolph, but some have been put down as probable citizens of the county. Doubtless a considerable number really belonging to the county have been credited elsewhere, while in some cases she has received credit for men really residents of other counties. We have done our best toward an accurate statement and with that are obliged to be content.

Of course, a considerable number, amounting to many thousands throughout the State, and doubtless to some hundreds in the county, are counted over again, the names of some occurring several times; but to make an exact account of such would hardly be practicable, and if it were so the good accomplished would not be worth the trouble.

RE-ORGANIZATION OF REGIMENTS, ASSIGNMENT OF RECRUITS, ETC.

Eighth Regiment Infantry (three months)—Re-organized under Col. William P. Benton, and mustered into service for three years September 5, 1861.

Sixth Infantry (three years) — Non-veterans mustered out September 22, 1864; the veterans and recruits were transferred to the Sixty-eighth Indiana. Upon the muster-out of the Sixty-eighth, June 20, 1865, nineteen men of the old Sixth Infantry were not entitled to discharge, and they were again transferred to the Forty-fourth Indiana and served therein till finally mustered out therewith, September 14, 1865.

Seventh Infantry (three years)—Non-veterans mustered out September 3, 1864; veterans transferred to the Nineteenth Regiment. October 18, 1864, the new Nineteenth and the new Twentieth were consolidated, the new regiment being known as the Twentieth. The new Twentieth was mustered out July 12, 1865.

Twelfth Regiment (three years)—Mustered out June 8, 1865; those not entitled to discharge were transferred to the Forty-eighth and Fifty ninth Regiments, and served till July 15 and 17 respectively.

Thirteenth Regiment—Consolidated into a battalion under Order 384 from Gen. Butler, dated December 2, 1864; five companies of drafted men and substitutes, assigned in the spring of 1865, and no further change till mustered out, September 5, 1865.

Sixteenth Regiment (three years)—Changed to a mounted infantry regiment, and, on the muster-out, June 30, 1865, the recruits were transferred to the Thirteenth Cavalry; discharged November 18, 1865.

Seventeenth Regiment (three years)—Changed to a mounted infantry regiment February 12, 1863, and mustered out August 8, 1865.

Nineteenth Regiment—Seventh and Nineteenth consolidated September 3, 1864; transferred to the re-organized Twentieth; discharged July 12, 1865.

Twentieth Regiment—Fourteenth and Twentieth consolidated August 1, 1864. New Nineteenth and Twentieth united October 18, 1864. New Twentieth mustered out July 12, 1865.

Twenty-first Regiment—Changed to a heavy artilliery organization in February, 1863. Two companies were added and the regiment was recruited to the maximum. The regiment was called the First Heavy Artillery, and served as such till mustered out, January 13, 1866.

Twenty-seventh Regiment—Non-veterans mustered out at Atlanta, Ga., November 4, 1864; the other transferred to the Seventieth, order dated October 12, 1864. Seventieth mustered out June 8, 1865; those not entitled to discharge transferred again to the Thirty-third, and mustered out with that regiment July 21, 1865.

Twenty-eighth Regiment, First Cavalry—The battalion of this regiment serving in the West consolidated into two companies, September 24, 1864; mustered out June 24, 1865. The battalion in the East consolidated into one company June 23, 1864; discharged July, 1865.

Thirty-sixth Regiment—Non-veterans mustered out under order of August 13, 1864; the others formed into one company and transferred July 12, 1865, to the residuary battalion of the Thirtieth, as Company H; mustered out November 25, 1862.

Sixty-ninth Regiment—Consolidated with a battalion of four companies January 23, 1865; mustered out July 5, 1865; recruits transferred to the Twenty-fourth Regiment; mustered out November 15, 1865.

Seventy-first Regiment, Sixth Cavalry—Changed to cavalry, order dated February 23, 1863; two companies added and the organization completed October 12, 1863. Original members mustered out June 17, 1865; recruits joined with those of the Fifth Cavalry June 25, 1865, new organization called Sixth Cavalry; mustered out September 15, 1865.

Seventy-fifth Regiment—Mustered out June 5, 1865; recruits transferred to the Forty-second; mustered out July 21, 1865.

Eighty-fourth Regiment—Mustered out and the recruits attached to the Fifty-seventh Regiment as Company K; mustered out December 14, 1865.

Eighty-ninth Regiment—Recruits transferred to the Twenty-sixth July 10, 1865; mustered out January 15, 1866.

Ninetieth Regiment, Fifth Cavalry—Companies G, L and M and the recruits transferred to the re-organized Sixth Cavalry June 23, 1865; mustered out September 15, 1865.

Ninety-seventh Regiment—Recruits transferred to the Forty-eighth; mustered out July 15, 1865.

Ninety-ninth Regiment—Recruits transferred to the Forty-eighth and mustered out July 15, 1865.

One Hundred and Nineteenth, Seventh Cavalry—Consolidated into a battalion of six companies July 21, 1865; mustered out February 18, 1866.

REBEL PRISONS—PRISON LIFE.

Our Randolph soldiers, sharing abundantly in the hardships, perils and sufferings incident to a cruel and terrible war, bore also their full proportion in those most fearful and inexpressible scenes, the horrors, the tortures, the deaths incident to rebel prisons.

It had been the intention of the compiler of these sketches to give at some length an accouut of these loathsome and ghastly dens of corruption, disease and death; but they are too terrible. His mind recoils at the recital, and his soul cannot be held to the contemplation for the length of time needful to prepare such a statement. A few touches must suffice, and the mind of the reader must be left to guess or imagine the rest.

The principal prisons used by the rebels for the confinement of their captives were as follows:

Belle Island, near Richmond, Va.; Libby Prison, Richmond, Va.; tobacco factories, Richmond, Va.; Danville, Va.; Lynchburg, Va.; Petersburg, Va.; Charlotte, N. C.; Raleigh, N. C.; Salisbury, N. C.; Charleston, S. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Florence, S. C., 11,000, graves, 2,795; Andersonville, Ga.; Atlanta, Ga.; Blackshear, Ga., temporary prison, not so bad; Macon, Ga.; Millen, Ga.; Savannah, Ga.; Cahawba, Ala.; Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Camp Ford, or Tyler, Texas; Camp Gross, Texas; Castle Thunder, Richmond; Pemberton Prison, Richmond; Smith Prison, Richmond; Jail-yard, Charleston; Roper Hospital, Charleston; work-house, Charleston.

A considerable number of men from Randolph County, Ind., were so unfortunate as to be captured and to suffer imprisonment. Among them were W. A. W. Daly, Charles Potter, Barnes, of Washington Township; Edward Simmons, Van Sipe, of Jackson Township, and doubtless many others. Barnes died in Andersonville. Daly spent time at Andersonville, Millen, Florence, Savannah and Charleston—fourteen months in all. Some of his experience is given under the head of reminiscences in another part of this work. We avail ourselves of a statement made and published (Prison Report by Congressional Committee, 1867–69) concerning Calvin W. Diggs, enlisted from Jay County, but for many years a resident of Winchester, Randolph County, condensing it to suit our present purpose.

The following is a statement of Calvin W. Diggs, then of College Corner, Jay Co., Ind.:

"I was a private of Company A, Eighty-fourth Indiana Infantry, and was captured at Chickamauga September 21, 1863. For six days I was kept on the battle-ground, witnessing meanwhile the terrible sufferings from fearful wounds, aggravated by exposure and neglect. October 1, we were packed into cars like so many hogs and taken to Richmond—900 miles. Arriving in Richmond October 10, we were searched, our money taken, amounting, in case of the 300 men on the floor where I was, to thousands of dollars. We were put into Smith's building, and lodged (365 in number) in the lower story, mostly under ground and filthy and damp. Rations, ten ounces of bread and three to six ounces of meat, not enough for a single meal, the meat being generally tainted and sometimes rotten, and the box containing it lined with skippers. The officer in charge (Turner) was abusive and cruel, and the prisoners did not dare to make even the simplest requests. November 14, 1863, we were taken to Danville, Va., and confined in five tobacco factories. The buildings contained about 2,500 prisoners. Rations at Danville, half a loaf of dark bread of very inferior quality. What it was made of we could not determine. After a while, corn-bread was substituted, of a wretched sort, meal very coarse and unsifted. A little meat also was given, and occasionally some soup, though both were filthy and abominable. The weather was very cold, winter of 1863–64, but we had no fire and very little clothing. We lay on the bare floor with no covering. Our Government furnished clothing to some extent about Christmas, 1863, but much even of that passed before long into the hands of the rebels, since the hunger of the men was so very great that very many exchanged clothing for a little food to satisfy their terrible cravings. April 15, 1864, we were sent to Andersonville. The prisoners from Belle Island had preceded us, and they were by far a worse-looking, more wretched set of human beings than ourselves. The "dead line" was made by nailing slats on stakes about three feet high, and was about fifteen feet from the stockade. I saw two shot by the guards for crossing the 'dead line.' One was trying to get some better water by reaching beyond the line; the other went beyond the line on purpose and begged the guard to put an end to his misery.

"There was a bog or swamp of several acres on both sides of the stream on which the stockade was located. No arrangement was made for removing filth or excrement, and the prisoners had to resort to this swamp. The stream was the only source of supply for water. The condition of the swamp and of the stream may be imagined, but cannot be described. There were 30,000 prisoners in the stockade at one time, and there was a space of not more than three feet by six to each man. There was almost no shelter, and the rainfall was fearful, at one time twenty days in succession; and the ground became much like a barnyard in the winter. Many dug holes in the ground to burrow in, but the rain would 'drown' them out. The clothing became reduced often to pants and blouse, or to drawers and shirt, and those inconceivably ragged, filthy and loathsome. Our rations at first were raw—one to one and a half pints of very coarse, unsifted meal, one gill of rotten, bug-eaten beans or peas, or sometimes rice; sometimes a little meat and occasionally a teaspoonful of salt. The cooking had to be done with the vile water of the execrable stream and in the smoke and soot of a pine knot fire. The effect of this wretched feeding was scurvy in its most terrible forms, mostly showing itself in pain and stiffness of limbs, running sores and the like. In my own case, it caused contraction of limbs (so as not to be able to walk for two months), severe pain and spongy and bleeding gums (every tooth in my head being perfectly loose). Men would lie helpless, covered with foul sores, dying and insensible, and vile vermin crawling in and out of these fearful ulcers. Most of the deaths occurred inside the stockade; few were taken to the hospital. The deaths inside the prison rose to fifty and seventy-five per day. A pack of hounds was kept to recapture escaped prisoners, since attempts to escape were numerous, chiefly by tunneling. Tunnels had to be dug from four to twelve rods, still, many were made and a considerable number of men got out of the stockade, though most of them were retaken and returned to the prison."

This whole subject of life in rebel prisons is awful beyond the possibility of words to express. No adequate idea can be given of its horrors. Even the unfortunate subjects of the treatment, as they now look back through the lapse of years to those fearful scenes, can scarcely believe them to be real; for it would seem impossible that men with high-sounding professions of honor and humanity upon their lips, could allow the perpetration of such atrocities and unheard-of cruelty. That such things were allowed and approved, however, is an unquestionable fact, attested by thousands upon thousands of wretched men who survived and by the piled-up graveyards around those prison pens.

Humanity perhaps could wish that the memory of such things should pass from among men, but the genius of history, calm but stern, demands that such atrocities as the Black Hole of Calcutta, the prison ship Jersey, the blowing of Hindoos from the mouths of loaded cannons, the siege of Leyden, the Sack of Antwerp and numberless similar events, and the still more atrocious scenes of Belle Island, Salisbury, Florence and Andersonville should be embalmed for the execration of the human race. And yet the Southern authors of these unspeakable atrocities and the participants therein seem not to be aware that the permission to live untried and unmolested after these unimaginable crimes is a mercy before unheard of in the annals of mankind.

PRISON EXPERIENCE—ANDERSONVILLE.

William Warrell and his brother, Chester Warrell, enlisted in the Fifty-third Ohio Regiment, Company K, August 22, 1861. They were living in Union City, Ohio, at the time. They were taken prisoners by the confederates near Atlanta, July 22, 1864, with a few others of the company. They were marched to Andersonville, arriving in a few days, and cast into that den of horrors. They say tongue cannot describe nor the mind conceive the fearful suffering, wretchedness and death of that awful place. Great numbers were already there, probably 30,000, and the mortality was terrible. Disease and death in their most horrid forms, struck down, day and night, month after month, the best and the bravest in that devoted band. The Warrells stood it comparatively well. William says his worst time was at Savannah, after being removed from Andersonville. He was thought to be near death, and he heard his tent mates planning how they would divide his clothes among them when he was dead. He did not let them know he heard them, but he told them he was not going to die, and he did not. He got better, but had to be led, half carried to the pump to wash, etc., for many days. The scenes were sickening. The bodies were all buried naked, the clothes being saved for those who were still alive to wear. The corpses were laid in tiers by the gate, and when the dead wagon came they were piled up in bulk till the wagon was full. Relays of men were kept outside on parole to dig graves for their poor comrades. Warrell thinks they were buried in separate graves each man by himself. (The author of "Andersonville" states that the bodies were buried in trenches four feet deep.) This last is probably the truth. They were taken to Millen, perhaps in October, 1864; then to Savannah and again to Florida, and at length to Andersonville. They were exchanged at last, in about April, 1865, 5,000 of them being marched through Florida to Jacksonville in that State, and there passed into the Union lines. The confederates left the prisoners about eight miles from the National troops, told them the road to take and let them go, having been paroled not to bear arms till properly exchanged.

Much has been said of the wonderful spring that opened at Andersonville. Warrell saw it burst out. It was on rising ground several rods away from any hollow or bottom. The ground had been growing moist and watery for some days, and it was decided to dig to see what they could find, whereupon the water came forth abundantly. A barrel was set down for a spring or well, and spouts or troughs were laid for the water to run off. The stream was as large as one's arm, furnishing water enough for the whole camp. The water was pure and sweet and cold. One cannot imagine what a blessing was that wonderful spring to those wo-begone men shut up within the impassable walls of that crowded stockade. Before that time the water was absolutely unendurable, taken from that reservoir of unutterable stench and filth, the creek and the swamp through which it ran receiving, as it did, the offal from that seething mass of humanity, without the possibility of cleansing or purification. But to picture these things is utterly impossible. Those who would see it attempted must read "Andersonville," one of the most fearfully thrilling books ever put in print.

As for cooking, Mr. Warrell's squad had a kind of pan, which they had made of a plate of sheet-iron some one had managed to get hold of as they were coming in the cars in their passage to Andersonville. It would hold water and they made mush in it and what not. They had no salt, their bread had no salt and none was furnished that he ever heard of.

Sometimes fresh beef would be furnished, and Warrell says: "I always ate mine raw, because I thought it would help to keep the scurvy off that so many suffered and died with. Their mouths would swell and grow raw, their legs and feet would swell twice the natural size, teeth would come loose and fall out, and they would die rotting by piece meal.

"I have seen," says Mr. Warrell, "men dying with scurvy, naked, except a rag tied round their waist, and the maggots crawling from their flesh as they lay. Men would be sick with the diarrhœa, so sick they could not go away, and they would dig a hole in the ground near them and use it for the purposes of nature. Many such holes would be made within a short distance, and the result may be imagined. I never saw any one killed at the 'dead line,' but have seen them after they had been killed. I saw a man shot by the guards as we were marching to Millen. There was a pile of staves as we passed along, and a man grabbed one of the staves, and the guard shot him and he fell dead, and we marched on and I never knew any more about him.

"No utensils of any kind were furnished the prisoners, and many had none at all. The only thing we had was the pan, one-half a foot deep and a foot square. It was stolen once, but we got it again. Those who had money could buy of the guards, corn-bread, or meal, or tobacco. The men would trade anything they had for corn-meal or bread. Every morning would be heard the cry of men wishing to barter—'Who'll trade meal for tobacco,' etc. At first, the boys used to cheat the rebels. They would show a nice pair of boots perhaps, and make the rebel throw down his meal, etc., first, and then fling a pair of boots, a poor, worthless pair, far over the stockade, and when Johnnie had found them the 'Yankee rogue' would be gone and could not be discovered. They stopped all this pretty soon by refusing to trade unless the 'Yank' would throw his 'article' first.

"The supply of wood was one stick of pine cord wood to twenty-five men, divided by one man into twenty-five parts (one ax was supplied to 100 men) and distributed by one man turning his back and telling who should have each particular pile. Each man would take his quota of wood and cut it up into splinters as fine as shavings or matches, and with these make infinitesimal fires to cook their mush. This splitting of their wood and making and watching their 'teeny-weeny' fires would take hours and hours of weary time. No shelter of any kind was furnished. We had a piece of blanket. We dug a hole a foot or two deep, fixed up a bit of a pole and stretched the blanket fragment over so as to keep the dew off, and then slept in that hole. In the winter we would keep warm in the night by 'trotting' round among the sleeping men hour after hour, and then we would sleep in the sunshine in the daytime when it was hot. My shoes were stolen and I had none the whole winter. We had no matches, nor flints, nor any means to produce fire. We had to depend on some one else. Somebody would have fire, and we would kindle ours when we needed. Once in awhile molasses was issued, and often the men could trade it off for meal or bread."

Mr. Warrell was never outside the stockade, only as he was taken out to be moved to some other prison.

For another sketch of prison life see account of W. A. W. Daly in Military Reminiscencies.

The prisoners named by William Warrell are as follows:

William Warrell, Company K, Fifty-third Ohio, nine months, Union City; Chester Warrell, Company K, Fifty-third Ohio, nine months, Union City; Jeremiah Torney, Fortieth Ohio, eighteen months, Ward Township; Loven B. Moyer, Fortieth Ohio, eighteen months; Stephen Boast, Fortieth Ohio, eighteen months; Newton Founts, Fortieth Ohio, Kansas. Others are as follows:

W. A. W. Daly, Ninetieth; Charles Potter, Ninetieth; Calvin W. Diggs, Eighty-fourth; John Stick, Alabama, Fifty-fifth Ohio, Company K; Barnes, died, Ninetieth; James Ryan, Fifty-third Ohio; Noah Ingle, Fortieth (Cavalry), died in six weeks; Peter Shaffer, Fortieth Ohio; John Cring, now of Portland, Jay Co., Ind.; Daniel Bond, now of Science Hill, Ky.

ANDERSONVILLE PRISON.

The sum total of burials in that cemetery is fearful. Thirteen thousand eight hundred and twenty-six corpses were put under ground in a few terrible months. Seventy or eighty, sometimes, would be found ready to be carried outside the gates at the break of morning light upon that devil's den of disease, and filth, and awful death. The statistics stand thus: From New York, 2,396; Pennsylvania, 1,894; Ohio, 1,004; Illinois, 856; Indiana, 624; Kansas, 468; Tennessee, 780; Virginia, 312; Wisconsin, 250; Vermont, 240; Massachusetts, 775; Michigan, 624; United States Army, 456; elsewhere—known, 2,703; unknown, 440; total number 13,826.

INCIDENT IN ANDERSONVILLE.

An incident is related of Andersonville which is at least good enough to be true. At one time, the rebel guards were said to have become wearied of their work, perhaps from sympathy with the wretched, hapless fellow-men under their charge. Gen. Howell Cobb, then and ever since a stern, relentless rebel, was sent to reconcile them to their horrid task. The soldiers were assembled, and they were harangued in his bitterest, most savage and threatening manner. While in the act of thus addressing the Confederate soldiers, the Federal prisoners inside happened to have started the singing of one of the "songs of the war," perhaps the "Flag of Freedom," or, mayhap, "John Brown." The song spread through the whole stockade and resounded far outside the walls of the prison, and disturbed the sturdy rebel in his harangue. "Hush that racket," he cried. Wirtz, who stood beside him, cursed and swore his choicest oaths, but of course in vain. On rolled the glorious song of freedom from the throats of scores of thousands of men, enthusiastic even in their despair. Wirtz and Cobb might as well have attempted to still the ocean waves dashing under the power of a maddening tempest upon a rugged, rock-bound shore. The love of country lay deep within those suffering, woe-begone hearts, and not even the horrors of Andersonville could quench the ceaseless fire, nor prevent it from bursting forth at times into a fierce, overmastering flame. "God bless our native land!"

STATISTICS, PRISONERS.

Prisoners—Federals captured, 187,323; Confederates, 476,-169; deaths of Federal prisoners, 26,249; deaths of Confederate prisoners, 26,774; deaths at Andersonville (Union soldiers), 13,-826; deaths at Danville, Va., 1,296; deaths at Florence, S. C., 2,793; deaths at Richmond, Va., 3,540; deaths at Salisbury, N. C., 4,728; deaths—Confederate prisoners: Alton, Ill., 20 per cent—1,613 of 7,717; Camp Chase, Ohio, 15 per cent—2,108 of 14,227; Camp Douglas, Ill., 17 per cent—3,759 of 22,301; Camp Morton, Ind., 17 per cent—1,763 of 10,319; Elmira, N. Y., 32 per cent—2,928 of 9,167; Fort Delaware, Del., 11 per cent—2,-502 of 22,773; Point Lookout, Md., 8 per cent—3,446 of 38,053 (exchanged, etc.); Rock Island, Ill., 20 per cent—1,922 of 9,536; Johnson's Island, Ohio, 3½ percent—270 of 7,357.

The per cent of deaths at Elmira was large. The reason for it is to be found, however, not in the treatment of the prisoners after their capture, but in their condition before that event. They were ragged, feeble, half-starved when taken, and they died in spite of kind, careful, considerate treatment. Their men came to us in wretched condition and were restored to health and strength, so far as kind treatment could effect that result, and returned to the South well fed and fully clothed. Our men went to them healthy, well fed, warmly clad, and, after suffering untold and indescribable terrors, from starvation, filth, exposure and neglect, and the hideous diseases consequent thereon, such as were not lying in that crowded graveyard outside the stockade walls of Camp Sumter and elsewhere, came back to the Union lines naked, filthy, reeling with the weakness of long-continued and desperate hunger, or borne, helpless, by the strength of friends, to the Union hospitals, often only to die among comrades, in a friendly shelter, despite the care, rendered all too late, bestowed by those who would gladly have saved the lives of the much enduring men to their country and themselves.

STEAMER SULTANA.

The Sultana was a steamer of large size, engaged in the Mississippi trade. She had an immense load—2,000 soldiers, including many prisoners from Andersonville, etc. There were also many other passengers and a full crew, and much freight. She stopped at Memphis to unload 100 barrels of sugar. Passing on up the river, she exploded her boiler April 9, 1865, about seven miles above Memphis, hurling the pilot house and a part of the cabin high into the air. Many were buried in the debris, and many plunged into the river. The explosion occurred in the widest part of the channel, and comparatively few were saved. The steamer Bostona, a mile distant, came to the scene of the wreck and rescued a considerable number. The ironclad Essex came up from Memphis and saved sixty. Out of 2,200 on board, only 600 survived that terrible catastrophe. Some floated down the river past Memphis and were picked up. In a few seconds after the explosion, the ill-fated vessel was all on fire. She burned to the water's edge, and sank near the Arkansas shore. Forty of the members of the Seventh Cavalry were on board the Sultana, and only one out of them all escaped.

INCIDENT.

A Captain in a certain regiment from Indiana sang out, "Squad! Company! Stop! whoa! halt! God damn it!" A soldier was so "taken" with it that, for months and months afterward, whenever he saw that Captain, he would begin, "Squad, company," etc., "Cap" (he was a Sutler then) would reply, "Come to the tent and get a cigar. You seem to think a thing can never wear out!"

RELIGION IN THE ARMY.

Though war is the parent of vice, and wickedness of all kinds flourishes in the army, yet, strange as it may seem, there was much religious feeling and considerable activity under favoring circumstances. In Sherman's camp on Black River, after the capture of Vicksburg, large and impressive meetings were held, and good religious work was done. A remarkable work commenced in Sherman's army during the Atlanta campaign, notably in front of Kenesaw. Prayer was often heard, and many meetings were held. In the six regiments of the brigade, to which the Fifty-seventh Indiana belonged, there was only one Chaplain, yet there were many religious men. A brigade union church was formed. Officers were chosen, and a preamble and resolutions were adopted as a basis of action, pledging to a Christian faith and practice, to flee from all vice, and from the special vices of the camp. The officers were: President, James Lord, Fifty-seventh Indiana; Recording Secretary, A. L. Kerwood, Fifty-seventh Indiana; Corresponding Secretary, W. W. Curnutt, Fortieth Ohio. Revival meetings were held, hundreds attended, and great numbers joined that "Union Church" in the camp at the front. The organization was maintained throughout the rest of the war, and, altogether, accomplished great good. It is presumed that like cases occurred in other portions of the Union army, but not many others have come to our knowledge. In Gen. Sherman's camp, when his army lay in summer quarters near Big Black River, religious meetings were held night after night, at which great numbers attended, and the spirit of Christ appeared present in large measure to cheer and comfort believers, and to convict and convert sinners to the Lord. In fact, while great numbers of soldiers and officers were rough, reckless, godless men, many, on the other hand, were pious men, who did all in their power for morality, good order and religion.

DECORATION DAY.

Shortly after the close of the war of 1861, the custom arose of holding memorial services in honor of dead soldiers. Assemblies gather and go in procession to their tombs, and sing songs and perform martial music, deliver memorial addresses, and strew flowers upon the graves of the departed heroes of the war. This day (May 29) has been observed for say thirteen years. Sometimes the services are very interesting. The memories of the occasion often draw forth most solemn and impressive discourses from the orators of the hour.

For several years past, the impressive ceremonials connected with Decoration Day have been performed at each returning anniversary. At one of them, a most affecting discourse was given by President Burgess, of Butler University, Irvington, near Indianapolis.

In 1881, among other things, an address was delivered by Rev. C. G. Bartholomew, of Union City, Ind., and the presentation occurred of a sprig of willow, taken from the willow tree planted by La Fayette at the grave of Washington, and brought oiginally from a willow growing at the tomb of Napoleon, at St. Helena. The presentation and the accompanying speech were made by J. H. Stine, Esq., a citizen of Randolph, but for many years a Government employe at Washington City, who has rendered important and reliable service during his long residence at the national capital. A brief but most appropriate and felicitous response and acceptance was delivered by Bayard S. Gray, Esq., son of ex-Gov. Isaac P. Gray, many years a resident of Union City.

Mr. Stine had, on the forenoon of the same day, at Huntsville, delivered a Decoration address, and presented also a "sprig of willow" from "Washington's Tomb," to be planted at the soldiers' monument in the cemetery there. Thus, by the slightest and most delicate, but imperishable of links, is forged and welded, in indissoluble strength, the chain which binds together the hearts of noble, patriotic heroes, through ages as they roll. Tender, precious links of a wonderful chain! A sprig of willow, uniting all these—Napoleon, Austerlitz, Borodino, Waterloo, St. Helena, Mt. Vernon, Trenton, Brandywine, Yorktown; the birth of the Great Republic; La Fayette at Washington's tomb; the civil war; Decoration Day; Randolph County, Ind.—all these and all the wondrous story of deeds of heroes performed by men for love of country or for fame through long ages past.

The day has been quite generally observed with fitting and most affecting ceremonies at the various cemeteries in the county, more detailed accounts of which cannot now be given.

SOLDIERS' RE-UNIONS.

January 4, 1875, the Ninth Annual Meeting of the "Winchester Soldiers' Union" was held at the residence of Col. H. H. Neff. Present, Col. H. H. Neff, Gen. Silas Colgrove, Dr. G. W. Bruce, Col. G. W. H. Riley, Capt. Asa Teal, Capt. Edmund Engle, C. C. Smith, Gen. Thomas M. Browne, Capt. John Neff, William E. Murray, Lieut. Stanton S. Peelle, Hon. John E. Neff, Col. Andrew J. Neff, Abram Lennington, Col. Martin B. Miller, Maj. G. U. Carter, W. R. Way, Esq., Capt. J. S. Fisher, Col. Theodore F. Colgrove.

Officers chosen for the year: Col. A. J. Neff, President; W. R. Way, First Vice President; Abram Lennington, Second Vice President; Gen. T. M. Browne, Treasurer; Capt. J. S. Fisher, Recording Secretary; William E. Murray, Corresponding Secretary. Speeches were made by Col. H. H. Neff, Lieut. Stanton J. Peelle, Gen. T. M. Browne, Hon. John Enos Neff, Capt. Edmund Engle, and perhaps others.

The association appointed Stanton J. Peelle to deliver the address for the next re-union, and adjourned to meet at Gen. Browne's on the first Saturday in January, 1876.

Annual re-union of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment and Fifteenth Battery, October 24, 1878—Gen. Asahel Stone presented the welcoming address, and Private S. C. Crane delivered a memorial oration, closing with a fine poem chiefly commemorative of Capt. James Lawrence Neff, son of Col. H. H. Neff, who was killed March 10, 1865, at Wise's Forks, near Kingston, N. C.

Other re-unions have been held, some of them extensive, accounts of which are not at hand. One of two days occurred in the autumn of 1880 at the fair grounds of the Randolph Agricultural Association, near Winchester.

It would have been a fine success, but the weather was very rainy, and that greatly interfered with the assembling of the soldiers and citizens. One was held at Richmond in the fall of 1881, attended largely by soldiers from Randolph and the whole region, lasting two days.

Other meetings of soldiers have been held at different times within the county or region, but we have discovered no special account of their proceedings.

It would seem that since the re-union held in 1875 was the ninth in number, there must have been eight preceding it, which might make them to have been begun, perhaps, in 1867.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

The Grand Army of the Republic had its inception shortly after the close of the late war of the rebellion, and one of the objects sought to be attained by the organization is the perpetuation of the friendly relations existing among comrades in arms, who fought side by side for a common cause, and shared in common the dangers of the field, the hardships of the march, and the varied fortunes of war.

The organization is composed of the soldiers and sailors, and honorably discharged soldiers and sailors of the army, navy and Marine corps of the United States who aided in maintaining the honor, integrity and supremacy of the National Government during the late rebellion. Its objects, as set forth in the published rules and by-laws of the organization, are as follows:

1. "To preserve and strengthen those kind and fraternal feelings which bind together the soldiers, sailors and marines who united to suppress the late rebellion, and to perpetuate the memory and history of the dead.

2. "To assist such former comrades in arms as need help and protection, and to extend needful aid to the widows and orphans of those who have fallen.

3. "To maintain true allegiance to the United States of America, based upon a paramount respect for and fidelity to the National Constitution and laws; to discountenance whatever tends to weaken loyalty, incites to insurrection, treason or rebellion, or in any manner impairs the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions; and to encourage the spread of universal liberty, equal rights, and justice to all men."

Soldiers and sailors of the United States Army, Navy or Marine Corps, who served between April 12, 1861, and April 9,

1865, in the war for the suppression of the rebellion, and those having been honorably discharged after such service, and members of such State regiments as were called into active service and subject to the orders of United States General officers between the dates mentioned, are eligible to membership in this organization; but it is expressly provided by the constitution that "no person shall be eligible to membership who has at any time borne arms against the United States."

Posts, or local organizations, are formed by the authority of a Department Commander, or of the Commander in Chief (where no department organization exists), upon the application of not less than ten persons eligible to membership in the Grand Army of the Republic, the rank of posts being determined by the date of the charter under which they are acting. It is also provided that no post shall be named in honor of any living hero, however distinguished.

Under the rules governing the establishment of posts, the following-named gentlemen made application for the charter of Nelson Trusler Post, No. 60, G. A. R., at Winchester: Albert O. Marsh, William W. Macy, John E. Markle, William R. Way, Isaiah P. Watts, Nathan C. Simmons, John W. Macy, George U. Carter, Jonathan S. Hiatt, Clint D. Smith, Amos C. Beeson, Dennis Kelley, Samuel T. Remmell, John W. Henderson, Calvin W. Diggs, William H. Reinheimer, Seth D. Coates, Edmund Engle, Samuel R. Fielder, Ralph V. Murray, William Lenkensdorfer, F. B. Chapman, Thomas J. Way. Ezra S. Kelley, George W. Ennis, Richard A. Leavell, Luther G. Puckett, Sylvanus W. White and Jonathan Davis. The meeting for organization was held on the 15th of April, 1882, in the upper story of the Moorman Building, on the corner of Main and Washington streets; but immediately afterward the post moved to the quarters it now occupies, in the Reed Building, on Franklin street. By a vote of the members, the post was named in honor of Col. Nelson Trusler, of the Eighty-fourth Indiana Regiment, many of the soldiers from this county having served under him.

After the usual ceremonies of organization, the following gentlemen were nominated and elected as officers of the post for the current year: Albert O. Marsh, First Post Commander; George U. Carter, Senior Vice Commander; William W. Macy, Junior Vice Commander; Ralph V. Murray, Officer of the Day; Richard A. Leavell, Officer of the Guard; Isaiah P. Watts, Chaplain; John E. Markle, Surgeon; William H. Reinheimer, Quartermaster; John W. Macy, Adjutant. The following officers were then appointed for the same period, viz., George W. Ennis, Sergeant Major; F. B. Chapman, Quartermaster Sergeant; S. T. Remmell, Hospital Steward; E. S. Kelley, Inner Sentinel; S. W. White, Outer Sentinel.

Since its organization, the following-named gentlemen have been admitted to membership in this post: W. E. Murray, April 26, 1882; O. H. Luellen, April 26, 1882; H. R. Marlatt, April 26, 1882; George W. Brown, April 26, 1882; Nelson Pegg, April 26, 1882; J. H. Butterworth, April 26, 1882; John E. Neff, April 26, 1882; Benjamin C. Marsh, April 26, 1882; Isaiah Ryan, April 26, 1882; W. A. W. Dally, May 10, 1882; James M. Hamilton, May 10, 1882; William Inman, May 10. 1882; Charles W. Ward, May 10, 1882; Norman Cook, May 10, 1882; A. M. Russell, May 10, 1882; John G. Hollingsworth, May 10, 1882; James M. Thomas, May 10, 1882; David Neff, May 10, 1882; Nimrod Brooks, May 10, 1882; William Harper, May 10, 1882; John K. Martin, May 17, 1882; N. T. Chenoweth, May 17, 1882; J. W. Ginger, May 24, 1882; Asa Teal, May 24, 1882; M. B. Miller, May 24, 1882; Erastus Corwin, May 24, 1882; John R. Phillips, June 7, 1882; Mark M. Austin, June 14, 1882; Charles W. Wolverton, June 21, 1882; William F. Locke, June 21, 1882; James M. Pottle, June 19, 1882; John R. Smith, June 26, 1882.

INCIDENTS—ARMY LIFE.

We give below for freshness and agreeable variety, some reminiscences by various parties who were soldiers in the Federal service.

The field described is somewhat large—Tennessee, Red River, Chattanooga, the Atlantic, the Pacific—but the recital will relieve somewhat the dryness of the dull detail of bare facts.

Elder Thomas Addington, Company A, Eighty-fourth Indiana, Franklin Township.

I enlisted August 7, 1862, in Company A, Eighty-fourth Indiana, at Camp Wayne, Richmond, Ind., under Col. Trusler. We went to Cincinnati and to Covington, Ky. The regiment was quartered in the sixth story of a building so full of vermin that the boys left in disgust, and slept on the sidewalks or what-not. We were marched to the front, five miles out, with no arms nor ammunition in the regiment, though the rebels were in full view. Gov. Morton came and raised guns and cartridges; but the cartridges were two sizes too large for the guns. He came again, found how matters stood, went back, "pressed" an old man with a cart, and others, and sent on other ammunition. The old man brought us five rounds apiece, the next man twenty rounds, the third a full supply. They proposed to Gov. Morton to give us "poor" arms. "No," said he, "good equipments, or they go back to Indiana." They got the best. Our route was Gallipolis, Guyandotte, Catlettsburg, mouth of Cumberland, Nashville, Franklin, etc.

When Coburn's Brigade was captured at Thompson's Station, our regiment was ordered to re-enforce Coburn, and went on board the cars at Nashville at 4 o'clock P. M., and got to Franklin at 11 o'clock P M. We could have marched it in half the time. Gilmore sent Coburn, and then let him be taken, although he (Gilmore) had plenty of men who had nothing else to do. He ordered us to do it and then held back his own troops, and us, too, and let Coburn be "gobbled up." In Chickamauga, there was bad generalship in our brigade. We had started from Tullahoma, and from September 7 to September 14, had been on the road. September 13 we started at daylight and kept on until 7 o'clock P. M.; drew rations and ammunition, and had supper, and were on the go again by 11 o'clock P. M., and kept on all night, and with little stop until 3 o'clock P. M.

We rested September 14 to September 18. The rebels had been driven from Ringgold, and we were ordered to find them. As we were marching, some women called out, "An hour ago they were here." Presently, as we marched through a thickety field, no skirmishers nor any watch kept, the "rebs" poured a heavy fire upon the head of the column. They might have captured us all. We skirmished all night, and fell back one and a half miles at daylight. In the morning, we found them where they were the night before. The Eighty-fourth Indiana and the Fortieth Ohio were sent to attack what proved to be a whole rebel corps. We should have been captured but for the Colonel of the One Hundred and Fifteenth Illinois. We were flanked on all sides. He, hearing the firing, knew we were in trouble, and came without orders to our help. He came galloping up, his regiment after him on the full run, formed, and sent a volley into the advancing rebels, and checked them. We went back and re-enforced Thomas.

At the battle of Chickamauga, Thomas was caught in a trap, and came near being bagged. Two roads led to the trap. We marched on one, and the "rebs" shut us up. Thomas was nearly sealed up, but finally escaped by the road we marched in on. He fell back to Chattanooga, but the front held Mission Ridge and Lookout Mountain. Bragg intended to take Chattanooga, but was prevented by a stratagem. On Monday night, as we were retreating, orders were given to camp, and build great fires all through. We did so, and made a grand illumination. Bragg thought a great army had come up. His scouts reported "overwhelming re-enforcements." Bragg held still; then we marched again into Chattanooga. After Chickamauga, the "rebs" held Lookout Mountain, and the wagon road from Stevenson, Ala. We had the railroad from Nashville to Bridgeport, and then the supplies had to be wagoned by a mountain road sixty miles instead of direct thirty miles. That was a fearful time! I have stood in one place and counted at one time twenty mules or horses dead, or dying from starvation. Details were often sent to shoot animals that were too weak to stand. Soldiers were kept on half or quarter rations, and poor ones at that. Bread, crackers, etc., had to be piled in the open air, and it rained a large part of the time. The provisions would get wet and soaked and mouldy and spoiled, but it was that or none.

No building could hold the enormous amount of provisions needful for a supply. Bread would be piled in great heaps like immense piles of wood. Cracker-boxes would be heaped in piles as high as my head, and 600 yards long. An immense train of 900 wagons was captured and destroyed by the rebel cavalry. The country at large never knew how the brave boys suffered at Chattanooga, or how hard pressed was our gallant army under "Old Pap Thomas," while waiting for the long-drawn march from the river to the mountains. But Sherman made that march across three hostile States. Hooker's army was sent from the East, and the rebels were sent howling backward. Sherman's hardy legions drove Longstreet's hordes from East Tennessee, and his weary thousands found rest for a few short weeks in winter quarters in North Alabama.

A. C. BEESON, SIXTY-NINTH INDIANA.

"I was in Chattanooga during the siege of that place, after the battle of Chickamauga, in the fall of 1863.

"The siege lasted from September to November. The rebels tried to starve us out, and came nearer being successful than was agreeable to us. They could not take the place; for, while they had possession of Lookout Mountain, which apparently commanded the town, our encampment was so low that they could not depress their fire so as to reach us. Provisions became scarce enough. Mules died of starvation in great numbers, and their carcasses lay in some places close enough together that you could walk upon them; and as for the men, three days' rations would consist of one army cracker and a small piece of beef. Men have been known to give $5 for a single ear of corn; yet the army enjoyed reasonably good health. We were camped in a cemetery, and two graves were under our tent.

"I was captured by Morgan's men while in the hospital at Danville, Ky. I was too sick to be moved, however, and was paroled.

"The siege of Chattanooga was relieved by the arrival of Hooker's and Howard's Corps from the Eastern Army, and Sherman's Corps from Vicksburg."

SILAS COLGROVE, LATE CIRCUIT JUDGE.

The famous case of Page against the women of Winchester in 1853–55, made a wonderful stir at the time.

At first he indicted all the ladies concerned, a large company, for malicious trespass.

The case was tried, and in thirty minutes the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.

A civil suit was then brought, and damages awarded for $400.

WILKERSON GIRLS CASE.

"One of the kidnappers shot the boy through the arm as he rode and blew his horn, but the boy was "game," and kept on riding and blowing. The man who fired at him was indicted for shooting with intent to kill, but was acquitted. I [Mr. Colgrove] appeared in behalf of the boy.

"The slave hunters and negro haters undertook to enforce an old statute of Indiana against all the people of color of Cabin Creek settlement (and their name was legion), requiring such persons to give security for good behavior. A Justice of the Peace in the region notified thirty or forty "darkies" to appear before him and give bonds. A large number presented themselves, greatly troubled, not knowing what to do. They had tried to engage Moorman Way as their attorney, but for some reason he could not assist, and they engaged me to appear in their behalf. In some way we succeeded in quashing the proceedings for that time, and they were never renewed. Some of the people in that region were severely pro-slavery, and I never got such a tongue-lashing in my life as I received from some of them, especially from one of the ladies who was present at the trial.

"I had a horse shot under me at Antietam, but was myself not hurt. At Gettysburg, my horse was shot through both fore legs, but not killed.

"At Chancellorsville, a ball struck my leg near the hip joint, passing through the flesh below the joint and up between my limbs through the saddle tree, lodging finally in the saddle blanket. The wound healed rapidly, and although not yet cured, I was in the saddle in command of a brigade at Gettysburg. I was also hurt in the hand by a spent ball, which was a more severe wound even than the one in the thigh, since it disabled my hand for weeks.

"At Peach Tree Creek, Ga., four miles from Atlanta, I was wounded by a six pound solid shot passing between my side and arm, the wind of the ball tearing the flesh from my side from the breast bone round to the backbone, three or four inches wide. The shot had first hit the sword and rolled it round nearly double, and in so doing the sword hit my elbow and shattered the arm terribly, breaking the elbow joint. The surgeon said, "The arm must come off." I said, "No; save it if you can." They said, "No; it must come off." Dr. King said, "No, don't do it; he can't live three hours." But I did, though, and the next day I refused to have it taken off, and my poor arm is now able to answer very well the uses for which it was given me.

"The poor wounded men lay by scores upon their hammocks dying with gangrene in the camp hospital, and they carried me away about a quarter of a mile, by a spring, and I stayed there until I became convalescent. My side became black, and the flesh dropped off and new flesh formed. In twenty days I was brought home, and not long after was able for business. I was wounded July 20, 1864, and in September I took my place as President of the Military Commission at Indianapolis."

(Gen. Colgrove receives a two-thirds pension for partial disability arising from these various wounds).

William Commons, M. D., Union City, was born in 1836, in Wayne County, Ind., and educated at the public schools, and at Oberlin, Ohio, 1859–60. He received his medical training with Dr. Brandon, of Williamsburg, Wayne Co., Ind., and at Ann Arbor, Mich., and at Cincinnati.

He took one course at Ann Arbor, and graduated from Ohio Medical College in Cincinnati July 6, 1863. Before this, he had voluntered in the Sixteenth Indiana, Company I, being detailed as a medical cadet. He served his twelve months and was honorably discharged. On graduation, he was appointed Resident Physician at Cincinnati Commercial Hospital. In August, 1863, he was allowed to be examined for admission into the Naval Medical Corps. He passed, and was appointed by President Lincoln Assistant Surgeon United States Navy, and the same day, October 26, 1863, by Gov. Morton Assistant Surgeon Fourth Indiana Cavalry, then under Burnside, at Knoxville. He declined the second and accepted the first.

The naval appointment was confirmed by the Senate February 22, 1864. He had been ordered to report for duty on board the United States Receiving Ship North Carolina, at Brooklyn, N. Y., which was done November 28, 1863.

January 1, 1864, he reported for duty on Flagship Hartford, Admiral Farragut, Gulf Squadron. Here he remained during the summer of 1864, being in the battle of Mobile Bay when Farragut was lashed to the rigging on his flagship. The Hartford returned to New York in December, 1864, and was put out of commission. He came home on two weeks' leave, and married Lydia Jane, daughter of Edward Starbuck, late banker in Union City, January 17, 1865. He was ordered to proceed to Port Royal for service on the ironclad Patapsco; but while he was on the ocean passage, the Patapsco was blown up by a torpedo in Charleston harbor, and sunk, with the loss of all on board but four men. The ship which was taking him to Port Royal broke her shaft and put into Portsmouth under sail for repairs. He was then ordered to the steamer Passaic, which he joined April 7, 1865.

The ship was detained to witness the hoisting of the flag on Fort Sumter, and then went to New York. His orders then were to proceed via Panama to the ship Lancaster, in San Francisco harbor, which was done. Shortly after, he was detailed in the steamer Saginaw to cruise for the Florida, the rebel steamer which had been capturing vessels in the Pacific Ocean. While the Saginaw was cruising in the North Pacific to hunt the Florida, that vessel had run through Magellan Straits and to Liverpool, and given herself up to the English Government.

The Saginaw was then detailed to accompany the Russia-American expedition to accomplish surveys and soundings across Behring's Straits for laying a cable there. The expedition was to operate during the summer, and to winter at the mouth of the Amoor River, and in Japan. News came that the Atlantic cable had been successfully laid, and the Behring's Straits project fell dead. Meanwhile, a schooner had sailed with fifty miles of cable on board, for Alaska, and the cable lies there at Alaska yet, perhaps. Mr. C. left San Francisco on the Saginaw for Acapulco to join the Lancaster there. That vessel, however, had left two days before the Saginaw, for the Sandwich Islands. He reported to the senior naval officer at Panama. Dr. John Maxwell, Fleet Surgeon, had been appointed Acting Consul at the port of Panama, and Dr. C. was detailed by him as Inspector of Customs for the Panama Railroad, which position he filled for six weeks, and was ordered to the ship St. Mary's, then in the harbor of Callao, Peru, to take charge of the storeship Fredonia, and prepare it for a hospital ship for the South Pacific Squadron, which was done. During that service, he witnessed the bombardment of Callao by the Spaniards in their war with Peru, and was at Lima, Santiago, etc., on the Pacific coast of South America. He was next appointed to the United States ship Suwanee, which cruised on the Western Pacific coast, in the Pacific Squadron. Having thus had four years' sea service, he was ordered to the United States, came by steamer to New York (via. Panama), and thence home. In six weeks an order was received to report at Philadelphia, to join the Asiatic Squadron for a three years' cruise. Not wishing sea life longer, he resigned his commission. He then settled in medical practice at home; first at Whitewater, Ind., then in Bradford, Ohio, then at Union City, Ind. (since 1873). His parents were of Irish descent, but born in America. He was a member of the Council at Bradford, and Secretary of the Board of Education; has been a member of the Board of Health for Union City; is President of the Randolph County Medical Society, and a member of the State Medical Society, and has been Master of Turpen Lodge, No. 401, A., F. & A. M., for six years. He has been a long time a member of the Disciple's Church, and for six years Clerk of that society at Union City. He is a wide-awake Republican, and an enthusiastic temperance worker. He was (with Col. Cranor) Executive Agent in the woman's crusade to prosecute the saloon-keepers. At Bradford, Ohio, while member of the Council, he was successful in the passage and enforcement of a stringent ordinance against drinking saloons, which greatly checked drunkenness and crime in that town.

Dr. C. is in the prime of mature manhood, enthusiastic in his profession, and may look forward hopefully to a long, honorable and prosperous career of usefulness and success among his fellow men.

W. A. W. DALY.

"I was captured near Sunshine Church, Ga., during Stoneman's raid, 120 miles south of Atlanta. The expedition set out for the purpose of releasing the prisoners at Macon and Andersonville. We went to Macon, but the prisoners had been moved. Stoneman attacked Macon, but McCook failed to come to time, and we fell back. The rebel advance was met at 10 o'clock P. M. We skirmished until next day, and were surrounded and forced to surrender. So instead of releasing the prisoners at Andersonville, the soldiers were scooped into that awful den themselves. I entered that 'hell above ground' August 2, 1864; was taken to Charleston in November; to Florence in December; afterward to Wilmington, and at length to the Union lines at Goldsboro, N. C., in March, 1865, for parole.

"I went in hungry; never had a full meal; could have eaten any day at one meal my whole rations for an entire day, i. e., had they been fit for a human creature to eat, which they were not. Our bread was mostly made from coarse corn meal badly baked, and wretched stuff. But we ate it, and I came out alive.

"I went in weighing 216 pounds, but in seven months, when paroled, my weight was only 145 pounds. I had remarkable health for such a place, but language cannot describe such a den of horrors!

"I had, when captured, a suit of well worn army clothes, and I wore the same without change, with no soap, until I was nearer naked than clad.

"The brook was filth itself. I had no vessel to wash in. There was no water for any purpose but that dreadful stream, thick with the vileness of 35,000 living and dead prisoners. The only time we had the means of washing in clean water was in a heavy rain which fell. The prisoners stripped, and stood rubbing each others' backs and limbs as the rain poured in torrents upon them. Soon after that rain, a great wonder came to pass in that stockade. A spring of pure, clean water came gushing forth in the midst of that prison pen, and ran a life-giving stream, enough for those famishing people. It seemed almost like the stream flowing from the 'rock in the wilderness.' The water of this spring sufficed for drinking and cooking, though but little of that was done, in sooth. Men were in line waiting their turn at that heaven-sent fountain all day long. Sometimes the 'waiting line' numbered 1,000 men. Before that spring burst forth from out that cursed ground, the filthy water of the brook was all that anybody in that stockade could procure, except that now and then a poor fellow had found a little water by digging.

"One day a poor fellow (among scores and hundreds of others like him), bespoke my pity who had got fast in the mire of the brook, and I helped him out. Great numbers, sick and helpless, were there besides, and I worked helping the poor wretches a long time, until at last I had to quit to save myself.

"I have counted as many as seventy corpses lying stiff and stark at the gate, in one morning, of persons who had died in one dreadful night; and the living would fight for the privilege of carrying a comrade's lifeless remains forth to the burial-ground outside, because by so doing one got the chance to bring in an arm load of wood gathered outside.

"Men died by scores, by hundreds, by thousands, within those awful walls, yet I came forth alive; I still survive that loathsome dungeon.

"During all that awful suffering, the great body of those men stood firm and steadfast in their loyalty, resisting every attempt to seduce them from their allegiance to their native land. Many times we were marshaled in line and offered freedom and abundance by joining the ranks of the 'men in grey,' but very few yielded even to such offers.

"True as steel, those heroic men continued faithful to their flag, many of them even unto death. And those who lived to gain their freedom, if able for duty, rejoined their regiments and finished their terms of service on the tented field."

William W. Macy, late of White River Township, is a son of Dr. William Macy, who was for many years a prominent physician of Randolph County, and one of the founders of the town of Farmland. Dr. Macy removed some years ago from this county to Wisconsin, and died in the Northwest an old man, not very long ago.

W. W. Macy was born in 1841, being a native of the county. He took to wife, in 1867, Miss Alice Addington, also a native born daughter of Randolph, and they have one child, a son.

At the commencement of the war, being about twenty years of age, he enlisted as a private in the Nineteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry (three years), July 19, 1861, Company C. He was mustered into service July 29, 1861, as Fifth Sergeant. The Nineteenth was transported to the Eastern army without delay, arriving at the federal capital August 19, 1861. There they were assigned to the First Brigade, First Division, First Army Corps, Grand Potomac Army. Among the severe engagements in which Mr. Macy took part were:

Cedar Mountain, August 9, 1862, as also Gainesville, second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Fitzhugh's Crossing, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, around Petersburg and Richmond, Weldon Railroad, Hatcher's Run, Gravelly Run, pursuit of Lee after the evacuation of Richmond, etc. This band of Indiana heroes, brave among the bravest, spent nearly their whole time of service in either Maryland or Virginia, mostly the latter. Comparatively few Indiana regiments belonged to the Eastern army, and the Nineteenth was one among the five who sustained the reputation of the Hoosier State for heroic valor in the presence of their Eastern comrades. The five regiments referred to were the Seventh, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Nineteenth and Twentieth.

Concerning this group of regiments, shattered and broken by the furious storms of warlike strife, cut down by scores, and many times well-nigh annihilated, a most thrilling account might be given. Out of the five, originally full and strong, it came to pass at length that the remnants of four of them were consolidated into one, and that only itself a fragment, composing a mere battalion. Gen. Lewis Wallace fitly and most pathetically describes these men belonging to the five Indiana regiments swallowed up in the Eastern army as being "our lost children," like Ferdinand De Soto and his gallant comrades in the wildernesses of the "New World."

So noted did the brigade become to which the Nineteenth belonged as to earn for itself, not without abundant reason, the sobriquet of the "Iron Brigade," and to this famous brigade did the Nineteenth belong for more than four years.

W. W. Macy was in all the battles of the regiment, except during the Wilderness campaign, he being then confined in the hospital, prostrated with the loathsome and dreadful small-pox.

Escaping with life and restored to health, he rejoined his command, and surviving every danger and outbraving every peril, he received a final discharge during the summer of 1865. He did not escape wounds, a "minie ball" making its track along his skull at Fredericksburg, making, however, only a slight wound. He was promoted First Lieutenant April 26, 1863. Two days afterward he helped to fight the battle of Fitzhugh's crossing; and May 3, 1863, was at Chancellorsville; July 1 to 3, 1863, found the "Iron Brigade" at Gettysburg, with our subject among them. At this latter battle, another "minie ball" made an attempt to make acquaintance with the inner regions of his cranium, but, as before, so this time also, without success, though, being fast asleep, he was not able to dodge the bullet. November 26, 1863, he was sent to Indiana on recruiting service, returning to the field and the camp February 24, 1864. Shortly after his arrival, the small-pox seized him as a victim (March 3), and only loosened its grasp when six weeks had elapsed, thirty days' furlough being then granted to allow him to visit the "old folks at home," which had not before been done. He was at Petersburg and in the Richmond campaign; was present at the terrible explosion in front of the former place; helped to destroy the Weldon Railroad; was at Hatcher's Run and Gravelly Run, and in the chase after Lee after he fled from Richmond, and was at the headquarters of Gen. Humphreys, commanding the Second Corps, on that eventful morning, when the rebel chieftain made the surrender of his army to Gen. Grant.

He had some months before, to wit, December 2 and 14, 1864, commissioned and mustered Captain of Company A, Twentieth Regiment, re-organized and afterward transferred to Company A. We quote from Military History of Randolph County: "His company was part and parcel of that magnificent and triumphant army, whose shining platoons marched in files of twelve deep along the broad avenues of Washington City, passing as they did the gorgeous platform upon which were posted the members of the National Administration and the military chieftains of the hour."

The adventures of Capt. Macy were many, but time fails to recount them. He was mustered out with the regiment July 12, 1865, having served just three days less than four years. Since that time, he has been somewhat prominent in official life—Clerk and Marshal of Union City, Deputy Sheriff and Sheriff of Randolph County, Deputy six or seven years, and Sheriff about three years, serving the public in all faithfully and well. He is now holding a position at the Federal City, under Commissioner Dudley, of the Pension Office.

Capt. M. attended as a witness the trial of Gen. Fitz John Porter, in 1876, with also two others from Randolph County. Before his marriage, and after the war, he was during several months an active and wide-awake student in connection with Liber College, Jay County, Ind., then under the charge of Rev. E. Tucker, as its President.

The "Macy connection" has been from old a wondrous and powerful company, scattered far and wide throughout the land. They sprang, however from a single root, viz., the famous Thomas Macy, who sailed in an open boat around Cape Cod, and landed upon Nantucket Island in the days of "auld lang syne."

The Macys are now found in Alabama, Carolina, California, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Wisconsin and elsewhere also. Their number (known and recorded) a few years ago was 1,276. Massachusetts had the largest share, 703, and Indiana 359, Randolph being able to boast, both in former and present times, of many families of the name, all of whom are upright, respectable and enterprising citizens.

We give the military record of Capt. Macy's promotion, in a connected statement, as follows:

W. W. Macy, mustered June 29, 1861, as Fifth Sergeant; Company C, Ninteenth, 1861; wounded at the battle of South Mountain; promoted First Lieutenant; commissioned March 1, and mustered April 26, 1863; promoted Captain of Company I, Twentieth Regiment Indiana re-organized; commisioned December, and mustered December 14, 1864; transferred to Company A; mustered out with the regiment July 12, 1865.

R. H. MORGAN.

"After the battle of Pittsburg Landing was a fearful time. For two weeks we were camped in the woods, with almost no equipage; rain nearly all the time; and then came two months in the trenches before Corinth, Miss.

"I was an Abolitionist, and had a "warm side" toward the negroes. When camped at Spring Garden, Ky., two negroes came into camp, wishing to join the army. They had been in camp before, and the master had got an order for their arrest, had pursued and shot at them, and had caught and taken them home. The next night they came again. I told them to hide in the wagons. They did so, and kept hid for 150 miles. The teamsters began to unload, and found the "darkies." "How came you here?" "Lieut. Morgan told us to hide here." Next day I was ordered to report to headquarters. "What does Gen. Woods want of me?" "About those negroes, I presume." Hardin, who brought the orders, said to me, "Better send them back. The orders are very strict against harboring slaves, and you may, perhaps, be given over to the State authorities, and the penalty is death for running off negroes." "I cannot do it; you send them back." But he wouldn't, either, and finally acknowledged it wrong to do so. A Minnesota regiment was lying across Green River, and I said to the negroes, "Go over there and hire out as cooks, and never speak my name as long as you live." They promised, and left instanter.

"Gen. Asahel Stone was in camp, and he went with me to Gen. Woods' quarters. The General was very bluff, and said, "Send those negroes back." I said, "General, I don't know where they are, and have no control over them. They are free to go where they please. You have no proof that I ever saw them. If they knew enough to hide themselves 150 miles, they certainly can take care of themselves without my help." I was dismissed, and left. Gen. Stone talked awhile with Gen. Woods, and I never heard any more of the matter. Before long, the Federal army found enough else to do besides catching negroes. I saw the two twelve months afterward. They were in the same regiment, doing well.

"One day an old negro, seventy years old, came into camp and said, "I wish to see the General." He was taken to headquarters. "General," said he, "I know of a camp of guerrillas. I will guide you there if you wish." A squad was sent, and the whole camp was captured. The old negro stayed with the army, and at length crossed the Ohio River.

"Several slaves from Alabama were hid among the baggage, and they were never found. Strict search was made for one of them. Maj. Smith, a rich slaveholder, Twenty-fourth Kentucky, rode up and down the column and the train, passing many times the very wagon in which he lay hid; but the poor fellow got safe away.

"At the battle of Perryville, a rebel regiment from North Carolina came into the Union lines. They were splendid looking men, and really Union men at heart. They came in cheerfully, glad that their fighting against the old flag was over."

James B. Ross, Union City, was born in Holmes County, Ohio, in 1844; enlisted in the Sixteenth Ohio Infantry in the fall of 1861, being mustered in at Wooster, Ohio, Colonel John De Courcey (Colonel in the English Army; absent on three years' leave).

Mr. R. served three years and two months. He was discharged (mustered out) at Columbus, Ohio, in October, 1864. The regiment was at the first taking of Cumberland Gap, in the battle of Tazewell, near the Gap, and having been hemmed in by Bragg, escaped by marching through the mountains of Kentucky 200 miles to Gwynnettsburg. On the Ohio, up Kanawha to Charleston, down the Ohio to Louisville and to Memphis and Vicksburg, in the terrible repulse at Chickasaw Bluffs, behind Vicksburg, losing 270 men; up Arkansas River to Arkansas Post, capturing all its garrison; at Milliken's Bend to help dig "Grant's Canal." The regiment lay in sight as the Union gunboats came gallantly down past Vicksburg, and, as they steamed along the channel beyond the dreaded batteries on the Vicksburg bluffs, a happy lot of fellows stood and looked on that glorious sight. The regiment crossed the Mississippi on a bridge of gunboats below Grand Gulf; were in the battles of Magnolia (Port Gibson), Jackson, Raymond, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, and the siege of Vicksburg—sixty-four days, under fire nearly all that fearful time. They went to New Orleans, Brashear City, Opelousas, Algiers; thence to Texas on the "cold New Year's" day, Indianola, Matagorda Island, New Orleans, up Red River with Banks. In returning, Banks wished to leave the fleet. Some objected. He granted ten days to get them over the rapids. Col. Bailey in ten days did the work; 5,000 men and 500 teams accomplished the exploit, clearing twenty acres of its forest, and digging up a stone quarry. A dam was built, made from tree-tops, up stream, with cross timbers between the butts, the tops weighted down with rocks brought from up the river, on flat-boats. Flat-boats were anchored at the edges of the dam and fastened by huge iron bolts to the rocks in the bed of the stream. Down the roaring, dashing torrent, through that fearful sluiceway rushed one by one that fleet of monitors and gunboats., bouncing, plunging, almost tumbling as they went, but safely reaching the river below the dam. Those mighty vessels shot through that fearful passage like a feather. They were at Morganza Bend with a train fourteen miles long, to be guarded; were in the Yellow Bayou battle, etc.

Their time was out, and the regiment came home, and were mustered out October, 1864.

Spring of 1865, Mr. Ross was at school at Ashland, Ohio; taught a country school; was Principal, Orville, Ohio, five years, and at Canal Fulton two years; came to Union City in 1875, engaging in the law. He has been Justice two years, and Mayor two years. He is a sensible, upright and honorable man.

While Mayor of Union City, he was selected to conduct at Winchester the famous preliminary examination in the Lumpkin-Lewis case, to decide whether Mr. Lewis could have bail. Mr. Ross discharged the delicate and difficult duty with propriety and dignity, and proved himself a worthy and competent magistrate. Mr. R. is married, and he has had three children.

Benjamin Simmons was wounded at Thompson's Hill, Miss., May 1, 1862; lay on the battle-field until May 5, and was taken to a large house on the bank of the Mississippi, below Vicksburg.

NOTE—Abram Hoke, of Union City, Ind., worked on that house in 1860. The building contained 600,000 bricks, and cost an immense sum of money, and it was occupied by the United States Government as a hospital. He says,

"I was taken to Grand Gulf May 13; stayed there until June 5. Gov. Morton came with his hospital boat and took us to Evansville. I was in the City Hospital until July 3, then at Indianapolis until July 7. I was then furloughed home for thirty days; went back for eight or ten days, and was furloughed again, and so on until November. I was then detailed to the Provost Marshal's office, at Indianapolis, and continued there until the close of the war, June 30, 1865. I helped arrest Milligan, Horsey, Bowles and Dodd, and Heffron, and to capture the revolvers, ammunition and powder sent to Indianapolis in the conspiracy by the Sons of Liberty. We took thirty-four boxes of revolvers and fixed ammunition in the old book-bindery of the Sentinel office. The boxes were three feet by one foot by fourteen inches. The revolvers were seven shooters. The boxes were marked Sunday school books, on the outside. The plot was discovered by the detectives of Gen. Carrington. We took also 104 kegs of powder, in zinc covered boxes. They had been sent on to Terre Haute, but were found there and brought back to Indianapolis, and I helped to put them into the magazine.

"Dodd escaped; Heffron turned State's evidence, and Milligan, Horsey and Bowles were tried by military commission and sentenced to be hung, but at the last moment were reprieved by President Johnson, and their sentence was at length revoked by the United States Court on the ground that a military commission had not the right to try them outside of the military lines.

"Comrade Long and myself broke in the book-case containing the books for the ritual, etc., for the Golden Circle, in Heffron's office, and there were three or four bushels of them, and we turned them over to the Provost Marshal. There was also a plot at the same time (by the secret lodges of the Sons of Liberty) to capture the Government, release the rebel prisoners in Camp Morton and turn the State in favor of the rebel cause; but the whole conspiracy, extending by kindred lodges far and wide throughout the West, was found out in time, and checkmated. These revolvers, etc., were brought to the State under a false pretense of being Sunday school books, and they were to be distributed to the members of the Golden Circle through the State, arrangements having been perfected for the purpose."

Benjamin Simmons was permanently disabled by the wound he had received, and he draws a pension from the United States Government.

Gen. Asahel Stone, Commissary General. Isaiah Mansur was appointed April 15, 1861. The troops were pouring by thousands into camp, fresh from home, and had to be fed. He did his best, but the men were not easily satisfied. He was "investigated," and the committee reported. The Senate did nothing, but the House demanded Gen. M.'s removal; whereupon he gladly resigned. He had done his best; and, what is more, had paid nearly all the bills from his own money; but the boys were "notional," and he thankfully "got out of their way" May 29, 1861.

On the same day, Hon. Asahel Stone, State Senator from Randolph County, was appointed to the place. He entered upon his duties at once, and with general satisfaction. The economy of his administration is set forth by the fact that during the time from May 29, 1861, to September 1, 1862, 728,000 rations were issued and his whole expenses, including salary, clerks, office rent, etc., amounted to only $94,159.16, averaging about 12 cents per ration.

October, 1862, Gen. S. was appointed Quartermaster General, which position he accepted and the duties of which he discharged until the close of the war, as will be hereafter related at some length.

Although Gen. Stone did no service upon the field, and had no command of troops at the front or otherwise, yet his duties were of great importance, and required a high degree of patriotism, activity and skill, all of which he showed in a most satisfactory manner through his entire term of office.

State Quartermaster General.—Col. Thomas A. Morris was appointed April 16, 1861. Col. Morris was commissioned Brigadier General April 29, 1861, and on the same day, April 29, 1861, John H. Vajen, Esq., was chosen in his place, and filled the position with remarkable success.

May 30, 1862, Mr. Vajen resigned, and John C. New, Esq., succeeded him. He resigned, and October 15, 1862, Hon. Asahel Stone was appointed to the position. No mere description can tell his duties. He was an "officer of all work," a kind of "military breakwater," and right nobly did he stand up to the work required at his hands.

When he took charge of the bakery at Camp Morton, the capacity was 6,000 to 7,000 loaves daily. It was soon enlarged to 11,000 or 12,000, and afterward still more than that. The profit to the State proved to be $157,000; $100,000 of this amount was expended for buildings, Soldiers' Home, bread to soldiers' families, etc, and about $57,000 was a clear saving to the Government, not having been expended in the service in any manner. His additional duties—establishing and maintaining the Soldiers' Home, the Ladies' Home, etc., etc., were discharged with like fidelity and success.

Gov. Morton, in his message to the Legislature January 11, 1867, thus alludes to the services of Gen. Stone:

"His department has been a large cumbrous machine, but it has been managed with great fidelity, ability and success, for which he is well entitled to the thanks of the State. His position has been one of great labor and responsibility, and its duties have been performed to my entire satisfaction." Such a commendation from such a source is surely enough.

Account of the operations of Gen. Asahel Stone, Commissary General and Quartermaster General of the State of Indiana, during most of the war of 1861:

For some months (May, 1861, to September, 1862), Gen. Stone was Commissary General, providing supplies and feeding the soldiers at Indianapolis, and perhaps elsewhere. This department of business was transferred to the General Government, and his occupation in that respect was at an end. Gov. Morton, however, was convinced that the State of Indiana must not lose sight of her soldiers in the field, and that she must continue to care for them in every possible way. Gen. Stone had long been employed in rendering all possible aid to the soldiers in the field, some account of which is here given.

September 14, 1861, at 11:30 o'clock A. M., Gov. Morton directed Gen. Stone to get ready to start at 12:45 o'clock P. M. of the same day, to Western Virginia, to look after the wants and needs of our troops there, dreadful reports of their destitution and sufferings reaching his ears daily. At that time the Seventh, Ninth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Seventeenth Indiana Regiments, and Capt. Bracken's Cavalry were near Cheat Mountain. Two agents had been sent before, but they had achieved but litte success. At the appointed time, one and a quarter hours after his notification, Gen. Stone was on the train, with full authority and instructions from Gov. Morton. Sunday, September 15, was partly spent at Columbus, Ohio; but during the day he left on a train made up to carry the Thirty-second Ohio, and a company of Ohio cavalry.

They arrived next day at Wheeling, and at Webster at 4 o'clock A. M. next morning, having to walk the streets there till daylight.

September 18, he left Webster on horseback with Lieut. Col. (since Maj. Gen.) Beattie, of the Third Ohio, for the army, sixty or seventy miles south. They arrived at Elkwater Camp, under command of Gen. Reynolds, of Indiana, at 1 o'clock P. M. September 9, he set out with a proper guard to the summit of Cheat Mountain, accompanied by Gen. Reynolds. This was the most advanced post. At his request, the men who were able were paraded in the middle of the road for inspection. Then was fully realized the sad fact than not half the fearful truth had been told of the destitute condition of these men. They were in rags, many without shoes or hats, and very few had overcoats, and none had blankets, the latter having been used in patching their clothes; and all this in that chilly, rugged, mountainous region, with rain almost every day. The only wonder is that any were able for duty. There was great neglect some where, for the Government had abundant supplies, and Gen. Stone's business was to find those supplies and have them sent on to the troops forthwith. He immediately returned to Indianapolis with the following memorandum: "The Thirteenth wants everything; the Fourteenth everything but 205 overcoats; the Fifteenth everything but overcoats; the Seventeenth wants everything; the cavalry wants boots, coats, gloves, rubber blankets, some haversacks and canteens; and all need caps with oilcloth coverings, and woolen blankets." He arrived at Indianapolis September 24. On the 27, he left again for West Virginia, with full power to take the needed articles from Government stores wherever he could find them, whether large or small quantities.

He examined at Wheeling, Grafton, Clarksburg, Webster, and at all the smaller posts, as also at nearly all the places in Western Virginia, north of the Kanawha River, where there were or had been military stores, and returned to Indianapolis three times before succeeding. October 18, he saw again some of the regiments, viz., the Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Seventeenth, on dress parade, much improved in appearance and comfort, since large supplies had reached them before that time, while yet many more had not yet come to hand.

October 23, while he was with the army, a large lot arrived amid cheers and general rejoicing, which were instantly distributed to the men, to their intense delight.

October 25, he started for the last time for Indianapolis, feeling that a good work had been done for our soldiers; and Gov. Morton had the pleasure to learn very shortly that the Indiana soldiers in West Virginia had been well supplied with everything needed, and that all were comfortable.

Rumors were constantly coming of the deplorable condition of Indiana soldiers in hospitals in Missouri, and especially in St. Louis. Wherefore, on November 4, 1861, Gen. S., with full power and authority, and instructions from Gov. Morton, left Indianapolis for St. Louis. At that point there were fifteen or twenty hospitals. He visited them all, and found out the condition of Indiana soldiers there. Many were very sick, and great numbers died; but he discovered that by far the greatest number were really despondent and homesick; and that what they needed was a furlough of thirty or sixty days to see wife and babies, and that with that they would come out all right and return in good spirits; and he told Gov. Morton so, and asked for all his influence to accomplish that result. The request was cheerfully granted, and with that and by the generous aid and co-operation of Gen. Curtis, who was a very kind and humane officer, he got an order that he might pass through the hospitals, and that whoever he should select for the purpose should be furloughed home without delay. This was surely an extensive and remarkable order, and its execution was much hindered and obstructed by some of the Surgeons, and by Gen. Curtis' Adjutant. Their opposition caused, however, only some delay. Many of the orders to the surgeons to prepare the men to leave with rations, etc., and all furloughs and transportation orders Gen. Stone had himself to prepare ready for signature, because that officer would do nothing only as he was obliged to do, and even that very unkindly and ungraciously. The General's plan was to go through a hospital with the Surgeon (and many of them performed the duty gladly, while some did not), take down the names of those who needed to be furloughed, with company, regiment and residence, and the same night fill up their furloughs, get them signed the next morning, and have the men sent home forthwith. In this way by November 22, he had obtained furloughs for over five hundred men. He found the men at Pilot Knob in good condition, under Col. (afterward Gov.) Baker. November 26, he left St. Louis for Syracuse, Tipton, Otterville and Sedalia, finding the Eighth, Eighteenth, Twenty-second and Twenty-fifth Indiana. The vayious churches, schoolhouses, etc., were taken for hospitals. He visited the hospitals frequently and did all he could for the soldiers in them. The regiments were paid at that time, and, by request of the officers and men of those regiments, Gen. S. brought to Indianapolis for the Eighth, Eighteenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth Indiana on the 18th of December, 1861, about $18,000, and expressed it according to directions, into various parts of the State.

SECOND VISIT TO MISSOURI.

During the latter part of January, 1862, he visited the army again, in Western Missouri, and brought home for the Eighth, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth Regiments and Frybarger's Battery, $15,484.60. The last of March, 1862, he left Indianapolis for Pea Ridge, Arkansas? His mission was to do the soldiers all the good he could, and bring home such sums of money from the army as our men might wish to send. He went from Indianapolis by rail to St. Louis, and so to Rolla, Mo., and thence to Springfield and Pea Ridge by a wagon road, traveling more than two hundred miles of mud road, and on horseback. All along this dreary road he found worn-out, sick and wounded soldiers, with a furlough, but no money, many of them lying by the wayside or sheltered from the storm in some old shed or worthless outbuilding, helpless and penniless. These he forwarded by the numerous Government wagons going back empty from the army at the front to Rolla for supplies. Several hospitals were at Springfield, and many sick and wounded men, all of whom he visited and assisted as far as was in his power, furloughing many of them to their homes.

At Bentonville, five or six miles from the battle-field of Pea Ridge, Ark., almost every house and the court house were used as hospitals, and he found there great numbers of wounded men, and some sick.

The main army was located near the battle-ground of the Pea Ridge fight. While he was there, the soldiers received payment of their dues, and the Eighth, Eighteenth and Twenty-second Regiments of infantry, and Klauss' Battery sent home by him $58,049.55.

PITTSBURG LANDING.

On the 26th of April, 1862, he started for Pittsburg Landing, via Louisville, to care for the sick and wounded there. At Jeffersonville, he found 160 wounded men, just arrived; but the ladies of that city had them in charge, and they were doing well, being located in a large hall. April 28, 1862, he hired the steamer W. W. Crawford at $200 per day, they to furnish the hands, and he the provisions and the fuel, for the transportation of the sick and wounded from the Shiloh battle. The same day, they took on board those wounded soldiers and landed them at New Albany, where were fine hospital accommodations. Taking a supply of stores, and stopping on the way at Smithfield, Paducah, Fort Henry and Savannah, to visit the hospitals there, the steamer reached Pittsburg Landing May 2, 1862, at 5 P. M. That boat was the first State supply boat that had arrived after the battle. The same evening, four other State boats arrived, all trying to be first. Cincinnati had furnished, with great pomp, a fine steamer, the Glendale, with splendid apportionments. Among other things, she had on board a large calliope, and, knowing that she was ahead of the others last mentioned, and thinking she was the earliest steamer to arrive at this battle-field, and that Gov. Morton was beaten for once, the evening being fine and still, the music from the steam calliope could be heard for miles on the placid river.

To quote the exact words of Gen. Stone's account: "As the Cincinnati steamer passed along by our steamer, which was so infinitely inferior in all her appearances, yet containing all the needful comforts and supplies for the occasion, some one called out, "What boat is that?" The answer was, "The Crawford, Gov. Morton's boat, from Indiana." One loud shout was heard from the Glendale, and shortly afterward a gentleman came on board our steamer and told me he was the only man from Indiana on the Glendale; and that all the way on the trip he was annoyed by parties claiming that Morton was beaten for once and Ohio would now step to the front as the most diligent State; that he always loved our State and the promptness and effectiveness of our noble war Governor, but that now he loved us all better than ever."

On the 5th of May, the steamer went up to Hamburg, a few miles above the battle-field, and took on board 200 sick and wounded men, arriving with them at Evansville May 7, 1862, at 9 P. M., and by 5 P. M. of the 8th, they were all comfortably fixed in the hospitals, and supplies were all on board for another trip up the Tennessee. The boat reached Pittsburg Landing May 10, 9:30 P. M., and, by the evening of May 12, there had been taken on board at the Landing, at Hamburg, at Savannah and at Paris Landing 213 sick and wounded men, some of them very sick. The steamer arrived at Evansville May 14, 1 A. M., and left again for Pittsburg Landing at 7 P. M. that same evening, arriving May 16 at 9 P. M. On the 17th, they took on board 23 men and 153 at Hamburg, some of them being not Indiana soldiers. Fifty men were left at Mt. Vernon, Ind., and the rest were taken to Evansville. The vessel returned again to the Landing, arriving May 23. But little more remained to be done. Twenty-four men were transferred from Hamburg to the Landing. Gov. Morton having been at the front for some time, came on board May 24, and, on the 25th, the steamer left the Landing, making very fast time, for Cairo, reaching that place May 26, 4:05 A. M.

On the same day, at 6:30 P. M., Gen. Stone left Cairo for the Lower Mississippi. He made Columbus, Ky., by 8 P. M., Hickman by 9:30 P. M., New Madrid, Mo., by midnight, and left at 8 A. M., May 27. They arrived at the fleet that had opened the river for a certain distance at 5:30 P. M. The rebels still had the river below. Gen. Stone heard cannon and picket firing, but saw no general engagement. May 29, the steamer left on her return passage with all the sick and wounded that could be got, and left them at Newburg. May 31, 1862, he returned to Evansville and discharged the boat, after a service of thirty-four days.

June 1, 1862, he visited all the hospitals, finding them very full but scrupulously clean and in fine condition and the men all doing well and as a rule improving fast.

CUMBERLAND GAP.

June 2, he arrived at Indianapolis, and, at 6:30 P. M., June 7, set out by rail for Cumberland Gap via Louisville and Lexington. We quote again:

"Arrived at Louisville on the morning of June 8, where I purchased a lot of sanitary supplies for the sick, which were understood to be lying all along the road from Lexington to the Gap. Left Louisville for Lexington with the stores on the morning of the 10th; arrived at Lexington that evening; on the 11th, purchased more stores, visited the two hospitals at Lexington had a wagon train furnished, the goods loaded and a start made for the Gap by 2 P. M. My mode of conveyance was the same as that of the wagonmaster—on horseback. The road to travel and haul the stores was more than 100 miles.

On this long and dreary and mostly mountainous road, at little towns and at farmhouses, we found soldiers needing attention which was promptly given.

The people through this whole region were loyal to the core. On the 15th of June we reached Barboursville, where the sick belonging to the Forty-ninth Indiana were found. They were mostly in hospital tents under the shade of trees, and, though the weather was intensely hot, they were doing very well.

When I began to divide out to them the oranges, lemons, jellies and other nice things that I had brought, I wished most heartily that the whole loyal North could have been there to see the sight. The most the poor fellows could do was to shed tears like showers of rain, and, when they saw the few dozens of live chickens that had been brought with so much trouble along that hot and dreary road (for we had to throw water upon them frequently), their joy knew no bounds. The boys proposed to corral the chickens under the shade and throw a guard around them to keep them in sight, which was actually done.

On the 19th, we proceeded to the Gap, which had been evacuated by the rebels a few days before, and visited nearly all our Indiana men.

Many of the natives were returning to their homes, whence they had been driven.

June 22, I started on my return well-nigh loaded down with letters from the officers and men of the Thirty-third and Forty-ninth Regiments. Arrived at Lexington June 25, having traveled on horseback 408 miles, and reached Indianapolis the same evening.

RICHMOND, KY.

In the latter part of August, 1862, a fearful fight occurred near Richmond, Ky. The rebels were veteran troops, but the Union forces were raw recruits who had seen no service and knew nearly nothing of the use of arms, or of maneuvering. So far as they knew they fought like veterans, but they were overpowered and either captured or dispersed. Great numbers were taken prisoners, and many, perhaps one-third, got back to the Ohio River, and, as fast as they arrived, they were put under guard; and, when I found them on the 7th of September, 1862, they were encamped in a filthy place on Bear Grass Creek, just above Louisville, with neither tents nor utensils, and thoroughly demoralized. They looked as though they felt utterly forsaken, and told me so. But when they saw me, they thanked God for Morton. These men were from the Twelfth, Sixteenth, Sixty-sixth, Sixty-ninth and Seventy-first Regiments. I called at once upon Gen. Boyle, who I knew was an intelligent, warm-hearted and generous man.

Gen. Buell had only that day put Gen. Gilbert in command of Kentucky. Gen. Boyle said that if he had the power, our men should be sent home at once, that Gov. Morton could not ask anything that he would not do for him; but unfortunately he had no power in the matter.

At this moment Gen. Gilbert came in, and when told my business and my wishes, he flew into a rage and broke out (in substance) thus:

"Your Indiana men acted and fought like d—d cowards, as they are—all of them—and deserve no mercy. I have them under guard, and (with a cruel oath) I will keep them there till they rot before one of them shall go home." This seemed so unsoldierlike, so ungentlemanly, so utterly uncalled for, that I was provoked as well, and once or twice with my hand on my revolver, was tempted to use it on him. I bore it, however, knowing that if I accomplished anything I must keep cool, and I did. I telegraphed to Morton forthwith, and he got an order from the commander at Cincinnati, who happened to rank Gilbert, to send the men home. The next morning, I called at his headquarters; he would not see me, doing the business only through his Adjutant. I could hear, however, what he said to him. Said he, on reading the order from Cincinnati through Morton: "Order Gen. Craft to place these men under Gen. Lucas; give them transportation across the river, and make them report to the camp there. Not a man of them shall go home."

When the Adjutant came out and wrote the order, I asked him as a favor that he would let me carry it to Col. Lucas, as I was going there immediately. He granted my request, and I took the paper, not, however, to Col. Lucas, for he did not know of the order till years since the war closed. I determined to withhold the order from Col. Lucas, and did so. Since, to have reported to him would have defeated my entire object. It was, indeed, a technical violation of that General's order, but a substantial compliance with the command under which he had acted, and I risked the action for the good of the service and those poor wo-begone soldiers, and the deed had one prime merit, viz., success; for we had those men not in camp, but home in a few hours, grateful and happy; and when the call came for them to return to the front, they responded with hearty good will.

VICKSBURG.

Reports frequently reached the ears of Gov. Morton of the needy condition of the sick and wounded down the Mississippi, and especially near Vicksburg, when the siege under Grant was in progress.

May 25, 1863, I left Evansville at 12:30 P. M., with fifty-five surgeons and assistants, with a full supply of hospital and sanitary stores, on the steamer Courier. We left Cairo May 27 at 9 A. M., and at Memphis were compelled to take coal enough for the round trip.

Soon after leaving Memphis, we were obliged to wait and be conveyed by gunboats down the river, as the banks were swarming with armed men ready to take us in at any moment.

We arrived, May 31, at the mouth of the Yazoo, as far down as we dared to go. In company with Dr. Bullard, an eminent physician of Indianapolis, who died also and was brought home June 20 following, and others, we called on Gen. Grant at his headquarters, and went thence to those of Gen. Hovey, remaining at the latter place all night. Gen. Hovey, being a Hoosier General, had most of the Indiana soldiers under his command, and that fact enabled us to accomplish readily and properly the object of our mission.

A large part of our stores were turned over where we thought they would do the most good, as also many of our Surgeons; starting on the return trip June 2, 1863, taking a few sick at Lake Providence, and some others at Helena, and, ascending under guard, as we had been on the downward passage, receiving, also, seventy-five Indianians at Memphis, Evansville was reached June 8, 2:30 A. M. The men were transferred to the hospitals forthwith, and I arrived at Indianapolis the same evening.

June 28, 1863, we left Evansville on the steamer City Belle, with seventeen Surgeons and nurses on board, nearly all from Randolph County.

A large part of the downward trip was made with our steamer tied alongside of a gunboat, and the arrival at Vicksburg took place July 4, 1863, the day of the surrender. As usual the "Morton boat" was ahead. On the 5th, the camps surrounding the city were visited, and stores were liberally furnished to fourteen Indiana regiments.

We left Vicksburg at 8 A. M. (day not stated) on the return trip. Some sick were received from Young's Point, as also from the hospital steamer Nashville, taking also the corpse of Dr. Elliot, who had gone down the river on our former trip. The steamer arrived at Evansville July 15; the sick were transferred to the hospitals, and we left at once for Indianapolis, arriving there to find the city in a blaze of excitement over the Morgan raid.

This brief and imperfect statement gives only a slight idea of the wonderful activity of the State of Indiana in all its modes of action under that peerless Governor, Oliver P. Morton. Time fails to recount and space to record even a tithe of the ceaseless exertions constantly put forth, and with unequaled success, to care for, to protect, to comfort and to bless the soldier boys from the Hoosier State scattered over the whole vast conflict. And in this noble attempt at succor to the soldier, and this grand accomplishment in his behalf, it is due to Randolph County to state the unquestioned fact that one of her trusted and honored citizens, loyal and enthusiastic, active and untiring, energetic and persevering, was thankful to have enjoyed the privilege of rendering very great and very valuable aid in bringing to pass the glorious result; and many a brave soldier at the front, many a sick and wounded one in hospital or in camp, and many a wife and mother at home, found, during that sad, melancholy time, abundant reason to thank God and take courage for the labors accomplished by our faithful and patriotic fellow-citizen in behalf of those who were suffering in imminent peril and utmost need.

TOWNSHIP HISTORIES.

IN the succeeding pages, we give the separate history of the various townships, taking them substantially in the order of their settlement, excepting Winchester, the county seat, with its township. It will be remembered that several items—viz., formation, education, religion, agriculture, attorneys, physicians, roads and bridges, pikes, banks, the press, military affairs, reminiscences, early settlement, colored people, etc.—are given under the head of the county as a whole, and for such information the reader is directed to the several titles named respectively. It will be noticed, also, that biography is distributed under various heads—clergymen, attorneys, business, physicians, military history, colored people, township history and miscellany.

WHITE RIVER TOWNSHIP.

WINCHESTER—COUNTY SEAT.

Some account of the first creation and settlement of the town has been furnished under the title "Organization."

We proceed to give a more full and detailed statement of matters connected with this first, this central town, for many years the only one, and for many more the principal village in Randolph County.

The town was laid out in 1819, upon Section 20, Township 20, Range 14, by authority of the county, for the county seat.

Land donated by Charles Conway (60), John Wright (50), David Wright (10), David Stout (18), Daniel Petty (20).

The land donated consisted of 158 acres, and the plat comprised 108 inlots, twenty-six outlots, a public square and a public commons.

The streets were: North and south, East, Main, Meridian, West; east and west, North, Washington, Franklin, South.

The record of the plat was not made till 1833.

First addition, Jere Smith's, five lots. Subdivision of Outlot 1 and part of 2, in the southwest square, between Franklin and South, and east of Main. Recorded February 10, 1847.

Second addition, Paul W. Way, agent. Thirteen lots. Between Franklin and Washington. A. D. Way, Surveyor.

Recorded February 10, 1847.

Third addition, Monks', George W. Monks, proprietor. Thirty-three lots, southwest of old plat, west of West street.

New streets: East and west, George and Will; north and south, Wall. Recorded July 13, 1849.

Fourth addition, Mumma's, John Mumma, proprietor. Two hundred and sixty-nine inlots, nine outlots. T. C. Puckett, surveyor. Location, chiefly north of railroad.

New streets: East and west, Pearl, Railroad (avenue), Third, Fourth, Fifth, Short; north and south, Residence, east of East street. Recorded June 9, 1851.

Fifth addition, Ludy's. Henry Ludy, Samuel P. Ludy, proprietors. Ninety-six lots. T. C. Puckett, surveyor. Location, east of original plat. Recorded December 26, 1851.

Sixth addition, Mumma's extension, John Mumma, proprietor.

Outlots 10 to 28; nineteen inlots. E. L. Watson, surveyor.

Location, north of Short street and east of Residence street.

Recorded October 18, 1853.

Seventh addition, Frazee's, W. D. Frazee, proprietor

Sixteen lots, south of South street. Recorded July 12, 1854.

Eighth addition, Cottom's, John W. Cottom, proprietor. Twenty lots.

Location, between Main and Meridian, south of Monks' Addition. Streets: East and west, George and Orange. (Re-platted as Ferris' Addition July 17, 1876.) Recorded July 9, 1856.

Ninth addition, Cheney's. J. J. Cheney, proprietor.

Eight lots. Subdivision of Outlots 6 and 7, northeast square. Recorded November 1, 1864.

Tenth addition, Browne's, T. M. Browne, proprietor.

Eight lots. South of George, between Meridian and West.

Recorded June 27, 1867.

Eleventh addition, Frazee's second, W. D. Frazee, proprietor.

Eight lots. Southwest part of town, south of George and west of West street. Recorded August 16, 1869.

Twelfth addition, Colgrove's, Silas Colgrove, proprietor.

Twenty-four lots. Northwest part of town, between West and Meridian, on both sides of Sixth street.

Recorded May 20, 1870.

Thirteenth addition, Stone's, Asahel Stone, proprietor.

One lot, south of Orange, west of Main, and east of Fort Wayne Railroad. Recorded May 9, 1873.

Fourteenth addition, Cheney & Watson's, J. J. Cheney and E. L. Watson, proprietors.

Seventy-eight lots, southeast from public square, on both sides of Salt Creek.

New streets: East and west, Elm, Carl; north and south, Richmond, High. Recorded November 23, 1874.

Fifteenth addition, Macy's, W. W. Macy, proprietor.

Seven lots, subdivision of Outlot 5, southwest square.

Recorded April 12, 1875.

Sixteenth addition, Bosworth's, Richard Bosworth, proprietor.

Eighteen lots, west of Colgrove's Addition.

Recorded April 16, 1875.

Seventeenth addition, A. J. Neff's, A. J. Neff, proprietor.

Seventeen lots, between South and Will streets, and west of Wall street. Recorded June 17, 1875.

Eighteenth addition, Engle & Markle's, Edmund Engle, J. E. Markle, proprietors.

Ninety-four lots, east of Cheney & Watson's plat, south of Greenville pike. New streets: North and south, Oak; east and west, Thomson. Recorded August 21, 1875.

Nineteenth addition, Biggs', J. F. Biggs, proprietor.

Four lots, north of Orange and east of Wall.

Recorded January 15, 1876.

Twentieth addition, Stone's Subdivision, Asahel Stone, proprietor. Eighteen lots. Part of Outlot 1, Stone's Addition.

Recorded April 12, 1876.

Twenty-first addition, Canada's, W. W. Canada, proprietor.

Twelve lots, west of Wall and north of Orange.

Recorded May 22, 1876.

Twenty-second addition, Cheney & Watson's second, J. J. Cheney, E. L. Watson, proprietors.

Thirty-eight lots near their first addition.

New streets: North and south, Broome; east and west, Watson street. Recorded June 13, 1876.

Twenty-third addition, Browne & Cheney's, T. M. Browne, J. J. Cheney, proprietors.

Twelve lots, east of Browne street, southeast part of town.

Recorded June 26, 1876.

Twenty-fourth addition, Browne's Brookside, Thomas M. Browne, proprietor.

Ten lots, east side of Salt Creek, between Will and Carl streets. Recorded April 11, 1877.

EARLY HISTORY.

The origin and early history of the town have been given already in another chapter. We subjoin an article containing some first things, as also a more general history of business in Winchester in the past.

Both these accounts, are, of course, only partial and fragmentary, as all accounts made up merely of verbal statements drawn from memory must of necessity be.

FIRST THINGS IN WINCHESTER.

1. The first hatter's shop in Winchester (and probably in the county) was by James Oldham, in the building erected by James McCool for a hotel. Mr. Oldham kept a hatter's shop and hotel.

2. The first hotel was in the same building, by James McCool, in 1819, where the post office building now is.

3. The first store was owned by Esquire Odle. It was not much of a store. It was where George Irvin now lives. The old house was burned in 1879.

4. The first frame house (and probably first in the county) was built by John Sample, in 1820, upon Lot No. 3, East Front. There are doubtless more costly and splendid frame dwellings in Randolph County in 1881 than that was, but not one to-day which gave more solid comfort to the occupant than that same frame house, the first in Randolph County.

5. John Way set up his smith shop in 1829. There had probably been some other, but the fact is now beyond recall.

6. Jesse Way began his store in 1832 or 1833.

7. Mary Reeder came to Winchester in 1823, residing upon Lot No. 2, West Front, and removing afterward to Inlot No. 12, southeast square, upon which she still resides.

8. The court house and jail were built in 1819 and 1820, the one by Abner Overman, and the other by Albert Banta.

9. The public square was cleared of the forest trees by the laborious process of chopping and burning. The work was performed in 1819 or 1820, by David Lesley, then a young man, just come to the county, now a venerable old gentleman of fourscore, father of Daniel Lesley, School Superintendent of Randolph County.

10. The second court house (brick) was contracted in 1826, and ready for occupancy in 1828.

11. For various first things, see "First Things" for the county.

12. The first schoolhouse was built of logs, with the ends projecting at the corners. It stood where now is located the residence of A. Aker, Jr., on Washington, corner of Washington and East, west side of Salt Creek. Being built before 1830, it was burned down, with "all the books," in 1836. Doubtless some prominent citizen (one or more) who graduated (minus a Latin diploma, however) from that "log-cabin college" so long, long ago, is still living, who looks back to his Alma Mater with affection for the instruction imparted to him on those rude benches, and with regret for the books (perhaps only one book) of his, irrecoverably lost when that midnight conflagration laid that old schoolhouse in ashes.

13. Moorman Way had the first cabinet shop soon after the establishment of the town.

14. Moorman Way had a carding machine very early, run by horse-power (sometimes by ox-power).

15. Daniel Petty also had a carding machine, east of town on Salt Creek. It was driven by horse-power, too.

16. The first grist-mill in the county is thought by some to have been built by William Wright, at the mouth of Salt Creek, near Winchester. He had "gray-heads" for mill-stones, and his wheat-bolt was operated by hand, each customer bolting his own grist.

17. The first physician may have been Dr. Davis.

18. The first Justice of the Peace may have been Esquire Odle, or John Wright—perhaps both at once in the township.

19. Thomas Hanna began selling goods, perhaps in 1824. His store was in a house at the west end of Thomas Ward's building. He continued in business four years, and was bought out by Andrew Aker in 1828.

20. The first steam grist-mill (and the first in the county) was erected about 1835, by Elias Kizer and Daniel Haworth. That engine of theirs was the first steam-power in the county, and in those days it was a sight to behold.

21. Probably the first wagon shop in Winchester, and in the county, was carried on by Thomas Butterworth, beginning, perhaps, in 1836. Mr. Butterworth had also a saw-mill, a carding machine and a grist-mill. He seems to have been an active citizen, and his sudden and untimely death (by the exploding of a cannon caused by his efforts to unspike it) must have been a sad loss to the community, as well as to his bereaved family. His widow is still living, and in Winchester, having married again, and being now the second time, for many years, a widow.

22. The first saw-mill spoken of is the one owned by Thomas Butterworth between 1836 and 1845. He came in the former and was killed in the latter year.

23. The first religious denomination in Winchester was perhaps the Methodists. No reliable account is at hand of their early doings in the place.

24. The first meeting-house is supposed to have been built by the Presbyterians in about 1853. It still stands, though no longer used for a church. It is rather a curious fact that, for thirty-four years, Winchester was without a meeting-house, and no place for religious service, except, indeed, those (though not very convenient, yet available) substitutes, the court house and the county seminary, both of which had, of course, to do duty in this respect in that town. A key to the backwardness of the place in business enterprise, and to the lack of general prosperity in times past, may be found, at least in part, in this very fact. A town with no religious faith nor life is a very good place to move away from, but is not considered a very good place to immigrate to.

25. Asa Teal had a grocery a long while ago, though the time cannot now be given.

26. Among the early attorneys may be named Zachariah Puckett, Jeremiah Smith, Moorman Way. There were perhaps some earlier than these, but their names are not now at hand. Zachariah Puckett was admitted in 1834; Jeremiah Smith, in 1837; and Moorman Way and Silas Colgrove, in 1839.

27. The county seminary was opened for school March, 1842, under the instructions of Prof. Farris, then a young but active and enthusiastic teacher, and since famous for his success in that line, but now sleeping low beneath the "clods of the valley" for half a score of years.

28. Winchester was incorporated as a town in 1838, thirty-eight voters favoring the measure, and none opposing it.

Many more first things might perhaps have been discovered with pains enough, but these are all we have had time to get hold of.

PAST BUSINESS.

We give below some statements concerning the business of the town during the past years, furnishing such information concerning the matter as we have been able to obtain. The place has been settled so long (sixty-three years) that nearly all the persons that were grown at that time and living in the vicinity are dead, and to find out much about those ancient times has been a task indeed.

Merchants.—John Odle kept the first store, in a building which burned down in 1879. George Burkett had a store also, not long afterward, in 1821, and kept store for some years.

Thomas Hanna began as a merchant about 1824. He had his establishment on the west end of Thomas Ward's building. After about four years, Andrew Aker bought him out, in 1828. Mr. Aker kept on in the business for several years, having, as is thought, the only store in the county, and carrying a large and various stock, and buying furs, peltry, ginseng, deer's hams, sugar, and all sorts of forest and farm produce, and selling everything which was needed in the region, and customers coming from Muncie, Marion, Salamonie (Jay County), etc. There was no store north of Newport, and not many, north of Richmond, and none west nor north as far as you pleased to go.

Adam Hirsch was born December 31, 1826, at Groaz Gerau, in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. He grew to manhood there, acquiring a good education, and with it a knowledge of the cabinet-maker's trade. At the age of twenty-seven years, in 1853, he emigrated to the United States, landing at New York, after a quiet and uneventful voyage. From that city he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he resided until March, 1855. He came to Winchester at that date, and has resided here ever since. During a part of the time prior to his arrival in America, he was employed as a journeyman cabinet-maker, and continued that line of occupation after his arrival at Cincinnati. In August, 1856, he opened a cabinet shop at Winchester, beginning on a small scale, and increasing gradually, until his business assumed the proportions of an extensive furniture manufactory. In 1861, he sold out, and for the next few years was engaged in various branches of business, among them being the retail grocery trade. In 1875, he resumed the manufacture of furniture, and has been engaged at this enterprise ever since. He is a thorough business man, and by his energy and good management has gained a comfortable fortune in worldly wealth, while he has established himself as one of the leading citizens and prominent manufacturers of Winchester.

ADAM HIRSCH.

In politics, he is a Republican, and while he has been an active political worker, he has never been an aspirant for office. Twice, however, he has been elected to town offices—once as a member of Council, and once as Street Commissioner.

He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank, of Winchester, in 1865, and was elected a member of its Board of Directors. Upon the re-organization of the bank, he was again elected one of its Directors, having served continuously in this capacity for twelve years. He is also one of the Board of Directors of the Winchester Wagon Works.

He was married, on the 11th of September, 1853, to Miss Maria Pohlmann, to whom he was betrothed in his native land. Their marriage, by mutual consent, was delayed until after their arrival in America. They are the parents of four children, all of whom are now living, and two are married.

ADAM HIRSCH'S BLOCK, S. E. COR. MAIN & WASHINTON STS
RANDOLPH CO., WINCHESTER, IND.

Jesse Way bought the building of George Burkett and set up a store in 1833, and did an extensive business in 1845. He broke himself by dealing in pork, which was the lure and the curse of merchants of those days, the price varying beyond all calculation or prevention, and sweeping out in a single year all a man chose to invest. Andrew Aker and Mr. Way were selling goods for several years at the same time.

Levi Coffin had a stock of goods at Winchester for a little while, but that store was soon sold out or taken away.

Goodrich & Brother erected a brick building after 1834, and put in a stock of goods, which they kept up for several years. It stood on the north side of East Washington street, west of the livery stable, and is now occupied by a saloon.

D. J. & J. W. Cottom came in 1843, and became heavy dealers in a general business, which they continued till 1856.

They are said to have outdone all who came before them, and many think that no house in Winchester since their day has equaled them in the amount of business done in that line.

They failed, however, at last, through the uncertainties and liabilities of their trade.

To sell on credit is so easy, and to collect old bills is so hard, and old, unpaid accounts will not pay debts.

John Richardson has been for many years one of the leading merchants of Winchester, beginning in 1850. He now is a merchant tailor.

Since those times, the merchants of Winchester have become more numerous, and to give a detailed account of them would occupy too much time and space.

Carding Machines, etc.—Moorman Way and Daniel Petty each had a carding machine, both of which did work for awhile, the latter for eight or ten years. Thomas Butterworth and Elisha Martin owned one between 1839 and 1845.

John D. Carter, after working with Butterworth & Martin, and setting up a carding machine first of his own at Huntsville, in 1849, built one at Winchester in 1851, had it burned in a few months, and moved to Union City, Ohio, his family, he says, being the first in that place. He returned again to Winchester after a residence in various other places in 1862, and in 1866 he built the New York Block for a woolen factory, and in 1869, purchased the old seminary, and has operated there, weaving, spinning, etc., for several years, but leaving off weaving for some years past. He is now (1881) erecting a new and more extensive factory, on the bank of Salt Creek, in the southeast part of town.

Grist-Mills.—A grist-mill was built by William Wright at the mouth of Salt Creek, which Jesse Way thinks was the first mill in the county. If so, it must have been established as early as 1818. His mill-stones were gray-heads, and his bolt was turned by hand, like all the rest in those days.

Messrs. Kizer & Haworth built the first steam mill in the county about 1835, in the east part of town.

After that, Mr. Roberts built one in the north part of town, which stood for many years.

Next came the brick warehouse and mills near the depot. The east end was erected by John Mumma for a warehouse, and the west end was added by Elisha Martin.

The mill works were put in by Heaston Brothers in 1867. They sold to Robison, Wysong & Miller; they to Colton & Bates, in 1873; and in 1876, Bates Bros. & Co. became owners, and they are so still. They are enterprising men, and, in 1881, renewed the works, putting in machinery for Jonathan Mills' system of gradual reduction, which makes flour mostly without grinding. This mill is one of the finest in the county, having a capacity of 150 barrels per day.

Cabinet Shops.—Moorman Way set up a cabinet shop not far from 1831; then came Philip Allen, and after him, Ernestus Strohm, in partnership, for a time, with Andrew Aker. Mr. Aker has a sideboard now, the first costly article of furniture made in the county, worth at that time $175, which was built by Mr. Strohm, and was the first thing he made, to show what he could do. After that shop came Hirsch & Wesp, in 1856, and then Helms & Diggs. Mr. Hirsch has now a large establishment, both for manufacture and for sale. J. L. Stakebake also has an extensive stock of elegant and substantial furniture for the supply of trade of that sort.

Lumber Trade.—The lumber trade has never been very large. It was started chiefly by Neff, Teal & Co.

They began the black walnut trade in 1865, and in 1871, a pine lumber company was formed, under the name of Neff, Teal & Fisher, which was dissolved in 1879. Col. Neff is at present employed as agent for Osterhaut & Fox, lumber-dealers, Grand Rapids, Mich.

The lumber business is now carried on in Winchester by A. G. Campfield, coming in 1875, and again in 1880. He has been for some years the proprietor of a saw-mill and lumber works, which furnish an extensive supply to the region. His works were burned a few years ago, inflicting upon the enterprising owner a loss of $6,000; but they are rebuilt, and are running as briskly as ever.

Contractors.—Chief among the contractors in former times have been Martin A. Reeder and Asahel Stone.

In later time, Mr. Campfield has figured in that line, building the new court house and now the jail.

Latterly, Gen. Stone has turned his activity into another channel; but Mr. Reeder, though growing into years, is still engaged in his life-long employment, which has been an honorable and a useful vocation, and highly valuable to the community at large, though, like many other toilsome occupations, not remarkably remunerative to himself.

At present, A. G. Campfield leads all others in executing contracts, his work being mostly or wholly very large buildings, court houses, jails, etc.

Grain-Dealers.—Elisha Martin was the first extensive grain-dealer. Thomas W. Kizer has handled grain for some years. Helms & Bishop and John Neff now deal in grain. Joseph Edger followed the business for a time, as also Goodrich & Semans Bates Bros. & Co. buy largely, chiefly for milling purposes, their establishment making several hundred bushels daily into flour for consumption at home and abroad.

Undertakers.—John W. Diggs has followed this business for thirty years or more, and is still engaged therein. Within a short time, J. L. Stakebake has taken it up also.

Livery Stables.—The first livery stable was set up by Mr. Green, about 1854 or 1855. After that, Green & Ashville, and doubtless many others. We have no detailed account of that branch of business.

Boot and Shoe Stores.—In old times, these things were a part of a general stock in trade, though mostly they were made to order by hand in the shoe shops, or at home, in fact, as they often were. The prominent dealers in boots and shoes have been John Routh, south of public square; S. W. Wolverton, southeast corner of Main and Washington; and A. R. Hiatt & Son, north side of Washington, near the bank. Others have carried this kind of stock more or less at different times.

Hardware.—The first hardware store was kept by Mr. Bruner. After his came that of Thomas Ward, and he was succeeded by A. R. Hiatt, who is in business still, north of public square. There is also another hardware house, owned by Helms & Bishop, east side of public square, as also one on the west side, Cranor Bros.

William Moore was engaged in hardware, disposing of his stock to Helms & Bishop.

Drug Stores.—Many years ago, Dr. Woody sold drugs in Winchester. After him came Rush & Kizer, in 1849, which has continued ever since, and is probably the oldest establishment in the town. It is now carried on by his son in connection with a son of Gideon Shaw, Esq., under the firm name of Kizer & Shaw, begun in 1878.

William Pierce kept drug store for some years, and sold out to J. C. Hirsch, who is still conducting the establishment, having been engaged thus for some twenty-four years.

Besides that, there are William Reed, who bought of Mrs. Hebbard, and also Dr. Carver.

Grocers.—Groceries used to be sold as a part of a general stock.

Asa Teal had a grocery years ago.

Dr. Bruce and his father-in-law carried on a business of this kind.

Of late years, Thomas Best began in 1872, and G. G. Keller in 1869. The number of grocers has been legion. To give an account of them, or to keep track of their ins and outs, would be out of the question.

Physicians.—Among earlier physicians may be named Messrs. Davis, Lemmon, Bruce, Beverly, Hiatt, Liston, Woody, Benjamin Puckett, Brickley, Bosworth.

Physicians at present: Drs. Bruce, Markle, Smith, Chenoweth, Evans, Alexander, Botkin, Hiatt, Beverly, Carver, Bosworth.

Dentists.—Drs. Herron, Ballard, Huddleston, Puckett.

Saw-Mills.—The first saw-mill remembered was owned by Thomas Butterworth before 1845. Others have been owned by Solomon Yunker, John Chapman, Hinshaw & Son, etc.

Josiah Hutchens built a steam saw-mill on the north side of Franklin street. Elisha Martin owned it awhile, and then it burned down.

Mr. Knecht set up a saw-mill in the west part of town, which was owned afterward by Neff, Teal & Co., and, still later, by A. G. Campfield. The mill was burned, but has been rebuilt by him, and it is now doing a large business.

Harness-Making.—Alfred Rossman began this business in Winchester in 1838, and has been engaged therein ever since, up to 1875. His shop was first of the kind in the county. Before that, his brother, James Rossman, of Hamilton, Ohio, used to come through the place with saddles for the Indian trade at Fort Wayne, and to supply Aker & Bros., in Winchester. Mr. Rossman made the first saddle manufactured in Randolph County. It was a beauty—full-quilted, covered with blue-black buckskin, prepared by the Indians. He sold the saddle to Michael Aker for $50, but, Mr. Aker failing shortly, he never got anything for the saddle.

Mr. Chapman has been in the same business for many years, and is working at it yet.

Banks.—Moorman's Bank, by James Moorman, changed to Farmers' and Merchants' Bank.

National Bank, established in 1865; President, Arthur McKew; changed to Randolph County Bank.

Farmers' and Merchants' Bank, formed April, 1878; Nathan Reed, President.

Randolph County Bank, October 1, 1878; Asahel Stone, President.

Marble Business.—The first operations in marble were by a Mr. Robertson, as agent of a marble firm in Sidney, Ohio. After that, Ludy, Stafford & Beebee, engaged in the marble trade.

In 1858, Daniel E. Hoffman came to the town and set up the business, buying out the existing firm, and he has had the sole control of stone cutting in Winchester from that day to this. He began in the old log court house, which was then standing north of the public square, and in 1862 he removed to his present location, northwest corner of Meridian and Washington streets. Mr. Hoffman has had an extensive trade, amounting to from $5,000 to $7,000 a year.

Prominent Public Men.—In a centennial sketch of public men the following are named:

Charles Conway, Jeremiah Smith, George W. Monks, Nathan Reed, Willis C. Willmore, Nathan Garrett, Thomas W. Reece, Thomas Ward, Asahel Stone, Silas Colgrove, Elihu Cammack, Thomas Clevenger, William M. Campbell, Hicks K. Wright, Elias Kizer, Thomas W. Kizer, Jacob Elzroth, Clement F. Alexander, William Burres, John J. Cheney, Enos L. Watson, John B. Goodrich, A. J. Neff, George O. Jobes, Thomas L. Scott, William E. Murray, John W. Jarnagin, E. F. Halliday, A. M. Owens, James H. Bowen, Ira Swain, Isaac P. Gray, H. T. Semans, Thomas M. Browne, Henry H. Neff, Moorman Way.

Of course, a large number are omitted in the above list, the names above including no physicians, clergymen nor teachers, hardly any Judges nor members of the Legislature, nor men prominent as active business men in private life.

Silversmiths.—Arthur Quick was in the business a long time, perhaps twenty-five or thirty years. He moved to Kansas some years ago.

The present ones are Messrs. Irvin, Litchard and Klamberg.

Smith Shops.—Who had the first (if any before 1829 or 1830) is not now known.

Abner Overman, in 1826–27, built a frame house on the northeast corner of Lot No. 2, east front. He sold it to John Way in the fall of 1829, who moved to it and set up a blacksmith shop, where for many years most of the smith work for that place was done.

L. D. Carter began blacksmith work in Winchester in 1851, and has carried it on ever since, mingling it sometimes with wagon and carriage making.

Meat Shops.—C. C. Monks began the butcher trade in 1870, and for eleven years has not missed a day from his shop. His business is extensive, reaching $8,000 annually. The history of the meat business in the past for Winchester we have not at hand.

Hotels.—James McCool opened the first hotel in a good two-story hewed-log house, built by him in 1819, the first year of the existence of the town. James Oldham owned the building soon after, and had tavern, dwelling and hatter's shop all in the same building. Then John Odle bought it and had it for a hotel and a store for some years.

After the new brick court house (in 1826), David Heaston used the old one as a hotel; but not long, for he sold out to Paul W. Way, probably in 1828, who was landlord in Winchester for a long time. Andrew Aker also opened a hotel in the building which stood where the Ward building now is, soon after Way began. Jeremiah Smith built the Franklin House in 1839, which has been a hotel to this day. Alexander White was the occupant a long time, then Josiah Montgar, then William Page, and lastly, Peter Reinheimer, who has been landlord of the Franklin, lo! these sixteen years or more.

There used to be a hotel standing on the northeast corner of Washington and Main, kept at different times by Elias Kizer, Andrew Aker, Henry Carr, and perhaps others.

For a time, the Franklin House was alone in its glory.

During some years past, others have sprung up, and now Martin's Restaurant and Lodging-House, the Irvin House, the Wysong House, etc., greet the wishful traveler as he walks the streets of Winchester, anxious to find some stopping-place.

About 1874, Jack Ross opened a hotel, east side of Main street, north of Washington, which, after standing several years, was burned, and it has not been rebuilt.

Wagon Shops.—One of the earliest wagon shops was set up by Thomas Butterworth about 1836. He was killed in 1845.

Thomas Klinck has been engaged in the business for twenty-nine years, beginning in 1852.

The Carter Brothers also began carriage-making about the same time, carrying it on till 1862.

In 1873, L. D. Carter, Frank Remick and J. H. Gill began the manufacture of wagons, which firm was merged into the Winchester Wagon Works and Manufacturing Company, organized in 1881, now having a capital of $75,000 and doing an extensive business. (See sketch elsewhere.)

Wind-Mills.—Many years ago, W. V. R. Tooker established himself in the manufacture of fanning-mills at Winchester, and for nearly thirty years carried on an extensive and successful business. Through his kindness in "signing for a friend," he was broken up, losing all his hard earnings for thirty years, and he is left in his declining age to renew his battle against fate, and work from day to day to keep the wolf from the door.

From the days of Solomon to the present hour, going surety has been, and from this day to the end of time it will probably continue to be, the sad and effectual means of sweeping scores of millions of hard-earned money from the hands of the men who have, with labor and pains, by economy and self-denial, laid up a competence for the weakness of old age, through the reckless unthrift of children and friends, into the vortex of bankruptcy, and will strew the shores of time with wrecked and sad hearted men drawn into the net thus in a kindly but disastrous hour.

Liquor Selling.—The records of the courts show hosts of licenses for groceries, alias grog shops, through the past history of the county, as also scores of trials and convictions for crimes of all sorts—affrays, assaults, thefts, homicides, etc., many of them committed under the terrible influence of strong drink.

To write a history of the drink traffic, here or elsewhere, would be a dreadful, a heart-sickening task; and from the sad work the soul instinctively recoils with horror, as from the story of the plague or the cholera; nay, worse than that, for they seem the work of causes not apparently controllable by human means, while the terrible drink traffic is wholly and always the direct and exclusive work of human agents. Well may Cowper's line concerning oppression apply to this traffic:

"Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

We cannot find it in our hearts to trace, step by step and in lengthened detail, the story of this awful business; and the posterity of those who have been or are now engaged therein will bless us, in days to come, for omitting to record the names of such as targets for the execration of posterity.

There are now to be found descendants of liquor-makers and venders, and others, of past years whose cheeks blush to know the occupation of their progenitors; and public good does not require the undue exposure of the errors of the past.

Slave-trading, slave-holding, gambling, profanity and other enormities have once been fashionable and popular. But they have been swept by the swelling tide of purity into the catalogue of detestable vices. And such will be the case with drink and all its accompaniments. And happy will be the heart in that blessed time that can look back through a long line of ancestry and find none therein who were ever entangled in any of these sad, mischievous, destructive things.

License to sell strong drink! License to steal, to rob, to strike, to stab, to murder, to commit burglary, adultery, arson! License to incite men by wholesale to do any and all of these things, to commit any and every crime in the black catalogue of hellish deeds done by human hands! And yet this has been done. Nay, it is even done now, in this county of ours, and by upright, justice-loving, tender-hearted Christian men, under the real or supposed obligation of civilized law!

If the story of this business must be told, if it must be recorded who have, through long years past; who have, year by year, put the bottle and the glass to their neighbors' lips, and made them drunken also, let it be done by another hand than ours, or at least at another time than this. Let this book rather record the noble, the heroic, the praiseworthy, the public-spirited deeds of years gone by, that the ages to come may look upon the record and rejoice for the virtue and the loving kindness and the goodness that in those years of toil and hardship and sorrow, by worthy deeds, laid deep the foundations of a public prosperity and private advantage.

Thus have we most briefly given a sort of bird's-eye view of affairs, mentioning a few of the men who have done business in the town during the days of "auld lang syne." Nothing has been said in this sketch of that sort of business which springs from the fact that Winchester is the county seat. Some matters connected with that branch of the subject may be learned from the chapter on "records" and elsewhere.

Some account, also, of the railroads centering at this place has been given in another part of this work.

The Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis or Bee-Line Railroad, and the Richmond & Grand Rapids (Shoo-Fly) Railroad, cross at Winchester, giving opportunity for considerable business. In 1853, at the first building of the Bellefontaine road, the depot was far out of town, but the growth of the place has brought it into the heart of the town.

WINCHESTER—OFFICIAL.

It was incorporated as a town in 1838 by popular vote, thirty-eight votes being cast in favor and none against. It was divided into five wards, viz.:

First Ward—Northeast square, Elias Kizer, Trustee.

Second Ward—North front and northwest square, Nathan Garrett.

Third Ward—West front and southwest square, Jeremiah Smith.

Fourth Ward—South front and southeast square, John D. Stewart.

Fifth Ward—East front, Jesse Way.

The early records of the town are not accessible. The first account discovered is under date of October 6, 1855.

The Trustees then were Silas Colgrove, James Brown, William W. Smith, Simeon H. Lucas, Martin A. Reeder; John Neff was Clerk and Treasurer; Benjamin Ramsey was Assessor and Marshal: James Brown was President of the Board.

May, 1856—Trustees, James Brown, John Routh, Jesse Way, John W. Diggs, James C. Ennis; John Neff, Clerk and Treasurer; Andrew Favorite, Assessor and Marshal.

May, 1858—Trustees, Alexander White, George W. Helms, Simeon H. Lucas, Henry Carter, W. B. Pierce; M. A. Reeder, Clerk and Treasurer; William L. Steele, Assessor and Marshal.

The board agreed to serve gratuitously. It would seem that the County Commissioners declared the bounds of the town in June, 1855.

In 1858, an arrangement was made with the Bee-Line Railroad to lay a track to a gravel bank in the region and haul gravel for the corporation; as also to have the gravel placed upon the streets, the latter at 12½ cents per wagon load.

July 20, 1858, John Cronin received for hauling gravel upon the streets, $65.76; railroad received for two days, $140.50; opening pit, etc., $77.90; about 600 loads for $284.16, besides the cost (if any) at the pit, or about 45 cents per load.

It appears there used to be a town market house, for it was ordered to be sold at public auction. The town was resurveyed by order passed April 30, 1859. The original corners had been lost, and the chief starting points were declared to be as follows:

1. The northwest corner of the Franklin House.

2. The southeast corner of Jesse Way's brick storeroom, at the crossing of Main and Washington.

May, 1859—Trustees, H. P. Kizer, Joseph Puckett, John Ross, William M. Way, Jacob Elzroth; William L. Steele, Clerk and Treasurer; Thomas J. Hull, Assessor and Marshal.

June, 1859—G. C. Ennis was appointed Trustee in place of William M. Way, resigned.

The Treasurer's report from May 7, 1859, to April 30, 1860, is as follows: Receipts, $370.35; expended, $201.09; on hand, $169.26. Three hundred and fifty eight yards of gravel had been hauled upon the streets, at a cost of $90.78.

May, 1860—Trustees, A. White, J. Puckett, A. D. C. Monroe, W. B. Pierce, E. J. Putman: William L. Steele, Clerk; Joseph K. Dick, Treasurer; James C. Ennis, Assessor and Marshal.

NOTE.—J. C. Ennis failed to qualify, and George W. Carter was appointed in his stead.

1861—Trustees, White, Helms, Carter, Pierce, Beverly; Steele, Clerk and Treasurer; Routh, Assessor and Marstal.

Treasurer's report, May, 1861, is as follows: Handled, $185.-64; paid out, $185.52; on hand, 12 cents.

1862—Trustees, Jeremiah Smith, Neff, Klinck, Doyle, Hall; John D. Smith, Clerk and Treasurer; George W. Carter, Assessor and Marshal.

Treasurer's report: Handled, $91.74; paid out, $36.37; on hand, $55.37 (low taxes—small expenses—full treasury).

May, 1862, offices created: Town Surveyor, $2.50 per day, M. Way; Street Commissioner, $1.25 per day, P. Doyle.

Asahel Stone allowed the town to haul gravel from his bank free, on condition of keeping his grounds secure by having gates locked, etc. Patrick McDonnal contracted to haul 600 yards of gravel at 30 cents.

Neff resigned as Trustee to enlist in the army; Carter resigned as Marshal, etc., and J. K. Dick was put in his place.

April, 1863, Trustees, Smith, Needham, Ross, Richardson, Hull; Robert S. Fisher, Clerk and Treasurer; Reuben B. Farra, Marshal and Assessor.

Treasurer's report, dated April, 1863: Debit, $708.90; credit, $457.07; on hand, $277.20.

May, 1864—Trustees, Reeder, Willmore, Halliday, Richardson, Hull; Bradbury, Clerk and Treasurer; Garrett, Marshal and Assessor.

Treasurer's report, 1864: Debit, $1,038.96; credit, $650.90; on hand, $388.06.

May, 1865, Trustees, Leake, Thomas, Smith, McAdams; Diggs, Clerk and Treasurer; Smith, Street Commissioner.

April 30, 1869, salaries of officers: Marshal, $50; Clerk, $27; Treasurer, $15; Council, $20 each; Surveyor, $15, six days' service.

May, 1869—Trustees, Williamson, Hirsh, Carter, Helms, Kreutzer, Shaw, Winters. J. C. Hirsch, Clerk; Ira Tripp, Marshal and Assessor; H. P. Kizer, Treasurer; Charles Jaqua, Surveyor. Tripp resigned and C. E. Smith was appointed in his place, June 11, 1869.

March, 1870, H. B. Cox was appointed Councilman to fill a vacancy in place of Kreutzer, moved away. O. M. Mills in place of J. D. Carter, resigned.

May, 1870 (there would seem to have been seven wards. Changed back to five wards)—Trustees, Marlatt, Carter, Bannister, Winters, Heaston; Reinheimer, Clerk; Alexander, Marshal. 1870, citizens were allowed gravel from the city bank for use in town, free.

1871 (town changed to three wards)—Trustees, Carter, Richardson, Heaston; H. P. Kizer, Treasurer; J. E. Neff, Clerk; C. C. Smith, Assessor and Marshal.

April, 1872, Treasurer's receipts, $777.29. April, 1873, Treasurer's receipts, $746.20.

1873—Trustees, Henry Carter, J. C. Hirsch, N H. Ward; L. J. Monks, Attorney; W. F. Newton, Marshal and Street Commissioner; salary set at $300 and fees; Moorman Way, Engineer.

1874—Trustees, A. Stone, A. R. Hiatt, A. Favorite; Thomas Ward, Treasurer; P. M. Reinheimer, Clerk; W. O. Harra, Marshal; Jonathan Hiatt, Assessor (appointed).

1875—Same Trustees, Thomas Ward, Treasurer; B. F. Boltz, Clerk and Assessor; A. O. Marsh, Prosecuting Attorney, compensation, one-half the fines collected.

May, 1876, Treasurer's report: Debit, $4,280.46; credit, $4,237.70; on hand, $42.76.

Trustees, Newton, Puckett, Johnson; E. T. Brickley, Clerk and Assessor; W. A. Martin, Treasurer; N. H. Ward, Marshal and Street Commissioner; Phineas Pomeroy, Engineer.

May, 1877—Same Trustees.

Treasurer's report: Debit, $1,806.16; credit, $1,621.57; on hand, $184.59.

Marshal's report: Debit, $6,136.62; credit, $6,122.62; on hand, $14; dirt sold, 10,959 yards at 10 cents, $1,095.90; gravel hauled 2,948 yards; guttering done, value $466.17; pavements made, value, $1,647.49.

NOTE.—The large sums of money handled in 1876 and 1877, came mostly from a division of the accumulated road tax in the hands of the trustee of White River Township, a part of which belonged to Winchester corporation and had not been paid over for some years previous.

May, 1878—Trustees: Reinheimer, Hirsch, Diggs.

Treasurer's report, May, 1878: Debit, $2,635.58; credit, $2,609.33; on hand, $26.25.

W. A. Martin, Treasurer; W. P. Needham, Clerk; C. Jaqua, Engineer; J. K. Martin, Marshal and Street Commissioner.

May, 1879—Trustees, Fox, Magee, Diggs; W. A. Martin, Treasurer; J. M. Fletcher, Marshal and Street Commissioner; W. P. Needham, Clerk; Charles Jaqua, Engineer; L. W. Study, Prosecuting Attorney.

Treasurer's report: Debit, $3,646.22; credit, $2,981.96; on hand, $664.26.

May, 1880—Trustees, Coats, Fox, Winter; W. P. Needham, Clerk; J. M. Fletcher, Marshal; W. A. Martin, Treasurer; L. W. Study, Attorney.

Treasurer's report, May, 1880: Debit, $4,699.75; credit, $3,477.73; on hand, $1,222.02.

May, 1881—Trustees, Brumfield, Rice, Newton; W. A. Martin, Treasurer; W. P. Needham, Clerk; William Linkenstorfer, Marshal and Street Commissioner; J. W. Thompson, Attorney; Charles Jaqua, Engineer.

Treasurer's report, May, 1881: Debit, $7,058.88; credit, $6,652.20; on hand, $406.68.

The Postmasters of Winchester have been as follows:

Josiah Montgar, 1840–44; William H. Fitzgerald, Thomas W. Kizer, Thomas Scott, Reuben Farra, B. F. Diggs, four years; James E. Williamson, four years; Francis M. Way, ten years, 1869–79; Charles E. Farris, 1879.

Before 1840, we are not informed as to the incumbents of the office; neither are we able to state at what time Winchester was made a post town, or what was the first mail route through the region.

The following named are or have been railroad agents: J. W. Williamson, many years; E. W. Bishop, six years; A. H. Kite, a short time; I. N. Hoover, six years.

Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad—Snyder, Bowers, J C. Patterson, W. B. Miller.

PRESENT BUSINESS OF WINCHESTER.

Below may be found a brief statement of the present condition of business in the county seat. Some may, perhaps, have been omitted, for which, if any there be, we hereby express our regret: Agricultural implements, Gordon, 1880.

Flouring-mill, Bates Bros. & Co., manufactures of high grade flours; gradual reduction; capacity, 150 barrels, Winchester, Ind. The building was erected for a grain warehouse by John Mumma, and enlarged by Elisha Martin; he sold it to Heaston Bros., who put in mill works in 1867. They sold to Robison, Wysong & Miller, they to Colton & Bates, in the spring of 1873, and, in 1876, Bates Bros. & Co. became the proprietors and are so still. The names of the firm are J. J. Bates, E. Bates and G. E. Leggett.

In the summer of 1881, the enterprising owners renewed the entire works, at a cost of $11,000, putting in machinery for Jonathan Mills' system, a gradual reduction, being the third mill of the kind in the State of Indiana, one of the others being near Terre Haute, Ind. The former capacity of the mill was sixty barrels in twenty-four hours. The present capacity of the works is 150 barrels per day, requiring 225,000 bushels of wheat annually. The firm also run a cooper shop for the supply of barrels for their use, employing in all sixteen hands. The flour made by them is shipped extensively, besides their home and local trade; they send flour in quantity to New York, Montreal, and elsewhere. Bates Bros. & Co. are esteemed as a highly, reliable firm, and are securing the reward which they richly deserve by an extensive and constantly increasing patronage.

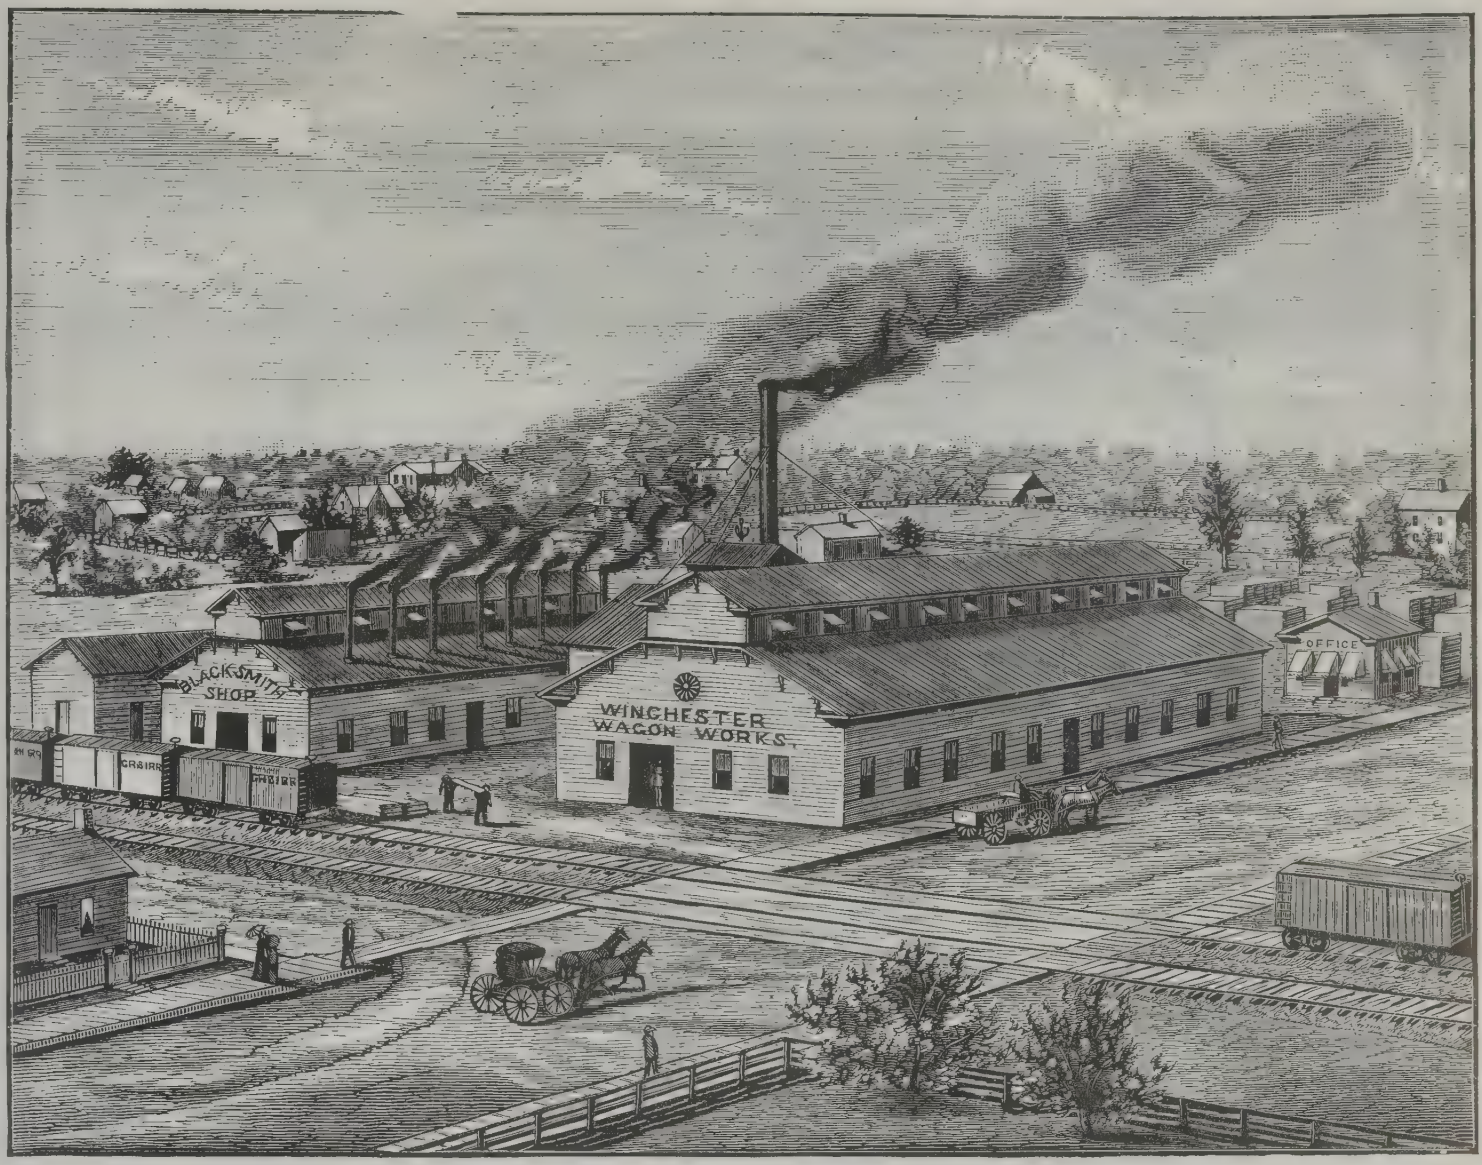
HANDLE FACTORY.

In November, 1881, this enterprise was inaugurated by Hon. J. E. Neff, E. S. Kelley and J. W. Macy, under the firm name of Neff, Kelley & Co., and during the brief period that has elapsed since its inception, it has developed into one of the leading industries of Winchester. The establishment is located immediately south of the "Bee Line" Railroad, and west of Main street, in the building formerly occupied by Mr. Neff's pump factory. Upon the inauguration of the new enterprise, new machinery was purchased, consisting of two turning lathes, bolting-saw, topper, equalizers and strippers. The timber is straight-grain, second-growth ash, and is sawed from the rough log into strips of the desired length. The strips are then placed in the lathes, and after a few revolutions, are turned out well-rounded handles for pitchforks, rakes, brooms, etc. From the lathes the handles are taken to the "topper," where by one revolution of the knife they are finished with a nicely rounded top, and are then ready for packing and shipping. By the improved machinery they employ, they are enabled to finish an average of 2,000 handles per day, and yet are scarcely able to supply the demand. Their trade is almost exclusively with Holland, although they supply some points in the United States. In addition to the manufacture of handles, this firm conduct an extensive trade in sawed walnut lumber. They possess facilities for sawing and utilizing the "culls" rejected by the saw-mills, cutting them into dimension pieces for sewing machines and scroll work. They have an engine and boiler of twenty-four horse-power, and all the machinery of the establishment is of the latest and best varieties.



WINCHESTER WAGON WORKS & MANUFACTURING CO.

WINCHESTER, RANDOLPH CO., IND.

On the 19th day of October, 1881, this company was organized in the city of Winchester, with the following-named stockholders as its constituent members: Asahel Stone, J. H. Gill, L. D. Carter, Adam Hirsch, Henry H. Neff, Asa Teal, George N. Edger, J. M. Hodson, Samuel D. Fox, Thomas M. Browne, Reverdy Puckett, W. E. Miller, Leander J. Monks, James S. Cottom, C. L. Lewis, Albert O. Marsh, M. B. Miller, L. G. Puckett, W. A. Thompson and A. C. Beeson.

The object for which this association was organized is the manufacture of wagons of all descriptions, wagon material and such other work as they may see fit to engage in. Preparations were made for engaging in the work upon a mammoth scale, and, in December, 1881, the company began the erection of their present buildings, on the southwest corner of West and South streets. The main building is 50x100 feet, having a very strong frame, surmounted by a self-supporting roof; and these features are observable throughout the entire establishment, strength and durability having evidently been aimed at by the builders. Adjoining the main building on the south is the engine and boiler room, which is a brick building 30x37 feet. To the southward of this building is situated the forge room, which is a frame building 40x60 feet. Here are eight forges, which are operated by a patent blower connected with the engine, the draft being so arranged that the forges can be operated either separately or in unison, at will. In this building is contained a double oven for heating tires, and near it a cooling apparatus for the immediate cooling of the tires when necessary. In addition to the buildings mentioned, they have a store-room 16x22 feet, and an office 16 feet square. In the boilers and engine the acme of perfection seems to have been attained. The boilers are 48 inches in diameter, and 20 feet long, each having a tensile strength of 75,000 to 80,000 pounds to the square inch They were submitted to four distinct tests by the United States Boiler Inspectors at Cincinnati, the average strength developed being 81,600 pounds. These boilers are so constructed that one can be heated while the other remains cool, or both can be used at the same time, thus admitting of the repair of any little casualty without necessitating the stoppage of the machinery. The boiler plates are made of the best of steel, five-sixteenths of an inch in thickness, while the engine is a model of elegance and perfect mechanism.

In the main building is done the wood-work, etc., and for this purpose it has been supplied by the proprietors with a full quota of the best machinery, consisting of one boring machine, rip-saw, felloe-rounder, Farrer planer, tire-drill, borer and wheel tennoning machine, sand belt, borer and doweling-machine, band-saw, double shaper, Universal saw-bench, sand-drum, sticker, wood-worker, tennoning and trimming machine, mortising lathe, skein-setter, hydraulic press, etc. This machinery enables them to turn out thirty wagons, complete, daily, and furnishes employment for 100 men. The capital of the association is ample, and its charter for fifty years. Among the manufacturing industries of Winchester this one is certainly destined to occupy a leading position. The enterprise is in the hands of gentlemen of energy and business ability, who will be satisfied with nothing short of complete success. The officers are Col. H. H. Neff, President; Gen. Asahel Stone, Secretary, Treasurer and General Manager; John H. Gill, L. D. Carter and Adam Hirsch, Directors; John H. Gill, Superintendent of Wood Department; L. D. Carter, Superintendent of Iron Department.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ELIHU ADDINGTON was born January 21, 1820, near Richmond, Wayne Co., Ind. He is the grandson of Mrs. Elvira Townsend, who lived many years in that county, and died at the age of one hundred and two years, at Elkton, Preble Co., Ohio. His father, Joseph Addington, was a native of North Carolina, and one of the earliest pioneers of Wayne County, Ind. The family removed to Randolph County, Ind., in the spring of 1835, and in the following winter the father died. Shortly afterward, the subject of this sketch, who was then a boy fifteen years of age, was "bound out" to his brother-in-law, a millwright, in Wayne County. About a year later, however, the latter sold out and retired from business, and Elihu was bound to his uncle, Isaac Commons, in whose service he remained until twenty-one years of age, working on his farm near Middleboro, Wayne Co., Ind. In the fall of 1842, he married Hannah Cox, whose father, Jeremiah Cox, was an early pioneer and prominent citizen of Wayne County. In the spring of 1843, he came with his wife to Randolph County, and purchased land about a mile south of Macksville, from which he developed a fine farm. It was covered with timber when he bought it, and to any one not endowed with the courage and determination that characterized our pioneers, the task of reclaiming this woodland and converting it into a home would have appeared a hopeless one. But it was his first possession—earned by hard work and carefully saved wages, and he addressed himself to the task before him with all the energy and enthusiasm of a vigorous manhood, stimulated by the thought that he was preparing a home for his family, and bearing his part in the development of the county. He cleared his farm, and spent the best years of his life in its cultivation and improvement. About the year 1868, he sold this farm, and purchased one near Winchester, where he resided about two years. At the end of that time he removed to Winchester, where he still resides. By a long residence in this county he is widely known, and universally respected. He is a member of the Society of Friends, and has always been honorable and upright in his dealings with the world. He has been twice married. His first wife died in 1858, leaving four children, named respectively Ruth Ellen, Martha Ann, Lindsey and Wilson, all of whom are now living except Ruth. In 1860, he was married to Eliza Branson, his present companion. By this union they are the parents of four children, three of whom are now living, viz.: Minnie E., Ellsworth and Bertie Lee.

HON. ANDREW AKER.

John Aker, the father of this gentleman, was a native of Virginia, and one of the pioneer settlers of Randolph County, Ind. He was born in 1769, and married in 1788, to Susan Triselar. By this union they were the parents of eleven children, two of whom died in infancy, and nine grew to maturity and married. Five of the sons—Andrew, William, Samuel, Michael and Thomas settled in Randolph County, Ind. In 1816, Mr. Aker removed with his family to Tennessee, locating in Washington County, in the southeast corner of that State. In 1819, he removed to Preble County, Ohio, and in 1837, came to Randolph County, Ind. Three years later his wife died, and his own life was not of much longer duration, as he died in 1845. In early life he was an apprentice at the millwright's trade, but finding this employment prejudicial to his health, he abandoned it, and learned the trades of the carpenter, cabinet-maker and wagon-maker. In his political affiliations, he was a Democrat, voting for Gen. Jackson in 1828, and again in 1832. At the time of his demise, he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but in earlier days he was a Presbyterian. He was a prominent citizen, and enjoyed the confidence and good will of the people among whom he resided. Andrew, his son, and the subject of this sketch, has long been known to the citizens of this county as one of the few survivors of the pioneer community. He was born November 15, 1802, in Wythe County, Va., and accompanied his father's family to Tennessee, remaining in that State for about two years after the removal of the latter to Ohio. In 1823, he joined his father in Preble County, Ohio, and in May, 1827, married Miss Hannah Bodey, in Champaign County, Ohio. In May, 1828, removed to Winchester, Ind. Upon his arrival here, he purchased the store of Thomas Hannah, then the only mercantile establishment in Winchester, and for about three years afterward, the only one in the county. Here, for a number of years, he conducted an extensive and lucrative trade, his patrons coming from Muncie, Marion, Jay County, and from points along the Salamonie River. He bought various articles of produce, sending them down the Mississinewa, in flatboats, for sale to the settlers along the banks of that river, and deriving a very satisfactory profit from these ventures. In addition to his mercantile business, he kept hotel at Winchester, and was a genial and popular host. He also dealt largely in real estate, buying and selling large tracts of land in Randolph and Jay Counties. In 1836, he had the misfortune to lose his eyesight, but notwithstanding this calamity he did not retire from active business. In 1844, he removed to his farm, north of Winchester, and engaged in the manufacture of wooden pumps, continuing in this line of employment quite successfully until 1874, when he placed the work in the hands of his sons-in-law, John Thomas and William Knecht. The business is now conducted by the latter. While actively engaged at this pursuit, he was absent from home much of the time, making pumps for farmers throughout the surrounding country, as far east as Fort Recovery, Ohio. He has led an active, industrious life, and for more than a half century has been identified with the material prosperity of Winchester and Randolph County. His life has been always honorable and upright, and he has ever possessed the esteem and confidence of the community. He has been called to fill various public offices in this county. He served about four years as Deputy Clerk and Recorder, transacting the duties of both positions during the same period. From 1830 to 1835, he served as Treasurer of Randolph County, and even after the loss of his sight he was appointed to manage and direct the affairs of that office. In 1831, he was the Representative from this county in the General Assembly of Indiana, and in 1834, was elected State Senator. He resigned the latter position on account of his loss of sight, and was succeeded by Hon. Andrew Kennedy, of Muncie. As a public officer, he displayed the same integrity and honor that always characterized his life as a private citizen, and his administration of the trusts reposed in him, won the approbation of his constituency in a marked degree. Although nearly eighty years of age, he is a well preserved man, retaining his physical and mental vigor to a remarkable extent. He has retired from active business, in view of the encroachments of old age, and now passes his life in the peaceful enjoyment of a competence earned by years of honest toil and industry. Eight children blessed his wedded life. Of this number, five are deceased, and the three youngest survive, viz., Eliza Ellen (wife of John Thomas, now residing at Winchester); Sarah Jane (wife of Col. M. B. Miller, of Winchester), and Margaret Ann (wife of William Knecht, also residing at Winchester). His wife was one of the pioneer women of this county, and was, in all respects, a superior lady. She was born March 17, 1806, in Rockingham County, Va., and when twelve years of age removed, with her brother, to Champaign County, Ohio, where she was married to Mr. Aker. She came to Randolph County, with her husband, in time to experience many of the hardships of pioneer life, and lived to witness the wonderful improvements wrought within a period of a half century. During the early years of their residence in this county, her husband was one of its most active and enterprising business men, and took part in every movement that had for its object the improvement and development of the county. And in all his undertakings, public as well as private, he consulted her, and received her advice. And when visited with that terrible affliction, the loss of his sight, upon her, to a great extent, fell the burden of arranging and settling his many business interests. She was a woman of sound judgment, wonderful energy, kind and generous, and will be gratefully remembered by many who were the recipients of her kindness. She died on the 26th of February, 1881, loved and mourned by all who knew her. She was an affectionate wife and a kind mother. She cherished home, and loved and enjoyed the companionship of her family. She was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died consoled with the hope of meeting the loved ones of earth beyond the grave, where the mortal shall assume immortality, and life becomes an endless splendor.

GEN. THOMAS M. BROWNE.

Gen. Browne Winchester, member of Congress from the Sixth District, was born at New Paris, Preble Co., Ohio, April 19, 1829. His father, John A. Browne, was a native of Bucks County, Penn.; his mother, Hannah (Mauzy) Browne, of Bourbon County, Ky. His mother died in 1843, which calamity broke up the family circle. His father apprenticed young Thomas M. to Mr. Ralph M. Pomeroy, a merchant of Spartansburg, Randolph County, Ind., soon after which he removed to Grant County, Ky., where he died in 1865. Influenced by the excellent character of his employer, Thomas M. rapidly gained a knowledge of business, and formed correct habits. His opportunities for gaining a liberal education were very meager, being confined to a few weeks each year in the common schools of Spartansburg, and one term in the county seminary, at Winchester; but so diligent and exhaustive have been his private studies and readings, that we rarely meet one with such a valuable store of practical, scientific or literary information. In 1848, he began the study of law with Hon. William A. Peelle, of Winchester, and in 1849, passed an examination in open court, and was admitted to practice in the inferior courts of the State; two years later he was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of Indiana. On March 18, 1849, he married Miss Mary J. Austin, of New Paris, Ohio, who has been his faithful companion in adversity and prosperity, and who watches with the just pride of a wife the honorable advancement of her husband. No living children bless their union. In 1850, when but twenty years of age, he was elected Prosecuting Attorney for Randolph County, and after the adoption of the present constitution, he was three times elected Prosecuting Attorney for the 13th Judical District, discharging the duties of that office with marked ability and success, until 1861. In August of that year, he made one of the most powerful speeches of his life on the "Crisis of the Country," in which many of his enthusiastic declarations seem now to have been prophetic. He was elected Chief Clerk of the State Senate at its session in 1861, and in the spring of 1862 he entered the United States service as Aide-de Camp on the staff of Gen. Thomas J. Wood, and served with that officer until after the battle of Shiloh. During the siege of Corinth, he was stricken with disease, and returned home, and only recovered after several months of great suffering. In October, 1862, he was elected Senator for Randolph County, and took a leading part in the debates of the stormy session of 1863, ranking as an able Republican leader. The correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette thus describes him at this time:

"Thomas M. Browne, Senator from Randolph, is a young man, well dressed, of sanguine complexion, an excellent speaker, and full of fun and irony. There is a vim about him that tells in a popular audience and brings down the house. Now a burst of eloquence surprises you, and now a streak of fun. At times a burst of indignation comes out that is startling. This young man will make his mark in our country yet."

At the close of the session, he resigned the senatorship and assisted in recruiting the Seventh Indiana Cavalry (119th Regt. Vols.), and was commissioned Captain of Company B, but before leaving the State for active service was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel of the regiment. He shared in the fatigues and privations of all its most dangerous expeditions and battles, which extended through Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. In the battle of Okolona, February 22, 1864, he did more than any other officer to maintain order and organization, amid the wild confusion of that bloody engagement. At the battle of Brices' Cross-roads (Guntown), June 10, 1864, his skillful management of his regiment won the commendation of his superior officers, and hearty admiration of all his comrades. He was the hero of that ill-fated field. When the battle was raging fiercest, and the lines were but a few feet apart, his horse, a present from Company B, was shot under him, himself severely wounded, and his Orderly killed at his side. He did not for a moment lose presence of mind, but issued his orders in stentorian tones, heard above the din of conflict. He was soon after promoted to the Colonelcy of his regiment, and received the rank of Brigadier General by brevet "for gallant and meritorious conduct" from the hand of President Lincoln. In October, 1864, on account of his well-known legal attainments, he was chosen President of a military commission, to convene at Memphis, for the trial of such causes as might arise in that department. The most important case that came before this tribunal was the trial of the famous guerrilla, Dick Davis. This trial lasted thirty-five days, and ended in the conviction and execution of the culprit. In January, 1865, Gen. Browne again took the field, and remained in active service until the final close of the war, and the mustering out of his regiment. During the winter of 1865–66, he was in command of the troops at Sherman, in the department of Northern Texas, where his wise yet firm administration won golden opinions from men of all parties, and he left behind him upon his return home many warm friends in that part of the "Lone Star State."

After he was mustered out of service, he resumed the practice of his profession at Winchester, Ind., but was shortly after appointed by the President United States District Attorney for the District of Indiana, the duties of which office he discharged with distinguished ability and success until his resignation in 1872. In 1872, the Republican party nominated Gen. Browne for Governor of Indiana. His popularity with his party being demonstrated by his distancing such distinguished competitors as Godlove S. Orth and Gen. Ben Harrison. It was indeed a proud triumph for the lonely orphan who had been left among strangers without money or friends at the age of thirteen, when that great convention called him to the front and placed in his hands the battle-scarred banner of Union and liberty. An extract from his speech upon that occasion exhibits his readiness of language in impromptu speaking:

"Gentlemen of the Convention.—To say that I am sincerely thankful for the honor you have this day conferred upon me, that I am proud of this generous expression of your confidence, is to express but feebly the emotions with which this occasion overwhelms me. To be nominated to a position of so much importance and dignity is indeed most flattering to the ambition of a young man. But I accept the work you have assigned me, conscious of its responsibilities, and with a determination of devoting to it whatever of energy and ability I possess. * * * * It shall be my aim, indeed, my highest ambition, to merit the great compliment you have paid me. * * * * If we make but a united fight, we can march right over the intrenchments of the enemy to a glorious victory; for the Republican party can point with pride to the work of its hands, it has written history for eternity, it has done what the statesmen and philosphers of the past omitted to do. It has put God into the Constitution by recognizing the rights of his creature man. 'For inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me' is the language of the Divine Law Giver. I should be glad to speak to you further, but I am admonished that there is other work for the convention to do."

He made a most gallant campaign, but was defeated by Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, who carried the State by a very small majority. After the campaign of 1872, he formed a copartnership with Hon. Jonathan W. Gordon and Judge Robert N. Lamb, of Indianapolis, under the style of Gordon, Browne & Lamb. They commanded an immense business continuing until 1876, when Gen. Browne was elected to Congress by a majority of over fifteen hundred, in the then Fifth Indiana District, defeating that veteran Democrat Hon. William S. Holman, who had served six terms, and carried his district at the preceding election by more than twenty-five hundred majority. Gen. Browne was re-elected in 1878, maintaining his majority over the same gentleman, and was again re-elected in 1880, carrying the present Sixth District by about ten thousand majority. Upon entering Congress, he at once took rank as an able and discrete member. His popularity has steadily increased until, in 1872, he was tendered and accepted a unanimous renomination. His speeches have been distinguished for ability rather than number, and have been universally exhaustive on the subjects treated. One of his speeches on the financial question was chosen by the National Republican Committeé to be printed and circulated as a campaign document, in 1880. Gen. Browne was a member of the special committee to which was referred the important matter of devising a plan for counting and declaring the result of the electoral vote for President and Vice President, which would avoid the uncertainties and perils of the present methods. After months spent in consideration, the committee, proposed an excellent plan, the principal features of which are:

I. The people vote by ballot directly for President and Vice President.

II. Each State shall be entitled to as many electoral votes as the number of members it may have in both Houses of Congress.

III. The number of electoral votes for each candidate from each State shall be determined by taking such a fractional part of the whole number of electoral votes belonging to that State as the vote of each particular candidate bears to the whole number of the popular vote cast in the State at that election, the fraction to be carried to three places of decimals and no more.

IV. Contests in the State may be decided by the highest judicial tribunal in the State.

V. A plurality of electoral votes shall be sufficient to elect.

VI. If no one has a plurality, the Lower House shall elect.

This plan has the merit of being the only one ever proposed that would give each voter an equal power in deciding the election, and reduces to the minimum the dangers arising from a contested election. Gen. Browne supported this measure with what he considers the most carefully prepared speech of his life. The following extract will show the force and solidity of his style of argument:

"The prize of the presidency is a great one. The patronage to be dispensed is immense and increasing rapidly. To-day it holds one hundred thousand places and millions of money in its gift. This position for power and patronage will be struggled for in all coming time by political parties, with all the energy that anticipated spoils can stimulate. Nothing that money or strategy can do will be left undone to carry the election. Under our present system, the struggle does not end with that election itself, for after the votes have been cast, it often happens that the legal expression of the popular will may be defeated by some objection to the method, manner or time of the election. This should never be. The constitution should provide in language plain and concise for a free ballot, a fair election and an honest declaration of the result. Unless this be done, Republican government is impossible."

General Browne has served on several other important special committees, and with ability and marked consideration on some of the regular committees. He is at present Chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, really the most important and laborious chairmanship of the House. The published speeches of Gen. Browne number more than a score. The date and title of some of the more important are as follows:

Congressional Speeches.—Repeal of the Resumption Act, November, 22 1877; Death of Senator O. P. Morton, January 18, 1878; Perils of the Electoral System, 1878; Army Appropriations, May 27, 1878; Democratic Methods, April 21, 1879; Financial Situation, May 13, 1879; Purity of Elections, April 12, 1880; Power of Congress over the Electoral Count, May 10, 1880; Death of Senator Burnside, January 23, 1882; On Pensions, February 18, 1882; Against the anti-Chinese Bill, March 23, 1882; Against the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill, June 15, 1882; On the Electoral Count Bill, June 20, 1882.

Miscellaneous Speeches.—Washington's Birthday, February 22, 1861; War Speech, Parker, Ind., August 27, 1861; Fourth of July, Winchester, Ind., July 4, 1866; Colored People, New Albany, Ind., April 14, 1871; Soldiers' Re-union, Noblesville, Ind., October, 1871; Emotional Insanity, Indianapolis, January 13, 1872; Republican Party, Winchester, April 27, 1872; Capital and Labor, Winchester, October 9, 1873; Civil Rights, Union City, Ind., September 6, 1874; Anniversary of Shiloh, Ft. Wayne, Ind., April 7, 1875; Scientific Agriculture, Muncie, Ind., September 19, 1879; Review Forty-fifth Congress, Winchester, Ind., July 27, 1879; Dedication Fountain Park Cemetery, Winchester, July 3, 1880; Logic of Revolution, Ft. Wayne, Ind., July 5, 1880. Besides these published speeches, his oratorical efforts have been legion. For more than twenty years his voice has been constantly sounding, opposing all the great evils of the day, and in favor of all reforms agitated by the people. When Gen. Browne removed from Spartansburg shortly after his marriage, the good wishes of the entire community followed him, and through all subsequent years his heart has retained its early attachments, and the citizens of Spartansburg look upon "our Tom" and his achievements with unalloyed pleasure. The citizens of Winchester are also justly proud of their distinguished fellow-townsman, and the mention of no other name will secure so large an attendance at a public meeting as that of "Tom Browne," as he is familiarly called, when he is announced to speak. Many anecdotes are related by his old friends and neighbors, illustrating his bashfulness, keen wit, and other characteristics which early manifested themselves. He earnestly begged to be released from completing his first campaign, because some of his opposers should have circulated the report that he had said "that he would never shake hands with a laboring man, because he could smell him through a brick wall." He thought he could never make headway against such "campaign lies" as that, but his friends said "never mind, we'll see you through," and gave him a handsome majority. After his election as Prosecutor for the Thirteenth Judicial District in 1855, he went to Henry County in the discharge of his official duty. He was slightly acquainted with the members of the bar, but no others. He went to the door of the Grand Jury room, the bailiff stopped him with, "There is one witness in the room already." He waited quietly until the witness came out, and was then admitted. The foreman said, "Does thee swear or affirm?" "Neither." "But thee must." "I don't choose to." "Why, we are not sticklers, but thee must do one or the other." "No; neither." "Why, don't thee know thee might be fined and imprisoned for contempt of court?" "I do know it very well." The puzzled foreman now thoroughly aroused, demanded, "Who is thee?" Who sent thee here?" "The voters of the Thirteenth Judicial District sent me here." "Why is thee the Prosecuting Attorney?" "I am, sir." The picture of blank amazement was on the foreman's face, and throwing up his hands in bewildered astonishment, Quaker as he was, he exclaimed, "Please God, who would have taken thee for a lawyer?" After which there was a laugh all around. Throughout his entire career, Gen. Browne has always been active and industrious. No matter whether a candidate himself or not, he has always taken a leading part in every political campaign, making some of his best efforts when he had no personal interests beyond that of a thorough believer in Republican principles. At the close of the war, Gen. Browne was comparatively poor, but by great industry and economy he has since saved a competency. In person, he is tall and commanding, of easy yet dignified manner, in command of language, ready, exact and strong, and all his intellectual efforts show systematic and varied knowledge. He is a Master Mason, and has taken all the degrees of Odd Fellowship; while not a member of any religious society, his preference is for the Christian Church, of which Mrs. Browne is an active member. His career from the humblest beginnings to the proud positions he has so creditably filled is another illustration of the possibilities, which depend solely on the man under our free institutions, and while his achievements are highly gratifying to his many friends, he is yet a young man, and they confidently look to his future as one full of the highest promise.

JOHN W. BOTKIN was born September 1, 1819, in Randolph County, Ind. His father, Hugh Botkin, was one of the earliest pioneers in the settlement on Martindale Creek, in this county, and died about the year 1836. His son, the subject of this sketch, was then about sixteen years of age. He had attended the rude schools of pioneer days, gaining some preliminary knowledge, and afterward attended a school of a much better character, taught by Miss Maulsbie, near Economy, Wayne Co., Ind. At the age of nineteen years, he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Jesse Delany, at New Burlington, Delaware Co., Ind., remaining there until Christmas, 1840. For three years afterward he was engaged in farming, in connection with the practice of his profession near Huntsville. In 1844, he located at Buena Vista, where he was engaged in the practice until 1860. From 1862 to 1878, he was located near Unionsport, but in the year last named came to Winchester, where he has ever since resided. He represents the Eclectic School of Medicine, having attended the Eclectic Medical College at Cincinnati. As a practitioner he has been very successful, and his practice has grown steadily, until it now extends into all the adjoining counties. Dr. Botkin is emphatically a self-made man, having fought the battle of life without pecuniary assistance from anyone, and the financial success that has crowned his labors speaks eloquently of his perseverance and industry. He has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church since 1842, and his life has been moral and upright. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, of which he is an active member. He was married in 1841, to Miss Mary Peacock, daughter of Judge William Peacock, then a resident of West River Township. During a period of forty-one years the bride of his youth has been the devoted and loving helpmate, and still lives to share and enjoy the triumphs of his later years. Their wedded life has been blessed by six children, five of whom still survive, and have taken their places among the honored and respected citizens of the communities in which they are severally located.

JESSE J. BATES was born in Stark County, Ohio, September 3, 1837. He was reared on a farm, and during boyhood was engaged in the routine work of farm life. At the age of eighteen years he began teaching school, and was thus engaged for nine terms. In 1871, he removed to Bellefontaine, Ohio, where he remained two years, removing to Winchester, Ind., in 1873. In early life he learned the carpenter's trade, and has at various times been engaged at that pursuit, in addition to milling operations. Since locating at Winchester he has been a miller and grain merchant, and is now a member of the firm of Bates, Bros. & Co., who operate an extensive flouring mill in this town. He is an enterprising, energetic business man, and enjoys the confidence and esteem of all who know him. In politics he is an enthusiastic Republican, and while an active worker for the good of the party, he has never sought public office. In February, 1882, however, he was solicited to accept a position in the School Board of Winchester, and was elected as such for a term of two years. He is liberal and public spirited, and a well known friend and advocate of public improvement. He was married in 1863, to Miss Mary A. Colton, an estimable young lady of fine accomplishments. They are the the parents of four children, three of whom are now living, viz.: Nina B., Frank, and Helen. Harry, a young man of excellent character and high promise, died in May, 1881.

EDWARD BATES was born May 14, 1835, at Marlboro, Stark County, Ohio. He was reared on a farm in that country, and acquired a good English education at the public schools of his native town. On March 2, 1862, he was united in marriage with Miss N. E. Leggett, in the city of Alliance, Stark Co., Ohio, and for ten years subsequently was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In April, 1873, he came to Winchester, Ind., and engaged in the milling enterprise as a member of the firm of Bates Bros. & Co., having continued this pursuit ever since. He is a thorough business man, active and energetic, and prompt and reliable in all his transactions. He is quiet and unassuming in manner, yet possesses a strong individuality, and great force of character.

BENJAMIN F. BOLTZ.

Benjamin F. Boltz was born September 10, 1848, in Lebanon County, Penn. His father, Benjamin Boltz, was a native of the same county, and was married there to Miss Maria Schreckengost. In November, 1859, he removed with his family to Indiana, locating near Winchester, where he still resides. His son, the subject of this sketch, accompanied his parents to Randolph County, of which he has ever since been a citizen. He had attended the public schools of his native State, acquiring thus a good primary education, and after removing to this county spent several terms in the college at Ridgeville. In 1869, he adopted the vocation of school-teaching, using the money thus earned in the winter to defray his expenses at college during the spring and summer. After leaving school, he entered the establishment of Arthur McKew at Ridgeville as a clerk, and was thus engaged for about a year. In 1873, he came to Winchester and accepted a clerkship in the store of John Richardson, occupying this position until the latter sold his establishment, and then served as a clerk for the succeeding firm. In 1875, he entered into partnership with his former employer, Mr. Richardson, retiring from the firm in 1876. In June of that year he became Deputy Auditor under W. D. Kizer, and has served in that capacity ever since. In June, 1880, he was nominated by the Republicans of this county as their candidate for Auditor, prior to the decision of the Supreme Court, touching the validity of the constitutional amendments previously adopted by the voters of the State. By this decision the Auditor's term of office would not expire until after the general election in 1882, and Mr. Boltz was continued as the candidate of his party for the election to take place in November, 1882. His nomination was a just tribute to his efficiency, and expressed the public approbation of his fidelity as Deputy. He is methodical and systematic in his management of the work incident to his position, and by his uniform courtesy and genial manners has won the good will and esteem of all with whom he has been associated. He is a life-long Republican, having voted for Gen. Grant in 1872, and never wavered in his allegiance to the party of his choice. He has taken an active part in political matters, and has rendered valuable services in behalf of the Republican party. His life has been moral and upright, and in all his dealings he has manifested the spirit of true honor, winning friends wherever he has been situated. In his church relations he is identified with the Free-Will Baptists, having united with that denomination while a resident of Ridgeville. He is an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, and is now serving as Chancellor Commander in the latter order. In the Odd Fellows fraternity he has passed the degrees of the subordinate lodge, and is now a member of the Grand Lodge of Indiana. On the 19th of November, 1871, he was united in marriage with Miss Martha J., daughter of George and Elizabeth Spera, of Randolph County. Their wedded life has been blessed by three children, named, respectively, Myrtie E., Lura E. and Ralph Emerson.

HENRY WILLARD BOWERS was born October 13, 1851, at Cincinnati, Ohio. His father, Henry Bowers, was foreman in the pattern shop of Miles Greenwood's machine works in that city, and the son, when a boy, worked in the molding-room of that establishment for a year and a half, and afterward in the machine shop for six months. His father died in 1861, and in 1865, his mother, with her family, removed to Winchester, Ind., which place has ever since been their home. Henry, the subject of this sketch, attended the city schools of Cincinnati, until the removal of the family to Winchester, and afterward attended school in this town, under the instructions of Prof. Ferris, for two years, and later, under Prof. John Cooper, of the Winchester High School, for three years. In 1874, he entered the Sophomore class at Asbury University, Greencastle, Ind., and graduated in 1877, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He had previously taught one term in a country school, and shortly after graduating, was appointed as teacher of the High School at Winchester, which position he still occupies. As a teacher, he is eminently successful, and possesses the regard and confidence of both scholars and parents. He is a young man of fine ability and superior attainments, and bids fair to achieve eminence in his profession.

F. B. CHAPMAN, Winchester, was born in 1845, at Centerville, Wayne Co., Ind., being the son of John Chapman, a respected shoemaker of that town. He learned the harness-maker's business at Milton, Ind., in 1857, and has followed that trade ever since, except during the time that he was in the service of the United States. He joined the Fifty-fourth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, a three months' regiment, in May, 1862, and served four months. Afterward he enlisted in the Eleventh Indiana Cavalry, and served till the close of the war. He moved to Winchester in 1865, and that place has been his home ever since. He married Mary A. Ennis in 1866, and they have had three children, all living. His politics are Republican. His wife is a Methodist. He belongs to the I. O. O. F. Mr. Chapman is a steady, faithful and industrious workman, and carries on a thriving business. After learning his trade, he first worked at Cambridge, and made his first enlistment there into the Fifty-fourth. After being discharged, he worked at Indianapolis, and then at Kokomo, and at that place he joined the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth (Eleventh Cavalry, Indiana troops), Company E. He enlisted December 29, 1863, and was discharged September 19, 1865, as saddler.

HON. JOHN J. CHENEY.

John J. Cheney was born December 5, 1827, in Franklin County, Mass. When ten years of age, he emigrated with his parents to Greene County, Ohio, and was reared on a farm near Xenia. He attended the common schools at Xenia, and when a young man, entered the office of Hon. Moses Barlow, of that city, as a law student, remaining with him two years. In 1852, he came to Indiana, locating at Winchester, where he has ever since continued to reside. He was admitted to the bar of Randolph County, and entered at once upon the practice of his profession. For one year he was associated with Gen. Silas Colgrove, and for ten years with Hon. Thomas M. Browne. Later, he formed partnership relations with Hon. E. L. Watson, which continued until 1872, at which time he became Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. In the early days of his practice, he met the experiences common to all young attorneys, but rapidly grew in popular favor, and, in a short time, was recognized as a young man of talent and merit. In 1854, he was elected Prosecuting Attorney for this district, and served faithfully in this capacity for two years. In 1863 or 1864, while absent from home, he was nominated and elected Justice of the Peace. His sense of duty led him to accept the well-meant compliment of his friends, but he resigned after serving a few months. In 1865, he was appointed District Assessor for this Congressional District, discharging the duties of this position for a term of two years. In the fall of 1871, he was appointed Judge of the Common Pleas Court, to fill a vacancy, and in the fall of 1872, was elected to this office without opposition. In 1873, the Legislature abolished this court, and he was thereupon appointed Circuit Judge by Gov. Hendricks, serving in this capacity until the next regular election, at which he refused to be a candidate. In the years that have elapsed since his removal to Winchester, Judge Cheney has advanced steadily to a high position in the public esteem, while, as an attorney, he ranks among the best. He is devoted to his profession, and true to the interest of his clients. As a Judge, he was just and efficient, and prompt in the transaction of the business brought before him. As a citizen and friend he is widely known, and highly regarded by all for his upright character and integrity. On the 15th of November, 1854, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary A., daughter of James Steele, Esq., who was, at that time, a citizen of Winchester. His wife is an excellent lady, and shares with her husband the regard and affection of a large circle of friends. To bless their wedded life there were four children, of whom one son and one daughter alone survive.

JOHN H. COTTOM.

John H. Cottom was born June 4, 1788, at Snow Hill, Md. His father moved to Kentucky when he was a lad of eight or ten years. John H. Cottom married in Kentucky, and moved to New Paris, Ohio, in 1812. They had four children, viz.: David J., Thomas F., John W., and James Samuel, two of whom —John W. and James S.—are now living. John W. resides, at present, near Lawrence, Kan., and James S. at Winchester, Ind. John H. Cottom came to Winchester in 1843. He moved to Illinois with his son David in 1856. He returned to Ohio, and died near Cincinnati, at the home of his son, John Wesley, in 1875, aged eighty-seven years. He married Rebecca Jameson, of Bourbon County, Ky., who was born October 22, 1787, and died in 1864, at the residence of her son, James S., aged seventy-seven years. Mr. Cottom was

J. T. Chenoweth M. D.

DR. JOHN T. CHENOWETH.

John T. Chenoweth was born near Greenville, Darke Co., Ohio, on the 16th of November, 1833. His father, Thomas F. Chenoweth, was a native of Ross County, Ohio, and removed with his parents to Darke County, Ohio, when about six years of age. He grew to manhood there, and was married to Miss Christina Thomas, in Preble County, Ohio. He still resides on the farm, where he began married life, having attained the age of seventy-three years. He has always been a prominent and highly respected citizen of his county, and has been called upon to occupy local offices at various times. He served continuously for thirty years as Justice of the Peace, retiring finally on account of his age.

His son, John, was reared on the home farm, and at an early age learned to perform his share of the labor incident to farm life. During the winter he attended school, and at the age of eighteen years, he adopted the vocation of school-teaching, which he continued for about seven years. When twenty years of age, he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Z. M. Lansdown, at Greenville, remaining under his instructions for two years. Subsequently he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and continued his studies with Dr. C. H. Cleveland. He first graduated in medicine from the Eclectic Medical Institute of Cincinnati, Ohio, and afterward from the Medical College, of Ohio, in the same city. He began the practice of his profession in March, 1860, at Huntsville, Randolph Co., Ind., remaining there for a period of three and a half years. At the end of that time he removed to Williamsburg, Wayne Co., Ind., where he enjoyed a successful practice, extending over a period of twelve years. In 1875 he located at Winchester, and has been one of the successful practitioners of this town ever since. He is a member of the State Medical Society, and was one of the organizers of the Delaware District Medical Society, and the Randolph County Medical Society, and is now an active member of both.

He has been actively identified with many of the public improvements of this county, and has contributed liberally to enterprises inaugurated for the advancement of the county's interests. In politics, he has affiliated with the Republican party since the early days of its existence. He voted for John C. Fremont for President in 1856, and has since been an active worker for the success of his party. But his devotion to his profession has prevented his acceptance of numerous public positions that have been tendered him from time to time.

He was made a Mason in Acacia Lodge, No. 242, at Washington, Wayne Co., Ind., in December, 1867, and on the 5th of February, 1868, received the Master Mason's degree in the same lodge. In January 1873, he withdrew from that lodge to take part in the organization of the lodge at Williamsburg, and in 1875 transferred his membership to Winchester Lodge, No. 56, of which he is still an active member. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and has received the degrees of the subordinate lodge.

On the 4th of January, 1857, Dr. Chenoweth was united in marriage with Miss Hannah V., daughter of Josiah Miller, Esq., a prominent and highly respected citizen of Darke County, Ohio. By this union they are the parents of three children, named, respectively, Forrest A., Ethel May and Martha, all of whom are now living.

In the period of his residence in this county, Dr. Chenoweth has established an enviable reputation as a physician, and has gained the confidence of the public and the medical fraternity alike. In social and private life he is esteemed for his uniform courtesy and kindness, and his honorable and upright character. He has risen steadily in his profession and enjoys an extensive and lucrative practice.

John E. Markle. M. D.

DR. J. E. MARKLE.

John Edgar Markle, son of Jacob Markle, was born December 2, 1838, at Ithaca, N. Y. His father was a merchant at that place, but removed to Candor, Tioga Co., N. Y., in 1841, where he continued to reside until 1853. In that year, he removed to Madison County, Ind., locating at a little village which was afterward named Markleville, a name which it still bears. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits at this point until his death, which occurred in 1864. John E., his son, and the subject of this sketch, enjoyed excellent educational advantages in his early life, and improved his opportunities, making rapid progress in his studies. He attended the academy at Candor, N. Y., and after the removal of the family to Indiana, attended the university at Meadville, Penn. In 1859, he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Cook, at Markleville, Ind., and in 1860 attended a course of lectures at the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati. In the spring of 1861, he began the practice of his profession at Fishersburg, Madison Co., Ind. But before he had gained a fair start, the storm of war burst over the land, and he sacrificed all his personal ambitions to do his part in the preservation of national unity, and the defense of the flag. On the 4th of November, 1861, he enlisted as a private soldier in Company E, Thirty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry. While in camp at Anderson, he was detailed for duty in the hospital department, his services being retained in this capacity long after his regiment had been sent to the field. He returned to his company for duty in November, 1862, at Helena, Ark., and on the 4th of January, 1863, was promoted to the office of Second Lieutenant. In this capacity, he was detailed as commander of a squad to assist in carrying out one of Gen. Grant's plans in the Mississippi campaign. It was his object to cut a canal from the Mississippi to Lake Providence, a portion of the old bed of this river, which would connect him, by way of two bayous, with the Tensas, Washita and Red Rivers, and open a channel for light transports, by which he could again reach the Mississippi below, and join Gen. Banks. But after the canal was cut, and the water passed into the lake, the bayous, it was found, were so obstructed by fallen timber and overhanging trees, as to render passage by the boats impossible. While busy in the construction of these ditches, he sent Lieut. Col. Wilson to organize an expedition to open the Yazoo Pass, in order to destroy the enemy's boats on the Yazoo River, above Haines' Bluff. The entrance to this pass, on account of frequent overflows, had been closed by a dam or "levee." This levee was removed by having a mine exploded under it, and the water resumed its old course, making a channel deep enough to admit the passage of the largest steamers, and giving our troops an advantage of great importance. In the labors incident to these operations, Lieut. Markle took an active part, and for valuable services rendered on this occasion, he was honored with a First Lieutenant's commission, on the 4th of April, 1863. At the battle of Magnolia Hills, Miss., he had command of his company, and for bravery displayed in the capture of a rebel battery, he was promoted to the office of Captain. In this battery, every rebel at the guns was killed, and the last survivor had his gun loaded, with his hand on the string, ready to spring the hammer, when he was shot. Mounting the breast-works with his company, Lieut. Markle ordered the guns turned upon the enemy, who fled from them in confusion. As commander of Company K, he participated in thirty-two battles and skirmishes, winning an enviable record for bravery and daring courage. He was at the battle of Palo Alto, Tex., one of the last battles of the war. At this battle, a small force of Union men were surrounded and captured by a superior force of rebels, and the color-bearer, to prevent the flag from falling into their hands, swam the Rio Grande River with it, landing on the Mexican side, among some soldiers of that government. By some means, the flag finally found its way to Bagdad, a town filled with a population of thieves and cut-throats. Hearing of its whereabouts, Capt. Markle started to that point to recover his regiment's colors. He secured the flag, and started back with it, attended by a small escort of Mexican soldiers, and subjected to insulting remarks from all sides. Several shots were fired at him, but both he and the flag escaped untouched, though he carried it unfurled, and floating at the head of the mob that followed him. He reached the Union lines in safety, though, after his Mexican escort had left him, he rode entirely alone through the enemy's country. The active measures of war had then closed, and on the 15th of October, 1865, he was commissioned Assistant Surgeon of his regiment, serving in that capacity until February 19, 1866, when he was mustered out of the service. At the close of the war, he was the only one among forty applicants who passed a successful examination for admission into the regular army. Returning from the army, he located at Portland, Jay Co., Ind., in March, 1866, and resumed the practice of his profession. In the winter of 1867–68, he attended a second course of lectures at the Ohio Medical College, graduating in the spring of 1868. He continued to practice at Portland until 1873, and in the meantime was instrumental in organizing the Jay County Medical Society. In 1873, he removed to Hagerstown, Ind., and in October, 1874, came to Winchester, where he has ever since been successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. Upon the organization of the Jay County Medical Society, he was elected Secretary, and in 1868 was chosen President. In 1876, he suggested the organization of the Randolph County Medical Society, and was the leading spirit in the action subsequently taken in this matter. He was elected President of the society, and served one year. In the winter of 1878–79, he attended the Bellevue Hospital Medical College at New York City, graduating in the spring of 1879. Later in the same year, in connection with Dr. G. W. H. Kemper, of Muncie, he organized the Delaware District Medical Society, and was elected Vice President. In 1880, he was elected President of this society, and served one year. He is also a member of the Indiana State Medical Society, and the American Medical Society, and has contributed several valuable papers to the medical literature of this country. At the organization of the Randolph County Board of Health, he was elected Secretary, by virtue of which office he is Health Officer of the county. He was appointed United States Pension Examiner July 1, 1882. He is enthusiastically devoted to his profession, and is recognized as one of the leading physicians of this region. He enjoys an extensive and lucrative practice, and has gained the confidence and good will of all who know him. He is identified with both the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities. He was made a Mason at Perkinsville, Ind., in November, 1861, just prior to his enlistment, and together with four others was elevated to the Master's degree on the same evening. These five all served in Company E, and three of the number were killed in battle. In 1867, he took the Chapter degrees at Portland, Ind., and received the degree of Knight Templar at Cambridge City, Ind., in 1873. In March, 1882, he received the Scottish Rite degrees at Indianapolis. He became an Odd Fellow at Portland, Ind., in 1868, and in 1869 was Noble Grand of his lodge, occupying this office for three years. He was made a Past Grand in this order, and was the representative from his lodge during the session of the Grand Lodge of Indiana in 1870. He feels a deep interest in the welfare of these fraternities, and is an active and honored member. On the 19th of September, 1866, he was united in marriage with Miss Emily V., daughter of Jephtha Johnson, Esq., of Wayne County, Ind. By this union they are the parents of two children, only one of whom, Grant C. B., now survives. Minnie, their only daughter, died in infancy.

first a farmer and shoe-maker. He afterward became a merchant at New Paris; but, like many others before and since that time, he failed in business, and engaged in keeping hotel at New Paris, Ohio. Himself and wife were earnest and active Methodists for more than fifty years. He was kind and generous to a fault. His house was the home of Methodist ministers through all his life, and they found always a warm and generous reception. In his later years he became discouraged, and somewhat disabled, and mostly laid aside from active business. He found a welcome home, however, with his worthy sons, who cheerfully and gently smoothed the rugged pathway of life for his tottering steps, until his aged frame lay down to rest upon the bosom of Mother Earth, and his freed spirit went home to possess the reward of grace on high. He has a brother, Levin Cottom, still living near Dayton, Ohio, at the great age of ninety-one years. Mr. Cottom was an early and enthusiastic Whig. When the Republican party arose, his Kentucky training would not permit him to join the war against slavery-extension, and he inclined with many others among the "old-line" Whigs toward the Democratic party of that day, and voted for Buchanan. David and John W., sons of John H. Cottom, came to Winchester in 1843, and entered into partnership as merchants. From 1843 to 1856 they did an immense amount of business—more than ever had been done before that time, and some think their business was greater than that of any mercantile firm even since that time. They were active Whigs, and enthusiastic in the support of that party as long as it existed, and when that organization fell to pieces, they joined the Republican party. They were enterprising men, enthusiastic in business, and wide-awake in whatever they undertook, and were respected and useful members of society.

JAMES S. COTTOM.

James S., son of John H. and Rebecca Cottom, was born January 11, 1825, at New Paris, Ohio. He is the youngest member of his father's family, and, with the exception of his brother, John W., the only survivor. He acquired a good English education in the common schools of his native county, and in 1843 came to Winchester, Ind., with his brothers. For a brief period he was engaged as a clerk in the dry goods house of his elder brothers at Winchester, beginning here his training for a mercantile life. Leaving the store, he returned to his native town, and for awhile attended school there. In 1845, he wedded Miss Edith Jane Mitchell, daughter of William Mitchell, Esq., of New Paris, Ohio. In the year 1846, he embarked in the dry goods trade at Williamsburg, Ind., and was thus engaged until 1849, at which time he removed to Winchester. In 1851, he relinquished mercantile pursuits and embarked in the sale of lightning rods. For a few months he met with flattering success, but in the pursuit of this occupation a misfortune befell him which changed the tenor of his life, and reduced him from a strong, vigorous man to an invalid. While "rodding" the house of Col. Young, at Anderson, Ind., he fell from a ladder to the ground below—a distance of twenty-seven feet. The fall produced a complete paralysis of the lower limbs, and from that hour he has never walked. Three weeks after the occurrence, he was placed upon a litter and carried to his home by men on foot. His wagon, with eight men, was sent from Winchester to meet him, and in relays of four at a time, these friends conveyed him to his family, assisted by many others who volunteered their services along the route. He lay with but little hope of life, and no expectation of ever regaining his power of locomotion. Indeed, his physicians, with one exception, pronounced his injuries fatal, and for six months his life trembled in the balance. But after the lapse of a year he became satisfied that death was not immediately imminent, and was filled with a desire to again take his place in the world as an active business man. First he engaged in the sale of medicines and musical instruments, then in the sale of agricultural implements and stoves, and subsequently in the sale of sewing machines, at which he is still successfully engaged, in connection with the fire insurance agency. Since his misfortune, he has occupied various public offices. He served as Township Clerk for more than two years, as Justice of the Peace for four years, as Recorder of Randolph County for four years, and for nearly twelve years has been a Notary Public. In early life he developed remarkable musical talents, which he cultivated until he attained more than an ordinary degree of perfection and skill. In 1853, two years after the occurrence of his misfortune, he called and managed a musical convention at Indianapolis, at which the leading brass bands of the State joined in competiton for first and second prizes. The enterprise proved a great success, both in a financial and musical sense, and the appreciation of the entertainment led the attending citizens to tender a vote of thanks and a complimentary benefit to the energetic manager. He has always been actively interested in musical matters, and has done much, by example and precept, to elevate the standard and encourage the development of musical talent in this vicinity. He was reared under Methodist influences, and although not formally identified with any religious denomination, he still retains the warmth of moral and religious feeling that characterized his boyhood, and at heart is a believer in the doctrines of the Christian religion. His early political training was with the Whig party, and he cast his first vote for Zachary Taylor, in the presidential campaign of 1848. He was strongly anti-slavery in sentiment, and drifted naturally from the Whig to the Republican party, with which he has ever since continued to act. He is an earnest temperance man, and has always added the weight of his example and influence to the cause. In his life, since the great pivotal event, Mr. Cottom has demonstrated the power of a strong will over obstacles seemingly insurmountable. Sitting in his bed, or in his wheel-chair, he has attended daily to the affairs of active business, entering into his pursuits with a cheerfulness and enthusiasm worthy of remark. For more than thirty years his wheel-chair and cheerful face have been familiar sights to the citizens of this county, and his career during this period illustrates anew the force of the injunction:

"Never give up! It is wiser and better
Always to hope, than once to despair."

In his business affairs, and in all his transactions with his fellow-men, he has been governed by a high sense of honor, and for the probity of his life, and the kind and gentle characteristics of his nature, he possesses the good-will and affection of all who know him. His wife is a noble Christian lady, and has been a ministering angel to him in the period of his affliction. Their wedded life has been blessed by two children, one of whom is deceased. The surviving daughter, Rosa, is the widow of the late Robert S. Fisher, who served long and faithfully as Cashier of the Commercial Bank, of Union City.

JONATHAN CRANOR was born in Guilford County, N. C., on the 6th day of January, 1823, and resided there with his parents, on a farm, till he was twelve years old. His father, John Cranor, emigrated, with his family, from there, and located in Wayne County, Ind., near Williamsburg, in the fall of 1833, where the elder Cranor soon after died. Mr. Cranor's mother's name was Nancy Little. She was of Irish descent, her parents having been born in Dublin, Ireland. After the death of his father, Jonathan was bound to his uncle, Thomas Cranor. In about one year of servitude, young Cranor became dissatisfied with his master, and being naturally ambitious, with confidence in himself, he threw off his allegiance to his uncle, and began the battle of life for himself. For a number of years he worked about, upon farms, by the month, and chopped cord-wood. In 1840, he went to Centerville, Wayne County, and was taken in by the firm of Morton & Shaw, to learn the hatter trade, and was associated there with Gov. O. P. Morton, who was also learning the same trade. After he learned his trade, Mr. Cranor abandoned it and cast about again for a more acceptable pursuit. Having had no educational advantages up to this time, he sought rudimental instruction from his friend, Dr. Blair, who taught him the common school branches. In 1843, he came to Winchester to finish his education, and was admitted into the Randolph County Seminary, which was then under the supervision of Prof. James Ferris, where he was a student for some time. In February of 1847, during the Mexican War, young Cranor enlisted in the regular army, and was posted at Newport Barracks, Ky., where he was employed in drilling recruits for the army, till the close of that war. After the close of the war, he returned to Winchester and procured a position in the Randolph County Seminary, as assistant teacher with Prof. Ferris. On the 11th day of September, 1848, he was married to Miss Elleanor Rush, who was born August 27, 1830, a daughter of —— Rush, and a native of ———— and settled down in the hotel business, on the Kizer corner, northeast corner from the public square in Winchester. July 4, 1850, he moved to Greeneville, Ohio, and opened a hotel there, but soon tired of that, and exchanged for a farm near the village of Hill Grove, where he remained about two years, when he sold out and came to Union City, and took charge of a large flouring mill on the Ohio side, where he was engaged in the milling business till the beginning of the great rebellion. Early in 1861, when the great rebellion was being organized, and after Sumter had been beaten down and the flag of the Union trampled in the dust, on President Lincoln's first call for three months' troops, Mr. Cranor volunteered, and on the 20th day of April, 1861, was commissioned Captain by the Governor of Ohio, after which he recruited Company I, of the Eleventh Ohio Infantry, and reported at Camp Denison, for duty, and was ordered to Bellair, where he was commander of the post during his term of service. August 21, 1861, Capt. Cranor was appointed Lieutinant Colonel of the Fortieth Ohio Infantry, and on September 11, 1861, promoted to Colonel, and on the 16th of September, 1861, was mustered in and took command of the Fortieth Ohio Infantry. He was then ordered to report to Col. James A. Garfield, at Paris, Ky. Garfield was then Colonel of the Forty-second Ohio Infantry, and commander of the Eighteenth Brigade, of which the Fortieth Ohio was a part. On the 10th day of January, 1862, when Humphrey Marshal, with a Confederate force, was occupying a position on Middle Creek, in Eastern Kentucky, Col. Garfield, determined to dislodge him, ordered Col. Cranor, with a detachment from the Fortieth and Forty-second Ohio, to make an attack. Col. Cranor also had at his command a portion of Woolford's Cavalry. After a weary march on the 9th, and a restless night in rain and storm, on Abbott's Mountain, without shelter and without food, early in the morning of the 10th, Col. Cranor, with four companies of infantry, commanded respectively by Capts. Reeves, Knapp, Williams and Matchet, made an assault upon the enemy, and after many repulses in the early part of the conflict, from about 1 o'clock, Col. Cranor's forces gained an advantage which was held till dark, routing and driving the enemy out of Kentucky. Having no provisions, Garfield ordered his forces back to Prestonsburg, where they arrived the next day at 10 o'clock. Afterward, Col. Cranor routed the rebels out of Pound's Gap, in the Cumberland Mountains. In May, Col. Garfield was promoted and ordered away, when Col. Cranor took command of the Eighteenth Brigade, and all the forces in Eastern Kentucky. Col. Cranor remained in command of these forces until in the spring of 1863, when, on account of poor health, he was forced to resign. On the 28th day of May, 1865, President Andrew Johnson, for gallant services, appointed Col. Cranor Brevet Brigadier General. After retiring from the army, Gen. Cranor returned to Union City, Ohio side, and opened a hardware store; and in 1865, was elected to the Senate of Ohio from the Thirty-third District, composed of Miami, Shelby and Darke Counties. In 1868, Gen. Cranor was elected Presidential Elector from the Fourth Congressional District of Ohio, and cast the vote of that District for Gen. U. S. Grant, for President. In 1872, Gen. Cranor came over on the Indiana side of Union City, and opened a hardware store, in which business he was engaged till ——, when he sold out and engaged in the sale of boots and shoes until ——, when he was appointed Deputy Marshal of the State of Indiana, which position he held but a short time and resigned. Mr. and Mrs. Cranor have had three children, namely, Melvin R., born June 9, 1849, and died August 21, 1850; Charles E., born June 6, 1851, and Andrew J., born August 29, 1852, and married to Miss Alice Parent.

JOHN D. CARTER was born March 17, 1829, in Delaware County, Ind. His father, Edmund D. Carter, emigrated from Maryland to Indiana at a very early date. He removed with his family to Ohio in 1829, soon after the birth of his son, and in 1832, removed to Madison County, Ind. In 1835, he again located in Delaware County, returning to Madison County a few years later. In 1838, he came to Randolph County, locating in Stony Creek Township, and removed to Winchester in 1840. In 1849, John D., the subject of this sketch, went to Huntsville, in this county, where he was engaged in the woolen business, having erected a carding-mill at that town. Shortly afterward he purchased a woolen-mill at Winchester, which occupied the present site of Adam Hirsch's furniture factory. This building was destroyed by fire about the year 1851, and in 1852, Mr. Carter moved to that part of Union City lying east of the State line, and there erected and operated a saw-mill. This was the first mill in Union City, and, in connection with it, he operated a woolen-mill, and sold dry goods. He was thus engaged until 1857, when he removed to Chesterfield, Madison Co., Ind., and was there engaged in the dry goods and grain trade. In 1860, he removed to Dayton, Ohio, and was engaged for two years as salesman in the wholesale establishment of Darst, Herchalrode & Co. In 1861, he again located at Chesterfield, and in 1862, came to Winchester, where he has ever since resided. He engaged in mercantile pursuits here in that year, and was thus employed until 1870. In 1866, he erected the Winchester Woolen-Mill, but in 1869, purchased the old seminary property, which he converted into a woolen-mill, operating it as such until 1880. In that year, he erected his present establishment in the southeast part of Winchester, where he conducts an extensive and satisfactory business in the manufacture of yarns, blankets, and other woolen goods. He is enterprising and energetic, and his establishment ranks among the important manufacturing industries of Winchester. In politics he is an enthusiastic Republican, and in 1880, was elected Coroner of Randolph County. He was married, in 1848, to Miss Maria Montgar, daughter of Josiah Montgar, of Union City, Ohio. Mr. Montgar was an early settler in Darke County, Ohio, and owned the land upon which the east part of Union City is located. He died in Nebraska in 1874, at the age of eighty years. Mr. Carter and wife are the parents of three children. They are worthy and highly respected members of society. Mr. Carter is a member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities, having attained the fifth degree in the former, and the Chapter and Council Degrees in the latter.

LEVI D. CARTER is one of the family who have been so long identified with the industrial interests of Winchester, and who, by their industry in mechanical arts, have greatly assisted the material prosperity of the town. He was born October 24, 1826, in Montgomery County, Ohio, near the city of Dayton, and removed with his parents to Madison County, Ind., in 1828. In 1830 or 1831, the family returned to Montgomery County, Ohio, where the subject of this sketch resided until 1836. In that year he came again to Indiana, locating first in Madison County, and removing to Randolph County in 1840. In 1846, he went to Preble County, Ohio, and worked from April to June of that year as a blacksmith's apprentice. In June, however, he enlisted as a volunteer in the United States army for the Mexican war, receiving a year's pay in advance. But the volunteers already enrolled proved sufficient, and his services were never called into requisition. After working at his trade for several years in various places, he came, in 1851, to Winchester, Ind., where he has resided ever since, engaged at the trade which he learned in youth, having occasionally united it with the kindred art of wagon and carriage making. For ten years he was engaged with his brother in the manufacture of wagons and carriages, and for seven or eight years he conducted a custom blacksmith shop. In 1873, he entered into partnership with John H. Gill in the manufacture of wagons. This enterprise was conducted very successfully under the firm name of Carter & Gill until the establishment of the Winchester Wagon Works, when its interests were consolidated with those of the latter establishment, and Mr. Carter was elected manager of the blacksmith department. He is enterprising and energetic, and by a life of industry has accumulated a comfortable fortune. He possesses vigorous health and a strong constitution, and belongs to that active class of citizens whose labor bears so directly upon the substantial prosperity of the community in which they reside; and to him it is a matter of honest pride that for nearly forty years he has been engaged in active labor, and that whatever financial success has crowned his work has been attained through the medium of honest toil and prudent management. He was married at Winchester in 1853 to Miss Hannah E. Hutchens, an estimable lady, who has been a devoted helpmate to him, and a potent factor in his success. They are the parents of three children, two of whom are now living. In politics, Mr. Carter acts with the Democratic party, and while an active partisan, and an earnest advocate of the principles he maintains, he has never sought nor held public office. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and takes an active interest in the affairs of his lodge.

AARON G. CAMPFIELD, son of Matthew and Fanny M. Campfield, was born June 1, 1834, in Morris County, N. J. In 1848, he removed to Newark, and in 1861 to Jersey City. In 1864, he came West, locating at Chicago, where he remained about four months. From that city he went to Decatur, Ill., remaining there one year. From that place he went East again, tarrying three months in the State of Delaware, and finally returning to his former home at Newark. One year later, he removed to Elizabeth, N. J., where he remained three years. In the fall of 1869, he removed to the State of Iowa, removing shortly afterward to Springfield, Ill., then to Greene County, in the same State. From there he went again to Decatur, and in the spring of 1872, to Chicago, where he remained three months. He next visited Toledo, Detroit, and other cities, and returning to Springfield, Ill., made his home at that city for three years. In 1875, he came to Winchester, Ind., and two years later, removed to Noblesville, Ind. In the spring of 1880, he returned to Winchester, where he has ever since continued to reside. In early life he learned the carpenter's trade, at Newark, N. J., and as soon as he became a journeyman, began making contracts for the erection of buildings, and in the course of time became a professional contractor. In the West his first contract was consummated at Carrollton, Ill., where, in 1870, he erected a public school building costing $40,000. At Jerseyville, Ill., he contracted for, and erected, a school building costing $20,000. He also erected the State school building for destitute children, at Coldwater, Mich., and his next important contracts were the erection of the Randolph County Court House, at Winchester, and the Hamilton County Court House, at Noblesville. He also erected the Randolph County Jail, which was completed and occupied in the summer of 1882. His life has been one of energy and activity, and he has left many evidences of his skill as a master workman and designer. He is in the prime of a vigorous manhood and active business life, and his enterprise and public spirit have added largely to the impetus of the local industries of this town. He is engaged extensively in the lumber trade at Winchester, owning and operating a saw mill, in which large quantities of lumber are prepared for market. His life has been successful, in a financial sense, and he has succeeded in accumulating a comfortable fortune. He is honored and respected by all who know him, and is recognized among the best citizens of the community in which he resides. In politics he is a Republican, and while enthusiastic in the support of his party, he has never been enough of a politician to seek or occupy public office, preferring to give his attention exclusively to his business. He was married on May 8, 1859, to Miss Caroline Elizabeth Ross, at Newark, N. J.. By this union they are the parents of four children, three of whom are now living to bless and cheer their home.

WILLIAM WESLEY CANADA was born June 8, 1850, in Stony Creek Township, Randolph Co., Ind. He is the son of David Canada, a prominent and highly-respected farmer of this county. His parents are both deceased. His father died at Winchester October 15, 1879. His mother died two years previously (October 13, 1877). During his early life, the subject of this sketch was engaged in performing the various duties of farm life on the home farm, and attending the common schools in the winter. When seventeen years of age, he began an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, and in the winter taught school, saving his earnings from these combined sources, to complete his own education. He attended the high school at Farmland for six months, finishing with a three months' course in the State Normal School at Terre Haute, Ind. He began at an early age to earn his way in the world, and has never received assistance from any one to further his plans. His attainments are the results of his own unaided efforts, and he is essentially a self-made man. He began the study of the law in 1873, in the office of William Eggleston, a distinguished attorney of Terre Haute, and shortly afterward came to Winchester, entering the office of Moorman Way, Esq., where he completed his studies. He was admitted to the bar of Randolph County in June, 1874, and began the practice of his profession. In 1876, he was the associate of E. B. Reynolds, Esq., with whom he practiced one year. In 1877, he formed a partnership with his brother, which continued until 1881. He has been active in politics, and is a stanch supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He is one of the working members, yet his services are contributed unselfishly, and without hope of reward. He has never sought nor accepted public office. His heart is in his profession, to which he has devoted himself with an earnestness that has wrought good results. He is steadily rising as an attorney, in the estimation of the public, as well as that of the legal fraternity, and as he is yet a young man, bright possibilities are before him. Mr. Canada was married, in December, 1875, to Miss Carrie E. Moore, daughter of James Moore, Esq., an early settler of Randolph County. They are the parents of two children, named respectively—Lance and Coral. In social life they are highly regarded by a large circle of friends, and are very properly ranked among the best citizens of the community in which they reside.

SILAS A. CANADA was born January 14, 1852, in Stony Creek Township, Randolph Co., Ind. His father, David Canada, was a native of North Carolina, and came to Randolph County in 1828 or 1829. His mother, Mary A. Canada, was a native of Randolph County, Ind. They were the parents of ten children, all of whom are now living. Both parents are deceased. The mother died in 1877, and the father in 1879. Silas A., the subject of this sketch, passed the days of his boyhood on the home farm, attending the district schools in winter, and assisting in the work of the farm during the remainder of the year. In 1869, he attended the school at Farmland, in this county, under the instructions of Dr. Ault, and during the summer of 1875, was a student in the college of Ridgeville. He attended school at Winchester, in the same year. At the age of eighteen years, he began teaching school in Randolph County, and was thus employed at intervals for several years, and was Principal of the Arba Graded School two years. Three times, while thus employed, he was granted a two years' license, his general average each time being 100 per cent. In 1876, he began the study of law, with A. O. Marsh, and on the 13th of January, 1877, was admitted to the bar of Randolph County. From 1877 to 1881, he was associated in the practice with his brother, under the firm name of Canada & Canada, after which he became a member of the present firm of Stakebake, Canada & Marsh. As a school teacher he was successful and efficient, and, as an attorney, he is rapidly rising to prominence. He is yet a young man, and, judged by his energy and ability, it is safe to predict for him a bright and prosperous future.

JESSE CANADAY was born December 13, 1847, in Wayne County, Ind. His parents, Enos and Hannah Canaday, were both natives of North Carolina, his father of Guilford County, and his mother of Randolph County. They each came to Wayne County, Ind., with their parents, when quite young, and grew to maturity there. The father was fortunate in the accumulation of a fortune, by years of industry and honest effort, but his confidence in his neighbors cost him dearly, for, by becoming security for them at various times, he lost nearly all he had accumulated. Under the changed condition of the father's fortunes, the sons were compelled to lean more upon their own resources for whatever success they attained in preparing themselves for active life. Jesse, the subject of this sketch, had enjoyed the advantages of the common schools in boyhood, attending only in the winter; but by persistent study and application he acquired a good English education, and in his nineteenth year began teaching school during the winter, and clerking in stores during other portions of the year. In the meantime, having registered in the office of James Brown, of Newcastle, Ind., he gave all his leisure time to the study of law, with a view of adopting the legal profession. His preceptor was then a well known attorney, and has since risen to distinction. Under his instructions, Mr. Canaday gained ground rapidly in his studies, and was admitted to the bar of Henry County in 1874. He did not enter upon the practice at once, however, believing that a good purpose would be subserved by remaining for awhile in mercantile life. In 1875, he located at Hagerstown, Wayne Co., Ind., where he remained about six years. During two years of this time, he was Cashier of the Commercial Bank, and for three years was engaged in the practice of his profession. In April, 1882, he came to Winchester, having decided to devoted his time and talents to the practice of the law. He was married on December 24, 1874, to Miss Sarah J. Wright, at the home of her father, Thomas G. Wright, in Henry County, Ind. On August 1, 1876, she died, leaving one little daughter, to mourn her loss. Mr. Canaday was married to Miss Lila Brown, his present companion, on December 6, 1880. She is a lady of culture and refinement, and enjoys the regard and esteem of a large circle of friends. In politics, Mr. Canady has always acted with the Republican party, taking an active interest in its success, while he has never sought public office, nor served but once in a public capacity. This was during his residence at Hagerstown, at which time he served four years as Justice of the Peace. He is yet a young man, with his life all before him. He is naturally energetic and enthusiastic, devoted to his profession, and possessing the qualities that win success.

ARMSBEE DIGGS was among the earliest pioneers of Randolph County, and for many years one of its most active and reliable citizens. He came here in the prime of a vigorous manhood, and for more than a half century was identified with the development of the county, bearing his full share in pioneer hardships, and contributing liberally to the encouragement of public improvements inaugurated in later years. He was born in 1795, in Anson County, N. C. About the year 1816, he married Mary Way, and in the winter of 1816–17, started with his young wife for the wilds of Indiana, reaching Randolph County in February, 1817, and locating on the banks of White River. Here he addressed himself to the task of clearing and improving a farm, and although he was a successful and energetic farmer, he was an enthusiastic hunter, and fond of the chase. Often his sons were sent into the woods to bring home the hides and hams of deer slain by their father, these being the marketable parts of the animal, and readily convertible into money. Thus for years he lived in the woods, farming and hunting alternately. In December, 1817, his eldest son, Henry, was born. The latter was one of the first white children born on White River in this county, his only seniors being Fanny, daughter of William Diggs, and Lydia Wright, now the wife of Endsley Jones, of this county. In the years that ensued, eleven other children were added to the family of Mr. Diggs, six of whom are now living, viz.: John W., Jesse, Rachel, William, Matthew, and Fanny. Littleberry, Washington and Hannah died young. Henry, the eldest, grew to manhood in this county, and married, but is now deceased. Patience, wife of J. H. Leake, and Priscilla, wife of Stephen Moorman, are also deceased. Mr. Diggs entered a tract of 179 acres, from which he developed his farm. For the purpose of purchasing this tract he went on horseback to the land office at Cincinnati, with just enough money to pay for a quarter section; but upon his arrival he learned that the tract "overran," and it would be necessary for him to purchase the entire amount. He did not possess the requisite amount of money, and had it not been for the kindness of a young man in the land office, he would have been compelled to return without a title to the land on which he had erected his cabin, and where his family then resided. This young man volunteered to advance him the necessary amount, taking no security other than his verbal obligation, and he returned the happy owner of the land he had selected. Six months passed before he was able to return the money so generously loaned him by the stranger, but it was repaid with true gratitude for the kind accommodation. Like many others among our western pioneers, he began life in limited financial circumstances, and by hard work and industry accumulated a fortune. About the year 1850, he erected a saw mill and grist mill on White River, and for ten years or more was engaged in this enterprise, from which he derived a fair profit. Though possessing only a limited education, he was a man of fine natural intelligence, and was constantly adding to his store of knowledge by study and observation. He was reared under the influence of the Society of Friends, and while he was never identified with the Society here, his early teachings marked and governed all his life. He was a man whose verbal obligation was accepted as readily and considered as sacred by himself as his bond. In all his dealings with his fellow-men, he was actuated by principles of strict honesty, and none were more highly esteemed than he. In his political affiliations he was at first a Whig, and later a Republican, and while he was an active and zealous partisan, he always shunned public office, and never permitted his name to be used in connection with any nomination. He reared a large family, who inherited their father's sterling traits, and are now among the honored and respected citizens of the communities in which they reside. He died in March, 1872, having lived to see the pioneer settlement develop into a populous and wealthy county. His wife did not long survive the husband with whom she came to these wilds, as she died in October of the same year.

JOHN W. DIGGS, son of Armsbee and Mary Diggs, was born on the 20th of January, 1826, at the old homestead in White River Township, Randolph County, Ind. He has passed his days in this county from childhood to mature age, and has been identified more or less prominently with the public welfare and improvement of the county during his residence within its limits. In his boyhood, he labored under the disadvantages common to a new settlement, particularly in respect to school privileges, and the greater portion of his time was required in the work of the home farm. He attended school in one of the rude schoolhouses of that period, but his education is mostly self-acquired. His elder brother married and left home, and he, being the next in age, took upon himself the burden of the work about the farm, and continued to work for his father until 1849. In May of that year he was married to Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary Helms, and sister of G. W. Helms, of Winchester. After his marriage, he rented a portion of his father's farm, which he continued to cultivate until the spring of 1852. He had learned the carpenter's trade, and at the date last named adopted that pursuit for a livelihood. In 1855, he adopted the cabinet-maker's trade, which he pursued successfully until the winter of 1861–62. He sold his shop at that time and has since been engaged in the undertaker's line. His life has been a success, financially and otherwise. He never believed in wasting time, and his years have been years of industry. He has acquired a comfortable fortune, all of which has been gained by honest toil. So firmly have the habits of his youth become a part of his nature, that he is always happiest when busily engaged at some manual labor. And while his industrious life has well earned complete rest for his later years, he lacks the inclination to accept it. The bride of his early years has been spared to comfort and cheer his later life, and share with him the high regard and esteem of the community. They are the parents of three sons, named, respectively, George S., Charles C. and Eddie F. The former is the senior member of the firm of Diggs & Way, of Winchester, while the younger brothers occupy the stations of clerks. Mr. Diggs is recognized as one of our best citizens, and has always felt an interest in the progress and public welfare of this county and town, contributing liberally to enterprises inaugurated with this end in view. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has been identified with this denomination for a number of years. His life has been consistent with his religion, and in all his dealings with his fellow-men he has been honorable and fair. He became a member of the Odd Fellows fraternity at Winchester in 1854, and is still an active and enthusiastic member of that order, having attained the rank of a Uniformed Patriarch in the Encampment. In his political affiliations he is a Republican. His father was a Whig, and in his early boyhood, the son embraced the principles of that party, and later was a radical Abolitionist. He took an active though quiet part in the anti-slavery movements in this county, and upon the rise of the Republican party he became one of its earliest and stanchest friends and supporters, and has ever since been one of its most unwavering adherents. He has never felt political ambition, and never sought public office. He has, however, been elected to several local positions by the spontaneous will of the people, and without effort on his own part. He was elected six times in succession to the office of Trustee of White River Township, and afterward served two years as Clerk and Treasurer of the town of Winchester, and subsequently as Trustee of the corporation.

CALVIN W. DIGGS, son of Littleberry C. and Mercy (Addington) Diggs, was born September 13, 1843, in Stony Creek Township, Randolph Co., Ind. About the year 1854, he removed with his mother to Liber, Jay Co., Ind., his father having died in December, 1849. Here he attended school the greater portion of the time during the next eight years. In the meantime civil war had broken out, and in 1862, he left his studies to do his part in defense of the Union. In August, 1862, he went to Richmond, Ind., and enrolled himself as a member of Company A, Eighty-fourth Indiana Regiment, and was with his regiment in the battle of Chickamauga, where he was captured by the rebels on the 20th of September, 1863, while trying to save a comrade, William Mendenhall. From the battle-field he was taken to Richmond, Va., and placed in Libby Prison. At the end of a month, he was transferred to Danville, Va., where he was kept for five months, and from that point to Andersonville, Ga., where he spent eight months in the miserable pen, whose horrors will continue to be a blot upon the name of the South as long as memory or history shall endure. On the 20th of November, 1864, he was exchanged, and after a furlough of forty days, rejoined his regiment at Huntsville, Ala., remaining with it until the close of the war. After his discharge from the service he returned to his home, and, for three or four years following, taught in the district schools of the county during the winter, and in the spring of 1869, was appointed Deputy by William E. Murray, who was then Auditor, and in the fall of 1873, accepted the position of Deputy Clerk, under R. A. Leavell. In the fall of 1877, he embarked in the business of collecting the foreign fees of Sheriffs and clerks, in the pursuit of which he visited each county in the State. This enterprise was a new one, and he found it pleasant and reasonably remunerative. In December, 1880, he was appointed Assistant Attorney General for the Sixth and Eleventh Congressional Districts, his duties being the collection of fees due the State. In March, 1882, he formed a partnership with J. W. Macy, in the insurance, loan and abstract business, which they have made very successful. On the 28th of October, 1877, he was united in marriage with Miss Harriet R. Edger, daughter of Edward Edger, Esq., of Winchester. Their wedded life has been blessed by two children, named, respectively, Bessie Diggs (deceased) and Nellie E. Diggs. Mr. Diggs has grown up in this community, and is well known throughout the county. He has gained a fair share of the world's wealth by energy and industry, and by his honorable dealings with his fellow-men, has won their confidence and esteem, and he is recognized as one of our best citizens.

PATRICK HENRY DEAN was born March 9, 1836, at Nicholasville, Ky. He was reared on a farm, and received a common school education in the schools of his native city. His father, John Dean, removed from Kentucky to Indiana, locating first in Johnson County, and removing at a later date to Delaware County, and finally to Grant County, where he still resides. His son accompanied him, remaining at home until his father removed to Grant County. While residing at Franklin, Johnson County, he learned the art of making daguerreotypes, and decided to adopt that vocation. After the removal to Delaware County, he worked on the farm for awhile, and afterward set up a gallery at Muncie, with a Mr. Parsons. From Muncie he removed to Tipton, Ind., and engaged in mercantile pursuits. In this line he met with marked success, and the firm of P. H. Dean & Co., became one of the foremost houses in the town. But just in the midst of his success, and when least expecting it, his fortunes were reversed, and he was ruined financially by the treachery of those he believed to be his best friends. He found it necessary to surrender his hopes in the mercantile line, and return to the practice of his art for a livelihood. He opened a gallery at Tipton, in partnership with a Mr. Craycraft, and about a year later removed to Noblesville, Ind., where he was engaged in the same business. Misfortune seemed to follow him, for, while at Noblesville, and just as his work began to pay him, his gallery was destroyed by fire, and all his possessions were swept away. From Noblesville he went to Chicago, and two years later came to Winchester, where he has resided ever since, practicing the art of photography. Having adopted this profession, he has studied it well, and has developed some original and ingenious methods, among them being a machine for rolling and burnishing photographs, of which he is the inventor and patentee. This has proved a useful accessory to the photograph gallery, and has been sold throughout the United States. In 1874, he was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie McDonald. By this union they are the parents of one daughter—Emma. Mr. Dean was made a Mason at Tipton, Ind., and received the first three degrees of the order at that place. After his removal to Winchester, he received the Chapter and Council degrees at this place, and the degree of Knight Templar at Muncie. He is a good natured, genial man, and during his residence in this town has gained many friends.

HON. EDWARD EDGER,

Winchester, Ind., was born in Derry County, Ireland, March 10, 1803. He was the son of Edward and Martha (Shields) Edger. The family, consisting of the parents and eight children, came to America in 1807, leaving Ireland June 4th of that year. Coming over in a sailing vessel, it required three months to make the voyage. They landed at Baltimore and went to Augusta County, Va., where they remained one year, when they removed to Bourbon County, Ky., where they resided until 1823, when the parents and family, excepting the subject of this sketch, removed to Castine, Darke Co., Ohio, where they continued to reside during the remainder of their lives. After his father removed from Kentucky, the subject of our sketch was employed in flat-boating and as pilot on steamboats on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. He served as pilot successfully for six years. On March 8, 1828, the "Tennessee," a large passenger steamer upon which he was ascending the Mississippi, struck a snag and sunk. About one hundred passengers were drowned; Mr. Edger escaped, with only his night clothes, by swimming six miles on a small board. He was married to Miss Jane G. Putman, daughter of Unerstus Putman, a merchant of New Madison, Ohio, November 12, 1833, and settled at New Madison, where he engaged in the saw-mill business. Mrs. Edger is a sister of Col. David Putman, of Palestine, Ohio, and J. G. Putman, formerly a well-known citizen of Winchester. She is a lady of sterling character, and holds a high place in the esteem of all who know her. Mr. and Mrs. Edger removed to Randolph County, Ind., in 1837, locating where the town of Deerfield now stands, January 20 of that year, where they kept a general supply store until 1854, when they removed to Winchester, where they have since resided. They are the parents of twelve children, seven of whom survive. Mr. Edger served a regular apprenticeship at the cabinet trade, but has spent most of his life in general merchandising, more recently in the grain trade. During his career he has been associated as partner with Mr. J. G. Putnam, Mr. J. B. Goodrich, Mr. Asa Teal and H. T. Semans. At the present he is retired, after a long and active business life. Although not a politician, Mr. Edger is a Conservative Democrat. He was elected to the Legislature in 1843, and in 1845 he was again in the field, when he tied with Judge James Brown, Mr. Edger preferred to remain at home, and allowed his competitor to occupy the seat. Mr. Edger is not a member of any church; Mrs. Edger is a Presbyterian. They are each liberal toward all opinions. Mr. Edger is a member of the Masonic fraternity; took the Ancient Craft degrees at Richmond, Ky., in 1825, and the degrees of the Royal Arch Chapter, at Richmond, Ind., about thirty years ago. He was one of the charter members and the first Master of Winchester Lodge, No. 56, F. & A. M. Subsequently he aided in organizing a lodge at Deerfield, over which he presided for a time as Master. He has led a useful and busy life, and is approaching "that bourne from which no traveler returns," with the calm confidence of one who has erected his spiritual building agreeably to the designs laid down by the supreme Architect of the universe.

CAPT. EDMUND ENGLE was born August 8, 1831, in Chester County, Penn. His earliest recollections, however, are associated with Indiana, as he came to this State with his parents when but four years of age. His father, Isaac Engle, was also a native of Chester County, Penn., where he was born in 1804. He was reared on a farm, but learned the wagon-maker's trade, and followed that occupation until 1842. In 1830, he married Miss Catharine Tussey, a native of Chester County, whose ancestors settled in Pennsylvania as early as 1648. In 1835, he removed with his family to Wayne County, Ind., and in 1842 came to Randolph County, Ind. He located in Washington Township, where he purchased eighty acres of land, upon which only a partial clearing had been made. He completed the labor of clearing, and developed a fine farm, which he cultivated successfully for many years. He now resides with his son, in White River Township, at the advanced age of seventy-eight years. Edmund, the subject of this sketch, was reared on the home farm, and during the greater part of his early life, his time was occupied in the performance of farm work. In the winter he attended school, and acquired a good, practical education. At the age of eighteen years he began an apprenticeship at the plasterer's trade, working at this trade during the summer and fall, and clerking in various business houses during the winter. He was thus engaged until 1864. In February of that year he enlisted as a private soldier in Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Regiment, but upon the organization of the regiment he was promoted to the rank of Orderly Sergeant. In July, 1864, he was advanced to the office of Second Lieutenant, for meritorious services, and in December, of the same year, was promoted to the office of First Lieutenant. He was with his regiment in all the battles of the Atlanta campaign, and after the fall of Atlanta, the regiment, under command of Gen. Thomas, fell back to Tennessee, and took part in the battles of Franklin and Nashville. On the 9th and 10th of March, 1865, they participated in the battle of Wise's Forks, N. C., where Capt. J. L. Neff was killed. Lieut. Engle was commissioned Captain, and continued in command of his company until his final muster-out, at Greensboro, N. C., August 31, 1865. He returned from the army with his health greatly impaired, and for a few months remained out of active business. Later, however, he engaged in the sale of agricultural implements, in connection with the insurance business, associated with his son, John R. Engle. In 1875, he embarked in the grocery trade, and was thus engaged for a year. In the meantime, in connection with Dr. Markle, he laid out Engle & Markle's addition to the town of Winchester, and was extensively engaged in the sale of lots. On the first of January, 1881, in connection with his son, he established the New York Store, which was conducted under the firm name of Engle & Son until April, 1882, when John Richardson purchased the interest of John R. Engle, the junior member of the firm. Mr. Engle was married October 15, 1856, to Miss Gertrude K. Bishop, daughter of John W. Bishop, late of Randolph County. By this union they are the parents of seven children, four of whom are now living, viz.: John R., Emma G., Charles F. and Walter J. His wife is an estimable lady, and possesses the affectionate regard of all who know her. She is a member of the Disciples Church, as is also her husband. Although he has never occupied public office, Mr. Engle has taken quite an active part in local politics, always wielding his influence in favor of the Republican party. He is identified with both the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities of Winchester, having attained the Royal Arch degree in the former. He is a successful business man, and by his honorable methods has won the confidence and respect of the community in which he was reared.

J. S. ENGLE.

James S. Engle was born September 13, 1846, in Washington Township, Randolph County, Ind. He is the eighth in a family of twelve sons, ten of whom are now living and married, and all but two are engaged in agricultural pursuits. One died at the age of three years, and one lost his life during the late war in defense of the Union. William Engle, the father, has reached the age of seventy years, but is still unusually active and well preserved for one of his advanced age. He was one of the early settlers of Washington Township, having emigrated to this locality from Warren County, Ohio, and taken an active part in the development of the township from a wilderness to a prosperous farming community. James S. was reared on the home farm, and his early life was spent in the performance of farm work, varied by a winter term in the common schools each year, until he attained his majority. After reaching his twenty-first year, he entered Hartsville University, in Bartholomew County, Ind., where he spent a year. Subsequently, he was a student in the Winchester High School, under Prof. James S. Ferris, and afterward returned to the University at Hartsville. During the winter he would teach in the country schools, using the money thus earned to pay his way while continuing his studies at college—receiving no pecuniary aid from any one, but earning his own way from the first. In the summer of 1864, he enlisted in the 100-day's service, as a member of Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and was honorably discharged at the close of the term for which he had enlisted. In 1871, he entered the office of Cheney and Watson as a law student, and taught school during the succeeding winter. After Judge Cheney's accession to the Common Pleas bench, Mr. Engle completed his course of preparation in the office of Watson & Monks. He was admitted to the bar in the spring of 1872, and in the fall of the same year formed partnership relations with Hon. J. Enos Neff, which continued until 1874. From 1874 to January, 1881, he was associated with L. W. Study, and since the latter date, with Hon. E. L. Watson. He was married, on the 23d of September, 1875, to Miss Alice, only daughter of John W. Monks, Esq. From 1874 to 1878, he served as Justice of the Peace; but with this exception, he has not occupied any official position. He was reared a Republican, and with all his father's family gives his support unreservedly to the interest of that party, while seeking no recognition or reward for the services contributed. He has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession for ten years, and is rapidly winning his way to a front rank in the legal fraternity. He is devoted to his professon, and his talents adapt him specially to success in his chosen line.

GEORGE N. EDGER.

George N. Edger was born June 8, 1852, at the town of Deerfield, in Ward Township, Randolph Co., Ind. His father, Edward Edger, Jr., was a retail merchant at Deerfield, which was then a flourishing village, and a good business point. The father died in 1863, and thus, in his eleventh year, the subject of this sketch was left without the guidance and protection of a father, and to a certain extent, was thrown upon his own resources. He came to Winchester shortly after the death of his father, and made his home with his uncle, Joseph Edger, attending school in the winter, and working for his uncle during the remainder of the year. At the age of eighteen years, he entered the service of the American Express Company as a clerk, in the office at Winchester, and shortly afterward was appointed agent for the company at this place. Subsequently he was a clerk in a boot and shoe store at Winchester, and relinquished that position for a clerkship in the post office, under F. M. Way, Postmaster, where he remained until 1874. In that year, through the influence of a friend, he secured a position in the bank at Union City. In this position he formed an extended acquaintance, and by his uniform courtesy became quite popular. At the county convention of 1878 he became the Republican candidate for the office of County Auditor, receiving the nomination by a majority of 140 over all competitors, and in the following fall, was elected without opposition. He has served faithfully throughout his term of four years, and will retire in the spring of 1883, followed by the esteem and good will of the people whom he has served so well in his official capacity. As an officer he is kind and obliging, courteous to all whose business calls them to his office. As a neighbor and citizen he stands high in the estimation of all who know him. In 1877, he was united in marriage with Miss Laura A. Woods, an estimable young lady, of Union City, Ind. He became an Odd Fellow in 1876, at Union City, and is still identified with the lodge of that place. He has taken all the degrees of the subordinate lodge, and is a member of the Encampment.

WILLIAM FITZMAURICE was born in 1848, in County Kerry, Ireland, and emigrated to America with his parents in 1850. They had a rough and stormy voyage of six weeks, landing finally at Quebec, and shortly afterward located in New York, near the shores of Lake Champlain, where they resided two years. In 1853, they removed to Hardin County, Ohio, and from that point to Lima, Allen Co., Ohio, in 1865, where the parents still reside. During his residence at Lima, the subject of this sketch became an apprentice in a machine shop, and spent five years there in acquiring a knowledge of the trade he has ever since pursued. From 1871 to 1874 he worked at Galion, Ohio, and in the latter year came to Winchester, Ind., where he purchased an interest in a foundry and machine shop. Subsequently he sold his interest, but the parties failing to pay, he resumed his connection with the business, purchasing the entire establishment. He remodeled it to some extent, and now conducts it alone, manufacturing balconies, cutting boxes, iron fence, etc. He is an energetic, industrious man, and under his management the business has increased, and is steadily growing. In 1873, he was married to Miss Margaret McNary, in Fremont, Ohio. By this union they are the parents of three children. Himself and wife are members of the Roman Catholic Church, and are esteemed by all who know them as kind neighbors and good members of society. In politics Mr. Fitzmaurice was formerly identified with the Democratic party, but now acts independently in political matters.

DAVID FUDGE. Jacob Fudge, the father of this gentleman, was one of the early settlers of Preble County, Ohio. He was born in Virginia about the year 1800, and emigrated with his parents to Ohio in 1805. He was reared a farmer, and followed that occupation during the greater part of his life. He married Susan Wagner in 1823. In 1847, he came, with his family, to Randolph County, Ind., locating five miles southeast of Winchester, on the Lynn road, and died at his farm in 1868. His widow still survives, occupying the old homestead. Mr. Fudge was a man who always stood high in the estimation of those who knew him, and was recognized by all as an honorable, upright citizen. During his residence in this county, he occupied various local offices, not high in dignity, but indicating the confidence reposed in him by his neighbors and fellow-citizens. Among the positions he occupied, were those of Deputy Sheriff, Assessor and Constable. In politics, he was a Democrat. He had enjoyed fair educational advantages in youth, and in later life taught school, both in his native county and after his removal to Randolph County. David, the subject of this sketch, was born January 21, 1842, in Preble County, Ohio, and accompanied his father's family to Randolph County, Ind., when five years old. His boyhood was spent in the usual routine of farm life, while in winter he attended the district schools of his neighborhood. In 1862, he enlisted in Company B, of the Ninetieth Indiana Volunteer Regiment (Fifth Cavalry), and was with his regiment in all of its battles until April, 1864, when he suffered an attack of rheumatism, which disqualified him for active service. He was transferred to the Invalid Corps, and was detailed for hospital duty at Philadelphia. He was honorably discharged in August, 1865, and, after the war, resumed the pursuit of farming, which he continued for a year. Within that period, however, he met with an accident in a saw-mill, which resulted in the loss of one of his lower limbs, and he was thereby disqualified for the work of the farm. He next turned his attention to merchandising, embarking in this pursuit at Snow Hill, in 1868. From that place he removed to Wood Station, and from the latter place to Winchester, in 1878. Here, he engaged in the sale of dry goods, millinery and ladies' furnishing goods, at which he has been ever since successfully engaged. He is a competent business man, and has built up a very satisfactory trade in his line. In 1868, he was married to Miss Nancy Jane Hinshaw, by which union they are the parents of two children, both of whom are now living. In politics, Mr. Fudge is a Democrat, and although he belongs to the party which is in the minority in this county, he is personally quite popular, and has twice polled more than the vote of his party as the candidate for public office. In 1869, he was the Democratic candidate for Trustee of Washington Township, and, although defeated by the opposing candidate, received a vote largely ahead of his ticket. The same was true in 1877, when he was the candidate of his party for the office of Recorder of Randolph County. He is a member of the Christian Church at Winchester, and is regarded by all who know him, as an upright, honorable man.

CHARLES E. FERRIS was born May 22, 1855, at New Castle, Henry Co., Ind. His father, James S. Ferris, was prominently identified with the early educational interests of Winchester, and all this part of the State. He was long a teacher in the seminary at Winchester, and occupied a high place as an educator. He located at Winchester about the year 1847, removing to Muncie at a subsequent date, and later to New Castle, serving eight years as Auditor of Henry County. After several changes of location, he finally returned to Winchester, remaining here until death. His son, Charles, enjoyed superior educational advantages in youth, and under his father's instructions, acquired a comprehensive store of useful knowledge. In 1873, he began work at the tinner's trade, and was thus engaged for two years. He was then engaged, for an equal length of time, as clerk in a drug store at Winchester, and in 1877, was appointed Deputy Postmaster, under F. M. Way. In this capacity he proved efficient and obliging, winning the regard of the public, and unconsciously gaining popularity for himself. In November, 1878, there were thirteen candidates for the position of Postmaster, Mr. Ferris being the youngest among the number. Under the circumstances, the Representative in Congress (Gen. Browne) felt reluctant to make a selection or recommendation, and it was accordingly decided to submit the matter to the people for adjustment. An election followed, at which Mr. Ferris received a flattering majority of all the votes cast, receiving thus a well merited testimonial to his ability and integrity. He is yet a young man, but he has developed the qualities that make substantial citizens, and it is reasonable to expect that his name may yet be prominently associated with the material interests of Winchester.

THE GOODRICH FAMILY.

The Goodrich family having enacted a somewhat prominent part in the history of Randolph County, and more especially of Winchester, within the last generation, some account of its origin and the causes that led to its identity with this county may not be inappropriate. In the latter part of the last century, three young Englishmen—brothers—came to America, and first stopped in Massachusetts, but finally separated. Edmund B. went to Virginia, and, being quite wealthy, became a farmer and slave-holder in Amherst County. He had a family of eight children, named respectively: John B., Thomas, Edmund, Gideon, Susan, Catharine, Mildred and Abigail. John B., the father of the family of whom we write, died in Virginia, when his eldest son, Edmund B., assumed, in a manner, the fathership of the family. The family fortunes had become depleted, and he knew that there were few prospects favorable to a family without money in Virginia, and that if its members ever occupied the stations in life for which they were eminently qualified, their rise must be accomplished in the newer settlements of the West. The father was a man of culture and education, and took great pains in the training of his children. He possessed a fine library, and was, himself, a close and constant student. After his death, the family resolved upon a removal to the West, and with them to resolve was to act. They started in the unpropitious month of December, 1831, and reached this point after a tedious journey of six weeks in wagons, in February, 1832. They had intended to locate in Delaware County, Ind., but an accident to one of their wagons in the wilds of Randolph County caused a delay which eventuated in a permanent settlement in this county. Edmund had married prior to his departure from Virginia, and after his arrival in Randolph County, purchased the farm adjoining town, now owned by the widow of his eldest son, John B. Goodrich, while his mother purchased land on White River, two miles northwest of Winchester, this farm being still owned by a relative of the family. It was a dismal woodland when they first went to occupy it, and looked as little as possible like a farm. The house was the round log cabin of the period, with puncheons for the floor, a double mill-house door, with a notch cut out of the lower corner for the convenient ingress and egress of the cats. In due time, however, this cabin was superseded by a two-story hewed-log house, in which the family lived as long as they remained together. It was here that Mrs. Rebecca Goodrich, the mother, reared and educated the younger members of her family. She was truly a remarkable woman. She was the daughter of Mr. Pierce, of Petersburg, Va., the family being connected with some of the oldest and best families of the Old Dominion, viz., the Watkins, Lees and others. She had enjoyed educational and literary advantages, and training of a high order, a fact that bore a marked effect in the training of her sons and daughters. She was married at the early age of fifteen years, and became the mother of fourteen children, all of whom grew up to honorable and useful maturity. She was small of stature—never weighing more than ninety pounds—and rather delicate, but endowed with an energy, will-power, and tenacity of life seldom surpassed. She was the idol of her children, and having enjoyed the satisfaction of seeing them grown up and take high stations among the best citizens, she sank to rest at length in peace and Christian hope, at the ripe age of eighty years. The older members of the family received their elementary education before leaving home, but the younger ones were compelled to rely, to a great extent, upon the limited advantages offered by this country in their day. It was a circumstance in their favor that there was quite a school, as well as a good library, at their own home, and many of our older readers, who were students in the old seminary, will remember the parts taken there by the Goodrich boys and girls.

EDMUND B. was endowed with a strong, comprehensive intellect, and his judgment was respected and deferred to, not by his family alone, but by his outside acquaintances as well. He was not only making his mark, but writing his name upon the moral, reformatory and educational enterprises of the time. He was a strong temperance man, and a leading member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His house was the home of the itinerant preachers, and all who needed hospitality. He turned his attention to the study of the law, and was elected Judge of the Probate Court, and discharged the duties of that office with ability.

JOHN F., the third son, had received even a more thorough education than his brothers, and was, in all respects, a superior young man. He studied surveying and the higher mathematics, and was a scholar of unusually fine attainments. When about twenty-one years of age, he started West, in advance of the family, to seek a location, and undoubtedly acquired a taste far travel and adventure, and a desire to see all that could be seen. For some time, he maintained regular correspondence with the family, from various points in Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, and finally in Texas. From the last-named place, in his last letter home, he stated that the region was infested with Indians, and white men's lives were in danger. After the lapse of a long interval, in which no tidings came from him, it was learned that a dead body had been found with letters addressed to John F. Goodrich, and it is believed that he met his death at the hands of the Indians. He was a splendid specimen of manhood, and from his personal comeliness and fine physique, was regarded as the Adonis of the family, and his melancholy fate was a sad blow to them.

CAREY S., the fourth son, remained in Virginia several years after the family had left, having engaged himself to a dry goods firm at Petersburg for a certain length of time. At the expiration of this period he came to Winchester, where he and his brother Edmund opened a store, conducting, for a while, a prosperous business. Under some embarrassment, however, they closed out their business during one of the financial crises so common in those days; Carey then turned his attention to the legal profession. He was admitted to the bar, and achieved some success as a counselor, though not as a pleader. He was a careful manager, and a shrewd business man, and accumulated, before his early death, quite a comfortable estate. He married Ann Hutton, sister of Jesse and the late John M. Hutton, of Richmond. The fruits of this union were three children, of whom Annie, the wife of Albert L. Jessup, of Winchester, is the only survivor.

ALFORD K. left home quite young, married, and lived several years in the Norohern part of this State. About twenty years ago he removed to Missouri, where he has ever since resided. He has been twice married, and reared a large family.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD learned the carpenter's trade in early life, and afterward devoted several months at Cincinnati to the study of the higher branches of that profession, in order to qualify himself for a master-builder and designer. He married Jane, daughter of Adam McPherson, formerly of Ohio, and located at Peru, Ind. About the time of the riots between the friends and enemies of slavery in Kansas, he removed to that State, but finally drifted into Southwestern Missouri. He was a radical enemy to slavery, and was outspoken and fearless. During the war, he was captured by Price's soldiers, who started to take him to a rebel prison, but on the march he became so lame that they abandoned him to his fate. Slowly and painfully he made his way back to his home, and, at the earliest day possible, returned with his family to his former home at Peru, Ind., having lost nearly everything he had possessed but his energy. He began a mercantile business there, and, up to the time of his death, enjoyed a satisfactory and lucrative trade. His family consisted of fifteen children, only six of whom reached maturity.

CALVIN G. was, perhaps, endowed most largely with the characteristic energy of the family. He took to work and business, as a boy, with the most unbounded ambition. After obtaining such an education as the early schools afforded, he secured a scholarship and availed himself of the advantages offered by Asbury University, and became a teacher in the County Seminary at Winchester, when that school was first opened. But he did not long continue the vocation of teaching; he determined upon the adoption of a profession, and chose that of medicine. He studied with the late Dr. Vaile, of Richmond, Ind., and attended lectures at the Medical College of Ohio in 1845–46, and for a while practiced with his former preceptor, Dr. Vaile, his health being greatly impaired by overwork. His energy often overruled his judgment, and he always had a disposition to do more than one man's work. Although possessing originally a good constitution, he never fully regained his health after it once began to fail. He married Mary, daughter of John Wall, of Richmond, Ind., and engaged in the practice at Knightstown, Ind., but soon removed to Oxford, Ohio, where he remained twenty years, acquiring a superior reputation as a physician, and accumulating a comfortable fortune. Finally, he removed to Minneapolis, Minn., for the benefit of his health, pursuing there a successful professional career until 1880, when he died, leaving a widow and four grown children, two sons and two daughters.

MARTIN LUTHER, being next to the youngest son, remained longest at the old homestead, but prepared himself for the profession of school teaching, and taught for a while, but soon turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He was married and in prosperous circumstances in Southwestern Missouri at the beginning of the war, but was obliged to bring his family North for several years, and never returned to that locality. In 1866, he located in Washington County, Mo., with impaired health, and died shortly afterward, leaving his second wife and two daughters by a former marriage, who still reside in that part of the State.

CHARLES T., the youngest of the family, also started as a teacher, but when a mere boy, developed a taste for commerce, and, with scarcely a dollar of means, went to Cincinnati to engage in business. He became a clerk in a notion store, and has steadily and industriously worked his way upward, until he is now the head of the house of Goodrich, Peele & Co., one of the most extensive notion houses on Pearl street, Cincinnati. He married Miss Nanie, daughter of Dr. Brown, of Cincinnati, in 1860, and has now a family of five children.

It is worthy of remark that this family has, in its individual members, exemplified a high moral tone in the community, and is a flock without the traditional "black sheep." None of the boys ever used intoxicating liquor as a beverage, nor did they ever use tobacco or profane language.

Of the daughters of the family there were five, and all were ladies of superior attainments. Celestina, the eldest, married Christian Snidow in Virginia, and came to Randolph County, living here several years, and finally removing to Tuscumbia, Ala., at the close of the war. Her husband died in that city, and since then she has lived with her sister Jane, at Toledo, Ohio.

CAROLINE LOUISA married Dr. J. E. Beverly, of Winchester, in 1844, and died in 1854. She was the mother of five children, all of whom are deceased, save one son, John E., now at Chicago.

REBECCA P. married Thomas McKim in 1840, and died in 1843, leaving one child, now deceased.

JANE A. married Burgess W. Pierce, formerly a druggist at Winchester. Later she removed with her husband to Toledo, Ohio, where she still resides. Their family consisted of two children, both of whom are now living at Atlanta, Ga., having married citizens of that place.

ANN E., second wife of Dr. John E. Beverly, was married in 1856, and is now living with her husband at Winchester. With her sister Jane, she attended the Female Institute at Oxford, Ohio, graduating in 1852. Five children were the fruits of her marriage, all of whom are now deceased, save two daughters—Rebecca G. and Eva C., who reside with their parents at Winchester.

JOHN B. GOODRICH.

Among the prominent and enterprising citizens of Winchester, who have passed away, was the gentleman of whom we write. He was born in Virginia in September, 1831, and came to Randolph County, Ind., with his father, Edmund B. Goodrich, in February, 1832. He was reared in this county, and was widely known and universally esteemed. He read law with his uncle, Carey S. Goodrich, and was admitted to the bar, achieving marked success in his profession. He was engaged in the practice until 1860, associated first with his uncle, C. S. Goodrich, and afterward with Hon. E. L. Watson. He was a very zealous Republican, and for several years was Chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Randolph County. He was an enthusiastic worker, and rendered valuable and efficient service in organizing the Republican party in this county. Yet he was never ambitious for political preferment, and only once permitted himself to be a candidate for an elective office. This was in 1861, when he was nominated and elected Clerk of Randolph County, and for a period of eight years discharged the duties of that office. He was a hard worker, and by his too close application to the work in this office, brought on consumption, which ultimately caused his death. He retired from the office in greatly impaired health, and was never again able to engage in the practice of his profession. From that time his health gradually declined, until 1872, when he died. He was a man in whom all felt the most implicit confidence, and in his death the community recognized a great loss. He was public-spirited and enterprising, ever aiding by liberal contributions such enterprises as turnpikes, railroads and others of a similar nature, and never hesitated to encourage any project in the interest of public improvement. He was taken away in the prime of life, when his mental powers were at their zenith, and in the midst of a professional career that was ever forward. He was qualified by nature and education for almost any station, but he shrank from politics, and preferred an unofficial life. He was conscientious and honorable in all his transactions, gaining the confidence and good-will of all with whom he had dealings. In a financial sense he was reasonably successful, accumulating quite a comfortable fortune, and at the time of his death owned 500 acres of land, in which was included the old Goodrich homestead of 160 acres. He was married in 1859 to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Edger, Esq., of Winchester. By this union they were the parents of six children, five of whom, with their mother, still survive. The sons are active, intelligent young men. At the close of the school term, they leave their studies for the active work of the farm, in which they engage with an energy and enthusiasm that betoken good results.

CHARLES GUTHEIL.

Charles Gutheil was born June 16, 1830, at Schrollbach, Bavaria, on the Rhine. He attended school until fourteen years of age, entering then upon an apprenticeship at the tanner's trade, with his father. In 1848, bidding farewell to his parents and kindred in his native land, he embarked for the United States, landing at New Orleans in January, 1849. The craft in which he embarked was a merchant vessel, and a slow sailer, owing to which the voyage was quite a tedious one. To add to the general discomfort, the vessel sprang aleak while in mid-ocean, and to keep her afloat the few passengers aboard were compelled to assist the crew at the pumps. Arriving at New Orleans, he embarked on a Mississippi River steamer for Cincinnati. During the voyage, the cholera broke out on board the boat, and a number of the passengers died. Altogether, his first experiences in America were not calculated to inspire great enthusiasm or fondness for the country, but he learned, in time, to love his adopted home, and to take an intelligent and patriotic part in its political and civil affairs. From Cincinnati he went to Batavia, Clermont Co., Ohio, where he was employed at his trade until the following fall, returning to Cincinnati at that time, and working in a currying shop. In April, 1851, he removed to Dayton, Ohio, and worked at his trade in that city for ten years. At the end of this period, he began business for himself, renting a small tanyard at Bell Brook, Greene Co., Ohio, where he conducted a very successful business until 1867. In that year, he came to Winchester, Ind., where he has ever since continued to reside, pursuing the tanning business and conducting a satisfactory and lucrative business. He began on a small scale, but has gradually increased the proportions of his business until it now furnishes employment to from seven to eight men, including himself and son. His goods have a fine reputation, and the demand for them is constant. By economy and close attention to business, he has made good progress in a financial sense, and, although not wealthy, is yet in very comfortable circumstances. He is universally respected and esteemed by those who know him, and is recognized among the substantial and reliable business men of this community. In politics, he is an ardent Republican, and, while taking an active interest in public affairs, has never sought nor accepted public office. He is identified with the Masonic fraternity of Winchester, having united with this order at Dayton, Ohio, in 1852. He is also a member of the Ancient Order of Druids. In the latter order he has passed all the chairs and taken all the degrees of the lodge, and for seven years was Secretary of the lodge at Dayton. He was married, in 1856, to Miss Margaretha Welk, at Greenville, Ohio. Mrs. Gutheil was born in 1835, at Wurtemberg, Germany, and emigrated to New York in 1855, marrying within a year after her arrival in America. She is a model wife, and to her economy and prudent management of the household affairs, the husband owes much of the financial success that has crowned his life. They are the parents of four children, named, respectively, Augustus L., Matilda B., Charles G. and Arthur H. C. Augustus, the eldest son, is the book-keeper and cashier of the Transcript Printing Company, at Springfield, Ohio, and is a young man of fine business ability. Charles G. is assisting his father in the business, and is a promising young man. Matilda remains at home, and Arthur H. C., the youngest of the family, is attending school at Winchester.

MICHAEL C. GAFFEY. Bryan Gaffey, the father of this gentleman, was born in the County of Roscommon, Ireland, and was married to Margaret Carr, a native of Galway County, in the same island. He came to the United States in 1844, and to Winchester, Ind., in 1853, and is still a resident of this town. Michael, the subject of this sketch, was born February 11, 1854, at Winchester, Ind. He attended the public schools until fifteen years of age, when he left home to earn his living. He found employment with Elisha Martin, working for his board, and attending school in the winter. He attended the high school at Winchester for several terms, and from 1874 to 1880 was engaged in teaching school during the winter. From 1877 to 1878 he served

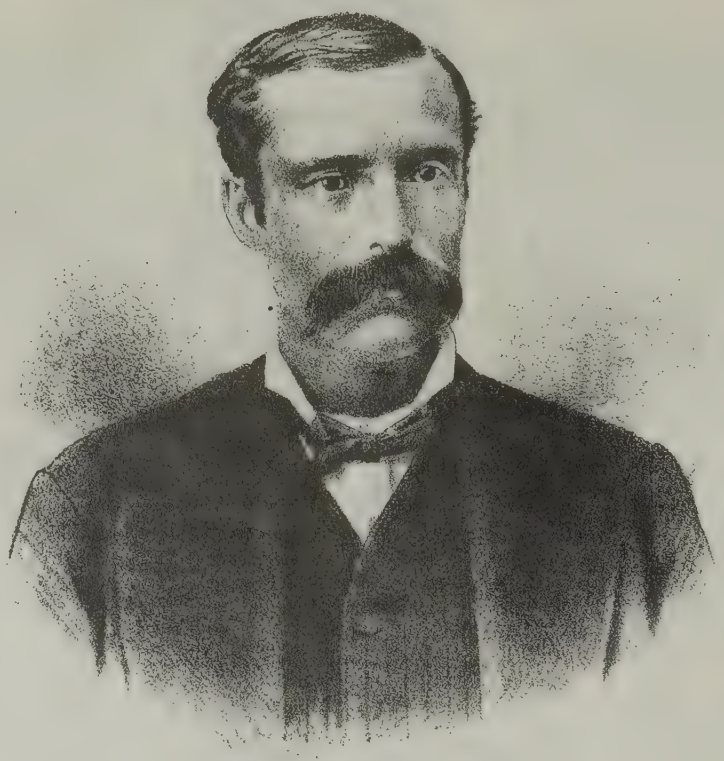
RES. OF W.A.THOMPSON, WINCHESTER, RANDOLPH, CO. IND.



Andrew J. Stakebake

attorney at law, Winchester, Ind., was born in Preble County, Ohio, March 16, 1843. His father, John Stakebake, and his mother, Anna (Clark) Stakebake, were both natives of Pennsylvania, removing from near Harrisburg to Preble County, Ohio, while quite young, where they were afterward married, and settled on a farm. Mr. Stakebake was a millwright, and devoted most of his time to his trade, while his wife, a lady of excellent executive ability, managed the affairs of the farm. They were the parents of seven sons and four daughters, the subject of this sketch being the seventh child. The family removed to Randolph County, Ind., in 1853, and settled on a farm four miles south of Winchester. The youthful days of Andrew J. were spent much as the average farmer's son of that day, in clearing and preparing the ground for cultivation and producing crops for the maintenance of the family. He had very little opportunity for gaining education, as the public schools did not continue more than from two to three months per year, and circumstances often hindered him from gaining all the benefits of even this limited time. At the breaking-out of the rebellion he determined to volunteer, and, upon August 5, 1861, he returned to his old neighborhood in Ohio, and enlisted as a private in Company E, Thirty-fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Although but a boy in years, he entered heartily into the campaigns, and willingly shared the hardships of a soldier's life. He participated with his regiment in many severe conflicts, among the more noted of which are Mill Springs, Pittsburg Landing and Shiloh, siege of Corinth, Stone River, Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge, escaping unhurt until the last-named, during which he was wounded four times, one of which was very severe, breaking his left arm, on account of which he remains an invalid. Not recovering sufficiently for duty, he was honorably discharged October 17, 1864. After his return, he attended school at Winchester for two years, after which he engaged in teaching in the public schools for three years. In 1869, he was appointed Deputy County Treasurer, and served until he was elected County School Examiner, June 5, 1871, the duties of which office he discharged with ability and success one term. During the entire time from his discharge to this date, he had been preparing himself as best he could for the practice of law, having to pay his way by teaching or other labor, and study at brief intervals, as opportunity offered. He has since been actively engaged in the practice of his chosen profession, and always with ability and success. He married Miss Ann Elizabeth Jaqua, daughter of Dr. Charles Jaqua, of Winchester, Ind., December 26, 1871, a lady of most excellent character and social qualities. The union has been a happy one; they have a pleasant home, and a daughter and son of bright promise—Mary and Neal B. Mr. Stakebake is a pronounced Republican, though never engaged largely in politics. He is not a member of any church, but liberal in his views toward all. He is a member of I. O. O. F., taking high rank in the order. His business life has been very successful. He is in all respects a self-made man, of excellent qualifications, which give promise of still greater usefulness in the future.

as Deputy Surveyor under E. C. Hiatt, and was elected County Surveyor in 1878, and re-elected in 1880. He has grown up in this community, and is well and favorably known throughout the county. He is in all respects a self-made man, having worked his way from comparative poverty to a comfortable position. He has been very successful in his business ventures, and although still a young man, has amassed a fortune that places him above the possibility of want. He is honorable and upright in all his dealings, and possesses the confidence and esteem of all with whom he is associated. In politics, he is identified with the Republican party, and has always taken an active and hearty interest in its success.

JOHN H. GILL was born June 23, 1850, in the town of Wellington, Lorain Co., Ohio. His father, James M. Gill, was a native of Ireland, but came to the United States when a young man, and located in the town of Wellington, where he married Miss Clarissa Allen in 1849. He was a contractor, and was prominently connected with the construction of many important public works, such as bridges, railroads, etc. In 1855, he removed, with his family, to Iowa, where he had the contract for constructing locks in the Des Moines River. Before completing this work, however, he met with with an accident which resulted in his death, in 1857. John H., the subject of this sketch, was but seven years of age at the time of his father's decease, and at an early age learned to depend upon his own exertions for a livelihood. He attended the common schools until sixteen years of age, and then entered upon an apprenticeship at the wagon-maker's trade, at Ottumwa, Iowa. After acquiring proficiency in this line, he located at Lincoln, Neb., where he was engaged one year. The older States offered better wages for mechanics of his guild, and he decided to move eastward. In 1869, he located at Anderson, Ind., and for the next four years was engaged at his trade in that city. In 1871, he was married, at Anderson, Ind., to Miss Margaret Smith, and two years later (July, 1873), came to Winchester, with whose manufacturing industries he has since been prominently identified. He purchased the wagon shop of L. D. Carter, and for a short time conducted the business alone. Subsequently, however, Mr. Carter became partner with him. They employed several workmen, and enjoyed an extended trade, until the organization of the Winchester Wagon Works and Manufacturing Company, when both gentlemen subscribed to the latter organization, and made its interests their own. This establishment is, perhaps, the most extensive of all the manufacturing industries of Winchester, and, although a new enterprise, occupies its place among the important manufactories of Eastern Indiana. Mr. Gill has personal supervision of the wood-working department, a position for which he is specially qualified by his proficiency in this branch of mechanics. He is yet a young man, and his life just in its prime. From early boyhood it has been marked by industry, and by honest toil he has accumulated a comfortable estate. He has a cozy little home, made happy by the presence of a loving and devoted wife, and two daughters—Lizzie and Clara. Among his fellow-citizens he is recognized as an upright, honorable man, and possesses the esteem and confidence of all who know him. He united with the Odd Fellows fraternity at Winchester, in 1873, and has passed all the chairs of the subordinate lodge and encampment. At the session of the Grand Lodge of Indiana, held in November, 1880, he was the representative from his lodge, and represented the encampment at Winchester during the session of the Grand Encampment held at Indianapolis in May, 1882. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias Lodge, and active in his fraternal relations. He was made a Mason at Winchester in 1879, and has reached the degree of Master Mason.

GEORGE W. HELMS was born December 18, 1823, in Marion County Ind. In 1826, his parents removed, with their family, to Montgomery County, Ohio, where the father died in 1829. In 1838, the subject of this sketch accompanied his mother to Randolph County, Ind., where he has ever since continued to reside. He enjoyed a common school education, and grew up with a taste for mechanics. Until 1851, he remained on the farm, six miles northwest of Winchester, but came to this town in that year, and became the partner of Lewis Walker in the cabinet business, and was subsequently associated with John W. Diggs in the same business. In 1863, he began the practice of the photographer's art, which he continued until 1866. In that year, he embarked in mercantile pursuits, in partnership with John Richardson, and at a later date was associated with Dennis Kelly. In 1875, he formed a partnership with Joseph Bishop in the hardware business, at which he is still engaged. In 1879, the firm of Helms & Bishop added the grain business to their pursuits, and in this have been very successful. June 4, 1854, Mr. Helms was united in marriage with Miss Almira Hiatt, daughter of George Hiatt, Esq., a highly respected citizen of this county. He is a competent business man, and by industry and close attention to his pursuits, has amassed a comfortable estate. In his early political life, Mr. Helms was identified with the Whig party, and arrayed himself with the anti-slavery element, being a pronounced Abolitionist. Upon the rise of the Republican party, he embraced its principles, and has ever since been among its active supporters. He has taken an active part in the temperance movement, and is recognized among the friends of that cause. He has lived an upright, moral life, and by his fair and honorable dealings has established himself in the confidence of his fellow-citizens, among whom he is highly esteemed.

DANIEL E. HOFFMAN was born November 2, 1838, in Lebanon County, Penn. He acquired a good common school education in his boyhood, and when a young man of twenty years of age, had become proficient as a marble cutter. He was engaged at his trade in Buffalo, N. Y., and afterward traveled quite extensively. In 1857, he passed through Winchester, Ind., en route to Fort Wayne, and in 1858 returned to Winchester, where he has ever since continued to reside. He began business here as a marble-cutter and dealer, in the old court house, which then stood north of the public square, and subsequently removed to his present location at the northwest corner of Washington and Meridian streets. Since that time he has been the only dealer in his line in Winchester, having purchased the establishment of his only competitors soon after locating here. He is an enterprising, industrious business man, and by his untiring energy has worked his trade up to satisfactory and lucrative proportions in this community. He has succeeded well in life from a financial point, and is essentially a self-made man. Without assistance of a pecuniary nature from any one, he has worked his way from humble circumstances to a position of affluence, and by his industry alone has carved out a comfortable fortune. He is yet in the prime of a vigorous manhood, and gives fair promise of attaining yet many years of usefulness and activity. He has taken an active interest in the agricultural and horticultural development of this community, and for several years has served as Secretary of the Agricultural Society of Randolph County, and has attended several meetings of the State Horticultural Society as a delegate. He has been a member of the Executive Committee of that society for several years, and is now one of its Vice Presidents. He is an enthusiastic horticulturist, and has done as much, perhaps, as any one in Randolph County to awaken an interest and encourage improvement in this matter. As a citizen, Mr. Hoffman is highly respected, and enjoys the esteem and good-will of all who know him. He is modest and retiring in manner, and thoroughly honorable in all his dealings. He has never been prominently identified with the political history of this locality, though he is an active Republican, and works to the extent of his influence for the success of the party. He has never sought public office, but was once prevailed upon to serve as Marshal of the town of Winchester. He was married, in 1862 to Miss Angeline Carter, a native of Randolph County, and daughter of Ed. Carter. By this union they are the parents of five children, only two of whom now survive. Mr. Hoffman has an elegant home in the south part of Winchester, surrounded with the comforts of life, and presided over by the devoted wife who has been a helpmate to him in his efforts, and a potent factor in his success.

JOSEPH C. HIRSCH was born October 26, 1836, at Wurtemberg, Germany, and came to the United States with his father's family in 1845, locating in New York City, from whence he removed to Syracuse, N. Y., in 1846. In 1847, the family removed to Hamilton, Ohio, and in 1849, to Dayton. The father was a dyer, and was engaged at that pursuit both before and after his emigration to America. He had a family of nine children, six of whom now survive, and five of this number now reside at Dayton, Ohio. Joseph C. was but nine years of age when he came to the United States, but at that early age he began to earn money by his daily work. He found employment as "stripper" in a cigar factory in New York, continuing this line of employment until the removal of the family from that city, and walking four miles to his work. At Hamilton, Ohio, he found employment in the drug store of Jacobs & Brown. Subsequently he occupied the position of clerk in the wholesale drug house of Birdsall Brothers, for two and a half years, and for eleven years was a clerk in the drug store of J. A. Walters, at Dayton, Ohio. In his life as a clerk he proved himself faithful and capable, developing good business talents, and gaining the confidence and good-will of his employers. He was prudent and economical, saving his earnings with the view of engaging in business for himself. In 1863, he came to Winchester, and opened a drug and book store, which he has since continued to conduct, enjoying a very successful and satisfactory trade. His house is, perhaps, the oldest in its line in Winchester, and its proprietor is well and favorably known throughout the county. In April, 1863, he was married to Miss Fanny H. Snyder, an estimable young lady, who is still spared to him, to preside over his happy home. In politics Mr. Hirsch is identified with the Democratic party. He is not, however, a very active partisan, and has never aspired to public office, though he has served several years as a member of the Town Council, discharging, at the same time, the duties of President and Clerk of that body. He is a thorough business man, and by his prudent management has acquired a comfortable fortune.

JONATHAN S. HIATT was born March 1, 1840, in Henry County, Ind.; his father, Silas Hiatt, and his grandfather, Jonathan Hiatt, were both early pioneers of Randolph County, locating here about the year 1818. His father removed to Henry Connty, Ind., in 1836, and after several changes of location, died in Wabash County, Ind., about the year 1854, having settled in that county in 1848. He had a family of nine children, four of whom now survive. During his life, he was engaged in agricultural pursuits, and was an energetic and highly respected citizen. Jonathan S., the subject of this sketch, came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1856, and has made this county his home ever since. For a few years he was engaged at various branches of employment until the outbreak of the late rebellion. He enlisted on the 19th of August, 1861, and was discharged from the service on the 21st of September, 1865; his company became Company F, of the Eighth Indiana Regiment, and Mr. Hiatt served with it until the close of the war, passing through the ordeal of war unharmed, although often in the thickest of the fray. He re-enlisted as a veteran at Indianola, Texas, early in 1864, and came home on a furlough of thirty days, this being the first leave of absence he had taken since entering the service. He entered the army as a private soldier, but was promoted to the rank of a non-commissioned officer, and was also acting Lieutenant; he participated with his regiment in the battles of Sugar Creek, Ark.; Pea Ridge, Ark., March 6–8, 1862; Cotton Plant, Ark., July 7, 1862; Austin, Miss., August, 1862; Port Gibson, Miss., May 1, 1863; Champion Hills, Miss., May 16, 1863; Big Black, Miss., May 17, 1863; Vicksburg, Miss., May 18—July 4, 1863; Mustang Island, Texas, November 17, 1863; Fort Esperanza, Texas, November 27, 1863; Carrion Crow Bayou; Atchafalaya, La., July 28, 1864; Winchester, Va., September 19, 1864; Fisher's Hill, Va., September 22, 1864; New Market, Va., September 23, 1864; Cedar Creek, Va., October 19, 1864; Opequan, W. Va., November 19, 1864. After the close of the war, he came to Winchester, and resumed work at the carpenter's trade, having learned this trade in early life. He was thus engaged, at intervals, until 1878, and in the meantime was interested as partner in a saw-mill for eighteen months. In 1878, he purchased the news-stand at the post office, and is still engaged in the management of this enterprise, conducting a very satisfactory trade in the daily papers, periodicals, books, stationery, etc. On the 8th of September, 1866, he was married to Miss Louisa J. Hiatt, daughter of Amos Hiatt, an early settler and prominent citizen of Randolph County. By this union they are the parents of three children, two of whom—Clara Alice and Mary Ethel now survive. In politics, Mr. Hiatt is a Republican, having been identified with the Abolitionists in former times. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and has taken all the degrees of the subordinate lodge and encampment, and represented his lodge as a member of the Grand Lodge of Indiana.

ENOS R. HIATT was born May 17, 1861, near Farmland, Randolph Co., Ind. His father, Eli Hiatt, removed with his family to Missouri, where he died in 1869, his wife remaining there until 1873, when she returned with her family to Randolph County, locating within four miles of Farmland. The subject of this sketch rented a portion of his grandfather's farm, which he cultivated during the years 1875 and 1876, and in 1877, came to Winchester, where he was engaged at sign painting and similar employment until the winter of 1879. At that time he began to learn the art of photography with James Charles. In April, 1880, after three months, he purchased the gallery and accessories of Mr. Charles, and has ever since conducted the business successfully at the old stand. He is a young man of great energy, and exhibits good business traits in the conduct of his gallery. He is enthusiastic and enterprising in the prosecution of his chosen work, and merits the patronage and encouragement of the public.

GEORGE W. IRVIN.

George W. Irvin was born April 7, 1816, in Bedford County, Va. His father, John Irvin, was a native of Pennsylvania, but removed to Virginia when a young man, and was there engaged at the trade of house carpenter and painter. He was married in Virginia, to Margaret Wysong, a native of that State, and in 1818, removed with his family to Randolph County, Ind. He entered a tract of government land, from which he developed a fine farm. He died in this county, in 1874, in the ninety-seventh year of his age. George, the subject of this sketch, was but an infant when his father located in this county, and grew up amid the scenes of pioneer life, and shared the trials peculiar to a frontier settlement. He acquired his primary education in the rude winter schools of his day, and builded upon the meager knowledge thus attained, by patient study at home, and by experience in later life. He learned to work at an early age, and during his youth, rendered valuable assistance in clearing and improving the home farm. At the age of twenty-four years, in 1840, he was united in marriage with Miss Eliza Ann Quinn, in Preble County, Ohio, and in September of the same year, became a partner with his father in the cultivation and profits of the home farm. In 1852, he purchased a farm in Washington Township, upon which some slight improvements had been made, and here he was engaged independently in the pursuit of farming until the spring of 1872, when he retired from active labor, and located at Winchester. By energy and industry he earned a competence, in his younger days, to sustain him in the declining years of life. He has been a citizen of Randolph County since its earliest pioneer days, and has borne his share of the burden and expense attaching to the many public improvements which have been instituted in the meantime, contributing liberally to all enterprises having for their object the public welfare of the county. In the varied fortunes of his earlier life his trials were shared by the loving wife, who still lives to bless his later years, and share the success attained by their mutual efforts. To bless their wedded life there were three children, viz.: Frances Josephine, Calvin Oscar, and Alice, all of whom are now living. By an upright, honorable life, Mr. Irvin has won and retained the highest regard of all with whom he has been associated, and while not a member of any church, his life has been exemplary of the principles of Christianity, in which he is a devout believer. His wife was born in Preble County, Ohio, September 10, 1821, and was reared on a farm, learning by daily experience the principles that made her a helpmate to her husband in later life. In the community where she has so long resided, she has won the affectionate regard of all who know her, by her many acts of kindness, and has always been the friend of the poor and distressed.

SYLVESTER O. IRVIN was born December 26, 1827, in Randolph County, Ind., two and a half miles southwest of Winchester. His father, John Irvin, was one of the earliest pioneers of this county. He removed from Virginia to Ohio in 1818, and from that State to Indiana in 1819, locating in Randolph County. He purchased the northeast quarter of Section 6, in Township 19, (White River), and afterward entered a tract of 120 acres, and for more than a half century he resided in this county, witnessing the many changes and improvements that took place within that period. He died in 1874, aged about ninety-seven years. Sylvester, the subject of this sketch, is one of a family of eleven children. He was reared amid the scenes that marked the earliest pioneer history of this county, and has always remained one of its citizens. He enjoyed fine educational advantages in his youth, attending the Winchester Seminary, also the seminary at Muncie, and completed his school life at Asbury University, Green Castle, Ind. After leaving school, he taught two terms, then adopted the profession of dentistry, at which he was engaged for seven years, (from 1850 to 1857). Returning then to the home farm, he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1870. In that year he returned to Winchester, and embarked in the manufacture of cigars on quite an extensive scale. Four years later he sold out and retired from this pursuit, and after a year spent on the home farm, became the proprietor of the Irvin House at Winchester. He has ever since conducted this business with marked success. He is a genial and popular landlord, and by his excellent management, has established a reputation for his house which secures him a goodly share of the public patronage. Mr. Irvin has long been one of the leading citizens of this community, and is widely known. By a life of industry and honorable dealing, he has gained the confidence and high regard of all who know him, and is in all respects a good citizen, and a worthy member of society. In politics, he is identified with the Democratic party, and, for the past eight years, has occupied the position of Secretary of the Democratic Central Committee of Randolph County. He was married, in 1851, to Sarah J., daughter of James Quinn, a prominent farmer of Preble County, Ohio. She has been a devoted helpmate to him in the years that have followed, and still lives to cheer his later life, and share with him the regard of the community and a large circle of friends.

THOMAS KLINCK, Sr., was born January 23, 1822, in the Kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, his native town being Enzberg, Maulbron County. He acquired a good common school education, and, at the age of eighteen, began an apprenticeship at the wagon-maker's trade, of which he became a master. In 1848, he emigrated to the United States, remaining in New York City but a short time, and removing to Columbus, Ohio, in the same year. He found employment at his trade in that city, and, throughout the years that have followed, he has been steadily engaged at this pursuit. He was married, at Columbus, in 1849, to Mrs. Catharine (Fay) Halz, and in 1852, came to Randolph County, Ind., locating at Winchester. Since his arrival here, he has gained many friends by his straightforward, honest ways, and by industry and energy, has accumulated a comfortable fortune. He is recognized as a good citizen in all respects, and is honored and esteemed by all who know him. His son, Thomas Klinck, Jr., was born in 1850, at Columbus, Ohio. He is now engaged as a clerk in the drug store of J. C. Hirsch, at Winchester. Joseph Martin Halz, step-son of Mr. Klinck, was born February 22, 1845, at Canal Winchester, Franklin Co., Ohio, and is now engaged at the wagon-maker's trade. The father and sons are active members of the Masonic fraternity.

JOSEPH S. KEMP, a successful merchant of Winchester, was born July 28, 1854, in White River Township, Randolph Co., Ind. He was reared on a farm, and received a common school education. When seventeen years of age, he accepted the position of clerk in the dry goods house of H. D. Bowen, at Chicago, Ill., and was thus engaged for four years. He then spent a year in the gold mines of the Black Hills, and, at the end of that time, returned to his native county. In December, 1878, he embarked in the dry goods trade at Winchester, and within three years afterward his business had increased to very satisfactory proportions, and he was regarded one of the leading merchants of the town. He now contemplates the removal of his stock to another locality, where, no doubt, his industry and energy will meet with success as flattering as that which has attended his career in this town.

RICHARD A. LEAVELL.

Richard A. Leavell, dealer in real estate, Winchester, Ind., was born in Henry County, Ind., December 20, 1841. His father, James M. Leavell, was born in Virginia, but removed, when quite young, with his parents, to Kentucky. Staying there but a short time, the family removed to Henry County, Ind., about the time of the organization of the county, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch being the first Sheriff of the county. His mother, Ruth (Corwine) Leavell, was a native of Kentucky, but removed with her parents, when quite young, to Henry County, Ind. The parents of Richard A. removed to Randolph County in 1848, and settled on a tract of 160 acres in the green woods just north of where the town of Parker now stands, where the youthful days of our subject were employed in the necessary duties of aiding in clearing the paternal homestead, and producing a support for the family. His opportunities for obtaining school education were quite limited, yet being of studious turn of mind, he made the most of his surroundings, and completed the common school course of that day. Upon the breaking out of the rebellion, he enlisted as a private in Company E, Thirty-sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He served with his regiment through the full term of his enlistment, participating in many of the most hard-fought battles of the war, among the first of which were the battle of Shiloh and siege of Corinth, spring of 1862. In the fall of 1862, Mr. Leavell was stricken with disease, and passed several months in the hospital at Bowling Green, Ky., and at home, on furlough, before recovering. In the spring of 1863, he rejoined his regiment, and participated in the sanguinary campaigns of 1863–64, the more important battles of which his regiment was engaged in being Chickamauga, Lookout-Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Ringgold, Dalton and Resaca. He was severely wounded May 27, 1864, at Dallas, Ga, his right arm being shot through; this casuality returned him to the hospital at Evansville. He never returned to his regiment until it returned home, not recovering sufficiently, but was mustered out with it at Indianapolis September 21, 1864. After his discharge from the army, he engaged in farming one year, and then attended Liber College, Jay County, Ind., one year, and the Winchester High School six months, after which, he was engaged in the public schools of his county as teacher until 1872, when he was nominated by the Republicans, and elected Clerk of Randolph Circuit Court, the responsible duties of which office he discharged in a manner highly creditable to himself for four years. Since the expiration of his official term, he has been engaged in the real estate business. In 1870, October 2, he was united in marriage with Miss Sarelda J. Lewis, daughter of C. W. Lewis, of Monroe Township, a lady of most excellent character, who only survived a few months, dying July 7, 1871, leaving a babe only one week old to the care of the bereaved father. On the 7th of September, 1873, he was married to Miss Mary M. Barnes, of Spartansburg, Ind., a lady of fine social qualities, who has proved, in all respects, a worthy companion. They have two living children. Mr. and Mrs. Leavell are both members of the Methodist Church, Mr. L. of the I. O. O. F., Knights af Honor, and the Grand Army of the Republic. He is an active, energetic, enterprising citizen, holding high position in the regards of his many friends and neighbors. His oldest, and the only child by his first wife, is named Minnie S., and was born June 30, 1871. Neal B., by his second wife, was born September 2, 1875. Jessie M. was born August 5, 1878, and died April 29, 1880. John C. was born October 6, 1882.

CHARLES L. LEWIS, ESQ.

Charles L., son of John and Elizabeth E. Lewis, was born in 1854, near the village of Unionsport, Randolph Co., Ind. He grew up like the average farmer boy, attending school during the winter, and working on the home farm during the remainder of the year. In 1872, when only eighteen years of age, President Grant appointed him Vice Consul to the port of Glasgow, Scotland, in which capacity he served two years. Returning home at the end of that time, he entered the law department of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he remained two terms. He located at Winchester in 1877, was admitted to the bar of Randolph County, and entered at once upon the practice of his profession. In 1878, he was elected Justice of the Peace, and served in that capacity four years. Since that time he has devoted his time exclusively to practice of his profession, in which he is steadily rising. In politics his affiliations are with the Republican party, and as a worker in the ranks he has rendered effective service. He is yet young, and in the ordinary course of events a long life lies before him in which to achieve success and win renown in his profession. He is energetic and industrious, and by his devotion to the practice has gained a fair start on the road to fortune, and at the same time has grown in the estimation of all with whom he has been associated. Mr. Lewis was married in 1878, to Miss Elleanor Allison, daughter of Ralph Allison, a highly respected citizen of Randolph County, Ind. By this union they are the parents of one child, named Erman G. Lewis.

O. F. LUELLEN.

Oliver F. Luellen was born August 5, 1841, at Rodgersville, Henry Co., Ind. His father, Jabesh Luellen, was a native of West Virginia, and came with his parents to Henry County, Ind., when about nineteen years of age. He married Mary Macy, a native of Tennessee, and daughter of Jonathan Macy, who was one of the pioneers of Wayne County, Ind. The father and mother are both deceased; the former died at Newcastle, Ind., in 1877, and the latter at the same place in 1880. Oliver, the subject of this sketch, is the third in a family of six children. His early life was quiet and uneventful, being made up chiefly of the duties of farm life. He attended school in the winter, acquiring a good practical education. When he had reached the twentieth year of his age, the sounds of civil war were heard in the land, and he was among the first to offer his services in defense of the flag, under the call of President Lincoln for volunteers for the three years' service. He enlisted in August, 1861, as a private in Company C, of the Thirty-sixth Indiana Regiment, and marched with his comrades to the field. They were assigned to duty in Kentucky, with the Army of the Ohio. After a service of more than two years, Mr. Luellen was honorably discharged on account of impaired health. The hardships of soldier life broke down his vigorous constitution, and disabled him, for awhile, for duty. After resting at home for about six months, he came to Winchester, and enlisted in the One Hundred and Forty-seventh Regiment for one year. Prior to the expiration of this term, however, the war closed, and he was mustered out. During his period of service, he participated in the battles of Pittsburg Landing, Murfreesboro and Stone River, in addition to numerous skirmishes and minor engagements, and rose from the position of a private soldier to the rank of Orderly Sergeant. While in camp at Indianapolis, he obtained a short leave of absence, and during this time was united in marriage with Miss Sarah L. Hudson, a native of Boston, Mass., then residing with her parents in Ross County, Ohio. The wedding took place in February, 1865, and immediately afterward Mr. Luellen returned to his regiment. After the close of the war, he entered the service of the "Bee Line" Railway Company, remaining in their employ for about eight years. Finally, he met with an accident on the road, by which he was permanently crippled, and was forced to retire from that position. From that time until 1880, he was engaged in various pursuits, and in the spring of that year was nominated by the Republicans for the office of Recorder of Randolph County, a position to which he was elected in the fall of that year. He took charge of this office in August, 1881, and has discharged his duties with commendable zeal and fidelity. He is a genial, whole-souled gentleman, and both in his public capacity and private life has won many friends.

GEORGE W. LONGNECKER, son of John and Magdaline (Bowman) Longnecker, was born November 18, 1855, in Washington Township, Randolph Co., Ind. His parents were natives of Pennsylvania, and were married in that State. In 1854, they removed with their family to Randolph County, Ind., locating in Washington Township, where the father purchased a farm. The land was partially cleared when he bought it, but he made numerous improvements during his ownership. He died in 1858, respected by all who knew him. His wife still survives. George W., the subject of this sketch, was reared on the home farm, and at an early age learned to follow the plow, and perform the various duties incident to farming. The farm was under the management of his elder brothers, and until nineteen years of age he remained at home, assisting them, and attending the district schools in winter. When nineteen years of age, he came to Winchester, and entered upon an apprenticeship at the tailor's trade with R. Thornburg, finishing with Thomas Sommers, with whom he remained until 1879. In that year, he engaged in business for himself, and has continued successfully ever since. He has devoted himself to his work with an assiduity that has accomplished good results, and gained him popular favor as a tailor. As a neighbor and friend he is highly esteemed, and among all who know him he is recognized as a young man of honor and sterling integrity. He is an active member of the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of Pythias, having taken all the degrees of the latter order. On June 5, 1878, he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Lamb, an estimable young lady. They are the parents of one son, Edward S. Mrs. Longnecker is the daughter of Smith Lamb, Esq., who served with an Illinois regiment during the late war, and lost his life in defense of the Union.

GEORGE E. LEGGETT was born January 13, 1857, at Alliance, Ohio. His father, Rev. John D. Leggett, was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, moving from place to place with his family, at the call of the Conference to which he was attached, seldom remaining more than three years at one place. His son attended school in the various towns to which his father was assigned, passing a large portion of his time in the State of Pennsylvania, and completing his school days at Mount Union College, Mount Union, Ohio. In 1876, he came to Winchester to represent his father's interest in the flouring mill of Bates, Brothers & Co., and upon attaining his majority, succeeded his father in the firm. This relation still continues. On September 29, 1880 Mr. Leggett was united in marriage with Miss Dora A., daughter of John Ross, Esq., of Winchester. In the same year, he became a member of Winchester Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and in 1881 entered the lodge and Encampment of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Winchester. He is a young man of fine business qualifications, industrious and energetic, and is regarded by all who know him as one of the substantial and reliable young men of this community.

WILLIAM LENKESTERFER was born at the town of Steinau, Hesse-Cassel, Germany, in 1845, and came to the United States in 1861. The voyage was made in a sailing vessel, and occupied eight weeks. He remained but a short time in New York, coming directly to Winchester, Ind., where his uncle, John Lenkesterfer then resided. He learned the cabinet-maker's trade with his uncle, and worked at that trade until 1863. In the meantime, he had become familiar with American politics, and comprehended the merits of the struggle then raging between the North and South, and with the love of right so characteristic of his race, he volunteered his services in defense of the Union. He enlisted in Company G, of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Regiment, in 1863, and served until the fall of 1865, when he was honorably discharged. Returning from the army, he resumed work at his trade, and was thus engaged until 1873. Since that time he has been engaged as a drayman at Winchester. In the spring of 1881, he was elected Marshal of the town of Winchester, and was afterward appointed Street Commissioner, in which capacity he served some time. He is an honest, industrious citizen, and is esteemed by all who know him. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and in politics is a Republican. He was married in 1869, to Miss Margaret Ludy, daughter of Henry Ludy, Esq., of Winchester. By this union they are the parents of six children, all of whom are now living.

JOHN MONKS.

John Monks was one among the early pioneers of this county, and the father of a family whose members have borne a prominent part in its subsequent history. He was born in one of the great cotton manufacturing districts of England, and at an early age learned the art of weaving. When a young man, he came to the United States, and found employment at his trade. Early in the year 1820, he came to Randolph County, Ind., locating one and one-half miles south of Winchester. He had no knowledge of farming, and was ill prepared for the labors of pioneer life, and beyond an occasional job of carding wool for some of his neighbors, he found no work at his trade. In the tiresome drudgery of clearing his farm, building fences, and chopping brush, much of the burden was borne by his wife, who, although from one of the aristocratic families of Kentucky, knew more than her husband about farm work. There was little demand for mechanics of his guild in this thinly settled region, and his first few years in the wilderness were years of hardship, anxiety and toil. He possessed the sturdy English disposition in a marked degree, and determined to make the best of his surroundings. Little by little he succeeded in clearing his farm and deriving a revenue from its products, and little by little he enlarged its boundaries until he possessed quite a good estate. He became a prominent and well-known citizen in the community, and being an industrious and energetic man, gained the respect and esteem of all his neighbors. He learned, in time many of the details of agricultural life, and became quite a successful farmer, although his attention was given chiefly to carding—this industry increasing as the settlement of the county progressed, affording him less time for out-door work, and causing the management of the farm to devolve almost entirely upon his sons. He was active and enterprising, and was counted one of the leading citizens of the community. He died on his farm in this county in 1849, his wife surviving him until 1861. Their remains now lie at rest under the soil they cultivated, and which was all their own. Among the pioneers who have passed away, none, perhaps, were ever more truly mourned than this couple, for they won and ever retained the kindest regards of all with whom they were associated in life. They were the parents of seven sons, named respectively George W., Walter S., Richard T., John, Christopher Columbus and William, and two daughters—Margaret and Susan. Of the sons, George W., Walter S., John and William are now deceased.

GEORGE W. MONKS.

George Washington, eldest son of John and Matilda (Elder) Monks, was born April 25, 1814, near Cincinnati, Ohio. He came to Randolph County, Ind., with his parents, in 1820, and grew to manhood amid the scenes that marked the pioneer period of this county's history. By diligent application, assisted by a few terms in the log schools of that period, he acquired a good English education, which, added to a naturally fine intellect and good judgment, fitted him for the stations which he was afterward called to occupy. While growing up, he devoted a large share of his time to the clearing and improving of the home farm, to spare his mother as much as possible the necessity of performing work so far removed from her proper sphere. As his younger brothers grew up and were able to manage and cultivate the farm, he began to look about for the means of earning an independent livelihood. He taught school two terms—first in a log schoolhouse on the David Wysong farm, and afterward in the vicinity of the farm of John Robinson, now known as the Kemp farm. But he preferred a more active avocation than school teaching, and removing to Winchester in 1836, found employment in the store of Michael Aker, one of the leading merchants of early days. He developed fine business talents, and at once began to take a leading and active part in civil and political affairs. While acting in the capacity of clerk for Mr. Aker, and while scarcely more than a boy in years, he was selected by the Whig party as their candidate for Clerk of Randolph County. At the election which followed, he was elected by a flattering majority, succeeding Charles Conway, who retired after a service of twenty-one years (three terms). In 1846, at the expiration of his first term,

Mr. Monks was re-elected, and served until 1853. Upon the election of his successor, he became Deputy Clerk, serving in that capacity until 1861. Mr. Monks was an efficient and able man in whatever capacity he acted, and in his hands the affairs of the Clerk's office were well administered. After his long service in this capacity, he was called by his fellow-citizens to fill other trusts, in the discharge of which he displayed the same conscientious fidelity. He was selected by Gov. Wright to serve as one of the delegates from Indiana to the World's Fair, held in the city of New York, and was commissioned as such in May, 1853. In 1854, the Republican party in this county was organized by a coalition of the anti-slavery Whigs and the Free-Soil party. At a mass convention held at Winchester in that year, he was nominated by acclamation for Representative in the General Assembly, thus becoming the first Republican nominee from this county for a legislative office. He was elected in the fall, and took a prominent and active part in the session of 1854–55. He was a very pronounced temperance man, and was identified with the temperance legislation of that session, voting for the prohibitory law of 1855, by which it was made illegal for any one but an authorized County Agent to sell liquor, the intent of the law being that none should be sold, except for medical purposes. He served but one term in the Legislature, but his entire career in this capacity was marked by the greatest fidelity to the trust reposed in him, and the most unwavering devotion to the best interests of the public and his constituency. He had studied law, and after his admission to the bar associated himself in the practice with Carey S. Goodrich, which relation continued for a short time. He afterward entered into partnership with Judge James Brown, with whom he continued to practice until his decease. Perhaps no man among all the citizens of early days was more widely known, and certainly none were ever more universally respected and honored. He was one in whose integrity and honor the utmost confidence was reposed by every one who knew him, and he never betrayed a trust, however insignificant it might be. So marked was the confidence reposed in him that people from all parts of the county came to him with money for which they had no immediate use, placing it in his hands for safe-keeping, and taking no security whatever. He was a public-spirited, whole-souled man, and ever wide-awake to the interests of the public. He was identified with most of the public improvements instituted during his life, and contributed generously of his means to all enterprises having in view the ultimate benefit of the county, such as railroads, turnpikes, etc. He was particularly the friend of public education. He was called the best mathematician in the county, and was proficient in all the branches that go to make up a good education. But his knowledge was acquired under the most trying disadvantages, and he was unceasing in his efforts to encourage and build up educational facilities within the reach of all. He was industrious and energetic, and while he enjoyed a considerable income, he never possessed the disposition to hoard his earnings, and acquired only a moderate amount of property. He was unselfish in his use of money, spending it in many ways where it would lighten the burden of a fellow-mortal less fortunate than himself, and always happiest when he was able to afford relief and pleasure to others. This seemed to be his idea of the use of money, and having provided well for his family, he had no inclination to amass a fortune. His first residence in Winchester still stands at the east end of North street, where he lived for a number of years, his residence property extending as far north as the "Bee Line" railroad, and as far south as the present residence of Col. M. B. Miller. In 1849, he sold this residence and purchased the land upon which Gen. A. Stone now lives. The tract contained about fifty acres, a part of which he divided into lots, and laid out as the South Addition to the town of Winchester. He left the impress of his identity upon the moral, educational and material interests of this county, and was in all respects one of its foremost and best citizens. In 1843, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church under the ministrations of Rev. John H. Hull, and in all his after life was a consistent Christian. His house, which was ever open to the wayfarer in need of hospitality, was especially the home of the itinerant minister, who found there royal entertainment and a hearty welcome. In 1845, he united with the Masonic fraternity at Winchester, progressing as far as the Royal Arch degree. He was active in his fraternal relations, and was a valued member of the lodge. He took an active interest in the development of the agricultural resources of the county, and was one of the leaders in the organization of its first agricultural society. He served as Treasurer of that society from 1852 to 1857, and was a member of the State Board of Agriculture for a number of years. Mr. Monks was twice married. First on the 19th of November, 1837, to Miss Belinda Hulitt. By this union they were the parents of two sons, one of whom died in infancy. Charles, the surviving son, still lives in this county. In later years, he was called to mourn the death of the wife of his early manhood, and on the 18th of August, 1842, was united in marriage with Miss Mary A. Irvin, daughter of Robert Irvin, an early settler and prominent citizen of Randolph County. This second union was blessed by seven children, named respectively Leander J., Mary E., George W., J. Irvin, Viola, Minerva B. and Segel. On the 18th of September, 1864, Death again invaded his household, claiming the wife for his victim. Subsequently, the father purchased land in Minnesota, with the intention of locating in that State with his family. He made a preparatory visit and came back to Winchester with the purpose of removing his family to the new home in the summer of 1865, but before his plans could be consummated he fell ill, and on the 4th of April, 1865, his active life closed in death, and his remains were laid to rest beneath the soil of the county of which he was so prominently a part. He was universally mourned when his death was made known, for his fellow-citizens knew that a good man was gone—one whose place it would be hard to fill. His memory is fresh in the hearts of all who knew him, though his form shall greet them no more.

C. C. MONKS.

Christopher Columbus, son of John Monks, was born April 10, 1827, in Randolph County, Ind.; until he reached the age of sixteen years, he was engaged in the performance of farm work, at his father's farm in this county, acquiring, in the meantime, a good common school education. In 1843, he became an apprentice at the cabinet-maker's trade, and for the next ten years was engaged at that occupation. Subsequently, he worked five years at the carpenter's trade, after which he embarked in mercantile pursuits. He was engaged in the dry goods trade one year, and in the grocery trade one year, conducting a very satisfactory and profitable business. After retiring from mercantile life, he resumed work at the carpenter's trade, at which he was engaged for two years. In 1869, he opened a meat market at Winchester, and has ever since continued in this line of employment. He has always attended closely to his business, and by good management has succeeded in accumulating a very comfortable estate. He is industrious and energetic, and enters enthusiastically into the spirit of any work at which he is engaged. He has been blessed with remarkable health, having never lost a day from his work on account of physical disability. He is respected and esteemed as an honorable, upright citizen, and enjoys the confidence of the community. He is a member of the Odd Fellows fraternity at Winchester, and in politics is identified with the Republican party. He was married, in 1853, to Miss Frances E. Batchfield. By this union they are the parents of five children, three of whom are now living—Minnie, Lizzie and Eddie.

HON. DANIEL B. MILLER.

Daniel B. Miller was born in Litchfield County, Conn., November 29, 1797, and emigrated to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1819, and in 1822, came to Jackson Township, Randolph Co., Ind., where he was engaged in the pioneer work of clearing out a farm and establishing a home. He was industrious, frugal and successful in the management of his affairs. He removed to Ward Township in 1830, where he remained until 1870, when he located in Winchester. He was a man who always commanded the highest respect of those with whom he was associated, and in all his dealings with his fellow-men maintained a high character for honor and fairness. He was prominent in all enterprises designed to promote the public welfare, contributing from his own means and using his influence to secure the co-operation of others. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and his daily life was consistent with his religious professions. He never intentionally did anything that would result in the injury of a neighbor, and was above taking an unfair advantage in a trade. He occupied a prominent position in society, and was considered one of the leading citizens of the county with which he was so long identified. He was elected Justice of the Peace in 1827, and served until 1831. From 1837 to 1844 he was Associate Judge of the Circuit Court. He never had any political ambition, and never sought office, his election in both cases being the choice of the people without his solicitation. He was a faithful officer, and was qualified for higher trusts had he the inclination to accept them. In his political affiliations, he was a Democrat, zealous in his attachments to the principles of his party, and enthusiastic in his advocacy of them. He died March 21, 1881, in the eighty-fourth year of his age, sincerely mourned by all who knew him, leaving to his family a goodly estate and an honored name. He was married four times, and was three times bereaved by death of the companionship of a devoted wife. His first wife was Sarah Cravens, to whom he was married in 1823. His second wife was Dorotha Cravens; his third Nancy A. Boots, and his fourth, Sarah Croyle. He was the father of eleven children, nine of whom grew to maturity and were married, four of whom are now living—Martin B. Miller, Sarah E. Warren, Julia E. Clevenger and Luman H. Miller. They all live in Randolph County except Luman, who is a resident of Grant County, Ind.

Nancy A. Boots, the third wife of Daniel B. Miller, was born in Ross County, Ohio, in 1806, removed to Indiana in 1818, and was married to Judge Miller in 1832. She was the mother of seven children, six of whom grew to maturity. She died December 17, 1872, after a very brief illness, having lived a happy married life of over forty years. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a lady of the highest personal character, discharging well the sacred duties of wife and mother, and in death mourned by a large circle of friends.

MARTIN B. MILLER.

Martin B., son of Daniel B. and Nancy A. (Boots) Miller, was born in Ward Township, Randolph Co., Ind., March 15, 1833. His early years were spent in the ordinary routine of farm life, with only the district school of that day as a means of obtaining an education. After he was of age, he determined to strive for a more liberal culture. He attended White Water College at Centreville, Ind., during several sessions of 1853–54 and '55, paying his way in part by such services as he could render in the care of the college building. He afterward attended a part of two terms at Asbury University, in 1856. He taught during the winter of 1857, and in the autumn of that year entered Miami University, at Oxford, Ohio. In February, 1858, he began the study of law with Judge James Brown, of Winchester, where he remained until the following autumn when he went to Missouri. Reaching the end of the railroad at Tipton, in that State, he walked one hundred miles to Browning's Ferry, where he remained the following winter, teaching four months. In the autumn of the following year, he returned to Winchester and engaged for a year in the practice of law with Judge Jere Smith. In the winter of 1861–62, he attended the law department of Butler University, graduating at the close of the school year. In the summer following, he enlisted in the United States service, was commissioned as Lieutenant and recruited Company E, of the Eighty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, upon the mustering in of which he was made Captain, which position he filled for twenty-eight months. In January, 1865, he was commissioned Major, and soon after promoted to Lieutenant Colonel of his regiment, and for good conduct brevetted Colonel. He was mustered out of the service June 14, 1865. He with his command participated in many of the most arduous and dangerous campaigns of the war through Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia, being engaged in the battles of Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, Buzzard Roost, Rocky Face, Dallas, Resaca, Pine Mountain, Altoona, Culp's Farm, Peach Tree Creek, Kenesaw, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Lovejoy, Merret's Mills, Franklin, Nashville, besides many others of lesser note. Through all these conflicts he passed unhurt. The only time he was ever struck was at Chickamauga, where a part of his moustache was cut off by a bullet. After his discharge from the service, he engaged in the practice of law in Winchester with Leander J. Monks as a partner, under the firm name of Miller & Monks, which continued until 1871. In June, 1872, he purchased an interest in the flouring mills at Winchester, but sold again the following winter. He then purchased an interest in a manufacturing business at Decatur, Ind., where he continued until 1876, when he resumed the practice of his profession in Winchester. He was two years alone; then for a time in partnership with Alexander Gullett, and at the present with Hon. John Enon Neff, under the firm name of Miller & Neff. Col. Miller is Democratic in politics, firm and consistent in his advocacy of his party principles. He has never sought office, but in 1868 ran for Prosecutor in the Thirteenth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Randolph, Jay, Blackford and Wayne, beating his Republican competitor in all except Wayne County, which, of course, "snowed him under." In 1880, Col. Miller led the hopeless but gallant campaign in the Sixth Congressional District against Gen. Thomas M. Browne, and while defeated, he carried his full party vote. Col. Miller is a member of the I. O. O. F., in which excellent institution he takes high rank. He is not a member of any church, but is liberal toward all theological opinions. On February 4, 1864, he was married to Miss Sarah J. Aker, daughter of Andrew Aker, of Winchester. Mrs. Col. Miller is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a lady of excellent social character, and has proved herself a worthy companion in all respects. They are the parents of three children, only one of whom survive. They have an exceedingly elegant home, are surrounded by all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life, and enjoy the prospect of a highly desirable future.

JAMES MOORMAN. The subject of this sketch is the youngest son of Thomas and Susannah (Crew) Moorman. His parents both emigrated from the James River country, in Virginia, to Richmond County, N. C., prior to the Revolutionary war, and grew to maturity and were married in the latter county. There were born to them five sons and two daughters, Tarleton Moorman, formerly of Randolph County, being the eldest. James, the youngest son, was born near Rockingham, Richmond Co., N. C., on the east side of the Big Peedee River, on the 26th day of June, 1795. His father died on the 27th day of the eleventh month, 1801, and the subject of this sketch, from the time he was six years of age, was reared without the care and protection of a father. In 1822, the mother emigrated with her family from North Carolina to Wayne County, Ind., where Thomas, a brother, had located at an earlier date. They located at what is known as Kenworthy's mill, on Green's Fork, in Wayne County, Ind., where the mother died on the fifth day of the tenth month, 1836. While living in Wayne County, he was known to have been, perhaps, the first to introduce fine cattle into that county. James Moorman is, perhaps, as widely-known as any resident of the county. Personally, he is a man of about six feet in stature, and stands erect, with a high, broad forehead, large brain in front, with a well-balanced head of the finest type. He has a pleasant, open countenance, and though not talkative, he has a pleasant word for all, and is familiarly called by everybody Uncle Jimmy. He generally keeps his own counsel, and seldom asks advice; and what he does he does quietly, and is willing to risk his judgment on all matters of importance. He inherited little wealth from his parents—not over $100 or $200, perhaps, but he inherited what was far better, a strong, athletic frame, a hardy, robust constitution, temperate habits, with an economical disposition, exacting all that was his dues, and always giving the same, with a willingness to labor at anything honorable. In true pioneer style, he took his ax and went into the forest and cleared a farm. When he had accumulated a few dollars, he did not cease to labor, and spend his money in pleasure or high living, but loaned it out safely at interest, and labored on for more; and thus day by day he added to his store, until, in 1860, he was known as one of the wealthiest men in Eastern Indiana. In that year, he located at Winchester and started what was known as the Winchester Bank. Since that time, by careful and judicious investments, and a constant personal attention to his business, his prosperity has been such that his wealth has more than doubled. His motto as a financier has always been: Pay as you go, and make each day more than you spend. He was never of a speculative turn of mind, and never attempted to make money by speculation, preferring the slower and surer way to success, and by his good judgment he met with but few losses in his investments. He is a man of sound judgment and great will-power, and when his mind is made up, his decision is final. His "Little rather not" is understood by those who know him to be a very emphatic No! While he has not been extravagant in his liberality, he seldom turns his back upon a good cause, and has contributed cheerfully to all moral and religious enterprises that have sought public encouragement, and no doubt before his life closes he will employ at least a portion of his great wealth in such a manner as will bless mankind. In his religious relations, he is a friend of the orthodox branch, having had a birth-right in the church. In his later years, he has taken great interest in the church at Winchester, and has been very faithful in his attendance, being seldom absent from his seat. Politically, he is a Republican, and has been identified with this party ever since its organization. Prior to that, he was anti-slavery in his political sentiments, as were all the Friends in this county at that time. Though his church was opposed to the war, he took a lively interest in the results of the conflict, the freedom and enfranchisement of the slaves; and no one paid his income-tax more cheerfully than he. He still has in his heart a warm place for the soldiers who periled their lives in the cause of freedom and the defense of the Union. He is now eighty-seven years of age, and, though growing feeble, he still retains the free and full use of all his fine mental faculties, and with his temperate and regular habits may live to see an extreme old age. He has retired from the drudgery of active business life, and has placed the affairs of his bank largely in the hands of Capt. Joseph R. Jackson, of Union City, who, with his excellent business ability, has taken the burden from his shoulders to a great extent, while he awaits, quietly and patiently, the end of a long and successful business life. His career demonstrates the possibilities attainable by industry and determination, and illustrates the fact that the sure road to wealth is through honest toil and frugality.

JOHN W. MACY.

John W. Macy was born in 1843, in Henry County, Ind., and removed to Randolph County, Ind., with his father, David Macy, in 1854. The family located at Farmland, in this county, where they still reside. Mr. Macy was reared a farmer, and the principal part of his time in boyhood was employed on his father's farm, in Henry County. In the winter, he attended school near his home, acquiring a good English education. In August, 1862, when less than nineteen years of age, he enlisted in Company A, of the Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and entered the field in defense of the nation's honor. At the battle of Chickamauga, he was wounded in the thigh, and during the next two months he was absent from his regiment in consequence of this injury. During a portion of this time, he was at home, obtaining recruits for the service; he then returned to his regiment, and served until the close of the war, when he was mustered out. In youth, he had learned the wagon-maker's trade, and after his return from the army he engaged in this pursuit, continuing until 1867; he was then appointed Deputy Auditor by William E. Murray, who was, at that time, Auditor of Randolph County, and served in this capacity two years. He was Deputy Clerk under John B. Goodrich, and afterward under Taylor Semans, for a period of two and a half years, and at the close of this service went to Kentucky, where he was actively engaged in various branches of business for four years. Returning to Farmland at the end of that time, he embarked in the stove and tinware trade, and while thus engaged he was nominated by the Republicans, in 1877, for the office of Clerk of Randolph County, and elected in the fall of the same year. He left the shop at Farmland one day and assumed the duties of the office the next. Throughout a period of four years, he discharged the many duties of this office with a fidelity that was highly creditable to himself, and satisfactory to the people of the county. He re-arranged the office, and spent all his leisure time in grouping, boxing and numbering the thousands of packages of documents that had accumulated in the office for years, thus rendering comparatively easy a search for any document desired. While serving as clerk, Mr. Macy was chosen Chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Randolph County, and in addition to his official labors, discharged the many duties of that position with equal fidelity; his faithfulness in this line, and its important results, elicited the warmest expressions of satisfaction and gratitude from his Republican friends. An important campaign had just been conducted to a successful termination in this county, and the Republicans assembled in large numbers at the court house to express their appreciation of the services of their chairman. His utter ignorance of the form this expression would take, was manifested by his complete surprise, when, in a neat little speech, the spokesman of the party presented him with a handsome and valuable silver service, which will long be to him a treasured token and a happy reminder; he retired from his official position in November, 1881, and since that time has been successfully engaged in the practice of law, in connection with the real estate and insurance business; he is also associated with Messrs. John E. Neff and E. S. Kelley, as a partner in the handle factory at Winchester. As a business man, Mr. Macy possesses marked talent, and in every position he has occupied, he has performed his duties with distinguished ability; he is a valued member of society, and enjoys the confidence and esteem of all who know him. On the 25th of December, 1871, Mr. Macy was united in marriage with Miss Sarah, daughter of Edward Edger, Esq., a prominent and highly respected citizen of Winchester. By this union they are the parents of three children, named respectively, Ralph E., Shields S. and Kate B. Macy.

CAPT. ALBERT O. MARSH.

Albert O. Marsh was born September 15, 1840, at Windsor, Ashtabula Co., Ohio. He attended Hiram College, and recited his lessons to the illustrious statesman and martyr President of the United States, James A. Garfield, at a time when the latter was only a teacher in the institution which is now celebrated by his connection with it. At the age of eighteen years, Mr. Marsh engaged in the vocation of school teaching, which he followed successfully until the outbreak of the late rebellion called for patriotic sacrifices from young men in defense of the flag and the maintenance of national unity. He was among the first to respond, enlisting, in 1861, in the Fifteenth Ohio Regiment for the three months' service. At the expiration of that term, he returned to his home, and, in the fall of 1861, was married to Miss Sarah M. Galleher; he taught school during the succeeding winter, and, in the summer of 1862, enlisted in the Forty-sixth Ohio Regiment for three years, as a member of Company A. In June, 1863, he was detailed to organize a colored regiment in Tennessee, first known as the Second Regiment of Tennessee Infantry, but afterward as the Fifty-ninth United States Colored Infantry. He was commissioned Captain of a company in that regiment in June, 1863. For a time, he acted as Aid-de-Camp under Gen. Buckland, at Memphis, having charge of posts and defenses at that place. He was afterward made Assistant Inspector General on the staff of Gen. A. L. Chetlain, holding that position until the last of July, 1865. At that time, after resigning his commission as Captain, he was appointed by Gen. John S. Smith, as Superintendent of the Military Detectives, Secret Service Corps, with headquarters at Memphis. In February, 1866, this corps was disbanded, and he resumed civil life; having read law prior to the war, he determined upon the adoption of the legal profession. After spending a few months in Ohio, recruiting his health, he located at Seymour, Ind., and entered upon the practice of his chosen profession, and from 1868 to 1872, was the agent and attorney of several insurance companies. In 1872, he came to Winchester,

Ind., where he has since continued to reside, rising steadily in his profession. Since his arrival here, he has, at various times, been associated with several gentlemen in the practice. The firm of Watts & Marsh was formed in 1873, continuing one year; from 1874 to 1879, he was associated with A. Gullett, Esq., under the firm name of Marsh & Gullett, and from 1879 to the present time (1882) with Mr. W. A. Thompson, under the firm name of Thompson & Marsh. In 1876, Mr. Marsh was elected Prosecuting Attorney for the Twenty-fifth Judicial Circuit, a position which he filled with distinguished ability for two years. In 1878, during his incumbency of this office, he was nominated by the Republicans of this district, to represent them in the General Assembly of Indiana. Some doubt being expressed as to his eligibility to this office, in view of the fact that he then held a judicial position, he withdrew from the ticket, and Hon. E. L. Watson was substituted and elected. His personal popularity would undoubtedly have resulted in a large majority and a triumphant election, had his eligibility not been questioned. In 1880, he was elected to the State Senate on a contingency, which, however, did not arise. In the practice of his profession, he has met with well-merited success, and by his devotion to the interests of his clients, and his conscientious and honorable rules of practice, has established himself in the public confidence, and possesses the esteem and good will of good people of all parties. In the campaign of 1880, he took an active part, and did some effectual work for the Republican cause, his addresses being distinguished by strength and solidity, logic and sound sense, carrying conviction to many who were wavering and undecided in their political faith. In social and private life, Capt. Marsh is esteemed for his manly qualities and gentlemanly bearing, and, with his estimable wife, shares the hearty esteem of a large circle of friends. He became a member of the Masonic fraternity at Seymour, Ind., and has taken all the degrees of the order, up to that of the Royal Arch. He has served as Worshipful Master of the lodge at Winchester for six years, his brethren having called him to continue service in that capacity at the expiration of each term.

CHARLES E. MAGEE was born March 6, 1846, at Dresden, Muskingum Co., Ohio. He removed to Zanesville, when five years old, remaining there for twelve years. At the age of seventeen years, he came to Winchester, Ind., and learned the tinner's trade, at which he has ever since been engaged. In May, 1864, he enlisted in Company F, of the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Indiana Regiment, for a term of 100 days; and in March, 1865, enlisted in Company A, of the Eleventh Indiana Regiment, serving five months. In 1866, he opened a tin-shop on the west side of the public square, beginning on a small scale and working his way carefully along until his trade justified him in enlarging his stock. In 1868, he removed to his present location, on the north side of the public square, and engaged in the sale of stoves, at the same time conducting quite an extensive trade in the manufacture of tin-ware, spouts, roofing, etc. Gradually his business increased so that he found it necessary to employ mechanics to assist him, and is now, perhaps, the most extensive operator in his line, in Winchester. He is a thoroughgoing business man, and by his energy and perseverance has fairly solved the problem of success. He has depended upon himself from early childhood, and has thus acquired a large degree of self-reliance, which has been of great benefit to him in his struggle with the world. No one ever advanced him a dollar, or offered him any substantial encouragement, and for whatever success he has achieved, he is indebted to his pluck and industry alone. He was married on the 6th of October, 1868, to Miss Sarah E., daughter of Joseph Edger, Esq., of this county. By this union, they are the parents of one son—Harry E. In the social circle they are highly esteemed, and by all who know them, are regarded as estimable and worthy citizens. Mr. Magee is identified with the Odd Fellows fraternity, and in his political affiliations is an ardent Republican.

BENJAMIN F. MARSH was born October 15, 1853, near Greenfield, Hancock Co., Ind. His father, William Marsh, removed to that county, with his parents, at an early age, and was reared there, marrying Martha A. Chapple. He died when the subject of this sketch was but a child, and when the latter was fifteen years of age, his mother died. He was thus left largely upon his own resources, and though but a boy, began the battle of life alone. He came to Winchester and attended school for a year. By the year 1874, he had earned and saved enough money to pay his way at college, and accordingly entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, with the view of taking a full literary course. Owing to failing health, however, he was compelled to abandon this plan, and returned to Winchester. He took up the vocation of school teaching, and for one term taught a country school. For the next four years he had charge of the graded schools at Lynn, in this county; and during his incumbency of this position, as well as at a later date, he assisted in conducting the Summer Normal School at Winchester, with marked success, and in a manner to cause very beneficial results throughout the county. In 1880 and 1881, he had charge of the South Ward School at Winchester, and in his capacity as Principal, gave the most pronounced satisfaction to the public, and conducted an excellent school. During all this time, he had been devoting his leisure hours to the study of the law, and on the 30th of April, 1881, was admitted to the bar. He formed partnership relations with S. A. Canada, and has ever since been engaged in the practice of his chosen profession. In April, 1882, he was elected Justice of the Peace by a flattering majority, and is now discharging the duties of his office. He is a young man of energy and industrious habits, and we join with his friends in the wish that he may achieve success in the profession he has chosen. He is a member of the Winchester Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and in politics an enthusiastic Republican.

JOHN K. MARTIN, son of Elisha Martin, Sr., was born February 7, 1837, in Randolph County, Ind. His early life was passed on the home farm, the daily routine of duty being varied by occasional work in his father's brickyard. He received a common-school education, and, as he grew to manhood, adopted the manufacture of brick as his chosen vocation. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company C, Sixty-ninth Indiana Vounteer Infantry, and was immediately commissioned First Lieutenant of his company. Shortly after being sent to the field, his regiment participated in the battle of Richmond, Ky., and was captured by the rebels. In this engagement, Lieutenant Martin was wounded in the right thigh by a minie ball. He was paroled with his regiment, and remained four weeks in the vicinity of the battle-ground, recovering to some extent from the effects of his injury. He was still too ill for duty, however, and with six comrades who had been wounded in the same engagement, started northward in a wagon, making a journey of 140 miles to the Ohio River. At Maysville, Ky., he embarked on a steamboat for Cincinnati, finally arriving at home, where he spent some time recovering his strength. At the October election of that year, he was too ill to walk to the polls, and was conveyed thither in a carriage; but in the following December he rejoined his regiment at Indianapolis. At Memphis, he received another injury, but proceeded with his regiment to Vicksburg. He resigned his commission on the 13th of January, 1863, and returned to his home. Shortly afterward, he was appointed United States Marshal for Randolph County. There was much unpleasant duty in connection with this office, but he never shrank from its performance, and was faithful to his trust. He also served as Marshal of the town of Winchester and as Justice of the Peace. After his return from the army, he resumed the manufacture of brick, in which he is still engaged, having built up a very satisfactory and extensive trade. He manufactured the brick for many of the principal buildings at Winchester, among them being the court house and jail, the residence of Gen. A. Stone, the "Jack Ross House," and other public and private buildings throughout the county. He is energetic and enterprising in his business, adopting and testing various improved methods of manufacture, and is now using a machine capable of manufacturing from seven thousand to ten thousand brick per day. In 1856, he made what is believed to have been the first drain-tile ever manufactured in the State of Indiana. He saw half of a piece of tile that had been brought from England, and at once made a mold, in which he made 200 rods of tiling, burning it in a brick kiln. He may be fairly considered the pioneer tile manufacturer of this county, and has kept pace with all the improvements in that art. His father and George W. Monks purchased a little tile machine about 1858, which was operated by hand, and John K. Martin used it for about two years. Subsequently, he purchased a Latourette horse-power machine, and afterward purchased improved machinery as it was placed in the market. He still has an interest in a tile factory, though not directly engaged in the manufacture. Mr. Martin has grown up in this community, and is widely known and highly respected. He is warm-hearted and charitable, and the friend of progress and improvement. In politics, he is a Republican, and a cordial and enthusiastic supporter of the principles of that party. He is an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and of the Knights of Honor. In the former order, he has passed the degrees of the subordinate lodge, and is a member of the Encampment. He served ten years as Treasurer of the Odd Fellows society at Winchester, handling and disbursing large sums of money. He was married in 1858 to Miss Ann Eliza Quinn, daughter of Morrison Quinn, who now resides in Carroll County, Ind. Five children were the fruits of this union, all of whom now survive. Early in life, Mr. Martin developed a great fondness for poetry, and, in later years, composed several poems which have about them the stamp of true genius, and bear the evidences of a refined nature.

ELISHA MARTIN was born in Randolph County, Ind., in 1846, and all his life, with the exception of a brief period, has been passed within the limits of this county. He attended the schools of early days, and by diligent and faithful study acquired a good practical education. His father was a farmer, and the son remained at home until twenty-six years of age, assisting him in the management and cultivation of the farm. When twenty-six years of age, he went to Union City, where, in partnership with his brother Oliver, he was engaged for about a year in the manufacture of brick. During the next year, he followed the same line of employment at various places, manufacturing about 600,000 brick that season, of which 400,000 were used in the construction of a schoolhouse at Camden, Jay Co., Ind., and 200,000 by Philip Shirling, four miles northeast of Winchester. For the next two years, he was engaged in the manufacture of drain-tile, then resumed the manufacture of brick, locating at Farmland. Returning to Winchester, he again engaged in the manufacture of tile, and was subsequently engaged in agricultural pursuits for three years; he was afterward engaged alternately in the manufacture of brick and tile, and in the year last named, opened a restaurant on Main street, near the "Bee Line" depot. He is an energetic and industrious man, and is recognized by all who know him as a worthy and reliable citizen. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, but he is not active in political matters beyond casting his vote at the proper time, and using his influence for the success of the party.

RALPH V. MURRAY.

Ralph V. Murray was born December 4, 1841, in Henry County, Ind. He was reared on a farm, and acquired a good common school education in boyhood. When only twenty years of age, he left home and friends to do his part in preserving the national integrity as a soldier in the Union army. He enlisted in August, 1861, in Company D, of the Thirty-sixth Indiana Infantry, serving three years. He participated in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged, until the second day of the fight at Chickamauga. On that day he received a severe gun-shot wound in the left elbow, in consequence of which he was confined to the hospital for nine months. Rejoining his regiment at the end of that time, he remained in the service until the expiration of his term of enlistment, and was mustered out at Nashville, Tenn., in September, 1864. After the close of the war, he came to Randolph County, Ind., and for a while was engaged in photographing, at Farmland. Subsequently, however, he went to reside with his father, in Nettle Creek Township, the latter having removed to Randolph County during the war. After the close of the war, and until the fall of 1880, he was engaged chiefly in agricultural pursuits. In the spring of that year, he became the nominee of the Republican party for the office of Sheriff of Randolph County, and in the fall of that year was elected by an overwhelming majority. He assumed the duties of his new position in 1881, and during his incumbency has proved himself a faithful and efficient officer, performing his duties in a manner to reflect credit upon himself and afford satisfaction to the public. In March, 1866, Mr. Murray was united in marriage with Miss Frances J., daughter of Rev. O. P. Boyden. By this union they are the parents of five children, all of whom are now living to bless and cheer their home. By his faithful service in the army, and his upright, honorable life at home, Mr. Murray has gained many friends, among whom he is held in the highest esteem. He was one of the charter members of Nelson Trussler Post, G. A. R., and is an active member of that organization.

MOSES A. MILLS was born November 15, 1851, in Wayne County, Ind. His father, John B. Mills, was also a native of that county, and was married there to Jane Locke. He came to Randolph County, with his family, in 1857, and located on a farm in West River Township, where he still resides. Moses, the subject of this sketch, was reared on the home farm, attending school in the winter and assisting in the work of the farm during the remainder of the year. At the age of fifteen years, he went to learn the blacksmith's trade, at which he is now engaged in Winchester. He was married, in March, 1870, to Miss Sarah Huston, daughter of David M. Huston, an early settler of White River Township. By this union they are the parents of three children, viz., Orla A., Bertha A. and Inez P. Mr. Mills is an honest, industrious man, and enjoys the respect of the community in which he resides.

JOHN NEFF, late of Winchester, was born near Harrisburg, Penn., in the year 1770. While a boy, he learned and was employed at the carpenter's trade. When he grew up to manhood, he removed to Virginia, where he was united in marriage to Miss Susannah Gray. Having conceived very strong anti-slavery sentiments, he decided to quit the Old Dominion and try his fortune in the free but then little-known West, and accordingly, in 1805, removed to Cincinnati, Ohio. A few months subsequent, he entered 160 acres of land near the present city of Eaton, Ohio, to which he removed his family. Not having any house, he split some boards and covered his goods, to shelter them from the weather, until he could erect a cabin. He had no neighbors within easy reach, and was really one of the pioneers of that region. He cleared and brought under cultivation quite a handsome farm, and remained upon it until 1833, when he removed with his family to Randolph County, Ind., buying first the John Eltzroth farm, adjoining on the north the farm now used for asylum purposes, and afterward 100 acres adjoining Winchester, at which latter place he died in 1855, at the advanced age of eighty-five years, his wife having preceded him in 1852, at the age of seventy-six. Mr. and Mrs. Neff were the parents of eleven children, five boys and six girls, and when the youngest (Col. H. H. Neff), was forty years old, the family circle was yet unbroken by death. Six of the eleven children yet survive, in the enjoyment of reasonable good health. Mr. Neff voted for Washington in 1793, for Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, J. Q. Adams, Henry Clay, etc., and was a prominent Whig during all the latter part of his life. In religious persuasion, he was a Presbyterian. He never held an office, though active in political matters. He was a Captain in the militia, though never in active service. By industry, he accumulated a comfortable fortune for that day, and always occupied a high position in the estimation of his neighbors and friends. Five of six surviving children live in Winchester, and have always been among her most valued citizens.

JOHN NEFF, Winchester, Ind., son of John Neff, Sr., was born in Preble County, Ohio, March 4, 1813, the day of the second inauguration of President Madison. His opportunities for obtaining school education were very limited, having to walk three miles to attend the brief terms of that early day. He learned to read in the spelling book and Testament. At the age of seventeen, he began to learn printing at Eaton, Ohio; one year after, he worked at Centerville, Ind., and subsequently, was engaged at the same business at Liberty, Ind. He then returned to Eaton, Ohio, where he engaged as salesman in a general supply store for three years. In 1837, he married Miss Harriet N. Holmes, a native of Pennsylvania, a lady of most excellent character, who is, in every way, a worthy companion. They are the parents of four children, two of whom are living. In 1839, Mr. Neff removed to Winchester, and was engaged as clerk for Michael Aker until 1841, when the voters of Randolph County elected him Treasurer, the duties of which office he discharged in a highly satisfactory manner one term. Shortly after the expiration of his official term, he was commissioned Captain in the volunteer service in the war with Mexico. Capt. Neff was stationed at St. Louis, Mo., and engaged in forwarding supplies and attending as one of the executive officers to the support of the army in the field, in which capacity he performed valuable service. After the close of the Mexican war, he was honorably discharged and returned to Winchester, where he was again engaged in the grocery business for three years; he then engaged in the grain trade, a pursuit in which he has continued for over thirty years. Through his long and honorable career, he has ever been active, energetic and fairly successful, commanding the respect and consideration of his fellow-citizens. In politics, Mr. Neff is a conservative Democrat, though never engaged in political wrangles. In his religious connections, a Presbyterian, though extending full consideration to all evangelical churches. He belongs to all departments of the Masonic order, and takes high rank among the membership of that ancient and honorable order. He is one of the two surviving charter members of Winchester Lodge, No. 56, F. & A. M.

JOHN ENOS NEFF, son of the above worthy couple, John and Harriet N. Neff, was born in Winchester October 26, 1846. John Enos was educated in the public schools of his native town, and, for a time, attended the State University at Bloomington. He studied law with Gen. Tom Browne; was admitted to the bar, and began the practice in his native county. He was a member of the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, in what was known as the "hundred days service," being at that time only eighteen years old. In 1872, he received the nomination from the Democratic party for Congress in his district, then represented by that veteran Congressman, Gen. J. P. C. Shanks. He at once engaged in a gallant and enthusiastic canvass, developing rare qualities as a campaign speaker and expounder of his party's views on National and State policy. The election was so close that he, in common with many of his friends, believed he was elected by a small majority, but it was decided against him by a Republican Congress. He at least enjoyed the high reputation gained in the canvass, and the satisfaction of reducing a large adverse majority to the smallest possible size. His defeat, under the circumstances, rather increased than diminished his popularity, and, in 1874 he was elected Secretary of State for the State of Indiana, to which position he was re-elected in 1876, discharging the important trust with marked ability and satisfaction to all parties. Since the expiration of his official term, he has been engaged in the practice of law in Winchester, and is, at this time, in partnership with Col. Martin B. Miller. It is rare that one so young as he has been called to fill positions of so great trust, but the universal satisfaction with which he has discharged every duty devolving upon him, and his known popularity with the masses of his party, give promise that, if it is again in power, he may be offered positions where he will enjoy a wider field for his abilities. He is not a member of any church, and is liberal in his views on religious questions. He is a Mason—a member of Winchester Lodge, No. 56, and Randolph Royal Arch Chapter, No. 35, and takes high rank among the brotherhood.

COL. H. H. NEFF.

Henry H. Neff has long been a prominent citizen and active business man of Winchester, and one of the most energetic workers in its public enterprises. He was born June 5, 1815, near Eaton, Preble Co., Ohio. His father, John Neff, Sr., was a native of Pennsylvania, and the descendant of German ancestors. His mother, whose maiden name was Susanna Gray, was a native of Virginia. Henry remained at home until seventeen years of age, acquiring at the common schools a good English education. In the fall of 1832, he went to Eaton, in company with his brother John, to learn the printer's trade, under the instruction of Dr. F. A. Cunningham and John Vanausdal, Esq., remaining until the spring of 1834. His employers sold out at that time, and he went to Connersville, Ind., and engaged with Matthew R. Hull, who afterward became famous as a radical anti-slavery and temperance advocate. He was at that time publisher of the Indiana Sentinel, a sterling Whig paper, and Mr. Neff was one of his assistants for about a year. He was subsequently employed in the office of the Herald, at Liberty, Union Co., Ind. While at the latter place, his health failed, and he was taken home by his father to Winchester, Ind. He remained at home until his health was restored, and in July, 1836, accepted an engagement with Thomas Tigar, editor of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Sentinel, remaining in his employ for eighteen months, during a part of which time he was foreman of the office. Mr. Tigar finally sold the establishment to George W. Wood, in whose employ Mr. Neff remained until 1838. In that year, he returned to Winchester, Ind., and engaged in the retail grocery trade. In the following year, he embarked in the drug trade with Dr. Robert Woody, at Winchester, and continued in this business for four years. On October 22, 1843, he issued the first number of the Winchester Patriot, the first newspaper ever published in Randolph County. He continued the publication of the Patriot with marked success for four years, selling the office at that time in order to give his time fully to his duties as the Representative from this county in the State Legislature, to which he was elected in 1847. The Indianapolis & Bellefontaine Railway was then projected, and he became a candidate for this position, with the view of doing his utmost to aid in securing the charter for that road. At the expiration of his official term, however, he purchased the paper from its new proprietors, and resumed its management. In 1850, he received the appointment of Deputy United States Marshal, to take the census of Randolph County. He performed the duty alone, except in the township of Nettle Creek, which was canvassed by Thomas W. Reece, Esq., completing the labor and making a full return within the six months allotted by law. In 1852, he was elected Clerk of the Circuit Court for Randolph County, and at that time made a final sale of the Patriot office. During that campaign, there were three parties in the field with candidates. The Democrats had been in the ascendancy, and the Free-Soil element greatly weakened the strength of the Whigs. Mr. Neff was the candidate of the latter party, and was the only one elected on that ticket at that election, his majority being 248. In 1856, by the unanimous voice of the convention, he was again the candidate for this office, and was elected by a majority of 900. The office was no sinecure, and faithful and arduous work marked the entire period of his incumbency. He retired from the office after a service of eight years, and removed to a farm south of Winchester. Shortly afterward, however, he returned to this place, and embarked in the grain trade with his son-in-law, Mr. Teal. In 1863, he went with a herd of cattle to the prairies of Champaign County, Ill., and during the summer of that year was engaged in watching them and preparing them for market. Upon his return, he was urged by Gov. Morton to assist in raising a regiment for the United States service for the suppression of the rebellion. He entered enthusiastically into this work, and was commissioned Captain of Company G, of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Regiment. The organization of the regiment was completed at Indianapolis, and Capt. Neff was promoted to the office of Major. The regiment was assigned to the Twenty-third Army Corps, under Gen. Schofield, leaving Indianapolis in March, 1864, and proceeding to Nashville. They were sent to the front, and took part in the Atlanta campaign, under Gen. Sherman, but instead of accompanying him on the march to the sea, they were ordered back to Nashville. They participated in the fight at Columbia, Tenn., and in the battles of Franklin and Nashville. After the terrible conflict at Franklin, they marched to Nashville in the night, reaching that place at daylight on the following morning. They had been on duty two days and two nights without sleep, and many of their number fell by the roadside from sheer exhaustion. They pursued the rebel Gen. Hood as far as Columbia, Tenn., after which they were recalled, and ordered to Washington City. On February 22, 1865, they embarked in an ocean steamer for North Carolina, landing at Beaufort, and march to Newbern and Raleigh to join Gen. Sherman's advancing columns. They were engaged in the battle of Wisc's Fork, near Kingston, N. C., from the 8th to the 10th of March, 1865. At this battle, Col. Neff was bereaved of his son, Capt. J. L. Neff, who fell in the conflict, pierced by an enemy's bullet. He was conveyed to his home by his father and interred in the cemetery at Winchester, amid the tears and sympathy of the community among whom he had been reared, and who knew him as a noble young man. His father had been commissioned Lieutenant Colonel, and after the funeral of the son, returned to perform his duty as a soldier. He accompanied his command to Greensboro and Charlotte, but in May, 1865, resigned his commission and returned to Winchester. From that time to the present he has been engaged in the lumber business at Winchester, first as a partner with his son-in-law, Mr. Teal, in the black walnut timber trade, this relation existing for four or five years. In 1871, he became the senior member of the firm of Neff, Teal & Fisher, dealers in pine lumber. This firm was dissolved in 1879, and in June, 1880, Col. Neff became the agent at this point for the firm of Osterhaut & Fox, lumber dealers, of Grand Rapids, Mich. In the fall of 1881, he was chosen President of the Winchester Wagon Works and Manufacturing Company, in which capacity he still continues to act. He has always taken a leading and active part in the business interests of the town of Winchester, and has expended both time and money to promote the welfare of the town and county. The "Bee Line" railroad probably had not a more active friend along the line of its proposed route, when projected as the "Indianapolis & Bellefontaine" Railway. He was quick to perceive the advantages that must accrue to this county through the possession of such a road, and labored long and earnestly to further the success of the project. As a member of the Legislature, he used all his influence to secure a charter for the road, and as a private citizen he exerted his powers to enlist the sympathy and co-operation of his neighbors throughout the county. When the present Dayton & Union Railroad was projected, he made a strong effort to have the road continued to Winchester, making this town its western terminus, convinced that such an event would have added an impetus and life to the town, and made it an important center of manufacture and commerce. By his long residence at Winchester, and his active association with its public enterprises, he has become widely known and very popular throughout the county. In fact, this was true of him when a young man; for in 1841, when only twenty-six years of age, he was Independent Whig candidate for Auditor of Randolph County, and although there were three aspirants in the field besides himself, his personal popularity nearly erected him. Mr. Eaton, the regular Democratic nominee, was the successful candidate, leading Mr. Neff by only fourteen votes. He was always an active politician, and was the first to propose and advocate the method now in vogue of nominating candidates by "primary elections." He was always an earnest advocate of temperance, and an earnest worker in the cause. He was a member of the Washingtonian Society, and a charter member of the first lodge of the Sons of Temperance organized at Winchester. In 1845, he was "made a Mason," and is still in active fellowship with the order. He has passed the various stations of the lodge, and is a member of the Royal Arch degree, as well as the Commandery. Since 1843, he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and his life has been consistent with his profession. In private and public life, among all who know him, he is esteemed as a man of honor and high principle, true to his friends, and generous to those who differ from him. He has been twice married. First, in 1839, to Miss Elizabeth Carr, daughter of John Carr, a highly respected citizen of Rush County, Ind. By this union they were the parents of four children. In 1862, his wife died, and three years later he married Miss Margaret, daughter of William Mitchell. Her father was a prominent business man of Wayne County, Ind., and later of Peru, Ind. His daughter is a lady of superior accomplishments and wifely qualities, and a general favorite in the social circle. Their wedded life has been blessed by two sons and two daughters. The latter are both living, but the sons are deceased. Col. Neff and his worthy companion are sociable and genial, and their kindness and hospitality have won them many friends, among whom they are highly esteemed.

CAPT. JAMES L. NEFF.

James Lawrence Neff, son of Henry H. and Elizabeth (Carr) Neff, was born October 24, 1845, at Winchester, Ind. He attended school in the seminary at this place, where he acquired a good primary education. In 1861, he entered the Northwestern University, at Indianapolis, where he remained one year. At the end of that time he entered the State University, at Bloomington, Ind., remaining until the holiday season of 1863. During that vacation, he returned to Winchester, and later went to visit his father, who was then in camp with his regiment at Camp Wayne, near Richmond, Ind. While visiting the camp, he organized a company for the service, which became Company H, of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, and of which he was at once elected Captain. In his school life, from first to last, he manifested talents of a superior order, and always ranked with the best of his class-mates. He was a young man of bright mind, and doubtless would have become an ornament to society in a professional career had not the war changed his purposes for the time, and led him to abandon his studies, to throw into the conflict for the maintenance of National integrity all the enthusiasm and valor of his young life. It was his purpose to resume his studies when the peril that menaced the Union should have passed, and order and peace restored. But in the struggle he yielded up his life, a sacrifice to patriotism, and his spirit winged its flight from the gory field of Kingston, leaving to his friends and relatives only a memory of a noble, though brief, career. He was mustered in as Captain in February, 1864, and at once took charge of the company, drilled and equipped it, and in the following month went to the front. He was with his regiment in all the battles of the Atlanta campaign, and in the terrible conflicts of Franklin and Nashville, Tenn., and under his dauntless leadership his company acquitted themselves nobly in every engagement. At the battle of Wise's Fork, near Kingston, N. C., Capt. Neff fell at his post, pierced by a ball from a rebel rifle. Earlier in the fight a minie ball had struck him, producing momentary unconsciousness, but, recovering himself, he advanced again to the head of his company, leading them in the charge until he received the wound that proved instantly fatal. On the day of his death he had been appointed Officer of the Day, having charge of the brigade skirmish-line. At about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, just before the rebels fell back, he was advancing his skirmish line, when he received his death wound. Even on that field of carnage, where the dead and dying were lying about by scores, the departure of this one brave young spirit cast a pall of sorrow. In years, a boy, but in soul and courage a man, he commanded the respect and admiration of his superior officers, and the love of his subalterns, to whom he was uniformly kind and courteous. And if the news of his death cast a pall over that battle-field, strewn as it was with the victims of patriotism, how must it have wrung the hearts of his loved ones at home? He was the only son; and to him fond parents and loving sisters had looked up, with happy anticipations of a bright career, when "war's grim labor" should no longer hold him from the pursuits to which he aspired. These hopes and aspirations were buried with him in the soldier's grave. Instances are rare in which a mere boy is intrusted with the command of a company, and his case, perhaps, had not a parallel in the army. He was only eighteen years old when he took charge of the company, yet he discharged the duties of his position with the ability and intelligence of a man of mature years, and was the recognized equal and associate of officers who had grown gray in the service. His fellow-officers felt his loss deeply, and at a meeting held on camp on the field, near Mosely Hill, N. C., on the 28th of March, 1865, passed a series of appropriate and touching resolutions, of which the following is an extract:

"Resolved, That in the death of Capt. J. L. Neff, Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Volunteers, who was killed while leading his men in the charge against the enemy at Wise's Forks, N. C., on the 10th of March, 1865, we have sustained an irreparable loss. He was brave, courteous and excellent in all that constitutes a good soldier; and although young to occupy the position he did, he exhibited in the performance of his duties ability beyond his years. It is the will of Divine Providence that we should lose him in the spring-time of life, with a promising future to himself, and the pride of a doting father and friends, but we rejoice to know that he was a sacrifice to his country, and that he fell in the face of the enemy, bravely leading his men to victory."

Upon the reception of the news of his death, the members of the Philomathean Society of Indiana University met in their hall to do honor to his memory, and passed the following resolutions:

"WHEREAS, We are informed of the sad intelligence of the death of our late esteemed brother, Capt. James L. Neff, of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Regiment, who fell at the battle of Kingston, N. C., and

"WHEREAS, While we humbly bow before the Divine decree, we cannot refrain from sorely lamenting, with feelings of grief and lasting regret, the loss of so noble and patriotic a brother. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That while we lament the death of one so universally beloved and honored, we rejoice in the belief that he is now in a happier land, and enjoying the rewards bestowed upon the virtuous, the true and the brave.

* * * * * * * * *

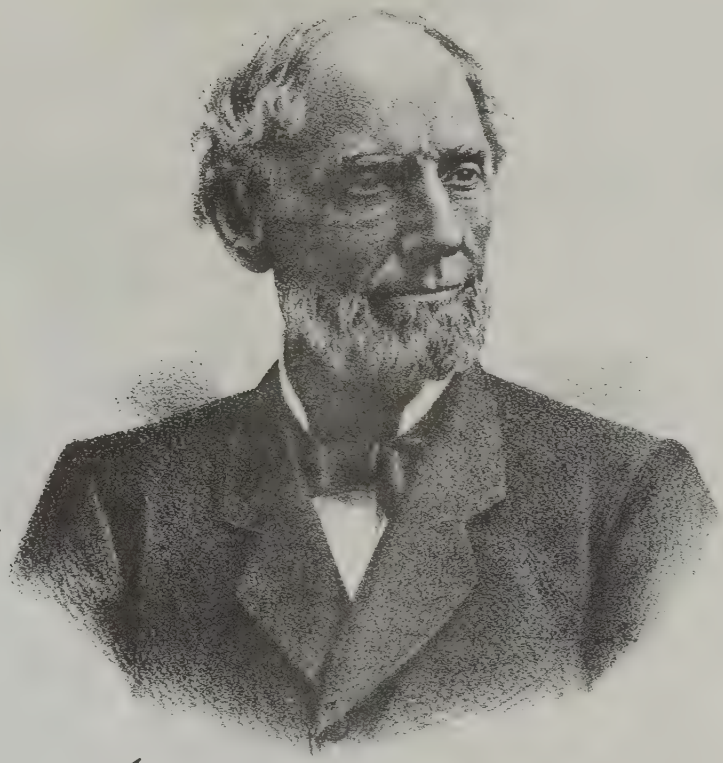
"That as a token of our high regard and esteem for the departed, we wear the usual badge of mourning for the period of thirty days."

Wherever he was known he was equally well esteemed. He possessed the faculty of making friends, and by his frank, honorable nature, drew to himself the affectionate regard of all with whom he was associated. At a re-union of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, held at Winchester, October 28, 1878, under the management of Col. H. H. Neff and Capt. Asa Teal, an original poem was delivered by Samuel C. Crane, referring in touching lines to the sad fate of the young Captain. Mr. Crane, who served as a private soldier, was wounded in the same battle in which Capt. Neff was killed, and his poem in memory of the young soldier is an eloquent reminder of the high regard in which he was held, and the universal mourning that surrounded his death. Thirteen years had elapsed, and still the memory of his noble life and gallant death was fresh in the hearts of his comrades, as it will continue to be until they, too, have joined him in that land beyond the grave. We select from the poem those stanzas relating more directly to Capt. Neff:

"Still nearer, comrades! When the tide of war
Was sweeping northward on its fiery way,
And harvest fields, where but an hour before
The reaper toiled, in dust and ashes lay,
There was a youth who cast his books away,
And though but eighteen summers he had known,
No time was this for study or for play,
For one who dared to call his sword his own,
And bravely seek the field where glory beckon'd on.

"Stalwart of form and lithe of limb he stood,
And gained in stature what he lacked in age;
Could look, with cheek unblanched, on fields of blood,
Or smile in triumph 'mid fierce battle's rage,
And write his name on Glory's deathless page,
Or 'neath his country's flag of stars expire,
For peace to him was but a gilded cage
When his proud spirit caught the patriot fire
That burned and glowed within the bosom of his sire.

"No prouder footstep trod that battle-field,
No nobler spirit met the rebel foe,
No warmer heart its high devotion sealed,
No firmer hand dealt swifter blow for blow,



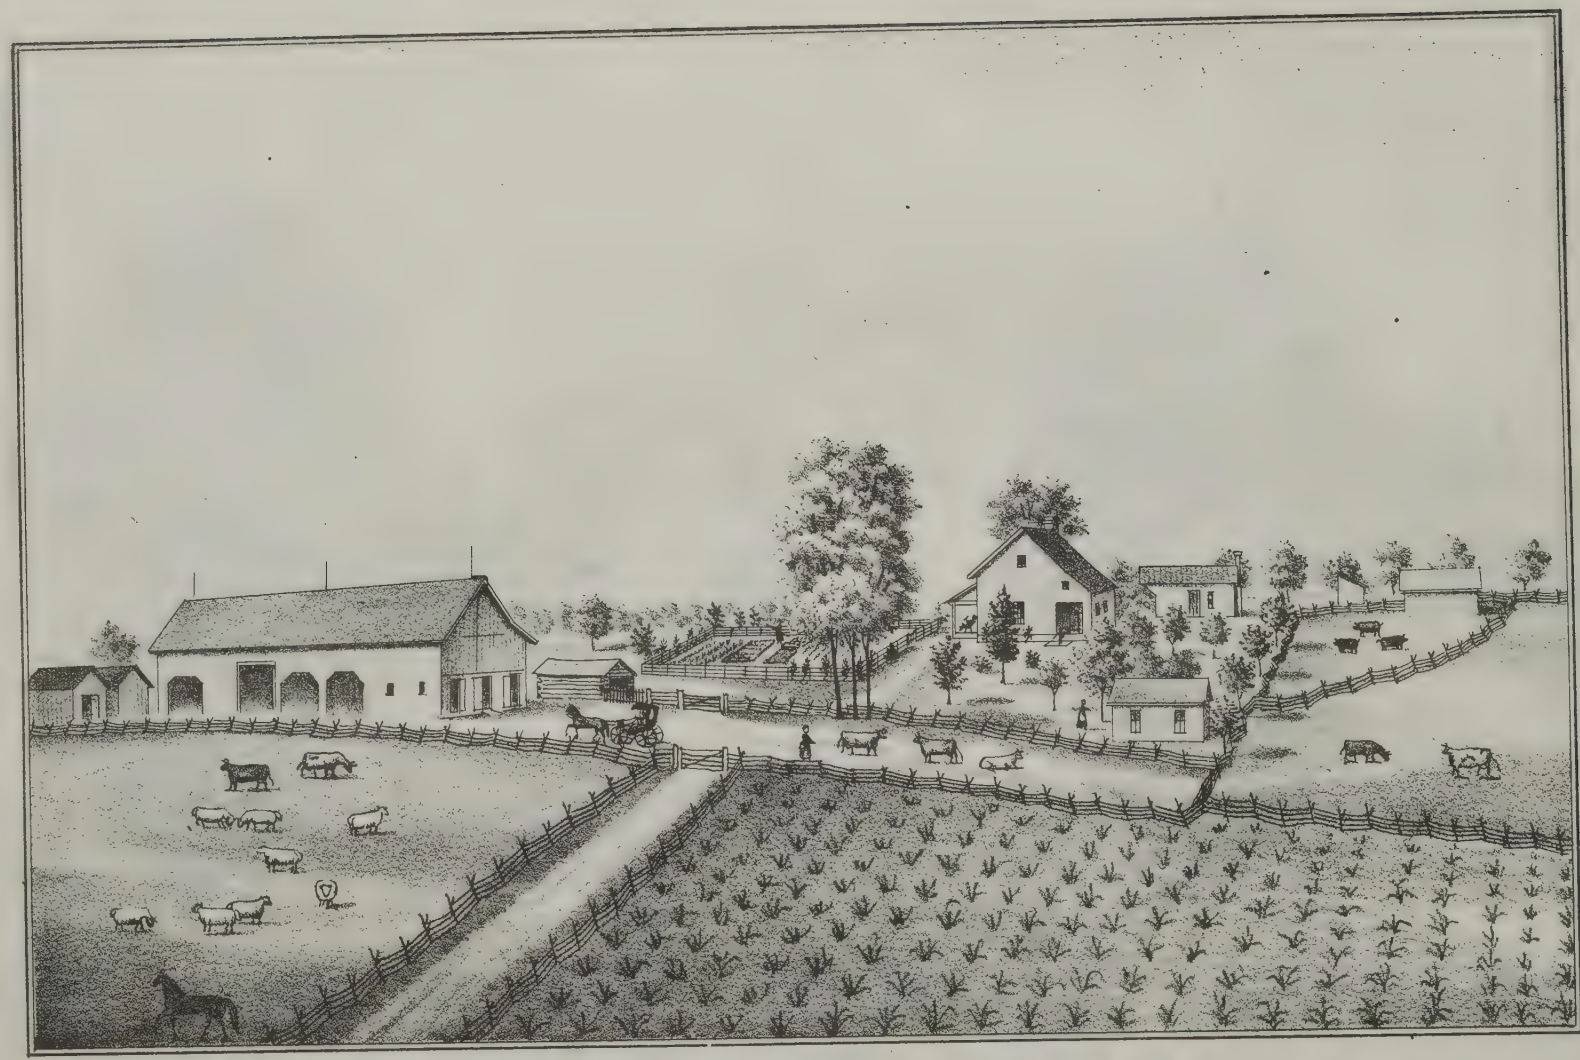
Very Truly, Yours Jay L. Neff

{EX CLERK}

LIEUT. COL. 124TH IND. VOL. INF.

Jay L. Neff

CAPT. CO H. 124TH IND. VOL. INF.



RESIDENCE OF WILLIAM MERRYWEATHER, STONY CREEK TP. RANDOLPH CO. IND.

No eye shone brighter in the battle's glow,
No richer blood in crimson current ran
Than his, who on that day was stricken low,
And fell in death while fighting in the van,
A youth in years alone; in God-like deeds, A MAN!

"Gone—and forever—in his life's young morn,
His grave is hallowed by Affection's tear,
And summer flowers his resting-place adorn,
Nurtured by those who hold his memory dear.
Fond sisters who had watched him year by year,
And dreamed fond dreams for him they loved so well.
And his lone sire, who knelt beside his bier,
With sorrow such as none but they can tell
Whose only sons in fight for God and country fell."

WILLIAM P. NEEDHAM was born December 19, 1853, at Newport (now Fountain City), Wayne Co., Ind. In 1856, the family removed to Williamsburg, in the same county, where the father, Frederick Needham, was extensively engaged in mercantile pursuits. In August, 1859, he came to Winchester, and was engaged in business here until his death, which occurred in 1864. William, his son, was educated in the public schools of Winchester, attending regularly until thirteen years of age. At that time, he entered the office of the Journal at Winchester, to learn the printer's trade, and, after completing his apprenticeship, returned to school, where he spent two years. For the next ten years, he was engaged at his trade in various cities, and, for several years, was a regular contributor to some of the best papers and magazines in the country, writing poetry and articles of a literary character, which attracted widespread attention and commendation. In February, 1881, he established at Winchester the Phantasmagorian, a weekly newspaper and literary journal. This paper grew almost immediately into popular favor, exceeding even the anticipations of its founder, and now enjoys an extended circulation. Personally, the editor is a young man of great energy and enthusiasm in the prosecution of his chosen work. He has been a close student all his life, and has developed literary talents of a high order. He is moral and honorable in his private character, and personally very popular among those who know him best. He is an active member of Winchester Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and in politics is an enthusiastic Republican. He was elected Clerk of the town of Winchester in 1878, and has been re-elected to this office five consecutive terms.

ALONZO H. PATTY was born October 28, 1846, at Huntsville, Randolph Co., Ind. His father, Harvey Patty, was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, but removed to Wayne County, Ind., when a boy, and was reared in that county. He was married to Martha Armfield, a native of North Carolina, who removed to Wayne County, Ind., with her parents, in 1832. In 1845, he came to Randolph County, Ind., and located at Huntsville, where he was engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was always a highly-respected citizen, but never sought nor accepted a public office. He died in 1856. Alonzo, the subject of this sketch, was but eighteen months old when his mother died, and he was taken to the home of his grandfather, in whose family he was reared. He learned to work at an early age, and industry became second nature with him. In the years that followed, he has fought his own way bravely, and his achievements are the result of his own energy, unaided by pecuniary assistance from any one. He enjoyed the advantages of a liberal education, first attending New Garden High School at Fountain City, Ind., and afterward the Raisin Valley Seminary at Adrian, Mich., graduating from the latter institution in 1871. He had learned the harness-maker's trade, and was engaged in the pursuit of this occupation in connection with school teaching, earning the means to defray his own expenses while attending school. From 1871 to 1874, he taught school in the winter, and worked at his trade during the remainder of the year, and in the year last named, began the study of law in the office of Judge H. C. Fox, at Richmond, Ind. He was admitted to the bar of Wayne County in 1875, but did not begin the practice of his profession until the spring of 1877, at which time he came to Winchester. In 1878, he entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, L. A. Cranor, which relation continued until the removal of the latter to another point. In the spring of 1882, he entered into the partnership relations now existing between himself and W. W. Canada. For about seven years, Mr. Patty has practiced at the bar of Randolph County, and is regarded by all who know him as one of its rising members. He is enthusiastically devoted to his profession, and by his honorable course in the practice, has gained the confidence of his clients and the legal fraternity. He is a firm supporter of the Republican party in politics, and though an active and zealous partisan, has never sought public office. In 1879, however, he accepted an appointment as Justice of the Peace, and at the ensuing election, in 1880, was elected to that office, and is still serving in that capacity. He became an Odd Fellow in 1869, and after passing the chairs of the subordinate lodge, united with the Encampment, of which he is an active member. On the 19th of September, 1875, he was united in marriage with Miss Ella Cranor, in Wayne County, Ind., and in December, 1881, his wife died, leaving two sons—Harry B. and Clarence—to mourn her loss. She was was an excellent lady, and enjoyed the good will and affectionate regard of all who knew her.

PHINEHAS POMEROY.

The ancestors of this gentleman were among the early settlers of America, having emigrated hither from England in 1633. His father, Pelatiah Pomeroy, was born in Connecticut, and was living there at the outbreak of the Revolution. He took an honorable part in that war, casting his fortunes with the patriots, and serving bravely in the Continental army. He was at the surrender of Saratoga; was in the New Jersey campaign, and at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. After the close of the war, he located at Winchester, Cheshire Co., N. H., and married Hannah Foster. At that place, on the 6th of May, 1800, his son Phinehas was born. The latter received a primary education in the common schools, and was afterward sent to Gragg's Academy on Federal street, Boston. Here he studied surveying and civil engineering, in which he acquired marked proficiency. After completing his course at this academy, he located at Williamsville, near Buffalo, N. Y., and taught school there for about a year. He then removed to New Philadelphia, Ohio, where he began work at his profession as surveyor on the Ohio & Erie Canal. He was thus engaged until the completion of the canal in 1832, and for the next four years occupied a similar position on the Miami Canal. At the end of that time, he went to Kentucky, and was engaged in public surveys there for six years. Returning to Ohio, he located at Dayton, and engaged in railroad surveying, and, throughout a period of twenty years, made preliminary survey for every railroad entering that city except the "Broad Gauge." In 1865, he removed to Indiana and located at Winchester, where he has ever since made his home, though he has been absent a large portion of the time surveying various railroad and turnpike lines. And now, in his eighty-third year, he is still active and vigorous, and still engaged in the work of his profession. Within the past year, he has been engaged in running the lines for portions of three railroads, and, during the present spring (1882), surveyed the line for a railroad running north from Greenville, Ohio. He has been twice married. First, in October, 1827, to Miss Jerusha Tinker, in Portage County, Ohio. She was a lineal descendant of Thomas Tinker, a passenger in the Mayflower. Mrs. Pomeroy died in Kentucky in 1841, leaving three children, who still survive, viz., Charles Carroll, Anna J. and Josephine. In October, 1854, Mr. Pomeroy was married to Miss Mary Hollis, at Dayton, Ohio. By this union, they are the parents of three children, named respectively Phineas, Mary and Ralph D. Although not a pioneer, Mr. Pomeroy is a prominent and influential citizen of Winchester, and has had a large share in the public improvements of the town and county. He has been in active fellowship with the Masonic fraternity since 1822. He took the Royal Arch degree at Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1839 or 1840, and the Knight Templar's degree at Dayton, Ohio in 1850. He stands high in the order and in society, and is esteemed by all who know him.

HON. MARTIN A. REEDER.

Martin A. Reeder was born in 1819, in Warren County, Ohio, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1822, with his grandfather, John Martin. At the age of fourteen years, he entered upon an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, at Richmond, Ind., working at his trade in that city from 1833 to 1839. Subsequent to the last-named date, he attended school in the seminary at Winchester, adding largely to the education begun in the common schools in earlier boyhood. After leaving school, he resumed work at his trade, and in the years that followed became a master builder, and achieved great success in his chosen vocation. In this county and vicinity there are still many buildings standing which were erected by him or under his immediate supervision. Among the number are the Methodist, Presbyterian and Friends' Churches, at Winchester, the old jail at this place, and the House of Refuge at Indianapolis. He was associated with the county in its pioneer period, and kept pace with its progress, at the same time rising to prominence as a citizen. He was called upon to fill various local offices in early times, as well as in recent years, and in all capacities proved himself capable, efficient and trustworthy. He served as County Assessor two terms, as County Appraiser two terms, as Township Assessor two terms, and three terms as Township Trustee. In 1875, he was elected by the Republicans as the Representative from this county in the State Legislature, and in this capacity rendered valuable service. He was honored with important trusts as a member of standing and special committees, and aided very materially in checking extravagance and securing economy in the disbursement of the public money. Among the bills introduced by him were the charter under which Union City now exists; the act prohibiting the sale of ammunition to minors; the exemption of the property of widows; the bill for the suppression of the liquor traffic, and the punishment of intoxication; and a bill providing for local option. He has always been an uncompromising temperance man, taking a radical position, and arraying himself boldly as an adversary of the traffic in intoxicating drinks. In his early life he formed ideas antagonistic to the institution of slavery, and in his maturer years became one of the prominent Abolitionists of this community, co-operating with Daniel Worth, Dr. Hiram P. Bennett, Paul W. Way, and others in this region who engineered and operated the "Under-ground Railroad," and other agencies of a similar character, and spent both time and money in furtherance of these and other benevolent enterprises. His anti-slavery sentiments led him to affiliate with the Whig party, and in all its campaigns he proved himself a valuable member. Upon the rise of the Republican party, he became one of its adherents, and has ever since been true to its principles. During a long life of activity and industry in this community, Mr. Reeder has achieved a fair degree of success in a financial sense, and, though the weight of years has superannuated him for work at his trade, he could not consent to retire entirely from active life. In the fall of 1881, he embarked in the coal and lime trade at Winchester, at which he is still successfully engaged. He was married, in 1843, to Miss Elizabeth Favorite, daughter of Henry Favorite, of Maryland. She has always been a loving and devoted helpmate, and a kind Providence has forborne to sever the ties that have bound their hearts so long together. In social life, both are esteemed and respected, while their private deeds of kindness and charity have gained for them a lasting place in the hearts of the recipients.

NATHAN REED.

Nathan Reed was born June 7, 1813, in Fayette County, Penn. He was reared on a farm in that county, the monotony of his early life being varied by no incidents of importance. In the winter he attended the common school, and during his boyhood acquired an education sufficiently thorough to enable him to engage intelligently in the active business life that marked his later years. During his minority, he remained at home, working for his father on the farm. But in his twenty-second year (1835), he left home for the West, locating at Winchester, Ind., in the same year. At this place, he entered the service of Paul W. Way, a hotel-keeper, with whom he remained nine months, receiving $75 for his work. For the next few years, he was engaged in various branches of employment, managing to save a portion of his earnings, and steadily meeting, in the "new West," the success that must have been attained more slowly in his native home. In 1839, he was appointed Constable, and afterward as Deputy Sheriff of Randolph County. At a later date, he was elected to the office of Sheriff, and in these several capacities, for a period of twenty years, he rode from point to point through the mud and the dense forests of this county, then but sparsely populated. In some cases, he had tough customors to deal with, but generally effected his arrests quietly and without assistance; but, if in the performance of his duty, force was necessary, he was not the man to shrink or waver before personal danger. In one notable instance, he captured his man after a struggle. Some hogs had been stolen by a colored man in the Cabin Creek settlement, the thief escaping to Greenville, across the State line. The Sheriff was notified, and made search for the criminal, assisted by two colored men, and found him near the old Collier Simpson place. Routing him out from the cabin into the clearing, Mr. Reed ordered him to surrender; but, as the negro brandished a bowlder in one hand and a knife in the other, he prepared to meet his warlike adversary on an equal footing. Seizing a club, he struck a blow that for the moment paralyzed the negro's arm, and the knife dropped to the ground. Mr. Reed was struck in the temple by the stone which the thief had thrown, but he grappled with him, and, with the aid of his deputies, overpowered him. He endured all the annoyances and labor incident to the Sheriff's office in those early days, and retired with the hearty commendation of all good people for his efficiency and fidelity as an officer. He was afterward called to fill other offices of responsibility in the county. He was the first Trustee of White River Township under the new constitution, serving one year. For three years, he was a member of the Board of County Commissioners. In 1869, he was elected Justice of the Peace, succeeding Jacob Elzroth, who had served as magistrate for forty years. Mr. Reed served faithfully in this capacity for nine years. In 1878, he was chosen President of the Farmers' & Merchants' Bank of Winchester, and still occupies this position. For many years, Mr. Reed has been a successful business man in this community, and his career demonstrates what may be accomplished by a young man with the proper spirit and energy. He came here without friends and without money. First a porter in a hotel, he worked his way by successive steps and persistent pluck to the position of a bank President and a front rank in society. Financial success followed, and in the years of his active business life he amassed a competence which has placed him far above the possibility of want. Although he has retired from the drudgery of active business pursuits, he has not permitted his life to lapse into idleness. Indeed, such a course would be quite foreign to the nature of one as industrious and energetic as he. He has taken an active interest in the public affairs of the county, and has done his share in encouraging and promoting enterprises of public benefit and improvement. His early political affiliations were with the Whig party, and the anti-slavery element found in him a stanch friend and valuable coadjutor. In his native county in Pennsylvania, he had witnessed some of the practical workings of slavery, and in his early boyhood learned to hate it bitterly. Fugitive slaves had nought to fear from a meeting with him, and the organizations for aiding their escape received his sanction and encouragement. Upon the decline of the Whig party he became a Republican, and has ever since continued to act with that branch of the body politic, taking an active part in the selection of the proper men to administer the laws and discharge the public duties. In social life, Mr. Reed stands high in the estimation of all who know him, and possesses the warm regard of a large circle of friends. His religious preference is with the Universalist Church, and his moral life is above reproach. He has been twice married. First, in 1836, to Miss Annie, daughter of Paul W. Way, his former employer. After thirty-six years of happy wedded life, his wife died, leaving six children to mourn her loss. In 1873, he was married to Phebe, daughter of John and Jane Fisher, of Union City. She had twice before been married, first to Elias Baldwin, and after his decease to David T. Bailey. His wife is an estimable lady, and occupies a high place in the social circle.

ALFRED ROSSMAN. James, father of this gentleman, was born in Ireland, but emigrated to the United States, locating at Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1792. The "Queen City of the West" then contained the old fort, and a few log houses, and gave little promise of the greatness it was to attain in after years. Mr. Rossman only remained there one year, removing to Pittsburgh, Penn., at the end of that time. At a later date he returned to Ohio, locating at Franklin, Warren County, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1845. Alfred, the subject of this sketch, was born at Franklin, Ohio, in 1811, and in his youth received such an education as the schools of early days afforded. At the age of fifteen years, he became a saddler's apprentice at Eaton, Ohio, and spent five years in acquiring a thorough knowledge of that trade. As a journeyman, he visited New Orleans and other portions of the South, Southern Indiana and Ohio, and other points, and located at Winchester, Ind., in the spring of 1838. Here he established the first harness and saddle shop, and manufactured the first saddle ever made in Randolph County. Prior to his arrival, traders often passed this point with saddles to sell to the Indians and others who would buy them. Among the traders were his brother, James Rossman, and William Taylor. The first saddle manufactured in this county was a highly ornamental one, and sold for $50 at a time when ready cash was a scarce commodity. It was handsomely gilded and burnished, and covered with buckskin, which had been dyed a blue-black color by the Indians. While working at Rossville, Ohio, Mr. Rossman made a saddle similar to this for Godfrey, the Miami Chief. It pleased the old Indian so that he would ride a few rods, then dismount to admire its marvelous beauty, and after riding a little farther dismount again, surveying it with as much satisfaction as a child would feel in the possession of a new toy. From 1838 to 1876, Mr. Rossman was engaged constantly at his trade in the town of Winchester, and during that period manifested the most untiring energy and enthusiasm in the prosecution of his chosen vocation; and by good management and honest toil accumulated a comfortable fortune. He retired from active business about the year 1876, and now enjoys the rest well earned by years of labor. He was always a public-spirited citizen, and took an active part in developing the county by encouraging and patronizing public improvements; yet he was never ambitious, and with the exception of a term in the Town Council of Winchester, never occupied public office. He has long been known as an upright, reliable citizen, and throughout his life his dealings have commanded the confidence and esteem of his fellow-men. He was married, in 1841, to Miss Hannah Reeder, sister of Hon. Martin Reeder, of Winchester, who still lives to cheer the years of his later life. They are the parents of three children, who have grown to maturity and taken their places among the honored and respected citizens of the community.

NATHAN C. SIMMONS was born May 26, 1844, in Jackson Township, Randolph Co., Ind., and is the son of James Simmons, who located in this county in 1821, and remained here until his death, which took place in 1878. Nathan, the subject of this sketch, was reared on the home farm, and in his boyhood divided his time between farm work and work in the saw-mill, of which his father was the proprietor. In August, 1863, he enlisted in Company F, of the Sixty-ninth Indiana Regiment, from which he was honorably discharged on account of impaired health, after being in the service for about a year. In the spring of 1865 he re-enlisted, serving until the close of the war, in the Thirty-third Regiment, Indiana Veteran Volunteers. In the fall of 1865, he entered Liber College, where he spent three terms, and, at the close of that period, entered Ridgeville College, with the view of graduating. On account of impaired health, however, he was compelled to abandon this plan, and left the college after a course of two and a half years. He taught school until 1874, being engaged in the meantime, during the summer, in the study of the law, in the office of Monks & Watson, at Winchester. In 1875, he was admitted to the bar, but did not engage in the practice, because, about the same time, he was appointed Deputy Treasurer under H. B. Hunt, and served in that capacity for two years. He then embarked in the grocery trade at Winchester, and has been engaged in mercantile pursuits ever since, until October, 1882, at which time he sold out. He was married, in October, 1875, to Miss Ellen Kem, daughter of William and Lydia Kem, who were early settlers of Wayne County, Ind., but now are living near Winchester. By this union they are the parents of four children, viz., Detroit M., Maty O., Everett E. and William C. Mr. Simmons is an industrious, energetic man, and is highly esteemed by all who know him. He is a Master Mason in Winchester Lodge, and in politics, a Republican.

EZRA STONE.

Ezra Stone was born in the State of Rhode Island, May 11, 1791, and in 1812 removed to Madison County, N. Y. In 1817, he located at Marietta, Ohio, and some time subsequently removed to Aurora, Ind. Here he became the victim of misfortunes which almost ultimated in financial ruin. He owned a farm near Aurora, and one year constructed a flat-boat for the purpose of transporting his grain to New Orleans. The expedition proved unsuccessful, since, after arriving at his destination, he could not find a market for the grain. He had, however, taken with him a lot of cattle belonging to a neighbor, disposing of them at a fair price. He borrowed the money received from the sale of the cattle, and with it paid for having his corn shelled, preparatory to shipping it to Savannah, Ga., around the Gulf. But, as if disaster were determined to follow him, the corn became spoiled in transit, and was found worthless at the end of the voyage. Thus he lost both the corn and the money for his neighbor's cattle. The voyage occupied a period of six months, and its consequences involved him in serious embarrassment. Subsequently, he embarked in a "pirogue" with his family, for the purpose of removing to Cincinnati, and at the solicitation of some merchants took with him a huge basket of eggs, the basket holding as much as three or four barrels. He drew his pirogue toward the shore, when his wife, in attempting to walk from the boat with her child, lost her balance and fell overboard. Mr. Stone grasped the child from her arms, and, throwing it back upon the boat, landed it squarely in the basket of eggs, creating terrible havoc. He rescued his wife, however, and they reached Cincinnati without further adventure. Mr. Stone was a master-builder, and often went to New Orleans to work at his trade, during the winter sersons, and was usually accompanied by his sons, Asahel and William. In the winter of 1838, his wife accompanied him on one of his annual journeys thither, and died while there. His daughter Lois, just merging into a sweet womanhood, also died there in 1838. Of the six children constituting his family, only two now survive, viz., Gen. Asahel Stone, of Winchester, and Capt. William D. Stone, D. D., of Union City, Ind. In 1839, Mr. Stone removed with his family to Indiana, locating at Winchester, and in 1843 he married Polly Edwards. He purchased land in Randolph County, owning at one time a part of the "old Fort." Here he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until failing eyesight compelled him to retire from active labor. He died August 8, 1848, his wife surviving him about five years. In politics, Mr. Stone acted with the Whigs, and although an active worker in the ranks, never sought or held public office. He was a consistent member of the Baptist Church, living his religion in his daily life. He was a public-spirited man, alive to all the better and higher interests of the community, and the indorser and patron of all enterprises having for their object the promotion of the public welfare. He died regretted by all who knew him, for in life he possessed their warmest regard and most affectionate esteem. His remains now rest in that beautiful city of the dead, Fountain Park Cemetery.

GEN. ASAHEL STONE.

ASAHEL, son of Ezra Stone, was born June 29, 1817, near Marietta, Washington Co., Ohio, removing with his parents to Aurora, Ind., in 1818, and to

Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1822. On the 23d of September, 1837, he was united in marriage with Miss Lydia B. Preston, at Finneytown, near Cincinnati, Ohio. In boyhood he learned the carpenter's trade, and in his sojourns at New Orleans, as his father's assistant, formed an attachment for that city, and removed thither with his wife shortly after marriage. In 1839, however, he came to Winchester, and has ever since been one of its prominent and influential citizens. Until the outbreak of the late rebellion, he was engaged at the carpenter trade in Winchester and vicinity, but on the 29th of May, 1861, was appointed by Gov. Morton as Commissary General for the State of Indiana, and, on the 15th of October, 1862, was appointed Quartermaster General. In his official capacity he proved himself a superior man. In the work of looking after the interests of the soldiers, securing and forwarding supplies, providing sanitary stores, nurses and medical attention for the sick and wounded, and in the discharge of all the varied and arduous duties of his position, he was zealous, patriotic and self-sacrificing. He rendered valuable service to the cause, and great reliance was placed in his judgment and discretion by Gov. Morton, who frequently commended him in his annual messages to the Legislature. His field of labor was varied and extensive, requiring executive ability of a high order, which he developed in a marked degree. In his message of January 6, 1865, Gov. Morton said: "The report of the Quartermaster and Commissary General is herewith laid before you, and your attention is especially called to its contents. The administration of this department by Gen. Stone has been highly successful and satisfactory." And under date of January 11, 1867, the following tribute to his fidelity occurs: "The [Quartermaster's] Department has been a large and cumbrous machine, but has been managed with great fidelity, ability and success, for which Gen. Stone is well entitled to the thanks of the State. His position has been one of great labor and responsibility, and its duties have been performed to my entire satisfaction. Your attention is especially invited to the interesting details in his report." After the close of the war, he returned to the farm in Randolph County, and for a while was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1865, however, he became identified with the banking interests of Winchester, and was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of this city. He was elected President, and by annual re-election held that position the most of the time until the institution ceased to exist as a national bank in October, 1878. Its circulation was withdrawn, and it was reorganized as a bank under the laws of the State. Gen. Stone was elected President of the new organization, and has ever since continued to act in that capacity. One as active as he in the affairs of private and business life is seldom permitted to remain long out of politics; and in his case his friends began to look upon him when quite young, as the proper person for important public positions. In 1847, when only thirty years old, he was nominated by the Whig party of this county for the Indiana House of Representatives, and elected in the fall of that year. In 1848, he was nominated as a member of the Constitutional Convention, and was only defeated by four votes. In 1860, he was elected to the Indiana Senate, where he served with distinction, and was honored with important trusts as a member of various Senate Committees. The war and his connection with it here interrupted his public life, but after the restoration of peace he again became the standard-bearer of his party at the earnest solicitation of friends, and, in 1867, was again elected as the Representative from this county in the General Assembly of Indiana. In all his public life, his actions were characterized by a sincere sense of honor, and of duty to his constituents and their best interests. He retired from his position with the good will of his associates, and the confidence of the people of the county which he so efficiently served. A review of his career from the farm to the Legislature, from there to the department of the army which he so well administered, and to his successful life as a business man and financial manager proves him a gentleman of rare attainments and versatility. It is a noteworthy fact, too, that his ability is self-acquired, his boyhood and youth having been spent in the early days of this county's history, when but few educational privileges existed. His education is practical, rather than scholastic, and has served him well in his financial undertakings. In November, 1881, he was elected Secretary, Treasurer and General Manager of the Winchester Wagon Works, an enterprise of great importance among the manufacturing industries of this city. To the details of this business he devotes his energies with the same zest that has marked his appreciation of all the trusts ever confided to him. He has reached the "shady side" of a noble life; yet in spirit he is young and cheerful. His splendid business habits have returned him goodly stores of worldly wealth, but instead of seeking to enhance a fortune already ample, he has found his greatest pleasure in distributing his means in such a manner as to make others happy. A few years ago he erected a row of neat, tasteful cottages opposite his own palatial home in the southern suburbs of Winchester, fitting them with many conveniences, and letting them out at a moderate rental, thus securing the comfort and happiness of his tenants. In the spring of 1880, he purchased and donated to the town of Winchester forty acres of land for a public cemetery. He purchased the ground at a cost of $4,000, and had it surveyed and platted at an additional expense of $300, and on the 1st day of March, 1880, secured it to its purpose by a deed, signed by himself and his worthy wife, conveying the premises in trust forever to a Board of Control, to be used for the purpose designated. On the 3d day of July, 1880, a public dedication was held, at which very appropriate ceremonies were held, and addresses delivered by prominent citizens of Winchester, and others from abroad, and the park named "Fountain Park Cemetery."

We omit to mention in detail his many public and private benefactions, but we feel assured of the sanction of the community when we say that he is a leading spirit in all matters of public interest, and an unselfish worker for the promotion of the public welfare. He is an uncompromising hater of intemperance, and many years ago entered the temperance ranks as an active worker. He was a prominent member of the Washingtonians, Sons of Temperance, and the Independent order of Good Templars, and attended the State and General Conventions of these orders, serving as Grand Worthy Chief Templar for two years, and as Grand Worthy Secretary for an equal length of time, and has been for twenty-five years a leading Odd Fellow. His uniformly temperate habits have secured to him their usual results—a strong constitution and the preservation of his mental powers in all their vigor. He is simple in his habits, modest and unassuming in his deportment, prompt and accurate in his business methods, and one whose companionship is refining and elevating. Though not himself a church member, he is a cheerful contributor to the support of the Gospel, realizing its effect for good upon the community. In politics, as previously stated, he was formerly identified with the Whig party. He cast his first vote for Gen. Harrison in the memorable campaign of 1840, and was always radically anti-slavery in sentiment. Upon the organization of the Republican party in 1856, he became one of its adherents, and in the intervening years has been one of its most active and efficient workers. He occupies a place in the hearts of the community which none but he can fill, and is one of those men whose identity with a town is a public blessing, and whose death is a public calamity. The bride of his early years is spared by a kind Providence to share and enjoy with him the triumphs of his later life; and while the weight of years has turned to silver the fresh young locks of girlhood, in her heart she is still young. Their wedded life has been a happy one, although it has been blessed by no children, and it seems a misfortune that, in the course of a few years at best, there will be none to perpetuate the name to which this community owes so much. But it will live long in the memory of many to whom kindly deeds have been done by the General and his noble wife, while substantial reminders will exist in the public works of the town. We cannot close this sketch of the General's life without saying a few words of her who has been so truly his helpmate and such an important coadjutor in his success. Lydia B. Preston was born November 25, 1817, in Hamilton County, near Cincinnati, Ohio. Her maternal grandfather, Samuel Raymond, was one of Cincinnati's earliest pioneers, having located there in 1790. He was a farmer, and his children were nearly all engaged in the same pursuit. His daughter, the mother of Mrs. Stone, married John Preston, an industrious farmer of Hamilton County, and, like the majority of wives in those early days, was thoroughly inured to work, lending a helping hand to her husband in his struggle for the acquisition of a fortune. Lydia, the daughter, inherited the habits of industry that were so truly characteristic of the race by whom the forest was first felled, and under whom civilization was inaugurated and advanced in the West, and these habits became so much a part of her nature as to mark and govern all her life. As illustrative of this fact, it may be stated that she has always been known as an early riser, and her promptness in this particular has been quite remarkable. By 4 o'clock every morning, she is up and about her housework, and perhaps there has not been a morning during her wedded life in which she has not kindled the first fire, except when prevented by sickness. Trifling as this may appear at first sight, it has proved of great advantage to her husband, who has been enabled thereby to be always early at his work, ready to meet and direct men in his employ, avoiding unnecessary waste of time, which delays at home would naturally have occasioned. It is one feature of the course she has always pursued, i. e., to help her husband, and its effect is observed in the final result. To her energy and good management, her advice and counsel, and the active interest she always manifested in his affairs, her husband acknowledges his indebtedness for his financial success. To a common-school education she unites the qualities of a fine intellect, and is as familiar with business methods as with the details of household work. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church when a girl, and in all the years that have ensued she has been a devout and consistent member, taking a leading part in all charitable and benevolent work in this community, while in the temperance work she has been especially active. She was identified with the Good Templars and other temperance organizations as long as they existed in this community. To the children, she is especially kind and friendly, and in their young hearts her memory is sacredly enshrined by her many kind deeds for the little ones, among whom she is affectionately known as "Aunt Lydia." In the social circle, she is a general favorite, and her uniform kindliness to those with whom she has been associated has gained for her their affectionate regard. She is well preserved and sprightly, and we join with her many friends in the wish that she may be spared yet many years to the community in which she has so long resided, and to the husband whose life she has blessed.

HENRY TAYLOR SEMANS,

Winchester, Ind., was born at Macksville, Randolph Co., Ind., July 30, 1837. His father, Solomon M. Semans, was a native of Highland County, Ohio, his mother, Hester Ann (McIntire) Semans, of Randolph County, Ind. His parents were among the hardy pioneers, and of the class who by dint of industry and economy have done so much to develop our country to the high state of excellence we now enjoy. The youthful days of young Henry T. were spent in the uneventful rounds of farm life, with but meager opportunities for gaining information or knowledge of the ways of the world, being only such as were afforded by the district school. Desirous of gaining a more liberal education than they afforded, he attended Liber College in 1858–59, for three terms. After leaving college, he was engaged as clerk by the firm of McKee & Keener, who at that time kept a general supply store for the country trade at Farmland, Ind. Here Mr. Semans rapidly gained an insight into business, and early displayed many of those excellent qualities which have marked his career. In August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company A, Eighty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and upon the organization of the company he was chosen and mustered in as First Lieutenant. He participated in all the campaigns in which his regiment was engaged, and was in many severe conflicts, the principal of which were Chickamauga, Resaca, Franklin and Nashville. He, with his regiment, remained in the field until the close of the war, and was mustered out June 14, 1865. After his return home, he was appointed Deputy County Clerk under John B. Goodrich. In 1868, he was elected by the Republicans Clerk of Randolph Circuit Court, which responsible position he filled with marked ability for four years. After retiring from the Clerk's office, he engaged for some years in the grain trade, but since 1876 has not been engaged in any special business, having accumulated a handsome fortune, which he proposes to enjoy in a rational manner. He was married to Miss Mary J. Edger, daughter of Edward Edger, of Winchester, Ind., October 8, 1867, a lady of most excellent character, who has in all respects proved a worthy companion. They are the parents of three promising sons. Mr. Semans, while not a man of radical character, has always been a pronounced Republican, and, so far as he ever attempted, a very successful politician. He is not a member of any religious denomination, and is liberal in his views on all theological questions.

CLINTON D. SMITH, Winchester, Ind., was born at Williamsburg, Clermont Co., Ohio, February 26, 1828; he was the son of Stephen and Sarah (Kain) Smith, who were of German descent, and came to Ohio from New Jersey. Mr. Smith, Sr., was a mill-wright by trade, but early placed his son, Clinton D., to learn the printing business in the office of the county paper published at Batavia. Young Smith went to Iowa, in 1847, and engaged in publishing the Ottumwa Courier for eighteen months, but on account of poor health was obliged to dispose of it, after which he returned to Ohio, and was engaged on the Herald of Freedom at Wilmington for two years, and on the Independent at Greenfield for two years. Mr. Smith came to Indiana in 1854, and engaged to publish the Connersville Telegraph for one year, during which time he was married to Miss Eliza Irvin, daughter of Robert Irvin, late of Randolph County, October 11, 1855, who has in all respects been to him a worthy companion, and is a lady of excellent social standing. They are the parents of four children, three of whom are living. At the beginning of 1856, Mr. Smith removed to Winchester, and purchased the Journal, and began the publication of the first Republican paper in Eastern Indiana; he continued its proprietor for four years, after which he purchased the Times at Muncie, Ind., in which publication he was engaged at the breaking-out of the rebellion, when he sold out and enlisted in the Nineteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, where he served one year, when he returned and aided in recruiting the Eighty-fourth Regiment, enlisting as a private in Company E; he shared in its toilsome and dangerous campaigns, and was promoted to First Lieutenant of Company C for good conduct; he was severely wounded at Chickamauga, his left arm being shattered, from the effects of which he remains an invalid. He was honorably discharged, having faithfully served his country for three years. Since his return, he has been engaged in theprinting business as foreman of the Herald, and recently in the same capacity with the Journal. Mr. Smith is not a member of any church, but is liberal in his views on theological questions; he has led a busy life, and is deserving the esteem in which he is held by his friends and neighbors.

WASHINGTON B. SNEDEKER was born in 1825 in Tuscarawas County, Ohio; his father, Jacob Snedeker, was born in Virginia about the year 1789, and was of Scotch descent. Four brothers by the name of Snedeker emigrated from Scotland to Long Island at an early day, and from them have descended all who bear that name in America. Jacob Snedeker removed to Knox County Ohio, locating between Mount Vernon and Londonville, where he died in 1834. His widow married again, and removed to Mercer County, Ohio, in 1837. Washington, the subject of this sketch, attended the common schools, and acquired a good English education; he became an apprentice at the carpenter's trade when a young man, and acquired great proficiency as a mechanic. In 1841, he returned to Knox County, Ohio, where he was engaged at his trade for four years. In 1845, he returned to Mercer County, and in 1846 was married to Charlotte Hossler, who died in 1852. By this union they were the parents of three children. In 1857, he married Jane Maddock, one child being the fruit of this second union. Until 1854, he was engaged at his trade, but in that year embarked in in the daguerreotype business, leading a migratory life, traveling from town to town in his car, and taking pictures in all towns of any consequence in Northeastern Indiana, and Van Wert, Mercer and Darke Counties, Ohio; he located at Winchester, Ind., in 1863, and from that date until 1876 he owned and operated a planing mill at this place, and from 1876 to 1880 he was the proprietor of a restaurant. He possesses rare genius as a mechanic, and has designed and invented several articles of practical value, among them being the churn and a chair. In early life, he spent a great deal of time and money in studying and perfecting projects, and still delights in developing new methods of convenience and utility. By a life of industry and prudent management, he has accumulated a comfortable fortune, and by his honorable and upright nature has gained the esteem of his fellow-men. He is the proprietor of a brick block on Main street, containing four good business rooms on the ground floor, while the second story contains a commodious exhibition room, capable of seating 600 people. The hall is a model of convenience and safety, possessing ready means of access and egress, and thoroughness of ventilation.

JOHN L. STAKEBAKE.

John L. Stakebake was born in Preble County, Ohio, January 13, 1837. His father, John Stakebake, was a native of Pennsylvania, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1853. He was a millwright, but did little work at his trade after locating in this county, as he died in the same year (1853). He had a family of eleven children, ten of whom grew to maturity, and nine are now living. Eight of this number are married. John L., the subject of this sketch, was reared on a farm, and learned the carpenter's trade when a young man. He came to Randolph County, with his father, in 1853, but returned to Ohio in the following year, where he worked at his trade. In 1858, he was married, in Preble County, Ohio, to Miss Mary E. Brawley, and in the following year removed, with his wife, to Randolph County, Ind., and located on a farm about four miles south of Winchester, where he remained for four years. At the end of that time, he returned to Winchester, where he was engaged at his trade. In 1870, he embarked in the manufacture and sale of furniture at Winchester, in which he has ever since been successfully engaged. In 1864, while engaged in contracting and carpenter work, Mr. Stakebake enlisted as a private soldier in Company F, of the One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Ohio Regiment, and served in the Virginia campaigns until the spring of 1865, when he was honorably discharged. As a business man and manufacturer, he has been very successful, and as a citizen and neighbor he is highly esteemed by all who know him. In politics, he has always been identified with the Republican party, and although never an aspirant for office, he has been called upon, at various times, to fill local positions of honor and trust. In 1876, he was elected a member of the School Board of the town of Winchester, and was appointed Treasurer of the Board, in which capacity he still continues to act. He is an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and stands high in the order. He is an upright, honorable man, and deserves and enjoys the respect of his fellow-citizens. His wedded life has been blessed by five children, named, respectively, Marion A., Frank E., Irma V. and Oak. One died in infancy.

L. W. STUDY.

Levi W. Study was born August 23, 1849, in Randolph County, Ind. His father, Levi Study, was born in Wayne County, Ind., and reared on a farm there. He came to Randolph County about the year 1842, and purchased a tract of unimproved land in Washington Township, within five miles of Winchester. He died here, at the age of thirty-five years, in 1849, his wife surviving him until 1863. Levi, the subject of this sketch, remained at home with his mother until her decease, which occurred in March, 1863, and afterward made his home with his married sister, working out during the day as a farm laborer. At the age of eighteen years, in the winter of 1867–68, he began teaching school, and continued this line of employment for two years, in the meantime attending a summer school at Winchester. In December, 1869, he entered the law office of his brother John, at Union City, and began the study of law. Shortly afterward, he removed, with his brother to Rushville, Ind., and, continuing his studies there for two years, went West at the end of that time in quest of a location. After visiting several cities, he returned to his native county, and on the 22d of July, 1872, was admitted to the bar of this county, and entered at once upon the practice of his chosen profession at Winchester. On the 1st of December, 1874, partnership relations were entered into between himself and James S. Engle, which continued until December, 1880. Since that time, Mr. Study has practiced alone. He was married, on the 20th of April, 1876, to Miss Louisa, daughter of Adam Hirsch, Esq., a prominent citizen of Winchester. By this union, they are the parents of one son—Carl A. As an attorney, Mr. Study has risen rapidly, and occupies a place among the best at the bar of Randolph County. He is honorable and conscientious, devoted to the interests of his clients, safe as a counselor, and able as a pleader. In September, 1881, he was appointed by Hon. L. J. Monks to the office of Master Commissioner of this county—an office of responsibility and importance. In politics, Mr. Study has always affiliated with the Republican party, and during his residence at Winchester has attended every State, county and district convention, either in the capacity of a delegate or spectator. He is an active worker, and has accomplished good results in the interest of the party. He has never held public office, and never permitted his name to be used as a candidate. In private life, he is esteemed by all who know him for his gentlemanly bearing and uniform kindness and courtesy. He was one of the charter members of Winchester Lodge, No. 91, Knights of Pythias, and was the first Past Chancellor of the lodge. He is now Deputy Grand Chancellor. He was made a Mason in July, 1880, in Winchester Lodge, No. 56. He is now Royal Arch Captain in Randolph Chapter, No. 35, Deputy Illustrious Master in Winchester Council, No. 20, R. & S. M., and Junior Warden of Winchester Lodge, No. 56. He is also a member of the Commandery at Richmond, Ind. He united with Winchester Lodge, No. 121, I. O. O. F., in June, 1873, and in October of the same year became a member of White River Encampment, No. 50, and is now Senior Warden in the latter body.

IRA TRIPP was born April 23, 1828, within eight miles of the city of Toronto, Canada. His father, David Tripp, was born in Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1787, and was married there to Susan Weller, who was born in the same county in 1813. The father removed, with his family, to the Dominion of Canada, where he died in 1843. He had eight children, four of whom are now living. Ira, the subject of this sketch, enjoyed but limited educational advantages in boyhood, walking three miles to a log schoolhouse of the rudest type, and acquiring his primary education under the instructions of a teacher as rude as the school and its surroundings. He went to the State of New York in 1852, and after the removal to that State completed a course of study at Willson Academy, Niagara County. He was reared on a farm, and during boyhood and youth his time was principally employed in the performance of farm work. When eighteen years of age, he became a clerk in a mercantile establishment, at Willson, N. Y, and later engaged independently in mercantile pursuits. In 1857, he located in Darke County, Ohio, where he sold goods for several years, removing to Winchester, Ind., in December, 1864. Here he again engaged in mercantile pursuits, which he continued successfully for a number of years, retiring from this branch of business in 1870. In 1871, he was elected Justice of the Peace, but resigned in 1872. In April, 1880, he was elected Trustee of White River Township, and is now serving in that capacity. In politics, he is identified with the Republican party, and was elected as the candidate of that party. In the discharge of his official duties, he has proved himself efficient and faithful, and has won the confidence of the public by his administration of the office. His jurisdiction contains an area of more than seventy square miles, and includes twenty-one schoolhouses, besides those at Winchester—the oversight of these interests requiring a large amount of time and labor. He is an untiring worker, and exhibits commendable enthusiasm in the cause of public education. He has been a resident of Winchester for eighteen years, and during this period has always arrayed himself on the side of honor and right, establishing a good name, and gaining recognition as among the best citizens of the community. He was married, in 1860, to Miss Christina Jane Lawrence, of Darke County, Ohio. She is an estimable lady, and a general favorite in the social circle.

WILLIAM A. THOMPSON.

Mr. Thompson is a prominent member of the Randolph County bar. He was born August 8, 1840, in Shelby County, Ill. The families of both his parents were among the earliest settlers of that county, and were prominent participants in the events of its early and later history. The subject of this sketch is the eldest of a family of sixteen children, fourteen of whom are now living, and eleven married and settled in life. His early life was spent on the home farm, working during the farming season, and attending school during the winter. He first attended the district school near his home, subsequently entering the Shelbyville High School, then known as one of the best in the State. In 1860, he went to Moore's Hill, Ind., and became a student in the college at that place. He spent the college year of 1860–61 in study, leaving school at the outbreak of the war. At the age of eighteen years, he took charge of the graded schools at St. Paul, Ind., and afterward taught six months in the district schools of Shelby County, achieving fair success as a teacher. He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church at the age of sixteen years, and in 1862 entered the ministry of that denomination. In the following year, he joined the Southeastern Indiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and traveled as a member of that body for eight years. In 1863, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary R. Wilkinson, who died in 1865, leaving one child. After the death of his wife, he again entered Moore's Hill College, where he spent the college year of 1867–68. In 1868, he was married to Miss Elizabeth S. Lamb, daughter of Judge Lamb, of Indianapolis, and resumed his ministerial labors. On account of failing health, he withdrew from the Conference, and retired from the ministry in 1870, and shortly afterward began the study of law in the office of Judge Lamb, finishing his studies in the office of Gordon, Browne & Lamb, at Indianapolis. In June, 1871, he located at Winchester, and began the practice of his profession. He was at first associated with Gen. Thomas M. Browne, from 1871 to 1873, forming partnership relations with Judge J. J. Cheney, in the latter year, which continued until 1874. From 1874 to 1879, he was the partner of Judge L. J. Monks, and since the dissolution of this relation has been associated with Capt. A. O. Marsh. As an attorney, he has achieved marked success, and combines with his legal attainments the virtues of a Christian gentleman. He is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Winchester, in which he has held, and still holds, responsible official positions. He is an able and effectual pleader, and a safe and conscientious counselor. The firm of which he is a member have been engaged in the defense of five persons accused of murder, during the past few years, and have gained a reputation for success in this specialty. Although an active politician, Mr. Thompson has always refused to be a candidate for public position. He is a stanch Republican, and has canvassed the county several times in the interest of his party, with good results. He is a man of positive temperament, firm in his convictions, and forcible and fearless in his adhesion to principles. He is esteemed by all who know him, as an upright, honorable man. He is identified with the Masonic Lodge of Winchester, and is an active member of that fraternity.

RICHMOND THORNBURG was born September 19, 1819, in Perry Township, Wayne County, Ind. In early life he learned the carpenter's trade, and followed that occupation for three years. Subsequently he learned the tailor's trade, and finding the latter more to his taste, has made it his occupation through life; he located in Randolph County, Ind., in November, 1860, and voted for President Lincoln two days later; he resided six years at Bloomingsport, in this county, where he occupied the position of clerk in a store. In 1866, he removed to Farmland, and in 1867 to Camden, Jay County, Ind. In November, he returned to Farmland, and later in the same year, located again at Winchester, where he has ever since devoted his time and attention to the pursuits of his chosen occupation; he has achieved pronounced success in this line, having been engaged at this vocation for thirty-five years. On the 26th of January, 1866, he was married to Miss Hannah Etta Semans, in Wayne County, Ind. By this union they are the parents of two children, named respectively Thomas M. and Myrtle May. Mrs. Thornburg is the daughter of David Semans, who was the father of twenty-four children, sixteen of whom are still living. Her father died in April, 1881, aged seventy-four years. Mr. Thornburg is identified with the Masonic fraternity of Winchester, having attained the degree of Master Mason. In politics, he is a Republican; he has never sought nor accepted public office, but has always taken an active interest in public affairs and the success of his party. He is highly regarded by all who have known him, and is a worthy and estimable citizen.

WASHINGTON ULLOM was born in Virginia March 19, 1815, and is a son of William and Ada Ullom. He was brought up on a farm; his parents moved with their family to Preble County, Ohio, in 1822, and to Darke County, Ohio, in 1825. Mr. Ullom was married in 1837, to Mary Miller, a native of Wheeling, Va. They have had eleven children, ten living—Isabell, Ada, Sarah J., Almira, Mary A., Rebecca, Alice, George W., William H. and Jacob A. Mr. Ullom came to this county in 1863; owns 103 acres of land, and is engaged in farming.

HON. THOMAS WARD.

Mr. Ward is a worthy representative of that class of citizens in this community who are justly styled our self-made men; men who have risen from humble positions to affluence and high standing, unaided by adventitious circumstances, and having only their own industry and native ability to thank for their attainments. He is of the grandson of Thomas Ward, a native of North Carolina, in which State he lived during the Revolutionary war. He was a Quaker, and took no part in that struggle, though both the Americans and British tried unsuccessfully to force him into service. He had a brother who was a Colonel in the American army, and a brave officer. Thomas Ward had a family of eight children—two sons and six daughters—all of whom, except Sarah, the eldest daughter, emigrated to Randolph County, Ind. Joel, the eldest son, and Joab, the father of the subject of this sketch, came to this county in 1819. Mary, the second daughter, married Joseph Moffatt, father of Zimri Moffatt, of Randolph County; Margery married Elias Kizer, father of Thomas W. and Henry P. Kizer, of Winchester; Nancy married Mr. Tomlinson, and Lydia married Thomas Pierce; Elizabeth married Burkett Pierce, one of the earliest settlers on the Mississinewa in this county. She is now deceased, but her husband still survives, having attained the advanced age of ninety years. Joab Ward was long a prominent and influential citizen of Ward Township, and was one of the earliest settlers of that locality. He endured the hardships and privations incident to pioneer life, and watched the growth of the settlement from a scattered collection of log cabins to a thrifty farming community; and in all the public improvements inaugurated during his life he bore a full share of the burden. He was an honorable, upright man, and possessed the confidence and good will of all who knew him. He died in 1874, and his remains, as also those of his wife, rest in the Friends' Cemetery at White River Chapel.

Thomas, the subject of this sketch, was reared in a pioneer settlement, and his early life was passed like that of all boys who have been similarly situated. Work at home demanded the most of his time, but in the winter he was permitted to attend school, and there, in one of those schoolhouses so truly characteristic of early days in Indiana, he began his education. His advantages were limited, but his father's house was the resort of travelers, many of whom were very intelligent men, and took pleasure in imparting a portion of their knowledge to the boy, who always evinced an inquiring disposition, and learned readily. Thus, by patient study in leisure hours, and by intercourse with intelligent men, he laid the foundation for a splendid business education, and was well prepared for the active life of later years. At an early age, he began trading with his neighbors, and nearly all his transactions redounded to his success, so that, when twenty-one years of age, he had accumulated 600 acres of land. His first earnings were made by "deadening" timber for new purchasers. He would take the contract for "deadening" the timber on these lands, and after sub-letting it, usually had a profit left for himself. He never retrograded in his financial standing; the property which he had accumulated during the years of his minority stimulated him to greater achievements, and in the years which followed he found his prospects brightening, and his prosperity increasing. In 1840, he was married, and in 1841 removed to a tract of land near Ridgeville, from which he developed a good farm. This farm was cleared and improved by himself, and after cultivating it for four years, he removed to Winchester, and embarked in mercantile pursuits at this point. He was thus engaged until 1870, carrying a general stock for a part of the time, and later in the hardware trade exclusively, while at another time he was the proprietor of a harness shop. He was one of the first friends of the Cincinnati, Richmond & Fort Wayne Railroad, and was one of the Board of Directors. He had invested $35,000 in stock, but it was found that the company would be unable to complete the road to Fort Wayne. Upon this discovery, the Directors sold the road to another company, and by the change he lost all he had invested, except about $3,100. In 1865, he became one of the company who organized the First National Bank of Winchester, and served as its President until 1868. He served as one of its Directors at the same time, and still continues to act in this capacity. The bank retired its circulation in 1878, and was reorganized under the State Banking Law, and is still continued as one of the prosperous and substantial institutions of this town. Mr. Ward has been called to fill other places of trust of a public nature. He was the Whig candidate for Sheriff of Randolph County in 1841, but the party was divided against itself at that time, and he was defeated by the opposition. In 1864, he was elected to the Indiana Senate, and at once arose to a position of prominence and honor, serving on important committees. He voted for the ratification of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and introduced a bill to admit the testimony of colored witnesses in cases where white litigants were involved. He also introduced a bill to make the sale of liquor a penal offense, and served as Chairman of the Committee on Corporations. The bill to compel railroad corporations to furnish transportation and equalize freights was also introduced by him. He served his constituency well, and retired from his official position with the good will of all good people. His political affiliations were first with the Whig party, but since the organization of the Republican party, he has acted with the latter. He is a valuable member, and has done effectual work for the good of the party. He was never an aspirant for political honors, and his candidacy, in both cases, was at the solicitation of his friends. He is a man to whom defeat is intolerable, and his political canvasses were conducted with the same vigor and energy that have characterized his career as a business man.

By his industry and good management, Mr. Ward has accumulated a competence, and is regarded one of the wealthiest citizens of Winchester. Yet his ample fortune has not changed his kindly nature, and among those who know him best he is esteemed as a kind and amiable friend. His dealings with his fellow men have always been governed by a high sense of honor, and his integrity is above reproach. He has long been identified with the temperance movement, and has boldly arrayed himself among the advocates of public morality and good order. Whatever seems to him to be of public benefit receives his support and encouragement; but he has always discountenanced what seemed to him reckless extravagance. He has grown up with this county, watching its progress, and lending a helping hand to its public enterprises.

He has been married four times: first, in 1840, to Sarah Ellen Tharp, who died in 1852. He was married to Jane Swayne, of Richmond, Ind., in 1854. She died in 1865, leaving three children. His third wife was Susan Lykins, who died in 1873, leaving two children. In April, 1876, he was united in marriage with Laurinda, daughter of Isaiah Osborn, Esq. By this union, they are the parents of one child.

At the age of sixty-three years, Mr. Ward is still active and vigorous—attending regularly to matters of business—and enjoying the rewards of a life of industry, while he possesses the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens. In 1880, he was one of the organizers of the Ridgeville Bank, at Ridgeville, and has been prominently identified with this institution ever since. Upon the death of its President, Arthur McKew, Esq., in January, 1882, he was chosen as Mr. McKew's successor for the unexpired term, and in July, 1882, was elected President for the current year. His identity with this bank has been greatly for the good of the institution, which has prospered from the first, while his counsel and experience in financial affairs have materially aided its prosperity.

HON. E. L. WATSON.

Enos L., son of James and Nancy Watson, was born December 22, 1830, in Greene County, Ohio. His father was a farmer, but died while the son was an infant, and the later life of the latter was passed under the care of a step-father. In 1832, he came with his mother to Randolph County, Ind., and located on a farm near Deerfield. The region around them was unsettled, and they had no near neighbors. Their own farm was a wilderness, and the boy spent a large share of his time assisting his step-father to clear and improve it. He shared the experiences incident to pioneer life, with but few educational privileges. In 1848, when eighteen years of age, he came to Winchester, anxious to enter the world in the struggle for fortune, and to be his own master. The County Seminary then stood with open door, inviting entrance, and from 1849 to 1852, he was a pupil in this institution, under the excellent instruction of Prof. E. P. Cole. Later, he taught school as a means of furthering his plans for acquiring an education, but it was not long ere the watchful people took the boy in hand, giving him active employment in the woods and on the farms as County Surveyor. He was elected to this office in 1852, when scarcely more than a boy, and it was a well-merited compliment to his ability, while it was indicative of the confidence reposed in him. He performed the duties well and satisfactorily through the term for which he was first elected, and at its expiration, in 1854, was promptly re-elected for another term of two years. During his incumbency of this office, he was reading law with Judge J. J. Cheney, at Winchester, and in 1856, was admitted to practice. The public seemed to be waiting for his services, for upon the expiration of his second term as Surveyor, in 1856, he was nominated and elected to the office of Prosecuting Attorney, in which capacity he acted until 1860, having been re-elected at the expiration of his first term. Ih 1862, he was again elected to this office, serving until 1864. In that year, he entered into partnership with Judge Cheney, which relation continued until 1872. After the appointment of Judge Cheney to the Common Pleas bench, he entered into partnership with Hon. L. J. Monks. Afterward, the partnership relations between himself and Judge Cheney were resumed, and continued for two years. He is now associated with J. S. Engle. In the session of 1867–68, he was the Representative from Randolph County in the Legislature of Indiana, and was again called to serve in this capacity during the session of 1879–80. In this capacity, as in all others in which he has acted, he proved himself a man of honor and integrity, true to the interests of his constituency and the public welfare. Originally, his political affiliations were with the Democratic party, but he severed his associations with that party in consequence of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and has since stood firmly by the principles of the Republican party. He purchased the Winchester Gazette, and converted it into a stanch Republican organ, under the name of the Winchester Herald, conducting it as editor and proprietor until it passed by purchase into the hands of its present owner, John Commons. Mr. Watson has devoted his life to his profession, and has achieved a reputation at the bar of which he and his descendants may justly be proud. He ranks with the best of his colleagues as an attorney, while as a neighbor and friend, he possesses the affectionate regard of all who know him. He was married, in 1854, to Miss Mary M. Judd, an amiable and accomplished young lady, who has shared with him the hopes and disappointments, the reverses and successes of his career throughout a period of twenty-eight years, and has won her way into the hearts of a large circle of friends.

I. P. WATTS.

Isaiah P. Watts was born June 15, 1840, in Richland County, Ohio. His father, Samuel Watts, was at one time a prosperous merchant in the county, but, owing to financial reverses and impaired health, he turned to the woods of Indiana in the hope of improving his fortunes. He removed with his family to Wells County, Ind., in 1847, locating in Nottingham Township. The country was wild and rugged, and often they shot turkeys from the door of their cabin, while deer abounded, and bears were sometimes seen. Hunters from Wayne County often came to the Watts cabin, and thus many acquaintances were formed, which proved pleasant in after years. Here, on a little farm, between Camden and Bluffton, the subject of this sketch passed the days of his boyhood and youth, amid the privations and hardships incident to pioneer life, inured to toil and self-denial. Prior to the removal of the family, he had attended school in Ohio, but in the woods of Wells County he was denied this privilege. He first attended school in this State in 1850, at Rifesburg, eight miles from his home, boarding with Henry Elston, and doing farm work for his board. Although only ten years old, he cut the fire-wood, fed and attended seven head of horses, an equal number of milch cows, fourteen head of hogs and several steers. At the age of fourteen years, he worked on the railroad in winter, in order to earn funds to pay his way in school. While working for Elston, he made rapid progress in the Rifesburg school, and when seventeen years of age, having saved a little money, he started to attend Liber College. This little college had been recently founded in the wilds of Jay County, but in after years became famous as an institution of learning. He arrived at this place with a capital of $7.50; he paid $6 for tutition and $1.50 for music lessons, and four months later, left school with 65 cents in cash, and an added store of useful knowledge. He attended this college five terms, ending his school life in 1860, just as the cloud of war began to thicken and lower over the country. In August, 1861, he was united in marriage with Miss Ann Eliza Diggs, and in 1862, enlisted in Company H, of the Eighty-fourth Regiment, Indiana Volunteers. While in the army, he served much of the time on detached duty. During the winter of 1862-63, he was Chief Clerk of the General Hospital, at Ashland, Ky. In June, 1863, he was taken ill and sent to the hospital at Murfreesboro, Tenn., and during his convalescence, was transferred to Chattanooga, Tenn. There he was assigned to duty as Chief Clerk of the General Hospital, and afterward as clerk in the office of the Medical Director at Chattanooga, Tenn. In January, 1864, he was appointed Counsel of Administration, to take charge of the effects of deceased soldiers and forward them to their proper destinations. A more eloquent tribute to his honor and integrity could scarcely have been expressed. In March, 1864, he came home on a furlough of thirty days, rejoining his regiment in April, at Blue Springs, Tenn., and continuing with it until the close of the war, participating, meanwhile, in the battles of Buzzard's Roost, Tunnel Hill, Rocky-Face Ridge, Dalton, Resaca, Kingston, Pumpkin-Vine Creek, Pine Mountain, Kenesaw, Neal Dow Church, Culp's Farm, Peach-Tree Creek, the battles in front of Atlanta, Shoal's Creek, Lovejoy's, Franklin and Nashville. Since his marriage, Mr. Watts has resided at Winchester, excepting the time spent in the army. He was mustered out on the 16th of June, 1865, and returning to Winchester, engaged at the trade of a silversmith. While thus engaged, he employed all his spare time in the study of law, and was later a student in the office of Cheney & Watson. He was admitted to the bar in 1866, and from that time until 1870, was the partner of E. B. Reynolds. In 1873, he formed partnership relations with Capt. A. O. Marsh, which were continued until 1874. After that date he practiced alone. In 1876, he was the Republican candidate for Secretary of State. That canvass was one of the most exciting in the recent political history of Indiana. The State went Democratic by a majority of about 5,000, and Mr. Watts suffered the defeat that came to all the Republican candidates that year. In 1880, after an exciting canvass, he was nominated by the Republicans for the office of Clerk of the Randolph Circuit Court, a position to which he was elected in the fall of that year. He took charge of the Clerk's office in August, 1881, and has since been engaged in the duties of his position. During his incumbency he has proved himself a faithful and efficient officer, prompt in the transaction of his duties, and polite and obliging to all whose business calls them into his office. He is popular among the people of this county, and the majority by which he was elected was a flattering testimonial of the high regard in which he is held. For a number of years he has acted as a pension agent in this locality, and has had the satisfaction of aiding many a comrade, and many a widow and orphan to secure the relief awarded by a grateful country. In addition to his official duties, Mr. Watts has pastoral care of the Christian Church at Winchester. He united with this denomination early in life, and for the past eight or nine years has been identified with it as a laborer in the ministry. He is an able and convincing speaker, active and zealous in the work of religion, and self-sacrificing in his devotion to the church. In the affairs of business and every-day life, his actions are governed by a high sense of honor and right, and he has gained the confidence of the community in which he resides. His wife is an excellent lady, and has won her way into the affections of a large circle of friends by her gentle manners and uniform kindness to all classes. She is the daughter of Littleberry Diggs, one of the oldest pioneers of Randolph County, who served as Associate Judge of this county in early days. Mr. Watts and wife are the parents of five children, four of whom are now living. Their eldest daughter, Miss Inez, having graduated at the Winchester High School, is now a student at Butler University at Irvington, near Indianapolis, and gives excellent promise of high attainments in scholarship.

FRANCIS M. WAY was born January 10, 1830, in Randolph County, Ind., where he received his education and grew to manhood. He taught school in this county for several years, and in 1863, enlisted in the Union army, as a member of the Seventh Indiana Cavalry. He was mustered in as First Sergeant of Company B, in August, 1863, and on October 1, following, was promoted to the office of First Lieutenant of the same company. At Jackson, Tenn., he was granted a short leave of absence, and came home, rejoining his his regiment at Memphis. From that time until the date of his discharge from the service, he was in command of his company, and was commissioned Captain, but was never mustered as such. He was with the regiment until after the fight at Independence, Mo., taking an active part at the head of his company. His health failed, and he was incapacitated for duty to such an extent that he was discharged from the service upon the recommendation of the surgeon, and very much against his own inclinations. His discharge was made out at Memphis, Tenn., on February 11, 1865. He was a brave soldier, and always enjoyed the esteem and good-will of his comrades. He returned to Winchester, after the close of his army life, and resumed his place as a private citizen. In 1869, he was appointed Postmaster at this place, and discharged the duties of this office with great efficiency and satisfaction to the public until 1878, when he was succeeded by C. E. Ferris, the present incumbent. In the spring of 1881, he went to Minnesota, with the view of making that State his future home; but failing to find a satisfactory location, he returned to Winchester, and is now conducting a profitable trade as a merchant tailor and dealer in gents' furnishing goods. In 1858, he was united in marriage with Miss Lydia P. Ward, sister of Hon. Thomas Ward, of Winchester. By this union they are the parents of four children, three of whom are now living. His wife is an excellent lady, and the family are counted among our best citizens.

CHARLES W. WOOLVERTON, one of the leading boot and shoe dealers of Winchester, was born March 21, 1836, in Bucks County, Penn. He emigrated with his parents to Wayne County, Ind., in 1855, where his father, Charles Woolverton, Sr., still resides. In 1856, the subject of this sketch went to Richmond, Ind., to work as a shoemaker, having learned this trade from his father. In the fall of that year, he returned to his father's house at White Water, in Wayne County, and in 1857, established a shop in that town, working at his trade until the outbreak of the rebellion. In July, 1861, he enlisted in the Nineteenth Indiana Regiment, and served in the field until August, 1862. From that time until February, 1863, he was confined to the hospital, and was finally discharged for physical disability. Returning from the army, he learned the photographer's art, but finding this pursuit unfavorable to his health, he abandoned it and resumed work at his trade. He next took a stock of goods to Anderson, Ind., and was engaged in mercantile pursuits there for two years. At the end of that time he returned to White Water, resuming work at his trade. Later, he held the position of foreman in the shoe store of J. M. Williamson & Co., at Richmond, Ind., and afterward took charge of a branch store for this firm at Lewisville, Henry Co., Ind. In 1871, he conducted a shop of his own at Huntsville, Randolph Co., Ind., and in 1873, came to Winchester, where for six months he was foreman for J. T. Elliott. Later in the same year, he established himself in the boot and shoe trade in this town, and still conducts a satisfactory and extensive business. In addition to the retail trade, he is largely engaged in the manufacture of a sewed brogan, or plow-shoe, shipping annually large quantities of these to Peru, Fort Wayne, Kokomo, New Castle, and other points in Indiana and Ohio. Throughout his life he has been industrious and energetic, and his labors have yielded him an ample reward in a successful business and a comfortable income. He is genial and pleasant in his intercourse with society, and is a general favorite among his friends. Politically, he acts with the Republican party, but has never been an active politican, beyond exerting his influence for the success of the principles he holds. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, and has never since wavered in his fealty to the party. He is identified with the Masonic fraternity of Winchester, having advanced to the rank of Knight Templar. He took the Thirty-second Degree in the fall of 1881, at Indianapolis. He is a gentleman of fine moral character, and a worthy and valued citizen.

WHITE RIVER.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

This is by far the largest township in the county. It is from ten to eleven miles long and seven miles wide, embracing seventy-four sections, as follows:

Township 19 north, Range 13 east—Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

Township 20 north, Range 13 east—Sections 1 to 4, 9 to 16, 20 to 29 and 32 to 36, inclusive.

Township 19 north, Range 14 east—Sections 1 to 6 inclusive.

Township 20 north, Range 14 east—Sections 1 to 36 inclusive.

The township is located directly upon White River, being divided by that stream into two somewhat unequal portions, the smaller part being on the north side, which is drained almost wholly into the Mississinewa by Hickory, Mud and Bear Creeks. The south side lies wholly in the White River Valley, being drained by the upper course of White River itself, and by Salt, Sugar, Sparrow, Eight Mile and Cabin Creeks, only a small portion in the southwest corner lying on the latter stream. This region was in the beginning a favorite with emigrants, and large numbers crowded into it from the time of its original settlement.

It is said to have been first reached, not by crossing from Wayne County nor by exploration from the settlements previously made in the southern part of Randolph County, but thus: A party of men from South Carolina struck into the White River Valley near its mouth, and threaded its entire extent in its utter wilderness state through what is now ten flourishing counties—Knox, Daviess, Greene, Owen, Morgan, Marion, Hamilton, Madison, Delaware and Randolph. They rode through the dense woods, camping out and picketing their horses at night, and spending several weeks in the trip. What they lived on we cannot tell; they subisted on something, however, for most of them were still in the land of the living full fifty years after that adventurous journey. For some reasons they were not satisfied till they arrived in Randolph County, a few miles west of Winchester. The whole valley of White River was then in possession of the Indians. Not a white man had ever dwelt anywhere throughout its whole vast extent. The French had planted themselves about Vincennes, and that settlement spread from the Wabash across to the White River; but above the French colony all was wilderness.

This party located lands for settlement, and finally in the fall of 1816 (some of them remaining), returned to South Carolina to make arrangements to bring a large company of emigrants from that distant country. And they came—a colony of about thirty persons, with their wagons and their goods, from South Carolina, across the Apalachian Mountains, through Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, into Indiana, during the severe winter of 1816–17, meeting the snow on the summits of the Cumberland Range, and keeping company therewith the whole way onward, arriving at White River in March, 1817, with the snow a foot deep, which left not before the April following.

And now just stop and take in that traveling scene:

First, a trip from South Carolina to the lower course of White River in Southwestern Indiana.

Second, a horseback jaunt through the entire White River wilderness to its sources in Randolph County, and a tarry in the woods of that region.

Third, a return trip also on horseback through the sparse settlements of Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina to the Palmetto State.

Fourth, a wagon journey from that southern land over mountain and stream, over horrible roads, through the cold and snow of that extreme winter, to plant themselves at last in the wilderness, fifteen miles from any other settlers.

When they came, indeed there were some cabins for some of them, as well as for one of the men who tarried in the wilderness, and who, being a believer in the Bible in general, and in that declaration in particular that "It is not good for man to be alone," had gone down among the settlers of Wayne County, in the White Water Valley, and had found a virgin after his own heart, to whom he had been joined in the bonds of holy wedlock; and together they returned to his chosen home, and there for more than forty days that loved and loving couple dwelt in the desolate forest alone. Years afterward that bride used to relate how for six weeks of that first sojourn she saw no white face besides that of her husband.

But the company came, and they, too, went to work, and it was not long till not one alone, but several dwellings were to be seen nestling among the trees.

The party who traversed on horseback the long and desolate valley of the White River were Paul W. Way, Henry H. Way, William Way, Robert Way (a lad of sixteen, and nephew of the rest, and son of John Way), and William Diggs, Jr.; and Paul Way, in the fall of 1816, returned, as has been stated, and conducted a company from that country to this. That group of emigrants was as follows:

Paul Way's family, seven in all; John Way's family, seven in all; Armsbee Diggs and wife; John Moorman and family, six in all; George Wilson and family, five in all; making a company of twenty-seven persons, belonging to five families.

Moorman and Wilson stopped on Greensfork (Wilson probably in Wayne County), and the rest came on.

Meanwhile, William Diggs had married, and, as already stated, was keeping house on White River. Henry Way married in the same way, about the same time, so that when the whole colony there united, they amounted to nearly twenty-five persons all Ways and Diggses. Soon after, others of the connection and their acquaintances came from South Carolina, among others the father of William Diggs, Jr., William Diggs, Sr.

NOTE.—The tale of the trip up White River on horseback is so romantic that it is with great regret that we are obliged to state that William Diggs, the sole survivor of the party referred to, declares that the trip never was taken. The party did come to Randolph, but not by so wild and "sensational" a route as that; yet the story is itself so excellent, and shows so vividly what might have been done when Indiana was all a wilderness, that we cannot find the heart to reject it from the text, but let the "supposed incident" remain, appending thereto in the interest of "sober truth" this cautionary remark, that while the story is good enough to have been true, that yet, in fact, the thing did not take place.

At nearly the same time, say in 1817, families of the Wrights came, and also some of the Haworths, and by the summer of 1818 a large company of Wrights and others were present, insomuch that at the first election for county officers (held August, 1818), three had the name of Wright—John Wright, Judge; David Wright, Sheriff, and Solomon Wright, Coroner. This John Wright in particular seems to have been an estimable man, since he was retained as Judge by successive elections for twenty-eight years—1818–1846—an event probably without a parallel in the history of the county.

David Wright, Solomon Wright and Thomas Wright were Sheriffs from 1818 to 1827.

Another John Wright was Commissioner from 1820 to 1822.

Two of the first Grand Jury were Isaac Wright and William Wright.

Two of the first Petit Jury were Solomon Wright and Abram Wright.

Thus in one year after they began to come, seven Wrights were holding official positions in the newly formed county.

The Ways also were prominent. Paul W. Way was appointed County Agent, at that time a very important and responsible position.

Four Ways were on the first juries in 1818—John Way, William Way, Sr., William Way, Jr., and Paul W. Way.

There seems to have been not much prejudice against "carpet baggers" in those days, for they hardly waited long enough for them to become voters till they had them elevated to high (not to say lucrative) offices.

Some others came whom there is not time to name. In August, 1818, there were, according to Hon. Jere Smith's statement, fifty or sixty families on White River and Salt and Sugar Creeks, all of whom are supposed to have been in the present bounds of White River Township.

We give some dates that are accessible:

1817—Simon Cox, east of Winchester; Benjamin Cox, east of Winchester; William Kennedy, near Mount Zion Church; Solomon Reynard, on Eight Mile Creek: John Wright (Hominy), west of Winchester.

1818—Absalom Grey, east of Winchester.

1819—John Coats, east of Winchester; ——— Lasley, south of Winchester; David Lasley, south of Winchester; Peter Lasley, south of Winchester; Robinson McIntyre, near Maxville; Zachariah Puckett, near Dunkirk; Joseph Puckett, near Dunkirk.

1820—Henry D. Huffman, west of Winchester; Tarlton Moorman, west of Winchester; Albert Macy, west of Winchester; Thomas Puckett, near Dunkirk; Isom Puckett, near Dunkirk.

1821—James Driver, west of Winchester; Morgan Mills, west of Winchester.

1822—Stephen Clayton, west of Winchester; James Clayton, west of Winchester; John Robison, east of Winchester; W. Robison, east of Winchester; Mary Reeder, near Winchester; Martin A. Reeder, near Winchester.

Of course there were other prominent families, among whom were the Wysongs, the Elzroths, the Edwardses and the Starbucks, besides others too numerous to mention, and very many of whom are to the writer utterly unknown.

ENTRIES.

NOTE.—W. N. W. 18, 20, 14, means west half of the northwest quarter of Section 18, Township 20, Range 14, etc.

There are in the township about forty-seven thousand three hundred and sixty acres.

In the five years, 1816–1820, inclusive, 108 entries were made, embracing 16,397 acres, or about 3,279 acres per year.

CHURCHES.

The first church was probably Dunkirk, built by the Friends, and during many years an important center of moral and religious light and activity. Temperance and anti-slavery found from the very first its spring and power for good largely among the body of Friends at that place. But the glory of Dunkirk has departed; the old church stands tenantless and forsaken, and even the graveyard seems woe-begone and forlorn, neglected if not forgotten. The church was built in a beautifnl grove, open but shady, and as one stands gazing at the old edifice and the graveyard near at hand, and thinks of the more than sixty years that have rolled along since men began to gather among those shades for the worship of the "Unseen," and lay their dead silently and reverently away beneath that consecrated ground, he can scarcely realize how changed is the current of public feeling and how the channels of thought and sentiment and desire flow permanently elsewhere.

ROUTES OF TRAVEL.

Several chief routes of travel pass through White River, viz: From Richmond; from Centerville and from New Castle to Winchester; from Greenville to Muncie; from Winchester to Fort Wayne, via Deerfield, pass almost centrally through its extensive territory, well nigh large enough for a county of itself. Pikes run from Winchester in every direction. The routes to Lynn, to Huntsville, to Windsor, to Deerfield, to Greenville, to Jericho, and the two roads to Union City all extend along its surface.

Two railroads cross it—the Bee Line from east to west, and the C. R. & F. W. from north to south, intersecting at Winchester. Winchester and Maxville are the only towns within its limits, Unionsport and Buena Vista, however, being upon its borders, and their northern half upon its soil. Sampletown was in White River but it was an abortion.

White River is a very large and thriving township. It has surface enough for two good townships, having about seventy-four square miles. Lying as it does around Winchester, with that important town nearly in its center, there seems to be no suitable way to make a proper division of its territory, and up to this time it remains entire. There are twenty-two school districts within its bounds, not including the corporation of Winchester.

TOWNS.

It is remarkable that White River, though so large and so rich a township, and though it has nearly twenty miles of track within its bounds, has but one railroad town to accommodate its numerous population. In fact, there never has been within its bounds any towns besides Winchester, except Maxville. And Maxville is for purposes of trade practically extinct. So that for seventy-four miles of territory this immense township can boast of but one town. There are, indeed, two small and unimportant villages on the line in the southwest corner Buena Vista and Unionsport, but for business they present very few attractions.

PIKES.

The pikes in White River are somewhat numerous.

The Windsor pike has about seven miles in the township; the two Union pikes five miles each in the township; the Deerfield pike about six miles in the township; the Lynn pike about four miles in the township; the Huntsville pike about four miles in the township; the Greenville pike about three miles in the township; the Buena Vista and Unionsport pike about four miles (on the township line), making at least eight distinct lines extending through the township.

It has direct communication by pikes with most of the towns in the county; with Union City, Deerfield, Randolph, Farmland, Windsor, Losantville, Unionsport, Buena Vista, Huntsville Lynn, Bloomingsport, and Arba, and indirectly with Spartansburg. The northwestern townships, Franklin, Green and Monroe, are nearly destitute of graveled roads. Within two or three years, the spirit of improvement in that respect is rising in that region, and it is to be hoped that the people there will hunt up their gravel beds and get the gravel out where it belongs—on the highways.

MISCELLANY.

White River, though destitute of towns (except the county seat), is nevertheless a fine, rich, well-improved region, with many good farms and many fine dwellings.

White River is bounded north by Monroe, Franklin and Ward; on the east by Wayne; on the south by Greensfork, Washington and West River; on the west by Stony Creek and Monroe.

It is a remarkable fact that White River touches every other township in the county but two—Green, in the extreme northwest, and Nettle Creek, in the farthest southwest. It is bounded by eight townships as above, and corners with one, Jackson, in the extreme northeast.

Such another township as to situation may not exist, perhaps, in the nation. Another notable fact exists as to White River, that it is the only central township in the county, and as to the others, that every one reaches the external boundaries of the county, all being arranged around and outside of White River Township as a common central region.

TOWNS.

Maxville.—Location, Section 20, Township 20, Range 13, on White River; Robison McIntyre and Robert Cox, proprietors; twenty-six lots; streets, north and south, Railroad avenue, East; east and west, Main. Recorded May 28, 1850. [Note.—The town was established many years before that date, about 1832.]

The town was laid out in about 1832 by Robison McIntyre. It stands on Section 20, Township 20, Range 13, and is located on the Winchester & Windsor pike. The town plat seems not to have been recorded till May 28, 1850. The commencement of business and the establishment of the town, however, dates back to 1832. Solomon Seamans built the first house, and kept the first store; he also had a hotel and was a physician. For a time a large amount of business was done. Maxville became the center of a brisk and thriving trade. There have been at one time places of business as follows: Two smith shops, one grist-mill, three stores, two physicians, one saw mill, one church, one schoolhouse, two limekilns, one lodge, A., F. & A. M., one lodge, I. O. O. F., one post office. It might in time have become an important town, if the old order of things had continued, but the Bellefontaine Railroad was built and missed the town about a mile, running, also, on the other side of the river, and besides, Farmland started up on the railroad, about a mile off, and our aspiring, hopeful little "burg" became a doomed town, and its business has long been almost wholly lost. In fact, no business proper is done in the place. The grist-mill is still in operation in the suburbs, and so are the limekilns. The schoolhouse is there, and the meeting-house stands near, and the old cemetery still raises to sight the sad memorial stones, the melancholy tokens of the final resting-place of friends long since taken from earth. The mill is in good repair, possesses a substantial reputation, and does excellent work, standing on White River and propelled by water-power. The lime made there has an excellent name, selling readily and rapidly. Each of the two kilns burns twelve times a year 400 bushels each. Often the lime is sold as fast as it can be loaded into wagons from the kiln.

There are now about ten good residences in the village, and the town has a pleasant appearance. The church belongs to the Episcopal Methodists. The cemetery is of long standing and is filled with graves, and a new burying-ground has been established across the road from the old one, and contains already many tombstones.

The country around has been long settled, the residents near there coming in, many of them, from 1816 to 1820. The farms are under good improvement, and there are many fine residences. The Windsor & Winchester pike, one of the oldest pikes in the county, has been built for many years. This road was originally, and for a long time, the grand thoroughfare between the East and the West, and it was thronged with travel of all sorts for many years. In fact, till 1852, at the opening of the railroad, the amount of travel passed along this route amounted sometimes to hundreds of wagons per day. Thousands of cattle and sheep have been known to pass within a single twenty-four hours. The "taverns" on that road in those days were well patronized, and many a landlord made money by the business, even at the wondrously low prices in vogue at the time. The charges used to be 37½ cents for man and horse overnight, including supper, lodging and breakfast for both. The boys of those days, now old men, remember how they had often to sleep in the barn or the hay-mow to accommodate travelers with lodging. But those days are long past, and there is not a country hotel from one end of the county (or hardly even of the State) to the other.

New Dayton.—It is a hamlet; not incorporated; on Section 2, Township 20, Range 13. It is not laid out as a town, but is simply a little hamlet with a name. There has been a store for twenty-five years, and a smith shop for thirty-six years. Lately, a wagon shop has been set up. There is also a church and a graveyard. Larmon Sherman keeps the store. Mr. Carns owns the smith shop. Wesley Carns (son of the above) runs the wagon shop. The meeting-house was built in 1877. It belongs to the Episcopal Methodists. The graveyard has been there a long time and it is much used. A post office has been granted, and a new mail route through that region has been set on foot, with mail three times a week. The mail delivery covers a circuit of three to five miles. L. W. Sherman is Postmaster. There is no pike and no railroad. The region around New Dayton is well settled with industrious and thriving farmers.

Sampletown.—Was on White River, two miles east of Maxville. Judge Sample entered land there, January 16, 1817 (Sections 3, 20, 13), and laid out Sampletown very early, but it never flourished. His mill and a tanyard were near, and were operated for some years, but the town as such never really began at all, and even its name has been extinct for thirty years. The Sample farm was not far east of the new boundary. Some of the timbers of the old mill are to be seen on the banks of the river, but the tan-yard has been all gone for years.

In May, 1820, a road was laid from Sample's mill to Huntsville, and another, in 1825, from Sample's mill to Lewallyn's mill (Ridgeville). Henry Sample, son of old Judge Sample, resides at La Fayette. Judge Sample left in 1845, for Iowa, and died some years ago. He was a prominent citizen. Sample's mill is thought to have been the first mill on White River, and it stood there many years. It may have been the first mill in the county. Lewallyn's mill, at Ridgeville; Sample's, on White River, and Jessup's, on Greenville Creek, north of Spartansburg, appear to have been built not very far from the same time. Some say that a mill built by a Mr. Wright, near Winchester, was the first in the county.

Vernon.—There seems to have been, at some time away back in the "beginning of things," a town by the name of Vernon. One of the roads laid out by the Commissioners is said to end at the principal street of the town of Vernon. No one now seems to know the location of that ancient site. Probably it is identical with what is popularly known as "Sampletown," on the Windsor road, west of Winchester. A town was begun there, but it did not flourish and soon died away. The name which lived in the popular memory is Sampletown, from Mr. Sample, who settled there very early, as soon as 1820 or sooner. He built a mill on White River; his son established a tan-yard and laid out a town, and the locality is called Sampletown to this day, yet the real name may have been (and probably was) Vernon. The place is at the schoolhouse, at the "Corners," just south of the iron bridge, near Stephen Moorman's, where the north and south road crosses White River, and five miles west of Winchester, on the line between Sections 21 and 22, 20, 13. The locality appears in old times to have been well known, or it would not have been the point for the termination of a road; yet it seems strange that the name of Vernon has faded entirely from the popular memory.

Winchester.—Is in White River Township, but its history is given in another part of this work.

BIOGRAPHY.

Thomas Addington, Sr., was born in 1778; married Tamar Smith in 1807 (who was born in 1786). He died in 1839, aged sixty-one years, and she died in 1845, aged fifty-nine years. They moved to Wayne County, Ind., in 1807, three years before Wayne was a county, and nine years before Indiana was a State. There were then only three counties in Indiana Territory, viz., Knox, Clark and Dearborn. They came to Randolph County, Ind. (Sparrow Creek), in 1834. He and his wife rode horseback from North Carolina to Wayne County, Ind., in 1807; they had during their lives thirteen children, as follows: Hannah, born in 1806, died in 1854, aged forty-six years; Matilda, born 1810, died 1811, aged one year; David, born 1812, died 1813, aged one year; Jesse, 1814, married Margaret Sullivan, has had three children, lives on Bear Creek, is a farmer; James, born 1816, married Susan Kelly, has four children; Mercy, born 1819, married Littleberry Diggs, and then Joseph Hawkins, has had one child—Calvin W. Diggs, and resides at Collett Station, Jay Co., Ind.; Joseph, born 1820, married Susan Sullivan, has seven children; George, born 1823; Mary, born 1823, married ——— Roberts, has thirteen children; Elizabeth, married Marshall W. Diggs, they have eight children, he has been pastor of the Congregational Church at Pisgah, near Fort Recovery, Ohio, for twenty-three years; Thomas, born 1829, see account elsewhere. There were two more, names not given.

Rev. R. Brandriff, Piqua, Ohio. The annexed sketch is so full of interest, and throws so much light on the early history of the county that we insert it, though possibly not in the most appropriate place.

Mr. Brandriff was born about 1800; he became a preacher very young, and, in 1822, was appointed to the Greenville Circuit by the Annual Conference, in session at Marietta, Ohio, September, 1822; his colleague was Moses Crume, and the Presiding Elder was Alexander Cummins, and the circuit belonged to the Miami District. His predecessors were James Collard, Benjamin Lawrence, J. P. Durbin and William Hunt; his successors were James Murray, Silas Calvin, Isaac Elsbury, Benjamin Lawrence, Amos Sparks, Elijah H. Field. In 1822, the Greenville Circuit included all of Preble and Darke Counties, Ohio, all of Randolph and part of Wayne County, Ind.

Mr. Brandriff states the matter thus: "We traveled from Chenoweth's, in Darke County, Ohio, to a brother Canada's (William Kennedy's), a few miles from Winchester, from there to Winchester. Winchester was then right in the woods, a very new place. My recollection is that there were two streets running at right angles, and on the northwest corner, was a log house, at which I preached. I think the name of the man was Odle, at any rate he was father-in-law of George Ritenour, at whose house we preached on the Mississinewa, near Deerfield. From this place I went to Sumwalt's on White River. The good people had blazed the trees from Ritenour's to Sumwalt's, and I followed them as my road. From this place I went to Hunt's, and from Hunt's I followed an Indian trail to the East Fork of White River, as there were no roads in that direction. When I arrived at Whitewater, I found a farm and a kind family who entertained me. I made their acquaintance, obtained permission to preach in their house, formed a class and had it as a regular preaching place. The family was one by the name of Williams. Insco Williams, the painter and proprietor of the Bible Panorama, which was so celebrated many years ago, and which was burned at Philadelphia, was a son of this family, and so also was Dr. Williams, now of Kansas. From here we went to Wiggins', or New Garden, or Newport, as since called. From there we went to New Paris, and preached in the house of John Cottom, who has since been a resident of Winchester. I will only add here that I am the first Methodist who ever preached in Richmond, Ind. It was in the summer of 1822; some brother on the Oxford Circuit, which I was then traveling, made the arrangements. They had heard of the boy preacher, and desired that I should visit them. A friend entertained me. I preached in a small schoolhouse, and was astonished at the interest the good Quaker took in me."

This for Mr. Brandriff. He is still living, a sprightly old man, at Piqua, Ohio. During anti-slavery times, Mr. B. joined the "True Wesleyans," and was a preacher in their connection. What he is now we do not know.

Simeon Brickley, Maxville, born in 1822, in Preble County, Ohio; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1843; married Eliza Ellen McIntyre; has four children, including two married daughters. Mr. Brickley is a farmer, a Methodist and a Republican; he is also a lime-burner, owning a splendid lime quarry on the banks of, and on the bed of White River; he has burned as many as eighteen to twenty kilns in a single year, now about eight or ten kilns a year, from 600 to 800 bushels in a kiln. The other kilns in the neighborhood are smaller. There are three sets of kilns—Brickley, McIntyre, McNees. The State Geologist says that deeper down might be found building stone in abundance, of an excellent quality, but none of the proprietors have tested the matter. Mr. Brickley has taken no rock deeper than five feet. The rock that is quarried for lime is from two to six inches thick. The deposit of lime passes directly under the channel of the river, and they quarry stone from both sides of the stream.

Stephen Clayton, born in 1788, in Maryland; married Mary Chivens; came to White River about 1822, entered 120 acres of land west of the 'Boundary;' he had eight children; seven grew up and four yet survive. He died in 1834, and his wife in 1859 His sons own about 1,200 acres of land.

James Clayton (brother of Stephen), born in Maryland in perhaps 1798; came to Randolph County in 1822; married Abigail Way (sister of Paul W. Way); they had no children; he lived many years on his farm west of Winchester, afterward moving to Winchester, to Middleboro, and finally to Newport, where he died some years ago. His wife died at Winchester in January, 1880, while on a visit there. Mr. Clayton was an Abolitionist, a Wesleyan and a Republican; he was a sterling citizen and an earnest Christian, active in every good work, though so firm and stern as not to be altogether genial in his intercourse with his fellow-men.

Thomas Clevenger, White River, was the son of Jonathan and Sarah Clevenger, of Warren County, Ohio, both of whom died in 1870; he was the third of ten children and the eldest of seven surviving; he was born in 1816, in Warren County, Ohio, and moved to Montgomery County, Ohio, in 1829; married Mary A. Clarion, in 1839; moved to Randolph County, Ind., one mile from Arba, in 1845, and to White River Township, five miles east of Winchester, in 1863, where he has resided ever since.

He has had ten children, six now living; he has been a farmer throughout his life; he has held several positions of honor and trust—Appraiser of Real Estate for Randolph, 1859; County Commissioner, 1868 to 1877. He came to Randolph early enough to get twenty-five years of log-rolling and to clear up 100 acres of her virgin forest.

As an officer, Mr. C. has been noted for his stern integrity and his firm resistance to every attempt to filch money from the treasury. Persons who wished for fat jobs would be found crying out against his administration, but the people said, "Well done, good and faithful servant" by a double re-election. However, though frugal, he was not parsimonious, and when the county, though strong and rich, had been for years without a court house, he (with the other members) felt that the time had come to wipe that disgrace away and to redeem her fame by erecting a court house, which should be an honor in time to come; and, against great opposition and much detraction, the board went forward and accomplished the task, faithfully and well. By this bold and manly course, he lost a renomination to a fourth term. The retiring members felt satisfied with their own action, believing that time would vindicate them, which it has done. Randolph has a court house of rare and wondrous beauty, built at a cost marvelous for its cheapness; the debt incurred is now paid, and probably not a man now wishes to go back to the time when this great and rich county had to go begging for a court room. Mr. C. is a worthy example of a diligent, thriving, hard-working farmer, proud of his calling, honoring his vocation, commanding the esteem of his fellow-citizens and cheerfully and thankfully enjoying, not a fortune, but a competence, the worthy result of his life-long faithfulness, industry and frugality.

THE COATSES.

The Coatses have been and still are numerous in this region. They are of Scotch descent, and a brief account of their ancestry may be found in connection with the life of Rev. John Coats, late of Coatsville, Ind., but now residing in Randolph County. Three brothers, Robert, James and William, belonging to the "House of Coats" and the family of the thread-makers, of Paisley, Scotland, came to South Carolina before the Revolutionary war, but at what exact date cannot now be stated. These brothers settled in Carolina and resided there till their death.

John Coats, the first of the name in Randolph, was the son of William Coats, one of the three brothers emigrants from Scotland, above named. William Coats was the son of Philip Coats, of Scotland, and a sister of William Coats was the mother of Rev. John Coats, of Coatsville, elsewhere noticed. William Coats had a large family, at least seven of whom came to the Northwest from Carolina, as follows: John Coats, William Coats, Joseph Coats, Hepsy (Wright), Rhoda (Wrench), Hetty (Harrison), —— (Beanblossom). John Coats was born in Carolina in 1786; married Sally Wright, daughter of Thomas Wright, in 1807 (she was born in 1789); they came to Ohio soon afterward, and, in 1819, moved upon White River, Randolph County, Ind. John Coats and Thomas Wright, his father-in-law, lived for awhile near Covington, Ohio, upon what are now the famous and valuable stone quarries at that place. While residing in that region, the Indians were troublesome. There was a fort not far off, and they moved into it for safety, the mother leading one child by the hand and carrying the other at her breast.

At one time, Mrs. Thomas Wright and her daughter, Mrs John Coats, were emptying meal into a barrel. An old Indian came into the house. He said nothing, coming in unobserved, till he had reached the middle of the room. His hunting-knife had slipped around in front, and, as he undertook to move it back upon his hip, they thought he was going to kill them. The children were lying on the bed, and the women forgetting all about them, ran wildly past the Indian out of the house. Recollecting the children, they rushed back, and, seizing them, ran with the whole group, five in all, to the shelter of the fort. Mr. Wright coming home in the evening found them there, and was much surprised at the fact. The Indian was peaceable and intended no harm.

These families came to Darke County, perhaps in 1809, and lived there during the war of 1811–13, undergoing the manifold hardships and dangers of that perilous time. Messrs. Coats and Wright removed, in 1819, to Randolph County, Ind., and, in process of years, their descendants became very numerous in that whole region, as well as elsewhere.

John and Sally Coats were the parents of fourteen children; seven were born before their emigration to Randolph County, Ind., and seven afterward. The names of the children are as follows: Thomas W., born 1808, six children, died 1868; Isaac, born 1810, eight children, died 1876; Charlotte (Hiatt), born 1812, ten children, widow; Charity (Coffin), born 1813, sixteen children, widow; Betsey Rose, born 1815, died 1816; William, born 1817, four children, living; James, born 1819, six children, and he is now living; Mary (Pogue), born 1821, four children, widow; Gabriel, born 1824, ten children, killed at Vicksburg by the bursting of a shell, he belonged to the Fifty-fourth Indiana Infantry, Capt. Carter; Joseph, born 1826, nine children, died 1878; John, born 1828, died 1833; Lewis, born 1830, six children, lives in Kansas; Andrew, born 1833, one child, and is dead; Dempsey, born in 1835, has six children, and is living in Miami County, Ind.

John Coats entered eighty acres of land three miles east of Winchester; he was a farmer and a chair-maker. At one time, he held the office of Justice of the Peace, and his jurisdiction extended at first to Fort Wayne, and possibly, to the northern limit of the State. Mr. Coats was County Commissioner during several years. In religious connection, he was a Friend; in politics, in olden time, a Whig, and in later years, a Republican. His death occurred in 1878, he being ninety years old; his wife had preceded him three years, her death taking place in 1875, and her age being eighty-six years. Twelve of their children grew up and were married and had families. All the sons and all the sons-in-law but one were Republicans. A re-union of the connection was held about twenty years ago at the family homestead, at which about 300 descendants of John Coats were present. Several other like gatherings have since taken place, with the attendance of hundreds of children, grandchildren, etc. During later years, many of the relatives have removed from the county, yet a large number still remain.

At a re-union held near Harrisville, in the summer of 1882, at the request of Rev. John Coats, of Coatsville, nearly two hundred of the connection were present. William and Joseph Coats, brothers of John Coats, Sr., did not reside in Randolph County.

William Coats (son of John Coats, Sr.), was born in Ohio in 1817, was brought to Randolph County in 1819, and married Mary Moffatt, in 1837; they have had four children, all living and all married; his wife and himself are both living; he owns sixty-four acres of land east of Winchester, is a sound Republican and a worthy and esteemed citizen.

Rev. John Coats, of Coatsville, Ind., was born in England, in the town of Lockton, Yorkshire, in 1810; his father was Robert Coats, who was the son of Robert Coats, who lived upon the estate which had been in possession of the family for 300 years, and doubtless will be for 300 years in time to come. John Coats is the lineal descendant of the famous Coats family of thread-makers, of Paisley, Scotland, who have come down from the fourteenth century to 1882, filling in rank and business every station of enterprise and usefulness among men.

The Coats family are found in every State and Territory, the sole representative in Washington Territory being the only son of Rev. John Coats. Glorious record! Failures, indeed, there have been, but, on the whole, the family presents a bright and shining scroll of honor and integrity and success. They are a numerous line through six centuries, comprising twenty-four generations of active, energetic men. They extend far back of even that ancient time. They were once free shepherds of Rome, feeding their flocks upon the fertile pastures of sunny Italy, and, mayhap, are joined through the back-extending ages of the past with those who watched their flocks by night on the plains of Bethlehem in the sacred land of Judea, when angelic strains resounded through the midnight air, announcing to their astonished ears a Savior born—the wondrous babe of Bethlehem.

J. C. spent three years in searching through the 500 volumes of English history to find the traces of his ancestors. On the tented field they led their flocks, in the land of ancient Rome, and afterward, but how he cannot tell, they became dwellers upon the soil of Britain. In the fourteenth century, the family were divided. King Henry II, directed that every man of age might choose his own calling, and part chose farming and part chose to be shepherds. One group went to England and one to Scotland; one branch spelled their name Coats and the other Coates.

Rev. John Coats was born in England; came to Canada in his ninth year; lived among the Indians for five years with no companions but the dusky sons of the forest, and in 1826 his home was transferred to Northern Ohio, in the neighborhood where lived the Garfield family, and still again, to the banks of the Mad River. Many a time has he been chased by the wolves, as his parents dwelt in the deep, dark forests; he has more than once seen his father and mother seated, one on each side of the huge cabin fire-place, weeping bitter tears because they had no food for themselves and their children, and knew not how nor where to obtain it, being sixteen miles from a white inhabitant. Hardship and poverty and toil have been his lot; but now, thank God, as he stands trembling on the brink of the grave, he can look back and say with the sacred writer, "I have been young, and now I am old, yet I have never seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

When young, in England, the family were very poor, yet when a lad seven years old, J. C. had himself earned 30 shillings "tending crows." The gentlemen keep immense rookeries, with, perhaps, one hundred nests in a single tree, and, in time of harvest, they have to be watched. When twenty years of age, he could not speak a word of English, though born and bred in England. Broad, rough, rugged "Yorkshire" was all he knew; he could not tell a letter in a book or make a character with a pen. After his marriage and the birth of his first child, his wife said, "John, I don't want to be the mother of thy children while thou art so ignorant as thou art." And he built a schoolhouse and went to school and learned to read and write, and kept on studying and acquiring knowledge till he might have graduated in the medical schools of the times. But he cared not for the empty honor of a conferred degree, and went back to his farm. He has never been sick (except a brief attack of paralysis), has never had a physician feel of his flesh and never took a potion of medicine; and his only son, a man in middle life, can truthfully say the same. He is now engaged in traveling through the country visiting his numerous relatives and gathering up a history of the Coats connection.

And both branches of the family have prospered and greatly helped the world to achieve success. As an example of high results may be named Mr. Boyer, of Lancaster County, Penn., who married the daughter of Henry Coats, and who has a world-wide fame as a prince among agriculturists, known and honored in France, in England, in Russia, in Germany, as well as throughout America itself. Among scholars may be named Russell Coats, eminent in physiological learning among the scientists of the day.

They have everywhere been noted for energy, for decision, for strength, for hardy endurance and for firm and steady perseverance against every obstacle and against hardships in their severest form.

Benjamin Cox, White River, born in North Carolina about 1785, moved to Ohio in 1806, and to White River, east of Winchester, in the fall of 1817; he married Ann Rhoads and had eight children—William, John, Ruth, Ann, Patience, Lydia, Mary, Benjamin. All grew up, were married and had families, and three are still living. He entered land on White River and lived there till he died (in about 1852), sixty-seven years of age; he was a recorded minister among Friends; his work was acceptable and useful; his wife died in her sixty-third year, while her husband was absent on a religious mission in North Carolina (he was gone about three months). Mr. Cox also taught school, having taught the first school in the settlement, about 1820 probably.

Littleberry Diggs, White River, was born in South Carolina in 1793; he was the son of William Diggs, Sr., and a brother of William Diggs, Jr., now called "Old Billy Diggs" and still living, residing at Earlham, Iowa. L. D. married Lydia Way, in South Carolina in 1811. He emigrated to Randolph County in 1817; his wife died in 1827, and he married Hannah Mendenhall, March 11, 1841, dying himself in 1846. He had eleven children, eight by his first wife and three by his second; his second wife has lived a widow thirty-five years, residing at the present time with Isaiah P. Watts, her son-in-law, in Winchester.

The children of Littleberry Diggs were these: Lucy (Macy), born 1812, resides in Iowa; Caroline (Thomas), born 1813, died in 1844; Eveline (Overman), born 1815, lives in Southwestern Kansas; Lydia, died young; Littleberry C., 1820, died 1850; William Way, 1822, died young; Marshall Way, 1824, resides at Pisgah, Ohio; Benjamin Franklin, 1827, died at Lawrence, Kan., 1880; Ann Eliza (Watts), born 1842, resides in Winchester; Francis C., born 1845, resides in Kansas; Elizabeth, born 1843, died at seven years. Littleberry Diggs was at one time Associate Judge of Randolph County.

Henry Edwards, White River, was born in Guilford County, N. C., March 2, 1795; married Polly Hamilton, October 18, 1815; came to Wayne County, Ind., in the fall of 1821, and to Randolph County in the spring of 1831; died at the residence of his son, Hamilton Edwards, November 6, 1881, aged eighty-six years, six months and two days. He had been married sixty-six years, and had resided on his homestead fifty years; he is the father of eleven children, and his wife is living still, as also seven of the children. He was, in early life, a Whig, and later, an Anti-slavery man, and still later a Republican; in religion, a Friend, and in occupation a farmer.

Mr. E. was buried in the Friends' Cemetery, at White River Meeting-House, in the presence of a large and sympathizing assembly. The discourse was delivered by Rev. Nathan Butts from the text, "When a few years are gone I shall go whence I shall not return."—Job, xvi, 22.

The surviving children are four boys and three girls, all of whom were present at the funeral. Their son Hamilton occupies the homestead, and the aged widow still views the old familiar scenes, upon which, for half a century, they have rested. She was born in 1798, in North Carolina. Seven of her children were daughters and four sons. Four girls are dead and three are living, as are also the four sons.

Edwards Family.—There were six brothers—William, Eli, David, Robert, Henry and Jonathan. Some of them came from North Carolina about 1818 to Randolph County. William was Judge for many years, emigrated to Missouri and died four years ago, a very old man. Eli died near Indianapolis, perhaps ten years ago. Henry remained in Randolph County, and died in the fall of 1881, more than eighty years old; his wife is living still with her son Hamilton, south of Winchester. Jonathan Edwards also ended his days in Randolph County, four or five years ago. Robert died in Randolph County more than forty years ago. Henry, Eli and Jonathan settled south of Winchester. Robert bought land and settled northwest of the same place. David did not come to Randolph. Eli was Sheriff of the county for some years during the early times.

John Elzroth lived near Henry Edwards (their farms joining). Mr. E. was an early settler and died on the Miami Reserve, in the fall of 1880, more than eighty years old.

There was another set of Elzroths, one of whom was Justice of the Peace in Winchester more than forty years, and a brother of his died at the age of nearly or quite ninety years, in the southern part of the State, in the spring of 1881.

Other early settlers were John Irving, Mr. Hill, David Wysong, Willis Willmore, John Lykins, Jones Lykins, the McNeals, Jacob, White, Felty Iler, Ellis Pugh, Abram Karnes, the Lasleys, the Heastons, Christopher, Jacob, Big Dave, Little Dave, and Uncle David (making three Davids), John Monks, the Elzroths, Jo Locke, Henry White, etc.

All the brothers Edwards (five in number) left North Carolina together. Henry stopped a year or two near Richmond, and then moved up into Randolph, and had resided in the vicinity of Winchester more than sixty years.

Jacob Fisher, White River, was born in Pennsylvania in 1811; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1826; married Delila Ruble, in 1837; had a large family of children; resided on White River, some miles west of Winchester, and died some twenty years ago; his widow still lives on the same farm.

John Fisher, White River, came from Pennsylvania to Ohio, and from Ohio to Randolph County, Ind., in 1824; he had fifteen children; twelve lived at home at one time, a rather lively, wide-awake family, one would think. Mr. F. has been dead more than forty years; he was a Methodist; his children have mostly moved away to the West; he lived in White River Township near White River.

Absalom Gray, White River, born in North Carolina in 1796; came to White River in 1818; married Margery Cox (sister of Simon Cox), and afterward, Mary Pickett, who is still living; he had fourteen children, eleven grown, eleven married and eight living; two in Randolph County, three in Iowa, one in Missouri, one in Nebraska and one in Oregon. A. G. entered eighty acres of land in Randolph County; moved to Iowa in 1845, and died there in 1875, seventy-nine years old; he was a farmer by occupation; in religion, a Friend; in politics, a Whig, an Abolitionist and a Republican.

Simon Gray, White River (son of A. Gray), born in 1826 in White River; married Nancy Smith, in 1846; has had four children, three of whom are now living; he is a farmer, and a thriving business man; his residence was burned down a few years ago, but he has built another fine dwelling. S. G. is an enterprising and influential member of religious society and of the community; he is a Friend and a Republican.

Stephen Harris, born in North Carolina in 1787; married Hannah Mace (who was born in 1784); came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1831, and settled east of Winchester two miles. He bought land of Samuel Cox, 160 acres for $223, entirely unimproved. He resided there nearly all the rest of his life, but died at Cherry Grove at the house of his son, William Harris, with whom he had made his home for a time. His death occurred in 1857, in his seventieth year; his wife died near Farmland in 1864, aged eighty years and three months. She, too, was residing with her son William.

Mr. H. was a farmer, steady, sober-minded, thoughtful, industrious, upright; he was an Abolitionist and Anti-slavery Friend, and altogether a worthy citizen and a valuable member of society; he had five children—Benjamin, living on Sparrow Creek, farmer, six children; William, died in 1869, six children; David, three children; Henry, died in 1854, seven children, Stephen, living in Winchester, single.

They were all Friends and all Abolitionists, and all lived to be grown and married; they were every one born, moreover, in North Carolina, and came with their father to Randolph County.

Stephen Harris' father, Jesse Harris, came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1843, a very old man aged ninety years; he was born in 1753, and died a few weeks after his removal to this State; he was of Virginia stock and of English descent.

When Stephen Harris came, in 1831, some of the settlers were as follows: Benjamin Cox, Joshua Cox, Isaiah Cox, Simon Cox; Thomas Ward, an old man, grandfather of the present Thomas Ward; Joseph Moffitt, son-in-law of Thomas Ward; Thomas Pierce, brother of Burgett Pierce, still living near Deerfield; John Cox; John Coats, an old man, father of Joseph Coats, late of Union City, Ind.; William Coffin, an old man; Joel Ward, brother of Joab Ward; Zachariah Hiatt, Jonathan Hiatt. These all lived east of Winchester. John Walker and Harrison Rawson had been old settlers, but they went with the Mormons.

Jonathan Hiatt, father of George Hiatt, who lives on the pike east of Winchester, was born in North Carolina about 1770; married Rachel Williams in North Carolina; moved to Virginia before 1805; came to Champaign County, Ohio, in 1810, with eight children, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1818, with ten children, and two were born in Randolph, making twelve in all. All grew up and were married, but only two are now alive.

He was a farmer, and he settled near White River Meeting-House, east of Winchester, in March, 1818, entering half a section of land; he died in 1836, sixty-six years old, and his wife in 1871, aged eighty-one years, in Wabash County; he was a Friend, a Whig and a strong Anti-slavery man; an active temperance man, a good scholar and an estimable citizen, with good reputation and highly respected.

His children were John, had eight childrn, died in Montgomery County, Ind.; Silas, had nine children, died in Wabash County, Ind.; Josiah, six children, died in Grant County, Ind.; Jonathan, twelve children, died in Jay County, Ind.; George, nine children, living near Winchester, Ind.; Nathan, six children, living at Peru, Ind.; Martin, five children, died in Iowa; Richard, seven children, died in White River, Ind.; Lydia (Harris), eight children, died in Wayne County, Ind.; Mary (Cox), seven children, died at Lynn, Ind.; Rachel (McDonald), four children, died west of Winchester; Sarah (Coats), four children, died in White River.

J. H. has had eighty-four grandchildren; he was the second settler in the White River settlement, east of Winchester, Benjamin Cox being the first. John Cox came next, about 1820, and there were no others till that time. Mr. Hiatt lived in a camp at first, but before very long built a hewed log house of only one story. There were but seven or eight hands, and the work took them two or three days.

Henry D. Huffman, White River, was born in 1803 in Virginia; came to Ohio and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1820; he married Eliza A. McNees, in 1831, and Mary J. West in 1866; he had thirteen children; was a farmer and teacher, and entered 160 acres of land just east of the Twelve-Mile boundary; he was prominent as a teacher in that early time, having had many of the children of the pioneers under his tuition. At one of the Old Settlers' re-unions, held at Winchester some years ago, when he was about seventy years old, a class was formed by him from among the members of the association, his old "school boys," and had a "spelling bout," which excited much interest and considerable merriment. Mr. H. died in 1876 in his seventy-third year.

Barnabas Hunt, White River, was born in North Carolina in 1798; came to Ohio in 1804. While there, his father had his property taken because he would not join the army in 1812. They came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1816. Barnabas married Hannah Lewis, daughter of Evan Lewis, in 1817; his wife was born in 1802; they moved to Farmland (three miles south of it) in 1847. He had three children. By occupation, he was a farmer; as to religion, a Friend; in politics, a Whig, an Anti-slavery man and a Republican. He died in 1874, being seventy-five years two months and twenty days old.

Thomas Johnson, White River, born in Franklin County, Va., in 1792; married Mary Matthews; came to West River, three miles north of Huntsville, in 1833; entered eighty acres, White River, 1836; exchanged his eighty acres for 240 acres; moved to Kansas in 1867, died in 1872; had ten children, seven living; was a farmer; first a Democrat, then Free-Soiler and Republican; was a Methodist Episcopal for nearly sixty years: his wife died a year before him.

George Johnson, born in Virginia in 1818; came to Randolph County in 1833; married Charlotte Cook, 1845; no children; moved to Winchester in 1873; farmer till 1873; since that money-lender and gardener; Democrat; was a member of the Town Council two years.

Endsley Jones, White River, born in North Carolina in 1810; came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1816, and to Dunkirk, Randolph County, in 1831; married Lydia Wright, daughter of (Hominy) John Wright and sister of Solomon Wright (Cabin Creek) in 1837; has had four children, three living and married; bought forty acres of second-hand land; has owned three forties; was brought up a Friend, but joined the "New Lights" fifteen years ago; was an Abolitionist, and is a Republican; was an active stockholder in the Underground Railroad; once had a narrow escape from being murdered by a slave-holder in search of slaves; is a hale, sprightly old man and a respected citizen.

Mrs. Endsley Jones—Lydia (Wright) Jones was the daughter of John (Hominy) Wright, and sister of Solomon Wright, now living on Cabin Creek. She was the youngest but one of fifteen children. Her father brought eight children with him to this county; four had come before, two married and two unmarried. Lydia was born October 5, 1817, three weeks after her father got here, September, 1817. Her father was born in 1775, and died in 1851, aged seventy-six years. Her mother was born in 1777, and died in 1867, ninety years old, being strong in mind and memory as long as she lived. Eight of the fifteen children are living still (1880). One is in Oregon, one in Iowa, two in Minnesota, one in Kansas, three in Indiana. Her father entered 160 acres of land

Nathaniel Kemp, born in Frederick County, Md., in 1813; came to Montgomery County, Ohio (near Germantown, Ohio), in 1824; married Margaret Byles, in 1835; came to White River, Randolph County (Kemp place) in 1841; bought 200 acres; has owned 690 acres, but it is now distributed among the children or otherwise disposed of. He has had seven children, all living and all married, as follows: One daughter in Chicago, husband a merchant; one daughter in Kansas, husband a farmer; one son in Winchester, dry goods; one daughter in Winchester, widow; one daughter in Winchester, husband owns block on the southwest corner, opposite Reinheimer's; one son west of homestead, farmer; one son east of homestead, farmer.

N. K. has been an extensive farmer, stock-dealer and business man. In his prime, he was very prominent and widely and favorably known. He was Commissioner of the county six years; Sinking Fund Commissioner eight years, etc. In the latter capacity, he traveled extensively over the State, looking after forfeited land. The business of the fund was finally closed by the State's taking it, and paying the interest to the school fund. The amount transferred to the State at the closing up was about $500,000. Much land had been mortgaged to the fund, forfeited and sold, and much of the land mortgaged to the fund proved to be worthless.

Gov. Willard borrowed $7,000, and 1,200 acres of land were forfeited and sold. Jesse D. Bright also had borrowed a large amount, and the fund mostly lost it

Mr. Kemp is now in feeble health, and is no longer affluent; his first wife died, and his second marriage was ill-advised and unfortunate, and a divorce was obtained; his property has been scattered, and he now finds himself in his old age a poor man.

In his prosperity, he was energetic for the public good, and Randolph County will long have reason to remember Mr. Kemp as an enterprising, public-spirited citizen; he was a Whig, and has been and is a Republican.

Isaiah W. Kemp, White River, was born in 1839 in Montgomery County, Ohio; came to Randolph County in 1841; married Molly Wysong, and afterward, Ellen Hippenheimer, in 1875. He has but one child; is a farmer; owns 147 acres, and has lately built a beautiful residence, at a cost of $3,000 or more.

Mr. K. enlisted in Company H, Eighty-fourth Regiment; was appointed First Sergeant, promoted First Lieutenant and mustered out First Sergeant with the regiment. Mr. K. is an active, thoroughgoing farmer and business man, and stands high among his fellow-citizens.

William Kennedy, White River, was born about 1797, and married Nancy Tharpe, in 1814; they had no children of their own, but raised, partly or wholly, fourteen children; they came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1816, and to Randolph in the spring of 1817; stayed there nine years and returned to Carolina in 1826, coming back to Randolph before long.

W. K. broke his thigh in his old age, and died from the effects of the wound in 1876, aged seventy-nine years. Mrs. Kennedy is very feeble (1880), being eighty-three years old. (She died in the spring of 1881.) They were active, warm-hearted Methodists, and their house was long a preaching place, and the "circuit rider's home."

Mr. Kennedy was a man of good judgment and sound discretion, and much respected as a citizen; he served at least one term as County Commissioner. The worthy couple used in early days to ride horseback to Ritenour's, on Mississinewa, west of Deerfield, to attend class and circuit preaching.

NOTE 1.—Some think that William Kennedy came in 1815, which date will agree better with some statements made by Mrs Kennedy, although she gave the date 1817.

NOTE 2.—The tombstone gives his age seventy-seven years five months and seventeen days, which would make him born in 1798, and, according to her date, only sixteen years of age at their marriage. Her date of his birth is 1796, which would make him only eighteen at marriage, and seventy-nine or eighty at death. We cannot reconcile these dates nor tell which of them are accurate. They lie buried side by side in Mt. Zion Cemetery, near the place of their former residence.

Reminiscences—Nancy Tharpe Kennedy. "My husband went to Cincinnati to enter land (160 acres), and I had to stay here in the woods, all alone, miles and miles away from any white people, being only a girl of seventeen years. My husband was an orphan boy, but God kept his promise. The Indians were very thick in the vicinity. They were constantly passing to and fro. The principal trail was three-fourths of a mile south of us. I used to be afraid, for I was just a girl seventeen years old, and they were painted all up like fury. They were very kind, however, and we were kind to them. We would give them bread and meat, and they would be satisfied. One day one of the Indians asked my husband "What is your name?" "Kennedy," "Well, Kennedy, No Indian ever kill you—you kind to Indian." I have seen great numbers of Indians. Sometimes squaws would ride along on their nice ponies. Squaws would never walk. I have known twenty or thirty Indians to pass at one time. There was one Indian who often stayed with us; he was very kind and civil. I never saw an Indian drunk in my life. Some of the Indians were white and fair.

"Charles Conway and John Wright lived near Winchester, though the town was not then laid out."

Elisha Martin, White River, was born in 1812 in Butler County, Ohio; married Susan Kelly, in Cincinnati, in 1831; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1832; settled first on Salt Creek, and in two years came to his present home, southwest of Winchester, forty-eight years ago. They have had nineteen children, twelve of whom are now living and married.

The children are as follows: Oliver, 1832, six children, Jay County, Ind., tile-maker; Mary, 1834, died at thirteen months; John K., 1837, five children, brick and tile-maker; David, 1837, dead; Amy, 1839, eight children, White River; William, 1841, four children, Winchester Bank; Abby, 1843 (Macy-Ruble), three children, White River; Phebe (King), 1845, four children, Missouri; Frances, 1847, died at twelve days; Elisha, 1848, three children, Winchester, tile-maker; Susan (Ashville), 1849, three children, White River; Mary K., 1850, three children, lives at home; Catharine, 1852, died at eight days; Asahel, 1855, Jay County, tile-maker; Daniel, 1857, one child, White River, farmer; Charlotte, 1859 (Spangler), four children. There were three others, names not given.

Mr. M. was a brick-molder in his early life, and has worked partly at that and also as a farmer; his wife and himself are hearty and sprightly; he was very strong and active in his youth, and retains his vigor and agility, notwithstanding old age is creeping surely on.

John Martin, father of Mrs. Mary A. Reeder, Winchester, was born in Allegheny County, Penn., in 1773; he came to Warren County, Ohio, before 1794; was a soldier in the United States Army in the Western Indian wars, being with St. Clair and Gen. Wayne in 1794 and 1795, and with Gen. Harrison at Tippecanoe and the Thames, in 1811 and 1813, and with Col. Croghan, at Fort Stephenson; he came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1822, settling one and a half miles southwest of Winchester on White River; he entered eighty acres (see entry list); he was a great hunter, a regular pioneer, and, when settlements became too thick, he left and went to Missouri (1833); he died in that State in 1839. He was an enthusiastic admirer and supporter of Gen. Jackson. He married Sarah Updegraff, in 1796, and was the father of five children.

Robison McIntyre, White River, was a native of Pennsylvania, born in 1786. He removed to Butler County, Ohio, in 1807, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1819. In 1813, he married Mary Taylor, who was born in 1787. They had eight children, seven grown and married, five living now. He came to Maxville in 1825, and laid out the town in 1832, which, however, was recorded in 1850. He was raised a Presbyterian, but in the West he joined the Methodists. He was an active and prominent man in the community. He died in 1871, in his eighty-sixth year, and lies buried in the Maxville Cemetery. His wife died in 1854, aged seventy-two years.

Hiram Mendenhall, Unionsport, born in North Carolina in 1801, moved to Clinton County, Ohio, in 1806, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1837. He married Martha Hale in 1820, and they had ten children, seven of whow are now living. He went to California in 1850, and died June 30, 1852, while on the way home from the Golden Land beneath the setting sun. He was a millwright and a miller. He built two mills, and his brother, Nathan Mendenhall, built one also, where one of Hiram's mills had burnt down. The whole family were ingenious, and seemed to be machinists by nature. Hiram Mendenhall always had two shops, a wood shop and a smith shop, and did his own repairing. He was led away by speculative notions at one time, and was persuaded to start a "community" at Unionsport, between 1842 and 1846. Eight or ten families joined in the movement. It continued only two or three years, ending disastrously to the parties engaged, especially to Hiram Mendenhall, who bore much, perhaps most, of the expense of the experiment. He was a strong and earnest Abolitionist, being the one who was selected to present the famous petition to Henry Clay at Richmond, Ind., asking him to emancipate his slaves. The design had been to make the request in a quiet, unobtrusive manner; but, when asked when he would receive the petition, Mr. Clay told them to present it in public. They did so, and he employed the occasion to make what seemed to the Anti-slavery men present a cruel and causeless attack upon Mr. Mendenhall and the opinions he represented, though, doubtless, the pro-slavery partisans regarded Mr. Clay's address to Mr. Mendenhall as only a richly merited and well executed castigation for what they called his ill-timed impertinence. But nearly forty years have fled and joined the ages before the flood, and Henry Clay and Mr. Mendenhall were summoned on the self same day by the Judge of the living and the dead, before His dread tribunal, to give an account of their stewardship, and now there is at length, after so long a time, "no slave-hunt in our borders, no slave upon our land." The Abolitionists, and Mr. Mendenhall as their spokesman, were extensively condemned for their supposed impudence in making their presentation in public; whereas that was Mr. Clay's own work, and intended, doubtless, to enable him to make a more severe attack upon Mr. Mendenhall and the Abolitionists in general. Hiram Mendenhall was at one time an extensive landowner, being possessed of more than one thousand acres of real estate in Randolph County. The unfortunate, though brief, socialistic experiment greatly weakened his financial ability, and he went to the land of gold to renew his waning fortunes; but death claimed him for its own, and what availed gold, or houses, or lands? Afar from the spot of his nativity and the home of his manhood, on board ship in the Gulf of Mexico, Hiram Mendenhall took the last look upon the scenes of earth, and plunged alone into the great unseen! His wife long survived him, dying, still a widow, August 5, 1880, aged seventy-nine years one month and twenty-four days, having outlived her unfortunate husband more than twenty-two years. His sons who are living —Joseph, Amos, Nathan, Jacob, Samuel and James—excepting Nathan, now reside at Unionsport. They mostly incline to what is known as Spiritualism. Henry Clay and Hiram Mendenhall died on the same day—June 30, 1852—the one at his home at Ashland, Ky., the other among strangers, on board a homeward bound ship, in the Gulf of Mexico, falling a victim to the dreadful cholera on his journey to his home and his friends. It pleased the haughty politician, in the day of his power, to browbeat the despised Abolitionist in the time when the name was a by-word and a reproach; but the stern logic of fact has vindicated the obscure petitioner and removed the obloquy from his name, and proved that, though negro property had been sanctioned and sanctified by two hundred years of legislation, yet it could not stand the test of reason and truth, and was obliged to succumb to fate. The author of this biography was shown a bundle of letters written by Hiram Mendenhall on his journey to California (in an overland trip), and after his arrival there. They possess great interest, showing a most tender, sweet and loving Christian spirit, but are too long for insertion here. As has been stated, he died of cholera on board a steamer on his homeward voyage, in the Gulf of Mexico, near Key West, on the coast of Florida. Sixty had died already on the vessel of the dread malady. The ship tried to land at Key West, but the privilege was denied them, cannon being pointed at them with the threat (Oh, cruel threat!) that the ship should be fired into if the attempt to land there were not abandoned. The ship's company did land upon a barren island, but they could not endure the heat, and returned to the vessel. He died June 30, 1852, said to be the same day on which Henry Clay expired. A son who was with him on the ship at his death survived, and is thought to be living still. The letters mentioned above are preserved and cherished with peculiar affection by his sister, Mrs. Hannah (Mendenhall) Diggs, mother of Mrs. Isaiah P. Watts, and residing with her son-in-law at the present time.

Nathan Mendenhall, father of Mrs. Hannah (Mendenhall) Diggs (wife of Littleberry C. Diggs), as also of Hiram Mendenhall, and the son of Stephen and Elizabeth Mendenhall, was born February 10, 1774. Ann Harlan, who became his wife was born October 10, 1773. Their children were as follows:

Edith (Cowgill), born July 25, 1799, living.
Hiram, born February 20, 1801, died 1852.
Olive (Hadley), born July 11, 1803, died 1840.
Maris (Hartman), born January 9, 1805, died 1872.
Elizabeth (Ruble), born December 7, 1806, died 1874.
Nathan, born April 18, 1809, died 1861.
Hannah (Diggs), born June 15, 1811, living.
Rebecca (Lewis), born October 11, 1813, living in Oregon.

Mr. Lewis and family emigrated to California in 1850, removed to Oregon in 1864, returned to Indiana on a visit in 1865, and still resides in Oregon. Mr. Lewis is transacting business for a railroad company in that distant State.

Morgan Mills, White River, born in Ohio in 1794, married Rebecca Driver, sister of Jacob and James Driver, in 1812. They emigrated to White River in 1821, two years after Mr. Sample came here.

Mr. Mills settled at first near Sampletown, but, so soon as the lands across the boundary were put into market, Mr. Mills, with hundreds of others, crossed the boundary into the new purchase, in 1823 He had twelve children, eight grown, six now living. He was a farmer and a Republican. He belonged to the Christian (New Light) Church sixty-four years. Falling from the platform of a railroad train at Farmland, and bursting his skull in the fall, he died of the injury six weeks afterward. His death took place April 3, 1878, aged eighty-four years four months and five days. His wife, Rebecca Mills, died in 1872, aged seventy-seven years seven months and sixteen days.

The Pucketts, White River. There were eight brothers of the Puckett family, and seven of them were Quaker preachers, all except Joseph. Their names were as follows: Joseph, Isom, Thomas, Zachary, Daniel, Benjamin, Richard, James.

The five first mentioned emigrated to Indiana, the first four coming to Randolph County, and Daniel settling in Wayne County, Fountain City. They are all dead many years ago. Joseph and Isom came in 1819, and Thomas and Zachary in 1820.

Joseph Puckett was born in 1784, in North Carolina. He married Mary Garrett. They came to Clinton County, Ohio, in 1817, and, two years afterward, to White River, Randolph Co., Ind. He entered land after they came. An interesting incident occurred in connection with the entry of his land, showing that officials are friendly and accommodating in some cases, at any rate. He went on foot to Cincinnati, and, when he got there, he found that the quarter-section of his choice overran so much that he lacked $10 or $15 of having money enough to make the entry. There he was, a poor stranger, on foot, alone in Cincinnati, knowing not a single person in that city, and utterly at a loss what to do. The clerk who was doing business in the Receiver's office, learning his dilemma, said to him, "You need not go back without your land; I will lend you the money myself;" and he did, and Mr. Puckett got the certificate for his land, and went on his homeward way rejoicing. Of course he sent the money in payment of the loan as soon as he could raise it, which, however, was not a very easy task.

Mr. Puckett had ten children—eight boys and two girls.

All of them lived to be grown and married. Only six of the ten, however, are living now. The children were these:

Tyre T., lives at Dunkirk, Randolph County; has had five children.

Welcome G., married, but has no children.

Benjamin, botanic physician, lived at Winchester, had five children, and died some years ago.

Micajah, had three children and is dead.

Sylvania (Remmel), has four children.

Levi, had six children, and he is dead.

Francis, four children, is dead.

Joseph, resides in Winchester, has one child.

Phebe Ann (Hiatt), has two children.

Thomas, resides in Iowa, has six children.

The Pucketts were all Friends, and those that lived to the time of the "Separation" went with the Anti-slavery Friends. They were originally Whigs, and became Republicans.

The Pucketts came first to Ohio, but preferred Congress title to military title, and came on to Randolph. They settled near Dunkirk, entering 160 acres apiece, paying each $80 down.

Isom Puckett was one of ten children. His mother's father was Daniel Taylor, who died at one hundred and five years old.

The names of the family to which Isom Puckett belonged were these:

Richard, Benjamin, Isom, Betty, Anna, Zachariah, Thomas, Joseph and James. All are dead.

Isom was born in 1772; had ten children, and died in 1856.

Thomas had eleven children.

Zachary had ten children.

Joseph had ten children.

Daniel had several children.

The Puckett brothers, four of whom settled in Randolph County, entered land in White River as stated below:

Daniel Puckett, northwest quarter of Section 25, Township 20, Range 13, October 26, 1818.

Thomas Puckett, northeast quarter of Section 26, Township 20, Range 13, October 26, 1818.

Joseph Puckett, southwest quarter of Section 34, Township 20, Range 13, January 18, 1819.

Zachary Puckett, north half of Section 3, Township 19, Range 13, April 7, 1819.

Isom Puckett, west half of the northeast quarter of Section 34, Township 20, Range 13, November 20, 1820.

Benjamin Puckett, northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 35, Township 20, Range 13, June 18, 1824.

They belonged to Friends' Meeting at Dunkirk, and were active in society.

Joseph Puckett, Sr., brother of Isom and Daniel Puckett, died in 1836, and his wife in 1846. He was a Friend, anti-slavery, and, in early times, a Whig. His son Benjamin was a physician of the Botanic school, and achieved a good reputation as a practitioner, being for many years a leading physician in Winchester.

Joseph Puckett, Jr., Winchester, was born in 1825, in Randolph County, Ind., being the son of Joseph Puckett, Sr. He married Eliza Ann Muckey in 1851. They have only one child. Mr. Puckett was a farmer's son, and was brought up on the farm. He learned the carpenter's trade, following that business for several years. He afterward became a merchant, and, still later, was appointed United States Revenue Officer, holding the position four years. He adopted the fruit-growing business, and practiced it for ten years, after which he was appointed Cashier of the National Bank at Winchester, and served in that capacity for five years, leaving it in 1878. Since that time, he has been mostly at leisure, traveling for pleasure and for the health of himself and family somewhat extensively. When young, he was an Abolitionist and, since the rise of the Republican party, has belonged to that organization. Mr. Puckett is one of the somewhat numerous and constantly increasing body of citizens who believe that political parties are simply combinations for the general good, for the establishment of general morality, and the protection and security of public and private rights, and that party action should always be kept strictly subservient to this end; in other words, that parties are not an end, but simply a means, and that not for private, selfish advantage, but for substantial, permanent general good.

Mr. Puckett, though never holding a public office by popular election, is yet highly esteemed by his friends, and by the community in general.

James Pursley, White River, was born in 1807, in Virginia, and came to Indiana (Randolph County) in 1831. He was twice married. His first wife was the mother of seventeen children; his second, of five. His first wife was the mother of three children within the same year—first, of twins, that died at six weeks old; and then another in less than a year from the birth of the twins. Twelve of the children of James Pursley lived to be married. He died many years ago.

Jesse Pursley, White River, born in 1775, in Virginia, was in the war of 1812; came to Indiana about 1830; resided in Union and Franklin Counties several years; came to Randolph County in 1833. He was twice married. His first wife was Winny Yardley, and the second was Nancy May, the latter dying in 1877, seventy-six years old.

He had fourteen children by his first wife, and ten by the second. Fourteen lived to be married, and nine are living still.

Jesse Pursley died some years ago.

He was in the army in 1799, when trouble with France was in prospect; again in 1812, and he greatly wished to go in 1861, when he was eighty-six years old.

There is an immense crowd of grandchildren, etc., his descendants.

Jesse Pursley, Jr., a son of his, was in a Missouri regiment, and died in service.

John May Pursley, in the Twelfth Illinois, died at Savannah, Tenn., shortly after the capture of Donelson, Tenn.

David Aker Pursley, of the Thirty-sixth Indiana, died at Paducah, Ky.

Jesse Reynard, White River, son of Solomon Reynard, was born in 1819, in Randolph County, Ind.; married Anna Diggs, daughter of William Diggs, of White River, and also a native of Randolph County, in 1842, and has had seven children. He was an Abolitionist, and is a farmer, a Wesleyan and a Republican. He owns 270 acres of land, and resides east of Buena Vista. He is an intelligent, substantial citizen.

Solomon Reynard, White River, was born in North Carolina in 1788; came to Clinton County, Ohio, with his parents, in 1805; married Rachel Green in 1816, who was born in 1799; emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., in 1817; settled on Eight-Mile Creek, four miles west of Winchester. He had ten children, and died in 1861, about seventy-three years old. He was an Abolitionist and a Republican.

Mr. Reynard was one of the earliest pioneers of the county, coming the same year that the Ways and Diggses came, from South Carolina. He entered 160 acres of land.

His widow is still living with her son Jesse Reynard, about eighty-two years old. She is active and sprightly, retaining the possession of her bodily and mental faculties in an unusual degree.

Jehu Robinson, White River, born in Virginia in 1784; Randolph County, Ind., 1822, one and a half miles east of Winchester; owned the Kemp farm, and then to Western Missouri; died 1858, seventy-four years old; married Mary Williams; came to Ohio in 1811, and to Washington County, Ind., in 1815; twelve children; farmer. His wife was a Friend, and he was a strong Democrat.

William Robinson, White River, born in Washington County, Ind., in 1816; Randolph County, Ind., 1822; married Mariam Hill, daughter of Benoni Hill, in 1838, and afterward Ruth (Test) Bundrant; ten children, nine living; none married but two. He resides four miles east of Winchester; farmer, Friend, Republican.

Walter Ruble, White River, was born in Tennessee in 1790; moved to Clinton County, Ohio, in 1802; married Sarah Wright in Clinton County in 1811, and was married twice afterward. He had eleven children, four of them still living.

He emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., in 1824, and entered eighty acres of land on the north side of White River, near Israel Wright's, about four miles west of Winchester. He was a farmer and a Friend, and died in 1878, eighty-eight years old, and was buried in Maxville Cemetery.

Durant Smith, White River, was born in Jones County, N. C., in 1802; was taken by his parents to Stokes County, N. C., in 1808; married Elizabeth Keyes in 1825, who was born in 1806. They came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1829, and settled at first on the farm where he has lived ever since (fifty-one years). His wife died in the fall of 1879. They had been married fifty-four years.

Their family consisted of twelve children. Ten of them are now living;

Nancy (Gray), 1827, four children, White River.
Alexander, 1829, ten children.
William, 1831, nine children.
Lucinda, 1832, seven children.
Willis, 1833, three children, Logansport.
Hannah, 1834, seven children, died 1876.
Asenath, 1838, nine children.
Andrew, 1842, six children.
Lavina, 1844, seven children.
Emeline, 1846, two children.
Eleanor, 1840, four children.

Durant Smith has sixty-eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. He is seventy-eight years old, and quite feeble, and resides with his daughter, Mrs. Simon Gray.

John Starbuck, White River. His parents resided in Surry County, N. C., and he was born there. They came to Virginia in 1823, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1831. He married Beulah Garrett; had nine children, six of whom are living, and died in 1850. His widow is still living, with her son, Welcome Starbuck, east of Buena Vista. She is eighty-six years old, being feeble and nearly disabled.

Leroy Starbuck, White River, son of John Starbuck and brother of Walter and Welcome Starbuck, was born in 1817, in Stokes County, N. C., moved to Virginia in 1823, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1831; married Mary Johnson in 1847, and has one child, born in 1850. He is a Republican; a farmer, owning 160 acres of land east of Buena Vista, in White River Township. He used to belong to the Wesleyans, and now to the Christians.

Randolph Turner, White River, was born in Virginia about 1788; married Elizabeth Heaston, daughter of Abram Heaston and sister of David Heaston; moved to Tennessee in 1818; kept a hotel at the foot of Cumberland Mountains, on the west side, near Crab Orchard; went to Alabama in 1826, and died in 1828. In Alabama he was a farmer. They had seven children, three of whom came to Randolph County, Ind. Mrs. Turner, widow of Randolph Turner, came to Indiana in 1833, with her father, Abram Heaston, bringing three children. She lived with her father till he died, and then with her son, William Turner, until she died, in 1861, being at the time sixty-five years old.

Way family, White River. Paul W. Way, Henry H. Way, William Way, Robert Way (a lad of sixteen, and son of John Way, who was brother to Paul, Henry and William Way) and William Diggs left South Carolina in the spring of 1816 and came to Randolph County, Ind., prospecting for land in that new and wilderness country. They came to White River, west of where Winchester now stands. They located and entered several tracts of land, as follows:

William Way, Jr., west half of the northwest quarter of Section 23, Township 20, Range 13, February 7, 1816.

William Way (father), northeast quarter of Section 22, Township 20, Range 13, June 5, 1816.

Henry Way, northwest quarter of Section 22, Township 20, Range 13, June 5, 1816.

William Diggs, Jr., northwest quarter of Section 24, Township 20, Range 13, September 27, 1816.

Henry H. Way, northeast quarter of Section 27, Township 29, Range 13, October 29, 1816.

In the fall, Paul Way went back to South Carolina for his family and friends; the others stayed. Henry Way and William Diggs went to Greensfork, in Wayne County, during the winter of 1816–17; both got married, and settled in White River before March, 1817.

Paul Way's family, seven in number; John Way's family, seven in number; Armsbee Diggs and wife; John Moorman and family, six in number; and George Wilson and family, numbering five—a company of twenty-seven persons in all, came to Indiana in 1817. The Ways started from South Carolina in the fall of 1816, and the company arrived in White River March, 1817, snow ten inches deep. [Note—John Moorman and George Wilson stopped on Greensfork, southwest of Lynn.] Snow fell on them at the top of the Blue Ridge, and there was snow all the way to White River, melting off in April. They crossed the Ohio on the ice at the foot of Main street, Cincinnati. They came by Richmond, Newport, Williamsburg, Cherry Grove (Brocks and Frazier lived near Cherry Grove); from Cherry Grove the route was through the woods, with no track for fifteen miles. John Way, father of Jesse Way, stretched a tent, and the family lived in it all summer.

William Way, Sr., White River, born in 1756, came to Randolph County, Ind., in the spring of 1817.

He had ten children (see account elsewhere). He settled below Winchester. He was a Friend, a Whig, and died in 1839.

Several of his children were somewhat noted.

Paul W. Way, County Agent, surveyor, hotel-keeper, etc., died in Winchester.

John Way, blacksmith, died in Winchester.

Henry H. Way, physician, died in Illinois.

Matthew Way died in Carolina.

Hannah (Moorman), wife of Tarlton Moorman, mother of twelve children, and died in Carolina in 1877, aged ——— years.

Abigail (Clayton), wife of James Clayton, died at Winchester in 1880, eighty-three years old.

Lydia (Diggs), wife of William Diggs, died many years ago.

Mary (Beverly), mother of Dr. Beverly, of Winchester.

John Way, father of Jesse Way, Winchester, blacksmith, was born in North Carolina; married Patience Green in North Carolina, and they came to Randolph County, Ind., on White River, in the spring of 1817.

They had seven children:

Mary (Armsbee Diggs), nine children.
Robert (Judith Willson), six children.
Matthew (Hannah Reeder), six children.
Jesse (Fanny Diggs), eleven children.
Rachel (Liston), eight children.
John, died at six years old.

John Way was a blacksmith in South Carolina; a farmer from 1817 to 1830, and a blacksmith from 1830 to the end of his life. He entered 160 acres five and a half miles west of Winchester, and lived there till 1830, then moved to Winchester, and died there in 1856; his wife dying also in 1858. He was a Friend, Whig, Abolitionist, Republican.

Matthew Way died in Carolina.

Paul W. Way came to White River in 1816. He was a famous man, active and prominent. He was County Agent, County Surveyor, many years, etc., etc. He surveyed the town plat of Winchester, laid out the State and county roads, etc. He was Justice of the Peace, farmer, hotel-keeper in Winchester, etc. Many an old lawyer and Judge remembers the times at Paul Way's Tavern. Paul Way died in 1856, age 71 years. He was a Whig, an active, enterprising citizen, and greatly esteemed among his fellow-townsmen and by the public at large. He had four children:

Anna, married Nathan Reed.
William M. Way, lives in Champaign County, Ill.
Caroline (Woody).
Anderson Way.

They are all dead but William.

Hannah (Littleberry Diggs) came in 1817. They had five children. She died long ago, as early as 1827.

Lydia (Tarlton Moorman), see account of Tarlton Moorman elsewhere.

Henry H. (Dr.), had ten children; was a Friend, Whig, Abolitionist; went with the "Separation;" Republican. He first came to White River, but moved early to Newport, and later to Nora, Ill., where he died, an old man.

William Way, Jr., brother of H. H. Way, emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., in 1817; moved to Newport (Fountain City), Ind., and, many years afterward, to Wisconsin. He was twice married; had several children, and died in Wisconsin in ripe old age. He was a Friend, a Whig, an Abolitionist, an Anti-slavery Friend and a Republican. He was throughout his life a farmer, and possessed the esteem of his fellow-citizens.

Jacob A. White, White River, was born in 1793, in Rockingham County, Va. He came to Preble County, Ohio, marrying there Mary Neff, sister of Henry H. and John Neff. Mr. White emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., about 1822. He had ten children, all of whom were grown; seven have been married, and all but two are now dead. Himself and eight children have died of consumption. He died in November, 1848, having been taken in a buggy, a few days before his death, to the polls to cast his vote for Gen. Taylor, and being in the fifty-fifth year of his age.

His wife died at Muncie in 1878, aged seventy-six years.

He was a tailor by trade, and, in the Western country, worked both as a tailor and a farmer.

In politics, he was a Whig of the sternest sort, and almost the last words he said were, "Boys, never vote for the Democrats." And they, true to their father's injunction, have obeyed his dying request.

His settlement was made and his residence maintained south of the Poor Farm, where he entered 160 acres.

George T. Wilson, White River, was one of the earliest emigrants from Carolina to the Northwest. He was born in Virginia in 1780; emigrated to North Carolina; married Anna Moorman, daughter of John Moorman, who came to Randolph County with the Ways, etc.

Mr. Wilson had six children, one of whom, Judith, afterward became the wife of Robert Way, and who is now living, an aged widow, in Winchester, strong and healthy, and with sound mind and memory.

Mr. Wilson stopped awhile in Wayne County, cropping for old Francis Thomas, not far from Newport (Fountain City). He entered land (160 acres) several miles north of Newport, on Green's Fork, but in 1819 he moved to Randolph County, and died there in 1855, aged seventy-five years. He was a carpenter by vocation.

William Wolf, White River, was born in 1806, in Augusta County, Va. His father was John Wolf, who had a family of five children.

They came to Preble County, Ohio, in 1812. John Wolf and his wife both died in Preble County, Ohio, his age being ninety-six years, and hers seventy-six years.

William Wolf came to Randolph County in 1833, and settled in White River, five miles west of Winchester. He entered 144 acres southwest of Winchester, near Elisha Martin's, but never resided on the land he entered. He has been a farmer and carpenter.

He has lived on the same (rented) farm, belonging to Moorman Way, Esq., for nineteen years.

He married Mary Magdalena Bower, in Randolph County, in 1837. They have had nine children; eight of them lived to be grown and married, and seven are living still. His wife also is living, having been born in 1815.

He is a Republican in politics, and belongs to the Christian (New Light) Church. He was in early times a Whig. His father was a Jackson Democrat, but, during the civil war, although very old and blind, he was an enthusiastic war man. He declared, with much spirit, that the man who claimed to be a Democrat and would not sustain his Government claimed what was not true.

The old veteran was a soldier in the war of 1812, and for nine years was wholly blind, but his bodily health was sound, and his mind was bright and clear to the close of life.

William Wolf's mother's mother lived to be one hundred and eight years old. She died a great many years ago.

Mr. Wolf is hale and hearty, and looks as though he might survive to the age of his venerable father.

Valentine Wysong, White River, was born at Philadelphia; removed thence to Virginia, to Ohio, and at last to Randolph County, in Indiana. The last removal was made about 1817 or 1818.

He had nine children, as follows: Valentine, Jacob, Joseph, Henry, John, Lewis, David, Elizabeth (Oyler) and Catharine (Oyler). They are now all dead.

Valentine Wysong was a brick mason, and he had, when he moved to Randolph County, considerable property for those times. He died many years ago, over eighty years old. He was of German descent.

David Wysong, White River, was the son of Valentine Wysong. He was born in Virginia in 1799, and came with his father to Randolph County in 1817 or 1818.

He married Eliza Irvin, daughter of John Irvin. They had twelve children, eight of whom are still living.

He followed principally farming, though he was also a brick-maker and a brick-mason. He built the first brick court house, making the bricks therefor. His first wife died in 1853, and he married as his second wife Rebecca (Morrison) Hill, and upon her death, he took for his third wife Mary (Edwards) Pugh. He died April 27, 1878, but his widow still resides on the old homestead, where her husband had lived for nearly sixty years. He was in politics a Democrat.

BIOGRAPHIES.

Besides the biographies already given under other heads, we present a large number of histories of persons connected with Winchester in the past, or in the present, or in both.

Michael Aker, son of John Aker, lived in the county seven or eight years; removed to Illinois, and remained a year; returned to Randolph and stayed two or three years, going then to Preble County, Ohio, where he still resides.

Thomas Aker, brother of Michael Aker, has been a preacher of the Christian denomination for twenty years or more; is a farmer and pump-maker, and lives in Wells County, near Nottingham.

Samuel Aker, brother of Michael and Thomas Aker, resides at Westville, Preble Co., Ohio. He has been a pump-maker, but is now nearly blind.

William Aker, brother of the above, came to Randolph shortly after Andrew did, and died forty years ago.

Thomas Brown, died May 20, 1877, aged eighty-four years six months and fourteen days, having lived in the county forty-three years. He was a kind friend, a good citizen, an affectionate husband and father, and an exemplary member of society. He had belonged to the Christian Church for many years. His wife died five or six years before him. He leaves three sons and two daughters. The funeral services were held at the Methodist Church at Winchester, being conducted by Rev. John A. Moorman, of Farmland.

Edmund B. Carter, Winchester, was born in Maryland about 1794. He emigrated to Dayton, Ohio, 1818; moved to Madison County, Ind., 1832; to Delaware County, also, and afterward to Randolph County about 1840. He died in 1873, almost eighty years old.

He married Mary Deltz in 1823, who was born in 1804.

They had nine children, eight grown, eight married, and seven are living still. Their names, etc., are as follows:

Henry, produce and poultry, Winchester; no children. Levi D., wagon-maker, Winchester; three children. John D., woolen factory, Winchester; three children. George U., farmer; one child. Bennet D., died in infancy. Francis B., works with Henry; two children. Elizabeth J. (Comer) Anderson, Ind.; husband a hand in a stave factory; has four children; she is dead. Edmund D., farmer; Nancy A. (Hoffman), Winchester; husband a marble worker; five children.

The families all reside in or near Winchester, except Elizabeth's, and they live at Anderson.

Mr. E. B. Carter was an enterprising business man, having owned two or three mills and a good farm, but he was broken down by being obliged to pay security money, and he became greatly discouraged, and lost measurably his spirit of enterprise. As stated, he died in 1873, but his widow is living yet.

Henry Carter, Winchester, was born in 1824, at Dayton, Ohio. He moved with his father, Edmund B. Carter, to Madison, Delaware and Randolph Counties, Ind., coming to the latter in 1840.

Henry Carter moved to Troy, Ohio, in 1842; to Dayton, Ohio, in 1845; to Camden, Preble County in 1845; to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1848, and to Winchester, Ind., in 1852, which place has been his residence up to this time. As a boy, he did general work; at Troy he drove a stage, etc.; at Dayton, he worked in a milk dairy; at Camden, he was apprenticed to cabinet-making three years; at Cincinnati, he worked as a journeyman at the carriage business; and at Winchester, he was engaged in the manufacture of carriages till 1862, and in that year he enlisted in the Fifty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, being made Captain of Company I. He was severely injured by a bomb-shell December 28, 1863; was taken care of by his comrades until February, 1863, and was discharged for disability in the fall of that year.

In 1864, he began the poultry and egg and general produce business, and has continued it till now.

He has had several partners: M. A. Reeder one year; Ira Tripp, two years, and the rest of the time mostly alone.

He was married February 22, 1849, to Abigail J. Hull (who was born at Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1823), at Cincinnati, Ohio. They have no children.

Mr. Carter is an active business man, and solid and substantial citizen. He is independent in politics, acting mostly, however with the Republican party. His wife belongs to the Christian Church. He has been a member of the F. & A. M. for about twenty-six years. His business is extensive and thriving, and he takes delight in a life of energetic activity, believing fully in the Scripture injunction: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," and dreading to be counted among that number who by the manner of their lives prove to be

> "Creation's blot, creation's blank, > Whom none may praise, whom none may thank."

Abigail (Way), wife of James Clayton, lived for many years west of Winchester, some years in Winchester, also at Newport (Fountain City), Ind. Her husband, James Clayton, died at Newport. His widow survived him for several years, and died at Winchester (while on a visit there) in the spring of 1880, and was buried at Fountain City, Ind. She was nearly eighty years of age. Mrs. Clayton was a woman of high intelligence, sterling integrity, and firm devotion to principles. She had no children, though she had been married more than fifty years.

John Conner, Winchester, was born near Atlanta, Ga., in 1801. He came to Cincinnati in 1814, and learned the tinner's trade; marrying in Greene County, Ohio, and moving to Randolph County, Ind., in 1831; kept store awhile with his brother, William Conner. John Conner rented forty acres of land near Lynn; moved to Winchester in 1835, and to Portland in 1840, living near the latter place on a farm south of the Big Salamonie River, and in 1857 returned to Winchester. He began in 1835 to carry the United States mail from Winchester to Fort Wayne, and continued that employment till 1861. Enlisting in the army in the fall of 1861, he died near Atlanta, Ga., in 1863, so that he died in sight of the place at which he was born.

Mr. Conner had three children; his wife dying in 1874, by a collision with a railroad train, at the age of seventy-nine years.

Mr. Conner was an old-time Democrat, but he became a Republican in 1860, or thereabouts.

His life was one of great and peculiar hardship; transporting the mail over the northern route, mostly on horseback, through mud and frost; fording and swimming creeks at times in the earlier period; sleeping in the woods one night each trip between Winchester and Fort Wayne. For a few years he carried loads of silver for the entries of land at the Fort Wayne Land Office. In some cases, thousands of dollars were taken at one trip. Edward Edger, then Postmaster of Deerfield, states that at one trip in about 1837, Mr. Conner had $2,000 (in silver) stowed away in his mail bag.

Hannah (Mendenhall) Diggs, Winchester. Her great-grandfather's name was Mordecai Mendenhall, living in North Carolina. The whole connection were millers and millwrights, and he among the rest.

Her grandfather, Stephen Mendenhall, was born about 1750, and raised thirteen children to be grown and married.

He came to Richmond about 1814; moved to Clinton County, Ohio, soon afterward, and died there about 1822.

Her father was Nathan Mendenhall. He was born in North Carolna (Randolph or Guilford County) in 1773; came to Highland County, Ohio, in 1806; moved to Clinton County, Ohio, and remained in that county till 1837; came in that year to Randolph County, Ind., and settled near Unionsport. He was married in North Carolina to Ann Harlan, who was born in 1772.

They had nine children, viz., Edith (Cowgill), 1799, lives in North Manchester, Ind., and is the mother of fifteen children; Hiram, 1801, had ten children, and died in 1852 June 30—the same day that Henry Clay died; Olive (Hadley), 1803, had seven children, and died in 1840; Maria (Hartman), 1805, four children, died in 1872; Elizabeth (Ruble), 1806, one child, died in 1874; Nathan, 1809, ten children, died in 1861; Hannah (Diggs), 1811, three children, is now living (1881); Rebecca (Lewis), 1813, has one child, and resides in Oregon. She moved to California in 1854, and to Oregon in 1855, and that has been her home ever since that time.

Nathan Mendenhall, father of Hannah M., died in 1847, and his wife in 1857.

Hannah (Mendenhall) Diggs was born in 1811; married Littleberry Diggs in 1841, and has had three children, viz., Francis, farmer in Kansas; Ann Eliza Watts, wife of Isaiah P. Watts, attorney in Winchester, and Circuit Clerk of Randolph County (1881–1886).

Hannah's husband, Littleberry Diggs, died in the winter of 1846, and she has lived a widow ever since.

Her mother's name was Harlan, who was the daughter of Enoch and Edith Harlan, North Carolinians.

Enoch Harlan lay a corpse when his daughter (mother of Hannah Mendenhall) was twenty-one years old.

His father was William Harlan, son of Ezekiel Harlan, son of George Harlan, son of James Harlan.

Enoch Harlan had ten children, born between 1770 and 1792.

Rebecca (Harlan) Hampton, daughter of Enoch Harlan and aunt of Hannah Mendenhall, is now living in Lee County, Iowa in her eighty-ninth year.

Hannah Mendenhall's great-grandfather (on her mother's side) was Nathaniel Carter, who was a ribbon weaver in Dublin, son of a rich man in that city by the name of Nicholas Carter. Nathaniel came to America, away back in 1600 and odd, to see the country, and liked it so well that he stayed. He taught school all the rest of his days, living to be a very old man.

Her great-grandparents on her father's side were Mordecai Mendenhall and Charity (Beason) Mendenhall. Her grand father's name was Stephen Mendenhall, and his wife's name was Elizabeth Rich, and her father and mother were John Rich and Sarah (Frashour) Rich. Her great-grandparents on her mother's side were William Harlan and Margaret (Farlow) Harlan. Her grandparents were Enoch Harlan and Edith Carter, and Edith Carter's parents were Nathaniel Carter and Ann McPherson.

Hannah's parents were Nathan Mendenhall and Ann Harlan.

George Harlan, son of James Harlan, was born in Old England, January 11, 1650.

Ezekiel Harlan, son of George and Elizabeth Harlan, was born in Ireland, July 16, 1679.

Hannah Harlan, daughter of George and Elizabeth Harlan, was born in Ireland, February 4, 1681.

Moses Harlan, son as above, born in Ireland, December 20, 1683. Aaron Harlan, born in Ireland October 29, 1685.

Born in Pennsylvania as follows:

Rebecca, August 17, 1688; Deborah, August 28, 1690; Elizabeth, August 9, 1694; Joshua, November 15, 1696 or 1697.

William Harlan, son of Ezekiel Harlan, was born on Sunday, September 1, 1702. His wife was born September 1, 1703, and died June 12, 1767, at 6 o'clock A. M.

Their children were: Mary, born June 26, 1722; William, May 15, 1724; Jonathan, July 15, 1726; James, September 29, 1730; Sarah, September 23, 1732; Stephen, March 12, 1740; George, February 1, 1743; Enoch, December 27, 1745 or 1746, and died October 18, 1794.

Nathan Harlan, son of Enoch Harlan, was born January 10, 1770, and died about 1840, seventy years old.

The other children of Enoch Harlan were: William, born October 6, 1771, died 1844, aged seventy-three years; Ann, born October 19, 1773, mother of Hannah Mendenhall, died 1857, aged eighty-four years; Nathaniel, born October 9, 1775, died 1824, aged forty-nine years; Jonathan, September 7, 1777, died 1846, aged sixty-nine years; David, born January 2, 1780, died 1871, aged ninety-one years; Solomon, born February 13, 1782, died 1869, aged eighty-seven years; Hannah, born March 20, 1784, died 1842, aged fifty-eight years; Enoch, born February 26, 1786, died 1866, aged eighty years; John, born May 9, 1790, died 1876, aged eighty-six years; Rebecca, born August 3, 1792, living in Iowa, aged eighty-nine years.

A truly remarkable family for their age, nine of the number ranging from sixty-nine to ninety-one years, and averaging eighty-one years.

Solomon Harlan, a son of Enoch Harlan, and uncle of Hannah Mendenhall, born February 13, 1782, had children as follows: Rebecca Ann, born August 12, 1816; John M., born February 18, 1818; David Faris, born December 25, 1819; William Foster, born December 25, 1821; Rachel Fallis, born February 19, 1824; Jonathan born March 26, 1826; Solomon Haynes born August 27, 1831; Jane Faris born April 22, 1840.

Hannah has lived for twenty-two years in Winchester spending some time, however, in Iowa and Kansas.

She is much troubled with rheumatism, but is otherwise lively and active. She delights greatly in reading, and spends her time largely in that way.

Her husband emigrated from North Carolina soon after the first settlement of the county.

She is mild and quiet in disposition, bearing the frailties of advancing age and the pains of her afflictive complaint with a patient and cheerful spirit, and giving to the young and rising generation an example that they would do well to follow.

NOTE.—The above "ancestral" account has been given for several reasons:

1. It is very remarkable in itself.
2. It is wonderful that it should have been preserved.
3. The memory of Hannah Diggs is marvelous for one so old (eighty years) holding almost the entire record given above, names, dates and all. She has, however, a written record containing the account in full. Few families could match the statistics furnished by Mrs. Diggs.

Elisha Garrett—father of the lady who furnished this sketch—graduated at Farmers' College, Ohio, with Lindley Ninde, Daniel Hough, etc. He became a lecturer on temperance and abolition; taught school at Williamsburg, Ind., Memphis, Tenn., etc., till he married Hannah Wright and settled on a farm on Cabin Creek. He was elected County Auditor in 1858 or 1859, but died while in office, at Cleveland Water Cure, a few days before the breaking-out of the war. He was very active and enthusiastic in the work of temperance, education, politics, etc.; he was a Methodist, a Republican, a member of the I. O. O. F., etc.; his age was thirty-eight, and he was buried in the Friends' Cemetery, on Cabin Creek; his wife, also, is dead, and his orphan daughter, Miss Lillie A. Garrett, resides with her aged grandparents, Mr. & Mrs. Solomon Wright, near the mouth of Cabin Creek, and makes it her business to care for the wants of their old age, and to smooth their pathway to the tomb.

Emily Jane Harris, Winchester, wife of Dr. J. M. Harris, died at Winchester January 15, 1881, aged fifty-two years; she was born in 1829, being the daughter of David and Jane Hampton, the latter still living at eighty-five years old. David Hampton came from Ohio (Warren County) to Randolph County, Ind., in 1818. They had eleven children, eight sons and three daughters. Emily Jane was one of the students at the first opening of Earlham College, near Richmond, Ind. She had been for several years Clerk of Friends' Monthly and Quarterly Meetings, as also of Richmond Yearly Meeting; she was greatly beloved and deeply lamented.

Abram Heaston, near Winchester, was born in Germany about 1755; came to America and to Virginia before he was grown; married Matilda Short; emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., in 1833, settling three miles south of Winchester, and purchasing land second hand. He was nearly seventy years old when he came to the West, and died in about a year (about 1834); his wife died in Virginia; he had seven children. Five of them came to Randolph County, viz., Evelina, David, Samuel, Elizabeth and Virginia; he was a farmer and a tanner, and followed the business of a tanner till he came to this county; he was a Presbyterian and a Democrat. Abram Heaston was the maternal grandfather of William Turner, formerly residing near Salem, now near Camden, Jay Co., Ind.

Anna Maria Baker (Butterworth, Moore), Winchester, was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1813; in 1832, she married James Butterworth, who was an Englishman, having been born in that country in 1810; he was a mechanic, and removed from Baltimore, successively to Pittsburgh, Dayton, Richmond, and finally, in 1836, to Winchester; they had four children, who are all living in Randolph County, three of the four being residents of Winchester. Mr. Butterworth was killed in 1845 by the bursting of a cannon. It had been used by one of the parties in the campaign of 1844, and had been taken and spiked and hid by the other party in a straw stack; and, upon being found several months afterward, in the efforts by Mr. B. to "unspike" the gun, it exploded, and Mr. B. lost his life. His widow married Mr. James Moore (elsewhere mentioned) soon after, in 1846, with whom she lived till his death, in 1875, and she now resides in Winchester with her son-in-law, W. W. Canada, Esq., who married her youngest daughter, Carrie E. Moore.

Mr. Butterworth was an active business man, owning a saw-mill, a grist-mill, a carding machine, a wagon shop, etc. Mrs. Moore seems in good health and spirits, and looks back upon the checkered scenes of her varied life with mingled satisfaction and sorrow—sorrow at the loss of two husbands, and satisfaction at seeing a large family grow up under her motherly hand to a life of activity, respectability and usefulness.

James Moore, Winchester, was born in North Carolina January 1, 1809; removed to Virginia, and then to Fayette County, Ind., when a child about 1815. He used, when a mere lad, to spend much time with the Indians, tramping through the woods in their company, visiting their traps, often spending the night in their wigwams.

He removed to Jay County when that region received its early emigration (in 1837 or 1838), and, in 1845, he moved to Winchester, residing in or near that town until his death, in 1875. Mr. Moore was three times married, and was the father of nine or ten children, his third wife having, also, before her union with him, been the mother of four children by a previous marriage, forming in all a family of some fourteen children. Eleven of them are still living, as follows: Five in Randolph County, one in Jay County and one in Madison County, one in Fayette County, Ind., one in Kansas, one in Illinois and one in Texas. Mr. Moore was a genuine pioneer, and an active, successful hunter of the olden time, his exploits dating back, some of them, to his boyhood days. Before he was grown, he shot a huge bear in a high tree. The unwieldly creature fell through the branches to the ground, seeming to shake the earth as it struck. The weight of the giant monster was 600 pounds. His third wife was Ann Maria Baker (Butterworth), who is still living, some account of whom is given elsewhere.

Harvey Patty, late of Winchester, was born in Ohio; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1835; married, first, Martha Jane Armfield, and then Malinda Maulsby; he had five children his first wife died in 1848, and he died in 1856. He kept store in Huntsville; afterward, he moved to Winchester and kept the Franklin House hotel; he finally went to Economy, and, while he was preparing to go to Kansas, he fell sick at Economy, and died there in 1856. He was an early Abolitionist; had been a Whig, was a strong temperance advocate, and every way an estimable and excellent man.

Ernestus Putman, father of Mrs. Edward Edger, was a resident of Virginia, working at Harper's Ferry, Va., during the war of 1812, and came to New Madison, Darke Co., Ohio, from Washington City, in 1819; he was the father of ten children, six boys and four girls, eight of whom are still living—David, resides at Palestine, Darke Co., Ohio; Ernestus, resides in Colorado; John, resides in Texas; James, resides in Ohio; Aaron, resides in Indiana; Jane (Edger), resides in Winchester; Nancy (Blount), resides in Kansas, wife of Gen. James Blount; Elizabeth (Kilpatrick), whose husband was an Abolitionist in Kansas during the early troubles in that State, being intimate with John Brown; he was killed by Indians, being shot by them from an ambush and pierced by nine bullets.

Ernestus Putman, the younger, was a merchant in Winchester in partnership with Charles Avery for several years. Mr. Putman was active during the war in various ways, going South several times in charge of boats with sanitary supplies and for bringing home returning convalescent soldiers: he now resides in Colorado.

Mary (Martin) Reeder, Winchester, was born in 1798, April 16, in Hamilton County, Ohio; in 1798, she was married, in Warren County, Ohio, in 1815, to David Reeder, who died in 1821; she came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1822, and has resided here ever since that time, having been a widow for sixty-one years; she is the mother of three children, two of whom are now living; she early learned the tailoring business, working at it nearly all her life. Mrs. R. has resided in Winchester since 1822, or nearly sixty years.

Every house now standing in Winchester has been built since she came to the town. She lived for a long time (thirty-one years) in a log house; and for the last twenty years in her present residence, and all that time on the same lot, on South Main street, on the same premises with her son, Martin A. Reeder. The building east of Riley Hiatt's hardware store was (part of it) built about the same time that Mrs. Reeder settled in the town.

She is still hale and strong, though more than eighty-four years old, having her sight and hearing good, but failing considerably in her memory. She has been an earnest and energetic pioneer, and retains the plain and sturdy simplicity of her early years. She spends much of her time with her son, Martin A. Reeder, who has built a neat residence upon the same premises. They two have resided in the town longer by far than any others now living.

Peter Reinheimer, Winchester, was born in Schuylkill County, Penn., in 1815; came to Fairfield County, Ohio, in 1837, and to Germantown, Ind., in 1838, and to New Paris, Ohio, in the same year; took a horseback trip to Philadelphia in November, 1839; returned to Centerville, Ind., in March, 1840; married Elizabeth Irwin in 1841; went to New Paris, Ohio, in 1840, and moved to Winchester, Ind., in 1865, which has been his place of residence up to this time.

His business has been as follows: Chair shop, in New Baltimore, Ohio, one year, 1837; journeyman, in Germantown, Ind., and New Paris, Ohio, 1838 and 1839; chair shop, in Centerville, Ind., in 1840; chair shop, in New Paris, Ohio, from 1840 to 1849; livery business, from 1849 to 1851; grocer, etc., from 1851 to 1865; hotel-keeper in Winchester, from 1865 to 1882.

Mr. R. is a Republican; his father and uncles were all Democrats; he gave his first vote for Van Buren, in 1836, but voted for Harrison in 1840, and has been a Whig and a Republican ever since. Mr. R. has a fine reputation as a landlord, and his business has been thriving and prosperous. He has had eleven children, eight sons and three daughters; seven are living, five sons and two daughters, and four are married.

Gideon Shaw was born March 22, 1821, in Warren County, Ohio; he came with his father, Joseph Shaw, to Greensfork Township, Randolph County, Ind., in 1831, occupying the southeasternmost tract in the township and county; he worked as a farmer till twenty-five years old, moving to Spartansburg in 1847, and entering the stock business with Ralph M. Pomeroy, Pomeroy furnishing the capital and Shaw doing the work. They also put up a saw-mill and ran it for a time. In 1852, he bought out the store of Henry Hill, sold the mill, and before very long took the goods to Iowa, in 1855. In 1857, he returned to Spartansburg, and, in 1865, moved to Winchester, which has been his residence ever since. Since 1857, his sole business has been that of a loan broker.

He married Clarkey Corbitt, daughter of Richard Corbitt, before 1847; she died in 1848. In 1852, he married Minerva (Elison) Ireland, who is still living. He has had four children, all living. In politics, he was a Whig till Know-Nothingism arose. Since then he has been a Democrat. At one time, he was a Methodist, but does not belong now; has been a member of the I. O. O. F. for twenty-six years. For twenty years past, he has done an average business of $50,000 a year, never having been sued in his life.

Mr. Shaw, when young, had only eighteen days' schooling (when about eighteen years old); when twenty-five years old, he could not write his name; his first wife was his teacher, and by her he obtained an education sufficient for business. Mr. Shaw says that forty-eight years ago, he first saw Thomas Ward, who came at that time, being only about fourteen years old, to Mr. Shaw's home, riding on a beautiful bay pony, buying coon-skins and such like. Mr. Shaw is now a prominent citizen, reputed wealthy, and a leader in the political party to which for twenty-eight years he has belonged.

W. W. Smith was born in Tennessee in 1811; came to Ohio in 1819, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1822, and has been a resident of the county for sixty years. He married Louisa Elzroth in 1840; they have had nine children, seven of whom are living, all grown and three married. He was a farmer's son and is a farmer still; he traveled extensively while young; he held the position of Deputy Sheriff during the terms of Sheriffs Garrett, Irvin and Forkner, and has been Constable for twenty-three years; closing this part of his career in 1863. His life has been an active and varied one, and he still enjoys a good measure of health and strength.

Jesse Way, son of John Way, blacksmith, was born in South Carolina (Marlboro District) in 1808; he came to Randolph County in 1817, married Fanny Diggs in 1829, and Lucinda Turner in 1833; he has had eleven children, three only living; he has been a farmer, a merchant and a business man, a clerk and a boarding-house keeper. At one time, he was a prominent citizen, being for three years a member of the Board of Directors of the State Bank of Indiana. But he was unfortunate in pork speculations, the bane and ruin of so many dealers in those times, and lost his property. He has been all his life, however, estimable and upright and trustworthy and highly respected. He was for twelve years (1833 to 1845), a merchant in Winchester, he has been a Friend, an Abolitionist (in early times a Whig), in later days, a Republican. He still resides in Winchester, that place having been his home for about fifty years.

Mr. Way has been a resident of Randolph County for about sixty-five years, and has witnessed, in the duration of his own life, what strange and mighty transformations have taken place from a deep and hideous and far-away wilderness to the land of wondrous beauty which our eyes now behold. The number who have dwelt for sixty-five years in this—Randolph County—is small indeed, and growing rapidly less; and, erelong, the last pioneer will have been called home, and that noble and hardy band will live only in the memory of their posterity, or will, in many, alas! how many cases, be utterly and forever forgotten.

Robert Way, son of John Way and brother of Jesse Way, was born in South Carolina in 1803, and came to White River, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1816, with Paul W., Henry H., William and Robert Way and William Diggs, in his fourteenth year. Robert Way married Judith Wilson, daughter of George T. Wilson (see statement) in 1826, they had five children, only two now living; he died in 1876, at the age of seventy-three years.

He was by occupation a blacksmith; in religion, a Friend, and afterward, a Methodist; in politics, a Whig, and then an Abolitionist, and still afterward, a Republican; he was a man of steady, reliable habits, moral, upright, trustworthy and an honor to his business and to the community. His widow, Mrs. Judith Way, still resides in Winchester, where she has been living for forty-five years. She is a woman of active temperament, enjoys good health, and is highly esteemed by her neighbors and friends. (See Reminiscences, by Judith Way).

Sylvanus White was born in 1834 in Randolph County, Ind., being the son of Jacob A. White; he has been a plasterer by trade since he was sixteen years old. He was in the army four years five months and ten days, enlisting in the Eighth Indiana Infantry for the three-months' service; then in the same regiment for three years, and veteranizing at Indianola, Texas. He was at home but twice during the whole war—once on veteran furlough and once at another time. He was never wounded and never lost a day's duty. He was a private and for two years was a color-bearer. He married Jennie Seagraves in 1866, and they have four children, all living; in politics, he is a Republican.

John W. Williamson was born in 1804, in Frederick County, Md.; he removed to Pennsylvania about 1820, his father having died shortly before that time; in 1824, he went to Kentucky and became a dry goods clerk, continuing for three years; he studied law, but his health failed, and he was obliged to give up the profession; he kept for a time a hotel in Preble County, Ohio; taught school eighteen months near Dayton, Ohio, and shortly after that married his wife. They removed to Abington, and resided also at Dalton and at Hagerstown. At one time, he represented Wayne County in the Legislature. In 1851, Mr. W. removed to Buena Vista, Randolph County.

He received, in 1853, an appointment as railroad agent at Winchester for the Indianapolis & Bellefontaine Railroad. He kept this position for fourteen years, till 1867, about which time he was chosen Recorder of Randolph County, and, after the expiration of his term, he continued in the office as Deputy with Recorder Brown, till his health failed. His disease was consumption, to which at length he was forced to yield, falling in death May 9, 1877.

He was active in business and faithful and trustworthy in every relation of life; he lived respected and died lamented. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, Preble County, Ohio, in 1830, and lived a member of that body forty-seven years. He was a Master Mason, joining Winchester Lodge, No. 56, March 18, 1854, and the Royal Arch Chapter, June 24, 1857. His remains were interred at the Maxville Cemetery; his age was seventy-two years, five months and twenty-five days. In politics, he was an energetic and enthusiastic Republican.

ALEXANDER ALMONRODE.

Alexander Almonrode, a farmer, was born in Rockbridge County, Va., August 16, 1827. He is the son of George and Margaret Almonrode, and is the ninth of a family of ten children, of whom four are living. His parents were born in Germany, and came to the United States early in life and settled in Virginia, Rockbridge County. They moved to Preble County, Ohio, in the year 1834, where his father died the year following; his mother came to this county in 1838, and settled near where Alexander now lives, where she died in 1865. Alexander came to this county with his mother and younger brother at the age of eleven years. They settled in the woods upon an eighty-acre tract, and they three, assisted by a few of the older brothers, cleared up a very desirable farm. His educational advantages were very much limited, but he acquired a sufficiency to transact all business in his line. His schooling was confined to the subscription schools of his day, which were in a very primitive state. He was married to Miss Delilah Jane Pierce July 4, 1850. She is the daughter of Thomas and Lydia Pierce, and was born in this county September 21, 1831. She was raised in this county, and received a limited education from the common district schools. Mr. and Mrs. Almonrode settled on the farm where they now reside in 1850, soon after their marriage. At that time, there were eighty acres of land with no improvements with the exception of a deadening of six acres. They battled against poverty for a number of years, but finally through industry and frugality have secured a beautiful farm of 280 acres, with 140 under a high state of cultivation. This farm is well improved, being underdrained and cultivated scientifically. The farm buildings are both ornamental and convenient, of modern architecture, and beautifully located in a grove of forest trees, a sketch of which is given in this work. Mr. and Mrs. Almonrode are the parents of ten children. The lives of only four of them have been spared. The majority of their deceased children died in infancy. Their living children are as follows: Anthony R., born July 24, 1852; Thomas A., February 12, 1857; Luther F., February 20, 1865; Sarah E. B., September 9, 1869. Anthony and Thomas are married and comfortably situated in life, the former living in Iowa and the latter in this county. Mr. and Mrs. Almonrode have been honored and useful members of the United Brethren Church for twenty years. Mr. A. is a stanch Republican, and is ever active in the welfare of the party. Mr. and Mrs. A., with their two children, are surrounded by the comforts and some of the luxuries of life; honored and respected neighbors and citizens, and valuable members of society.

DAVID ADDINGTON, farmer, P. O. Farmland, is a native of Wayne County, Ind., and was born March 9, 1827. His parents were Joseph and Celia (Townsend) Addington, who were the parents of ten children, viz., Rachel, Celia, Thomas, Jonathan, Elvira, Elisha, Elihu, Stephen, Benjamin and David, our subject. His mother was left a widow when he was small, and the boys were obliged to work hard, and enjoyed but limited educational advantages. They worked in the field many nights until 9 or 10 o'clock. Mr. A. owns 160 acres of land in White River Township. He was married in 1849, to Miss Huldah R. Bolinger, by whom he has had four children, two living—Joseph L. and Mary E., now Mrs. James M. Pursley. His grandfather, John Townsend, was a soldier in the war of 1812. Mr. and Mrs. Addington are worthy members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

IRA ADAMSON, farmer, P. O. Winchester, is a native of West River Township, this county, and was born April 30, 1833. His parents were Abraham and Nancy (Botkins) Adamson. He served one year in the late war in Company F, One Hundred and Fortieth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He was married in December, 1855, to Miss Nancy A. Wilmore, daughter of W. C. Wilmore, of White River Township. They have ten children—Willis A., Mary R., Sarah N., Jesse W., Lucinda A. A., John M., James I., George W., Hannah F. and Theresa E. Mr. A. is a shoemaker by trade, but is also engaged in farming. They are members of the Predestinarian Baptist Church.

JAMES M. ADKINS is a resident of White River Township. He is an enterprising farmer, and was born in Darke County, Ohio, June 29, 1838. He is a son of George and Nancy (McClerkin) Adkins; the former is a native of Delaware, and the latter of South Carolina. Mr. James M. Adkins was reared on a farm, and obtained a common-school education. He came to Randolph County in February, 1861, and has since been a resident thereof. In 1860, he was married to Miss Mary C. Hart, who was a native of Darke County, Ohio, and a daughter of Dennis Hart. They have two children, named William O. and Minnie A. William O. was born August 10, 1861, and Minnie A. April 4, 1874. Mr. Adkins owns a valuable tract of land on Bear Creek, consisting of 216 acres. His farming land is under good cultivation and well improved. Mr. Adkins gives his time to overseeing his farm and stock-raising. He has been eminently successful in both these enterprises, and has about him some of the finest stock in the county.

HON. NATHAN T. BUTTS.

Perhaps among the many eminent and influential men of Randolph County, none are more truly "self-made" than he of whom we write. His position in the world has been attained under difficulties, and in despite of circumstances that, in other cases, have led to results very dissimilar to those which have marked his as a noble life. He was born on the 25th of July, 1838, in Randolph County, Ind. His parents, Thomas and Elizabeth Butts, formerly residents of Ohio, came to Indiana in 1834, and for a few brief years subsequently, bore their share in the pioneer history of an infant community, until death removed them from their sphere of activity, and changed the current of their son's life. When the latter was but four years of age, his mother died, and five years later, he and his two sisters were made orphans by the death of their father. Soon the son began to know the bitterness of a cruel world, and the hardships awaiting a boy whose natural protectors were dead. His guardians—John M. Lucas and William Kennedy—"bound him out" to a citizen of this county to serve until he should attain his majority. In the compact, it was stipulated that the boy should receive three months' schooling each year, and at the end of his period of service should receive, in addition, a suit of clothes and a horse, saddle and bridle. Scarcely had he reached his new home, when he was made aware that a terrible life was in store for him. His master was cruel, and kicked and abused him unmercifully upon the slightest pretext, and more often without any pretext whatever. But the boy was only nine years old, and not equal to the resentment of the abuses heaped upon him. He endured them until fourteen years of age, when one morning, after an unusually severe outburst from the old man, he determined to escape from such a life, and turned his back upon the place where the past five years of his life had been made wretched. In memory of his master's brutality, he carried with him a bruised, aching knot over his eye, as large as a hen's egg. Pursued by the old man, who started after him, with his henchmen, on horse-back, he finally made his way to his guardians, who released him from the bondage in which he had been enthralled. It is a noble trait of his character, that in the years of his manhood, he cherishes no resentment, and has never sought to be revenged upon the man who made his youth so unhappy.

After his escape, he was hired out to work by the month during the summer, and attended school in the winter, working for his board. He developed an aptness for learning, and a thirst for knowledge, using all his leisure time to the best advantage in its acquisition. In the spring of 1856, he became a student in the Union Literary Institution, at Spartansburg, Randolph Co., Ind., and by diligent study qualified himself for teaching. On the 30th of November, 1857, he received his first license to teach school from Hon. John J. Cheney, afterward Judge of the Randolph Probate Court. Entering zealously into the duties of his profession, he soon rose to the first rank as a teacher, and became popular with pupils and parents alike. He subsequently removed to Wayne County, Ind., and there, on the 19th of August, 1859, was united in marriage with Miss Louisa Macy. In 1861, he returned to Randolph County, and purchased a small farm, to the cultivation of which he devoted his time. During the spring and summer of 1863, he was a teacher in the seminary at Winchester, with Prof. Cooper, at the same time reciting in some of the higher branches. He labored two or three years as a teacher, with the most marked success, until compelled by impaired health to abandon that profession, and retire to his farm, where he resumed agricultural pursuits. Since then, his principal occupation has been that of the agriculturist, and he has devoted himself to his work with the same zeal and energy that has characterized all his life. By his industry and good management, he has accumulated a comfortable store of worldly wealth, and has a fine farm and a cozy home, surrounded with the comforts of life, and blessed by the presence of wife and loving children. His wife, an estimable lady, is the daughter of Henry L. and Rachel Macy, and is a lady of rare intelligence and wifely qualities. Her father, who is a native of South Carolina, came to Wayne County, Ind., with his parents in 1816, being then ten years of age. He is still living near Williamsburg, in that county, at the age of seventy-six years. Mr. Butts and wife are the parents of eleven children, eight of whom are now living, viz.: Ida F., Mary V., Anna L., Clarence E., Rachel E., Mary E., Viola M. and Alice E. Clara S., Julia E. and an infant are deceased.

Though in early life, Mr. Butts experienced much that had a natural tendency to sour and embitter his nature, he grew up with the principles of religion firmly implanted, and as he grew older, they developed and strengthened. In the spring of 1867, he united with Mount Zion Methodist Episcopal Church, during the pastorate of Rev. G. S. Jenkins, and before the close of his period of probation, was appointed Class Leader, a position which he held for several years. On the 30th of May, 1868, he was licensed to exhort by Rev. G. S. Jenkins, and was licensed to preach at the Quarterly Conference held at Mount Zion by Rev. Mahin, Presiding Elder, in July, 1870. At the annual conference held at Union City, in April, 1880, he was ordained a Deacon by Bishop Foster.

Several years ago, his services began to be sought in the settlement of estates, his well-known honesty and integrity making him very desirable as an administrator or executor. In 1870, he was appointed administrator of the estate of James H. Johnson; of the estate of Thomas Marshall in 1871; of the estate of William Kennedy in the same year, and of the estates of Nancy Kennedy and Henry Edwards respectively in 1881. In 1872, he was nominated by the Republicans of this county as their Representative in the General Assembly of Indiana, and in the fall of that year was elected by a majority of 1,768. He served faithfully through the regular and extra sessions of that year, taking an active part in all the work of the House. He was, in a sense, the author of what is known as the "Baxter Liquor Law." The original draft of this bill was prepared by himself and William Baxter, Representative from Wayne County. When the bill was brought before the House, a multitude of amendments were proposed, which, to secure the support of the members proposing them, would necessarily have to be adopted. These amendments so loaded the bill down, crippled its operation and destroyed its effect, that it became evident to its projectors that it could not be passed without revision. It was accordingly revised by Gov. Baker, Judge Mellett, of Henry County, and others, and in its new form was passed and became a law. The bill as reconstructed contained many of clauses that were a part of the original bill formulated by Mr. Butts. The local option clause was exclusively the work of Mr. Baxter, and this being incorporated verbatim in the revised bill, gave to the measure the name of the Baxter bill. The Indianapolis papers printed a statement of the facts as here presented, and gave it the name of the Butts-Baxter bill, by which it was long known. Perhaps in all the legislation of that session, there was none into which Mr. Butts entered with so much zest and enthusiasm as that which affected the temperance cause. He is, and has always been, radically and uncompromisingly an advocate and friend of that cause, and has been identified with it for years as an active worker in the ranks. A correspondent of the Winchester Journal was in the House when when Mr. Butts, Chairman of the Committee on Temperance, made the closing speech in favor of the bill. Says this correspondent: "At 2 o'clock, Mr. Butts took the floor, and as I was representing Randolph County in the lobby, I felt a natural county pride that the representative from Randolph should succeed in putting the cap-stone in the temperance arch. The speech was very effective; the compactness of its logic, the irresistible force of the facts he adduced, the terseness of his language, and withal the deliberate and impressive style of his delivery, combined to render his speech overwhelmingly convincing. A few minutes before he arose to speak, the House was all confusion; weak-kneed members sat uneasily in their seats. Mr. Butts had not pronounced more than two or three sentences, before he commanded the attention of all, and before he had got half way through, a deathly stillness pervaded the whole assemblage. From the earnest attention manifested, it was evident the speech was producing the desired effect. Members who before seemed entirely indifferent to the passage of the bill, became intensely interested.

"Mr. Butts, by his unwavering and earnest zeal in the temperance cause, has won for himself the highest compliments, not only from members of the Legislature, but a large portion of the people of the State. It has been asserted by several of the most prominent members of the House, that his was the best speech made during the present session."

He has always had the courage to maintain his convictions, at whatever cost; and by his firmness and manly independence, he has won many friends, by whom he is held in the highest esteem. Of him, the Western Life Boat says; "He is a man who is calculated to take the world as it comes, and make the most of it. He has a prevailing moral and religious sentiment, and under its control always desires to do right. He is inclined to be true and honest and loyal to mankind as he understands it." He is a large, well-built man, full of vitality and vigor, earnest, conscientious and intellectual—a man whose intercourse with his fellow-men is entertaining and elevating.

LEWIS BOLANDER.

Lewis Bolander, a farmer, was born in the State of Hesse, Germany, November 12, 1826. He is the son of John and Mary (Slamer) Bolander, and is the second of a family of five children, two of whom are living. Of these children, three were born in Germany and two in the United States. His only living sister, Malinda Strohm, resides in St. Louis County, Mo. His parents were native Germans, and came to the United States in the year 1833 and settled in Franklin County, Penn., where they lived for fifteen months, when they moved and settled in Richmond, Wayne County, this State. They remained here for nine months, when they came to this county and entered land in White River Township, and remained here until their deaths. His father died in 1865 and his mother in 1874. Lewis was seven years old when he came, with his parents, to this country. He obtained a meager education from the district schools of this county. His occupation has always been that of a farmer, working very hard in his earlier days assisting his father to clear a farm from the forests. He cultivated his father's farm until his death, when it came into Lewis' possession by will. His father was in the French Army under Bonaparte, and was actively engaged in the battle of Waterloo. He also made the celebrated passage across the Alps with the French Army. Lewis was married to Rosina Fraze, daughter of John and Abbie Fraze, of Preble County, Ohio, May 20, 1854. His wife was born in Darke County, Ohio, in the year 1834, but was raised principally in Preble County. Her parents came to this county about the year 1859, and settled in White River Township, where they both died. Mr. and Mrs. Bolander are the parents of eight children, five of whom are living—Francis N., born August 14, 1855; Mary L., January 16, 1856; Charles A., April 14, 1868; William C. and John A., July 1, 1870. Mr. Bolander had two great uncles who took part in the Revolutionary war and surrender with Cornwallis at Yorktown. Mr. B. is owner and proprietor of eighty-seven acres of good land, with sixty-five acres under a high state of cultivation, and his whole attention is given to farming and stock-raising. He has been an active and uncompromising Republican all his life, and has done much work for the party. His farm buildings are beautifully located and convenient, a sketch of which is given in this work. He is one of Randolph County's substantial and honored citizens, an industrious, prudent man, moral, upright and a valuable member of society.

GEORGE W. BOWSMAN, farmer, P. O. Saratoga, was born in Preble County, Ohio, February 24, 1817, and is a son of Adam and Susan Bowsman, natives of Virginia, and of German descent. Adam Bowsman moved to Ohio in 1812, where he reared his family. Our subject was reared on a farm, and educated in the common school. He was married in 1838 to Miss Sarah Almonrode, a native of Virginia, and daughter of George Almonrode, deceased. They have had eight children, five living—Susannah, Mary, Cyrus, John H. and Jane. Mr. Bowsman moved to this county in 1839, and settled in the woods, and struggled hard with nothing to start on, and has been very successful. He owns 320 acres of valuable land.

ETHAN A. BROWN is a farmer and resides in White River Township; he was born in Stony Creek Township, Randolph Co., Ind., March 26, 1841; he is a son of Washington Brown, who is a native of Highland County, Ohio. The Brown family came from Virginia, and are of English descent. Ethan A. Brown's mother is a daughter of Henry Kline, who is of German descent. When Ethan was a boy, his parents moved to Grant County, Ind., where they resided till December, 1873, when Ethan came to Randolph. He was a soldier in the late war, and a member of Company B, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and served nearly three years. He participated in the following battles, viz.: Resaca, Rocky Face Ridge, Lookout Mountain, siege of Atlanta and others. He was married, March 25, 1867, to Miss Mahala Brooks, daughter of Enos Brooks. They had one child—Anna J., when Mrs. Brown died. Mr. Brown married again September 30, 1875, to Miss Ruth E. Hinshaw, daughter of Solomon Hinshaw. Mrs. Brown's mother, Rachel Hinshaw, was a daughter of Joseph Hedgen. They emigrated from North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have had four children, of whom three are now living—Otio O., Orah L. and William F.

GEORGE COX.

George Cox, farmer, was born in White River Township, Randolph Co., Ind., June 6, 1820. He is is the son of Simon and Tamar (Sugart) Cox, and is the eldest of a family of four children, and the only one who is now living. His father and mother were natives of North Carolina, and the former was born February 15, 1798, and the latter March 14, 1801. They moved from North Carolina to Ross County, Ohio, and from there to this county in the fall of 1819, and settled on a farm in White River Township. They lived on this farm until the year 1842, when they moved to Wayne Township, this county, where his mother died November 11, 1857. His father was subsequently twice married, first to Mrs. Hannah Weisner, second to Mrs. Abigail Paxton, who lived seven years. A remarkable fact connected with the death of his three wives is, they all died in the same month and on the same day of the month, viz., the 11th day of November. After the death of his third wife he made his home with the subject of this sketch, until his death, which occurred November 8, 1881, at the age of eighty-three years, eight months and twenty-three days. George was raised on a farm, and has followed the occupation of farming very successfully all his life. He received a very limited education from the subscription schools of this county. At that time the schools were almost worthless, and opened but a very brief period during the winter. Mr. Cox being a man possessed of more than ordinary intelligence, is well informed in the current literature of the day. He was united in a first marriage to Zeruiah Tomlinson, at the age of twenty years. His worthy wife was the daughter of William and Nancy Tomlinson, and was a native of this county. This union was blessed with the birth of nine children, six of whom are living, as follows: Nancy, born August 30, 1839, she was married, to Isom Harris, in 1861, and died October 13, 1862; Lavinia, born October 23, 1840; William L., born September 16, 1842; Angeline T., born October 2, 1844; Olinthus, born August 22, 1846; Tamar, born December 18, 1848; Henry, born November 13, 1850; Gilbert, born August 15, 1852; Cyrus, born December 6, 1853. Henry died in infancy, and Tamar in maturer years. His faithful wife died September 8, 1858. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother and a zealous Christian. Mr. Cox was united in a second marriage, to Sarah Sanders, November 22, 1862, who still survives. She is a most estimable Christian lady. She is the daughter of William and Tabitha Sanders, and was born in Johnson County, Ind., July 17, 1822. Her parents were natives of North Carolina. After his first marriage, Mr. Cox settled on 120 acres of land in White River Township, with about twenty acres cleared. He subsequently sold this and bought a quarter section adjoining the farm upon which he now resides. He subsequently added his home farm to this purchase, and is now owner and proprietor of 400 acres of excellent land, with 200 acres under a high state of cultivation. As a farmer, Mr. Cox has been eminently successful, and has accumulated a competence of worldly effects. He gives special attention to the improvement and raising of stock of all kinds. His farm buildings are beautiful in architecture and are situated on a commanding knoll on the Union City pike, about three miles east of Winchester. A sketch of his buildings is given in this work. Mr. Cox has been a member of the Society of Friends all his life, and his wife for about twenty-two years. Mr. C. has always acted and voted with the Republican party since its organization, was strongly anti slavery during the existence of that institution, and has taken an active interest in all moral reforms, especially the temperance reform. He is a strong advocate of prohibition. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are useful members of the church, highly respected citizens and honored members of society, and surrounded by all of the comforts and many of the luxuries of life.

WILLIAM RILEY COX, farmer, P. O. Winchester, more commonly known as Riley Cox, was born in Randolph County December 8, 1839, and is a son of Benjamin and Alice Cox. He received a common school education, and has always been a farmer. He served in the war, during the 100 day's service, in Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. Was married, April 7, 1866, to Miss Martha Parsons, a native of Ohio, and daughter of James Parsons, of Monroe Township, this county. They have seven children—Alice, David E., Edgar G., Jennie M., Cora, Willard R. and Ossa G. Mr. Cox is engaged in farming and stock-raising and owns 163 acres of valuable land. They are members of the Society of Friends.

ANDREW COX, farmer, P. O. Winchester, is a native of White River Township, and was born April 7, 1831. His parents were Joshua and Margaret Cox, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of Ohio. They were early settlers of this county. Our subject received most of his education in the Friends' Church on White River. He was married, November 27, 1852, to Miss Mary A. Hickman, a native of this county, and daughter of Jacob Hickman, an early settler of this county. They have had twelve children, eight living—Martha E., Berrilla J., Sylvester H., Nancy A., Minnie O., Albert R., Andrew H. and Elta G. Martha is married to Isom Pickett. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are members of the Society of Friends. Mr. Cox has in his possession a powder-horn, beautifully engraved with Indian hieroglyphics, which was purchased of a squaw, by his father, for a basket of turnips.

JAMES J. CLAYTON, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in Kent County, Md., August 8, 1819, and is a son of Stephen and Mary Clayton, who located in Randolph County in 1820. The former died in 1834 and the latter in 1858. Mr. Clayton's mother was left a widow with a large family of small children, and she therefore had much hard work to do. His educational advantages were very limited. The schools were taught wholly by subscription, and for a very short term in the winter only. Their schoolhouse was a round-log cabin, with a ten-foot fire-place in one end, split logs for seats, and a log removed from one side of the house for a window. Our subject's uncle, James Clayton, settled close to his brother Stephen, with an eighty-acre between them. This they finally procured, by keeping others off until they could obtain the money with which to pay for it. James Clayton died in Wayne County, Ind., in 1873. In those early days, the pioneers made log-rolling a special work in the spring of the year. Mr. Clayton rolled logs, at one time, for eighteen days in succession, leaving blood marks on his hand spike. Burning brush at nights was a pastime. He was married, in 1844, to Miss Jemima, daughter of Peter Hester, who came to this county in 1832. They have had two children —Willard F., living, and Stephen L., who died at the age of ten. Mr. Clayton owns 473 acres of valuable land in the White River Valley, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. Mr. Clayton had the Indian boys for his playmates, and their playground was the present site of the Macksville Cemetery. He has been engaged in shipping stock, more or less, for the past twenty years.

JOHN M. CLAYTON, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in this county, where he now resides, October 29, 1831, and is a son of Stephen and Mary (Cheffins) Clayton, natives of Maryland. In the early days, his father had to go thirty miles to mill. Mr. C. was married, in 1859, to Miss Mary Wright, daughter of Solomon Wright, of Stony Creek Township. She was born in Stony Creek Township January 4, 1830. Mr. Clayton obtained most of his education at home by the fireside. He owns 516 acres of land. He rents out his land and deals in stock.

DAVIDSON CHEESMAN, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Wayne County, Ind., December 18, 1836, and is a son of Ebenezer and Jane (Culbertson) Cheesman, the former a native of New Jersey, and the latter of Bourbon County, Ky. Mr. Cheesman was brought up on a farm, and educated in a log cabin, and sat on slab seats, and wrote on a board, supported by pins in the wall; he was married in 1856, to Miss Ann Taylor, by whom he has had nine children, seven living—John, Elmey, Minnie A., Cora M., Taylor, Eddie and Susan. Mr. Cheesman owned and ran a saw-mill and machine shop for about two years while in Wayne County. He came to this county in February, 1867, where he now resides, on Section 27, White River Township, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. Mr. and Mrs. Cheesman are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

GILBERT COATS, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Randolph County October 4, 1839, and is a son of Thomas W. and Sarah Coats (deceased), the former a native of Ohio, and the latter of Jay County, Ind. Mr. Coats was raised on a farm, and educated in the common school. He helped his father make a farm in the woods. October 5, 1867, he married Miss Lydia Pickett, a native also of this county, and daughter of William Pickett, an early settler of this county. They have seven children—Leroy, Sylvester, Loly B., Iowa L., William T., Nellie and Mary E. Mr. Coats owns 120 acres of land in Section 23.

WILLIAM DIGGS was one of the earliest settlers on the banks of White River, and bore a prominent part in the history of Randolph County. He was born in 1794, in North Carolina, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1816. In the winter of that year, he was married, in the adjoining county of Wayne, to Charlotte, daughter of Henry Way; he entered the northwest quarter of Section 24, in White River Township, on the 27th of September, 1816, and began the labor of carving out a farm from the woodland around him. His family is believed to have been the first to settle on White River. Henry, Paul W., William and John Way came soon afterward, but until their arrival Mr. Diggs and his wife were alone in the forest, their nearest neighbors being located on Green's Fork, Nolan's Fork, and West River respectively. They were pioneers in the truest sense, and endured all the privations and hardships that characterize the early settlements of the West. Mrs. Diggs (when a girl), lived with her parents in Wayne County during the Indian war, and after the restoration of peace was told by the Indians: "We could have killed you easy enough, as we lay in ambush, while you and your sister were out milking the cows." They had the courage to enter the wilds of this county, and despite all the hardships to which they were subjected, hew out a farm and establish a home. And here they reared their children, thirteen in number, training them for honorable and useful stations among the best citizens. In the years that followed, when the light of civilization began to penetrate the forest, and the constantly increasing population of the settlement brought with it a degree of progress and prosperity, they were found among the friends of public improvement and advancement, and did all within their power to encourage enterprises for the public good. The land upon which Mr. Diggs located was the seventh tract entered in White River Township. Entering it thus, at the nominal price established by the Government, was a circumstance greatly in his favor, as it appreciated rapidly, and in later years represented a value of several thousands of dollars; he was a strong, energetic man, and spent the best years of a vigorous manhood in the cultivation and improvement of his farm. He was an excellent neighbor, and in all respects a worthy member of society. He was attached to Dunkirk Meeting, one of the earliest organizations of the Society of Friends, and was known always as an honorable, upright man, one whose life was consistent with his professions of Christianity. He lived to see the backwoods settlement of his early manhood grow into a populous and thrifty farming community, and the county in whose forests he first wielded the pioneer's ax take its place as one of the foremost in the State. His wife died many years ago, but he still survives, bordering closely upon the age of ninety years; he now lives in Iowa, having accompanied his children to that State several years ago. Of his children, eight only now survive. Fanny, the eldest, married Matthew Hill, and now resides at Jericho; Ruth, resides at Farmland; Pleasant, Joseph, Anthony and Henry, resides in the State of Iowa; Anna, wife of Jessie Reynard, resides east of Buena Vista, and Eunice, wife of Thomas Moorman, resides at Winchester.

SQUIRE DAVIS, farmer, P. O. Saratoga, was born in Wayne County, Ind., December 4, 1826, and is a son of Samuel and Nancy Davis. They came to this county in 1831, and settled in the woods. There was no road to Winchester except a trail. His father went all the way to Richmond, Ind., to mill, on horseback, a distance of twenty miles. Mr. Davis went to school in a log cabin, sat on a slab seat, and wrote on a board supported on pins in the wall. He was married in 1848 to Miss Mary Haworth, a native of Winchester, and daughter of David Haworth. They have had eleven children, of whom seven are living—Favilla, Asa, Emeline, William R., Francis M., David H. and Mary A. Mr. Davis was a soldier in the late war for eight months, but was sick all the time and unable for duty. He owns fifty-six acres of land. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are worthy members of the United Brethren Church.

WILLIAM H. DEMORY.

William H. Demory, son of John and Sarah (Robinson) Demory, was born in Guilford County, N. C., July 4, 1826. He is the eighth of a family of eleven children, of whom three are now living and residing in this State. His father was born a slave, in Charlestown, S. C., in 1786, and his mother was also born a slave, in Guilford County, N. C., in 1790. His mother obtained her freedom by the "will" of her master when she was eighteen years of age. His father remained in slavery until he was twenty-six years of age, when he ran away from his master and came to this State and county. His first attempt to run away was unsuccessful. His pursuers caught and bound him; but while they were comfortably partaking of a repast, the ropes that bound him were cut by William Knott, and he made his escape, and in order to elude the dogs that were set on his trail he swam a millpond, and waded a stream for some distance, when he left the water and took to the woods. He came to this county about the year 1827, when he was soon after joined by his family. During the "Nat" Turner Insurrection, John Demory was accused of being implicated, and his life was in danger. This was the principal cause of his leaving the South. His life as a slave was not a severe one, being a light mulatto, handsome and intelligent, his master selected him as a personal servant. The subject of this sketch left his home in North Carolina, May 12, 1840, at the age of fourteen years, and went to New York City, where he was employed as waiter in hotels for one year. He served in this capacity in the Howard, Astor and Broadway Hotels. While serving at these hotels, he became acquainted with a sea captain, who induced him to enter into his employ as a body servant on the sloop of war "James K. Polk." They made a voyage to Gibraltar, where the vessel was burned. After this event, he accompanied his Captain on a six-months' voyage along the coasts of Africa, Italy and France. He then returned to the United States, arriving at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and embarked on the steamship "Washington" (the first steamship ever built in America), in the capacity of a steward. He made two trips to Europe on this vessel, when he was transferred to the "Herman," in which he made two trips to Germany. He then embarked on the sailing vessel "Iroquois," as Second Assistant Steward. He made one round trip to Europe in this vessel, which required forty-two days. So scarce were the provisions on this trip that the officers and passengers were put on half-rations for ten days, and the stewards resorted to the contents of the swill barrel to keep from starvation. He then went to Montreal, Canada, where he was employed in the Donegana Hotel as waiter, where he remained for four months. He then went to Cincinnati, and embarked on the steamer "Pike No. 3," as Second Steward. He made one round trip to New Orleans on this vessel, where he was employed on the "Fanny Bullett," named in honor of the daughter of Judge Bullett, of Kentucky. He remained on this vessel seven or eight months as steward, running from Louisville to New Orleans. While on this steamer, Mr. Demory was in constant and great danger of being kidnaped, and in order to avoid this he resorted to the strategy of getting up a false bill of sale, and placing it in the care of a friend, who claimed him as his slave. In this transaction, Mr. Demory placed his liberty entirely at the mercy of this friend, but his trust was not betrayed. After his service on the "Fanny Bullett," he embarked on the Red River expedition on the "Echo No. 2." This vessel ran from New Orleans to Shreveport, La. After one year's service on the "Echo" as Steward, he was transferred to the "Magnolia," which ran from St. Louis to New Orleans. He served on this vessel for one year, when he was transferred to the Missouri River packet "James H. Lucas," where he remained for one year. He then returned to Cincinnati, and was employed in fitting out six packets for the Upper Mississippi trade. He was then employed on the "Itaska," running from St. Louis to St. Paul. He remained on this vessel for one year, when he was employed for a few months on the "Roger Williams," running from Madison to Louisville, on the Ohio River. This ended Mr. Demory's life on the waters, after a service of nearly twelve years. In the year 1859, he came to this county, and rented land for three years. He then purchased eighty acres. He has been engaged in farming and stock raising ever since he came to the county. His farm is well improved, with good buildings, and sixty acres of land under cultivation. Mr. Demory is a florist of considerable notoriety. He has a fine collection of rare and beautiful plants. He also gives considerable attention to horticulture. He was married to Martha E. Scroggins June 24, 1851. This union has never been blessed with any children, but Mr. and Mrs. Demory have had the raising and educating of three children until grown up, and now have two children under their parental care. They are both acceptable members of the Christian Church. Mr. Demory has a good education, considering his advantages. In addition to the common district schools, he has attended one term at Oberlin College, Ohio. He takes an unusual and active interest in the subject of education, and has done much for the cause in this county and elsewhere. He has always been a stanch Republican in sentiment, and has acted and voted with that party since the passage of the Fifteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. He is a man of superior intelligence, is industrious and frugal, well to do in the world, and a moral, upright citizen.

ELI EDWARDS (deceased) was born in North Carolina February 3, 1808, and was a son of Jonathan Edwards, who removed, with his family, to this county in 1817. Jonathan Edwards cut the first tree on the present site of Winchester. They had Indians for neighbors, and the Edwards boys played with the Indian boys. On one occasion, when Mr. Edwards was chopping in the timber, an Indian slipped up under cover of the thick brush, and jumped up behind him, and holloaed "Hoo, hoo," just simply for amusement. He accomplished his object, for it frightened Mr. Edwards nearly out of his wits. The Indians would sometimes ask for dinner, and would always take all the victuals from the table, carrying off what they could not eat. Wild game was abundant. One day, old Mr. Edwards went in search of a deer, and while gone the dogs ran a deer into the yard. Mrs. Edwards ran to their assistance with the ax, and dispatched Mr. deer on short notice. She then prepared a nice dinner for Mr. Edwards, who returned late in the day, tired and hungry, with no game. Our subject, Eli Edwards, like all pioneer boys, had to work very hard in clearing up a farm. When grown, he opened up a farm for himself, which is now occupied by his widow and heirs. He lost one of his oxen, and he made harness of hickory bark for the other ox, and hauled the rails with him to fence his first field. In those days, they went to Richmond, Ind., to get their milling done. He attended school in a log cabin, and sat on a split log seat, and warmed by a ten or twelve foot fire-place. The window consisted of one log removed from the side of the house, with greased paper pasted over the aperture. He was married, January 13, 1831, to Miss Catharine E. Eltzroth, daughter of John Eltzroth, who removed with his family to this county in 1818. Mr. Eltzroth had previously purchased his land and hired a cabin erected. There was no opening to the inside except the crevices between the logs, and they sawed one log out and the mother and children crawled through; but another had to be sawed out before the man could enter. This being done, they built a fire on the dirt floor, in the middle of the house. They lived with no other floor in the house until the following spring. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards had nine children, of whom six are living—Louisa J., Mahala A., Nathan J., Calvin B., Jonathan L. and William W. Mr. Edwards died July 29, 1880, loved and respected by all. Calvin Edwards was a soldier in the late war, in Company H, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, for nearly three years, and participated in the battles of Chickamauga, Franklin, siege of Atlanta, Nashville and others, twenty-three in all.

OBADIAH FIELDS, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Ward Township, this county, November 8, 1833, and is a son of Lansford and Nancy Fields, who emigrated from Tennessee to this county in the year 1830. His early life was spent upon a farm, as also the remainder, except about three years, which time he engaged in the mercantile business. He was married, in 1858, to Miss Mary M. Stick, daughter of Casper Stick, who emigrated from Pennsylvania to this county in 1853. They have seven children—Martha, Henry O., Alice, Florence, Willis, Minnie B. and Webster. Mr. Fields located on his present farm in 1875, and now owns 200 acres of valuable land. There is a mound of pre-historic origin at the west end of his farm, thirty feet in diameter and five feet high.

JOHN FRAZEE, farmer, P. O. Saratoga, was born in Preble County, Ohio, on Washington's birthday, 1821, and is the son of John and Abigail Frazee, the former a native of New Jersey and the latter of Pennsylvania. Mr. Frazee was reared on a farm, and educated in the common schools. He was married, in November, 1845, to Miss Nancy Lasley, by whom he has six children—Margaret A., William H., Hiram C., Richard O., Samuel E. and Sarah B. (deceased). Mr. Frazee owns 100 acres of land, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. They are members of the United Brethren Church at White River Chapel.

NATHAN FIDLER is a farmer and resides in White River Township. He is a native of Ohio, and was born October 15, 1824. His father, John Fidler, was born in Bedford County, Penn., and his mother, Sarah Fidler, was born in Belmont County, Ohio. His great-grandfather, Annanias Peacock, was killed before the Revolution by the explosion of a powder-mill in New Jersey, opposite Philadelphia. Mr. Fidler was raised on a farm, and at the age of eighteen he learned the carpenter trade, which he pursued till 1864. He came to Randolph County in 1851, and in 1864 located on his land, which was an unbroken forest, where he now resides. He was married, in 1847, to Miss Mary A. Walsh. They have had four children, namely, Sarah, Elizabeth, James M. and George W. Mr. Fidler is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and has filled the chair of Master. He is also a member of the Patrons of Husbandry. He owns a fine farm of 120 acres, and devotes his time to agricultural pursuit and stock-raising.

ENOS D. FOUSE is an engineer, and was born in Randolph County November 17, 1838, and is a son of James Fouse. He was reared on a farm and educated in the common schools. He was married, April 7, 1859, to Miss Charity Hickman. Mr. and Mrs. Fouse have had ten children, namely, Isabell, Sultana L., Alvin and Elvin (twins), Sallie A., Flora B., John R., Louie M., Henry H. and James H. Mr. and Mrs. Fouse are members of the Christian Church.

LEVI GREENE (deceased). The subject of this sketch was born in Ohio in October, 1813, and was a son of Jesse and Sarah Green, who came to this county in 1817. He was reared on a farm and educated in a log house. He labored hard and long to assist in preparing the way for the prosperity of future generations. He was married, October 8, 1835, to Miss Elizabeth Bowers, daughter of Jacob Bowers, who came to this county in 1833. They had eleven children, of whom eight are living, viz., Hetty A., Sarah E., Mary M., William R., Henety T., John E., Levi W. and Christian L. Mr. Greene died August 11, 1869. He was a worthy member of the M. E. Church, and was a very benevolent man, always lending his aid to build up churches and schools and all benevolent institutions. When a boy, he had the Indian boys for his playmates.

RUDOLPH GOOD, miller, Macksville, was born in York County, Penn., January 24, 1825, and is a son of John and Elizabeth Good. He was reared on a farm and received a limited common school education. He came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1847, and soon after went to his trade—milling. He was married, in February 1851, to Miss Sarah Moore, by whom he had nine children, six living, viz., John, Elizabeth, Henry, Maria, Charles and Edith M. They came to this county in 1870, since which time he has operated the Macksville Flouring Mill, except about one year. This mill was erected in 1850, by Robert Cox. Mr. Good makes very "good" flour.

DAVID HEASTON (deceased), the son of John and Mary A. Heaston, was born in Virginia February 3, 1792. He was the fourth of a family of seven children, only one of whom now survives, viz., Hannah Maxwell, who resides in Delphi, Carroll Co., Ind. David's parents moved to Montgomery County, Ohio, when he (David) was nine years of age and entered the land now occupied by the National Soldiers' Home, near Dayton. David's father and mother were born in Germany. His father was married three times. His first and second wives were sisters, and were born and raised in Germany. His third wife was a native of Pennsylvania. He came to the United States in very early times, and settled in Rockingham County, Va. He remained here until the death of his first wife, when he returned to Germany, and was subsequently married a second time, and returned to Virginia and remained until the death of his second wife. After his third marriage, he moved to Montgomery County, Ohio, in the year 1801, where he remained until his death, which occurred in 1822, and was buried on the land occupied by the Soldiers' Home. He was the father of twelve children, and was highly educated for one of his time, and taught school for a great many years. The subject of this sketch was raised on a farm near Dayton, and lived with his parents, enduring all of the deprivations and hardships of pioneer life until his marriage. His educational advantages were very much limited, having attended school but fourteen days in his life. Yet he was a fair scholar in literature and an excellent accountant, the result of self-education. He enlisted in the war of 1812, and was engaged against the Indians on the Western frontier; he remained in the army, doing gallant service until the war closed. He was married, about 1817, to Catharine Pressel, daughter of Daniel and Magdaline (Ledy) Pressel. After marriage, he worked in a distillery near Dayton for two years, when he and his wife and infant daughter, Mary Ann, came to this county, arriving December 25, 1819. David bought 160 acres of unimproved land three miles south of Winchester, and subsequently added ninety acres to the purchase; he lived upon this farm until 1832, when he sold out and bought 140 acres immediately adjoining Winchester on the west. This was known as the David Stout farm. There were some slight improvements on this farm when he bought, there being a log cabin and a few acres cleared. He subsequently added to this farm by purchase until it consisted of a section of excellent land. He lived there until his death, which occurred December 18, 1865.

CATHARINE (PRESSEL) HEASTON, his wife, was born in Pennsylvania September 9, 1793. She moved with her parents to Ohio about the same time of John Heaston and family, and settled three miles southwest of Dayton on Bear Creek. She died in this county August 9, 1876. Mr. and Mrs. Heaston were the parents of four children, of whom three are now living, as follows: Mary Ann Wright, who resides in this county; Nathaniel P. Heaston, who resides in Adams County, this State; and Lewis L. Heaston, who resides in Jay County, this State. Their son, David Heaston, died July, 1833. In 1828, David moved to the town of Winchester, and remained for one year, keeping hotel. He and his wife had to struggle against poverty in their early settlement in this county, but through their untiring industry and perseverance accumulated a large amount of property. Mr. Heaston was noted for his kindness of heart and liberality, especially toward the poor and unfortunate. His hand and heart were ever open to supply their wants, and it is said he never turned the hungry away from his door. In addition to their own family, Mr. and Mrs. Heaston raised and educated five persons. He and his sons, Nathaniel and Lewis, took the contract of grubbing and grading the Bee-Line Railroad through this county. His wife was a woman of small stature, but of strong constitution, and was of indispensable service to her husband in their pioneer life. Mr. Heaston was a stanch Democrat of the Jacksonian school, and was ever active in the interest of the party of his choice. Mr. and Mrs. Heaston were honored and exemplary citizens of the county, and none knew them but to love and respect them.

RICHARD SMITH HAGERMAN was born July 19, 1804, at Lamberton, N. J. In 1822, he moved to Phillipsburg, N. J., and to Easton, Penn., in 1845. In 1854, he came to Indiana, locating in Randolph County, on a farm, two and a half miles northeast of Winchester. In 1825, he married Julia Ann Phillips, a daughter of Gen. Phillips, with whom he enjoyed twenty-two years of connubial happiness. By this union they were the parents of ten children, only three of whom now survive, Philip R., William P. and Sarah A. His wife died, and in 1848 he wedded Amanda, daughter of Henry Hill, of Easton, Penn. Eleven children were the fruits of this second union, and six still survive, viz., Charles J., Frank W., Daniel S., Josephine A., James M. and Elmer E. Mr. Hagerman was reared on a farm, and made agricultural pursuits his principal occupation through life. At the age of seventeen years, he united with the Presbyterian Church, at Easton, Penn., but in 1862 united with the Methodist Episcopal denomination, at Kizer's Chapel, near Winchester, Ind. On the 29th of March, 1863, he received license as an exhorter, by Rev. John F. Pierce, and on the 6th of March, 1871, was licensed as a local preacher by Rev. N. H. Phillips, Presiding Elder. He was ordained as Deacon by Bishop E. R. Ames, at Huntington, Ind., on the 16th of April, 1871, and after his ordination preached at Kizer's Chapel, Mount Zion and other places. He was firm, steadfast and earnest in his religious faith, and his labors as a minister were blessed by good results. He possessed great decision of character, and having made up his mind that he was right, he maintained the course dictated by his own conscience. It is related of him, as illustrating his firmness, that he decided to abandon the use of tobacco, after having indulged this practice for years. He was more than sixty years of age when he formed this resolution, and adhered faithfully to his determination until the day of his death. He was an honored and useful member of society, and for more than a quarter of a century was an interested participant in the events that took place within the limits of Randolph County. He died at his home near Winchester, on the 14th of July, 1882, in the seventy-eighth year of his age. He lived the life of a Christian, and died with a firm belief in a blessed immortality. His funeral took place from the Methodist Episcopal Church at Winchester, on Sunday, July 16, 1882, the sermon being preached by Rev. R. D. Spellman, his former pastor and intimate friend.

AMOS HALL.

This most excellent citizen was born in Clinton County, Ohio, September 4, 1839. He is the son of Moses and Sarah Hall, and is the second of a family of ten children, four boys and six girls, six of whom are now living; his mother died in this county December, 1862; his father is now living in the State of Kansas; his parents removed from Ohio in 1854, and settled in Washington Township, Randolph County, on a farm where his father remained until 1871, and his mother until her death. The subject of this sketch remained on his farther's farm until he was twenty-one years of age, sharing the hardships and trials as well as the blessings of most farmer boys: he early learned the lesson, that industry and perseverance are necessary elements of success in life. His education was limited to the common schools of his township; his time, while at school, was employed to the very best advantage, realizing the importance of an education; he succeeded in acquiring a thorough knowledge of the common branches and elements of book-keeping. He enlisted as a soldier August, 1862, in Company H, Eighty-fourth Regiment, under Capt. George Carter. On account of physical inability, he never did active service; he was prostrated with disease very soon after enlisting, and did not recover for two years. He was married to Ruth A. Benson, daughter of Isaac and Martha Benson, of this county, June 1, 1861. Mr. and Mrs. Hall settled on a farm consisting of forty acres, soon after their marriage, near Snow Hill, in this county, and remained here until the year 1869, when he was employed by the Board of County Commissioners as Superintendent of the County Infirmary, a position he has held continuously ever since, with the exception of the year 1878; that he has filled this most important and responsible position with entire satisfaction to the Commissioners and people of the county, his continuance in the office is the best evidence. In this position he has the entire control of a farm of 218 acres, of which 170 are under cultivation, and the constant care of from forty-five to seventy inmates. The greatest number of inmates at this institution at one time was seventy-eight, and the least number twenty-three. All of the inmates who are able, assist to some extent, in the cultivation of the farm, the proceeds of which are used for their maintenance; all proceeds of sales from the farm are turned into the County Treasury. The number of homeless children in this institution are from six to twelve. The best of care is taken of these wards of the county having advantages of both common and Sabbath schools. Mr. and Mrs. Hall, while they provide amply for the welfare of all of the inmates of the infirmary, take a special interest in the homeless children, and to their credit it may be said, that they give them the same opportunities they do their own children. Much more might be said commendatory of Mr. Hall's management of the County Infirmary, but it would extend this sketch beyond its proper limits. Mr. and Mrs. Hall are the parents of nine children, four of whom are living, two boys and two girls, the ruthless hand of death having removed five children, two sons and three daughters. Mrs. Hall is an acceptable and honored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is an invaluable assistant to her husband in the discharge of the duties as Superintendent of the Infirmary. In fact, much of his success is due to her enterprise and good judgment. Mr. Hall has always been a Republican in political preferment, and, although never having asked for any office at the hands of the people, has always worked industriously for the success of the party of his choice. Mr. and Mrs. Hall are widely known throughout the county, and are known only to be most highly respected.

LEWIS L. HEASTON is a native of this county, and was born April 29, 1827, on Sugar Creek, White River Township. His parents were David and Catherine Heaston, who emigrated to this county in 1820. There were four of the children in the Heaston family, of whom three are living, viz., Mary A (now Mrs. Wright, of this township), Nathaniel P., of Adams County, Ind., and our subject. In 1833, the family removed to the David Heaston farm, in Sections 19 and 20, adjoining the corporation of Winchester; here they cleared and improved over 300 acres of land. Mr. Heaston was married, September 19, 1850, to Miss Louisa J. Edwards, also a native of this county, and a daughter of Eli Edwards, an early settler of the county. They have had eleven children, seven living—Mary M., Rosa B., Sarah J., B. Ellen, C. L. V., Eva O. and Lula M. For the most part, Mr. Heaston has engaged in farming, but for ten years he engaged in the milling business. In 1870, he, in company with his brother Nathaniel P., erected the city flouring mills in Winchester—a large brick structure. Mr. Heaston is a member of the Masonic order.

CHRISTIAN HUFFMAN is a farmer, and his post office address is Winchester. He was born in Warren County, Ohio, December 4, 1819, and is a son of Stephen and Catharine Huffman, natives of Virginia. He came to this county with his parents in 1822, and settled in the woods, and was all his life accustomed to hard work. When a small boy, he had to do the milling on horseback. There was a small mill on Salt Creek, but when the waters ran low in that romantic stream, the next nearest mill was fifteen miles away. On one occasion, when the Salt Creek Mill was not running, he had to go to the Smithfield Mill, fifteen miles away. Owing to the crowd, he had to stay two days and two nights, and then had to come away without getting his flour bolted, as bolting was done by hand, and the bolt being three days behind the buhr. He brought his grinding back and bolted it himself at the home mill, where the mill and bolt were both idle. He attended school in a log cabin with clapboard roof, slab seats, and a log cut for a window. He was married February 15, 1850, to Miss Jane Muckey, a native of New York, and daughter of Jacob Muckey. In the Huffman family there were seven children, and now but four are living—Leonidas, born May 3, 1854; Evangeline, born February 20, 1858, and died February 2, 1881; Stephen D., born July, 1860; Ellen A., born March 14, 1864; Mary W., born September 25, 1869.

JOSEPH B. HULL, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Elizabethtown, N. J., October 5, 1825, and is a son of Jehiel and Charlotte (Jones) Hull, also natives of New Jersey. Mr. Hull worked on a brick yard from the time he was eight years of age until after he was twenty-one. He attended the common school during the winter months. He came with his parents to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1832, and in 1834 to Wayne County, Ind. In 1836, they returned to Cincinnati, where they remained until 1839, when they came to Randolph County and settled on the farm now owned by our subject. He was married November 18, 1847, to Miss Lucy E., daughter of Stephen Haynes, of West River Township, this county. They have had eight children, of whom six are living, viz.: Charlotte, Laura R, Ida A., Henry C., Lucy A. and James F. Mr. Hull is engaged in farming and stock-raising, and owns ninety-five acres of valuable land. Mr. and Mrs. Hull are members of the M. E. Church. He owns thirteen shares in the Lynn & Winchester pike.

GEORGE HIATT, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Grayson County, Va., August 12, 1805, and is a son of Jonathan and Rachel Hiatt, natives of North Carolina. He came with his parents to this county in 1818, and settled in the thick woods, where all had to work very hard to obtain the necessaries of life. Mr. Hiatt had Indian boys for his playmates. He was married, March 27, 1828, to Miss Lucinda Nixon, by whom he has nine children, viz.: Eliza, Almira, Mary E., James M., John S., William F., Henry C., Thomas N. and Solon E. Mr. Hiatt is a farmer and stock-raiser, and owns 317 acres of valuable land. Mr. Hiatt is among the oldest residents, and has done much to build up his neighborhood.

ELWOOD HIATT is a farmer, of White River Township, and occupies the old homestead of his father. He was born in Randolph County January 9, 1840, and has always been engaged upon the farm. He is a son of Moses and Lavina (Edwards) Hiatt. His paternal grandfather was Zachariah Hiatt, who moved to Wayne County, Ind., in 1813, and soon afterward to Randolph County, and was among the first settlers. His maternal grandfather was Jonathan Edwards, Sr., who was a native of North Carolina, and an early settler in Randolph County. Elwood was married February 22, 1866, to Miss Elizabeth A. Ludy, daughter of Henry Ludy, and a native of Randolph County. Mrs. Hiatt was born May 27, 1842. Mr. and Mrs. Hiatt were educated in the common schools. They have eight children, viz.: Charles L., born December 16, 1866; Emma D., August 7, 1868; Mary E., September 21, 1870; Anna C., September 15, 1872; Minnie M., November 23, 1874; George W., August 18, 1876; Cora M., September 24, 1878; and Garfield, January 13, 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Hiatt with their little family group, now occupy their pleasant country home of 194 acres of fertile lands in the enjoyment of all there is in life. They are widely known, and are highly esteemed by all who know them. Mr. Hiatt's father died July 1, 1856, aged fifty-two years and twenty-two days.

Mr. Hiatt's mother died February 3, 1868, aged fifty-four years and twenty-two days.

AMOS HIATT, deceased. The subject of this sketch was born in Guilford County, N. C., April 20, 1811, and came to this county as early as 1832. He was a blacksmith and farmer. Was married twice, the first time to Miss Hannah Bales, by whom he had five children; of these three are living, viz.: Louisa, Evaline and Samuel. His second wife was Miss Martha Roberts, whom he married in 1847. Her father, James Roberts, now resides with her, at the age of seventy-eight years. Mr. Hiatt had seven children by the second wife, six of whom are living—Hannah C., Calvin, Charles, Allen, Almeda and Della. Mr. Hiatt died in November, 1873. Hannah C. is married to William T. Reszell, who is now superintending the farm. They have one child—Olive Myrtle.

WILLIAM HAWKINS, deceased. This worthy old settler, who has gone to rest, was born in Union County, S. C., January 11, 1809. He moved to North Carolina in 1824, and to Richmond, Ind., in 1830. He was married in Wayne County, in 1833, to Miss Agatha Teagle, who was born in Augusta County in 1810, and came with her parents to Wayne County in 1820. They had ten children, of whom eight are living, viz.: Elizabeth, Rachel, Martha, James W., Columbus, Etta, Matilda and William L. Mr. Hawkins moved with his family to this county in 1842, where he engaged in farming, in which he was eminently successful until his death. He owned over 700 acres of land, besides much personal property. He died May 19, 1880, loved by all. He was a faithful Christian, and worthy member of the M. E. Church for forty-seven years, and died in full triumph of living faith. William L. Hawkins, youngest son of the above, now owns the old homestead, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. He was born in the house in which he still lives, July 29, 1854, and is an enterprising young bachelor.

LOUIS HOBBICK, farmer, P. O. Winchester. Mr. Hobbick is a native of this county, and was born May 13, 1840, in White River Township. His parents were Christian and Christina Hobbick, natives of Germany. He was brought up a farmer boy, and educated in the common schools, and the Winchester High School. He enlisted in the late war, but was pronounced physically unable by the examining physician, and was refused. He was married, February, 1863, to Miss Mary Hounour, daughter of Matthias Hounour. She was born also in this county. They have five children—Charley, Emma, Bruce, William and Catharine. Mr. H. owns 114 acres of valuable land, and is engaged in farming on Section 25, White River Township.

WILLIAM Y. HURST, farmer, P. O. Unionsport, is a native of East Tennessee, and was born September 24, 1817. His parents were James and Elizabeth Hurst; he was reared on a farm, and educated in a log cabin, which had a puncheon floor and clapboard ceiling. His parents removed to Ohio when he was two months old, and in 1819 came to Wayne County, Ind. Mr. Hurst came to White River Township and settled on Section 5, where he still resides; he did a great deal of hard work. On the 29th of April, 1840, he married Miss Mary Love, by whom he had thirteen children; of these but five are living, viz., Jasper N., Nancy J., Mary E., Elizabeth A. and Harriet L. Their son, Henry H., came to a sad death on the 11th of December, 1880, while hunting; he was standing on a log, and his gun slipped, striking the lock on the log, when it was discharged into his leg and abdomen, killing him almost instantly. He was a soldier in the late war, where he fought in many of the hardest and most bloody battles. While there, by his bravery, won the confidence of all his comrades. Jasper N. was also a soldier in the late war. Henry also accompanied Gen. Sherman on his noted "march to the sea." Mr. Hurst's wife, Mary, died on the 9th day of June, 1882.

CORNELIUS A. HUNT, farmer, P. O. Winchester, son of Johathan W. and Sarah Hunt, was born in Nettle Creek Township, this county, March 16, 1844. His parents came from Ohio to Randolph County, about the year 1826. Mr. Hunt spent his boyhood days on a farm, and received his education in the pioneer log cabin schoolhouse, while sitting on a slab seat. He served as a soldier in the late war in Company C, Fifty-Seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Stone River, Perryville and others, and was discharged on account of disability. October 3, 1867, he married Miss Amanda, daughter of Daniel E. Johnson. They have four children—Alda O., Johathan C., Lela M. and Frances E. Mr. Hunt is engaged in farming and stock-raising.

JOB HINSHAW, farmer, P. O. Winchester, is a native of North Carolina, and was born May 29, 1828. His parents were Thomas and Hannah Hinshaw; he was brought up on a farm, and received a common-school education in this county, his father having removed here in 1829; he was married, in 1849, to Miss Serena Cox, by whom he has had nine children; of these but six are living, viz., Elwood, Rosanna, Cyrus, William, Dinah J. and Charles F. Mr. Hinshaw resides on Section 25, and owns 200 acres of valuable land. They are members of the Society of Friends, as were also his parents.

JESSE HINSHAW, farmer, P. O. Winchester, is a native of Randolph County, and was born May 11, 1836. His parents were Thomas and Hannah Hinshaw natives of North Carolina. Mr. Hinshaw used to go to mill on horseback when but nine years old; at one time his grist fell off, and had it not been for the timely arrival of a friend, he might have been compelled to go home without his meal. He was married, November 6, 1858, to Miss Anna Cox, a native of this county, and daughter of John Cox, Sr., of White River Township. They have had three children—Enoch (deceased), Riley C. and George W. Mr. Hinshaw is engaged in farming, and owns fifty-two and one-half acres of land. Mr. and Mrs. Hinshaw are members of the Society of Friends.

EDMUND HINSHAW is a resident of White River Township, and his post office address is Winchester. He was born in North Carolina December 3, 1815; he is a son of Benjamin and Annis Hinshaw, who were also natives of North Carolina. Edmund came with his parents to Wayne County in 1832, and to Randolph in 1841. The family settled in the "green," and vigorously plied the ax, before which the forest succumbed and fields appeared. The subject of this sketch was first married September 25, 1834, to Miss Mary Thompson. Of this union seven children were born; all have passed away except Jesse Hinshaw and Phebe A. Huston, the wife of James E. Huston. William and Abner were soldiers in the war of 1861–64. William was killed in the battle of Richmond, Ky., August 30, 1862, and Abner died in a hospital at St Louis, January 7, 1863. Mrs. Hinshaw died January 19, 1849, and Mr. Hinshaw again married July 22, 1849. This time he chose Miss Irena Hiatt for a life companion. Of this union there were seven children, of whom five are now living, viz., Seth, Mary, Edmund, Ann Eliza and Benjamin E. Mr. Hinshaw was again bereaved by the death of his companion Februrary 7, 1871. Being averse to loneliness, he again sought a helpmate, and on the 6th day of February, 1873, he was married to Miss Rachel Diggs. They mourn the loss of an only child. Mr. and Mrs. Hinshaw reside at their very pleasant home about two miles north of Winchester. Their friends always find a cordial welcome at their open door. Mrs. Hinshaw is an estimable lady, and Mr. Hinshaw true to himself and his word; he has always been upon the farm and still enjoys it for his home.

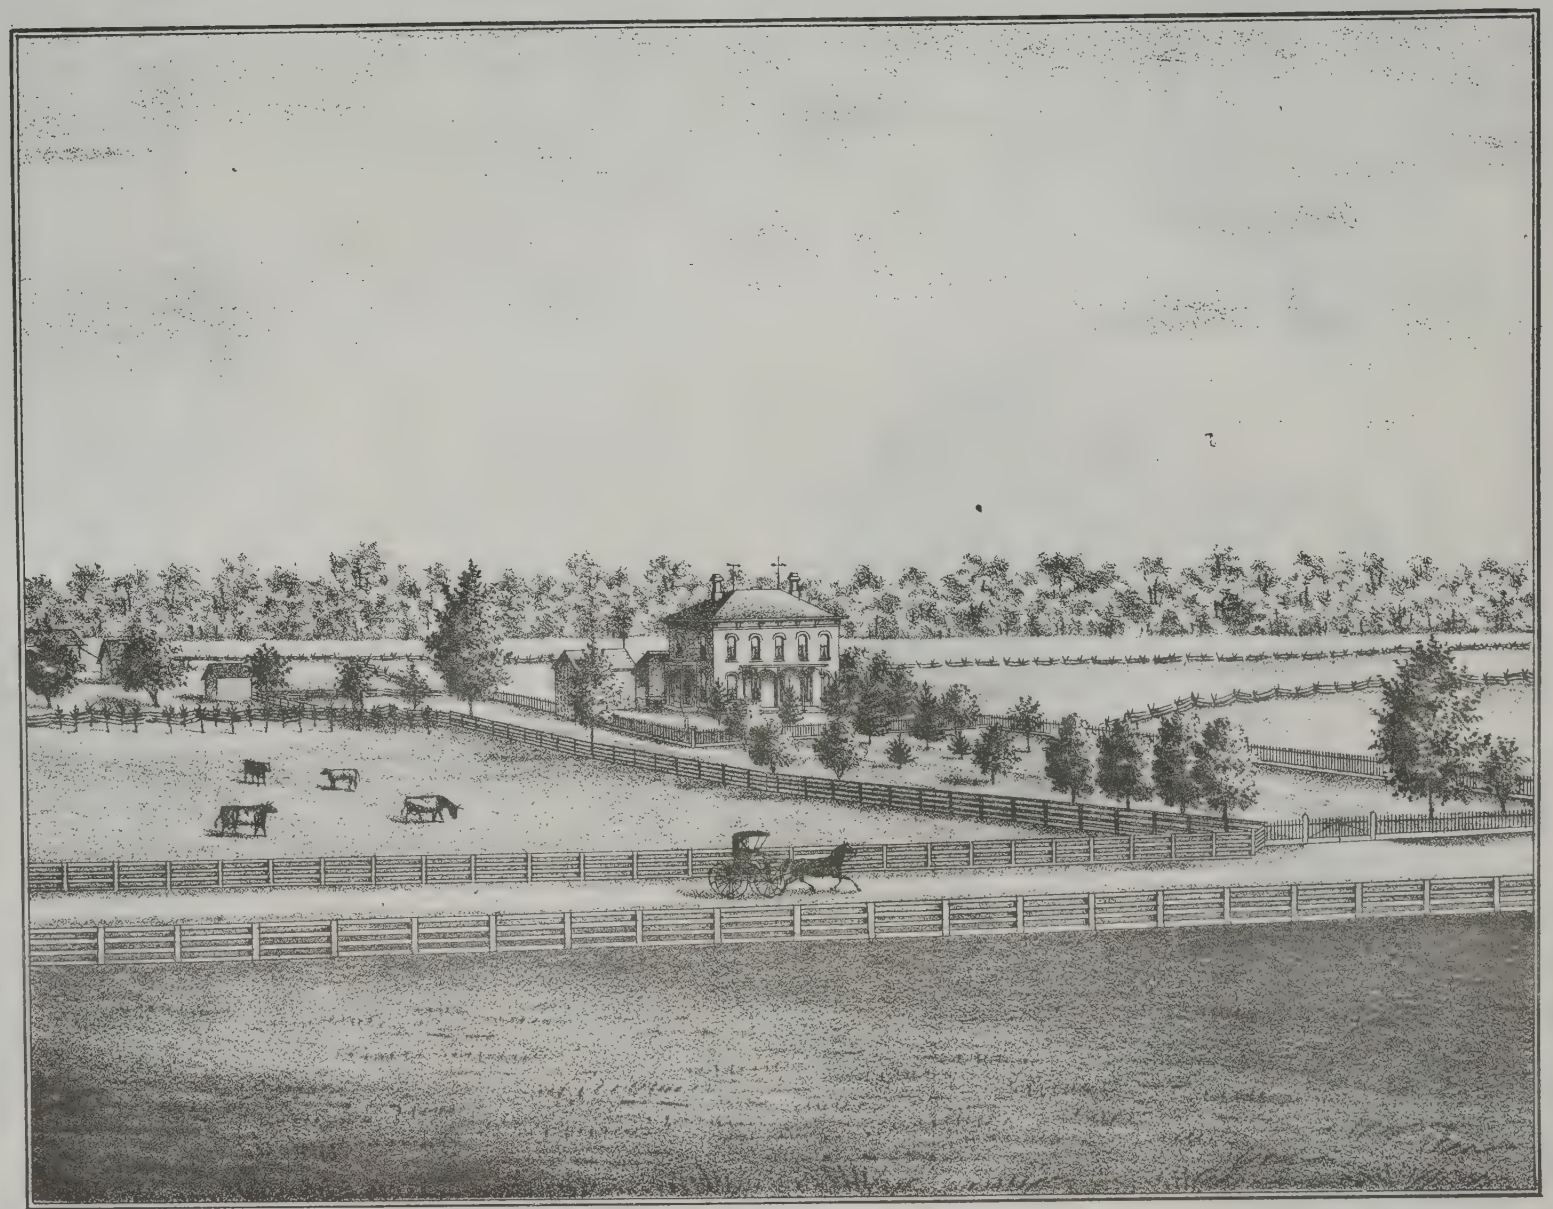
ELI HAWORTH, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Winchester, this county, June 3, 1836, and is a son of David and Ann (Cox) Haworth. David Haworth came to this county in 1818; he moved to his farm on Section 21, White River Township, when our subject was a boy, where he was reared and educated, and still resides on the old home place; he was married in 1856, to Miss Lydia E. Hickman, by whom he had three children; of these two are living—Newton and John M. Mrs. Haworth died March 24, 1866, and he again married, March 23, 1867, this time to Mrs. Nancy L. Summers, whose maiden name was Gray. They have had four children, two living—Luella J. and Carl L. Mr. Haworth is also engaged in raising stock as well as farming, and owns 130 acres of land. They are members of the Society of Friends. Mr Haworth served near threee years in the late war in Company H, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Chickamauga, Dalton, Resaca, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Nashville, Franklin and others. His son, Carl L., died July 30, 1881.

ROBERT IRVIN (deceased) was born in Franklin County, Va., August 29, 1805, and was a son of John Irvin. He was raised to hard labor on a farm, and received but "three months' schooling." He was married three times and was the father of seventeen children, of whom fourteen are living, viz., Evaline, John, Margaret, Louisa, Rose Ann, Caroline, Robert R. (by first wife); Gertrude, George, Charles, Lamartine, Lanis, Willard and Jefferson (by second wife). His first wife was Miss Mary Banty; the second was Miss Hannah D. Bishop, and the third, his widow, was Mrs. Hannah E. Baker. She had one child by her first husband, viz., John W. Baker. Mr. Irvin died October 13, 1875. He was a worthy member of the M. E. Church, and was beloved by all. He held the office of Sheriff of Randolph County from 1840 until 1844, and also was Tax Collector for several years. He was known as a charitable, benevolent man.

JOHN W. JARNAGIN is a farmer and resides on his farm half a mile south of Winchester. He was born in Highland County, Ohio, on the 24th day of March, 1825, and is a son of Eli and Mary (Franklin) Jarnagin; the former was a native of east Tennessee, and the latter of Adams County, Ohio. Mr. John W. was reared on a farm; he came with his parents to Randolph County in 1837, and with them settled in the woods near Fairview. There they began battling with the forest and clearing up a farm. Besides clearing up their own lands, they took contracts of clearing for other persons. Wages in those days were about $10 per month for a good workman, not in cash, but in store goods, which were sold on large profits. Young Mr. Jarnagin had no advantages of education till after he was twelve years old, when he came to Winchester and entered the Randolph County Seminary, where he acquired a good business education. He began life as a common school teacher, but in 1856 he was elected by the Republican party as County Treasurer, and re-elected in 1858, holding the office two years each term. He retired with his last term to private life, and settled on a good farm of 100 acres near Winchester. He is a prosperous and enterprising farmer, and abreast with the times on improvements. He was married, in 1856, to Miss Miriam Horn, a native of North Carolina, and daughter of Henry Horn, who came to this county in 1832. Mr. and Mrs. Horn are members of the M. E. Church. There were eight brothers in the Jarnagin family; four were in war of 1861–65, and all returned at the close of the war.

JOSHUA M. JOHNSON, farmer and blacksmith, P. O. Cerro Gordo, son of John and Phœbe Johnson, is a native of Washington Township, this county, and was born September 13, 1831. He was raised to hard work on his father's woodland farm, and his education was received in the common schools. He was married in 1855, to Miss Amanda, daughter of Ithamer Pegg, of White River Township. The result of this union was thirteen children, of whom twelve are living—Alwilda J., John I., Martha A., Mary E., Phœbe S., Rachel E., Ida M., Jonathan G., Daniel R. J., Lillie E., Leotis and Lualta. The last are twins. Mr. Johnson owns 240 acres of valuable land, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. He is also a blacksmith by trade, at which he also works in his little town of Buena Vista.

HIRAM B. JONES, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in White River Township, this county, May 5, 1838. He received a common school education, and has spent his life, thus far, on a farm. He was married, August 25, 1860, to Mary E. Jackson, daughter of Elijah Jackson. She was born in this county July 31, 1838. They have had four children—Rosa, Lillie E., Bertie A. and a deceased daughter, Ora E. Mr. Jones owns forty acres of valuable land, and is engaged in farming. He was the first to inaugurate the erection of the Dunkirk pike, in which he holds $250 worth of stock, and is the present Secretary of the company. Endsley Jones, father of the above, was born in North Carolina June 4, 1810; he came to Wayne County, Ind, in 1816, and to this county in 1831. September, 1837, he married Lydia Wright, by whom he had four children—Hiram B., Alexander (died in the late war), Daniel and Angeline.



"FOREST HOME"

RES. OF NATHAN T. BUTTS, WHITE RIVER TP. RANDOLPH CO. IND.

RESIDENCE OF THE LATE WM. MONKS, WHITE RIVER TP. RANDOLPH CO. IND.

ELIAS KIZER.

Elias Kizer was born in Virginia, in the year 1800, and grew to manhood in his native State. In 1821, he came to Randolph County, Ind., locating near the present site of Stone Station. In 1831, he removed to the farm north or Winchester, which was thenceforth his home until he died. In 1824, he married Miss Margery Ward, an aunt of Thomas Ward, Esq., of Winchester, this union being blessed by three sons—Thomas W., Henry and Caleb. The latter died in infancy. Thomas and Henry are both prominent citizens of Winchester.

Mr. Kizer was one of the early pioneers of this county, and for more than forty-five years was prominently identified with its development and improvement. He contributed cheerfully to the advancement of all enterprises inaugurated for the promotion of the public welfare, and lent his own personal assistance where active effort was required. Some time prior to the year 1830, he took the contract for carrying the United States mail between Winchester and Fort Wayne. Sometimes he would make the trip himself, but more often the mail was carried by some one employed by him for that purpose. When he first took the contract there was no post office on the route, except that at Fort Wayne. Deerfield Post Office was established, however, a few years later. He rode through a dense wilderness, and was compelled to sleep in the woods at night. At times he would take with him woolen stockings, which his wife had knit, and sell them at Fort Wayne for groceries or money. He watched the county in its growth from a pioneer settlement to a populous and wealthy community, and was an interested participant in its prosperity. He was an enterprising man, and always the friend of progress. He built the first steam mill in Randolph County, and, it is believed, the engine in his mill was the only one between Winchester and Newport at that time. To give his attention more fully to this enterprise, Mr. Kizer removed to Winchester, at the same time keeping hotel, and winning a great deal of popular favor as a landlord. Shortly afterward, however, he returned to his farm.

At various times in his life, he was called to fill local offices, serving as County Commissioner for several years, and at another time as Township Trustee. He was the candidate of his party for State Senator, but was defeated, although he ran a gallant race, and made a persistent canvass. In politics, he was a "Jackson Democrat," but subsequently embraced the principles of the Whig party, and acted with them until the organization of the Republican party, with which he identified himself. He was never an aspirant for office, although an active politician. He lived a useful life, marked by industry and energy. He was a thorough business man, and accumulated a comfortable estate, owning at the time of his death, 450 acres of valuable land. He died in 1867, his wife surviving him until 1869. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and their lives were consistent with the faith they professed. Mr. Kizer was a Class-Leader for a number of years, and was active in all the work of the church. In all his dealings with his fellow-men he was upright and honorable, and won universal respect and confidence. He was valued as a substantial and public-spirited citizen, and loved as a friend and neighbor.

THOMAS W. KIZER.

Thomas W. Kizer was born in Randolph County, Ind., November 24, 1824. He is the eldest son of Elias Kizer, who resided east of Stone Station, in Ward Township, and was a prominent citizen of this county in its pioneer period and later history. In 1831, the family removed to the farm north of Winchester, now owned by the subject of this sketch. Here the latter passed the days of his boyhood and youth, attending the school in the winter, and working on the farm during the remainder of the year. When a young man, he became a clerk in the store of Jesse Way, at Winchester, and at a later date embarked in the retail grocery trade for himself. Two years later he engaged in agricultural pursuits, which he continued for three years, resuming the grocery business at the end of that time. Subsequently he became a farmer and grain dealer, following this enterprise until 1878. He is a competent business man, and by a life of energy and activity has acquired a comfortable fortune.

At various times in his life, Mr. Kizer has been called to occupy public positions of honor and trust. Toward the close of President Fillmore's administration, he was appointed Postmaster at Winchester, but was displaced by Pierce, the successor of Fillmore, to make room for a Democratic aspirant. In 1860, he was elected Trustee of White River Township, and for a period of ten years occupied this position by repeated re-elections. He was especially active in his efforts in the behalf of the schools, and accomplished a great deal for their advancement and improvement. Among the schoolhouses which he was instrumental in erecting during his administration of this office, was the handsome public school building at Winchester, which stands an enduring memorial of his energy and efficiency as a public officer. He retired from this office with the commendation and good will of all classes, and was afterward elected School Director for the town of Winchester, serving two years in this capacity, and three years as a member of the School Board. Thus, for a period of fifteen years, he was continuously identified with the public schools of this town. He has always been public-spirited and enterprising, and has been an active and leading spirit in many of the measures inaugurated for the welfare and improvement of the county. In business he is prompt, energetic and honorable, and has won many friends, among whom he is highly esteemed. He was one of the first members initiated into Winchester Lodge, No. 121, I. O. O. F., and has been for years a prominent Odd Fellow. He represented Winchester Lodge several times in the annual councils of the Grand Lodge of Indiana, and has visited the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the United States at three different times.

Although not himself a church member, he has contributed liberally to the support of churches in the community, while his private and public life has been moral and upright. He has been married—first, to Miss Susannah Way, daughter of Jesse Way, Esq., on the 4th of January, 1846. Ten children came to bless this union, six of whom are now living. His wife died January 15, 1874, and on the 4th of January, 1876, he wedded Miss Ann Rebecca Weaver. Within five years, however, he was again called to mourn the death of a devoted and loving wife. She fell a victim of consumption, wasting slowly away under its dreadful touch, but struggling bravely against its insidious approach. She died at Columbus, Ga., on the 12th of January, 1881, having gone thither in the hope of being restored to health. She was buried at Winchester, amid the sorrows of all who had known her in life, and among whom she was a general favorite. On the 22d of December, 1881, he was united in marriage, at Lawrence, Kan., with Mrs. Alice M. Allen, his present companion.

WILLIAM D. KIZER.

William D., son of Thomas W. Kizer, was born March 7, 1847, at the old Kizer homestead, near Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind. During his boyhood, he was engaged in performing the varied duties of farm life, acquiring in the meantime a good education at the public schools of Winchester, finishing with a course in the Seminary at this place, under the instructions of Prof. Cooper. In 1868, he went to Missouri, and from that date until 1871, was engaged in the sale of fruit trees in that State. In the spring of 1871, he returned to Winchester, and accepted the position of Deputy Auditor under W. E. Murray. He served in this capacity three years and a half, and in the spring of 1874, was nominated by the Republicans of this county to succeed Mr. Murray as Auditor. He received the full vote of the party in October of the same year, which means, of course, a triumphant election. He took charge of the office in the same month (October, 1874), and served faithfully for a period of four years. It was during his incumbency that the present court house was erected, and he was the first occupant of the Auditor's office in the new building. The duties of this office, never light, were largely increased by the labor of removing the old documents and records from their former resting place to the new room, and arranging and systematizing them for future reference. His period of service in this office was one of continued and laborious work, and by the faithfulness and assiduity with which he devoted himself to it, he won the approbation of all who were instrumental in placing him there. After retiring from this position, he was appointed Assistant Attorney General, and is now acting in that capacity, collecting fees due the State from various sources. He is recognized as a competent business man, his experience and associations having rendered him familiar with all the varied forms of business usages, while his thorough knowledge of the duties of county officers renders his counsel invaluable to all who consult him. In private life, he is esteemed by all who know him, for his integrity and honor. But he has grown up in this community, and no words from the stranger's pen can add to the high regard in which he is universally held. He was married on October 24, 1872, to Miss Louisa C. Dana, daughter of Dr. Marcus Dana, of Fostoria, Ohio. His wife is an excellent lady, and a general favorite in the social circle. Mr. Kizer united with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in 1871, passing the degrees of the subordinate lodge, and entering the Encampment in the same year. In the meantime he has served as Representative in both the Grand Lodge and the Grand Encampment of Indiana. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, of which he is an enthusiastic and valued member.

PETER KABEL is a farmer, and resides near the village of Unionsport. He is a son of Philip Kabel, of this county. Peter was born in the city of Richmond, Wayne Co., Ind., October 18, 1837. In his youth he was employed in his father's carding mills. In 1869, he was married to Miss Louisa Keener. They have had six children—Mary C., Emma B. (deceased), William Monroe, Elizabeth C., John A. and Cora M. Mr. and Mrs, Kabel are members of the Lutheran Church.

PHILIP KABEL, farmer, P. O. Unionsport, was born in Germany January 12, 1810. He came to America in 1832 when a young man. When he landed in Portland, Me., he had about $10 in money. He soon went to Leister, Worcester Co., Mass., where he worked at carding wool for some time. He came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1834, where he married Miss Mary Goetz, and returned to Cincinnati, Ohio, but in nine months returned to Richmond, Ind. In 1838, he rented a carding machine near Hagerstown, and ran it until 1840, when he came to this county and purchased the Unionsport Carding Machine and Saw-Mill. He followed the business there, and at other points until 1868. He erected a carding mill on his own land in 1846. Mr. and Mrs. Kabel have had ten children, of whom six are living—Peter, Adam, Frederick, Nicholas, John and Mary (now Mrs. Jasper Hurst). When Mr. and Mrs. Kabel began life he had nothing; but by hard work they have been prospered.

NICHOLAS KABEL, teacher, Winchester. This prominent teacher is a native of Randolph County, and was born May 1, 1857. He is a son of Philip and Mary Kabel, of White River Township. He spent his boyhood always on his father's farm, after which he attended the high school of Winchester, this county, and Coshocton, Ohio. He began teaching in 1876, and by energy and close application has won the confidence of the people. He adopts the latest and most approved normal methods as far as can be done in an ungraded school. His school is orderly, and his work systematic.

JOSEPH KEYS, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Surry County, N. C., April 3, 1830, and is a son of Benjamin P. Keys, who came to this county in 1835. The father taught school that winter in the Jericho (Friends') Church, and did not locate on his land until the spring of 1838, in the meantime living on rented land. The first winter they had to go to Fountain City to get corn, a distance of eighteen miles. In the spring of 1837, Mr. Benjamin Keys bought five hogs, marked their ears and turned them out. They wandered off and became wild, so wild that by the time snow fell the next winter they could not be driven. He employed two expert hunters, who took their dogs and went to the hogs' bed early in the morning, and as soon as the dogs would begin to bay the hogs they would turn to fight. In this way they succeeded in shooting all of them. Their sled broke down, and they fastened three of the hogs together by hickory withes, and dragged them by one horse, and the other two by the other horse. This took them all day to get home, a distance of six miles. Of course, the hogs were frozen stiff when they arrived home, and it took them until midnight to get them cleaned. Mr. Keys, our subject, attended school in a cabin with puncheon seats and floor. The window was but one light high, ten or twelve feet long. The desk consisted of a board supported on pins in the wall. The first land the Keyses cleared on the home place was three acres. They plowed it by running five times in one place with a bull tongue plow. These furrows were about three and a half feet apart. The corn was planted in them, and after it came up they broke out the middles with the bull tongue by going five times in a row. Mr. Keys was married, in August, 1853, to Miss Betsey V. Coats, a native of this county, and daughter of Thomas W. Coats, who came to this county about the year 1826. They have had eight children, seven living—Eli W., Lindo, Martin, Elva J., Ann E., John L. and Elwood. Mr. Keys is engaged in farming and stock-raising, and owns 498 acres of land. They are members of the Society of Friends.

JOHN KEYS, mechanic and farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Surry County, N. C., December 27, 1827, and is a son of Benjamin P. and Elizabeth (Bond) Keys. Our subject's great-grandfather, Joseph Keys, who was abandoned by his parent or guardian when only an infant, and left on the door step of an old gentleman (name not known), who took the babe, treated it as one of his own. When found, it had a string about its neck, to which were attached several small keys, and as the old gentleman knew not the name of the child, he called it Joseph Keys, for the keys it carried when found. Joseph Keys grew up and married Rebecca Mullen. They had a large family, from whom the numerous families by that name have sprung. The original Joseph Keys removed from his door step cradle in Pennsylvania to North Carolina in an early day, and resided there during the Revolutionary war. One of his sons was named for himself, Joseph, who had a son, Benjamin P. The latter was the father of our subject, John Keys. The keys family have been life-long Friend Quakers, as also were the Bonds. His grandfather, John Bond, was a minister in the Friends' Church for over sixty years, and died at the age of ninety-two years in Henry County, Ind. The Keys family came to this county in 1835, and settled in White River Township. Mr. Keys was married, January 5, 1854, to Miss Lydia Hiatt, by whom he had seven children; of these, five are living—Charlotte, Simeon, Rosaline and Mary, and Mary A. Mrs. Keys died July 27, 1870, loved by all. His brother, Daniel Keys, was born in North Carolina May 28, 188–, and is the youngest of his father's family. He is a brick-maker by trade, but is now assisting his brother John at the carpenter trade. He was married, October 7, 1854, to Miss Susannah Coffin, a native of this county and daughter of Stephen Coffin. They had six children, of whom three are living—Washington, Emma E. and Coffin. Two of the deceased, Levi J. and Mary J. (Cox) were married and left families.

WILLIAM KEM, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Botetourt County, W. Va., January 11, 1828, and is a son of Thomas Kem, also a native of West Virginia. He was brought up on a farm, educated in log cabin, and sat on a slab bench ten feet in length. Many were the pranks this mischievous boy would play while lying behind that long bench where he had been placed by the teacher for bad conduct. Mr. Kem came with his parents to Wayne County, Ind., in 1833. He was married in 1848, to Miss Lydia Davis, by whom he has had seven children, to wit: Nancy Jane, Malinda Ellen, William Thomas, Ira Lewis, Sherman Turnis, Josephine and Benjamin Franklin. He is engaged in farming and stock-raising, and owns 120 acres of valuable land. Mr. and Mrs. Kem are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

DAVID LASLEY.

David Lasley, a pioneer of Randolph County, was born in Pennsylvania April 1, 1800. He is the son of Peter and Christina (Carns) Lasley, and is the oldest of a family of eleven children, of whom four are now living. His parents were both born in Maryland, and settled in Pennsylvania after marriage. They moved to Montgomery County, Ohio, in 1814, and to Randolph County in 1819, and purchased the farm where David now lives. They remained on this farm until their deaths. His father died at the age of eighty-two and his mother eighty-three. David was nineteen years old when he came to this county. He received a limited education from the district schools of this county and Montgomery County, Ohio. He lived with his parents until he was twenty-one years old, engaged in clearing a farm from the unbroken forests, and other toil common to pioneer life. He was remarkable for his industry and power of endurance at physical labor. He usually did the work of two men. After he was twenty-one he hired out as a common day laborer for about five years, receiving from $7.50 to $10 a month. In 1823, he cleared the timber from the public square of the town of Winchester, there not being a stick amiss. He was married to Hannah Parker (who still survives), daughter of Reuben and Elizabeth (Walker) Parker, in the fall of 1827. His wife was born near Cleveland, Ohio, in 1806. The first season after this union, he bought sixty acres of the farm now owned by the county and used as the infirmary, and lived on it for one year. He sold out and bought eighty acres, in the woods, of the farm where he now lives. He went to work to clear up a homestead, and through his efforts he developed a farm of 200 acres of well-improved land, which is in a high state of cultivation. Mr. and Mrs. Lasley are the parents of thirteen children, eleven of whom are now living and comfortably situated. Eight of them reside in this county, one in Missouri, and two in Ohio. His son Amos lives on the old homestead and takes care of his parents. His son Daniel has served as County Superintendent of Public Schools for six years. Mr. Lasley has owned a section of land in this county, but has deeded it all away to his children, giving each of them a comfortable home. He has always been a Republican, and has voted and acted with that party ever since its organization. He has been a very hard-working and frugal man all his life, but he has been so afflicted with chronic rheumatism for ten years that he cannot go about without assistance; otherwise he has very good health. His wife is afflicted with partial deafness and blindness. Mr. Lasley through his frugality has accumulated a large amount of property. He has always been an honest and worthy citizen, and although he came to the county when it was an almost unbroken wilderness, he has lived to see it blossom and flourish.

DANIEL LASLEY, attorney at law and abstracter of land titles, Winchester, Ind., was born in Randolph County May 17, 1849. His father, David Lasley, was a native of Red Stone, Penn., his mother, Hannah (Parker) Lasley, of New York. David Lasley came to Troy, Ohio, in 1804, and removed to Randolph County, Ind., in 1819, and settled in Winchester. The early life of Daniel Lasley was spent in the ordinary routine labor of farm life, during which time he enjoyed such facilities for gaining an education as were afforded by the common schools of the day, in addition to which he spent three years under the instruction of that veteran teacher, Prof. James Ferris, at that time Superintendent of Winchester Public Schools. Mr. Lasley's studies embraced all usually enumerated in the curriculum of a scientific college course. He has taught ten years, beginning when only seventeen years of age. In 1875, he was elected Superintendent of the Public Schools of Randolph County, the responsible duties of which office he has faithfully discharged with much credit to his executive ability, having given excellent satisfaction, as evinced by his being regularly re-elected at the expiration of each term since.

During the last six years, he has prepared a complete abstract of the titles to all the real estate of Randolph County, a work of great merit and value, requiring much patient labor. In business, he has been fairly successful, enjoying a beautiful home and general prosperity.

He married Miss Edith Thompson, daughter of Dr. Valentine Thompson, of Miami County, Ind., July 7, 1874, a lady of superior ability and accomplishments. They have one son, a promising child. Mr. and Mrs. Lasley are both members of the Christian Church, and active workers in that denomination, though uniformly courteous and liberal toward all opinions.

While not a politician in the ordinary acceptation of the word, Mr. Lasley has always been a thorough Republican, and with his excellent qualifications gives promise for much wider field of usefulness in the future.

PETER LASLEY.

Peter Lasley, a farmer, and brother of David Lasley, was born near Dayton, Ohio, October 12, 1817. He is the son of Peter and Christina Lasley, and is the tenth of a family of eleven children, nine males and two females. Of these eleven children, the following are now living: David, Eli, Moses, and the subject of this sketch. All live in this county with the exception of Eli, who lives in Macon County, Ill.

Peter has been a farmer all his life. He lived with his parents until he was twenty years of age, when he hired out as a common day laborer, clearing land, cutting and splitting rails, etc., receiving as wages about 50 cents a day. His education is very meager, having comparatively no opportunities of attending schools. The brief period that he did attend school was in the old pioneer log house with hewed benches, slabs for desks, and a log cut out for a window, and covered with greased paper in the winter season. A knowledge of reading and writing was the extent of his education obtained in the schools. He has since obtained sufficient education to transact all of his business. He was married to Rebecca Johnson (whose biography is herewith given) December 4, 1839. After marriage, Mr. Lasley purchased the farm where he now resides. It consisted of eighty acres, with no improvements; he now has sixty-five acres under a good state of cultivation, with good and convenient farm buildings.

Mr. and Mrs. Lasley are parents of thirteen children, of whom ten are living. Six of their children are married, and all reside in this county with the exception of one, who resides in Muncie, Delaware County. The names of their children are as follows: William H., Thomas J., Amanda C., Leander C., Mary E., Martha J., Charles D., Belinda C., Nancy R., Anderson J., John M., James L. and Elisha E. Two of their sons enlisted and lost their lives in the army. William H. enlisted January, 1862, in the Fifty-seventh Regiment, Company E, Indiana Infantry, and served for about five months. He was present at and took an active part in the battle of Pittsburg Landing; he was soon after taken sick and died on the field; his sickness was caused from exhaustion, on account of forced marches and exposure to inclement weather. Leander enlisted March 7, 1864, in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Company H, Indiana Infantry, and remained a faithful and brave soldier until his death; he took an active part in the following battles: Dalton, Ga., Resaca, Altoona Mountain, Chattahoochie River, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta, Columbia, Franklin and Nashville. He was then transferred with his regiment to the Army of the Potomac; he received his death wound at Newberne, N. C., being shot through the knee; he survived for ten days, and then died from the effects of the wound and amputation of his limb. Thus it is seen that Mr. Lasley gave two precious lives to save his country, an inestimable sacrifice.

Mr. and Mrs. Lasley have been honored members of the United Brethren Church at Spar Creek Chapel for about fifteen years. In political preferment, Mr. Lasley is a Democrat. He is an industrious, honest and frugal citizen.

Rebecca (Johnson) Lasley, wife of Peter Lasley, was born in Fayette County, W. Va., April 16, 1820. She is the daughter of Henry and Agnes (Humphries) Johnson, and is the seventh of a family of fourteen children; her parents were natives of Virginia; her grandfather, Zachariah Johnson, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and died in 1840.

Her parents came to this county December 31, 1829, when her father entered eighty acres of land; her mother died in 1839, and her father in April, 1856. Rebecca was raised on a farm, doing the work common to the daughters of pioneers. Her education was almost wholly neglected, not having the opportunity of attending school. She was married to Peter Lasley, as stated in his sketch; her grandparents came to this county in the year 1830, and remained until their deaths, which was in the spring of 1840. There was not ten days between the events of their deaths.

Mrs. Lasley has been a faithful wife, and has been of great assistance to her husband in bearing the burdens of life. She is an affectionate mother, and an honored member of society.

JACOB LASLEY, son of David and Hannah (Parker) Lasley, was born in Randolph County, Ind., March 19, 1830. He is the third of a family of thirteen children, of whom eleven are now living; his father was born in Pennsylvania April 1, 1800, and his mother was born in New York in the year 1806; his father settled in this county in the year 1818; his parents, soon after the marriage, settled on the farm now occupied by the County Infirmary, where he remained about three years, when he settled upon the farm where he now resides. Jacob lived with his parents upon the farm until he was twenty-four years of age, engaged in labor common to farmers' sons; his education was all obtained from the common district schools, with the exception of three terms at the Randolph County Seminary, located at Winchester, of three months' each. In the years 1852, 1853 and 1860, he taught school three months during the winter. He was married to Sarah Conway, daughter of Gideon and Melinda Conway, of this county, November 3, 1853; her parents were natives of North Carolina, and came to this State in very early times. After marriage, Jacob settled upon a farm of eighty acres, with no improvements, in Washington Township, deeded to him by his father. His farm now consists of 170 acres of excellent land, with 130 acres in a high state of cultivation; his farm is beautifully located, gently rolling and soil very fertile. It is situated on a dividing ridge, between White River and Green's Fork. It is well improved, having given especial attention to underdraining; his buildings are of modern architecture, large and convenient; his dwelling was erected in 1876, two stories in height, and is a model of convenience.

Mr. Lasley has been married twice, and is the father of five children by his first wife, as follows: Charles E., born August 11, 1854; James A., born May 5, 1858; George W., born September 27, 1859; Dora B., born April 14, 1868; Ida, born October 28, 1869.

Mr. Lasley was called to mourn the death of his wife February 5, 1875. After the death of his wife, he remained on the farm with his children until December 25, 1875, when he was united in a second marriage with Mrs. Mary Lamme, daughter of Andrew Likens, of Wayne County. He is the father of two children by his second wife. The first was born May 31, 1877, and died in infancy; John W., born September 16, 1878. Mr. L. is a stanch and uncompromising Republican, and is ever interested in the welfare of the party; he and his family are quiet, yet useful and honored citizens, industrious, and surrounded by an abundance of the necessaries of life.

CHARLES ENOS, the son of Jacob and Sarah Lasley, was born in Randolph County August 11, 1854. He resided with his parents on the farm until he was twenty-one years of age, obtaining his education from the common district schools, and the graded schools of Lynn and Winchester. As a student, he was industrious, and applied himself closely to his studies, and succeeded in obtaining a thorough knowledge of those branches he studied. He began teaching school in the winter of 1873, and has taught, during the winter, ever since. As a teacher, he manifests the same energy and zeal that characterized him as a student. He takes a deep interest in the profession, and loses no opportunity to increase his efficiency; he is invariably found in attendance at all of the county and township institutes, and ranks as one of the best teachers of the county; he was married to Louisa Wilmore, daughter of John and Mary Wilmore, of this county, August, 1881. His excellent wife is an acceptable member of the Friends Church. They lead a quiet and happy life, and are honored members of society.

ANDREW J. LASLEY, P. O. Winchester, a prominent farmer and stock-raiser of White River Township, was born in this township July 31, 1836, and is a son of Moses and Margaret Lasley, of Washington Township. He spent his early life, as the remainder, also, upon the farm. He was married, August 4, 1861, to Miss Elizabeth J. Peacock, daughter of Thomas Peacock. She was born in Wayne County, Ind. They had two children—Flora A., deceased, and Jonas W. Mrs. Lasley died September 20, 1879. She was a faithful Christian, and a worthy member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Lasley is also a member of the same church.

PHILIP LYKINS, farmer, P. O. Winchester, is a native of Fayette County, Va., and was born September 23, 1832. His parents were Herod and Mary Lykins, who moved to this county first in 1835; but in 1841, they returned to the East, and remained until 1850, when they returned to this county, accompanied by our subject. Mr. Lykins was reared on a farm, and has always been a farmer. He was married, October 20, 1859, to Miss Eliza A. Wright, daughter of the late Edward B. Wright, of this county. She was born in this county, September 18, 1841. Her mother was Mary A. (Heaston). They have two children—Mary A. and Charles W. Mr. L. has never been a witness in court, never was sued, or never has sued any one. Mrs. Lykins' grandfather, John Wright, was the first Judge in Randolph County.

WILLIAM MONKS.

William Monks, deceased, son of John and Matilda Monks, was born in this county July 28, 1830. He was the eighth of a family of nine children, of whom five are now living. His father was a native of England, and came to the United States when he was eighteen years of age. His mother was born in Kentucky. They moved to this county in very early times, and entered 160 acres of land, one mile south of Winchester, the farm now known as the Courtner Farm. His parents lived on this farm until their death. William was born and raised upon this farm, and received his education in the common district schools of the neighborhood. He received the best education the schools at that time afforded. He was married to Catharine Wright March 5, 1857. After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Monks settled on the farm now owned by the widow. At the time of purchase there were ninety-five acres, with eighteen acres improved. The farm now consists of 222 acres of excellent land, with 120 acres under a high state of cultivation. This is a very beautiful and productive farm, being one of the best in the township. The farm buildings are both beautiful and convenient. The dwelling was erected in 1876, and is a two-story structure of modern architecture, beautifully situated and richly furnished. The erection of this beautiful dwelling was the last work Mr. Monks was permitted to do on earth, for he was soon after its construction stricken down with heart trouble, a disease that had been making inroads upon him for three years. The summons to bid adieu to loved ones and home came to William Monks October 8, 1876, and his life work was ended, at the age of forty-six years, two months and ten days. His mortal remains, followed by his grief-stricken family and mourning relatives and friends, were deposited in the cemetery at Winchester. He was a man of great energy, frugal and honest in his dealings. He accumulated property rapidly, and at the time of his death was surrounded by the comforts and many luxuries of life. He was quiet and retired in his nature, and it is said that he had many warm friends and no enemies. None knew him but to honor and love him. At his death, he left a widow and only child, whose portraits and biographies are herewith given. He united with the Christian Church March 13, 1875, and remained a faithful and devoted member until death. Thus lived and died a devoted husband, a loving father, a valuable member of the church, and an honored citizen.

CATHARINE (WRIGHT) MONKS, widow of William Monks, and daughter of Edward and Mary A. Wright, was born in this county February 20, 1839. She is the oldest of a family of four children, all of whom are living. Her father was born in Highland County, Ohio, August 18, 1816. Her mother (Mary A. Heaston), was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, April 13, 1819. They came to this county with their parents before either one was a year old. They were married, December 21, 1837, and settled one-half mile west of Winchester, on a farm owned by Mrs. Wright's father, where they remained for one year. They then bought a farm one-half mile south of Winchester, where they remained about one year, when they sold out and returned to Mrs. Wright's father, where they remained about four years. They then bought a farm two and one-half miles south of Winchester, where they remained until the death of Mr. Wright, which occurred August 23, 1880, and where his widow still resides. The subject of this sketch spent her youthful days on the farm with her parents, and obtained her education principally at the Randolph County Seminary, under the supervision of Prof. E. P. Cole. She acquired a good English education. Mrs. Monks is the mother of one daughter—Mary A., whose biography is herewith given. Mrs. Monks is the owner and proprietor of 322 acres of excellent land, all in White River Township. She joined the Christian Church at the same time as her husband, and has remained a faithful member ever since. She is a woman of sterling integrity, of great business capacity, and was a strong support to her husband in his efforts to develop a comfortable home. Since the death of her husband, she and her daughter have had entire charge of the farm and all business connected therewith. She is surrounded with an abundance of property, has a model home, and is blessed with all calculated to make life happy. She is a valuable member of society, and beloved by all her neighbors and acquaintances.

MARY ANN MONKS, daughter of William and Catharine Monks, was born in this county March 5, 1864. She is an only child, and received her education in the Winchester Public Schools, and graduated from the High School May 12, 1882, with high honors. She united with the Christian Church August 5, 1876, and has been a faithful member ever since. She is a young lady of rare ability, accomplished and well educated, and is a valuable assistant to her mother in the management of her business. She has always been a favorite with the circle of friends in which she moves. She is strictly pious and considerate, and certainly has a bright future before her.

TARLTON MOORMAN, one of the early pioneers of Randolph County, Ind., was born in Richmond County, N. C., in 1783. In 1819, he married Rebecca Webb, and, in 1822, came to Indiana, locating in Randolph County, with whose early and later history he was prominently identified. He purchased a tract of land, from which he developed a fine farm, and in all the public improvements inaugurated within his time he bore his full share of the burden by contributing liberally of his means and encouraging whatever seemed to him to be for the public welfare. He was twice married, first to Hannah Way, and after her demise to Rebecca Webb. He had a family of thirteen children, of which number seven are now living. Henry and Richmond reside in Wayne County, Ind.; Thomas, at Winchester; John A., at Farmland; Stephen, in White River Township, and William and Sarah on the old home farm. Mr. Moorman was an active, energetic man, and was always regarded as one of the best citizens of the community. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and in his daily life a consistent Christian. In politics, he was at first a Whig, and espoused and advocated the cause of abolition. He took an active part in the anti-slavery movements that were enacted in this county, and upon the rise of the Republican party adopted its principles, and was identified with that party during the residue of his life. He died on the 30th of December, 1875, in the ninety-third year of his age, leaving behind him the record of an honest man, and a memory still revered by all who knew him in life.

STEPHEN MOORMAN, farmer, P. O. Winchester. The subject of this sketch is a native of this county, and was born April 26, 1822. His parents were Tarlton and Rebecca Moorman, natives of North Carolina. He was brought up a farmer boy, and received a limited education in subscription schools taught for about forty days each winter. For a description of the schoolhouse, in which he received his rudimental lessons, see biography of James J. Clayton. He was married, March 2, 1848, to Miss Priscilla Diggs, a native also of this county, and a daughter of Armsby Diggs. They have two children—Alfred T. and Henry A. Mrs. Moorman died March 30, 1868, and he again married March 10, 1870, this time to Mrs. Malinda A. Nickson. Mr

Moorman is a member of the M. E. Church, as was also his first wife. His second (present) wife is a member of the Society of Friends. There is a mound on his farm, and also an oblong cavity in the ground, twenty feet in diameter, and was, at the time he purchased the place, six feet deep. Around this cavity is an embankment of earth upon which is an oak stump twenty inches in diameter. Mr. M. has dealt more or less in stock, but is now giving his attention to farming and raising stock. He owns 178 acres of valuable land in the White River Valley.

HON. W. E. MURRAY.

William Albert Murray was born May 26, 1834, at Cincinnati, Ohio. His father, Isaiah Henderson Murray, was born in Pennsylvania, but removed to Cincinnati when a young man, and was married there in 1830 to Miss Margaret Wrench, a lady of Welsh parentage. The father owned a lot on west Eighth street, Cincinnati, which he traded to "Nick" Longworth for 160 acres of unimproved land in Washington Township, Randolph County, Ind., paying him a sum of money in addition. This lot is now occupied by one of the public schools of that city, and before Mr. Murray had payed the last installment of the "boot money," the land was worth $1,000 per foot. He brought his family to Indiana in the fall of 1836, and located near Bloomingsport, Randolph County, where he rented a farm, upon which he resided until the spring of 1838. In the meantime, he had erected a cabin on his own land, and made the preliminary preparations for improving it. In the spring of 1838, he removed to this property with his family, and cultivated his farm for twenty years. In 1858, he sold it and removed to Deerfield, in this county, where, in partnership with his brother, he purchased a carding mill. They remodeled it, converting it into a woolen mill, and supplying a boiler and engine, in lieu of the ox-power tread-mill by which its machinery had formerly been propelled. But just as they had completed their system of improvements, the mill was destroyed by fire. Mr. Murray then remained at Deerfield until his death, which occurred in August, 1860. He was a man who stood high in the community, and was always recognized as a good citizen. In politics, he was identified with the "Free" Whigs, and was strongly anti-slavery in sentiment. He was an enthusiastic politician, but never sought public office, and never served in a public capacity, except as Justice of the Peace, which position he occupied for several successive terms in Washington Township.

William E. is the second in a family of eight children. He was but an infant when his parents came to Indiana, and in a region so slightly developed, his educational privileges in early life were quite limited. Yet such as he enjoyed were well improved by him, and the meager knowledge he gained at school was supplemeated by diligent study in leisure hours at home. At the age of nineteen years, he hired out as a farm hand, and with the money thus earned, paid his tuition in the seminary at Winchester, and afterward attended the Union Literary Institute, near Spartansburg. He had made the necessary arrangements for taking a collegiate course at Delaware, Ohio, when the outbreak of the rebellion caused him to change his plans. Early in July, 1861, he enlisted as a private soldier, under Capt. Hamilton, of Company C, Nineteeth Indiana Regiment, and was the first citizen of Randolph County who enrolled his name under the President's call for volunteers for three years' service. He was tendered the position of Sergeant of his company, and at a later date a Lieutenancy was offered him, but he declined both, preferring to serve as a private soldier. His regiment, after making several raids into Virginia, went into winter quarters at Washington. In the following spring, they were assigned to duty in Virginia, and during this campaign Mr. Murray took part, with his regiment, in several raids and skirmishes, among which were the fights of Lewinsville and Langley Falls Church, and the second battle of Bull Run. In this engagement, he was wounded in the ankle by a minie ball, the injury proving so serious as to disqualify him for service. In consequence, he was honorably discharged in March, 1863, and returned to his home. It was in this battle that Gen. Fitz John Porter was guilty of the conduct for which he was dismissed, and at the re-hearing of his case, in the fall of 1876, Mr. Murray was called to Gen. Hancock's headquarters as a witness. He had kept a diary of current events while in the service, and his entries regarding that day were found to have an important bearing in disproving certain claims set up by Gen. Porter.

After returning from the army, he attended school for several months, and in the winter of 1863 resumed the occupation of school teaching, at which he had been engaged for several years prior to 1861. In March, 1864, he entered the County Clerk's office as Deputy, under John B. Goodrich, serving nearly two years. In the meantime, the Republicans of this county took occasion to express their confidence in him by nominating him for the office of County Auditor in the spring of 1865. In the fall of that year, he was elected by a flattering majority, and took charge of the office in November of the same year. He served four years, and in the meantime a change was made in the law relating to the election of County Auditors, and changing the time of election. This created an interregum in the office, which he was appointed by the County Commissioners to fill. At the next regular election, in the fall of 1871, he was again chosen as Auditor of the county, serving a second term of four years. Thus, for about nine years, he was in continuous service as Auditor, and devoted his attention to the duties of the office with a fidelity that made him popular, while his uniform kindness and courtesy as an official gained for him many true friends. He entered upon the duties of his position without any knowledge of the manner of conducting the work of the office, receiving scarcely any instruction from his predecessor. He was thus thrown upon his own resources, and turned to the statutes for help. The result was the development of a system of book-keeping which proved of great financial benefit to the county, though like the majority of public improvements, it was opposed at first by those who should have been its friends. Against the protest of the County Commissioners he inaugurated this system, and had the necessary books manufactured, drawing his own warrant for the same. As soon as it was put into practical operation, it was found that it placed a check upon errors in either the Auditor's or Treasurer's office, as each succeeding transaction balanced or corrected the one that had preceded it. And by this system it was possible at a moment's notice to ascertain the amount of money in the hands of the Treasurer, and to what funds it belonged; whereas, under the old system, this was only possible once a year, i. e., when the annual June exhibit was rendered. So satisfactory and accurate was this system that it was adopted, and is now in use, by surrounding counties, while a benefit was conferred by it upon the tax-payers of this county, for which Mr. Murray well deserves their grateful remembrance.

After retiring from this position, he purchased a tract of land four miles northeast of Winchester, where he has since been engaged in agricultural pursuits. The farm was almost destitute of improvements, having only about twenty-five acres cleared. In the meantime, he has spent a great deal of both time and money in improving his farm, and now has about sixty-five acres under cultivation, and has greatly augmented the value of his land.

He has devoted a great deal of time and study to horticulture and pomology, and has taken an active interest in these subjects. Upon the organization of the Randolph County Horticultural Society, in 1881, he was chosen President, in which capacity he still acts. With a grateful appreciation of the honors that had been bestowed upon him by his friends, he had decided to be no more in public life, but spend the residue of his time in the cultivation of his farm. But in 1880 his friends suggested his name as a candidate for Representative from this district in the General Assembly, to which he yielded assent. He was then teaching school, and made no effort to secure the nomination, but at the convention he was chosen, over two strong and worthy competitors, and in the following fall was elected by a flattering majority. In the session of 1880–81, he was identified with important legislation, and throughout his term of office proved himself faithful to principles and the interests of his constituency. He occupied the position of Chairman of the Committee on County and Township Business, and was a member of the Committee on Mileage and Per Diem, the Committee on Trust Funds, and the Joint Committee on Enrolled Bills. He introduced the bill under whose terms the telephone companies of this State are organized and operated; also, a bill authorizing the transfer of a turnpike in Randolph County. The latter measure was one of local interest, and its sucess afforded great satisfaction to his friends at home.

The Committee on County and Township Business had charge of a large number of bills, and accomplished great good in the way of preventing vicious and extravagant legislation; and so well did they perform their work that, at the close of the session, they received a vote of thanks for their services. Among these was a bill to authorize the Attorney General to disburse the accumulated funds due the various counties in the State, from the old "Three Per Cent Fund." The bill came into the hands of the Committee, and an amendment was submitted by Mr. Murray, making the Treasurer and Auditor of State the disbursing officers. The passage of this amendment saved the State a commission of ten per cent on the amount involved, amounting to over $100,000. He introduced forty-three amendments to the revised tax-law, of which number forty-one passed and are now in effect.

At the same session, a bill was introduced to create the office of State Bridge Commissioner. It would have been the duty of this Commissioner to visit counties, and inspect all bridges erected subsequent to the passage of that law, in all cases where the cost of the bridge was in excess of $500. It was left for him to decide upon the merits of the case, and making the contracts of the County Commissioners subject to his approval. In effect, it gave to this official an opportunity for collusion with contractors, and, although legislation in regard to bridges and a better system of construction was recognized as necessary, this bill struck the Chairman of the committee as vicious in its nature, and he requested a member to move its reference to the Committee on County and Township Business. It was placed in the hands of this committee, where it underwent many changes and modifications. When it emerged from this ordeal it was so amended that its provisions, if adopted, would have resulted in good; but the session expired before any action was taken, and thus the measure failed. By this bill the State Bridge Commissioner would have the power to receive bids, award contracts and authorize the construction of bridges in any county in the State. At the solicitation of Mr. Murray, the bill was referred to the Committee on County and Township Business, where it was so revised and its objectionable features so altered and amended that the original bill was scarcely recognizable. Its ultimate passage was defeated by the close of the session, which expired before any definite action was taken in reference to this matter. Among other bills that passed through the hands of this committee was the law, now in force, authorizing the establishment of county orphan homes. He was conscientious in advocating and supporting all measures that seemed to him calculated to promote the best interests of the public and secure economy.

Mr. Murray was made a Mason in July, 1860, in Deerfield Lodge, No. 117. He subsequently took a dimit from that lodge and united with Winchester Lodge, No. 56; he passed all the degrees of the Blue Lodge, and in 1864 became a member of Randolph Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M. In 18—, he was admitted into Winchester Council, No. 20, R. & S. M., and to Richmond Commandery, No. 8, K. T., in 1874. In 1881, he received the Scottish Rite degree at Indianapolis. He served four years as Worshipful Master of Winchester Lodge, and during this period was chosen High Priest of the Chapter, and Illustrious Master of the Council, serving as the presiding officer of the three lodges at one time. He is an enthusiastic Mason, thoroughly posted in the ritual and all the work of the order. In May, 1875, he was appointed Junior Grand Deacon of the Grand Lodge of Indiana, serving one year, and from 1872 to 1876 he was Deputy Master of the Ninth Masonic District, embracing the counties of Adams, Allen, Jay, Wells, Henry, Delaware and Randolph. He became an Odd Fellow in 1864, and has passed the chairs of both the subordinate lodge and Encampment; he has twice been elected as the Representative to the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, and once as Alternate Representative son of Mahlon and Sarah (Arnett) Beeson, was born July 29, 1842, at Bloomingsport, Randolph Co., Ind. His father, who was a native of North Carolina, came to Randolph County with his parents in 1820, remaining here until 1856. His wife died in 1850, and, in 1856, he removed with his family to Hancock County, Ind., where he still resides.

Amos, his son, received a good common-school education in youth, and, at the age of eighteen years, entered upon an apprenticeship at the printer's trade with William Mitchell, of the Greenfield (Ind.) Democrat. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company G, Seventy-ninth Indiana Regiment, under Col. Kneffler. This regiment was attached to Gen. Thomas Wood's Division of the Fourth Army Corps. Mr. Beeson participated in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged (excepting the battle of Stone River) up to the 23d of June, 1864. He was at the battle of Perryville, Chickamauga, the siege of Chattanooga, Mission Ridge, Lookout Mountain, in the East Tennessee campaign as far as Bull's Gap, and the Atlanta campaign as far as Kenesaw Mountain, taking part in the battles of Tunnel Hill, Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, Cassville, New Hope Church and Lost Mountain. At the battle of Kenesaw, on the 23d of June, 1864, he was wounded in the left hand, and being thus permanently disabled and incapacitated for duty, he was honorably discharged from the service in February, 1865. On the 16th of February, 1865, he was appointed Deputy Recorder of Hancock County, Ind., and was elected Recorder in October of the same year. It is a noteworthy fact that he was the only Republican ever elected to that office in that county. He resigned his office in June, 1870, prior to the term for which he was elected, and in company with E. J. Marsh (now of the Portland Commercial) purchased the Winchester Journal, with which he has ever since been identified. In December, 1871, he purchased the interest of Mr. Marsh in the paper, and in July, 1872, associated Mr. Hodson with him as a partner. The Journal was then edited and published by Hodson & Beeson until July 1, 1881, when Mr. Beeson became sole proprietor by the purchase of Mr. Hodson's interest, and has since continued to publish it without an associate. The Journal office is the oldest printing establishment in Randolph County, having been founded about the year 1840 by Col. H. H. Neff, who issued the Winchester Patriot from this room. In the hands of its present proprietor, the Journal maintains the high reputation it has always borne for reliability and character. It has an extended circulation, and is strongly Republican in politics. In February, 1881, Mr. Beeson was elected by the Legislature of Indiana as one of the Directors of the State Prison North, and on the 11th of March, 1881, was chosen President of the Board. He is a man of well-known integrity, and in all respects a good citizen. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Honor, and one of the charter members of Nelson Trusler Post, No. 60, G. A. R. He is a thorough business man, prompt and reliable in all his dealings, and governed always by a high sense of honor and right. During his residence in this community, he has gained numerous friends, and by his personal popularity has placed the Journal upon a high plane in literary and political circles. He was married in 1867, to Miss Margaret E. Marsh, an accomplished young lady, the daughter of William Marsh, deceased. This union was blessed by two children, named respectively William E. and Charles H.

and either in an official or private capacity always attends the annual sessions of the Odd Fellows and Masonic Grand Lodges. He has been honored with important trusts, both by the public and by the fraternities with which he is identified, and in each instance he has discharged the duties of his position with a zeal and fidelity that proved the trusts worthily bestowed, and gained for him a lasting place in the estimation of those he served. He was married on the 14th day of October, 1864, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of John Garland, Esq., a highly respected citizen of Randolph County. By this union they are the parents of two children, named, respectively, Frank and Rhoena. In politics, Mr. Murray has always been recognized as a strong partisan, and is bold and fearless in the advocacy and maintenance of his principles; yet among his warm, personal friends, he counts many who are radically opposed to him in politics. His personal characteristics have won friends to his side, and among them all, he is recognized as an honorable man and a good citizen.

HENRY T. McINTIRE resides at Macksville, White River Township; he was born in Randolph November 16, 1820; his father, Robinson McIntire, was one of the first settlers of the county, having emigrated hither in March, 1819. Henry T. was brought up at hard labor, such as only those who saw the wilds of the forest can realize. His schooling was obtained in subscription schools, which continued about three months each year. The schoolhouse was furnished with slab seats and puncheon writing desks. The window in the schoolhouse was made by removing one log out of the side wall. The room was warmed by a huge fire-place in the end of the house, around which the happy urchins gathered in the cold winter days to warm and study. Mr. McIntire was married, in 1855, to Miss Mary J. Bull, a native of Logansport, Ind. They have had seven children, of whom six are living, viz., Anna M., Sarah B., Rachel G., Sample P., Hattie and Guy K. Mr. McIntire has a fine farm in the bottom lands of White River, which is mostly underlaid with an excellent quality of gravel and some lime rock. He engages in farming and stock-raising. He donated two acres of land for the Macksville Cemetery and the M. E. Church. Mrs. McIntire is a member of the M. E. Church.

JOSEPH MONKS, farmer, P. O. Harrisville, was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, April 7, 1818, and is a son of John and Matilda E. Monks, the former a native of England, and the latter of Bardstown, Ky. He came with his parents to this county in 1821, at that time the Indians, deer, turkeys and wolves were numerous in this locality. The Monks settled in the thick woods, and labored hard to prepare a home. Mr. Monks has ground corn in a hominy block with an iron wedge. The nearest mill was at Richmond, twenty-five miles distant, and that distance he went on horseback. There was no school until he was thirteen years old, and then it was a subscription school, taught in a log cabin, with "stick and clay" chimney, slab seats, puncheon floor and clapboard roof. Mr. Monks was married, August 17, 1846, to Miss Lucinda Wilmore, daughter of W. C. Wilmore, of whom we shall make further mention elsewhere in this work. They had five children, viz., John, Willis, Louisa, Sarah (deceased), and an infant (deceased). For eleven years, Mr. Monks followed wool carding, with his father in Winchester, since that time he has been engaged in farming and stock-raising. He now owns 160 acres of valuable land, and resides on Section 12.

JAMES McNEAL is a resident of White River Township; he was born in Washington Township, Randolph County, July 28, 1830, and is a son of James and Elizabeth Jarratt McNeal. James was brought up on a farm and educated in a log cabin. The seats of his school-room were cushioned with the soft sides of split slabs, and the floor was carpeted with alluvium. In one end of the schoolhouse there was a large fire-place, which was a comforter on cold winter days. Mr. McNeal, in his early life, was employed in clearing land and putting the soil under cultivation; he also learned the carpenter trade and blacksmithing. Of late years he has employed himself, as he says, "in a general purpose way." He is a genius in the arts. He was married, April 11, 1858, to Miss Matilda Moyer, a native of Pennsylvania, and daughter of Jacob Moyer, of German descent. Mr. and Mrs. McNeal have had two children, viz., Elmira Belle, who is a graduate of the Winchester High School, and a prominent teacher of Randolph County; Ida P., who is deceased. Mr. McNeal owns a neat farm of thirty-three acres near the corporate limits of Winchester. This family is favorably received and highly appreciated.

THOMAS R. McGUIRE was born on the 12th day of May, 1833, at Maxville, Randolph Co., Ind.; he is a son of Samuel McGuire and Eunice (Burns) McGuire, a native of New York. Samuel was a native of North Carolina. There were ten children in the McGuire family. Thomas R. is the oldest son, and consequently very familiar with the pioneer life; his education was such as the district schools then afforded; he has always been employed on a farm. On the 30th day of December, 1861, he enlisted in Company C, of the Nineteenth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and re-enlisted on the 31st day of December, 1863, at Culpeper Court House, Va. He participated in the battle of Petersburg and the Wilderness, and was wounded, and is a pensioner; he was detailed as a teamster in June, 1862, and drove a team nearly three years; he was badly hurt by a mule falling on him on the 7th day of May, 1863; he was honorably discharged on the 12th day of July, 1865, at Jeffersonville, Ind., by reason of General Order No. 26, of the Army of Tennessee. Four years before the war, Thomas R. and his wife moved to Cooper County, Mo., and resided there till the war began, when on account of the war they returned to Indiana. After the close of the war, they moved to Minnesota in 1866, and back to Indiana in 1867. In 1874, moved to Kansas, and in 1877 back to Indiana. They have nine children—William R., born May 10, 1856; Samuel, born September 19, 1858; James A., born July 2, 1861; Daniel S., born October 3, 1865; U. S., October 3, 1865; the latter two being twins—Lewis B., November 30, 1866, Anna Mary, December 3, 1868; Sarah Ellen, January 26, 1871; Martha Jane, January 6, 1875.

ABRAM MOSER, farmer, P. O. Winchester. Mr. Moser was born in Darke County, Ohio, August 23, 1823, and is a son of Solomon and Mary Moser, natives of Tennessee. Mr. Moser's education was very limited, as school privileges in his boyhood days were very poor; he came to this county with his parents in 1836, where he worked very hard, assisting his father to clear and make a farm. The schoolhouse in which he attended school for a short time was a small cabin, with slab seats, and a board, supported on pins in the wall, for a writing-desk. He has cleared and made two farms for himself since grown; he was married, in 1846, to Miss Catharine Brooks, by whom he had twelve children; of these, there are living, viz., Martha A., Anderson, David, Ensley, Millia C., Lafayette and Abram H. Mrs. Moser died July 24, 1879, and he again married, June 18, 1880, this time to Mrs. Hannah Woolf, who had one child—Alonzo, by her first husband. Mr. Moser's father was a soldier in the war of 1812.

DANIEL U. MOORE (deceased), was a native of Warren County, Ohio, and was born October 17, 1813; he was reared on a farm and educated in Lebanon, Ohio. In 1826, he removed to Butler County, Ohio, with his sister, where, July 26, 1838, he married Miss Mary Freeman; she was born in Butler County, Ohio, in June, 1813, and is a daughter of John W. and Margaret Freeman. Mr. and Mrs. Moore became the parents of fourteen children, twelve of whom they raised, and eleven are now living, viz., John W., Joel F., Jasper, William, Thomas, Albert, Francis M., Oliver, Margaret J., Mary A. and Daniel H. They moved to this county in 1858, where Mr. Moore worked very hard to make a farm. As a farmer and stock-raiser he was eminently successful, accumulating over 400 acres of valuable land. He died August 30, 1876; he was an honest, benevolent man.

TYRE T. PUCKETT.

Tyre Taylor Puckett, a pioneer and farmer, is the son of Joseph and Mary (Garrett) Puckett, and was born in Surry County, N. C., January 15, 1810. He is the oldest of a family of ten children, of whom four are now living; his parents were born and raised in North Carolina. They removed from North Carolina in the fall of 1814, and settled in Clinton County, Ohio, where they remained for five years, when they removed with their children to Indiana, and settled in Randolph County, White River Township, and entered a quarter section of land, being a part of the farm upon which the subject of this sketch now resides.

Tyre was about ten years of age when his parents settled in this county. The part of the county where they settled was an unbroken forest, there being but four families in the township. There being no improvements, these families were compelled to clear a road through the forests before they could gain access to and from their premises.

Tyre's experience in boyhood was most severe in hardships and deprivations; being the oldest of the children, the burden of the responsibilities of pioneer life fell to his lot. But having learned the great lesson of untiring industry, and being blessed with a robust constitution, his part of the labor of developing a farm under these circumstances was crowned with abundant success.

His education was meager, being deprived almost exclusively of the advantage of schools, and what education he did obtain was secured by his own exertions at such times as he could not be actively engaged on the farm; he mastered the rudiments of the common branches sufficient to transact the common business of life.

He early acquired a great fondness for study and the reading of general literature. In order to obtain books and papers, he would exchange some of the products of the farm for them. For the first newspaper he ever possessed, he gave a barrel of flour as a subscription price.

He was first married to Elizabeth Bales, daughter of Daniel and Catherine Bales, of Randolph County, November 20, 1830. They were the parents of four children, two of whom are still living; his first wife died July 17, 1838. His second marriage was to Eliza Johnson Hill, daughter of John and Esther Hill, of Henry County, Ind. They were married November 10, 1845; his second wife is still living, and her portrait accompanies this sketch in connection with her husband's. This second union was blessed with one child, a daughter, who is still living with them at the old homestead.

Mr. Puckett is owner and proprietor of a farm of 237 acres, of which 100 acres are under cultivation. This farm is conveniently located, of a good quality of soil, well adapted to grain and grazing. It is supplied with an abundance of never-failing water. It is also supplied with abundance of excellent timber. The farm buildings are in good condition, being convenient and commodious. His house is in close proximity to two excellent and never-failing springs. Mr. Puckett's church relations have been with the Society of Friends; that of his present wife of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, Mr. Puckett affiliates with the National Greenback party at the present time, having always before the organization of this party affiliated with the Republican party.

His most excellent wife, Eliza J. Puckett, was born in Virginia September 5, 1819. She is the daughter of John and Esther Hill; her parents removed from Virginia and settled in Henry County, Ind., in the spring of 1833. Eliza was the eldest of a family of eight children, seven of whom are still living, and all reside in this State with one exception. She was fourteen years of age when her parents removed from Virginia, and being the eldest, the greater burden of frontier life fell upon her shoulders. In addition to performing household duties in pioneer times (which none but pioneers know), she was frequently engaged as laborer on the farm, doing all kinds of farm work, from the clearing down through the whole catalogue. After she was twenty-one years of age, she hired out for several years, receiving about 75 cents a week, frequently receiving her pay in articles of apparel, etc. She now owns a spinning-wheel and side saddle as relics of the wages of her younger life. Her education is very meager, on account of the fact stated in connection with her pioneer life.

Mrs. Puckett is in good health at the present time, and takes an active part in the cares of the household, which she is careful to look after in detail. Her husband is deprived from manual labor to any great extent on account of contraction of some of his limbs, caused by rheumatism. Each leads a quiet and industrious life, surrounded by loving children and friends, and enough property to keep them comfortable the remainder of their days.

CALVIN PUCKETT, farmer, P. O. Winchester. This enterprising farmer and the present Treasurer of Randolph County was born in this county January 16, 1835, and is a son of Nathan and Betsey Puckett, natives of North Carolina. He was brought up a farmer's boy, and his education was received in the common schools; he served his country three years and three months in the late war, in Company E, Fifty-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Mission Ridge, Pittsburg Landing, Kenesaw Mountain, Resaca, Black Hickory and others. He was married, in January, 1859, to Miss Emeline Pegg, a native of this county and daughter of Ithamer Pegg, of White River Township. They have had five children, of whom four are living, viz., Delphina, Elvira, Sarah A. and Angeline. Mr. Puckett owns 160 acres of valuable land, and resides on Section 36, White River Township.

NATHANIEL PUCKETT farmer, (deceased). The subject of our sketch was a native of this county, and was born February 28, 1825. His parents were Zachariah and Edith Puckett, who settled in Randolph County in an early day; he was brought up to hard work on his father's farm; he was married three times—first, to Miss Nancy Hurst; the second, to Sarah J. Spray, and the third time to Miss Sarah, daughter of John Adamson. Mr. Puckett had two children by his second wife, Zachariah T. and Samuel C., and six by his third wife, viz., James, Elmer, Elijah and Chester, living, and Phœbe A. and Mary E., deceased. Mr. Puckett died March 18, 1880, respected by all. He was a benevolent and kind citizen, always aiding as he was prosperous in business for the support of schools, churches, and benevolent institutions.

WILLIAM PEGG, farmer, P. O. Unionsport, is a native of Wayne County, Ind., and was born April 1, 1831. His parents were John and Lydia Pegg, who came to this county about the year 1832. The country was then wild, and they had to work very hard in the thick timber to make a farm. They lived for several years in a round-log cabin. Mr. Pegg attended a subscription school in an old log cabin, and sat on a slab bench, and wrote upon a board supported by pins in the wall. They often had spelling schools at night, and vied with each other as to who should stand up last in the contest. Mr. Pegg was married in February, 1859, to Miss Hettie A. Green, daughter of Levi Green, deceased. She was born in this county. They have six children—Taylor, John H., Lydia B., Charley C., Rosanna and Lizzie C. Mr. Pegg owns 153 acres of valuable land, and is a prominent farmer.

MARTIN PEGG, farmer, P. O. Unionsport, was born in this township January 30, 1837, and is a son of John and Lydia Pegg, early settlers of this county. He was raised on his father's woodland farm, and hence is familiar with grubbing, picking, chopping, rolling logs, and other hard work attending the making of farms in the woods. He attended school in a log house, and sat on a slab seat. He was married, March 11, 1866, to Miss Rebecca J. Woolf, daughter of William Woolf, an early settler of Randolph County. They have four children—Francis M., John W., Milo C. and Willard P. Mr. Pegg served three years in the late war, in Company A, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Mission Ridge, Stone River, Atlanta, Huntsville, and others, twenty-two in all. He now owns seventy-one acres of valuable land, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising.

JOHN PEGG was born in North Carolina May 17, 1800, and died on his farm in White River Township, Randolph County, April 7, 1867. He was a son of Reuben Pegg, and was brought up on a farm, and accustomed to hard work all his life from his youth. He was married February 12, 1829, to Miss Lydia Cloud, and in 1830 came to Randolph County and settled on the west half of Section 28, in White River Township. Mr. and Mrs. Pegg had eleven children, of whom nine are living, viz.: William, Martin, Rachel, Rebecca, Lydia, John, Jesse, Lucinda and Lurena. John and Martin were soldiers in the late war, and participated in many of the most noted battles, among which were the following: Both the Bull Run conflicts, Chancellorsville, the Wilderness, Fredericksburg, Antietam and Gettysburg. At the last-named place, John was wounded and taken prisoner, on the 1st day of July, 1863, and on the 4th day of the same month he was re-taken by the Union forces.

JOHN R. PHILLIPS, farmer, P. O. Winchester. Mr. Phillips is a native of Clermont County, Ohio, and was born May 3, 1827; his parents were Joseph and Nancy Phillips. The former was a miller, and our subject took his early lessons in manual labor in his father's mill. At the age of seventeen years, he learned the wagon and carriage maker's trade, at which he worked for about twenty-six years, except three years, which time he devoted to the service of the Union during the rebellion. He entered the service as Second Lieutenant of Company E, Eighty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, but was soon promoted to the office of Captain. He participated in the battles of Arkansas Post, siege of Vicksburg, Red River expedition, siege of Mobile, and others. While storming Fort Blakely, at Mobile, the brim of his hat was cut by a ball from the enemy. He was married in November, 1849, to Miss Nancy Beeler, by whom he has had seven children; of these four are living, viz.: Samuel B., Parish, Ennis N. and Frank G.

JOHN PICKETT, farmer, deceased. This worthy old settler was born in Orange County, N. C., August 4, 1808, and is a son of Benjamin and Ruth Pickett, also natives of North Carolina. His educational advantages were limited. The schools were taught by subscription, and in cabins. He sat on a slab seat split from a log, and wrote on a puncheon desk supported by pins in the wall. The windows consisted of a log removed from one side of the house. This was closed by a board when too cold, as they had no glass. He came to this county in 1829; returning in 1830, he married Miss Mary Pike, daughter of William and Sarah (Sherriden) Pike. The young couple then cast their lot in the Hoosier forest. They purchased the improvements on some land, which consisted of a small cabin, with clap-board door, puncheon floor and a stick chimney, half built. There was also one acre of land cleared. There they struggled hard to make a home in the dense forest. Mr. Pickett hauled wheat to Dayton, Ohio, a distance of fifty miles, and then could get no money for it, but was compelled to "trade it out." They have had ten children, of whom six are living—William, Clarkson, Louisa, Ruth D., R. Barclay and T. Chalkley. All are married except Ruth D. They are members of the Society of Friends. Mr. Pickett died on the 14th day of March, 1882, and his son, Clarkson, died on the 22d day of March, 1882.

JOHN W. PFISTERER is a merchant at Unionsport. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, February 5, 1831, and is a son of Philip and Magdalina Pfisterer, who were natives of Germany. The greater portion of Mr. Pfisterer's youthful days were spent on the farm, and he received his education in the common schools. He first engaged in business near Greenville, Ohio, in the manufacture of woolen goods. He came to Randolph County in 1866, and, excepting one and one-half years, has resided here ever since. In the month of September, 1880, he began business in the village of Unionsport, in a store of all kinds of goods and notions suitable to the trade of the surrounding country. Owing to his fair dealing, his trade steadily increased, and his business became permanent. He was married, in 1866, to Miss Elizabeth Muckridge, a daughter of James R. Muckridge. Mrs. Pfisterer was born in Cincinnati. In the Pfisterer family there are four children, namely, Maggie, William, Charles and Emma.

JOHN RICHARDSON, dry goods merchant, has been a prominent citizen of Winchester for thirty-three years. He was born in Franklin County, Ind., March 10, 1825; he is the son of William and Jane (Cathers) Richardson, and is the second child of a second set of three children, none of whom are now living except the subject of this sketch; his father was a native of England, and was born in 1777, and came to the United States with his parents very early in life; his mother was of Irish parentage, and was born in Pennsylvania in the year 1795; his father died in Ohio when John was but two years of age, but had previously resided in Franklin County, this State. After the death of his father, John accompanied his mother in her return to this State, and settled on the old homestead, where they remained for about three years, when they moved to Butler County, Ohio. At the age of fifteen, John engaged with George McAdams, of Hamilton, Ohio, to learn the merchant tailoring; he remained with Mr. McAdams for about six months, when he was bound to James Wilson, of Cincinnati, for seven years, but did not remain until the expiration of the time by about one year. While with Mr. Wilson, he continued to work at his trade. After leaving Cincinnati, he worked at his trade for one winter in Hamilton, then went to Pittsburgh for a short time, and from there to Wheeling, W. Va., where he remained for nearly one year; he then went to Lexington, Ky., where he remained until the breaking-out of the Mexican war, when he enlisted in the First Kentucky Cavalry, under Capt. Cassius M. Clay and Col. Humphrey Marshall. The regiment went into camp at Louisville, Ky., for about one month, when they were transferred to Memphis, Tenn., and went into camp in Arkansas, on opposite side of the Mississippi River. After remaining here for ten days and receiving their supplies, they went to the front on the Rio Grande by overland route. After recruiting for one month, they were assigned to guard and scout duties. After guarding a supply train as far as Monterey, they joined Gen. Taylor's army. They were again placed upon guard duty, and accompanied another supply train to Saltillo, and from there were sent to guard a pass in the mountains. While here, John and twenty-nine other men of his regiment, commanded by Capt. Clay and Maj. Gaines, were detailed to ascertain the position of Gen. Santa Anna's army. While they were engaged in this hazardous undertaking, they were surrounded and captured by Gen. Minion, of Incarnation. They were conveyed as prisoners of war to San Louis, and several other places. They were kept at the City of Mexico for about five months. When Gen. Scott made his attack upon that city, they were transferred to Tampico, where they were paroled at the close of the war, and afterward mustered out of the service at New Orleans. After a brief sojourn at Louisville, Ky., he engaged himself to a man by the name of Belknap, who was employing teamsters for an overland route from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico; he made one trip to Mexico, where he remained until peace was declared; he then returned via New Orleans and Cincinnati to his mother's home, who was at that time living in this county. He has continued to reside in this county ever since, with the exception of the winter of 1849, when he lived in Michigan City, this State. He was united in a first marriage to Cynthia Ann Lilley, of La Porte County, Ind., July 21, 1850. This union was blessed with two children, both of whom are deceased; his wife died in Winchester May 12, 1853; he was united in a second marriage to Miss Nancy Mettler, daughter of William and Nancy Mettler, of this county, October 9, 1853, who still survives, and has been of inestimable service to her husband, in his battles against poverty, and securing a competency of worldly effects which they now enjoy. In fact, Mr. Richardson owes much of his present position in the world to the industry and frugality of his excellent wife, who is a most amiable and worthy woman. She was born in Wayne County, Ohio, January 28, 1826. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are the parents of four children, three of whom are living as follows: Ellen F., born July 15, 1854, and deceased July 6, 1859; George F., born March 7, 1856; Clara B., born June 22, 1858; Lillie M., born March 9, 1863. At the time Mr. Richardson came to the town of Winchester, he was wholly destitute of means, but was master of a good trade, and to this he applied himself with the greatest diligence, working day and night, and by his industry and frugality in his investments, he has become independent, and can live with ease upon his income. He owns some of the most valuable business blocks in the city of Winchester. In addition to his trade, he has been successfully engaged in a general mercantile business for over thirty years. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson and their daughters, are acceptable and honored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Richardson is also an active member of Winchester Lodge, No. 56, F. & A. M., Randolph Chapter No. 35, R. A. M., and Richmond Commandery, No. 8, K. T. He is a public-spirited man, and has ever taken an active interest in all of the moral reforms of the day. He has always been a bitter and uncompromising enemy of the rum traffic, and has devoted largely of his means and time to the temperance cause. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are well preserved in health, active and useful members of the church and society.

WILLIAM RUBLE, farmer and carpenter, P. O. Winchester, was born in Randolph County August 4, 1828, and is a son of Levet and Nancy A. Ruble natives of Ohio. Our subject was reared on a farm and educated in the common schools of this county. He was married, December 23, 1854, to Miss Rachel Reynard, daughter of Solomon Reynard. They had four children, viz.: Ellen, Clara A., Estella and Jesse G. Mrs. Ruble died March 13, 1868. He again married, January 1, 1869, this time to Mrs. Abbie C. May. She had two children by the first husband—William H. and Sarah B. Mr. Ruble resides on Section 27, White River Township, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. He is also a carpenter by trade, and has erected many of the best houses and barns in this township. He is a member of the Masonic Order.

NATHAN REYNARD is now a resident of White River Township, and his post office address is Cerro Gordo. He was born March 16, 1821, and is a son of Jeremiah and Sarah Reynard—his father born in Pennsylvania and his mother in North Carolina. His life has been spent upon the farm. His education was obtained in subscription schools taught in log cabins. When at study, he reclined on split slab seats, the ease of which never lulled to sleep. Mr. Reynard knew the well-known Dr. Jake, an old Indian doctor, who refused to follow his tribe but remained in the neighborhood with the whites. Mr. Reynard is authority for Indian Jake's application of ague remedy. Dr. Jake's wife took the ague and he applied his remedy by pricking her forehead with a sharp instrument and rubbing on his remedy. Mr. Reynard was married, May 8, 1851, to Miss Eliza A. Griffin; she is a daughter of James Griffin, who was born in North Carolina November 5, 1801. Mr. Griffin now resides with Mr. Reynard. Mr. and Mrs. Reynard have had six children, namely: Vespasian C., Emily J., Azile Granville, Edward G. and Sadie A. Azile is deceased—Granville and Edward are practicing and prosperous physicians, Vespasian C. has been a teacher, but is now farming in Iowa. The daughters are teachers. Mr. Reynard held the office of Justice of the Peace three terms. He and his good lady reside upon their farm where they have a pleasant and happy home. Mr. Reynard now gives his time in overlooking his farming and his flocks and herds.

WALTER R. STARBUCK, farmer, P. O. Cerro Gordo, was born in Guilford County, N. C., May 19, 1812, and is a son of John and Beulah (Garrett) Starbuck, the former a native of Massachusetts, and the latter of North Carolina. The elder Starbuck was a tanner by trade, and also worked in winter seasons at saddle and harness making. They resided on a farm, and our subject has done nothing else save farming and raising stock. They came to this county in March, 1831, where he has since resided. He was married, in 1836, to Miss Sarah Fisher, of Wayne County. They have had ten children, of whom but three are living, viz.: Aladelphia, Malinda and Zerah C. Two sons, Christopher C. and Alexander S., were soldiers in the late war. Christopher was killed at his post in the battle of Gettysburg, and Alexander died at Indianapolis, on his way home, after being discharged. Mr. Starbuck is a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

WILLIAM W. STARBUBCK, farmer, P. O. Winchester, is a native of Grayson County, Va., and was born March 2, 1825. His parents were John and Beulah Starbuck, the former a native of Nantucket Island, and the latter of North Carolina. He came with his parents to Wayne County, Ind., in 1834, and to Randolph County in 1835. They settled in the "green" and labored hard to improve and make a farm. When they arrived in this county, the family had one horse, a yoke of oxen and $1 in money. Hence they had no other alternative except to work. Our subject was married, January 1, 1854, to Miss Levisa Davison, by whom he had six children—Martha, Nelson, Bula, Isom, Columbus and Thomas. Nelson married, had one son, and then lost his wife; the child is with Mr. Starbuck, and its name is Wesley. Mrs. Starback died March 4, 1878. Mr. S. was a soldier in the late war, in Company E, Fifty-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and was in the battle of Shiloh, where he was detailed as cook. He served to the end of the term for which he enlisted, and was honorably discharged. He has since been engaged in stock-raising and farming. He has some of the finest stock in the county.

SAMSON SUMMERS, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in this county October 24, 1834, and is a son of Henry and Julia Summers. He was reared on a farm and educated in the common schools. He has lived in various places, and served in the war three years, in Company H, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Atlanta, Jonesboro and Lovejoy Station. He was mustered teamster at first, and it was only by his own request that he went into battle. He was married, April 3, 1859, to Miss Maria Coats, by whom he has had eight children, seven living—Keturah E., William W., Sherman, Cynthia A., Columbus M., Carl H. and Herman O. Mr. Summers owns 43 acres in White River Township and 200 acres in Missouri.

CHARLES SUMMERS, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Augusta County, Va., October 29, 1806, and is a son of Henry and Polly Summers, also natives of Virginia. He was brought up on a farm, and attended school in a log cabin, and sat on slab seats. He came to Dayton, Ohio, in 1827, and some time afterward returned to Virginia. He came back to Dayton in 1830, and in 1831 came to this county and selected a choice farm, which he still owns and occupies. He returned to Dayton, Ohio, after making the purchase, and there cut wood for 25 cents a cord to obtain money with which to pay for his land. He married Miss Susan Ludy February 28, 1833, and the following year he brought his young wife to the Hoosier forest. He built a small cabin in the woods and cut out a piece of one log to admit the light. For seventeen years he hauled goods from Cincinnati and Dayton, and at such times as he had no hauling to do he would chop and haul two cords of wood to Winchester per day. Mr. Summers bought his first nails and first tobacco (dogleg) in Winchester with coonskins; he also paid his taxes with coonhides. He donated the timber for the first church in Winchester. He had to go to Richmond to mill, a distance of twenty-five miles. Mr. Summers did a vast amount of hard work. He cut (from the stump) and split 1,400 rails for George Hiatt for seven bushels of wheat, which was then worth 37 cents per bushel in currency. This he accomplished in seven days, besides going two miles to get some corn cracked also. Where can there be found a man who can do as much at the present time? In those days, they had no stoves, but cooked in pots and Dutch ovens. Mr. and Mrs. Summers had seven children, of whom six are living—Elvina, John, Elizabeth, Sarah A., Charles W. and David. Mrs. Summers died September 15, 1847, and he again married, in June, 1848, this time to Miss Rebecca Ludy, a sister of his former wife. They had one child—Elzina. Mr. S. now owns 113 acres of valuable land, which is underlaid by a stratum of gravel from two and a half to three feet beneath the soil. Although Mr. Summers has worked very hard, it was not for self only, for he has always liberally assisted schools and churches, and has ever been ready and willing to aid the poor and needy.

ANDREW JACKSON SMITH.

Andrew Jackson Smith has been a resident of Randolph County all his life, and is engaged in farming and running a saw-mill, in both of which enterprises he has been quite successful. He is the son of Durant and Elizabeth Smith, and was born September 15, 1842. He is the tenth of a family of twelve children, of whom ten are living. His parents were born and raised in North Carolina, and came to this State and county in the year 1830, where his father still resides, his mother having died November 23, 1879. Andrew's youth was uneventful, save that he was compelled to battle against poverty, and for this reason his education is very much limited, having been received from the district schools of the county and one term at Fountain City, Wayne County. Realizing the want of an education himself, he is a strong advocate of popular education, and is making every effort and sacrifice to educate his children. His oldest son, Arthur, is at this time attending the Winchester High School. Mr. Smith was married to Miss Elizabeth H. Hobbick September 15, 1864. His wife is an amiable Christian lady, and is a native of this county, and was born January 30, 1845. She is the daughter of Christian and Christina Hobbick, who were natives of Germany and came to this country about fifty years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are the parents of seven interesting children, all of whom are living, as follows: Arthur D., born September 16, 1865; Milo V., March 3, 1867; Ida L., November 23, 1869; Della V., September 24, 1872; William J., March 31, 1875; Mary C. E., October 31, 1877; Bessie A., April 7, 1881. Mr. Smith is owner and proprietor of a farm of eighty-five acres, under a high state of cultivation. He has recently erected a beautiful two-story frame residence, which is both convenient and commodious, an exact sketch of which is given in this work. In addition to farming, Mr. Smith has owned and run a saw-mill for the most part since 1872. This mill is in good repair, and he has been quite successful in this enterprise. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are acceptable members of the Society of Friends, the former having a birthright in the church, and the latter has been a member for about fifteen years. Mr. Smith has always been an active Republican, and although never having asked for an office has been of much service to the party of his choice. He is active in all the moral reforms of the day. He and his excellent wife are useful members of the church and honored and respected citizens of the county.

LARMON W. SHERMAN is a country merchant, and resides at New Dayton, White River Township. He was born in Greene County, N. Y., August 7, 1832, and is a son of Pardon Sherman, who died in the spring of 1882. Pardon Sherman was a second cousin of Gen. W. T. Sherman; Mary Sherman, widow of Pardon, still resides near her son Larmon. Our subject was educated in the common schools and the old Randolph County Seminary. He began life by teaching school; he began mercantile business at New Dayton, Franklin Township, in 1855, and continued till 1865, when he went to Minnesota. He remained there till 1870, when he returned to New Dayton. While in Minnesota, he sold drugs and groceries. In 1875, he erected a business house on the opposite side of the road where he had been engaged, where he now holds the fort. He carries an investment of over $50,000, it being a general assortment of all kinds of goods. He has sold in a single year $12,000 worth of goods. He was married, in 1855, to Miss Sarah Mann. They had one child, which died, and Mrs. Sherman died in Minnesota. In 1875, Mr. Sherman married Mary Ullum. They are both members of the M. E. Church.

SIMPSON SCOTT, stock dealer, Winchester, was born in Greens Fork Township February 1, 1827, and is a son of Edward and Chloe Scott, who were natives of North Carolina, and who came to this county in 1817. They settled in Green Fork Township, in the timber, and erected a small cabin for their pioneer abode. They had to go to Richmond to mill. Our subject received his education in a log cabin, while sitting on a slab bench. This was three and a half miles from his home, and was a subscription school. The room was warmed by a huge fire-place in one end. He was married, in 1852, to Miss Hannah Smith, daughter of Durant Smith. They had ten children, seven living—Pennina, L. Columbus, Ellen, Durant M., Annie, Walter and Lizzie. Mrs. Scott died, and he again married, this time to Mrs. Mary Denton, whose maiden name was Ashevill. By her he has one child—Mollie L. Mrs. Scott has been married twice before, and had one child by each husband; their names are Franklin S. Smith and Freddie J. Denton.

FRANCIS M. SINGER, tile maker, Saratoga, was born in Darke County, Ohio, December 4, 1841, and is a son of Benjamin F. and Mary Singer. He came to this county in 1860, and married Miss Mary Shanafelt, on the 9th of September, the same year. They have six children—Joanna, William F., Albert F., Charley, Samantha and Ursula. Mr. Singer established a tile factory on Section 2, White River Township, in 1877, and is making the best tile in the State, according to the decision of the tile makers' convention, in 1880. So popular is his tile that he cannot supply one-fourth the demand. During the year 1880, he made 9,000 rods, and by January 1, 1881, not a tile was left.

JOHN TISOR resides in White River Township. He was born in Miami County, Ohio, January 12, 1824, and is a son of Austin and Susannah Tisor, the former a native of North Carolina, and the latter of South Carolina. Our subject was reared upon a farm, and learned early to grub and pick brush and roll logs. His only school advantages were such as the country then afforded, a few days each year. He came to this county in 1838, when but fourteen years old. His parents died when he was quite young, and he was thrown upon his own resources. He began to battle with the cold world, and by his great energy and indomitable industry, he soon provided for himself a home. He has cleared and improved three farms. The first land he occupied was an unbroken forest, and he had to cut and clear away the brush before he could erect his cabin. On the 21st day of March, 1844, he was married to Elizabeth Carter, daughter of Thomas Carter, who came to this county in 1829. Mr. and Mrs. Tisor have had six children, of whom five are now living, viz., William R., who is a physician; Thomas H., who is a farmer; May M., who is intermarried with Henry T. Study; Enos M., who is an artist; and Allen A., who is a farmer. Mr. Tisor has given each of his children a farm. He now has left for the future home and comforts of his remaining days ninety-five acres of valuable and well-improved land. His life has been a success, and crowned with achievements worthy of imitation.

JOHN VAN PELT.

This honored citizen of Randolph County was born in Highland County, Ohio, June 30, 1829. He is the son of Elijah and Lucy (Bethel) Van Pelt, and is the third of a family of four children, of whom three are now living. His father was born in Ohio September 19, 1794. His mother is a native of Virginia, and was born May 14, 1798. His father was a farmer, and died in Clinton County, Ohio, April 1, 1872. After the death of her husband, his mother came to this county, and made her home with the subject of this sketch, where she died April 13, 1881. John was raised on a farm in Ohio, and received a fair education from the common schools of that State. He was married to Milicent Morris, September 4, 1852. She is the daughter of David and Nancy (Cooper) Morris, and was born in Fayette County, Ohio, July 3, 1833. Mr. and Mrs. Van Pelt lived in Clinton County, Ohio, until the year 1868, when they came to this county and located in Monroe Township, purchasing 352 acres of land, partially improved. They lived on this farm until September, 1880, when they sold out and purchased the farm where they now reside. This farm is well improved and conveniently located. It consists of 144 acres of excellent land, with 120 acres under cultivation. The farm buildings are in excellent repair, of modern architecture, and convenient and commodious. A sketch of these buildings is herewith given. Mr. and Mrs. Van Pelt are the parents of four children, all of whom are living, as follows: William A., born June 11, 1853; David, August 22, 1859; George, December 7, 1864; James, May 7, 1871. Their oldest son, William, is married, and is comfortably settled in Monroe Township, this county. Mr. Van Pelt is a stanch Republican, and true to the interests of the party. His excellent wife has been of great assistance to him in all of his undertakings, and is entitled to a share of the commendations for success. They are both honored and upright citizens, valuable members of society, and honored and beloved by their friends and neighbors.

EDWARD WRIGHT.

The subject of this biography was one of Randolph County's honored and respected citizens. He was born in Highland County, Ohio, August 18, 1816. He was the son of Judge John and Nancy (Brown) Wright, and was the oldest of a family of three children, all of whom are deceased. He came with his parents to this county February 2, 1817. His father entered 160 acres of land three-fourths of a mile northwest of Winchester, and lived on it for about seven years. He then sold out, and bought 100 acres of unimproved land, one mile west of Winchester, and lived on it for twenty-five years. He then sold out to Isaac Ray, and moved to Whitley County, this State, where he remained until his death, which occurred in 1847, and his wife died in the same county, June 5, 1873. Edward lived with his parents, following the occupation of farming most of the time until he was of age. He received a liberal education from the common schools, the best offered at that time. He was Deputy County Clerk for a time under Charles Conway, and Deputy Sheriff under James Beaman. He was married to Mary Ann Heaston, December 21, 1837. After marriage, he and his excellent wife settled on her father's farm, and remained for one year. They then bought 160 acres of land one-half mile south of Winchester, where they lived for one year, when they sold out to Christian Heaston, and moved back to Mrs. Wright's father, and remained about four years. They then bought 160 acres where his widow now resides, and moved upon it March 14, 1844. Mr. Wright subsequently added to this farm, by purchase, until it consisted of 268 acres, with 183 acres under a high state of cultivation. He and his wife accumulated property very rapidly, and prior to Mr. Wright's death they came into possession of 1,090 acres of land in this county. This land has all been deeded to their children, with the exception of 444 acres, which is owned and controlled by Mrs. Wright. Mr. Wright died August 23, 1880. About eleven years previous to his death he had the misfortune of breaking a limb caused by a fall, which was soon followed by a stroke of paralysis from which he never fully recovered, and caused him much suffering. Up to the time of the accident he had been a man of strong constitution, and did a great amount of hard physical labor. He was noted for his industry, frugality and generosity. In politics, he was a stanch Democrat. His genial and affable manner, in connection with his hospitality, won for him a large circle of devoted and admiring friends. He was a kind and devoted husband, an affectionate father and honored citizen. Of the direct descendants of the Wright family none live to perpetuate the name.

MARY ANN (HEASTON) WRIGHT, widow of Edward Wright, was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, April 13, 1819. She is the daughter of David and Catharine Heaston, and is the oldest of a family of four children, three of whom are living. She came to this State and county with her parents when she was nine months old, and lived for some time in a rude pioneer cabin without doors, windows or chimney, and one row of puncheons for a floor. She had to endure all of the trials and hardships of a pioneer life, being deprived of educational advantages and many other necessaries of life. Yet these deprivations gave her a discipline which was of great value to her in after years. She remained with her parents until her marriage, which was at the age of eighteen years and eight months. She and her husband were neighbors' children, and had known each other all of their lives. Mrs. Wright is the mother of four living children (one having died in infancy), as follows, Catharine Monks, born February 20, 1839; Eliza Lykins, September 18, 1841; Nancy Curry, May 11, 1844; Mary A. Romizer, June 1, 1848. Mrs. Wright is the grandmother of ten children, six boys and four girls. Since the death of her husband she has retained the homestead farm of 268 acres, and other land to the amount of 176 acres, in her own possession, and takes entire management thereof, assisted by her son-in-law, John Romizer. The homestead farm is well improved, being supplied with excellent and commodious buildings, a sketch of which is given in this work. Mrs. Wright is a woman of rare executive ability and forethought, is well preserved for one of her age, and possesses a great amount of energy and perseverance. She is a most genial and intelligent lady, and is honored and beloved by all who know her.

ISAAC WRIGHT. The subject of this sketch, a native of Virginia, born March 18, 1808. His parents were Francis and Agnes Wright, who came with their family to this county in 1835. The land was covered with a heavy growth of timber, and the Wrights, like others, were necessarily exposed to hard labor. They cut wheat with sickles for many years, and thrashed it with flails. Mr. Wright first married Miss Miranda Butts, who bore him one child, Sarah, who afterward died. He again married Miss Sarah Grady, by whom he had seven children, viz., Margaret, Frank, Patrick, Jacob, James, John and Isaac. Mr. Wright is again left a widower. He owns 160 acres of valuable land near Winchester, on the bottoms of White River.

ISRAEL WRIGHT, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Warren County, Ohio, October 23, 1812, and is a son of Samuel and Sarah Wright, deceased. He was reared on a farm, and educated in a subscription school. He came to this county with his parents in 1830, and assisted in clearing the farm. He was married, November 21, 1834, to Miss Elizabeth Huffman, by whom he had eight children, six living, viz., Zimri, Marion, Austin, Elias, Stephen and Sarah C. One son, Uriah, lost his life while fighting for his country in the late war, and was buried on Island No. 27; Austin and Elias were also in the war. Mrs. Wright died August 20, 1880, loved and respected by all. She was an affectionate wife and a tender mother. Mr. Wright owns 238 acres of valuable land.

HARVEY WYSONG.

In 1818, David Wysong ventured into Hoosierdom and settled in White River Township; he married a daughter of John Irvin. David Wysong was the father of twelve children, of whom Harvey Wysong was the eldest. Harvey was born in Randolph County, Ind., September 4, 1823; he wielded the woodman's ax, the handspike, mattock and spade during all his early life; he was educated in a round-log cabin which was furnished in substantial style. The seats in that schoolhouse were of split slabs, and the writing desks consisted of a broad board resting on slanting pins in the wall. He learned the brick-mason trade, and has laid more wall than any other mason in the county; he has an extensive and permanent reputation in his trade; he owns 390 acres of land, and at present gives his time principally to the culture of his fields. In 1874, he was married to Miss Mary Summers, a native of this county, and daughter of Charles Summers. They had one child, whose name is Charles L., who was born May 27, 1875. Mrs. Summers died the same year. She lies at rest in Fountain Park Cemetery, where her husband has erected to her memory a very sightly monument. Mr. Wysong is a Mason, and is very favorably known in the county.

BENJAMIN F. WELLS is a native of Brown County, Ohio, and was born October 18, 1834. His parents were Adam and Elizabeth Wells, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Kentucky. Mr. Wells was raised a farmer-boy, and his educational advantages were none other than those furnished by the common schools; he went to Illinois in 1856, and engaged in farming for one year, when he went to Minnesota, but returned by way of Illinois to his native county; he soon after came to Spencer County, Ind., purchased some timbered land and engaged in lumbering for some time. In 1861, he enlisted in the three months' service in Company I, Twelfth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served his time for Uncle Sam. October 18, 1866, he married Miss Amelia Cone, by whom he had eight children; of these but three are living, viz., Ambrose H., Marietta V. and Adda A. Mr. Wells came to this county in 1870, and settled in the woods, and now he has a nice, well-improved farm of over 130 acres, besides about seventy acres of timber. This has been accomplished only by hard work and wise management. Mrs. Wells is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a Mason.

JOEL H. WILLIAMS.

Joel H. Williams was born July 7, 1850, in the town of Newport (now Fountain City), Wayne County, Ind.; he is the son of Nathan H. and Mary A. Williams, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Ohio. When about two years of age, he came to Randolph County with his parents, who located upon a farm near Olive Branch; his mother died when her son was quite young, and his father has since been twice married; his first schooling was obtained in the old log cabin, with slab benches without backs for seats, and the slanting board from the wall for a writing desk, while his teachers made pens of quills for him and the other scholars. "Lib" Stark, his first teacher, had her bed in the schoolhouse, and cooked her meals on the school stove. At the age of nineteen years, Joel left home to begin the battle of life for himself, and entered the employ of John Clayton, working for him by the month. He had qualified himself by hard study, and in the fall of the same year in which he left home, procured a license to teach school. Since that time, he has been engaged alternately in teaching school during the winter and attending school and working at the carpenter's trade during the summer, excepting about three years of this time, during which he was engaged in mercantile pursuits. He has been a student at the Farmland Graded Schools, the Ridgeville College and the

RESIDENCES OF LEVI HILL AND SANFORD WOODBURY (SON IN LAW)
GREENS FORK TP. RANDOLPH CO. IND.

Pen Art Schools at Delaware, Ohio, and has a diploma for plain and ornamental writing, awarded by the latter institution. He has taught school in the townships of Monroe, Franklin, Washington, Greene and White River, and is recognized as one of the most proficient and successful teachers. On the 25th of December, 1875, he was married to Miss Marietta Wright, daughter of Amos and Delliah Wright. This union is blessed with two children, viz., Carlton O., born November 19, 1876; Lyra Myrtle, born August 8, 1881. In politics, Mr. Williams is a Republican, and both himself and wife are members of the Society of Friends. He has prepared a genealogical record of the families of both his parents, and for the past ten years has kept a diary of passing events; he has also written some poetical effusions, which he expects to publish. Mrs. Williams' father died March 10, 1879; her grandfather was a soldier in the war of 1812.

GREAR N. WILLIAMS was born in Wayne County, Ind., May 1, 1843. He was reared on a farm, and educated in the common schools; he is a son of Joshua Williams, who was a native of North Carolina and born October 19, 1817. The elder Williams moved with his family to this county in 1862, and settled near Maxville on a farm, where he died January 18, 1875. The mother of our subject was Amanda C. Graham, before her marriage with Joshua Williams. There were thirteen children in the Williams family, and all are now living. At the beginning of the war, July 29, 1861, when eighteen years old, Grear N. enlisted in Company B, Nineteenth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and on the 31st day of December, 1863, re-enlisted at Culpeper Court House, Va. In December of 1864, the Nineteenth, Fourteenth, Seventh and Twentieth were consolidated and called the Twentieth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, in which organization Grear served till July 12, 1865, when he was discharged by reason General Order No. 26, Army of Tennessee. Under his first enlistment he was a member of the First Brigade, First Army Corps, Army of the Potomac. This brigade was known as the Iron Brigade, and participated in the following engagements; Gainsville, August 18, 1862; Second Bull Run, August 29-30, 1862; South Mountain, September 14, 1862; Fredericksburg, December 13, 14, 15, 1862; Antietam, September 17, 1862; Fitzhues' Crossing, April 29, 1863; Gettysburg, July 1, 2, 3, 1863; Chancellorville, May 1, 2, 3, 1863; Spottsylvania, Wilderness, Laurel Hill, Cold Harbor, battle of Chantilly, in the night of August 30, 1862; North Anna, Petersburg and siege of Petersburg, Hatcher's Run, Weldon Railroad, Five Forks, Appomattox Court House, Sulphur Springs, August 25, 1862; Rappahannock Station, August 22, 23, 24, 1862; Thornburg's Mills, August 6, 1862; Louisville, September 11 and 22, 1861. Grear N. was present and participated in all the above-named conflicts, and was wounded at the first day's fight at Gettysburg, for which disability he is now a pensioner; he was also wounded six other times—but slightly. After the war, he came home and engaged in farming and stock-raising, in which business he has been prosperous. On the 10th day of December, 1874, he was married to Miss Nancy J. Morrow, a daughter of John Morrow.

B. F. WILMORE, farmer, P. O. Winchester, son of Willis C. and Sarah Wilmore, was born in Winchester, Ind., January 3, 1842. Since six years of age, he has lived upon a farm, except one year, which time he served in the late war in Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He was married, June 2, 1868, to Miss Flora Anderson, a native of Holmes County, Ohio, and daughter of John Anderson (deceased). This union has been blessed with three children—Edwin C., Troy A. and Clarence H. Mr. Wilmore is a member of the Baptist Church, and Mrs. Wilmore is a Presbyterian.

JESSE W. WILMORE, farmer, P. O. Winchester, son of W. C. Wilmore, of this township, was born near Lynnville, this county, May 26, 1838. He spent all his life on the farm, except eight years when a boy, which time he lived in Winchester, and attended school there while his father attended to the duties of his office. He was married, August 7, 1864, to Miss Helen, daughter of George Swan. She was a native of Scotland. They had seven children, of whom five are living, viz., George, Frank, Cora, Lyda and Rolland. Mrs. Wilmore died November 7, 1874, respected by all. Mr. Wilmore has filled the office of School Director for near twenty years.

GREENSFORK TOWNSHIP.

Greensfork is bounded north by Wayne and White River, east by Ohio, south by Wayne County, and west by Washington, being in the form of a parallelogram, except that a "pocket" projects toward the northwest, being in size one mile by one mile and a half.

It was first settled in April, 1814, and, with White River, first created in 1818. Its size as it now exists, is about forty-seven sections, seven miles north and south, and six and a half miles from east to west, besides the "pocket." It includes the head-waters of Nolan's and Green's Forks, of Greenville Creek, and a little of the head of Dismal Creek. Greensfork includes chiefly parts of Towns 16 and 17, Range 1 west, and Towns 18 and 19, Ranges 14 and 15 east. The northwestern part is level and somewhat low; the other parts are more or less rolling. The land was originally heavily timbered, but farms now cover it everywhere, only forest enough being left for farm use.

The first settler was Thomas W. Parker, April, 1814, on Fractional Section 32, Town 16, Range 1, just east of the old boundary, and just north of Wayne County line, not very far west of Arba. Other settlers in 1814, so far as now known, were:

John W. Thomas, summer of 1814, entered land July 21, 1814.

Clarkson Willcutts, south half of southeast quarter of Section 28, Town 16, Range 1, entered January 19, 1814.

Ephraim Bowen, October 22, 1814, northeast quarter of Section 28, Town 16, Range 1 (residence of James D. Bowen).

Ephraim Overman, Section 27, Town 16, Range 1, settled November, 1814.

James Cammack, west of Arba, northeast quarter of Section 33, Town 16, Range 1, entered January 21, 1814.

Eli Overman, west part of Arba, southeast quarter of Section 33, Town 16, Range 1, entered December 13, 1814.

Jesse Small, near Isaac Jordan's, Section 22.

John Peale, south of Ephraim Bowen's, 1815.

Obadiah Small, present site of Spartansburg, 1815.

John Small had the Thomas Hough place, north of Spartansburg, 1815. John Cammack, near Arba, came in 1816.

John James, settled between 1816 and 1818.

Reuben Clark, settled near the toll-gate, north of Arba, in 1819. John Mann, moved to near Gilead in 1820.

Thornton Alexander (colored), northeast of Spartansburg, 1822.

David Semans, in Greensfork Township, in 1825.

Windsor Wiggs, Sr., southeast of Spartansburg, on Section 23, Town 16, Range 1, in 1826.

William Locke, purchased the Dan Comer place, north of Spartansburg, in 1828. Stephen Barnes, various places, 1830.

F. G. Morgan, Spartansburg, 1830.

Thomas Middleton, where he lives, 1830, Section 2, Town 16, Range 1. Willis C. Wilmore, west of Arba, 1831.

Joseph Shaw, southeast corner of county, 1831.

Abner Cadwallader, west of Arba, 1833.

Thomas Cadwallader, west of Arba, 1833. W. A. Macy, 1833.

John Randle, east of Spartansburg, 1833 (colored), Section 14, Town 16, Range 1. Harrison Anderson, 1835.

Stocksdale, northwest of Spartansburg, 1835.

J. W. Clark, Spartansburg, 1836.

W. Taylor, west of Spartansburg, 1836.

In 1828, there were near Spartansburg as follows:

David Bowles, Willson Anderson place.

George Bowles, Widow Moore place.

Henry Bailey, on the McKim place.

Stanton Bailey, Moorman farm.

Cornelius Overman, Crist farm, Section 14, Town 16, Range 1.

William Osborn, Ben Elliot farm.

Philip Hockett had lived on the Sam Middleton place, but had gone.

Richard Corbett, on his old place, Section 22, Town 16, Range 1. Widow Small, Hough place.

James Jackson's place had been settled, Section 2, Town 16, Range 1. James Peale's place had been settled.

Daniel Comer's place had two cabins. William Arnold.

Frederick Fulghum. The above account is as full as it can now be made, but of course there were many more.

The "Quaker Trace" was cut through in 1817.

There was a mill at Jessup's very early—before 1821.

For first school, etc., see settlement of county.

For mills, etc., see Spartansburg, Arba, etc.

Greensfork is a fine township, much of it well improved, with good dwellings and farm buildings. Four pikes pass through it, as follows: Bartonia & Arba pike, Lynn & Spartansburg pike. Tampico pike, and new free pike, in process of construction from Wayne County line, extending east of Spartansburg and Bartonia northward to Union City.

A railroad has been made through the township, about midway between Spartansburg and Arba, from Columbus, Ohio, to Indianapolis, being an extension of the Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western (I., B. & W.).

Greensfork Township has good schools. Spartansburg, Arba, Pinhook and Edgewood (colored), are large and graded. Nine of the houses are brick.

Religious services were early established—by the Friends, at Arba, 1815; by the Methodists, at Ephraim Bowen's, in 1815; by the Methodists, at Spartansburg (William McKim's), in 1833.

The entries of land, as given in the records, are chiefly as follows, up to 1829 inclusive:

[NOTE.—The times of entry and of settlement do not agree—e. g., the first settler, Thomas W. Parker, April, 1814, was the fifth as to date of entry, August 16, 1814. And so in other cases. The designations in the land entries, etc., are explained thus: S. E. 28, 16, 1 W., 160, January 19, 1814, means southeast quarter of Section 28, Township 16, Range 1 west, 160 acres, entered January 19, 1814. N., S., E., W., N. E., S. E., etc., refer to the points of the compass, as north, south, etc., etc.]

Clarkson Willcutts, S. E. 28, 16, 1 W., January 19, 1814.

James Cammack, east half Section —, 16, 1 W., 323.16, January 22, 1814.

Ephraim Bowen, N. E. 28, 16, 1 W., 160, April 13, 1814.

Thus it appears that the entries during each successive year from 1814 to 1829, inclusive, were as given below:

1814—Seven entries, 1,269.70 acres.
1815—One entry, 159.50 acres.
1816—Eight entries, 809.18 acres.
1817—Seven entries, 1,278.11 acres.
1818—Six entries, 496.91 acres.
1819—Two entries, 317.30 acres.
1820—Four entries, 381.24 acres.
1821—Eight entries, 799.87 acres.
1822—One entry, 79.60 acres.
1823—Three entries, 197.80 acres.
1824—One entry, 78.92 acres.
1825—No entries.
1826—Six entries, 1,239.36 acres.
1827—Three entries, 242.12 acres.
1828—Five entries, 400.36 acres.
1829—Seven entries, 561.26 acres.
Total, seventy-six entries; 8,628.53 acres.

The average for each entry is 114 acres. In one year, 1825, no entries were made. In 1815, 1822 and 1824, one entry each took place. In 1819, two entries; in 1823 and 1827, three entries; in 1820, four entries; in 1818 and 1826, six entries each year; in 1817, seven entries were made; in 1816 and 1821, eight entries were effected.

The entries of land and the settlements may not agree. Some entered land and did not move to it; some sold their entries; some put others upon their lands to make an improvement.

Up to the beginning of 1830, a little more than one-fourth of the land had been entered; probably forty acres to a clearing would be a fair estimate, giving about three thousand acres cleared, or 10 per cent of the whole, in seventeen years.

Greensfork contains the following sections:

Township 16 north, Range 1 west—Sections 1 to 4, 9 to 16, 21 to 29, 32 to 36, all inclusive.

Township 17 north, Range 1 west—Sections 33 to 36, inclusive. Township 18 north, 15 east—5, 6, 7 and 18.

Township 19 north, 15 east—17, 18, 19, 20, 29, 30, 31, 32.

Township 18 north, Range 14 east—East half of 2, east half of 11, 12, 13, east half of 14.

Township 19 north, Range 14 east—east half of 11, 12, 13, east half of 14 and 23, 24, 25, east half of 26, and 35, 36.

Many of the sections are fractional, since the old boundary intersects the townships in an angular direction from north to south, and fractions are formed on both sides of the boundary line. The surveys both west and east from the meridians each way are made to the boundary.

There are about forty-seven square miles, and about thirty thousand acres in the whole township.

The entries in succeeding years were more rapid, since, by 1840, nearly the whole county had been taken up.

Greesfork is a large, thriving and prosperous township. There is only one chief thoroughfare across its territory, and that is the oldest in the region—the "Quaker Trace," from Richmond to Fort Wayne. It has no railroad, except a new one in progress, in 1882, its nearest railroad town being Lynn, on the Grand Rapids road. Union has been its chief point, but, since a pike was built connecting Spartansburg with Lynn, much of the business from Greensfork finds its way to Lynn.

Greensfork is occupied by a population largely noted for industry and thrift, for quiet, peaceable habits, and general morality and good order. For many years, no intoxicating drinks have been sold openly within its limits. Its schools maintain a high grade of excellence, and it has an unusual proportion of churches and church members. There are at least seven churches in the township, occupied by the various denominations. The churches are Friends, at Arba; Methodist Episcopal, at Spartansburg; Disciples, at Spartansburg and Gilead; United Brethren, at Pinhook and in the west part of the township; African Methodist, at Mt. Zion; and possibly others.

Two of the schools of Greensfork are of a superior grade—the township school at Spartansburg, and the Union Literary Institute at Edgewood, in the east part of the township.

Ditching has been performed extensively, especially in the west part of the township; and that region, formerly too low and wet for settlement, has become filled with an active and thriving population.

There are many splendid farms, with substantial residences. Several saw-mills have been and are in operation within its limits. Under-draining with covered tile-ditches is in the process of introduction throughout the township.

This entry of Foster's includes Philip Holland's late residence, south of the Griffis farm, northeast quarter of Section 36, Township 17, Range 1.

Greensfork was entered between 1814 and 1839, inclusive. First settlement was made in Greensfork; first entry occurred in Wayne.

TOWNS.

Arba—Henry Cammack, proprietor; recorded October 30, 1855; fourteen lots; Meridian street, north and south; location, on pike leading from Bartonia to Richmond, four miles south of Spartansburg, on Section 33, Township 16, Range 1.

The town must have been greatly enlarged since its first platting, since the dwellings extend a long distance on both sides of the pike running through the place, there being probably thirty or forty residences within the limits of the village.

It is in the southern part of the township. William Fulghum had the first store. Noah Turner had the first smith shop; Isaac Parker had a wagon shop; William Parker had a harness shop after awhile. Friends' Meeting-House (a pole cabin) was built in 1815, about forty years before the town began. The first grist-mill was established by Parker & Wright. They owned a saw-mill also.

The merchants have been William Fulghum, Joseph Fulghum, Henry Cammack, H. & H. W. Horn, Samuel Pierce, Bowen & Horn, Hill & Gordon, Elihu Cammack, Jonathan Rogers, J. Newbern (grocery), etc.

The smith shops have been run by Noah Turner, Silas Bennett, Hosea Gist, Jesse F. Parker, Morgan, Bush, Reece.

Wagon shops—Isaac Parker, Joel Parker.

Harness shop—William Parker.

Physicians—Messrs. Young, Kelly, Hunt, Heiner & Son, Meek.

Present business: Two stores, Horn & Bowen, Rogers; two smith shops, Bush, Reece; one wagon shop, Joel Parker; one saw-mill, F. C. Fulghum; one meeting-house, Friends; one public school, two rooms; two physicians, Drs. Heiner and Meek; one dress-maker, Mrs. White; one paint shop, Joseph Arnold.

The grist-mill was burned three or four years ago, and has not been rebuilt.

Principal residents: Dr. Heiner, Joel Parker, Jesse Thomas, Jonathan Rogers, S. C. Bowen, H. W. Horn, Joseph Arnold, Dr. Meek, Thomas Bush, E. F. Reece, F. C. Fulghum, etc.

Residents in the vicinity: Antony Clements, near southeast of town; William Hunt, south of town; Henry Horn, south of town; Emery Kelly, west of town; Jacob Horn, east of town; James C. Bowen, north of town; William Horn, north of town; Clarkson Charles, north of town; Mrs. Thomas, east of town; Silas Horn, northeast of town; Henry Thomas, northeast of town;

Joshua Thomas, north of town; James D. Bowen, northwest of town (old Bowen place).

There is one pike, north and south, extending from Bartonia north to Richmond, etc., south. There are no secret orders.

The nearest railroad points are Lynn, on the Indiana & Grand Rapids Railroad, six and a half miles; and Fountain City, on the same road, six miles.

Arba contains about thirty houses and one hundred people.

Arba is a neat village, in a superb country. The region is a splendid, rolling tract, rich and fertile and well improved.

The first meeting-house in the county was at Arba—built by Friends. The first school was taught in that house by Eli Overman.

The earliest settlement in the county was in the region around this town, and a splendid region it is, truly.

The country is rich, the farmers are wealthy. The dwellings are neat, and many of them elegant; the society is good, the schools are well taught, and the general tone of morals and manners is of a high character.

The place has always been noted, in fact, for its strict standard of temperance and sobriety. The region was settled largely by Methodists and Friends; and their teachings and practice have maintained a superior standard of intelligence, morality and thrift.

Distances: Bloomingport, eight miles; Bartonia, seven and four-fifths miles; Huntsville, fifteen miles; Lynn, six and a half miles; Losantville, eighteen and a half miles; Spartansburg, three and nine-tenths miles; Union City, fifteen and one-tenth miles; Winchester, fifteen and seven-tenths miles; Rural, ten and a half miles; Richmond, thirteen miles; Fountain City, six miles; Tampico, ten miles; Bethel, six miles.

Newburg (Spartansburg)—William McKim, proprietor; location, Section 10, Township 16, Range 1, on the "Quaker Trace," now the pike from Richmond to Bartonia; Moorman Way, County Surveyor; twenty lots. Streets: North and south, Main street, four poles wide; east and west, street, three poles wide. Plat made 1832; recorded February 18, 1833.

Spartansburg (includes the above)—William McKim, proprietor; fifty-five lots. Streets: North and south, Mill, Main, Sycamore; east and west, First, Second; recorded Oct. 28, 1834.

McKim's First Addition—William McKim, proprietor; seven lots; recorded November 17, 1848.

[Perhaps other additions have been made.]

The town is located on Section 10, Township 16, Range 1, on the old "Quaker Trace," four miles north of Arba and three and nine-tenths miles south of Bartonia, on the Arba pike. It was laid out in 1832 by William McKim. In 1835 the residents of the town were about as follows: William McKim, farmer, on the slope of the hill south; George W. Emberson, merchant; William Dukes, merchant; William Locke, wagon-maker; John Leech, millwright; William N. Jackson, cabinet shop; Thomas McKim, tin shop; James Fires, carpenter; Joel Locke, blacksmith; Mrs. Thomson.

Some of the resident farmers were at that time Samuel Middleton, one mile east, Section 11, Township 16, Range 1; George Bowles, John Randle place, east of town; Isaac Mann, south of town; Jesse Clark, Hough place; William Jessup, Dan Comer place; Robert Love, Campbell place; Thomas Middleton, where he is now; James Jackson, there yet; Edward Jackson, northeast of town; Joseph Jackson, northeast of town; Richard Corbett, near the Jordan place; Hezekiah Cartwright, Frank Morgan place.

Of course, everything was new, and the whole country was "in the woods." Most of the houses were cabins, and all was rough and primitive. Spartansburg has grown from a "huddle," with a few log cabins among the beech trees, to a thriving country village in the midst of a beautiful, fertile and highly improved region. The town stands on a fine rising ground, overlooking a splendid country. Some of the views in the vicinity are superb, especially the prospect from the school building south of town on the valley east and south, which can hardly be equaled in the county. There are many fine residences in the region, among which are James Ruby's, north of town, on the pike; Isaac Jordan's, south of town, on the pike; Richard Bunch's, southeast, near State line; James Kelly's, southwest of town; Armstrong's, west of town; Chenoweth's, west of town; Daniel Comer's, north of town, etc.

Spartansburg has about fifty dwellings and 209 people.

The business of the town may be stated as follows, viz.:

Two dry goods stores—J. W. Hill, Amer Forkner, moved away.
One drug store—Jehiel Curtis (now John Taylor).
One grocery—English.
One tin shop—Chenoweth.
Two smith shops—H. McDonald, Williams & Bro.
Two hotels—John W. Hill, John Clark.
One butcher shop—Chenoweth (bought at Union City in spring of 1882).
Three shoe shops—Dunham, Manning, Bailey.
One milliner's store—Mrs. Humphrey (now Lillie F. Tucker).
Two saw-mills—Clark & Horn, and another.
One corn-mill.
One planing-mill.
One tile factory—Harlan Hunt.
Three physicians—Messrs. Morgan, Berry and Baldwin.
One cabinet shop—Wesley Locke.
One stock-dealer—W. M. Campbell.
One millwright—Wesley Locke.
One undertaker—Morgan & Curtis (Morgan is dead).
Two wagon shops—Messrs. Clark and Pierson.
One post office—Jehiel Curtis (now Taylor).
One graded school—Three rooms.
Two churches—Methodist Episcopal and Disciple.
One Justice—Thomas Hough (now J. W. Locke).
One Constable—James W. Clark.
One harness shop—Jehiel Curtis.

There are other prominent citizens, some of them quite old: William M. Taylor, William Locke, Squire Bowen, Graves, John Wiggs (farmer), John Barnes (machinist), John Mann, Abram Manning, James Knox (painter), John Knox, Mrs. Bowen, Mrs. ——— (weaver), C. F. Tucker (teacher), F. G. Morgan (farmer, dead), John Hough (farmer), Benj. Shaw (loan agent).

The village is quiet, orderly and respectable; the streets are graveled; the residences are very good, and many of them nearly new. The inhabitants have a worthy spirit of enterprise, and much business and trade is carried on. The town is beautiful for location; the streets are well shaded; and, altogether, the little country town is a pleasant place to live in. It has good access to the lines of commerce, having a daily hack and mail route to and from Richmond and Union City. It has also pikes to Richmond, Arba, Lynn, Bartonia, Union City and Greenville, Ohio, Tampico, Palestine, etc.

Among the citizens in the neighborhood are Wilson Anderson, farmer and County Commissioner, east; Jeremiah Middleton, farmer and hog-raiser, east; Harrison Anderson, farmer, south; Levi Hill, farmer and nurseryman, south; Alfred Ruby, farmer, north; James Ruby, farmer and hog-raiser, north; Clement F. Alexander, farmer, north; John F. Middleton, farmer and Township Trustee, northeast; William M. Campbell, farmer, west; Armstrong, farmer, west.

The school building is a two-story brick, suitable for a township high school, with three fine schoolrooms, two recitation rooms, etc. Two Sunday schools are in operation much of the time, and regular religious services in each of the churches.

A Masonic Lodge and an Odd Fellows Lodge are in the village. A large trade is carried on in hogs, grain, flaxseed, wagons, reapers, plows, etc. No saloon has existed in the place for years.

Some of its principal men have been as follows:

Physicians—Messrs. Ruby, Mitchell, Francisco, Purviance, Lawrence, Hector, Janes, Hindman, George Humphreys, Samuel Humphreys, Morgan, Berry, Baldwin.

Merchants—Messrs. Emberson, Dukes, McFarland, Pomroy, Fleming, Hough, Mauzy, E. L. Anderson, J. Shaw, F. G. Morgan, Custer, Shreeves, Cadwallader, Campbell, A. Barnes, John Barnes, Bowen Bros., Humphrey, Hill, George Morgan, Wiggs, Thomas, Henry Hill, Taylor, Hunt, Curtiss, Forkner, etc.

Altogether, Spartansburg is a fine little town. When first laid out, the name of the place was Newburg, but for some reason it was changed to Spartansburg. It is one of the few interior villages in Randolph which are having a vigorous and solid growth. A large number of houses have been erected during five or six years past. Its prosperity is now threatened by the fact that the new railroad east and west misses Spartansburg about one and a half miles. The people, however, do not seem alarmed at the prospect.

There are two hotels, two churches, a graded school, two saw mills, a corn-cracker, a planing-mill, a tile factory, two smith shops, two wagon shops, two shoe shops, etc., and a brisk business is maintained.

Distances: Union City, eleven miles; Ridgeville, twenty-one miles; Lynn, six miles; Huntsville, twelve and a half miles; Harrisville, ten miles; Farmland, twenty-one miles; Bartonia, four miles; Bloomingsport, ten miles; Winchester, twelve miles; Rural, nine miles.

BIOGRAPHY.

Such biographies as belong to Greensfork and are not arranged under other heads are given below in alphabetical order:

Nathan Arnold was born in North Carolina in 1783; married Elizabeth Horn, daughter of Jeremiah Horn, in North Carolina in 1804, and died in the same State in 1826.

Elizabeth Arnold, widow of Nathan Arnold, was born in North Carolina in 1785; came to Wayne Connty, Ind., in 1827, and afterward to Randolph. She had had eleven children. Seven came with their mother. She settled where Jonathan Rogers now lives, and died October 28, 1851, aged sixty-six years. Mrs. Arnold belonged to the Friends.

Stephen Barnes, Greensfork, was born in Johnson County, N. C., in 1793, and his wife, Cidna, in 1790. They had seven children, all born in Carolina, their names being Rebecca, Abington, Maria, Samuel Allison, Sarah, Henry, Adolphus. All are dead but the last.

The family left North Carolina in 1828, and came to Wayne County, Ind., two and a half miles south of Bloomingport, and, in 1830, into Randolph County. In 1833, they settled at Spartansburg. Here Mrs. Barnes died in 1854, and her husband in 1864.

Spartansburg had in 1835 a few log cabins, one store, a smith shop, etc.

Mrs. Barnes was of Quaker descent, but was herself a Baptist. They were upright, moral people, training their children to principles and habits of sobriety, industry and devotion.

Samuel A., one of his sons, died at Spartansburg suddenly in 1875. Samuel's family live there still, except his oldest daughter, who has lately married a son of Abraham Chenoweth, and has removed to a farm east of Bartonia.

The only surviving member of his family, the youngest son, Adolphus, has been for some years a resident of Union City, and his biography is given in connection with that place.

Ephraim Bowen, Sr., was born in Chester County, Penn., October 22, 1769; emigrated to Mason County, Ky.; married Hannah Hall in that State; came to Green County, Ohio, in 1795, seven years before Ohio became a member of the Union, and arrived at Randolph County, Ind., October 22, 1814, the day he was forty-five years old. He was the fourth settler in the wilds of Randolph. He brought six children with him, and two were born afterward, making eight in all. The children were Nancy, James C., Jane, Squire, Rebecca; Hannah, born before coming to Randolph; and Rachel and Ephraim L., born in this county.

We give a brief statement concerning each in order, as below:

Nancy, born in 1799, married Robert Thomson; had six children; family all dead.

James C., born in 1801, fourteen children, eight living (see below).

Jane, 1803, married Joshua Small, several children, both dead.

Squire, 1805, thirteen children, eleven living, resides at Spartansburg.

Rebecca, 1807, fourteen children, married David Semans, dead.

Hannah, married James Harrison, five children.

Rachel, married William Davis, several children; resides at St. Cloud County, Kan.

Ephraim L., twice married—Ruth Dwiggins, Anna Jane Corbett; eight children; they live in Greensfork, and have more than three hundred acres of land. He is a good farmer, a worthy citizen and an excellent man.

Ephraim Bowen entered the northeast quarter of Section 28, Township 16, Range 1. He was perhaps the first Justice in Greensfork. He died in 1858, at eighty-nine, and his wife in 1849.

James C. Bowen, Greensfork, son of Ephraim Bowen, was born in Greene County, Ohio, in 1801, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1814, being thirteen years old. He grew up in the woods, and married Elizabeth Jeffrey in 1829. They have had fourteen children. Nine grew up, and nine are living still, as follows:

Mary Ann (Harris), Wayne County, Ind., two children.

Benjamin P., lives near Gilead, has six children.

Ephraim J., had one child, and is dead.

James R., lives in Wayne County, Ind.; has two children.

Sarah E. (Harris), lives in Washington Township; has five children.

Lewis C., lives east of his father's; has five children.

Celestina (Flatters), near her father's; has five children.

Joseph W., lives at home, unmarried.

Isaac W., lives at home, three children.

James C. Bowen's wife died in 1879, sixty-eight years old. He is himself about eighty-one years old, and in somewhat feeble health. He was Justice of the Peace nine years. He is a Methodist in religion, and a Democrat in politics. He lives within half a mile of the spot where his father settled in the forest more than sixty-eight years ago. He owns a large farm, and has deeded considerable land to his children.

Many curious things are told by Mr. Bowen, Mr. Parker and other pioneers, many of which have been already given, and many more might be related. In the pole cabin meeting-house at Arba there was no place made for fire. They would burn wood into coals in a heap outside the cabin, and then carry a mass of coals into the house upon a kind of hand-barrow, partly covered with dirt. Thomas Parker used to care for the house and burn the wood into coals, and when Friends had come to meeting, they would help carry the "fire-place" inside the house, laden with a mass of living fire.

In early times, there was a distillery above Arba, south of William Horn's. It was owned by Elihu Cammack's uncle, Amos (Cammack?). Considerable whisky was drank at gatherings, and as a natural result, many got "groggy" by its use.

In the pigeon roosts, one locality of which was near Spartansburg, the trees were loaded with nests, built of sticks, somewhat like baskets swung to a limb, the inside being beautifully lined with soft and tender moss.

Pigeons would live on mast, and hogs also would keep fat nearly the year round, during the fall and winter upon the mast, and in the summer upon wild pea vines, which grew two or three feet high, and as thick as thick clover. Hogs would run in the woods and grow wild. The old ones would be marked, and then the whole drove running with these old ones would be claimed by the same owner. But where none in a herd were marked the herd belonged to nobody, and any person might kill such. They would fatten themselves wholly without corn, and entirely upon oak, hickory and beech mast.

Thomas Cadwallader was born in 1795, and came to Greensfork Township, Randolph Co., Ind., about 1830, in company with his brother Abner, settling in the woods. Abner died many years ago, but Thomas lived on, a steady, quiet, humble, thankful life, for fifty-two years, upon his little farm where first he pitched his tent under the "shadow of the beeches." He was all his life a member of the Society of Friends belonging at Arba. He departed this life at his residence, near Arba, Sunday, April 23, 1882, in his eighty-seventh year. The funeral services were held at the Arba Friends' Meeting-House, on Tuesday following his death, being attended by a large concourse of neighbors, relatives and friends. They were in the simple and impressive style common among the Quakers. His aged companion still survives him, being herself eighty-five years old. They had been married nearly or quite sixty-five years. He was born during the second term of Washington's administration, and was old enough to vote for James Monroe at his first election. His birth occurred the same year with Wayne's treaty with the Indians at Fort Greenville, Ohio, 1795, so that his life measures the whole interval since the power of the savage tribes over the great Western valley was broken by the master hand of Gen. Anthony Wayne. The change that has come over the world since Friend Thomas lay a babe in his cradle—how wondrous great!

Mr. Cadwallader lived all that long earthly life in the fear and love of God, and his happy spirit rests, doubtless, in the heavenly mansions.

His brother Abner, father of Hon. Nathan Cadwallader, came, as stated above, with his brother Thomas, but did not very long survive, dying in middle life. Some account of his family may be found along with the biography of Hon. N. Cadwallader, already mentioned.

John Cammack, Arba, was born in South Carolina; moved to Randolph County, Ind., in the fall of 1816, one-half mile west of Arba. He died in 1832, having had twelve children; seven were boys and five were girls. All the daughters and one son are dead.

James, born in 1813, married thrice, has nine children; resides in Hamilton County, Ind.

Henry, born in 1814, miller, merchant and carpenter; moved to Iowa twelve years ago, and lost five grown children in Iowa in three years; now lives at Dunreith, Henry Co., Ind.

Levi, born in 1815, twice married, has had ten children; moved to Iowa in 1836, before there was any land office opened in the State, and eleven years before Iowa became a State. He is a farmer and stock-dealer, and does a large business.

Elihu (see Wayne Township).——

Martin, born in 1818, married twice; lived in Henry County, Iowa; has had nine children; was a farmer; died in 1870.

Rachel, born in 1820, died young.

Joanna, born in 1821, had two children; died in Rush County, Ind., many years ago.

Mary Ann, born in 1824, died a child.

Elijah, born in 1826, farmer; fourteen children, nine living; Hamilton County, Ind., north of Indianapolis.

William, born in 1827, farmer, six children, near Xenia, Miami Co., Ind.

Mary, born in 1828, grown up, unmarried, died of consumption.

Sarah, born ——, had three or four children; died in Iowa long ago.

William Mitchell Campbell, stock-buyer and farmer, was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1818; married Mary Ann Rude in 1840; removed to Middleboro, Ind., in 1844; to Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1848; returned to Middleboro, Ind., in 1849; changed his residence to Randolph County, Ind., one and a half miles north of Lynn, in 1850; moved to Winchester in 1856; to Greensfork Township in 1860; and to Spartansburg in 1863. He has had six children, as follows:

Mary Jane (Crist), one child, resides at Spartansburg.

Esther Ann (Shoemaker, Rich), three children, resides west of Spartansburg.

William, three children, west of Spartansburg, farmer.

Sarah (Fulghum), two children, resides in Darke Co., Ohio.

Amaretta (Foreman, Fertich), Spartansburg.

Cinderella Maria (Tucker), Summitville, Mo.

W. M. Campbell is a farmer, stock-dealer and business man, active and enterprising, and carrying on a large and prosperous business, working his own land and renting several other farms besides. He was Sheriff of Randolph County during three terms —1856-60 and 1868–70—and was approved a faithful and energetic officer.

Mr. Campbell volunteered, July 13, 1861, in the Nineteenth Indiana Infantry, Company C, being commissioned Second Lieutenant, and receiving afterward promotion as Captain of Company I. After a service as Captain during twelve months, he resigned the position, but he became, after a time, Sutler of the regiment, continuing such for six or seven months. He was in the battles of Gainesville, second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, etc.

Mr. Campbell, though somewhat bluff and harsh in manner, is very active and energetic in whatever he undertakes, being an ardent Republican, earnest, outspoken and prominent. His age is about sixty-four years. He is hearty and robust and wide awake in public and private affairs.

William T. Chenoweth, born in Maryland in 1802, came to Ohio in 1838, and to Greensfork, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1840; married Keturah B. Murray in 1825; had twelve children—ten boys and two girls; eight boys and two girls grew up and were married, and seven sons and one daughter are living now.

W. T. Chenoweth owned, at his death, 276 acres, and his family now own 1,762 acres. He had in Maryland 120 acres, which he sold for $1,500, and he bought in Indiana at first 157 acres. The land now owned by his descendants is worth probably $70,000.

He was a steady, thoughtful man, quiet, reliable, discreet, economical enterprising and successful. In politics, he was a Whig and a Republican. He was not a church member, but inclined to the Baptists. Mr. Chenoweth died in 1876, seventy-four years old. His widow resides on the old homestead, hale and hearty, traveling round as she pleases.

James W. Clark, Spartansburg, was born at Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1828, and was brought to Wabash River in 1830. His father died in 1835, and his mother returned, in 1836, to the home of her father, Hezekiah Cartwright, at Spartansburg. He lived on the Frank Morgan place. Mrs. Clark went upon the Hough place. J. W. Clark was then eight years old, and Spartansburg has been his home ever since—forty-seven years. The village was then very small. Where the Disciple Church stands was at that time a buttonwood pond, the size of a town lot.

He was married, in 1854, to Mary E. Moore, daughter of Elymas Moore, whose widow, Ailsey Moore, died a year or so ago on their old place. They have had only one child, James Wesley, now a young man.

Mr. Clark was a carpenter for twenty years, and then took up wagon-making, which has been his business for ten or twelve years past.

He has also been Constable for twelve years, and, in the spring of 1880, was elected once more, and again in 1882. He is now, since F. G. Morgan's death, the oldest living resident of Spartansburg.

Mr. Clark is a steady, quiet, industrious, estimable citizen. He is a Republican, and an Episcopal Methodist.

Reuben Clark came from Pasquotank County, N. C., to Franklin County, Ind., in 1807, nine weeks and three days on the road, coming two hundred miles to the mountains. Route, Ward's Gap, Poplar Camp Furnace, New River, Abingdon, Wythe Court House, Crab Orchard, Nicholasville, Lexington, Nelson's Tavern, Gen. Gaines' plantation, twenty miles from the Ohio, crossing at North Bend, near Gen. Harrison's home. Two families came, besides two young men and an old soldier—fifteen in all. The men walked all the way, except three miles. They had two one-horse carts. Mr. Clark had nine children, four living now. He moved to Randolph County in 1819, north of Arba, near the toll-gate. James Clark, his oldest son, born about 1804, is hearty and strong, seventy-eight years old, loving to tell exploits of olden time. James' uncle had been up to the Whitewater country, and the children wished greatly to see the river "white like milk." When they reached the stream, father said, "Here is the Whitewater," when lo! it was just like any other water.

How suddenly was the picture painted by their youthful fancy dashed to atoms by the stern hand of sober fact! Thus has many another "castle in the air" been unceremoniously tumbled about the startled ears of the unlucky owner, and he has been left, homeless and desolate, to mourn his schemes all gone "agley." We have not a fuller statement concerning Mr. Reuben Clark, which is to us a source of regret.

Frederic Fulghum, Arba, born in North Carolina in 1799; married Piety Parker, sister of Thomas Parker; came to Arba in 1821; had nine children, six living and married; died in 1879, aged seventy-nine years ten months and twenty days. He was a Friend, a Whig and a Republican; he left South Carolina on account of slavery, having had an estate of slaves left him by his uncle, Frederic Bunn; but he would have nothing to do with the estate, and never even went to see about it.

Orpha Griffin (widow of William Griffin) came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1830; married Job Elliot in 1836; had four children, and died in St. Joseph County, Mich., about 1860.

Aaron Hill (son of William Hill) was born in 1810; came to Randolph County in 1823; married Piety Arnold in 1832; his first wife died in 1853, his second wife was Rachel Horner (in 1859), and she died in 1880. Mr. Hill moved to Wayne County, a short distance south of Arba, and now resides there. He has had eight children, seven living; the eighth lived to be twenty-one. A. H. is a fine, genteel old Quaker gentleman, active in his methods, enjoying excellent health, jovial in his manners, but esteemed and confided in by his friends and by the public. Aaron Hill says the sheep-killing story is all moonshine, as also are several others told concerning him, or nearly so, but that he did one thing not set down to him, viz., he had a saw-mill, run by water-power, and he bored a hole and fixed a box so that when the box would get full the wheel would go a little, and that would start a hominy pounder, and thus the pounder would go, by starts, all night. When his father came to Richmond, in 1816, there was only one frame house in the place. In a year or two, a two-story frame was erected near Ham's Corner. The site of the town was largely covered with a grove of buckeyes, which were splendid for building cabins. Mr. Aaron Hill says: "The first school I ever attended was in a hewed-log cabin, at Richmond. On the north, and also on the east side, a log was left out and the opening was closed with greased paper. My father lived one year on the county line east of the toll-gate, which stands south of Arba, and after that west of Arba. Of our family of nine children, two only were born in Randolph. I was thirteen years old when my father became a pioneer in this county." He states further: "Deer used to go in droves, ten or fifteen, or even more in a drove. They were more abundant than sheep. They had paths leading to ponds for water, and in these haunts the poor creatures were often shot by the remorseless hunter. Possums, porcupines, ground hogs, turkeys, pheasants and what not were all over the woods. Pheasants would make the forests fairly shake with the strange noises made by their "drumming" on the logs. My father had one ox and one horse, and worked them together as a team. They were very stout, pulling through the swamp and sometimes breaking a stay chain. The ox alone would pull equal to two horses, plowing roots 'like the nation.' He would plow corn and eat both rows as he went, unless he was muzzled."

Jeremiah Horn, farmer, was born in 1803, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1826, marrying Mazana Griffin in 1830. They had seven children, six of whom are still living and are married. He was a farmer, a "Body" Friend, and a Republican. His death occurred in 1869, at the age of sixty-six years.

William Hill was born in North Carolina in 1785; married Mary Hockett in 1807. (She was born in 1784, and came to Ohio in 1807.) They came to Wayne County, Ind., (near Richmond), in 1810; moved to Highland County, Ohio, in 1811 (probably on account of the Indians); returned to Wayne County, Ind., in 1816; came to Randolph County in 1823; bought sixty acres of land at second hand; had nine children, all living to become grown and to be married, and five still survive.

The children were Ruth, Aaron, Hiram, Martha, Sarah, Rebecca, Miriam and Henry W., all born between 1808 and 1828.

William Hill died in 1840, aged fifty-five years; his wife died in 1865, aged eighty-one years.

W. H. was a sterling pioneer, active, discreet, zealous for the right, and he trained up his large family in the way in which they ought to go, and his descendants are to-day an active, estimable, worthy group of men and women. Many odd and quaint things are told of William Hill and of his boys, most of which are probably not true, and which, were they even true, it will hardly pay to write down.

He was a farmer, a blacksmith, a plasterer, a brick-mason, and what else we do not know. In religion, he was a Friend, and in politics a Whig; and altogether an intelligent, reliable and worthy citizen.

He was very handy with tools, and ingenious in all sorts of contrivances for necessity or use.

William Hunt, Arba (son of Barnabas Hunt), was born in 1822, in Wayne County, Ind.; married Eda Fulghum, daughter of Frederick Fulghum, in 1843; came to Randolph County in 1844, and has eight children, four living; is a farmer and a Friend; was a Whig, and is a Republican; was an Anti-slavery man, but remained with the "body."

William M. Locke, Spartansburg, was born in 1805, in North Carolina; married Wealthy Middleton in 1827, and afterward Sarah Middleton, sisters of Thomas and Samuel Middleton; two children; Randolph County, Ind., 1828, living first on Daniel Comer's place; went back to North Carolina until 1831; then to Spartansburg 1831 to 1836; west of Granger Hall nine years; Bartonia, twenty-five years; Spartansburg, three years. He has been a carpenter, wagon-maker and farmer. W. M. L. has been married fifty-three years. They are a cheerful old couple, happy and esteemed, and active in good works. He has been an Episcopal Methodist for more than forty-seven years (since 1834); has been church Trustee ever since 1837, and loves the sanctuary and the class-meeting as well as ever.

W. M. L. removed to Union City, Ohio, in the fall of 1880, and resided for a time in that place. He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church of Union City, Ind., being also appointed Class Leader in that society, a position for which his ripe age and his high and deep religious experience were peculiar qualifications. He, however soon changed his residence, removing to good old Randolph again in 1881, and he is now a citizen of the same county in which he had been domiciled so many, many years. He moved at first from Union City, Ohio, to Arba, Ind.; but shortly afterward he returned to Spartansburg, which is at this time (March, 1882), again his home.

John Mann, Spartansburg, was born in Pennsylvania in 1805; came to Ohio when a boy, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1820. He entered 120 acres of land lying southwest of Spartansburg, near Gilead Meeting-House, walking to Cincinnati for the purpose. He was married in 1836, by James C. Bowen, Justice of the Peace, and has had ten children. One son, Isaac, was drowned in the service during the war of the rebellion.

His business has been farming, living upon the land he entered for nearly sixty years.

He moved to Spartansburg in about 1880, and now resides at that place.

Samuel H. Middleton was the son of Benedict Middleton, who was born in Virginia about 1767; was a farmer; moved afterward to North Carolina; had a family of eight or ten children, and died in 1840 in Carolina, aged seventy-three years.

Seven of his children came to Indiana in early times; five of them to Randolph County, viz., Samuel H. Middleton, Thomas Middleton, Hannah (wife of William Locke), Anna (wife of John Tharpe), Ailsey (wife of ——— Moore). The wife of B. M. was a Baptist, and died in Carolina in 1808, seventy-three years of age.

Samuel H. Middleton was born in 1794, in Virginia. He went with his father to North Carolina in 1798, and came to Richmond, Ind., Christmas Day, 1826. They brought six children, two having died in Carolina, coming in a two-horse wagon, and were five weeks on the road. His brother, Thomas Middleton, came with him part of the way, and finished the journey by steamer down the Ohio to Cincinnati. Their child Ursula was five weeks old when they started. Luzena, one of the girls, says she "scotched" the wheels nearly all the way over the mountains, as they came on their wearisome journey. He lived two years on a farm belonging to Clarkson Willcutts, west of Arba, and, in 1828, he moved to his residence, east of Spartansburg, where he remained till his death, in 1856, sixty-two years old. He had ten children, eight born in Carolina, and two in Randolph County, Ind. Three were boys and seven were girls; seven grew up; five have been married, and four are living still. The children were these: Luzena (widow of George Locke), one child, living near Spartansburg; Hannah, died at eight years; Nancy Ford, died in 1856, had seven children; Elihu, drowned in "Seven Mile Creek," Preble County, Ohio, in 1847, aged twenty-six years; Sarah Jane, died at eighteen years; Benedict, died at two years; Jeremiah, living east of Spartansburg, three children; Ursula, died at eight years old; Ruth (Thomas), has six children and is living; Christiana Middleton, wife of James Ruby, north of Spartansburg, has two children. S. H. M. married Christiana Tharpe, daughter of Jeremiah Tharpe, in 1814; she died in 1855, sixty-five years old, having been born in 1790, and he died in 1856; they were buried side by side in the Arba Graveyard. He was, in youth and early manhood, an active member of the Methodist Church, but he joined the Friends and kept with them till his death. His wife was also a Friend, and they were worthy, exemplary Christians. He was in early times a Whig, and afterward an Abolitionist. Mr. M. had a wonderful memory; he used to say, laughingly, that he never forgot anything but once. When he was a boy, he found a hen's nest, and he forgot where he found it. He could recite in his old age whole poems of great length that he had learned in his youth and retained entire for forty years. He was a worthy citizen, kind-hearted and hospitable and greatly esteemed. His father came with Samuel and Thomas on their way from Carolina to the unknown West a day's journey, to bid them farewell. He had buried a daughter only the day before; his beloved wife had been taken away many years previous, and his heart, crushed with grief and a sense of loss, could scarcely bear to give them up. The Middletons were of English descent. The Tharpes were of Scotch descent. The father of Jeremiah Tharpe's wife was a Quaker and a slave-holder. Near the time of the Revolution, that society became convinced that slave-holding was a sin, and they passed a resolution that their members should free their slaves or be disowned. Francis Clark, father of Mrs. Tharpe above, freed all his slaves, twenty-one in number.

Jeremiah Tharpe, father of Mrs. Samuel H. Middleton, died in Carolina in 1808, having had eight children, as follows: Eli, Jonathan, John, Jeremiah, Nancy (Kennedy), Ursula (Wheeler), Christiana (Middleton), Mildred (Thornburg). The children all became grown, and all were married. They all came to Indiana during the time from about 1812 to 1830, several of them settling in Randolph County. Jonathan died in Illinois, and Eli was living, at last accounts, in Iowa, very old. Anna (Tharpe) Kennedy died in Whiteriver Township, in the winter of 1880–81, aged more than eighty years. Mrs. Christiana (Middleton) Rubey, wife of James Rubey, showed a package of letters written between 1781 and 1815, mostly by Robert Ward to Joshua Harlan, grandfather of her husband, written from Carolina to Indiana. They are upon rough, unruled paper, in a coarse, plain, though unfashioned hand; and show the great affection which friends felt for each other in those ancient days. Some of them give an account of a severe earthquake in North Carolina in December, 1811, near Bald Mountain, which caused great affright throughout that whole region. The letters were sent chiefly by private hands, only one showing a post mark, dated at Laurens, S. C., October, 1814, with the postage 37½ cents! They are all directed to Indiana Territory, and several of them to the "County of Dearborn."

Thomas Middleton was born in Guilford County, N. C., in 1799; he married Margaret Webb in 1825; he came to Whitewater Ind., in 1826, and to Randolph County in 1830. The company from Carolina consisted of four families, and they were forty-two days on their journey. The families were those of Mordecai Hiatt, Eli Kersey, Thomas Middleton and Samuel H. Middleton. Thomas Middleton had no wagon, and his brother Samuel brought Thomas and his wife to Kanawha Salt Works, West Virginia. Thomas's wife and himself then took steamer down the Ohio to Cincinnati, and he hired a man to fetch them to Richmond. His first wife died in 1836, having had six children. Mr. Middleton's second wife was Sarah Borders, and she died in 1862, without offspring. The names of Mr. Middleton's children were Minerva, Calvin Peeples, Caroline, Sidney S., Sally, John Fletcher. John Fletcher was a soldier in the Union army during the war of 1861, and he belonged to the Sixty-ninth Indiana. In 1880, J. F. M. was elected Trustee of Greensfork Township; as also again in 1882. Mr. M. is very old, eighty-three years, and is feeble, having been more or less an invalid all his life. His character is that of an upright and worthy man, having been a sincere and discreet Christian throughout a long life of hardship and affliction.

Francis G. Morgan, Spartansburg; born 1828, Newport, Ind.; Spartansburg, 1830; Wayne County, 1835; Spartansburg, 1838; Newport, Ind., 1839–1843; lived about almost anywhere, 1843–1851; Newport, 1851–1861; Spartansburg, 1861. Twice married, 1848 and 1852; four children, three living. From twelve to twenty-four years old, he followed teaming from Newport, Richmond, Brookville, etc., to Cincinnati and elsewhere. He was a hired teamster, driving from two to six horses. He hauled logs near Richmond for two or three years; harness shop, 1852–55; clerk, Newport, 1855–61; store at Spartansburg, clerk or partner, 1861–76: bought his farm, Spartansburg, 1861, and since that, fifty acres, costing $1,500. He was Township Trustee two years, and County Commissioner three years. He died in the winter of 1880.

While Mr. Morgan was County Commissioner, the Board contracted for and partly built a court house.

The contract was for $73,000, and the job was done without alteration of any kind. Many were greatly opposed at the time, and Mr. Morgan is thought to have been defeated for a second nomination on that ground. The house was greatly needed, is very neat and tasteful in design, and was marvelously cheap in construction. It is one of the finest edifices in the country, and a "perfect gem" of beauty and taste. Good judges have pronounced it the handsomest building they ever saw, and the Commissioners may well be proud of their part in the work. The people also are now glad it has been built, and think it an ornament to the county.

Mr. Morgan has been and is an active, energetic and reliable man, respected by his fellow-citizens, and found faithful in every public and private trust.

F. G. Morgan died in the fall of 1880, of a lingering and painful disease. His death, occurring as it did in mature middle life, was a source of great sorrow to his afflicted family and friends. His widow has since married Mr. William A. Macy, an elderly but excellent gentleman. [See Wayne Township.]

It has been stated since its erection that the court house is not fire-proof; that it has hundreds of tons of wood in its structure, and not a vault in the entire building. This is a wonderful oversight, and one can hardly understand how or why any body of Commissioners could make so great a mistake. To guard against even the possibility of the destruction of the public records is the great sine qua non of a costly court house; and a building which lacks being fire-proof may nearly as well lack everything. The outside of the building, indeed, is brick, iron or slate, and it may be said that fire cannot communicate to the wood beneath those materials. It is surely to be hoped that this may always prove to be the case, but the part of wisdom would have been to make a conflagration of the court house and of the public records an absolute impossibility. The edifice should have been so constructed that it could not be even set on fire.

George Morgan is a brother of Dr. R. H. Morgan and son of Micajah Morgan. He was born in Wayne County, Ind. He joined the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana; was in Scofield's Corps; was at the surrendering of Johnston's army, in North Carolina, and was discharged in that neighborhood soon after. After the war, he engaged in railroading, spending twelve years on the frontier. He began with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad when only eight miles of track had been laid, and helped make the whole road (so far as made three or four years ago). He was three years on the Texas Pacific. For a short time he has been engaged in selling goods under the firm of Hill & Morgan, at Spartansburg, Ind. He married Louisa Rich, and has one child. The firm of Hill & Morgan has been dissolved, and Mr. Morgan has since that time been variously employed. Some years ago, he built for himself a dwelling in Spartansburg, and his residence is still in that town.

Isaac Mann came from Pennsylvania, and settled very early

(perhaps in 1816) on the Harrison Anderson farm below Spartansburg. He had seven children, and died in 1847 an old man (probably seventy years old or more.)

Malachi Nichols, Washington Township; born North Carolina, 1804; came to Randolph County in 1816 (near Arba); married Sarah Mann, 1825; had ten children, four living; died of cholera, 1849.

William D. Nichols, of Lynn, and Isaac Nichols, of Greensfork Township, are sons of Malachi Nichols.

Ephraim Overman was the fifth settler in Greensfork Township, and in Randolph County as well. He came in the fall of 1814 from Randolph County, N. C., and was the next settler after Ephraim Bowen. He came, probably in November, 1814, and he lived in a "camp" to some time in the fall of 1815. He had five children, all boys—Jesse, Eli, Ephraim, Silas and Reuben.

His brother, Nathan Overman, had ten children, seven sons and three daughters. Their names were Joseph, Reuben, Cornelius, Abner, Isaac, Jason, Zebulon, Mabel, Mary, Rebecca.

Ephraim Overman was member of the Legislature for Wayne County in 1816, and named the new county Randolph in honor of his native county in North Carolina.

We possess no further particulars concerning him.

Jesse Parker, late of Bethel, Wayne County, is the son of Thomas and Anna Parker, and was born in Rockingham County, N. C., near South Carolina line, in 1807. He came with his parents to Arba, Randolph Co., Ind., in April, 1814, that family being the first white settlers in Randolph County, though land had been entered in the county in 1812, some fifteen months before his settlement.

He married Phebe Puckett, daughter of Benjamin Puckett, in 1826, and they have had seven children, four of whom are living, and six have been married. Jesse Parker's parents died some years after their arrival in Indiana, his mother in 1823; she was the second or third person buried in the Arba Graveyard. J. P. is a shoemaker by trade and occupation, a hearty, jovial old man, having a good memory of old times, and taking a keen delight in recounting the tales of ancient days, when the woods were full of deer and turkeys and wild Indians. One of his sisters was burned to death when a child, and the other (Celia) married Mr. Arnold, and is now a widow and resides at Arba, Ind. He has in his possession a cane made from the "eves bearer" in the first cabin ever erected in Randolph County. The wood is ash, and is very sound and bright. Jesse Parker died November 3, 1881, near Lynn, Randolph Co., Ind., in his seventy-fifth year; he removed from Bethel, Wayne County, to Winchester, Randolph County, expecting to make that his home; soon afterward, he changed his residence to the toll-gate north of Lynn, and only three days after taking charge of the gate he died. The day before his death, he walked to Lynn, and, on the very day he died, he remarked that he felt as well as usual. His sickness began with an aching sensation in the hand, which, in a few hours, reached the heart. A physician was summoned, but in vain. For the aged pioneer, the first lad in the county, it was the "last of earth." His wish had been that his lot might be to meet his death upon the beloved soil of Randolph, and his desire was granted.

Jesse Parker was born in North Carolina in 1766; came to Randolph County, Ind., early; had seven children—Thomas, Joel, Piety, Eda and Jesse and two others. He died 9th, 24th, 1843, aged seventy-six years eleven months and two days.

Margaret Parker, Arba, is now residing in her own house in the village of Arba, Randolph Co., Ind., with her single daughter Lizzie; her son-in-law, Thomas Haisley, with his little son, lives with her; also her oldest daughter, Martha R. Newsom, with one little boy. Martha was married to Joseph Newsom about fourteen years ago; they spent eight years with the Indians—three years in Kansas and the rest of the time in the Indian Territory. Mr. N. died in 1879, and she returned to her mother. Margaret Parker's two sons are both married. One resides near Richmond, and the other on his father's old farm. Her husband, Thomas Parker, came to Randolph County in 1821, and she in 1827. They were married the same year and began housekeeping with a very limited supply of household goods, viz., one pot and one skillet, six plates, six cups and saucers, six spoons and six knives and forks. They made coffee in a milk-pan. All their little means were applied to buying some land. In a few years they became good livers for those times.

Soon after their settlement in Randolph County, her husband made great quantities of tree-sugar. Several barrels were taken to Cincinnati. Some was sold there at 3 cents per pound, and the rest was brought back. A barrel of it was left standing in the wagon shop for people to eat whenever they pleased. In 1844, about Christmas, she stuck a pin into her arm, and, strange as it may seem, that little wound cost her months and months of terrible suffering, and came very near taking her life. Erysipelas set in, and went into the arm, and it was thought that the limb must be cut off. It was permitted to remain, and finally got measurably well, yet for many months she had no use of her right hand. But she could use her left hand, and she undertook with that to spin on a foot-wheel. The children turned the wheel, and she spun enough to make thirty yards with her left hand and her mouth. The time was set one day, and forty people came to witness the sight of amputating her arm, but her husband would not allow it to be done. The limb was so terribly sore that women could not endure to dress it, and three men came three times a day for six weeks to dress that arm! The limb mortified on the lower side in as large a place as one's hand, and the large muscles and the artery lay bare to the sight! yet that arm has for many years been comparatively healthy and sound, and she is alive to-day to look back with thankfulness upon the fact that she was delivered from her fearful suffering, and restored once more to comfort and freedom from pain and danger.

Thomas Parker was born in North Carolina 8th, 7th, 1796; he came to Randolph County, Ind., about 1824; married Elizabeth Arnold and became the father of eleven children, five of whom are now living. He died in 1873, aged seventy-seven years one month and twenty-two days. His widow still lives at Arba, being well advanced in years, a quiet, venerable matron, fearing God and beloved by her neighbors and friends.

Thomas W. Parker (first settler) was born in North Carolina in 1776, and married Anna Peale in that country. They came to Randolph County in 1814 with John W., Thomas and Clarkson Willcutts, who were half-brothers, bringing with them three children. Thomas W. Parker had eight children in all; three were born in Carolina and five in Indiana. He first settled west of Arba, then moved near the toll-gate north of Arba; then near Spartansburg, and still again to Bartholomew County, where he died more than thirty-five years ago. His wife, Anna Parker, died in Randolph County in 1823, and was buried at Arba, being the second or third person buried in that cemetery.

David Semans (late of Greensfork) was born at Wheeling, W. Va., in 1802, and came to Highland County, Ohio, in 1813. He went for himself in 1819, marrying in that year, at the age of seventeen. They came to Randolph County in 1825, settling on Nolan's Fork, and removing to Spartansburg in 1835. In 1840, he returned to his farm southwest of Arba for awhile, and not very long afterward moved to Eel River, Miami County, Ind. (1845); thence back to Randolph County, in 1855, and to Minnesota in 1865, and to Iowa in 1870, making his home for several years with some one of his numerous children in Indiana, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska. He has been thrice married. His wives were Rebecca Lewis, Rebecca Bowen and Ruth Ann Cook. All three are dead, the last one dying in 1877. He has had twenty-four children—eight by his first wife, fourteen by the second and two by the third. He had six sons in the army at the same time, their united services amounting to twelve or fourteen years. One was killed at the battle of Franklin after his term of service had expired. Mr. S. has been mostly a farmer, has taught school many terms and has sold goods seven or eight years. He has been an Abolitionist from his boyhood, and a church member for sixty-two years—first, Methodist Episcopal, then Wesleyan and again Methodist Episcopal. Mr. Semans is tall and imposing in mien and bearing, large-framed and muscular; and, though now somewhat enfeebled, yet his erect and stately form gives him an appearance both dignified and venerable, and he seems the very image and ideal of an aged patriarch of the olden time. (This was written before his death.) He was an early pioneer of Greensfork Township, living first southwest of Spartansburg, then in that town; leaving the region at length, and, after long years spent in various places, dying at last in Iowa in the spring of 1881, seventy-nine years of age. He was a farmer, a teacher, a preacher, a Justice of the Peace, and at one time (1830) a member of the Legislature. His second wife was the daughter of Ephraim Bowen, Sr., of Greensfork, the fourth settler in Randolph County. Many of his twenty-four children lived to be grown and married, and, in 1880, sixteen were living and married. How many more of the twenty-four have been married we do not know. Mr. S. was tall and stately, straight as a tree, a grand and splendid specimen of the Anglo-Saxon race. While he was visiting his old neighbors and his kinsfolk in Randolph County, during the summer of 1880, he seemed as though several years of life might yet be his among men. But his work is done, and his stately form lies low in the silent dust, and his freed spirit has gone home to its endless rest. May we "die the death of the righteous, and may our last end be like his!"

William Stubbs (father of Mrs. Philip Hill) was born in 1786 in Georgia, and his wife, Sarah (Hodson) Stubbs, in North Carolina in 1777. They were married in 1804, and emigrated to Preble County, Ohio, in 1805. They had eight children, and he died in 1857, aged seventy-one years. His wife died in 1858, aged eighty-one years. Philip Hill has had eight children, four of whom are living, and three married. He is the son of William Hill, an early pioneer, and also a brother of Aaron Hill, south of Arba, in the edge of Wayne County. Philip Hill resides in Greensfork, in the southwest part. He is a farmer, a Republican and a member of the United Brethren Church.

William Taylor was born in Edgecombe County, N. C., in 1799; married Talitha Hedgepeth in 1823, who was born in 1802; came to Spartansburg, Ind., in 1836, and settled on a tract of land northwest of that place, residing there until 1876, at which time he removed to Spartansburg, where is now his home. He has had five children—John Hedgepeth, born in North Carolina in 1824; married Sarah Horn; had nine children, five sons living; farmer, shoe dealer, shoemaker, two years Township Trustee, discharging the duties well; highly esteemed by his fellow-citizens; married, in Arba, Ind.: Margaret Jane (Horn); six children; died some time ago: Peninnah (Horn), Arba, one child. William Thomas married Sarah E. Jackson, daughter of James Jackson; four children; farm west of old boundary. Mrs. Taylor's father was a "Continental" soldier; he served in the Revolutionary war fifteen months. Mr. Taylor and his wife have been "one" for nearly fifty-nine years; they are sprightly and hale, though they are eighty-three and eighty. He bought eighty acres of land, when he first came, for $350, and lived on it till 1876, and owns it yet. Mr. Taylor died in September, 1882, of Bright's disease, eighty-three years old.

John W. Thomas, Arba (second settler), was born in South Carolina in 1787; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1814; married Achsah Peale, in 1810, who was born in 1793. They had thirteen children; twelve lived to be grown, and eleven were married; six are now living Robert Thomas, the first child born in Randolph County, Ind., was the son of John W. Thomas, and born 12th, 18th, 1814. He is now living in Huntington County, Ind. John W. Thomas died in Huntington County Ind., 4th, 8th, 1859, and was buried in Arba Cemetery. His age was seventy-one years seven months and nineteen days. One of his sons now lives at Arba.

Windsor Wiggs was born in 1793 in North Carolina; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1826; died in 1856; married Sarah Barefoot, in North Carolina, in 1816, living still where they settled fifty-four years ago; had eleven children; eight lived to be grown; six are still living. He died in 1856, November 27, aged sixty-three years. Willa Maria died at six weeks; Felix G., born 1819, married Emily Thomas, 1841, has resided in Randolph County, Ind., and Darke County, Ohio; for twelve years at Union City, Ind.; has been farmer, merchant and grain dealer; has two children, both living—George, agent for a wholesale grain dealer in European markets, and a daughter, wife of W. A. Wiley, grain dealer, Union City; he now spends much of his time traveling to Kansas, North Carolina, etc.; Morris died in 1854; Blake E., six children, farmer, Greensfork, twice married; Raiford, twice married, five children, Methodist and Republican, clerk and merchant; has resided at Spartansburg, Newport, Cincinnati, Richmond, Tampico, Ohio, Winchester, Union City, and now lives at Lawrence, Kan.; William Henderson, died at eighteen years in a fit; Windsor, Jr., married Elizabeth Hartman, then Almaretta (Milligan) Richardson, daughter of Dr. Milligan, late of Recovery, Ohio; nine children; has lived at Spartansburg, Union City, Recovery, Ohio, and Liber, Ind.; he has been farmer, merchant and grain dealer, auctioneer, etc.; he is an ardent Republican; Sarah, died at three years; James Henry, farmer, eleven children, Disciple, Republican, Darke County, Ohio; Martha Matilda, died at two years; Anna Jane (Elliott), six children, two miles below Spartansburg, Ind. Mr. Wiggs was buried in the "Quaker Graveyard," near Charles Crist's, southeast of Spartansburg, as also his wife, who died in the summer of 1881, on the old homestead.

Mrs. Sarah (Barefoot) Wiggs (widow of Windsor Wiggs, Sr.) was born in North Carolina, March 10, 1797; her father died when she was six years old, and she became a "bound girl" to a Mr. Evans. She was married to Mr. Wiggs before she was seventeen years old, and, in 1826, they emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., making their home in the wilderness southeast of Spartansburg, on the old Windsor Wiggs farm. They arrived at William Arnold's cabin, where Noah Turner lived lately, May 15, 1826; he bought eighty acres, and she resided on that farm from 1825 to 1881—more than fifty-five years—making her home of late years on the homestead with her son, Blake Wiggs; she died August 11, 1881, and was buried on the farm of Charles Crist, southeast of Spartansburg, in what is known as the "Norwich or Quaker Graveyard," beside her husband, who many years ago departed this life at the age of sixty-three years three months and eighteen days; his death occurred November 27, 1856. Their land had been entered by John Schooley, who sold it to Benjamin Arnold, and he to Mr. Wiggs. Mrs. Wiggs joined the Disciples' Church in 1839, and her husband a short time afterward. Mrs. Wiggs was eighty-four years five months and twenty-four days old, having lived with her husband thirty-eight years three months eleven days, having been a widow about twenty-six years, a church member forty-two years, and a resident on their homestead fifty-five years. She raised a large family, who have become prominent and useful citizens.

SQUIRE BOWEN.

Squire Bowen, a pioneer of Randolph County, son of Ephraim and Hannah Bowen, born in Greene County, Ohio, April 10, 1805; he was the fourth of eleven children, five of whom are still living; he removed with his parents to Randolph County, October 22, 1814, and settled two and one-half miles from Spartansburg, where his father entered a quarter section of land. Squire lived upon this farm for fifty-three years; here he spent the greater and best portion of his life. His mother died in 1844, and his father followed in 1858. After the death of his mother, the care of the father fell to the lot of Squire. It is needless to state that he did all that was in the power of a loving son to make the remainder of his father's life comfortable and happy.

The boyhood of Squire was similar to that of the sons of most pioneers. The privations and sufferings experienced by the early settlers of this county and State cannot be pictured upon the printed page. At the time Squire's father settled in this county, there were only eleven white people living in the territory of which the county was subsequently formed. Having no neighbors but the uncivilized Indians, they were thrown upon the own resources to clear a homestead from the unbroken forest. All of the products of the farm that were not used for home consumption were marketed at Fort Wayne, a distance of about ninety miles. The only means of conveyance was by wagon drawn by oxen. They were compelled to cut their own road through the dense wilderness. It required from sixteen to twenty days to make the trip and return. All of this work fell principally to the lot of the subject of this sketch.

Notwithstanding the almost entire absence of schools, Mr. Bowen, by dint of his own efforts, with the assistance of a very brief attendance at school in Greene County, Ohio, and at Arba, this county, in the old log pioneer schoolhouse, used as a Friends' Meeting House, he obtained a fair common school education.

He was married to Elizabeth Dwiggins, of Wayne County, August 13, 1829, who still survives, having borne the ups and downs of life with her devoted husband for fifty-three years. They are the parents of twelve children, four boys and eight girls, nine of whom are still living. With one exception, none of their children reside more than ten miles from the old homestead.

Their children are all happily married, and comfortably situated. In 1867, Squire moved from the farm to Arba, and lived in that village for nine and one-half years, when he moved to Spartansburg, where he has since resided. He and his wife have been acceptable members of the M. E. Church for more than fifty years.

In politics, Mr. Bowen has always been an uncompromising Republican; he has affiliated with that party ever since its organization. Although never having been elected to any office of trust, he has always been actively engaged and deeply interested in the welfare of the party of his choice.

He and his amiable wife are pleasantly situated at Spartansburg, surrounded by loving children and kind friends, enjoying fair health and a prospect of yet many years of usefulness.

We cannot close this brief sketch of this most worthy pair without adding our own testimony of reverence for their efforts in developing the great resources of this part of the State of Indiana.

JAMES D. BOWEN.

James Dwiggins Bowen, son of Squire and Elizabeth Bowen, was born in Greensfork Township, Randolph County, December 23, 1832; he was raised on the farm entered by his grandfather, Ephraim Bowen, in 1814, of which he is now owner and proprietor; his farm consists of 200 acres of which 140 acres are in a high state of cultivation. His boyhood was quiet and uneventful, spending the greater part of his time in cultivating the farm; his education was limited to the common district schools, with the exception of one term at a commercial school at Indianapolis in 1855. He was Enrolling Officer of his township during the war, an appointment from the Government; he made three trips to the front to look after the sick and wounded soldiers from his district. In addition to farming, Mr. Bowen has been actively engaged in the mercantile business at Spartansburg and Arba, and pork-packing business at Richmond; he now has an interest in the mercantile and grain business at Lynn, this county. As a business man, Mr. Bowen is cautious, and careful to look after the details. He was married to Mary E. Chenoweth, daughter of John B. and Sarah B. Chenoweth, of Carroll County, Md., September 13, 1855.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen have a family of nine children, three boys and six girls, all of whom are still living. Two of his sons are engaged with their father in business at Lynn, one as a partner, the other as clerk.

James D. has been elected to two of the most important offices of his township—that of Township Trustee, and served for five years, and in 1867, he was elected Justice of the Peace, and has continued for four years. That he filled these offices satisfactorily is evinced from the fact of his continuance. He now holds the office of Ditch Commissioner, under the appointment of the Judge of the Circuit Court. In 1873, he moved from Arba, where he had been engaged in business since 1866, to the farm where he now resides. He has been blessed with an abundance of worldly effects, and is surrounded with luxury and all that is necessary to make life happy. His farm is a model of beauty and convenience, especially adapted to grazing, all parts of it being supplied with an abundance of never-failing spring water. He devotes considerable attention to the raising of corn and hogs. His farm buildings are commodious and convenient; his dwelling-house is a large, two-story structure, situated on a beautiful knoll, surrounded with many beautiful shade trees.

Mr. Bowen has always been a stanch Republican, and has been industrious in his efforts for the welfare of his party. He and his excellent wife are acceptable members of the M. E. Church, and are honored members of society of the community in which they reside. Mr. Bowen is also a useful member of the order of Free and Accepted Masons, being a member of Bethel Lodge, No. 250.

EPHRAIM L. BOWEN.

Ephraim L. Bowen is a native of Randolph County, Ind.; he was born at the family homestead in Green's Fork Township, on the 20th of March, 1819; his father, Ephraim Bowen, of whom a more extended account appears elsewhere in this volume, was one of the first white men who located in Randolph County, and bore a prominent and active part in its development and improvement. Ephraim L., the subject of this sketch, grew to manhood on the home farm, enjoying only such limited educational advantages as the pioneer schools afforded. By individual effort, however, he succeeded in acquiring an education which, if not scholastic, was nevertheless practical, and by his daily routine of work grew proficient in all that goes to constitute a good farmer, and in later years adopted the pursuit of farming as his chosen vocation. He remained at home assisting his father until twenty years of age, and was then united in marriage with Miss Ruth Dwiggins, a native of Wayne County, Ind. He then began farming for himself in Green's Fork Township, and in the years that have followed, his success in this line has steadily increased under his tireless energy and prudent management. The farm upon which he began life on his own account has been enlarged by subsequent purchases, until it now embraces 280 acres of excellent land, all of which is susceptible of cultivation, while the larger portion of it is under a fine state of improvement.

Within twenty years after his marriage, death bereaved him of the companionship of the wife, whose love had stimulated his youthful labors in the felling of the forest and the "making" of a farm; whose words of cheer had revived his drooping spirits at the end of days of weary toil, and whose careful economy had materially promoted his temporal success. She died on August 5, 1858. Eight children had been born to them, two of whom preceded their mother to the grave. Six survived her, viz., James H., Elizabeth A., Hannah L., Mary E., Jennie and Squire C., all of whom grew to maturity and were married, and three of whom now survive. James H. died September 12, 1874; Mary E. died May 12, 1876, and Jennie died July 1, 1877. Mr. Bowen was a second time united in the bonds of matrimony, choosing for his companion Mrs. Anna J. Corbett, daughter of John and Mildred Thornburg. She was born December 16, 1827, in North Carolina, and came to Randolph County, Ind., with her parents, when a child. She is an estimable lady, and enjoys the affectionate regard of all who know her. Four children are the fruits of the second marriage, viz., Julia M., Rosa L., Lulie L. and Clarence E., all of whom are now residing with their parents at home.

Throughout his life, Mr. Bowen has felt a lively interest in public improvements, and has contributed liberally to enterprises having for their object the ultimate benefit of the county. He has never felt political ambition, nor has he ever consented to serve in a public capacity; but he is, nevertheless, a stanch politician, and an ardent Republican. He is a politician to the extent of taking an active interest in the success of his party, and advocating its principles. He was a prominent anti-slavery advocate in earlier years, and became one of the first adherents of the Republican party upon its organization. He is identified with the friends of the temperance cause, and in his daily life exemplifies the principles he holds. As a member of the Christian Church he has led a consistent life, and as a worthy citizen none stand higher than he in the community where he is known. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is identified with Bethel Lodge, No. 250.

CLEMENT F. ALEXANDER, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg. This estimable gentleman was born in Preble County, Ohio, May 2, 1817, and is the son of James and Mary (Parks) Alexander, who were born in Burke County, N. C., the former September 28, 1787, and the latter January 22, 1790. The subject of our sketch was married, September 10, 1840, to Rebecca Parks, who was born in Monroe County, Ind., December 18, 1816, daughter of George and Catharine (Read) Parks, who were natives of North Carolina. This union has been blessed with six children, viz., Mary C., born April 18, 1842; Martha J., October 29, 1843; Nancy A., April 23, 1845; Serena E., April 21, 1847; Sarah J., June 11, 1853; and Lizzie E., born May 7, 1859, all of whom are living except Martha J., who deceased January 24, 1881. Mr. Alexander came to this county and settled where he now resides in 1848; he was elected Commissioner of the county in 1860, and so acceptably performed the duties devolving upon him that he was again chosen in 1863, to act in the same capacity. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander are consistent members of the Christian Church. He owns 277 acres of land, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. He is a kind husband and father, and he and his worthy lady enjoy the respect and esteem of all who know them.

HARRISON ANDERSON, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg. This estimable gentleman was born in Butler County, Ohio, January 9, 1817, is the son of Nathan and Elizabeth (Forton) Anderson, who were natives of Virginia, the former born June 9, 1767, and deceased about three months previous to the birth of the subject of this sketch; the latter born October 13, 1776. Mr. Anderson, when about one year of age, was brought by his mother to Wayne County, Ind. The event of his marriage took place November 30, 1837; the chosen companion through life, Miss Lydia A. Shaw, born in Warren County, Ohio, October 9, 1819, is the daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Ramsey) Shaw, who were born in Pennsylvania, the former July 29, 1793, and the latter November 22, 1797. Mr. Anderson became a resident of this county in 1837, and for ten years lived on a farm of eighty acres that he purchased near the south line. He settled where he now resides (in Section 15), in 1851. During the year 1861, he was engaged in the mercantile business, and acted as Postmaster at Spartansburg. Mr. Anderson's early literary advantages were such as the pioneer youth generally enjoy, but nature has compensated largely for the lack of early opportunities. He is a gentleman who believes in advancement, and is ever found ready and willing to aid any laudable enterprise that tends to elevate and improve the standing of society. He and his worthy lady are earnest workers in the Christian Church. They have been blessed with three children, two of whom are living, viz., Elizabeth, born June 10, 1842, and Edmon L., October 17, 1844.

JAMES ARMSTRONG, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born in Huntingdon County, Penn., April 29, 1822; he is the son of Andrew and Jane (Nelson) Armstrong, who were natives of the above State. The subject of this sketch emigrated with his parents to Ohio in 1835, where he remained until 1853, when he became a resident of this county, settling at Union City, where he engaged in the carpenter business until 1863, when he purchased and moved to a farm near the above place, on which he resided until 1867, when he moved to Miami County, this State, where he was employed as a carpenter for a period of four years; at the expiration of that time he again became a resident of this county. He now owns a neat farm of forty acres in Section 3, on which he resides. Mr. A. is a member of the M. E. Church, Spartansburg I. O. O. F., No. 287, and of Xenia (Miami County) F. & A. M. No. ——. The event of his marriage took place August 4, 1845, to Lucinda Hobert, who was born in Madison County, Ohio, September 17, 1827; she is the daughter of Joseph and Margaret (Gandy) Hobert; the former born in Vermont January 3, 1802, and the latter in Ohio, November 2, 1811. This union has been blessed with one child, Jeremiah D., born April 26, 1846, who is now engaged in life insurance at Union City. He was married, July 28, 1867, to Orpha A. Convers, daughter of Darius Convers.

ARCHIBALD ARMSTRONG, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg. This worthy gentleman, born in Ireland, April 1, 1833, is the son of Samuel and Margaret (Valentine) Armstrong, who are natives of Ireland. Mr. Armstrong came to this country with his parents in 1839; they first settled in Pennsylvania, where they remained for three years; from there they moved to Delaware, and resided in that State until 1844, when they returned to Pennsylvania, where they remained until 1850, when they became residents of this county. The event of his marriage took place August 27, 1859, to Maria Mann, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Stout) Mann. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong were blessed with three children, viz., Catharine, born August 15, 1868; George W., January 14, 1863; and Melissa, born September 9, 1866. On November 28, 1866, Mr. A. was called upon to mourn the loss of his beloved wife. He then battled with the hardships of life alone until July 3, 1869, when he was married to Melissa L. Witter, who was born in Butler County, Ohio, November 21, 1845. She is the daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Kinnon) Witter. Mr. Armstrong settled where he now resides, in Section 16, in 1870. He owns fifty-seven acres of land. He spent about fifteen years of his earlier life working at the carpenter business, but is now engaged in farming. He is a member of Spartansburg I. O. O. F., No. 287, is a sterling gentleman, and he and his worthy lady have the confidence and respect of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

MARCELLUS N. BROWN, farmer, P. O. Lynn; born in Preble County, Ohio, February 28, 1838; he is the son of Thomas M. and Nancy J. (Brandon) Brown, the former born in Pennsylvania, and the latter in Darke County, Ohio, March 12, 1820. Mr. Brown was educated at Spartansburg; he was married August, 1860, to Celestina Ruby, who was born in Darke County, Ohio, November 1, 1840. She is the daughter of Samuel F. and Jane (McNulty) Ruby, the former born April 27, 1812, and the latter February 17, 1818. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have been blessed with three children, viz, Samuel R., born October 14, 1861; Nancy J., March 6, 1864, and Willie S., October, 1869. Mr. Brown became a resident of this county in 1849; he owns a farm of 100 acres in Section 25, on which he has been residing since 1875. He is a thorough gentleman, and he and his worthy lady are respected by all who know them.

J. WESLEY CLARK, wagon-maker, Spartansburg; born in Spartansburg April 7, 1857; he is the son of James W. and Mary E. (Moore) Clark, the former born in Allen County, Ind., July 6, 1828, and the latter in North Carolina November 3, 1828. The subject of this sketch is a wagon-maker; he is a thorough gentleman, highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. In the summer of 1882, he attended the Normal School at Winchester, and completed his preparation as a teacher; he then began the honorable vocation of teaching in the public schools.

VICTOR M. L. COOK, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg; born in Wayne County, Ind., June 16, 1858; he is the son of William and Margaret A. (Knox) Cook, the former born in Wayne County, Ind., July 7, 1834, and the latter in North Carolina January 12, 1835. The event of his marriage took place January 1, 1880, to Luella M. Thomas, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., November 1, 1861. She is the daughter of Joshua C. and Mary (Fulghum) Thomas; the former born in North Carolina November 17, 1830, and the latter in this county December 12, 1834. Mr. Cook first became a resident of Randolph County in 1859. He owns a well-improved farm of sixty-three acres in Section 16, on which he resides. He and his worthy lady are highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

CHARLES CRIST is a resident of Greensfork Township. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1801; his father moved to Maryland, in 1814, and he lived there till he was grown. He married Mary Flatters, in Maryland, in 1831. She was born in 1809. They moved from thence to Marion County, Ohio, in 1831; thence to Hancock County, Ohio, in 1834 and to Darke County, Ohio, in 1847, and finally to Randolph County, Ind., in 1854, where they reside now, about one mile east of Spartansburg. They have had twelve children, but there are now but six living. Three of the children died from "milk sickness." The following are their children now living: Jacob Crist, whose business is farming, and who is married to Mary Campbell, a daughter of William M. Campbell, Sr.—they have one child; Sarah Ann Shaw, who resides in Union City, and has five children; Margaret Louisa died when she was seven years old; Sanford Crist, who is intermarried with Althea Corbett, a daughter of Richard Corbett; Sandford is a farmer, and has one child; William Crist is married to Elizabeth Fish, and resides at Springfield, Ohio, where he is engaged as a stone-cutter—he has five children; Mary Jane died at the age of one year; George W. is unmarried, and resides with his parents; Thomas Clarkson Crist is married to Mary Coburn, and resides in Union City, he is an engineer, and has five children; Rebecca died when she was seven years old. The elder Crist and his lady have always resided upon their farm. In every locality where they took up their abode, they were among the first settlers. Mr. Crist has given his whole life to farming, and has done much to improve the country; he is a man of steady and industrious habits; he is a Democrat in politics, and has the confidence and good will of all his neighbors and acquaintances.

FREDERICK C. FULGHUM, S. S. Mill, Arba. This estimable gentleman, born in this county December 25, 1840, is the son of Frederick and Piety (Parker) Fulghum, who were natives of Guilford County, N. C., the former born April 20, 1799, and the latter July 30, 1798. The subject of our sketch was educated at Earlham College; he was married, January 1, 1862, to Rebecca Elliott, who was born in Preble County, Ohio, January 17, 1839. Her parents, Benjamin and Rachel (Hickson) Elliott, were natives of North Carolina, the former born May 10, 1816, and the latter in 1814. Mr. and Mrs. Fulghum have four children, viz., Oscar E., born October 3, 1862; Francona L., June 13, 1866; Lucy, November 6, 1872, and Walter B., born April 20, 1879. Mr. Fulghum settled at Arba, where he is now successfully conducting a saw and grist mill. He and his worthy lady are members of the Society of Friends, and are highly respected by all who know them. Mr. Fulghum is also interested in the Richmond Business College and Telegraphing Institute at Richmond, Wayne Co., Ind.

HUGH GARD, farmer, P. O. Winchester. The subject of this sketch, born in Preble County, Ohio, March 12, 1820, is the son of Lot and Ann (Vance) Gard, who were natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Gard became a resident of this State when quite young, remaining until 1860, when he returned to his native State. The event of his marriage took place February 11, 1862, to Sarah Dunn, who was born in Pennsylvania September 12, 1830. Her parents, Joseph and Debra (Evans) Dunn were natives of Pennsylvania, the former born September 30, 1792, and the latter March 2, 1795. Mr. Gard returned to this State and settled where he now resides in 1867; he owns 150 acres of land, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising; he is a thorough gentleman, highly respected by all who know him. Mr. Gard and his worthy lady have been blessed with three children, viz., Laura D., born December 5, 1862; Joseph C., March 27, 1867, and Annett S., August 31, 1868.

JAMES M. HARRISON, farmer, P. O. Hollansburg, Ohio, born in Darke County, Ohio, April 26, 1833. He is the son of Harvey and Minerva J. (Downing) Harrison; the former born in Kentucky March 16, 1804, and the latter in South Carolina December 7, 1808. The event of his marriage took place December 9, 1855, to Emily E. French, who was born in Virginia May 19, 1834. She is the daughter of Walter W. and Levina (Bailey) French, who were natives of Virginia; the former born March 1, 1794, and the latter July 30, 1800. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison have had born to them six children, three of whom are living, viz., Arvilla A., born January 1, 1857; William H., October 12, 1865, and Emily E., November 23, 1872. Mr. Harrison became a resident of Randolph County in 1855, and has since been engaged in farming and the manufacture of the "Harrison Hand Corn Planter," of which he is the inventor and patentee. He has a well improved farm of 122 acres, on which he resides, in Section 25; he is a sterling gentleman, and he and his worthy lady are highly respected by all who know them.

JAMES H. HART, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born in Kentucky January 8, 1808; he is the son of John and Phœba (Godfrey) Hart; the former a native of Virginia, and the latter of Kentucky. With the exception of a short time spent in Kentucky and Ohio, the subject of our sketch has been a resident of this county since 1832. He spent his early life in teaching school, farming and shoe-making; he was married, September 29, 1839, to Ruth Cartwright, who was born in North Carolina March 14, 1811. She is the daughter of Hezekiah and Elizabeth (Pritchet) Cartwright, who were natives of North Carolina; the former born in 1774, and the latter in 1777. Mr. and Mrs. Hart have been blessed with four children, two of whom are living, viz., John H., born January 2, 1843, and William T., born March 29, 1847; the latter was married April 28, 1877, to Angeline M. Bunch, who was born in this county April 28, 1855. She is the daughter of Richard G. and Mary J. (Bowen) Bunch. This union has been blessed with one child—Charles H., born April 21, 1878. We may say of James H. Hart that he is one of the pioneers of this county, and is closely identified with its development and early improvements; he and his estimable lady are members of the Christian Church, and are highly respected by all who know them.

HENRY HAWKINS, saw-milling, Snow Hill. This estimable gentleman, who became a resident of Randolph County in 1870, is the son of Nathan and Sarah (Wright) Hawkins, who were natives of Wayne County, Ind.; the former born April 15, 1808, and the latter April 12, 1811. The subject of our sketch was also born as above, December 25, 1838; he enlisted August 16, 1862, in Company I, Eighty-fourth Indiana Infantry. As a soldier he was brave and fearless, participating in numerous battles. On Sunday, September 20, 1863, he received a severe wound at the battle of Chickamauga, and lay on the field for eleven days; he was then paroled and taken to the hospital at Chattanooga; thence to Nashville, where, after remaining for several months, he was furloughed and sent home, where he remained for five months; at the expiration of that time, he joined his regiment at Nashville, Tenn., but on account of his inability for active service, he was shortly after sent to Indianapolis as one of a reserve corps, where he remained until June 20, 1865, when he was discharged. Mr. Hawkins was married November 26, 1874, to Miss Jennie Owen, who was born in Preble County, Ohio, November 17, 1846. She is the daughter of William W. and Jane (Allbright) Owen, who were born in Tennessee; the former June 5, 1795, and the latter January 22, 1816. Mr. Hawkins owns 120 acres of land, and is engaged in saw-milling and farming; he is a sterling gentleman, and he and his worthy lady enjoy the esteem and confidence of all who know them.

ADAM R. HIATT, farmer, P. O. Bethel, Ind. This estimable gentleman, born in Wayne County, Ind., January 9, 1837, is the son of Enos and Nancy (Miller) Hiatt, the former born in Guilford County, N. C., August 28, 1805, and the latter in Woodford County, Ky., in September, 1816. Mr. Hiatt was married, May 27, 1855, to Lucinda Wolf, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., July 5, 1837. She is the daughter of David and Nancy (Douthet) Wolf, the former born in New Jersey in 1800, and the latter in Warren County, Ohio, in 1799. This union has been blessed with eight children, seven of whom are living, viz., Mary F., born May 18, 1857; Cassius F., April 20, 1859; Alvin L., July 22, 1863; Elmer P., July 4, 1865; Harrison, August 16, 1869; Carrie C., November 10, 1871, and India W., June 23, 1878. Mr. Hiatt settled where he now resides in 1869. His farm consists of 100 acres, and is located in Section 36. He is a member of Bethel F. & A. M., No. 260, and he and his worthy lady are members of the Christian Church.

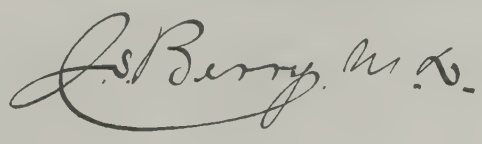
LEVI HILL.

Levi Hill, agriculturist and horticulturist, was born in Greensfork Township, Randolph County, Ind., April 4, 1835; he is the son of Aaron and Piety A. Hill, and the second child of a family of eight children; his parents moved to the State in 1817, and to Randolph County in 1824. His father was a native of Ohio, and was born in 1810; his mother of North Carolina, and was born in 1812; his parents were members of the Society of Friends.

Levi has spent the greater portion of his life upon the farm, having selected the occupation of farming from choice; he is well adapted to this business, and conducts his farming upon scientific principles. His father was one of the pioneers of the county, and Levi, in his younger years, assisted him in clearing a farm from the forest. His early educational advantages were meager, but having made up his mind to engage for a time in the profession of teaching, he bent all of his energies to prepare himself for that work. To accomplish this end, he attended the graded schools at Arba for three terms of five months each, under the instruction of Jacob Green, Thomas and Matthew Charles; he also attended a term of five months at Friends' Western Agricultural School, under the supervision of Hon. B. C. Hobbs, ex-Superintendent Public Instruction. From nineteen to twenty-three years of age, he taught school in the winter and attended school in the summer. As a teacher and student, he distinguished himself by his energy and perseverance in surmounting every difficulty; his labors were crowned with abundant success.

He was married to Elizabeth Anderson, daughter of Harrison and Lydia Anderson, of Wayne County, August 18, 1859. Mrs. Hill is a most estimable lady, refined, amiable and of superior intelligence. She is beloved by all who know her.

JOHN S. BERRY, M. D.



JOHN S. BERRY was born near Greenville, Darke Co., Ohio, in 1852, and is the son of Elisha and Jane Berry, who are natives and life-long residents of that county. His father was born February 24, and his mother March 1, 1824. They are the parents of four sons and four daughters, all of their children now surviving except two. Mr. Elisha Berry has now retired from active business to the village of Versailles, of the same county, but in his life has been prominently identified with the agricultural and mercantile interests of Darke County. He bears a high reputation among his fellow-citizens, and during the past eight years has occupied the honorable and responsible office of County Commissioner in Darke County, and has discharged the duties of that position to the satisfaction of his constituents. John S., the subject of this sketch, attended the common schools of his native county, including the public school at Versailles, Ohio, and the high school at Greenville, Ohio. In 1872, he began teaching school, and was thus engaged for eighteen months. In the spring of 1873, he began the study of medicine under the instruction of his brother-in-law, Dr. J. E. Proctor, of Versailles, Ohio, and spent the winter of 1875 and 1876 in attending lectures at the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati. In the spring of 1876, he entered upon the practice of his profession at Spartansburg, Randolph Co., Ind., where he still continues to reside. Fortunately, he located in a place ready for a competent representative of the medical profession, and was introduced almost immediately into an extensive practice, which, in the meantime, he has greatly enlarged by his prompt and faithful attendance upon his patients, his skill and his successful treatment of their ills, as well as by his genial presence and gentlemanly deportment. He has gained the confidence of his patients, and, although young, has established a professional reputation of which he may justly feel proud. It is beyond our province to predict a career, but we join with his friends in the hope that he may attain the eminence in his profession for which his natural abilities eminently fit him, and toward which his past achievements tend.

RES. OF SAMUEL J. JENNINGS, GREENS FORK TP. RANDOLPH, CO. IND.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill have a family of three daughters, two of whom are now living. Their second daughter, Eva, died April 15, 1867, being nearly four years old. Their eldest daughter, Eudorah (now Mrs. Woodbury), was born August 5, 1860. Eva was born July 7, 1863, and died as stated above. Ginevera was born September 12, 1869. In the fall of 1859, Levi and his young wife settled on the farm where they now reside; the farm at that time consisted of eighty acres, with thirty-five acres improved. At the present time, Mr. Hill owns 100 acres, seventy-five acres improved; his farm is beautifully located one and one-half miles south of Spartansburg, and slopes gently to the south and east, of an excellent quality of soil adapted to the growing of all kinds of grain and pasturage, every field being supplied with living water; his farm is in splendid repair, buildings, fences, etc., being in excellent condition. While he gives his attention to the raising of all kinds of farm products, he makes a speciality of fruits, of which he produces a large variety and fine quality.

He left the farm in the fall of 1873, and removed to Union City, and here he engaged in the book and stationery business for five years, with O. C. Gordon, ex-Treasurer. In this, as in all other business enterprises, he was successful. He was elected Township Assessor in 1860, and served two years; also elected to the office of Township Trustee in 1864, and served one term. In both of these offices he served the people faithfully. While Township Trustee he manifested a deep interest in the success of the schools. He and his wife have been active and honored members of the Disciples' Church, since 1860.

In politics, Mr. Hill is a Republican, and has done much to further the interests of his party in this county. It is Mr. and Mrs. Hill's intention to remove for a time to Irvington, this State, for the purpose of educating their daughter, Ginevera, at Butler University. Mr. and Mrs. Hill and their children are held in high esteem by the community in which they live, and lead a quiet and happy life.

JOHN WESLEY HILL.

John Wesley Hill, merchant, resides in Spartansburg, this county; he is the son of Hiram and Martha Hill, and was born in this county May 2, 1839; he is the fourth of a family of eight children; his father was born in Highland County, Ohio, November 1, 1812; his mother was born in Greene County, Penn., in the year 1810; his father came to this county with his parents in the year 1824, and his mother in the fall of 1819. His parents were married January 24, 1833, and settled on a farm three and one-half miles from Spartansburg. John spent the greater part of his time until twenty-one years of age, in assisting his father to clear up a farm from the forest.

His educational advantages were limited to the common district schools, with the exception of two years in attendance at a graded school at Arba, under the supervision of Thomas and Matthew Charles; he attended this school from 1860 to 1862. It was composed of two grades, and had the reputation of being the best conducted school in the country at the time.

In the fall of 1862, John entered the army as a private in Company F, Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry; he was in active service until the fall of 1863, at which time he was transferred to the Signal Service; he was present and took an active part in the battles of Richmond, Ky., Chickasaw Mountain, Arkansas Post and siege of Vicksburg. At Richmond, Ky., he was taken prisoner, and immediately paroled. After a brief period he was exchanged, and transferred with his regiment to the Army of the Mississippi, under the commands of Grant and Sherman; he was honorably discharged March, 1864, having been prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia; his Captain (Howard) voluntarily offered him a discharge, which he at first refused to accept, but was subsequently induced to do so on account of continued ill-health, and the urgent request of his brother. His army life was both creditable to himself and the country which he served, and Mr. Hill looks back upon this period of his career with great satisfaction, having the consciousness that, as a soldier, he served his country faithfully in the hour of her peril and need.

After his discharge from the army and returning health, he engaged in the insurance business, and pursued it for about six months, when he entered the store of Parker & Hill, of Newport (Fountain City), Wayne County, as a clerk, and remained about one year, and then engaged to Woody & Weeks, of the same place, in the same capacity, and remained until September, 1866, when he entered into copartnership with Barney Marine in a general mercantile business at Arba; his partner transferred his interest in the business, in 1868, to O. C. Gordon. This firm continued until the fall of 1869, when the goods were sold at auction.

Mr. Hill then moved to Spartansburg, and in January, 1870, entered the general mercantile business with E. L. Anderson, as partner. This firm remained in the business until the fall of 1872, at which time Mr. Hill retired, transferring his interest to Mr. Anderson. The following summer, he bought out Mr. Anderson, taking as a partner John Grow, transferring to him a one-third interest. After about one year, Mr. Grow was succeeded by J. A. Thomas. Mr. Thomas remained in the firm until 1878, when he sold his interest to George F. Morgan. After two years' copartnership with Mr. Morgan, Mr. Hill bought his interest, and has since that time conducted the business alone; he is proprietor of the principal business house of the town in mercantile line—his annual sales run from $15,000 to $22,000.

He was elected to the office of Township Trustee in 1870, and served acceptably to the people of his township for four years. During his term of office he took a deep interest in the educational affairs of his township; he erected a number of excellent school buildings, among them one in his town, a two-story brick, commodious and convenient. This building is above the average for towns of the size of Spartansburg. He was married to Julia A. Davis, a step-daughter of Dr. R. H. Morgan, November 16, 1865. Mrs. Hill is a lady of refinement and superior executive ability, and has been of great assistance to her husband in his business. In addition to the cares of the family, she has entire charge of a boarding house for the benefit of transient and permanent boarders.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill have a family of six children, four boys and two girls, as follows: Roscoe R., born August 31, 1866; Pearl I., September 19, 1868; Clarence H., February 26, 1871; Cora M., May 1, 1873; Hugh Fred, February 4, 1875; Howard T. B., October 6, 1876.

This is in many respects a model family—a kind Providence sparing the lives of all their children until the time of writing this sketch. Their home is a model of neatness and domestic harmony. Mrs. Hill is an acceptable and active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. Hill is an honored member of the I. O. O. F. fraternity, and has taken all the degrees of the Encampment, and Grand Lodge Encampment; he joined the Order, August, 1867, and has ever since taken a deep interest in its success. In political preferment, he is a Republican of the stanchest kind, and has never affiliated with any other party.

Mr. Hill leads a quiet and even life, energetic and progressive in his business, is a valuable member of society, and highly respected in the community in which he lives.

SAMUEL J. JENNINGS.

Samuel J. Jennings, a farmer and carpenter, son of Samuel and Margaret (Madren) Jennings, was born in this county October 1, 1833; he is the seventh of a family of nine children, of whom four are now living; his father was born in Pasquotank County, N. C., in the year 1799, and his mother was born in the same State and county in the year 1797. His parents lived in North Carolina until the year 1823, when they came to Indiana and settled near Fountain City, Wayne County. They remained here for three years, when they came to Randolph County and located three miles south of Lynn, where they purchased fifty acres of unimproved land.

The deprivations and hardships they endured were extreme, being in very limited circumstances. So poor were they, their only means of conveyance from North Carolina was a cart drawn by one horse, and from Wayne County to Randolph in a cart drawn by oxen. After their location in this county, Mr. Jennings set to work to clear a farm from the wilderness, and succeeded in securing a very comfortable home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings were honored members of the Baptist Church, and remained faithful until their deaths. Mr. Jennings assisted in the erection of the first church in the eastern part of the State, a log house, situated on Noland's Fork, in Wayne County. The ministers of this church, of whom we will mention Willis Wilmore, Thomas Tuttle, Nathaniel Case and many others, always found a welcome home with Mr. and Mrs. Jennings. Mr. Jennings was a very active member of the church, and it was mainly through his efforts that it was organized and sustained. Mr. Jennings died March 29, 1866, aged sixty-seven years and ten months. His funeral took place at his residence, and was conducted by Rev. Milton Wright, of the United Brethren Church; his remains were interred in Hopewell Cemetery, Wayne County. Mrs. Jennings died October 1, 1878, aged eighty-one years eight months and fourteen days. Funeral services conducted by Rev. F. M. Demunbrun, of the United Brethren Church, and the remains deposited by the side of her husband's.

The subject of this sketch remained with his parents on the farm until he was seventeen years of age, when he and his brother, James, engaged to learn the carpenter trade, which Samuel has worked at faithfully for twenty-eight years with almost unprecedented success; he was by nature especially adapted to the business, and being industrious and ambitious to excel, he acquired the reputation of being one of the best carpenters in the country—a reputation he was fully able to sustain; he has superintended the erection of some of the best buildings in the county, and among the many we will mention Bethel Chapel, which he twice erected, being destroyed by fire; Smith Kinnons' large and handsome barn, and his own beautiful and attractive residence, a view of which is given in this work. In addition to working at his trade, of late years he has given much attention to farming, and in this, as well as that of his trade, he has achieved great success; he is owner and proprietor of 190 acres of excellent land, situated in this county. This land is composed of two tracts, the farm upon which he lives is situated one and one-half miles east of Lynn, and consists of 110 acres; the other is an eighty acre tract, and is located in Nettle Creek Township.

These farms are well improved and under a high state of cultivation. The soil is very productive, and they are beautifully located. They are the results of Mr. Jennings' persevering industry and frugality; his farm buildings are among the most beautiful and convenient of the county. Mr. Jennings being a man of superior taste, has made his home surroundings exquisitely beautiful; his dwelling house is a beautiful two-story structure of modern architecture, situated on a commanding knoll partially surrounded by a grove of unsurpassing beauty; his barns are both large and convenient, and his buildings present a most picturesque group, calculated to challenge the admiration of all.

He was first united in marriage to Mariah Nichols, daughter of Malachi and Sarah Nichols, of this county, January 17, 1854, who shared the joys and sorrows, toils and hardships with her devoted husband until May 14, 1874, when her life-work was ended and she was summoned to a fairer clime and bid a long farewell to her grief-stricken family. She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and a respected friend; her husband owes much of his prosperity to her wise counsels, good judgment and untiring industry. By his first marriage, Mr. Jennings is the father of eight children, two boys and six girls, of whom seven are living. Their eldest two daughters are married, and living in comfortable circumstances in this county; his daughter, Margaret M., married to Lee Manning, and Sarah S. to David A. Moodey, both residents of this county. His eldest son, James, is a deaf mute, caused by sickness when he was four years of age; he has attended the State Institution for Deaf and Dumb at Indianapolis for seven terms, and is a very good scholar. Mr. and Mrs. Jennings have been called to mourn the death of one child, a daughter, who died when eight months of age.

Mr. Jennings was united in a second marriage to Mrs. Sarah J. Moore, daughter of Thomas and Nancy Bookout, pioneers of this county, December 9, 1875. She was the widow of Miles Moore. Mrs. Jennings is a very amiable woman, kind and affectionate, and has been a faithful and devoted mother to Mr. Jennings' children. They are both acceptable and honored members of the United Brethren Church of Bethel Chapel. Mr. Jennings is President of the Board of Trustees of this church, a position he has held continuously for several years. He was drafted into the service of the United States in September, 1864, but having a family depending upon him for support, he employed a substitute, paying $1,000.

While working at his trade, he received two very serious falls, one of which came very near ending his life, from the effects of which he has never entirely recovered. He has a limited education, obtained from the common district schools; is a man of superior energy, perseverance and frugality; he has secured a competency of worldly effects, and is surrounded with all of the necessaries and luxuries of life. He is a man of unquestioned integrity, a useful citizen, and he and his good wife are honored members of society.

SAMUEL G. HILL, farmer, P. O. Arba. This enterprising gentleman, who owns a fine farm of 160 acres in Section 7, on which he resides, is the son of Hiram and Martha (Mann) Hill, who were born in 1812, the former in Ohio and the latter in Pennsylvania. The subject of this sketch was born in this county January 7, 1838; he was educated at Lebanon, Ohio. Mr. Hill enlisted July 20, 1861, in Company C, Nineteenth Indiana Infantry. He participated in numerous battles, and was classed among the brave and fearless. On the 28th of August, while engaged in the battle of second Bull Run, he received a severe wound, and lay on the field (without food or drink, except one cracker) until September 6, when removed and cared for by his comrades; he was taken to Washington, D. C., where he remained in the hospital until November; thence to Baltimore, where he was discharged on February 11, 1863. The event of his marriage took place August 11, 1866, to Margaret E. Peelle, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., April 1, 1847; she is the daughter of John and Lydia (Price) Peelle. Mr. and Mrs. H. have been blessed with six children, viz.: Effie L., born June 27, 1867; Nora L., October 15, 1869; John I., November 6, 1871; Lillie G., September 5, 1873; Stuart O., March 4, 1876; and Orlie E., born April 20, 1879. Mr. H. is a member of Spartansburg Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 287. Mr. Hill was initiated into the mysteries of the I. O. O. F. on the 11th day of August, 1859, at Winchester; he also joined the Christian Church on the 11th day of the month. Mr. and Mrs. Hill are both members of the Christian Church.

HENRY W. HORN, farmer, P. O. Arba. This estimable gentleman was born in Wayne County, N. C., May 14, 1829; is the son of Henry and Miriam (Wood) Horn, who were natives of the above county and State, the former born September 23, 1787, and the latter March 20, 1793. Mr. Horn became a resident of this county in 1832; he was educated at the Manual Labor School of Parke County, Ind. In 1856, he, as one of the firm of H. & H. W. Horn, opened a store at Arba, carrying a full and complete stock of general merchandise; he was at the same time appointed Postmaster; he continued in the mercantile business until in 1871; since then he has been engaged in farming and stock-raising. The event of his marriage took place December 9, 1874. The chosen companion through life, Mrs. Ann Nichols, is a native of this county, born April 13, 1828; she is the daughter of Jonathan and Huldah (Way) Johnson, who were natives of North Carolina, the former born December 24, 1800, and the latter April 4, 1810. Mr. Horn and his worthy lady are consistent members of the Society of Friends, and enjoy the respect and confidence of all who know them.

THOMAS HOUGH resides on his farm in Greensfork Township, adjoining the town of Spartansburg; he was born at Steubenville, Jefferson Co., Ohio, in 1807, and came to Greene County in 1817, and from thence to Butler County in 1827. The business in which he engaged led him to various places afterward. For some time, he resided in Cincinnati, Ohio; then in Boone County, Ky.; then in Cincinnati again; then in the State of Missouri, and again in Cincinnati, and finally he settled down at Spartansburg in 1849, which has been his home ever since. Mr. Hough's father was an early pioneer and among the first that landed at South Bend, and he was acquainted with all the old Indian spies. Mr. Hough's uncle, Benjamin Hough, was the first Auditor of the State of Ohio. The subject of this sketch was occupied in early life as a traveling salesman and collector for both wholesale and retail merchants; he made many trips through the Southern States, where Northern men were looked upon with suspicion; his way of life was in those days very rough and oftentimes attended with danger; but, being an adventurous spirit, he rather enjoyed it; he can say to his credit that he never was sued for a debt of his own nor ever was a delinquent taxpayer. His first wife was Catherine Depew; her father was in the war of 1812, and her mother rode on horseback from Rapidan, Va., to Boone County, Ky., in 1793. His second wife was Mary W. Ramney, and died in 1873. As a citizen of Randolph, he is well and favorably known, having served in Greensfork Township in the official capacity of Justice of the Peace for nearly twenty-four years, and very rarely were his decisions appealed from. In his solemn duties as a Justice of the Peace, he has been called upon by 108 pair of matrimonial adventurers, for whom he tied the nuptial knot. After his last election to the office he honored so long, he became weary of official life and resigned. On his docket, after the last entry officially made by him, he wrote a farewell address to public life, closing it with these lines:

"Don't view me with a critic's eye,
But pass all my imperfections by."

EMSLEY JACKSON, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born in North Carolina November 18, 1828; he is the son of Joseph and Rosanna (Bright) Jackson, the former born in North Carolina, and the latter in North Carolina April 21, 1806. The subject of our sketch became a resident of this county in 1834; he was married February 8, 1849, to Frances P. Roberson, who was born in North Carolina November 11, 1825; she was the daughter of William and Mariam (Elliott) Roberson, who were natives of the above State, the former born January 20, 1802, and the latter July 18, 1804. Mr. Jackson settled on Section 3, where he resided at the time of his death in 1882; he left to his heirs at his demise a fine farm of forty acres; he was a member of Spartansburg Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 287. We can say of him that he was a thorough gentleman, respected by all who knew him. Mr. Jackson's family now consists of four children, viz.: James L., born August 8, 1853; John C., June 10, 1856; Albert L., October 6, 1858; and Sarah J., born October 22, 1861. Mrs. Jackson deceased August 6, 1866.

JOHN W. JACKSON, farmer, P. O. Bethel, Ind., was born in Randolph County, Ind., December 8, 1834. He is the son of Joseph and Rosanna (Bright) Jackson, who were natives of North Carolina. Mr. Jackson was married, July 18, 1857, to Letitia Barnes, who was born in North Carolina March 30, 1839. She is the daughter of Abner and Kesiah (Jackson) Barnes, who were natives of North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson have been blessed with five children, viz.: Amanda L., born August 16, 1859; Joseph E., born December 28, 1861; Charles T., born April 6, 1864; Monty L., born October 6, 1866, and Carrie B., born July 27, 1869. Mr. Jackson owns a well-improved farm of ninety acres, in Section 36, on which he has resided since 1861. He is a member of Bethel F. & A. M., No. 250. He and his worthy lady are consistent members of the U. B. Church, and are highly respected by all who know them.

JAMES M. JACKSON, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born in Guilford County, N. C., April 2, 1810. He is the son of John and Elizabeth (Millis) Jackson, who were natives of Maryland. Mr. Jackson became a resident of Indiana in 1833, and of this county in 1834, when he entered the eighty acres of land on which he now lives, and at the same time purchased an adjoining eighty. The event of his marriage took place January 2, 1839, to Dortha Cartwright, who was born October 9, 1817. She was the daughter of Hezekiah and Elizabeth Cartwright, who were natives of North Carolina. This union was blessed with four children, three of whom are living, viz.: Elizabeth A., born December 12, 1839; John W., March 3, 1841, and Hezekiah K., September 3, 1842. Mrs. Jackson died February 22, 1844. Mr. Jackson was married, January 6, 1847, to Mrs. Ann Jackson, who was born in North Carolina April 21, 1806. She is the daughter of James and Margaret (Griffin) Bright, who were natives of Maryland. This last union has been blessed with two children—Mary J., born November 1, 1847, and Sarah E., May 25, 1849. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson are worthy members of the M. E. Church, and are highly respected by all who know them. Mrs. Jackson died July 15, 1881.

JOHN W. JACKSON, JR., farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, son of James M. and Dortha (Cartwright) Jackson, who were natives of North Carolina; the former was born April 2, 1810, and the latter October 9, 1817. The subject of our sketch was born in this county March 3, 1841. He was educated in the district schools of the county. Mr. Jackson enlisted, August 9, 1862, in Company F, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry. His first experience of the realities of military life was at the battle of Richmond, Ky., where he was taken prisoner, but after a few days was paroled, and went into camp at Richmond, Indiana, where he remained until October, when sent to Memphis, Tenn.; thence to Vicksburg, where he was under constant fire for five days, falling back to Arkansas Post; thence to Milligan's Bend. The winter of 1862-63 was spent working on the canal in front of Vicksburg. The next battle participated in was at Port Gibson, where Mr. Jackson was wounded on May 1, 1863. After remaining in the hospital for six weeks, he joined his regiment near Vicksburg, and was there at the time of the surrender; thence to Jackson, Miss. From there back to Vicksburg, and took part in the Teche expedition; thence to Texas, where they remained during the winter. Took part in the Red River expedition, after which, for a period of six months, served as a patrol on the Mississippi River; thence to Mobile Bay. From there to Florida; thence back, and assisted in the capture of Fort Blakely. Assisted in taking the prisoners to Ship Island, coming back to Selma, Ala., where he remained for one month; thence to Mobile, where he was discharged July 5, 1865. Mr. Jackson was married, April 22, 1871, to Jennie Bowen, who was born in Randolph County January 31, 1847. She is the daughter of Ephraim L. and Ruth (Dwiggins) Bowen. This union was blessed with Bertha M., born May 13, 1872. Mrs. Jackson died July 1, 1877. Mr. Jackson then battled the hardships of life alone until April 7, 1881, when he was united in marriage with Louisa S. Davis, who was born in Ohio December 17, 1855. She is the daughter of Daniel and Nancy (Hancock) Davis, the former born in Maryland October 15, 1833, and the latter in Ohio October 6, 1836. Mr. Jackson is a member of Spartansburg I. O. O. F, No. 287, and of Pleasant Grove Grange, No. 226, and is known as a thorough gentleman.

ROBERT JORDAN, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born in Butler County, Ohio, November 9, 1814, and is the son of Robert and Sarah (Wimmer) Jordan, the former a native of Ireland, and the latter of New Jersey. The subject of this sketch became a resident of this county February 7, 1866, settling where he now resides. He was married in 1832 to Rebecca Welch, who was born in Butler County, Ohio, September 12, 1814. She was the daughter of William and Mary (Burget) Welch. This union was blessed with two children—Elias P., born April 1, 1833, and Nancy, May 1, 1846. Mr. Jordan's second marriage took place January 18, 1854, to Hester A. Harris, who was a native of Butler County, Ohio. The result of this union has been four children, viz.: James, born November 5, 1864; Clara J., June 20, 1856; Hannah M., March 13, 1859, and Robert, born March 3, 1863. Mr. Jordan owns a well-improved farm of eighty acres in Section 30, and is a thorough gentleman, and highly respected by all who know him.

SAMUEL KESLER, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born in New Jersey January 1, 1819. He is the son of George Kesler, who was also a native of the above State. The subject of our sketch left the parental roof when nine years of age. He first went to Cincinnati, and was employed on a boat plying between there and Louisville, Ky., but, after making a few trips, he became tired of river life and concluded to try farming. He found no trouble in securing the desired employment with Amos Barr, a farmer near Lebanon, Ohio, with whom he remained for a number of years. Mr. Kesler has been married three times. His last marriage took place April 1, 1861, to Mary Curts, who was born in Ohio April 1, 1831. She is the daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Royer) Curts. Mr. and Mrs. Kesler have been blessed with three children, viz.: George W. and Henry, who were born April 18, 1862, and Sarah E., born January 26, 1864. Mr. Kesler became a resident of this county in 1862, and has, with the exception of one year spent in saw-milling at Union City, been engaged in farming. He owns a neat farm of sixty acres in Section 35, on which he resides. He is an industrious, enterprising gentleman, respected by all who know him.

LEVI J. LINZY, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born in South Carolina March 22, 1827. He is the son of Levi W. K. Linzy and Epsey Thompson, who were natives of the above State. When eleven years old, he was taken to Mississippi, where he was held in bondage for thirteen years, when he escaped and came to Shelby County, Ind., where he remained for one year. He then became a resident of this county, and was employed at farm work until 1853, when he went to Canada, where he remained until 1855, when he went into the lumbering districts of Michigan, and worked at saw-milling for one year; thence back to Canada. From there to Wisconsin, and was again engaged in saw-milling until July, 1858, when he returned to this county. He was married August 18, 1859, to Nancy Thompson, who was born in South Carolina July 19, 1844. She is the daughter of William Thompson, who was also a native of the above State. Mr. and Mrs. Linzy have had born to them ten children, six of whom are living, viz.: John F., born October 26, 1860; Charles B., September 30, 1862; Levi J., October 20, 1864; Cassius E., February 1, 1870; William A., October 24, 1874, and Mary J., April 15, 1877. Mr. Linzy enlisted in 1864 in Company G, Thirty-third Indiana Infantry. On his way South, he was taken sick, and remained in the hospital at Chattanooga for several months, joining his command again at Raleigh, N. C. From there, he marched with Gen. Sherman's command to Richmond, Va., where he was again taken sick. From there, he was sent to McDougle Hospital, of New York, where he was discharged May 2, 1865. Mr. Linzy is a member of the M. E. Church, and highly respected by all who know him. He owns a farm of sixty-four acres in Section 12, on which he resides.

GEORGE W. MANN, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, who was born in Butler County, Ohio, October 15, 1827, is the son of Thomas and Sarah (Bush) Mann, who were natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Mann became a resident of this county in 1841. He was married in October, 1848, to Willie Wiggs, daughter of William Wiggs. This union was blessed with Angeline, who was born May 10, 1849. In 1850, death entered the home circle, and took from it the estimable wife and mother. Mr. Mann then battled the hardships of life alone until January 23, 1853, when he married Lucinda L. Parker, who was born in Darke County, Ohio, May 14, 1830. Her father and mother, Samuel and Elizabeth (John) Parker, were natives of Pennsylvania, the former born March 7, 1797. Mr. and Mrs. Mann have had born to them nine children, eight of whom are living, viz., Albert H., born July 9, 1854; Samuel L., November 12, 1855; Rhoda B., June 3, 1857; John E., February 15, 1859; Elmira C., October 29, 1860; Minnie L., October 27, 1865; Mary E., May 21, 1868, and Ruth E., born January 3, 1871. Mr. Mann settled where he now resides, in Section 4, in 1875. He owns a well-improved farm of 102 acres. He is a thorough gentleman, highly respected by all who know him.

JOHN F. MIDDLETON, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, was born on the farm where he now resides November 26, 1842. He is the son of Thomas A. and Sarah (Borders) Middleton, the former born in Guilford County, N. C., November 5, 1799, and the latter in Virginia in 1804. The subject of our sketch was educated at the Industrial Academy of Wayne County, Ind. He enlisted August 18, 1862, in Company F, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry. Mr. Middleton took part in the battle of Richmond, Ky., where he was taken prisoner, and after three days paroled and sent to Camp Wayne, at Richmond, Ind., where he remained for two months. At the expiration of that time, he was exchanged and sent to the Department of the Cumberland, under Gen. Grant. After participating in the battles of Chickasaw Bluff and Arkansas Post, he went into winter quarters at Young's Point. During the campaign of 1863, he took part in numerous battles, among which may be mentioned Port Gibson, Champion Hill, the siege of Vicksburg, etc. Was transferred to the Gulf Department in the fall of 1863. Spent the winter of 1863–64 at Indianola, Tex. From there, he was sent to assist in the Red River expedition. He was then with a marine corps detailed to guard the river between New Orleans and Vicksburg until November 1. Thence to Mobile Bay, in the vicinity of which he spent the winter of 1864–65. From there to Florida. Thence to the siege of Fort Blakely, after which he returned to Mobile, where he remained during the summer. Was mustered out of service July 5. Mr. Middleton was married, August 20, 1865, to Serena Alexander, who was born in Preble County, Ohio, April 21, 1847. She is the daughter of Clement F. and Rebecca (Parks) Alexander, the former born in Ohio May 2, 1817, and the latter in Indiana December 18, 1816. This union has been blessed with two children—Ida, born May 19, 1866, and Thomas, born February 14, 1871. Mr. Middleton was elected Trustee of Greensfork Township in 1880. He owns a fine farm of 128 acres in Section 2, on which he resides. He is known by many friends and acquaintances as a sterling gentleman.

JAMES ST. MYERS, farmer, P. O. Winchester. This gentleman, born in Warren County, Ohio, June 22, 1834, is the son of John St. Myers, who was a native of Virginia. The subject of our sketch became a resident of this State in 1837, settling in Wayne County. The event of his marriage took place October 8, 1857. The chosen companion through life, Margaret A. Clark, was born in North Carolina December 16, 1836. She is the daughter of Eli and Malinda (Rayl) Clark, who were natives of North Carolina. Mr. St. Myers settled where he now resides in 1867. His farm consists of eighty acres of well-improved land in Section 11; his buildings are of a neat, substantial class; he and his worthy lady have been blessed with three children—John A., born November 5, 1858: Sarah E., September 3, 1866, and George E., born September 21, 1873.

GEOEGE W. PERKINS, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, born in this county March 10, 1841, is the son of Nathaniel and Mary (Roberts) Perkins, the former born in North Carolina September 29, 1810, and the latter in Ohio April 8, 1820. The subject of this sketch was married, December 31, 1863, to Josephine Austin, who was born in Butler County, Ohio. She is the daughter of Jesse and Sarah (Chana) Austin. Mr. Perkins enlisted March 2, 1864, in Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Infantry. He was engaged in numerous battles, among which may be mentioned, Columbia, Franklin and Nashville, of Tennessee; he was mustered out of service September 16, 1865, and has since been engaged in farming. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins have been blessed with five children, viz.: George E., born May 1, 1864; Ulysses G., October 7, 1866; Sarah J., August 29, 1869; Mary L., March 5, 1871, and Emma G., born January 7, 1873. Mr. Perkins is a sterling gentleman, and is highly respected by all who know him.

REUBEN RANDLE, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, born in Preble County, Ohio, January 28, 1832, is the son of John and Lydia (Sawyer) Randle. The subject of this sketch has been a resident of this county since 1833. He was married, January 22, 1855, to Elizabeth Thompson, who was born in South Carolina August 24, 1833. This union has been blessed with four children, viz.: John W. E., born March 6, 1858; Mary L., May 22, 1860; Lydia E., October 12, 1862, and Sarepta J., September 16, 1863. Mr. and Mrs. Randle are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are highly respected citizens.

JAMES B. RUBEY, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg. This estimable gentleman, born in Union County, Ind., December 25, 1829, is the son of Joseph W. and Ann (Harlan) Rubey, the former born in Kentucky September 25, 1805, and the latter in Union County, Ind., July 14, 1808. Mr. Rubey settled with his parents on the farm where he now resides March 7, 1858. The event of his marriage took place December 30, 1855. The chosen companion through life, Miss Christina Middleton, was born in this county September 16, 1835. She is the daughter of Samuel H. and Christina (Tharp) Middleton, the former born in Westmoreland County, Va., March 4, 1794, and the latter in North Carolina May 28, 1790. Mr. and Mrs. Rubey have been blessed with two children—Matthew H., born October 27, 1856, and Mary C., August 3, 1858. Mr. Rubey is a consistent member of the Christian Church, and is an active worker in Pleasant Grove Grange, No. 226. He owns 260 acres of land, and may be classed among the enterprising farmers of this community. His early literary advantages were such as the pioneer youth generally enjoy; but nature has compensated largely for the lack of early opportunities. He believes in advancement, and is ever found willing to aid in any enterprise that tends to elevate and improve the standing of society.

JOHN. C. RUBY, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, son of Samuel F. and Jane Ruby. They were married in Darke County, Ohio, September 15, 1836. Father was born in Kentucky April 27, 1812; came with his parents to Union County, Ind. Afterward studied medicine with his brother, James, at Bethel, Wayne County, Ind., and became a very successful physician. About 1842, he purchased the farm now owned by John C., where he died December 31, 1858. Mother was born in Pennsylvania February 17, 1818; came to Greene County, Ohio, with her parents, while in infancy, and two years previous to her marriage, she settled with her parents in Darke County, Ohio. John C. was born on the farm he now owns December 14, 1843. Mrs. Mary Jane Ruby was born November 1, 1846, on the farm then and now owned by her father, James M. Jackson. They were married, January 7, 1866. The subject of this sketch was deprived, by death, of his father when in his youth, and being the eldest boy living, the care of the family and farm depended upon him and his mother. How well they each done their part, present evidence will show by the many pleasant homes they enjoy. Enlisted in Company F, Sixty-ninth Regiment Infantry Indiana Volunteers, July 30th, and mustered in August 19, 1862. Was taken prisoner at Richmond, Ky., but was immediately paroled, and went into camp at Richmond, Ind., until they were exchanged, when they went to Memphis, Tenn., where John C. fell ill with the measles; was afterward removed to Mound City. His brother repaired thither, and helped to obtain his discharge. Regaining his health, he again enlisted in his old company July 4, 1864, and joined his regiment at Morganza Bend, La. Was in all the battles and skirmishing that his regiment was engaged in while he was with them. His time did not expire until after the regiment was mustered out, and was transferred to Twenty-fourth Regiment, Indiana Infantry Volunteers, and was mustered out in October, 1865. Since then, has followed the occupation of farming. Mr. Ruby has one of the pleasantest homes in his township. His farm consists of 132½ acres of fine farming land, and the improvements attest the enterprise and thrift of its owner. They have one daughter—Aura Bell, born October 27, 1866. They also have an adopted son—Dilbert (Hunt) Ruby, born June 21, 1869. Mrs. Ruby is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, Mr. Ruby is a Republican. In domestic relations, a kind, devoted and indulgent husband and father.

WILLIAM SASSER, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg. This estimable gentleman, born in Wayne County, N. C., October 13, 1811, is the son of William and Susanna (Starlan) Sasser, who were natives of the above State and county. The subject of this sketch, in company with his mother, came to Randolph County in 1830. They purchased a farm near where he now resides, on which they settled. Mr. Sasser was married October 14, 1830, to Elizabeth Ozbun, who was born in Guilford County, N. C. After marriage, Mr. S. rented land, and was engaged in farming for ten years. At the expiration of that time, he moved to Hamilton County, Ind., and purchased a farm of forty acres, which he shortly afterward sold, and then entered eighty acres, on which he settled and began to improve, but soon after met with an opportunity to sell out to advantage, did so and returned to this county; lived on rented land for two years; then purchased a farm of forty acres near Spartansburg, on which he resided for three years; since then he has bought and sold numerous farms, made many improvements, and it may be said of him that he is closely identified with the early and lasting improvements of this section of the county; he has always been very successful in his undertakings, and is noted for his fair and upright dealings; he settled on the farm of 120 acres where he now resides in 1877. For over forty years, he has been an earnest worker in the Christian Church, and is a thorough gentleman in all respects. He is the father of nine children, eight of whom are living, viz.: John, born July 28, 1831; Joel, October 15, 1832; Ollen, May 13, 1836; Susanna, March 28, 1839; Abraham, June 13, 1842; Benjamin F., January 20, 1844; Sarah E., July 30, 1847; and Martha E., born October 16, 1852. Mrs. Sasser deceased January 1, 1877.

JOSEPH SHAW was one of the early inhabitants of Spartansburg, Greensfork Township; he was the father of Benjamin R. Shaw, of Spartansburg, and Gideon Shaw, of Winchester. Joseph was born in Bucks County, Penn., in 1796, and came to Waynesville, Ohio, when a young man; he was a shoemaker by trade, and being weary of the bench swopped his shop and stock and town residence for eighty acres of land in Ohio and 104 acres in the extreme southeast corner of Randolph County, Ind.; he took up his residence on the last named tract in 1830. The family lived there twenty-five years, and then moved to Hollandsburg, Ohio; then to Bethel, and last to Spartansburg, where he died in 1860. The wife of Joseph was Sarah Ramsey, who was brought up at Milford, Ohio, on the Ohio River. Joseph and Sarah had twelve children, six boys and six girls, who were all living at home at one time. Mrs. Shaw died some time after her husband. The following were some of the Shaw family: Lydia Ann, the wife of Harrison Anderson. Gideon Shaw, who was born in 1821, who has been twice married, and has five children; he resided first on the old farm, then at Spartansburg, and for many years at Winchester; he has been an active trader and broker, and become very wealthy; in politics he inclines toward Democracy. Hester Shaw was married to Joseph Thomas: she died early, leaving a son, who is a teacher. Mary Elizabeth Shaw died young. Jasper Shaw was a merchant and tailor, and died leaving four children. Rachel Manning is a resident of Spartansburg, and has ten children. John Thompson Shaw is a merchant tailor of Union City; he has been there sixteen years, and has six children. Martin Van Buren Shaw died young. Martha Polly resides in Union City, and has one child. Benjamin R. Shaw was born January 31, 1823; he married Delilah Mann in 1848; they have five children. Benjamin has been a farmer and by trade a carpenter, but for the last thirty years he has been a note shaver and a pettifogger, and in the latter business has achieved considerable notoriety; he has often been in close combat with stout limbs of the law, and came out first best; he has resided in Spartansburg for twenty years; he was originally a Henry Clay Whig, and in 1860 voted for Lincoln; he is now an active and influential Democrat; he is a member of the Disciples' Church; by his industry and close attention to business he has gathered about him a nice competence of worldly goods, and he owns some of the finest farming lands in Greensfork Township; he is kind and courteous to his neighbors and friends, and is the Democratic sage of the community in which he lives.

WILLIAM SLICK, farmer, P. O. Arba, was born in Seneca County, Ohio, in July, 1829; he is the son of David and Eleanor (Messler) Slick, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Maryland. Mr. Slick was married October 16, 1854, to Armecy Elliott, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., May 10, 1835; she is the daughter of Miles and Francis (Newburn) Elliott, who were natives of North Carolina, the former born in March, 1795, and the latter in May, 1803. Mr. and Mrs. Slick have had born to them eight children, six of whom are living, viz.: George W., born October 22, 1856; Perry, November 22, 1860; Anna J., March 29, 1863; William H., March 20, 1866; Mary F., September 4, 1867; and Amanda E., September 6, 1870. Mr. Slick became a resident of this county in 1851: he owns 380 acres of land and is an industrious farmer; he and his worthy lady are members of New Light Church, and are respected by all who know them.

JOHN H. TAYLOR, druggist, P. O. Spartansburg. This gentleman, born in North Carolina October 30, 1824, is the son of William and Tellitha (Hedgepath) Taylor, who were natives of the above State. Mr. Taylor became a resident of this county in 1835; his education was such as the pioneer youths generally enjoy. The event of his marriage took place February 19, 1846, to Sarah Horn, who was born in this county November 9, 1827; she is the daughter of Jose and Penina (Fulgum) Horn, who were natives of Guilford County, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have been blessed with nine children, four of whom are living, viz.: Ira S., born February 20, 1855; Thomas L., September 24, 1856; John W., February 6, 1859; and Frank R., born August 11, 1861. Mr. Taylor was engaged in farming until 1849, when he began the manufacture of boots and shoes at Spartansburg. In 1854, he extended his business, and opened a salesroom, carrying a full line of boots, shoes and notions, and was thus engaged until 1857, when he sold out and purchased a farm near the village, on which he resided for two years; at the expiration of this time, he was elected Trustee of Greensfork Township, and in order to attend promptly to the duties devolving upon him, he sold his farm and returned to Spartansburg. At the expiration of his term of office, he again began the manufacture of boots and shoes, and was thus engaged until 1880, when he purchased a full line of drugs and notions, in which business he is now successfully engaged. He is a member of Bethel Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 250.

LUTHER TILLSON, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg. This estimable gentleman, born in Darke County, Ohio, April 18, 1817, is the son of Leonard and Lydia (Cood) Tillson, the former born in Vermont November 11, 1794, and the latter in North Carolina September 10, 1789. The subject of this sketch was married, December 20, 1849, to Catharine N. Rhodes, who was a native of Darke County, Ohio, born March 30, 1827. She is the daughter of Samuel and Jane (Jones) Rhodes, the former born in Vermont January 22, 1787, and the latter in Kentucky October 2, 1793. This union has been blessed with five children, viz., Rosaltha A., born September 29, 1858, and deceased August 20, 1855; Clarissa E., October 14, 1852; William L., September 19, 1855; Harriet E., November 28, 1858, and Walter A., March 14, 1862. Mr. Tillson has, with the exception of the year 1856, which was spent at Hillsboro, Ind., resided in this county since 1854. He purchased and settled on the farm where he now lives in 1878. He owns fifty acres of well-improved land. He and his worthy lady are members of the Christian Church, and are highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

JOSEPH H. THORPE, farmer, P. O. Arba, was born in Wayne County, Ind., August 5, 1832. He is the son of John and Anna (Middleton) Thorpe, who were natives of North Carolina, the former born February 10, 1792, and the latter March 9, 1796. Mr. Thorpe was married November 13, 1858, to Hannah Clevenger, who was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, August 9, 1840. She is the daughter of Thomas and Mary Clevenger, the former born September 27, 1818, and the latter August 3, 1819. This union has been blessed with four children, viz., Marshal E. S. born August 7, 1859; Stephen O. E., July 5, 1864; Thomas I. C., May 20, 1870, and Oliver J. R., December 20, 1871. Marshal E. S. died September 4, 1862. Mr. Thorpe became a resident of this county in 1859. He owns 125 acres of land in Section 34, on which he resides. Mr. and Mrs. Thorpe are members of the Society of Friends, and are highly respected citizens.

P. M. B. THOMPSON, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, son of William and Lucinda Thompson; father was born and raised in South Carolina; was born May 26, 1796, and died in spring of 1871. His mother was born in Virginia about 1806, and when quite young was taken to South Carolina, where she married Mr. Thompson. They emigrated to Mississippi about 1843, where they remained about seven years, when they came to this county, and settled on the farm now owned by the widow and her son, P. M. B. The subject of this sketch was born in South Carolina February 4, 1843, and emigrated with his parents. He remained with them until April, 1863, when he enlisted in Company F, Fifth United States Colored Troops. Was in the battles of Petersburg, Deep Bottom and Fort Fisher; also several other hard-fought battles; was mustered out in October, 1865. Then he engaged in teaching school, both North and South, for several years. September 1, 1870, he enlisted in Company D, Twenty-fourth United States Regulars, and did effective service for five years. Was mustered out September 1, 1875. Since then has followed the occupation of farming. Mr. Thompson procured a furlough in March, 1864, and came to Nashville, Tenn., and married Malinda Joiner, when he immediately returned to his regiment, which was then stationed at Eagle Pass, Tex. They have one child—David T. Thompson—a bright, promising youth. Mr. Thompson obtained a good education, under the instruction of Prof. E. Tucker, at the U. L. Institution of Greensfork Township. By indomitable pluck, energy, perseverance and intelligence, industry, and by economical and temperate habits, he has accumulated a nice property. His wife is a member of the A. M. E. Church. It is almost needless to state that Mr. Thompson is a strong Republican.

HENRY WISE, farmer, P. O. Spartansburg, a native of Germany, was born May 5, 1836. He is the son of Melchior and Elizabeth (Feiling) Wise, who were born in Germany. The subject of our sketch emigrated to the United States in 1854, landing at New York February 11. From there he went to Cincinnati, and worked in a foundry for six months. Thence to Greenville, Ohio, where he remained for about two years. Thence to Spartansburg, this county, where he chose as his occupation farming. Mr. Wise was married August 18, 1860, to Hannah L. Bowen, who was born in this county January 27, 1843. She is the daughter of Ephraim L. and Ruth (Dwiggins) Bowen. This union has been blessed with six children, viz., Elnora L., born November 22, 1861; John O., April 21, 1863; Lizzie M., September 15, 1866; Hattie R., January 22, 1868; Ulrey C., April 21, 1870, and Florence O., born March 7, 1874. Mr. Wise enlisted, August 9, 1862, in Company F, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry. He participated in numerous battles. Among which may be mentioned Richmond, Ky., Arkansas Post, Port Gibson, Champion Hill, the siege of Vicksburg, the Red River expedition, assisting in the capture of Fort Blakely, etc. Mr. Wise, as a soldier, had an extensive experience, and was always found at his post of duty. Mr. Wise owns a fine farm of 120 acres, and is extensively engaged in farming and the breeding of fine stock. He is a member of the M. E. Church, and is known as a thorough gentleman.

RES. OF JACOB LASLEY, WASHINGTON TP. RANDOLPH CO. IND.

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP.

DESCRIPTION.

Contains about forty-four square miles, being eight miles north and south and five and a half miles east and west. The southern part lies upon Green's Fork and its two main branches and various smaller ones, and the north part upon the headwaters of White River and Salt, Sugar, Sparrow and Eight Mile Creeks.

The valley of Green's Fork is a fine body of land, excellent and fruitful from the very first opening of the country; and, by the industry and thrift of the early settlers and the activity of their successors, that region has become the very garden of Randolph County. In fact, the whole township is a flourishing and prosperous region. The settlement of Washington was next after that of Greensfork. The first occupation of Greensfork was during 1814. It is not certainly known that any settlers came into Washington Township in 1814, though two entries of 160 acres each, both made by the same person, were done in 1814, one in May and the other in October.

Seven entries were made in 1815 by five persons, in the order named: Curtis Cleny, Obadiah Harris, John Ozbun, Paul Beard and George Frazier. Whether these came first, and, if so, which one, is not now known. The testimony accessible would seem to show that settlement was not made for a year or two longer, but it appears hardly possible that so many entries should be made, and that by persons who became actual and permanent residents, and yet that all of them delayed so long to occupy their lands.

To show the uncertainty that rests upon the matter, Curtis Cleny's entry is made January 7, 1815, and yet he himself states, in his "Reminiscences," written by his own hand a few years ago, that he entered his land in February, 1817. Paul Beard, Sr., entered his land in August, 1815, yet his son, Paul Beard, Jr., thinks his father did not come till the spring of 1817. Jesse Johnson entered his land in November, 1816, but his son, Silas Johnson, then a lad of sixteen and still living, says his father came in the spring of 1817.

In the midst of imperfect memory and conflicting statements by those most likely to possess correct knowledge, literal accuracy is, of course, out of the question. The chronicler can only balance the statements and guess at the truth, with the strong probability that he will be wrong at least half the time. Washington settled rapidly. Three hundred and twenty acres were entered in 1814; 1,120 acres were taken up in 1815, in Sections 9, 10 and 11; 2,080 acres were purchased in 1816 in various sections; 2,880 acres were entered in 1817; 3,310 acres were entered in 1818; 880 acres were entered in 1819.

And it is, perhaps, remarkable that among the sixty-seven entries made up to the end of 1819, fifty-three were quarter-sections, one was a half-section and one a whole section, and not a single forty-acre tract in the whole number. This fact goes to show that the settlers of that region were mostly in middling circumstances, able to raise the price of a quarter-section. And this goes far to explain the present fact of the easy circumstances of the great body of those who are now dwellers in that portion of the county. A home of 160 acres made a good starting point, and right well, in very many cases, has that foundation been built upon, as the substantial wealth and permanent prosperity of the citizens of that township abundantly show.

The names of the principal pioneers of Washington Township will appear in the following list of entries, made up to August, 1827, though, of course, this does not determine the dates of settlement, nor the actual settlers, as they may have been here either before or after the entry, or not at all.

It is a curious fact how often certain names occur in the census of 1880 in Washington Township; e. g., there are 103 Johnsons, 98 Hinshaws, 33 Hodsons, 30 Lykinses, 27 Hutchenses, 20 Kellys, 17 Joneses (including children). In Greensfork, there are 49 Bowens, and others still occur with great frequency. Other names, moreover, that were very frequent in pioneer days, have nearly disappeared. But so it is, "sic transit gloria mundi" (so passeth the glory of the world).

Washington Township lies in four different Congressional Townships, viz., in Townships 18 and 19, Range 13, and in 18 and 19, Range 14, with the following sections in each: Township 18, Range 13, Sections 1, 12 and 13; Township 19, Range 13, Sections 12, 13, 24, 35, 36; Township 18, Range 14, Sections west half of 2, 11, 14, Sections 3 to 10, and 15 to 18; Township 19, Range 14, Sections west half of 11, 14, 23, 26, 35, Sections 7 to 10, 15 to 22, 27 to 34.

Washington contains about 28,260 acres of land, more than 10,000 of which had been taken up within five years from the first settlement.

RELIGION.

The preponderating religious element at the first settlement of the township was Quaker. A large body of the pioneers belonged to the Friends, and, in a short time, two meetings were established, viz., Lynn and Cherry Grove, which have been maintained in a vigorous and prosperous existence to the present time. Other societies, also, found early footing in that region. Methodist "Circuit Riders" threaded the whole country, proclaiming redemption through a crucified and risen Savior. A Presbyterian Church existed in 1846, and for some years before and after that time, called Liberty Church. Other churches have been formed and maintained with a more or less vigorous growth for many years past.

SCHOOLS.

We have obtained no very definite information as to the commencement of schools in Washington Township. The history of that matter in that region is doubtless similar to other portions in the county. There was no efficient school system, and each neighborhood went on its "own hook," building something, though only a log cabin, for a schoolhouse, and employing a teacher as occasion offered. In Quaker neighborhoods, schools were held often in the churches, and sometimes schoolhouses were built near the meeting-houses, and schools were maintained by the societies. Frequently, the first schools were kept in private houses, the teacher taking her pupils into her own dwelling. Not seldom, some unoccupied cabin would be used for a schoolhouse.

One of the citizens of the county (not very old, either) relates, that, no longer ago than 1837, he taught his first school in a dilapidated old cabin in a field, with the chimney-piece all open (a great gap in the wall six or seven feet long and as high as one's head).

Washington contains an excellent population--moral, sober, industrious, intelligent and thriving. It has several good pikes and two railroads—the Richmond & Grand Rapids, passing near Johnson's, Lynn, Hawkins' and Rural. Another railroad is in progress east and west, passing near Lynn. Lynn is a thriving place, and a suburb of Lynn has been laid out as a depot for the north and south railroad, which is slowly advancing in prosperity.

There are some antiquities in Washington Township, described more in detail in the chapter entitled "Prehistoric."

The boundaries of the township are as follows: North by White River, east by Greensfork, south by Wayne County, west by West River.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 19, Range 14—Section 7, 1817, Andrew Lykins, December 6, 7, 1817; Section 8, 20, 1834--1836; Section 9, 1836--1837; Sections 10, 14, 15, 1818--1836, Albert Banta, Nicholas Longworth, Albert Banta, March 20, April 4, March 20, 1818; Sections 11, 17, 1835—1836; Section 16, school land; Section 18, 1818—1837, James Lykins, July 9, 1818; Sections 19, 23, 26, 30, 31, 1836; Section 21, 1831—1836; Section 22, 1821—1836, William Johnson, September 11, 1821; Section 27, 1817—1835, Enoch Pilcher, January 9, 1817; Section 28, 1827—1836; Sections 29, 34, 1817—1836, Joseph Cass, John Baxter, August 11, January 9, 1817; Section 32, 1816--1836, William Reece, November 4, 1816; Section 33, 1816—1830, Nathan Thornburg, October 25, 1816; Section 35, 1830—1837, William Benson (colored), February 19, 1830.

Washington entries occurred from 1814 to 1837 inclusive.

TOWNS.

Bloomingsport.—Nathan Hockett, proprietor; location, Sections 5, 6, 7 and 8, 18, 14, southwest of Lynn; forty-eight lots; streets, Main, north and south; High, east and west. Recorded September 30, 1829. This town is the second oldest in the county, having been laid out in 1829. Though so old, its growth was never rapid; still, considerable business has been done at the place. The proprietor of the town was Nathan Hockett. Alfred Blizzard built the first house. Mr. Beeson kept the first store. Dr. Paul Beard was the first physician in the region. There was no physician in Bloomingsport for many years. Dr. Gideon Frazier lived in the village a long while ago. Other physicians have been Drs. Gore, Strattan, Kemper, Good, Coggeshall, etc. Merchants have been Messrs. Beeson, Comfort, Ballard, Budd, Hyatt, Wright, Coggeshall, Hockett, etc. There have been a potter's shop, a wheelwright's shop, a saw-mill and a grist-mill. There are two churches—Methodist and United Brethren. There is a pike passing through the town, connecting Lynn and Economy. There is no railroad, the nearest point of importance being West Lynn, except that the new railroad passes not very far from the town. The population is 141. The business of the place at present is about as follows: Merchants, Beeson & Bales; drug store and grocery, Smith & Peacock; smith shop, Albert Hardwick; saw-mill, Hockett & Bowsman; wagon-maker, J. O. Hutchens; shoemaker, W. P. Davison; carpenters, Albert Ingle, John Nichols; physician, Dr. Good; clergyman, J. V. D. R. Johnson (Christian). There are two churches—United Brethren and Methodist Episcopal. The Friends also hold worship in the village. There is also a schoolhouse and a post office. The chief residents in the vicinity are William Engle, Jesse Bales, William Stanley, John Hodgson, Simon Adamson, Cady Osborn, Ezra Vandegriff, William Chamness, Levi Jessup, Joel Mills, Nathan Johnson.

Bloomingsport, like most of the interior towns in the county, is much decayed, and its business has greatly decreased. It is finely located in the midst of an excellent country, and many active and enterprising farmers reside in the region. There are two pikes, one connecting the Winchester & Richmond pike with Economy, and another north and south through the place. The village is quiet, moral and orderly, and, if the old regime had continued, might have been a flourishing town. But the "railroad era" has changed the entire methods of business and trade, and towns outside their magic power have been obliged to succumb and yield, nolens volens, to their inevitable fate.

The distances from other adjacent towns are as follows: Farmland, 18 miles; Huntsville, 7 miles; Lynn, 4⅓ miles; Losantsville, 18½ miles; Ridgeville, 19⅔ miles; Spartansburg, 10⅓ miles; Union City, 20¼ miles; Windsor, 20 miles; Winchester, 10⅓ miles; Rural, 9 miles.

The most prosperous time for the business of the town was, say from 1860 to 1868. There were then three considerable dry goods stores, two smith shops, one wagon-maker's shop, and an extensive and thriving trade was carried on. But now there is very little business of any kind.

Johnson's Station and Post Office.—Not incorporated; on Grand Rapids Railroad, two and a half miles south of Lynn, on Section 15, 18, 14. There is a station and a post office all in the same building. It was established probably at the opening of the Grand Rapids Railroad. The station is in the immediate vicinity of the residence of Mr. William Johnson, who is a very prominent citizen, and it was probably located by his influence and for his special convenience, not less than for the accommodation of the neighborhood. It is really no town at all, the station house being the only building.

Lynn.—Location, Sections 34, 35, 19, 14, and Sections 2 and 3, 18, 14, on Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad, Philip Brown, proprietor; nineteen lots; streets, north and south, Main; east and west, Mill, Brown. Recorded October 4, 1850. Hunt & Jennings' Addition, Royal Hunt (firm of Hunt & Jennings), proprietor; forty-four lots; Sherman street, east and west. Recorded November 17, 1866.

The town was laid out by Daniel Freestone about 1847 and by Philip Brown, in 1850. It is located on Sections 34 and 35, 19, 14, and on Sections 2 and 3, 18, 14, about one-half mile from the Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad. Jacob A. Hinshaw had a store in 1847. William Louder had a smith shop. Dr. Banks was the first physician (1847). The pike from Winchester to Fountain City, through Lynn, was built early, perhaps among the first in the county, or nearly so. The Richmond & Fort Wayne Railroad was completed about 1870. The merchants have been Messrs. Hinshaw, Tansey, Hunt & Harris, Hinshaw & Hodgin, Hinshaw & Beard, Elliott & ——, Freeman & Jones, Hinshaw & Platt, George Bascom, Hinshaw & Hinshaw, McKown, Sterling, Carter, Cox Bros., Hinshaw & Cadwallader, and may be others. Smith shops, Louder, Hinshaw, William Locke, Wolf, Johnson, Sugarts, Jackson, Shute & Locke; drug stores, Simpson, Conner, Wysong, Holliday Bros.; groceries, Freeman, Ingle, Hinshaw; wagon shop, W. Woods; cooper, J. S. Smith; harness shop, Hinshaw & Louder; tin shop, Brown; milliner, Harris; saw-mill and grist-mill, both burned down; tile factory, Hinshaw, Shute & Louder; hotels, Ostler, Way, Stettler, Nichols, Platt, Pearson; teachers, Ives, Anderson, Lasley, Marsh, Green, Hunt, Hogston, Polly, Frist, Nichols, etc.; physicians, Banks, Adams, Hamilton, Alf Hamilton, Blair, Meeks, Swain.

The present business is as follows: One dry goods store, Cox & Bro.; one drug and hardware store, Halliday & Bro.; two groceries, Ingle, Hinshaw; three smith shops, Sugart, Jackson, Shute & Locke; one butcher shop, John Thomas; one wagon shop, W. Wood; two physicians, Blair, Hamilton; two hotels, Stettler, Platt; two tile factories, Shute & Dove, Frist & Hamilton; one boarding-house, W. D. Nichols; one shoe shop, Eckerley; one harness shop, J. Thomas; one church, Methodist Episcopal; one schoolhouse, two rooms; one post office, Halliday; one depot, Nichols; one express office, Nichols; two teachers, A. L. Nichols, P. Bond (1881).

Distances: Bloomingsport, 4⅓ miles; Newport, 6½ miles; Snow Hill, 3 miles; Rural, 4⅕ miles; Winchester, 9 miles; Spartansburg, 5 9/10 miles; Arba, 6½ miles; Huntsville, 8½ miles; Losantsville, 14 miles; Union City, 16½ miles.

The principal residents in the vicinity are as follows: L. E. Conner, David Robbins, Alfred Price, George Bascom, north of town; Simon Johnson, Silas Johnson, Ira Johnson, Alpheus Outland, Charles Potter, south of town; Thomas Moody, east of town; Jacob Platt, David Thorn, west of town; Jonathan Blizzard, southwest of town; Thomas Sugart, southeast of town.

There are in Lynn about fifty dwellings, besides business houses and other edifices, and 239 people. Lynn is not far from Green's Fork stream, and the country around it is excellent and well improved. Fine residences may be seen in every direction. Pikes lead out from the village north, south and east. The region has been inhabited by white men for more than sixty-seven years, settlers beginning to enter land in the neighborhood in 1814, and to come in 1815.

The Methodist Church was built many years ago. The schoolhouse is neat, commodious and tasteful, being intended for a school with two grades. The edifice has two stories, with one room and an entry in each story. It was erected by the Township Trustees some years ago, at a cost of about $4,000. Two teachers are commonly employed, sometimes during the summer term only one.

For a long time, the growth of the town was but slow, and its prosperity very slight. Its vitality dates chiefly from the completion of the railroad. It has good connection by pikes with the surrounding towns—Winchester, Union City (nearly), Bartonia, Spartansburg, Arba, Fountain City, Williamsburg, Bloomingport, Economy, etc. The school is becoming so large as greatly to need at least three rooms and three teachers.

Distances: Spartansburg, 5 9-10 miles; Arba, 6½ miles; Economy, 8 miles; Union City, 19 miles; Rural, 4½ miles; Bloomingport, 4⅓ miles; Huntsville, 8½ miles; Losantsville, 14 miles; Fountain City, 6½ miles; Snow Hill, 3 miles; Winchester, 9 miles; Richmond, 15 miles.

The country is fertile, and the farmers are thriving, intelligent and prosperous, and society has a high moral tone. Sixty-five years of labor, frugality and thrift, have combined to make the valley of Greensfork a paradise of comfort, beauty and luxury.

In the fall of 1881 and winter of 1881–82, a new railroad was built through the southern part of Randolph County, touching Lynn, which, when in full operation will add largely, doubtless, to the facilities for business at that point, and, of course, to its material prosperity. July, 1882, the road has been completed, and the cars are running.

Rural—Location, Sections 9 and 16, Township 20, Range 14, on the Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad, between Winchester and Lynn.

The plat of the town (if made) has never been recorded.

The town was started about 1870, on the completion of the railroad from Richmond. The first spike for the road was driven at Richmond June 10, 1870, and the track was completed before very long.

Joseph Wood built a shanty, October, 1866, to work on the railroad; went away in April, 1867, and returned in 1869. In March, 1870, he set up a saw-mill. The mill was in operation six months, and by that time the railroad had been made and the cars began to run. In November, 1871, David Fudge erected a store. The railroad company built a water-tank, and named the stopping-place Wood Station. Mr. Butterworth set up a smith shop in 1875. William Hawkins erected a grist-mill in 1877. P. W. Bales built a store in 1878. Mr. Clawson established a smith shop in 1879. More or less grain is bought at the mill and by the merchants. A post office has been erected by the name of Rural. The business of the town may be stated thus:

Two stores—J. C. Barnes, A. H. Clawson.

One grist-mill—Mr. Hawkins.

One smith shop—A. H. Clawson.

One water-tank—Railroad company, tended by Mr. Perry.

One ticket office—J. C. Barnes.

One express office—J. C. Barnes.

One post office—J. C. Barnes.

Rural has fifteen dwellings and seventy-five people. There is no pike, and not even a cross-road, but only an ordinary public road crossing the railroad. The village is so healthy that no physician can live there. The distance to the nearest graveyard is four and a half miles. Dr. ——— tried it here two years, but got no practice and left.

Residents in vicinity: Riley Lord, Jacob Lasley, Jonathan Edwards, Henry Johnson, west of town; Silas Henshaw, east of town; William Benson (colored), Thomas Watkins (colored), south of town; Thomas Holloway, north of town; Joseph Wood, Alfred Hogston, east of town.

Democratic Row.—There is a place west of Rural called Democratic Row, containing sixteen voters in two miles, with ten houses, fourteen being Democrats.

There is one smith shop, Lewis L. Norton; one dry goods store, P. W. Bales, Republican; one saw-mill, Thomas Cox; one butcher shop, Lewis L. Norton; one sewing machine agent, William Arbaugh, Republican.

The "Row" is not a town, but a sort of hamlet, or collection of houses in a row, continuing somewhat closely together for nearly two miles.

The name above seems to have been given by some of the Republicans in the region, as the inhabitants themselves are not aware of the appellation, though the name, indeed, is no disgrace, but may be rightly reckoned by the residents to be an honor conferred, since the meaning of the term, properly understood and applied, is worthy of all praise—government by the people; or, as President Lincoln once expressed the true idea, "A government of the people, by the people, for the people." Such, indeed, is true Democracy; such, in fact, is true Republicanism.

Distances from Rural: Arba, ten and a half miles; Bloomingport, nine miles; Bartonia, ten miles; Farmland, fourteen miles; Huntsville, six miles; Lynn, four and one-fifth miles; Losantsville, fourteen and two-fifths miles; Ridgeville, fourteen miles; Spartansburg, nine miles; Union City, fourteen miles; Winchester, five miles; Stone Station, nine miles.

Snow Hill.—Section 23, Township 19, Range 14. There is a locality called Snow Hill about three miles north of Lynn, on the pike toward Winchester, at the crossing of an east and west road. There used to be a store at that point, but there never was any town. The store has been long discontinued, though the building yet stands, flush with the pike, to show that once it had a public nature and importance. The name Snow Hill is still retained. The same name is sometimes applied, also, to the point where that east and west road crosses the railroad, which crossing is also sometimes called Hawkins' Station, and lies about one mile west of old Snow Hill.

Hawkin's Station.—On Grand Rapids Railroad, not incorporated, in Sections 16 and 21, Township 19, Range 14, in Washington Township, one mile south of Rural and three miles north of Lynn, there is a switch and a station, and a cattle-pen from which to load stock, but no other sign of a town. It is sometimes called Snow Hill Station, because its location is the nearest railroad point to (old) Snow Hill, and one mile west of the point that formerly went by that name.

Springboro.—Curtis Beals, proprietor. Location, southeast corner of the northwest quarter of Section 29, Township 19, Range 14, between Bloomingport and Winchester, northwest of Lynn four miles (supposed to be Joseph Gess); twenty-eight lots; recorded February 15, 1834; town extinct.

Whether anything and how much of a town ever really existed at the point above designated, the present inhabitants appear to have little knowledge. In the court records is found the granting of a license to sell goods at Springboro, which would indicate the fact that in those olden times somebody undertook to start some business at the infant town.

Rev. Hosea Tillson, in "Reminiscences" of his preaching, speaks of Springboro as though it were a place then (about 1837 or 1838) in existence, which fact shows that the town held its name, and probably at least some semblance of a town, for some years, the plat having been recorded in 1834. Pelatiah Bond states that in his boyhood there was a store and a smith shop and a few houses at the place.

West Lynn.—On the railroad west of Lynn. Benjamin Hunt, proprietor; seventy-four lots.

Location, Section 34, Township 19, Range 14, west of railroad. Recorded December 24, 1873.

Streets: North and south, Main, Second; east and west, North, Main, Cross.

The town was laid out in 1873 by Benjamin Hunt on the Richmond Railroad, half a mile west of Old Lynn. There is but little growth at the new station, the business, of which there is considerable, clinging with much tenacity to the old town. There are a few houses in the new plat and some future time may perhaps behold what has been denied to the men of this generation, viz., the sight of a thriving, prosperous and wealthy city upon the now sparse and scattered hamlet of West Lynn.

Quite a sprinkling of business, however, is done at this same little suburb of old Lynn, that boasts itself to be above its fellow-towns in "snap" and "grit," as the following resume of the transactions of the railroad at the station will clearly show.

Statistics of business done on the Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad at West Lynn, Randolph Co., Ind., 1880:

Car-loads of wheat, 100; corn, 7; flaxseed, 18; oats, 7; wood, 12; lumber, 17; tile, 10; stock, 141; other things, 24; total, 336. Amount received for freight forwarded, $11,262.98; amount received on freight stopping at West Lynn, $1,912.88; amount received on ticket sales, $2,653.80; total receipts, $16,829.66.

Bushels of grain shipped, 63,180. W. A. Nichols, agent.

BIOGRAPHY.

James Abshire was born August 1, 1777; came to the West early; was in the Indian wars, being once three days without food, except black-haws; settled in Randolph County, Ind., northwest of Cherry Grove Meeting-House, in about 1821, and resided there till his death, in 1868, a very aged man, ninety-one years old. He had a large family, some of whom, and among them two of his sons, Isaac and Berry, are still living in the same neighborhood.

One of Isaac's sons, A. R. Abshire, is a young man rising into prominence, who has been for some years a teacher, and who was elected, in the spring of 1882, Township Trustee of Washington Township.

James Abshire was in pioneer days a famous hunter, and in later life, he delighted greatly in recounting his adventures with the wild creatures of the forest.

Once, in hunting near a pond, he heard some animal rustling among the bushes. Watching for the creature, as he sat there, rifle in hand, out peered the head of the beast, when lo! it was a bear. A bullet from the trusty weapon suddenly put an end to the life of the savage monster, and added one more trophy to those already gained by the veteran hunter.

His acquaintance with the woods was thorough and extensive, and he knew the haunts of every flock of hogs in the region, and when a settler wished to find his porkers, all he had to do was to go and ask old Father Abshire, and the locality would be pointed out at once, or the stalwart hunter would set out as a guide to the identical spot where that particular herd had its habitat and its lodging-place.

Mr. Abshire spent his youth among the Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia. At the age of twenty-three, he married Elizabeth Overholtz. Soon afterward, he emigrated to Preble County, Ohio, his goods being brought through the forests in a one-horse wagon.

October 8, 1812, he enlisted in the United States Army, under Capt. Richard Sloan, Sixth Regiment, Fifth Brigade, First Division, Ohio Militia. They were stationed on the frontier, at Fort Nesbitt, in the vicinity of Eaton, Preble County. He served till April 8, 1813.

Once, while on a scout, he was lost, and lived on nothing but black-haws for three days.

In the winter of 1821, he moved with his family to Randolph County, Ind., settling one mile northwest of Lynn, on the west side of Mud Creek, where stood a dwelling having neither floor, windows nor doors. Arriving in the night, during a severe snow-storm, they built huge fires and camped out. The next day, the house was made habitable, and they took possession of their domicile. In the spring, they made their clearing, and, before long, set out an orchard, which is living yet. In 1828, he moved to the farm upon which his residence continued till his death, in 1868, at the ripe age of ninety-one years.

His children were eight—Aaron, Nancy, Mary, Chloe, Isaac, Abner, Elizabeth, James B. Chloe, Isaac, Elizabeth and James B. yet survive. His wife was born in Maryland in 1773, and died in Randolph County in 1841.

The births and deaths of the children were as follows:

Aaron, born March 3, 1805, died an infant.
Nancy, born March 27, 1807, died in 1878.
Mary, born September 27, 1809, died in 1863.
Chloe, born April 26, 1811, living.
Isaac, born April 26, 1814, living.
Abner, born July 28, 1816, died in 1859.
Elizabeth, born February 4, 1820, living.
James B., born September 26, 1823, living.

Travis Adcock, south of Lynn, east of the Johnson Schoolhouse, entered the first piece of land in that region in May, 1814, shortly after Thomas Parker came into the woods west of Arba; but when Adcock moved to that wilderness we do not know. He may have come the first on Green's Fork. He was one of the first jurymen (in 1818). He had his name changed, for some reason, from Adcock to Emery. In about 1836 or 1838, he emigrated to Iowa, and, not very long ago, he was living there still. His residence was south of Lynn, on the east side of the pike, opposite the Johnson Schoolhouse. He was a member of Friends, but concerning his life in general we know little.

James Barnes was born in Wayne County, Ind., in 1817; came to Randolph County in 1841; married Harriet Mullen in 1838; has had eleven children, six of them now living. He lives at the same place to which he first moved. James Barnes is a Democrat, and is proud of the fact. He is a fine specimen of the hale and sturdy Western farmer, frank, genial, thriving, hospitable, sincere.

His father was John Barnes, who came to Wayne County, near Randolph line, in the spring of 1817. He (John Barnes) had eleven children, ten living, and all married, as follows: William, four children, dead; James, eleven children; John, six children; Jesse, two children; Daniel, five children; Betsey, six children; Eliza, three children; Caroline, five children; Jane, two children; Sally, eight children.

John Barnes died in the spring of 1880, above eighty years old.

James Barnes resides on a good farm, with a fine brick dwelling and excellent improvements, some three miles north of Lynn, on the Winchester pike, a little south of (old) Snow Hill. A son of his was in the United States service in the war of 1861, and died a prisoner in Andersonville in the summer of 1864.

William Barnes was born in 1815, in North Carolina. He came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1817. He married Sarah Hogston in 1834, and moved to Randolph County in 1837, first to Greensfork Township, and then to Washington Township, where he now resides. They have had six children, four of whom are living. He is a farmer, a Methodist and a Democrat.

Joseph Baxter was born in 1787, in Pennsylvania; came to Ohio, and, in 1824, to Randolph County, Ind., near Rural. He married Sarah Pegg in 1829. They had six children, as follows: John, born in 1831, eight children; William, born in 1833, two children, dead; Jane, born in 1836, three children, dead; Sarah, born in 1838, single, living; Joseph, born in 1841, two children; Davis, born in 1844, four children.

Joseph Baxter, Sr., died in 1863, seventy-six years old. He was a Democrat in politics.

Settlers when Mrs. Baxter (Sarah Pegg, daughter of John Pegg), came to Randolph.

Francis Frazier (probably the first), Gideon Frazier, Isaac Hockett, Paul Beard, Thomas Tharpe, Elijah Brock.

NOTE.—Mrs. Baxter's father, John Pegg, entered land in Randolph County November 7, 1816, and probably moved here about that time. The entries do not always, however, determine the time of settlement. The entry was made sometimes months, possibly years before, and sometimes not till months or even years after the settlement; and not seldom it was the case that the person who made the entry never effected a settlement at all.

Paul Beard, Jr., was born in North Carolina in 1812, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1817. He is the son of Dr. Paul Beard, who emigrated to this county at that time, and entered land near Lynn Meeting-House.

Paul Beard, Jr., married Mary Cox in 1833. They have had nine children, eight now living and seven married. Their names are Levi, Ezra, Ann, Asa, Eunice, Louisa, Lindley, Ruth, Henry. Lindley joined the Sixtieth Indiana Regiment in his eighteenth year. Mr. Beard is an Elder in the Society of Friends, and a Republican. His wife is also an Elder. They reside on the farm entered by Paul Beard, Sr., near Lynn Meeting-House for Friends. They are intelligent, sober-minded, pious people, walking in industry and sobriety of spirit, and in the love and practice of the truth.

Paul Beard was raised a farmer, and still follows that avocation for a livelihood. He is the uncle of Elkanah Beard, who has become a noted preacher among Friends, having traveled extensively (as also his wife, who is a preacher) in the East, the South and the West, they having been missionaries to India, etc. The wife of Elkanah Beard is Irena Johnson, grand-daughter of Jesse Johnson, one of the earliest pioneers of the township.

Benjamin Bond was born in North Carolina in 1797; came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1811; married Ellen Goldsmith in 1827; she taught the first school in Milton, Wayne Co., Ind. They have had nine children, all sons; six lived to be grown, and all the six were soldiers in the Union army in the war of 1861. Samson was in a Minnesota regiment, and was discharged for disability. Hezekiah was in the First Minnesota, and died in Salisbury Prison. Benjamin was in the Eighth Indiana and in the Third Cavalry; died in five months, in the service. Pelatiah was a member of the Eighth Indiana (three months), and in the Forty-first Indiana; served three years and one month. Daniel was in the First Minnesota, and served in the Eastern army; was captured at Petersburg in 1864, and spent many sad and weary months in various prisons—Libby, Andersonville, etc.—

escaping at last from the guard upon a march from one prison to another; he served four years in all. Edward, in the First Minnesota Heavy Artillery, served nine months.

Three of the boys are living, and all have been teachers of long standing and superior ability. Pelatiah and his wife were for several years missionary teachers for the Friends among the Ottawa Indians, in the northeastern part of the territory. For several years last past, he has resided in Lynn, engaging in teaching, in book agencies, etc.

Daniel Bond, brother of Pelatiah, has been and still is an enterprising and successful teacher. He has taught three years at Spartansburg, several years in Westfield, Hamilton County, besides other places. Daniel Bond is a thorough student, making also himself substantial and rapid improvement while imparting information to others.

He has now (1881) left the business of teaching, and removed to Science Hill, Ky., buying a farm with the intention of raising fruit. He has been twice married, and his second wife is still living.

All the sons of Benjamin Bond have been residents of that Northern frontier State, Minnesota.

A cousin of Benjamin Bond (the elder) was the first white child born in Wayne County. His name is William Bond; he was born on the present site of Earlham College, near Richmond, in 1808, and he is living still. When Benjamin Bond came to Wayne County (1811), there were but two or three houses in Richmond.

Benjamin Bond came to Randolph County in 1834; entered forty acres of land on Sparrow Creek; moved afterward to Washington Township, in 1837, and to Minnesota in 1854, returning to his old farm in Randolph County in 1857.

Preparing a farm in Kansas, and expecting a removal thither, he died in that State while on a visit to his son Pelatiah, in 1875, seventy-eight years old. His widow is living still with her son Daniel, at Science Hill, Ky.; she was born in 1802, and is now eighty years old, but is wonderfully vigorous for one of her age. When nearly eighty, she would carry her marketing two and a half miles on foot, and return the same forenoon, without fatigue; and in Kentucky she seems now more sprightly than when in Randolph.

We here give reminiscences of Curtis Cleny, read at Old Settlers' meeting, June, 1868:

"I was born in Orange County, N. C., in 1783, and am now more than eighty-five years old. I was shifted from place to place when I was a child, and got no learning. I determined to leave Carolina, and came to Elkhorn, in Ohio, near Westville, six miles from Richmond, Ind., in 1803. In 1812, I volunteered in the United States army. We set out for Detroit, but the march was countermanded between Dayton and Piqua, and we were ordered back to the frontier. Our regiment was stationed at Whitehead, two miles above Williamsburg, Wayne Co., Ind. We had to scout all the time, but were in no battle. I was up Greensfork to the Beard settlement. A deer-lick was found on Paul Beard's land, and I have often shot deer there. I was a soldier three months and twenty days, and was honorably discharged. I bought my land February 13, 1817, before Randolph was a county."

[NOTE.—The tract book gives Curtis Cleny's entry as being January 17, 1815, two years before he dates the transaction himself, and before Indiana became a State. One would suppose Mr. Cleny would be correct. Perhaps he is, but the figures are as here stated.]

"The first year I packed my meat thirty miles on my back. Breadstuff was scarce enough. Salt was $4 a bushel, and wet at that. I could tell many hardships, but I forbear. Most of the pioneers are gone. Ten years may perhaps see the last aged head laid low in death and behold the last pioneer pass on to his reward. May God prepare us for His glorious rest! Amen!"

[Mr. Cleny himself was summoned home not very long after this was written by his trembling hand.]

Mr. Cleny was born in North Carolina in 1783; came to Westville, Ohio, in 1803; entered the United States Army in 1812; served three months and twenty days, and was honorably discharged; entered his land southeast of Lynn January 17, 1815, and moved to it soon afterward.

Twelve children were born to them, ten of whom grew to manhood, and five are living still. He remained among men, indeed, to a ripe old age, even to fourscore years and ten. Mr. Cleny was a Baptist, belonging to the Concord Church of that faith in Wayne County.

His life was during an eventful time. Born in the year of the peace with Great Britain after the Revolutionary struggle, he came to the heart of the mighty West the year after Ohio became a State, the first-born offspring of the famous ordinance of freedom; took part in the second war of independence while yet in his early prime; helped Indiana to begin her race for renown, having become part owner of her Territorial soil the year before she became an equal member of the glorious sisterhood in the bright galaxy of States that form the American Union, and for well-nigh threescore years remained a citizen, sharing the hardships and the toils, and the hardy pleasures and the rugged delights also, which her noble pioneers knew so well how to draw from the laborious life they were obliged to lead. He even overlived his time. He remained a pioneer till pioneer times and perils and ways were over and done, and forgotten except by a scattered few, who, like him, had outlived their generation.

He was old enough to vote at the election for Jefferson's second term, and he remained a citizen of the Republic until he had voted for Gen. Grant the second time—an interval of seventeen Presidential terms, or sixty-eight years! So short is our national history that a single human life can cover it all!

George W. Daly was born in Cavin County, Cavin Town, Ireland, about 1790, probably of wealthy parents. He came to America when young, and completed his education in New York, receiving a classical training in one of the colleges there. He studied law, and practiced awhile, but became disgusted at the too frequent trickery and roguery incident in that profession, and forsook the law, taking up the vocation of a teacher for the rest of his life. He traveled extensively in America and Europe for years, afoot and alone, all over New England and the South and West, and in France, Great Britain, etc., afterward practicing law, chiefly in Franklin County, Ind. He was at Winchester in the practice of the legal profession before the first court house was built. He quit the law about 1823. His wife was Catharine Clayton, daughter of John Clayton, of Virginia. He resided at first, after his marriage, at Franklin, Ohio, on the Miami River removing afterward to Preble County, Ohio, and finally, in 1842, to Randolph County, Ind., three miles northwest of Lynn, settling upon a tract of 120 acres entered by him in about 1825. His teaching was done mostly in Preble County, Ohio, during the fall and winter, going back to that region in the fall, and returning to spend the summer. He had a high reputation as a teacher, and many men, afterward prominent in that section, were indebted to his instructions. His family numbered ten children. Eight lived to be grown; five were married, and six are living now.

Mr. Daly was remarkably reticent, saying very little of his early life. His history must have been of unusual interest, but a knowledge of it mostly died with him. His character was one of rare and stern integrity. He was a Catholic in religion, and a Democrat in politics, after the old style.

Mr. Daly died in 1866, at the age of seventy-six. His widow is still living, seventy-seven or seventy-eight years old, strong and vigorous for her age. They had eight children when the family settled in the Indiana woods, an active group of wide-awake boys, who cleared out the farm while their father taught the young idea how to shoot in the hamlets and towns of Preble County, Ohio. The children were as follows:

James, who went to the Mexican war from Butler County, Ohio, and died in that service.

Catharine (Campbell), now of Redkey, Jay Co., Ind., ten children.

John, Randolph County, bachelor, Democratic candidate for Sheriff.

William Alexander Washington (W. A. W.), given hereafter.

Robert, belonged to the Sixty-ninth Indiana, Company B; died of wounds received at Richmond, Ky., ten days after the battle.

George W., married Maggie Kemp, of Hillsboro, Wayne Co., Ind.; has no children, and lives with his mother at the homestead.

Joshua, has one child and lives in Jay County.

Francis, resides at Chicago; has four children and is a carpenter.

Charles, died at ten years old.

Mr. Daly died worth about $4,000.

W. A. W. Daly, ex-Sheriff of Randolph County, Ind., was born in 1833, in Preble County, Ohio; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1843; joined Company B, Ninetieth Indiana Regiment (Fifth Indiana Cavalry), enlisting August 25, 1862; was captured July 31, 1864, released March, 1865, and mustered out in June, 1865.

He married Mary Henshaw in 1857; has had nine children, eight living; is a farmer, and an active, energetic and prominent citizen. He has held the office of Sheriff of Randolph County for four years (1874–78), discharging the duties of his position with honor to himself and to the satisfaction of the community. Mr. Daly is exceedingly earnest and enthusiastic as a Republican, the memories of his war experience and of his sacrifices for liberty and union clinging to his heart like his very life.

He erected a fine residence, during the summer of 1880, on his farm, two and a half miles north of Lynn. On his birthday in 1880, his wife and family and friends contrived a perfect surprise, managing so adroitly that, without the least shadow of suspicion on his part, a company of some one hundred and fifty relatives and friends assembled at his new and elegant mansion. "Will" owned he was beaten for once. But he gave in like a man, and surrendered the fort without even a show of resistance; and for some three hours that happy company drank deeply of the sweets of social intercourse, and saw with sad regret the hour arrive which bade them separate, departing each one to his home and to his business.

James Frazier came from North Carolina to Cowan's Creek, Clinton Co., Ohio, in 1811, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1817, settling one mile east of Lynn.

He entered 160 acres of land at Cincinnati. His wife's maiden name was Susanna Stanley. She was born in North Carolina in 1767, and he in 1772. He died in 1822, about five years after coming here. They had ten children, all of whom were born before Mr. Frazier came to Randolph, and seven of whom came with their father to the county. Three were probably married in Carolina and stayed there. The names of the children are given below:

Lavina (Hodgins), 1793, ten children, died in Iowa in 1866.

Samuel, 1795, Mary Cook, ten children, farmer, died in Iowa in 1845.

John, 1798, Sarah Kiff, two children, died in 1824.

Betsey, 1800, Robert Hodgins, four children, died in Iowa years ago.

Francis, 1802, Lutitia Clearwaters, eleven children, Randolph County, Ind.

Sally, 1804, Anuel Hodgins, four children, died in Iowa in 1875.

Susanna, 1806, married three times, three children, widow, Iowa.

James, 1809, Polly Nichols, four children, Greensfork.

Mary Ann, 1811, John Graham, two children, Iowa.

Isaiah, 1814, twice married, six children, Wisconsin. The children became all grown and were married and had families. Seven came with their father to Randolph County. James Frazier was a bell-maker, andso was his son Francis, who is still alive (1880), seventy-eight years old, and claims that he can make upon his anvil a better razor than can be bought at the stores.

The Garretts.—Nicholas and Thomas Garrett, orphans, came from Virginia to Belmont County, Ohio.

Nicholas Garrett married Mary Ellis, and in about 1841, moved to Cherry Grove, Randolph Co., Ind. He had seven children:

Amos, lives at Warsaw, Kosciusko Co., Ind., tradesman.

Ivan, lives in Dallas County, Iowa, farmer.

Ann (Matthews), lives in Dallas County, Iowa, farmer.

Mary (Phillips), lived at Muncie, Warsaw, etc., but is dead.

Elizabeth (Trotter), Cherry Grove, Ind., dead.

Henry, died at Dallas County, Iowa.

Elisha, resided at Winchester, Ind., but died at Cleveland Water Cure, Cleveland, Ohio.

Nicholas Garrett died many years ago. Concerning Thomas Garrett, we have no further information.

Nancy Hinshaw, Washington, has had eleven children. All became grown, were married and had families. The youngest was thirty-seven years old when the first one died. The old lady is living now not very far from (old) Snow Hill, and ten of the eleven children still survive. She has sixty grandchildren and thirty-seven great-grandchildren. Her husband was an early pioneer of Randolph, being in politics a Democrat of the Jacksonian type, and his aged widow is still enthusiastic in the same faith. She is some eighty-four years old, hale and hearty and sprightly. Her daughter is the wife of W. A. W. Daly, Esq., ex-Sheriff of Randolph County.

Jacob A. Hinshaw came with his mother, Phebe Hinshaw, to Washington, south of Lynn, in 1832. She entered land where Jacob A. Hinshaw now lives. J. A. Hinshaw married Peninnah Scott in 1845, and has had eleven children; ten are now living, and four married.

He was raised a Friend, but afterward joined the Methodists. He has been active in various kinds of business, with reasonable success, having been able to do what many have failed to accomplish—i. e., to secure for himself and his family a comfortable livelihood.

Samuel Jennings was born in 1800, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1825. He married Mary Sexton, and had eight children. He settled one and a half miles east of Johnson's Station; entered eighty acres; was a farmer, and a Democrat. He died in 1865, being sixty-five years of age.

Jesse Johnson was born in North Carolina in 1776. He was married four times—first wife, Elizabeth Chamness, born 11th month, 14th, 1799, died 6th month, 20th, 1827; second wife, Rhoda Swain, married 10th month, 20th, 1828, died 6th month, 3d, 1837; third wife, Nancy Tomlinson, married 8th month, 13th, 1838, died 9th month, 27th, 1847; fourth wife, Sarah Baldwin, married 2d month, 8th, 1855, living still.

Jesse Johnson died 5th month, 19th, 1853, aged seventy-nine years five months and ten days. He emigrated from North Carolina to Warren County, Ohio, in 1807 or 1808, and to Randolph County, Ind., south of Lynn, in 1817.

He had six children, three of whom are still living. Their names, etc., were:

Jonathan, born in 1800, had four children; lived at Cherry Grove, and died in 1862, in his sixty-third year.

Silas, born in 1802, has had twelve children; lives south of Lynn.

Sally, has three children.

Eli, has eight children; lives in Hamilton County, Ind.

John, had fourteen children; died west of Lynn, Ind.

Simon, had nine children; is not living.

Jesse Johnson was a prominent citizen in the pioneer period; was the first Treasurer of Randolph County, and held other positions among his fellow-citizens, showing the trust reposed in him. He was in religion a steadfast Friend, and a Whig in politics.

John Johnson was born in Ohio in 1812; came with his father, Jesse Johnson, to near Lynn in 1817 (probably); married Phebe Thornburg in 1830; then Rebecca Rockhill. He had ten children by his first wife, and twelve by the second. Just half of each set are now living—eleven in all; seven are married. His first wife died some years ago; the second is living now. He died in 1871. His residence was two miles north of Bloomingport. He was a member of the United Brethren; afterward, of the Christians (New Lights). He was an Abolitionist and a Republican.

Jonathan Johnson (son of Jesse Johnson, south of Lynn) was born in 1800 in North Carolina; came to Randolph County,

Ind., with his father; married three times—first, Ann Frazier, daughter of Francis Frazier; second, Huldah Way, daughter of Nathan Way; third, Jane (Moore) Small, widow of Josiah Small.

He had four children, and died in the spring of 1862.

He was a Friend, being Elder in his twenty-sixth year, esteemed and trusted, with excellent judgment.

He was very earnest in attendance upon religious meetings, rising before daylight in the summer, and working several hours, going sixteen miles on horseback from Cherry Grove to Whitewater to attend week-day meeting.

Joshua M. Johnson was born in 1831, in Randolph County, Ind.; married Amanda Pegg, daughter of Reuben Pegg, and has had thirteen children; twelve are living, and one is married.

He is a blacksmith and a farmer. He has been Postmaster twenty-seven years. He is a Republican. Two of his brothers are New-Light preachers—George and Isaac. (The last is often called "Alphabet" Johnson, his whole name being I. V. D. R. Johnson—an extensive name, surely.)

Mrs. Gray, of Buena Vista, has been the mother of seventeen children by two marriages.

Ruth (Moody) Johnson is the wife of William Johnson, of Johnson's Station. She has been a recorded minister among Friends since about 1858. She has traveled through Ohio and Iowa, and elsewhere, as a preacher. In 1862, she pursued her work of faith and patience throughout seventeen counties in Iowa, mostly among Friends, and she was everywhere received with kindness and in Christian love. Her work was approved in the Lord by Friends, and she felt many times the tokens of gracious acceptance from the hands of the Master.

Friend Ruth is humble, gentle and faithful, and her soothing words come down as the rain, and distil like the tender dewdops upon the springing grass.

Silas Johnson was born in 1802, in North Carolina; came with his father to Randolph County, near Lynn, in 1817; was married twice—first, to Betsey Cook, and second to Lydia Bond—and is the father of twelve children—three boys and nine girls. He is still living, hale and sprightly, seventy-nine years old. His second wife is living also.

He is a farmer, and a Friend. He was an Abolitionist, and is a Republican.

His home is just south of Lynn, on the east side of the pike from Lynn to Fountain City.

He is the son of Jesse Johnson, one of the oldest pioneers of that section, being a lad of about fifteen years at the time of their emigration from Carolina.

William Johnson, son of Silas Johnson, was born in 1823, in Randolph County, Ind.; married Ruth Moody, daughter of Isaac Moody, in 1843. They have had twelve children; seven are living, and four are married. One daughter, who died, had been very gay and vain and proud, but she was so changed as to possess a sweet, gentle, submissive temper, bore her painful sickness with the utmost patience and resignation, sang for very joy as she lingered on these time chores, and went home at last exultant in a Savior's love. Her mourning friends preserve her memory as a priceless treasure.

William Johnson is a farmer by vocation, a member of the Friends, and an Elder among them; an active and influential citizen, and in every way a worthy and valuable member of society and of the community. He has a railroad station at his place, and a post office has been established there (Johnson's Station), of which office he is Postmaster.

He is an enthusiast in whatever he tries to accomplish, and, within two or three years, has undertaken bee culture, which he presses with all the vigor of his nature, and with reasonable success.

Isaac Moody was born in Grayson County, Va., in 1790; came to Ohio in 1814; married Mary Heaston, from Pennsylvania, in 1823; emigrated to Randolph County in the same year, and settled near Lynn, east of James Frazier's. He had only two children, and was a "Body Friend." He was in early times a Whig, and in later years a Republican. He lived a farmer, and died in 1865, sixty-eight years old. His daughter Ruth has become an acceptable and weighty minister among Friends, and has traveled much in the bearing of her messages for Christ, greatly to the edification of believers in Jesus, and to the comfort of His humble, waiting, trusting children.

Samuel Moody was the father of Isaac Moody, and the grandfather of Ruth (Moody) Johnson. He was born about 1760, in Pennsylvania (or Virginia). His father came from Ireland. Samuel Moody came to Ohio in 1814, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1821, near Lynn. His first wife was Jane Cox, and his second wife was Jane Cadwallader. He had four children; was a Friend and a farmer. He died in Ohio in 1825, about sixty-five years old. He was faithful in testimony, loving in spirit, and exemplary in the practice of Christian doctrine.

John Moorman was born in Richmond County, N. C., March 23, 1760; married Rebecca Diggs about 1783, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1816. They had ten children:

Anna, who married George Wilson.
Judith, who became the wife of Thomas Sanders, of Ohio.
Achsah, whom Paul Way married.
Rebecca, wife of Alfred Clark.
Polly, died.
Julia, married William Braden.
And there were four others besides.

He came to Indiana with all his children, two of them married—Anna (Wilson) and Achsah Way.

He settled northwest of where Johnson's Schoolhouse now stands, south of Lynn. He died in 1845, eighty-five years old. He was a farmer, a Friend, a Whig and one of the earliest settlers.

John Moorman, Jr., son of John Moorman, Sr., was born in Carolina in 1807, and was brought to Randolph County, Ind., by his father, in 1816. He married Agatha Butler, and they had two children. He died in 1866, aged fifty-nine years; and she died in 1875, at the age of sixty-two years.

Henry D. Nichols, Lynn, was born in Randolph County, Ind., in 1832, in Greensfork Township; married Elizabeth Gray in 1854; has had eleven children, nine of them living and three married. He moved to Lynn in 1864, and has lived there mostly ever since as farmer, carpenter, merchant, clerk, boarding-house keeper, hotel keeper, etc. He has been School Trustee four terms, Township Assessor three years, etc. He belongs to the Disciple Church, and is a Republican in politics; his father used to be a Democrat, but changed to the Republican party in 1856. H. D. N. is the son of Malachi Nichols, and the brother of Isaac Nichols, of Greensfork. One of his sons is railroad agent at Lynn; another, A. L. Nichols, is an enterprising and successful teacher, having been engaged in the work some eight years, attending several terms in the meantime at Terre Haute State Normal School. He was, in 1880 and 1881, employed as Principal of Lynn Graded School, and now resides at Winchester, being engaged in the study of law.

Valentine Pegg, Wayne County, was born about 1743 in Maryland; he had two sons in the Revolutionary army; he moved to North Carolina during that war; he came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1808, and died about 1826, an old man, eighty-three years old.

John Pegg, son of Valentine Pegg, was born in Maryland in 1770; moved to North Carolina during the war of the Revolution; married Margaret (Davis) in 1792, born in 1773; they had seven children. He died in 1847, seventy-seven years old; his wife died in 1856, eighty-three years old. Their children were Mary (Pearson), born in 1793, six children, died in 1879, eighty-five years old; Ruth (Pearson), born in 1795, four children, died in 1876, eighty-one years; Davis Pegg, 1798, seven children, living in Wayne County; Sarah (Baxter), 1800, six children, living in Randolph County; Valentine Pegg, 1803, nine children, living in Wayne County; Lydia (Massey) 1805, two children, died in 1849; John Pegg, 1809, nine children, living in Wayne County. John Pegg, Sr., son of Valentine Pegg, as above given, entered land in Randolph County November 7, 1816, and moved to the county not far from that date.

Valentine Pegg, son of John Pegg above named, is now an old man of seventy-nine years; has a family of nine children. He and they are noted for their mechanical genius; they build their own houses, do their own blacksmithing, etc. One invented a superior threshing machine. Mr. P. is eccentric in his thoughts and words, quaint but clever, old-fashioned but genial and hospitable, greatly confident of his own opinion, and a stickler for personal liberty.

Thomas Phillips came in 1821, being born in about 1790; he died in 1872, about eighty-two years old; he was an intelligent and enterprising citizen, an enthusiastic Republican, an ardent Methodist and a friend of every good work. His widow is still living, in her eighty-ninth year, sprightly and active, able to cook and wash dishes, and altogether a notable specimen of pioneer strength and hardiness. Thomas Phillips came from New Jersey; he married Rebecca Hammett; they had nine children, six boys, three girls; eight grown and married; seven living still; one son, John Wesley, was killed at Milford, Kosciusko County, Ind., as he was on the cars returning from a political rally addressed by Hon. Schuyler Colfax, as the result of throwing stones by a gang of villainous rowdies at the cars crowded with people. Thomas Phillips' son, William Phillips, resides at Bloomingport, and is a wide-awake, thoroughgoing citizen, a life-long Methodist, a brave and efficient soldier, and an enthusiastic and reliable Republican.

William Rash, born in the Carolina region in 1786; came to Wayne County, Ind., among the very first; was married there under the first license ever issued in the county; served in the war of 1811–13 against the Indians; moved to Randolph County, west of Bloomingsport, in about 1817, and resides there still, being about ninety-six years old, nearly or quite the oldest man in the county. An eventful life, truly, has that of this aged veteran proved to be. We should be glad to give a more detailed statement of the family and the history of this hardy pioneer, but we have not the requisite information at hand.

Eli Reece, Cherry Grove, was born in North Carolina April 10, 1804; he has been married three times; his first wife was Matilda Greenwood, married in Randolph County in 1828; she died in 1854. His second wife was Elizabeth Arnold, of Arba, in 1856; she died in 1867. His third wife is Mrs. Cynthia (Maulsby) Pickering, married in 1868. He had seven children by his first wife; six of them became grown and were married, but only one is living now. He settled first on Green's Fork, three miles southwest of Lynn (town); then a mile south of Cherry Grove; then, in 1866, he moved to his present home, near Cherry Grove Meeting-House.

Mr. Reece was not a Friend by birthright, but joined them when about twenty-eight years old; he has been an Elder among Friends for about thirty years. He returned to Carolina upon a visit to that State in 1841, and again in 1857. The Friends in Carolina form a yearly meeting in that State of pretty good size. Before the war, the Southern Friends had left in great numbers, so as almost to break up their "yearly meetings" there, but since the war they are increasing, and the Carolina Quakers are a growing body. Mr. Reece, although almost eighty years old, seems young and lively; to appearance, he is no more than sixty-five. When he emigrated to this State, Mr. R. was poor, and had to "rent" land, being obliged to earn money here to buy a homestead for himself and his loved ones. But, like many another, industry, economy and the blessing of God that maketh rich, have enabled him to obtain a competence of this world's goods, and he endeavors, thankfully, to employ what Providence has bestowed upon him in the humble service of the Lord.

Isaiah Rogers, Bloomingport, was an early settler, coming from New Jersey to Randolph County in 1821 or 1822; he has had eight children, seven of whom were grown and married, one having died in the army. Mr. Rogers is eighty-five or eighty-six years old, stout and spry and nimble as a cat; he is a life time Methodist and a true-blue Republican; his residence is now in Kansas, having left Indiana for the Western prairies in 1880.

Edward Scott was born in North Carolina in 1789, and came to Randolph County, Ind., about 1820; he settled in Washington Township at first, and afterward changed his residence to White River; he died on White River, June 30, 1871, aged eighty-one years nine months and one day; his widow is living still, eighty-five years old and very feeble and infirm, both in mind and body. They had twelve children; eleven grew up and ten are living at this time; five of his children reside in Randolph County, and five have moved to Kansas; he lived in Randolph County fifty-one years, and his wife and widow has been a dweller in this fair Western land and in Randolph about sixty-one years. He was a member of the Baptist Church and a most excellent and worthy man, beloved in his life, and sorely lamented in his death.

Daniel Shoemaker came to Washington Township, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1818, and had eleven children, and eight of them grew up; seven were sons and one was a daughter. He died about 1830, aged fifty-five; he was born in the fall of 1775, and hence was just too young to vote at the election which raised John Adams to the Presidential office in 1796.

Samuel Smith, father of Temple Smith, Stone Station was born in West Virginia in 1772; married Elizabeth Calboun, in West Virginia, in 1794 or 1795; came to Champaign County, Ohio, in 1802; Kentucky, 1803; Highland County, Ohio, 1811; Randolph County, Ind., 1819 (one-half mile west of Bloomingport); he died in 1856, and his wife in 1857; they had six children—Reuben (Mary Hockett), two children; Martha (Joseph Hockett), twelve children; Avaline (Jeduthun Havenden), twelve children; Jefferson (Lydia Pickering), seven children; Temple (Priscilla Crossly), twelve children. Milton died at six years old. Temple Smith only is left of the six.

James H. Stine, Washington, D. C., late of Washington Township, born in New Jersey in 1837; came to Darke County, Ohio, in 1839; Wayne Township, Randolph Co., Ind., near Union City, attending school on the Ohio side; Washington Township, 1851; Winchester Seminary, 1853; taught Maxville Public School in 1854, and several times since; Liber College, Jay County, 1856; Madison College, Pennsylvania. While there, two professors and eighty-five students left the college for the South, which movement closed the college; knowing that war would soon come, his room-mate, C. H. Causey, of Hampton, Va., said to him: "Stine, the South means war, and we shall erelong be found in hostile armies; let us care for each other if possible." The agreement was made, and they parted. Stine joined Company C, Nineteenth Indiana; he was twice wounded at the Second Bull Run, once by a severe shell wound.

In ——, he was appointed to the patent office, but was dismissed for refusing to indorse President Johnson. In ——, he was given a position in the Treasury Department, which he still holds. He was one of the founders, and later, the commander of United States Grant Post, G. A. R., having such members as Senator Wilson, Gens. Banks, Schenck, Crittenden, Shanks, Mills, Packard, Bullock, etc. In the famous Fitz John Porter case, he was appointed an attorney for the Government, to select and examine witnesses, and, among others, Messrs. Campbell, Macy and Murray, from Randolph County, were summoned to the trial. Mr. Stine is understood to be preparing a valuable history of the Government. He has been faithful in watching for the advantage of "Old Randolph," and never omitted to favor her interests. He has purchased a farm near Union City, which has been named Bloomingdale, upon which farm an extensive and valuable collection of foreign shrubbery is in progress. Having been long at the National Capital, Mr. S. is happy to have been able to assist many Randolph County citizens having business with the Government. Mr. S. has been from the very first a zealous Republican, and has achieved an enviable reputation as efficient and trustworthy in the discharge of public official duty, and as accommodating and generous in serving his fellow-citizens of Randolph. Mr. S. has become somewhat prominent as a speaker in the political field, approving himself as efficient and successful in this respect.

The Thornburgs, of Washington.—The Thornburgs have been and still are numerous in Randolph County. A strong branch of the family settled in Stony Creek Township and another in Washington. Those who resided in the latter township in pioneer times were Nathan, Edward and Isaac Thornburg. Nathan had four children—Isaac, Jesse, Nathan and Ann. The Thornburgs there were all Friends, and went with the Anti-slavery branch in the "Separation" of 1843. We have no especial account of this portion of the Thornburg connection, though a considerable statement concerning those who settled in Stony Creek may be found in its appropriate place.

Joseph T. Wood, Wood Station—Rural—was born in 1819, in Wayne County, Ind.; married Sophia Fender, in 1841; has had six children, five living now, and all the five married. They came to Randolph County in 1866, and settled at Rural in 1869; he is a carpenter and farmer, a Methodist and a Republican. His grandfather, Henry Wood, went, in 1804, from near Richmond, Va., to Kanawha County, Coal Creek, Western Virginia, and died there in 1814, sixty years old. Joseph Wood's father, born near Richmond, Va., came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1814; he had twelve children, and died in 1863, seventy-two years old.

ALBERT R. ABSHIRE, teacher, P. O. Snow Hill, was born in this county March 12, 1850; he is the son of Isaac Abshire, who was born in Preble County, Ohio, April 26, 1815; his mother, Sarah (Ballard) Abshire, was a native of Ohio, born October 27, 1823; his father and motner were married June 5, 1842; his sister, Maria, was born October 2, 1851; his mother died January 18, 1874; his father was married December 16, 1876, to Sarah G. Shinn, who was born in Virginia August 30, 1848. The subject of this sketch was educated in the district schools and at the high school of Winchester; he has taught fourteen terms in the district schools of this county; owns a neat farm of fifty-five acres, and is a gentleman who commands the respect and confidence of all who know him.

NEREUS B. BALDWIN, teacher, P. O. Snow Hill, was born in Wayne County, Ind., April 6, 1854; he is the son of Jesse F. Baldwin, who was born in North Carolina in February, 1828; his mother, Phœba A. (Bales) Baldwin, was born in this county. Mr. Baldwin was educated in the district schools and at the graded schools at Lynn. Since 1872, he has spent the larger part of his time in teaching. Mr. B. was married April 17, 1875, to Martha E. Gordon, who was born in this county July 8, 1855; her father, James Gordon, was born in Ohio April 30, 1828; her mother, Sidney (Slaughter) Gordon, was born in North Carolina. This union has been blessed with Gillett A., who was born March 2, 1879. Mr. B. is a member of and an earnest worker in the Christian Church; he owns a neat little farm of thirty-five acres, in Section 31, on which he resides. Mr. Baldwin is a sterling gentleman.

ISAAC N. BALES.

This gentleman, one of Randolph County's honored and respected citizens, is the son of Pleasant and Mary (Abshire) Bales, and was born in this county March 5, 1837; he is the fifth of a family of eight children, of whom six are now living; his father was born in Clinton County, Ohio, September 21, 1810; his mother was born in Virginia September 27, 1809; his grandfather, Curtis Bales, was one of the pioneers of this county, having become a resident about the year 1824; his grandfather on his mother's side, James Abshire, was among the very first settlers of the county; he was also a soldier of the war of 1812.

Isaac's parents entered eighty acres of land in Washington Township, this county, about the year 1838. This tract lies adjoining the farm upon which Isaac now lives. They remained upon this farm, enduring all of the toils, hardships and deprivations of pioneer life, until the year 1864, when they temporarily removed to Merom, Sullivan County. They did not remain here long; on account of Mrs. Bales' failing health, they returned to their home in this county, where she died December 31, 1864. Mr. Bales very soon returned to Merom, where he died February 8, 1865; his remains were brought to this county, and deposited by those of his wife in New Liberty Cemetery. They were acceptable and honored members of the Christian Church, and were among the first organizers of that church in the county.

The subject of this sketch spent his boyhood upon his father's farm, assisting him in clearing a homestead from the forest; his experience was severe, having to toil very hard in his earlier life; his educational advantages were very poor, having no free schools; he attended from six weeks to two months during the winter for a few years only. He was married to Martha J. Platt August 16, 1856. After marriage, he and his excellent wife settled upon the farm where they now reside. At that time, there were but forty acres, which he rented for two years, and then bought it, going in debt $800. The farm he lives on now consists of 100 acres of well improved land, with seventy-five acres cleared; he also owns a farm of eighty acres in Jay County; his farm is under a high state of cultivation, with convenient and commodious buildings; he is comfortably situated, and, in addition to the cultivation of grain, he gives attention to the raising of hogs and cattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Bales are the parents of three children, of whom two are living—William H., born September 11, 1857; Mary E., born January 19, 1861, deceased November 7, 1861; Magnolia M., born January 29, 1868. William H., married Mary A. Fisher, daughter of Amos and Ann Fisher, of this county. They are the parents of one child, Newton A.

Isaac enlisted in the army August 5, 1862, in Company E, Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Infantry; he was a brave soldier and did gallant service for his country; he was actively engaged with his regiment in many severe battles, but was never wounded, but he was confined in the hospital at Indianapolis and Natchez, from two attacks of the lung fever; he took an active part in the battles of Richmond (Ky.), Chickasaw Bluffs, Arkansas Post, siege of Vicksburg, etc. After the siege of Vicksburg, he was transferred, with his regiment, to New Orleans, Brasher City, Opelusas; then returned to New Orleans; thence across the Gulf to Texas, where they were engaged in several skirmishes. They were then transferred to the disastrous and fatal Red River expedition, in which the Sixty-ninth suffered greatly, marching for thirteen days and nights without rest. From this expedition, they returned to Morganzes Bend; thence to Baton Rouge, East Pascagoula, Pensacola Bay and Pollard. They then arrived at Blakely, Ala., the defense of Mobile. This place was besieged for six or seven days, and then carried by storm, which they captured with a large number of prisoners. They then took possession of Mobile without further resistance. After the capture of Blakely and Mobile, the Sixty-ninth was deployed to convoy the prisoners to Ship Island; after which Mr. Bales' company accompanied Maj. Gen. C. C. Andrews as body guard to Selma, Ala. They then returned to Mobile, where they were placed on provost duty, where they remained until mustered out of service, July 5, 1865. Mr. Bales reached home July 20.

He opened a stock of goods at his home in Washington Township in the spring of 1874. In the fall of the same year, he moved his stock to Wood's Station, taking as a partner in a general mercantile business his brother, Pleasant W. Bales. They kept a large and well selected stock of goods and did a thriving business. While at Wood's Station, Mr. Bales acted as Postmaster and ticket agent. He remained here until the fall of 1876, when he sold out to Lewis Norton and returned to the farm.

As a business man, Mr. Bales was industrious, economical and successful. He and his family are acceptable members of the Christian Church at New Liberty, Mr. and Mrs. Bales being charter members. Mr. B. has been Treasurer of this church ever since its organization. He is a stanch Republican, and is an industrious worker in the party. His father was a Free Soiler.

Isaac is strictly temperate in his habits, an honest, moral, upright citizen, a kind husband, an affectionate father and a true friend.

MARTHA JANE (PLATT) BALES, wife of Isaac N. Bales and daughter of Abram C. and Eliza (Horner) Platt, was born in Wayne County, Ind., March 16, 1838. She is the eldest of a family of three children, two of whom are living. Her father was born in New Jersey and her mother in Ohio. Her parents came to this State in early times, and settled in Wayne County. Her father died when she was but three years of age, and her mother followed in the year 1862. She lived with her grandfather until she was eight years old, when she found a home with David and Martha Taylor, who were members of the Society of Friends. She lived with them until she was eighteen, when she was married to Isaac N. Bales. Mrs. Bales is a most estimable woman, and has been of great assistance to her husband in his business. During the time Isaac was in the army, she took upon herself the entire management of the farm, and did it well. She is a consistent member of the church, a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a valuable member of society.

DR. J. S. BLAIR.

James S. Blair was born May 26, 1850, near Williamsburg, Wayne Co., Ind. He is the son of George W. Blair, M. D., who was born in Ballylogle, County Sligo, Ireland, of Scotch-Irish parentage, and came to the United States in 1835, locating at Williamsburg, Ind. He was married there to Hannah Cranor, and was engaged in the practice of medicine until his death, which occurred in 1861. His wife is the daughter of Thomas Cranor, a native of North Carolina, who came to Indiana at an early day, locating at Williamsburg, where his daughter was born, and where she still continues to reside. James S., the subject of this sketch, received a good education in the high school of Williamsburg and the Centreville Collegiate Institute, and after completing his studies was engaged for two years in teaching in the common schools. At the end of that time, he took charge of the Williamsburg Graded Schools, in which position he continued until he began the study of medicine, in 1872, with Dr. L. P. Taylor, of Williamsburg. In 1874, he attended lectures at the Eclectic Medical Institute, Cincinnati, Ohio, graduating from that institution in 1875. He then began the practice of medicine with his former preceptor, Dr. Taylor, with whom he was associated for two years. In 1877, he came to Randolph County, and located at Lynn, where he has ever since continued to practice his profession. He is yet a young man, but has already achieved a fine professional reputation, and enjoys a large and lucrative practice, which is constantly increasing. He is enthusiastically devoted to his profession, and by his promptness and genial good nature has won the good will and high esteem of all who know him, while his ability and skill accord him a high place in the medical fraternity. He is identified with both the Odd Fellows and Masonic orders, having united with the former at Williamsburg in 1875, and with the latter at Lynn in the spring of 1880. He has been married three times, and has twice mourned the death of a devoted wife. He was first married, in August, 1869, to Miss Ellen Potter, a native of Wayne County, Ind., and daughter of John C. and Elizabeth Potter. This union was blessed by two children, the eldest—Ada G.—still survives. The mother died in January, 1875. On the 7th of January, 1877, he wedded Miss Carrie Medearis, of Williamsburg, Ind., who died August 10, 1879, leaving one daughter—Ethel M.—who still survives. On the 12th of May, 1881, Dr. Blair was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Kelly, of Lynn. They have a cosy, pleasant home, and enjoy the high esteem of the best citizens of the community in which they reside.

JAMES A. BALES, farmer, P. O. Snow Hill, was born in this county January 23, 1831. He is the son of Pleasant Bales, who was born in Ohio September 21, 1810. His mother, Mary (Abshire) Bales, was a native of Virginia, born September 27, 1809. Mr. Bales was educated in the district schools of the county. He was married November 20, 1853, to Ann Thornburgh, who was born in this county May 11, 1837. They had born to them two children—Marion S. and Edward W., but death entered the home circle and carried from it both mother and children. Mr. Bales then battled with the hardships of life alone until April 14, 1865, when he was married to Mary J. Lamm, born in this county April 11, 1841. She is the daughter of Josiah and Elizabeth (York) Lamm, who were natives of North Carolina. This union has been blessed with Rebecca A., born September 30, 1866. Mr. Bales is a consistent member of the Christian Church. He owns a fine farm of 100 acres. He is a thorough gentleman, and one who has the confidence and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

JAMES BARNES, farmer, P. O. Lynn, was born in Wayne County, Indiana, May 24, 1817. He is the son of John and Anna (Jones) Barnes, who were natives of North Carolina, the former born May 13, 1792. Mr. Barnes, like many of the pioneer youth, received but a limited education, but nature has compensated largely for the lack of early opportunities. The event of his marriage took place November 1, 1837, the chosen partner through life being Miss Harriet Mullen, who was born in North Carolina March 18, 1816. Her father, Thomas Mullen, and mother, Nancy (Roe) Mullen, were natives of North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes have had born to them ten children, viz., Elizabeth, born August 23, 1838; Ruth A., March 31, 1844; Charles M., May 21, 1846; Eliza S., November 14, 1848; James R., December 16, 1852, and Benjamin F., February 2, 1855. The deceased ones are Nancy A., born October 5, 1839, and died May 31, 1863; Thomas M., born October 15, 1841, and died in Andersonville Prison September 2, 1864; Joseph M., born October 13, 1350, and died March 18, 1861 Mr. Barnes settled in Greensfort Township, of this county, in 1838, where he remained for one year. He then moved to Hamilton County, Ohio, where he remained for about two years. He retusned to this county, and settled where he now resides, in 1841. He owns a well-improved farm of 139 acres, which is located in Section 23. A glance at his neat, substantial buildings and well-tilled fields are sufficient proof of his pride in the avocation he has chosen. Mr. Barnes is a member of Lynn A. F. & A. M., No. 223, and also of Lynn I. O. O. F., No. 294.

PAUL BEARD, farmer, P. O. Lynn, was born in North Carolina December 7, 1812. His father, Paul Beard, was born on the Island of Nantucket October 19, 1779. His mother, Hannah (Pierson) Beard, was born in North Carolina December 8, 1778. The subject of this sketch was educated in the Friends' schools. He came to this county in 1817 with his parents. He was married, March 20, 1833, to Mary Cox, who was born in Ohio August 20, 1813. Her parents were natives of North Carolina. This union has been blessed with eight children—Levi, born June 12, 1834; Ezra, May 20, 1857; Anna, May 10, 1859; Eunice, January 13, 1844; Louisa, September 7, 1845; Lindsey, December 20, 1847; Ruth, March 7, 1850, and Henry, born December 1, 1852. Mr. Beard owns a fine farm of 115 acres. He is a member of the Society of Friends, and known by a large circle of acquaintances as an exemplary Christian gentleman.

LEVI BEARD, farmer, P. O, Lynn, was born in this county December 6, 1834. He is the son of Paul and Mary (Cox) Beard, the former was born in North Carolina December 7, 1812, and the latter in Ohio August 20, 1813. The event of his marriage took place in 1855, to Rebecca Benson, who was born in this county May 3, 1832. She is the daughter of John and Jane (Hunt) Benson, the former born in Ohio, and the latter in North Carolina. Mr. Beard settled where he now resides in 1860; he owns a fine farm of eighty acres, and has done much toward improving and developing this county. He is a member of the Society of Friends, and is an exemplary gentleman, highly respected by all who know him. Mr. and Mrs. Beard have been blessed with two children, viz., Alpheus F., born December 22, 1856, and Luella J., born June 30, 1863, and deceased December 24, 1878. Alpheus was married, September 14, 1877, to Jennie Nichols, who was born in this county December 3, 1860. She is the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Gray) Nichols, who were both natives of this county, the former born February 14, 1832, and the latter December 23, 1836.

EDWARD I. BROWN, farmer, P. O. Rural. The subject of this sketch, born in Darke County, Ohio, April 29, 1850, is the son of Elisha and Nancy (Thomas) Brown, the former born in Darke County, Ohio, November 17, 1819, and the latter in Wayne County, Ind., November 28, 1823. He received a common-school education. In 1864, he went to Illinois, where he remained for two years. At the expiration of that time he came to this county, and for several years was employed as teacher in the district schools. Mr. Brown was married, March 1, 1871, to Melsena Hinshaw, who was born in this county February 22, 1852. Her parents, Timothy and Sarah J. (Wright) Hinshaw, were natives of Highland County, Ohio, the former born November 3, 1814, and the latter August 17, 1821. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have been blessed with two children—Arley M., born January 24, 1872, and Ernest W., February 8, 1878. Mr. Brown owns 140 acres of land in the county, and is engaged in farming and buying and shipping stock. He is a thorough gentleman, and has a large circle of warm friends and acquaintances.

WILLIAM R. COGGESHALL.

William R. Coggeshall, farmer and County Commissioner, is the son of Caleb and Mary A. (Marica) Coggeshall, and was born in Wayne County, this State, September 18, 1830. He is the second of a family of seven children, all of whom are now living. His father was born in Lancaster County, Va., March 31, 1797, and his mother was born in South Carolina March 2, 1806. His father came to this State in the year 1815, and settled in Wayne County, and his mother came some years later. His parents are both living, and have made their homes with the subject of this sketch for the past sixteen years. William was raised on a farm in Wayne County, where he lived until he was nineteen years of age, when he entered a store at Bloomingsport, this county, in the capacity of a clerk; he remained here until 1851, when he engaged in the carpenter's trade, which he followed for three years. His education was almost wholly neglected until he was twenty-one years of age, when he went to work to prepare himself for a teacher. Not having the means to defray the expenses of his education, he worked very industriously through the summer months at his trade for that purpose. By this means he was enabled to attend the graded school at Williamsburg two terms, and one term at the Manual Labor Institute in this county, under the supervision of Prof. Tucker. He began teaching in the winter of 1854, and continued to teach during the winter season until 1859. Simultaneous with his teaching, he began the study of medicine under Dr. L. P. Taylor, of Williamsburg, Wayne County; he continued the study of medicine for about five years, when he was united in marriage to Amanda E. Cranor, daughter of Joshua and Susanah (Johnson) Cranor, May 22, 1859. His wife is a most amiable and worthy lady, and was born May 31, 1837. Her parents were natives of North Carolina. In 1856, Mr. Coggeshall was elected Clerk of Greene Township, Wayne County; he commenced the practice of medicine in the year 1859, at Bloomingsport; he was a successful practitioner for twelve years, when he retired to private life, but having so many warm friends and patrons this was a difficult task. He is yet frequently called in counsel in important cases. He was elected to the office of County Commissioner in the year 1880, and was re-nominated for the same office last spring. As a Commissioner he has served the county with fidelity, and has given general satisfaction to his constituents, which is attested by his re-nomination. He is owner and proprietor of a fine farm of 216 acres, upon which he has been residing since 1873. The farm is beautifully located and of a good quality of soil, and has very comfortable farm buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Coggeshall are the parents of ten children, nine of whom are now living—Albinus T., born December 25, 1859; Corlistus B., April 10, 1861; Elmer E., December 15, 1862; Oris V., September 24, 1865; Caswell D., June 18, 1867; Hattie E., July 31, 1869; George R., November 29, 1871; William E., April 5, 1876; Amanda L., December 27, 1877.

Mr. Coggeshall is an ancient member of the F. & A. M., and I. O. O. F. orders; he is a stanch Republican, and during his term of office of County Commissioner he has assisted in erecting a fine county jail, iron bridges, etc. He is an upright citizen, as well as a faithful county official. He and his excellent family are much beloved by the community in which they reside, and are known and honored throughout the county.

CHARLES CRAMMER, farmer, P. O. Bloomingsport, was born in New Jersey September 16, 1822. His father, Abraham, and his mother, Elizabeth (Bowker) Crammer were natives of New Jersey. Mr. C. was educated in the district schools. He was married, October 14, 1846, to Elizabeth Miller, who was born in Ohio May 21, 1825. They have two children living—Abraham, born July 11, 1847, and Margaret, born July 1, 1859. Abraham was married August 12, 1875, to Rebecca A. Littelle, who was born in Ohio. Mr. Crammer settled where he now resides in 1853. Owns a farm of forty acres. Is a gentleman highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

LEANDER E. CONNER, farmer and teacher, P. O. Bloomingsport, was born in Grant County, Ind., October 24, 1850. His father, Louis Conner, was born in South Carolina December 25, 1815. His mother, Mary (Jennings) Conner, was born in North Carolina August 10, 1820. The subject of this sketch was educated in the district schools, and at the Germantown High School, in Wayne County, Ind. Has been reading medicine for the past eight years. He was married, January 18, 1879, to Louisa Ozbun, who was born in this county August 10, 1853. They have had born to them one child—Florence, December 4, 1879, who died September 4, 1880. Mr. Conner has been engaged in teaching for the past five years. Owns a farm of eighty acres. Is a member of Lynn Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 294. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a sterling gentleman, who is highly respected by all who know him.

WILLIAM A. W. DALY.

William A. W. Daly, son of George W. and Catharine (Clayton) Daly, was born in Preble County, Ohio, October 24, 1833. He is the fourth of a family of nine children, of whom six are still living. His father was born in Cavan County, Ireland, March 2, 1794, and his mother was born in Kentucky December 8, 1801. His father came to the United States when he was twenty-one years of age, and located in New York City, where he remained for two years, completing his education in college, from which he graduated with high honors. After graduating, he practiced law for several years, when he abandoned the profession on account of a dislike for it, and entered upon the profession of teaching. He continued the latter profession a greater portion of the time until he was sixty-eight years old. His teaching was principally confined to Preble County, Ohio, and this county. He married Catharine Clayton October, 1825, and settled near Dayton, Ohio. He and his family came to this county in 1843, and entered 120 acres of land in Washington Township, where he remained until his death, which occurred February, 1866, and where his widow still resides. She came to this State with her parents from Kentucky in the year 1805, and settled in Franklin County, this State. Indiana, at this time, had but few settlers. They had no neighbors except the uncivilized Indian and howling wolves. Although she is now eighty-one years of age, she still enjoys comparatively good health. William came to this county in the year 1843, at ten years of age. He has spent the greater portion of his life upon the farm, and received his education from the common district schools. He was married to Mary Hinshaw, daughter of Abel and Nancy (Bookout) Hinshaw, January 7, 1857. His wife was born in this county March 6, 1837. Her father was born in North Carolina May 13, 1799, and her mother was born in the same State December 15, 1799. Mr. and Mrs. Daly are the parents of nine children, of whom eight are living—Catharine, born October 19, 1857; Minerva, July 28, 1859; Nancy D., November 3, 1861, died April 1, 1870; Robert L., born January 20, 1865; Frank, January 9, 1868; Charles, November 14, 1870; Ulysses G., June 10, 1872; Walter H., February 14, 1875; Bertha, December 4, 1879. Mr. Daly lived on a farm in Washington Township until the breaking-out of the war, when he volunteered, August 25, 1862, in Company B, Fifth Indiana Cavalry. His army life was full of hardships, dangers and suffering. His experience as a soldier was indeed a severe one, but his patriotism never faltered and he served his bleeding country nobly. He was one of a few soldiers who strictly maintained his moral integrity throughout the entire service. During the whole time, he never touched a drop of intoxicants. His first service was against the guerrillas of Kentucky during the spring of 1863. In September, he was transferred with his regiment to East Tennessee, and were among the first to enter Knoxville. They remained in that vicinity until December, when they returned to Kentucky, and remained until the spring of 1864. They were sent to Georgia, and from May 10 to July 31 there was not a day but what they were under fire. William was taken prisoner near Macon by Wheeler's Cavalry July 31, 1864. He was placed in the prison pen at Andersonville August 2, and remained until November, when he was transferred to Charleston, S. C., where he remained for one month; from thence to Florence, S. C., where he remained until February, 1865. He was then taken to Wilmington, N. C., thence to Goldsboro, then back to Wilmington, where he was paroled at the close of the war. No pen can portray the horrible suffering of our brave boys in the Southern prison pens. Mr. Daly was one of a few who barely escaped with their lives. We cannot do this part of Mr. Daly's history justice, hence our pen must remain silent. The treatment of Union prisoners was so dastardly and uncivilized that if we could we would gladly draw a veil over the pages of this part of the American history. When the subject of this sketch was taken prisoner his weight was 216 pounds. When he was released, he was a mere skeleton, weighing only 145 pounds. At the close of the war, Mr. Daly returned home, and after returning health, he again pursued his usual avocation of farming until October, 1874, when the people of the county called this brave soldier to the office of County Sheriff. He was again called to the same office in 1876. As a county official, he did his duty nobly and with general satisfaction to his constituents. He entered the army as a private, but was soon promoted. He was first promoted to Orderly Sergeant in the spring of 1864; then was commissioned as Second Lieutenant, then First Lieutenant. Mr. and Mrs. Daly and their two older daughters are honored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. D. is an acceptable member of Lynn Lodge, No. 223, F. & A. M., Winchester Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M., and Richmond Commandery, No. 8, K. T. He has always been a temperate, moral, upright citizen, and a public and uncompromising advocate of the temperance cause for years, and has done much to advance the cause in the county and State. He has been a brave and patriotic soldier, an efficient county officer and is a splendid type of a true and upright man.

WILLIAM ENGLE.

William Engle, a farmer and dealer in real estate, was born in Burlington County, N. J., December 13, 1811. He is the son of Isaac and Sarah (Price) Engle, and is the ninth of a family of eleven children, only two of whom are now living—the subject of this sketch, and Mrs. Lydia A. Rogers, of Waynesville, Ohio. His father was the son of Robert and Jane Engle, and was born in New Jersey March 15, 1773. His mother was the daughter of Thomas and Hannah Price, and was born in New Jersey March 17, 1774. His parents moved to Warren County, Ohio, in the year 1825, where they remained until their deaths.

The subject of this sketch was raised on a farm, enduring all of the hardships and deprivations common to pioneer life, receiving a fair business education from the common schools. He was united in marriage to Letitia Cabe, February 13, 1834, who still survives. She is the daughter of Elias and Sarah Cabe, and was born in Pennsylvania November 29, 1813. Her parents were natives of Pennsylvania, and her father was born in 1768, and her mother in 1770. Her mother's maiden name was Sarah White. Her father died in Warren County, Ohio, in 1844, and her mother in Wayne County, Ind., in 1847. The subject of this sketch settled in Washington Township, this county, in the year 1842, when he purchased 240 acres of land with slight improvements; he is now owner and proprietor of 368 acres of excellent land with 260 acres under a high state of cultivation. This farm is well under-drained, and is supplied with commodious and convenient buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Engle are the parents of twelve children, ten of whom are living—Isaac, born December 11, 1834; Wesley H., April 21, 1836; Robert, September 21, 1837; Elias, December 9, 1838; Calvin S., September 9, 1844; James S., September 13, 1846; Daniel H., May 11, 1849; Albert, May 26, 1851; Price, October 5, 1852; Josiah, B., October 30, 1854. The deceased ones are William, born December 13, 1841, who was wounded at the battle of Pittsburg Landing, and died in the hospital at St. Louis May 2, 1862. Samuel R., was born March 22, 1843, and died June 26, 1845.

Mr. Engle is a stanch Republican, and has been actively interested in the success of the party of his choice. His first vote was cast for Gen. Harrison for President of the United States. He has served as Township Trustee for a number of years. He and his amiable wife are acceptable members of the United Brethren Church at Bloomingsport. Mr. Engle has been a hard working man; has raised and educated a large family of children, all of whom are well situated in life, and honorable, upright citizens. His sons, William, Calvin and Robert, served in the war of the rebellion, in the regular service, and made honorable records as soldiers. His son James S., enlisted in the hundred days' service, and Elias was engaged in the service during the Morgan raid. William enlisted in the Thirty-sixth Regiment Indiana Infantry, and was wounded at the battle of Pittsburg Landing April 6, 1862, and died as stated elsewhere in this sketch. Calvin enlisted in the Sixty-ninth Regiment, but being under age, and having an attack of measles, his father brought him home; but, after returning health, he re-enlisted in the Fifth Indiana Cavalry. He was taken prisoner at Macon, Ga., and was confined in Southern prison pens, enduring all of the hardships of prison life for ten months, and was honorably discharged at the close of the war. Robert was drafted into the service in the year 1864, and served his country faithfully until the close of the war. Mr. Engle, nobly assisted by his excellent wife, has been eminently successful as a farmer and business man. He has accumulated a large amount of property, and is surrounded by all of the comforts and many luxuries of life. He is an upright and honored citizen of the county, and he and his wife are useful and highly respected members of society.

DANIEL H. ENGLE was born in this county May 11, 1849. He is the son of William and Letitia (Cabe) Engle. He was raised on a farm, and educated in the district schools of the county, and was engaged in teaching in the same for five years. As a teacher, his success was marked. In 1870, he was was employed in a saw-mill, as head sawyer, adjoining his father's farm, where he remained for one year. The mill was then moved to Richmond, Wayne County, and a sash and door factory attached. Mr. Engle continued to work in the mill, running it during the night, paying the owners a rental fee for the same. It was by this means that he obtained a start in the world, his adventure being attended with success. He spent the year 1878 in California, Iowa and other Western States. He was married, April 15, 1880, to Martha B. Sharp. She is an estimable lady, and was born in this county June 27, 1860. Her father, Josiah Sharp, was born in New Jersey May 15, 1836, and her mother, Lydia (Neal) Sharp, was born in Wayne County, Ind., May 24, 1839. Mr. and Mrs. Engle are the parents of two interesting daughters. For the past four years, Mr. Engle has had charge of his father's farm, and has been very successful in its management, as well other enterprises in which he has been engaged. Although a young man, Mr. Engle has accumulated property rapidly, and has a bright future before him. He and his wife are highly respected citizens, and honored members of society.

HILLERY GREEN, farmer, P. O. Snow Hill, was born in Bracken County, Ky., August 14, 1803. He is the son of William Green, who was born in Maryland. His mother, Lydia (Marshall) Green, was a native of Virginia. Mr. Green was married, June 7, 1823, to Mary A. Blanchard, who was born in Pennsylvania January 6, 1800. Her father, David Blanchard, was born in New Jersey in 1773. Her mother, Sarah (Clark) Blanchard, was a native of Connecticut. They have had born to them ten children, eight of whom are living, viz.: Cintha A., born January 29, 1826; Julia A., December 24, 1827; David, March 1, 1831; William, July 28, 1833; Nancy M., March 26, 1835; Benjamin, April 17, 1840; Luticia J., April 15, 1842, and John W., born March 29, 1846. Mr. and Mrs. Green have forty-five grandchildren, twenty-four great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. They settled in this county in 1865. Mr. Green is his younger days was engaged in the tanning business, but after coming to this county he chose to be a farmer. He owns a well-improved farm of 120 acres. Mr. and Mrs. Green are members of the Christian Church, and have lived an exemplary Christian life. After they have passed from earth away, it may well be said of them that their life was one worthy of imitation.

CAPT. ROBERT WASHINGTON HAMILTON.

Capt. Robert Washington Hamilton, physician and surgeon, was born in Monongahela County, W. Va., March 4, 1818. He is the son of James S. and Eliza (Courtney) Hamilton, and the third of a family of twelve children, of whom seven are now living, six in this State and one in Colorado. His father was born in Baltimore, Md., November 5, 1792. His mother was born in Castle Dawson, Ireland, in the year 1796. She came to the United States with her parents at the age of twelve years, and settled in Monongahela County, W. Va., where she was subsequently married to James S. Hamilton. They continued to reside in West Virginia until the year 1832, when they moved to the State of Indiana, and purchased land and settled in Fayette Co. They remained here until their deaths. Mrs. Hamilton died in 1875, and Mr. Hamilton in 1879. Robert was fourteen years of age when he came with his parents to this State, and was a diligent laborer on the farm until he was eighteen. He obtained a liberal education from the common schools of Virginia and this State—the best the schools at that time afforded. In 1837, he moved to Richmond, Coles Co., Ill., where he engaged in the grocery business for a short time. While a resident of Richmond, he was united in a first marriage to Mrs. Melinda Mathews, of Coles County, February 13, 1839. After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton settled in Waterloo, Ind., where they resided for about four years, when they removed to Hillsboro, Wayne County, and remained until the death of Mrs. Hamilton, which occurred August 15, 1854. After a second marriage with Mrs. Sarah (Stetler) Bascom, Dr. Hamilton located in Lynn, this county, in the year 1855, where he has lived ever since, engaged in the practice of medicine. He was called to mourn the death of his second wife May 1, 1881. He was united in a third marriage, May 4, 1882, to Mrs. Eliza A. Layson. He is the father of three sons, as fruits of his first marriage. Dr. Hamilton commenced the study of medicine at the age of seventeen, under Dr. Trimbley, of Brownsville, Union Co., Ind., and completed his studies under Dr. Amos Chapman, of Waterloo, Ind. He began the practice of his profession in 1845 at Hillsboro, and continued in a large and lucrative practice until 1854, when he located in Lynn, this county, where he has remained ever since, with the exception of an interval of eighteen months, in which he served his country in the late war. As a physician, Dr. Hamilton has had an extensive practice, as much so as any other physician that has ever lived in this county, and with eminent success. He has never lost a case in obstetrics, diphtheria or scarlet fever. In July, 1861, he recruited Company C of the Nineteenth Indiana Infantry, and was chosen Captain of the same, being the first commissioned officer from this county in the three years' service. Hon. W. E. Murry, of this county, was the first man enlisted in the company. Dr. Hamilton was a faithful and efficient officer and soldier, and served for eighteen months, when he was compelled to resign on account of a stroke of paralysis which attacked him in September, 1861, and from the effects of which he has never recovered. In addition to the discharge of his duties as commanding officer, he was registered as acting Surgeon, and did much service in this capacity. After his resignation in the army, he returned to his home in this county, and resumed the practice of his profession. In addition to the practice of medicine, Dr. Hamilton has been successfully engaged in the mercantile and real estate business. He takes an active interest in politics, and has always been an ardent supporter of the Whig and Republican parties, while his father and all of his brothers were stanch Democrats. He is an honored and useful member of Lynn Lodge, No. 223, A., F. & A. M., and during the greater portion of the time, for over twenty years, he has been honored with the position of W. M. of the lodge. Dr. Hamilton is eminently a self-made man, a popular physician, and has given largely of his time and means to the development and improvement of this county. He is public-spirited and ever ready to assist in any and all public and philanthropic enterprises. He is an honored citizen and a faithful and devoted friend, and his name will ever be revered by all who know him.

URIAH A. HINSHAW.

Uriah A. Hinshaw was born near Snow Hill in Randolph Co., Ind., on the 16th of January, 1852. His father, Jacob B. Hinshaw, was born in North Carolina, and came north when a small boy with his parents, Abel and Nancy Hinshaw, stopping for one season in Ohio, and removing thence to Randoph County, Ind., where he grew to manhood, and where he has ever since continued to reside; he is the son of pioneer parents, and has witnessed the many changes and improvements that have taken place in this county within a half century, bearing well his own part in encouraging and advancing these improvements since reaching man's estate. A more extended sketch of his life will appear elsewhere in this volume, and we resume the narration of those incidents that go to make up the history of his son Uriah. He was reared in Washington Township, and his early life was not materially different from that of farmer boys in general; he attended the district schools, acquiring a good English education. Out of school hours, and during the summer months, his time was employed in the performance of various duties about the home farm, and by this daily routine he became familiar with the details of farming, and in his maturer years adopted that pursuit as his chosen vocation in life. At the age of twenty-one years he began teaching school, and one year later purchased fifty acres of land in Jay County, Ind. Before the close of that year, however, he traded his Jay County land for the farm upon which he now resides, in Washington Township. This tract consists of eighty acres, of which all but ten or twelve acres were totally unimproved when it came into his possession. The balance has been cleared and improved by him, and is now in a fine state of cultivation. In the pursuit of farming, Mr. Hinshaw has met with pronounced success, and although yet a young man, he occupies a place among the leading agriculturists of his township. By industry and close application to his work, he has gained at least an encouraging start on the road to fortune; and it is but due him to say that his possessions are the legitimate results of his energy, rather than of any peculiar good fortune; he has met with reverses, yet he has been cheerful in misfortune, working heroically to redeem his losses. In September, 1878, his residence was destroyed by fire, and all his present property, with the exception of a few articles, was consumed in the flames. But upon the foundation of his former home he immediately erected his present residence; less pretentious, it is true, but nevertheless a cozy, comfortable home. He possesses the proper spirit and energy to insure a successful life, and with the past for a criterion we join in the hope that his life may be crowned with the good results his industry so well merits. On the 4th of April, 1874, Mr. Hinshaw was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Baldwin, who was born November 28, 1854, in Washington Township, Randolph Co., Ind. Mrs. Hinshaw is the daughter of Irvin and Hannah Baldwin, who were early settlers and prominent citizens of Washington Township. She is an estimable lady, and enjoys the good will of all who know her. Their wedding life has been blessed by three children, viz.: Leary A., Willimetta E. and Tully Ivanhoe. Both parents are consistent and active church members. Mr. Hinshaw united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in March, 1873, his wife uniting with the Christian Church in the same year; he has never been prominent in politics, but is a stanch supporter of the principles of the Republican party. In private and social life he is highly esteemed for his genial good nature, and his honorable dealing has won for him the confidence of the community in which he resides.

SILAS HINSHAW, farmer, P. O. Rural, was born in North Carolina January 5, 1829; he is the son of Abel and Nancy (Bookout) Hinshaw, who were natives of North Carolina, the former born May 13, 1799, and the latter December 15, 1799. Mr. Hinshaw, like the pioneer youth generally, received but a limited education, but nature has compensated largely for the lack of early opportunities; he came to this county with his parents in 1834; was married March 8, 1851, to Sofronia Mullen, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., August 21, 1830. She is the daughter of Thomas Mullen, who was born in South Carolina January 20, 1791. Mr. and Mrs. Hinshaw have had born to them eleven children, seven of whom are living—Melissa A., born October 20, 1851; Lotitia A., September 2, 1853; Nancy E., August 26, 1856; Arnold B., August 18, 1858; Nettie M., March 13, 1866; Edward, July 5, 1872, and Addie F., born September 9, 1877. The deceased ones are Hattie, born September 27, 1860, died October 17, 1878; George, born October 19, 1862, died November 3, 1862; Andrew, born October 5, 1864, died November 9, 1864, and Elsie D., who was born May 13, 1871, and died September 28, 1871. Mr. Hinshaw settled where he now resides in 1855; he owns 160 acres of land; and is an enterprising farmer; he is a kind husband and father, and is universally esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

ELKANAH HINSHAW, farmer, P. O. Lynn, was born in this county December 2, 1842; he is the son of Abel and Nancy (Bookout) Hinshaw, who were natives of North Carolina, born in 1799, the former May 13, and the latter December 15. Mr. Hinshaw was married December 24, 1863, to Mary E. Norton, who was born in this county December 23, 1840. She is the daughter of William and Elizabeth (Snead) Norton, who were natives of North Carolina. This union has been blessed with six children, viz.: Ida J., born November 21, 1864; William, July 26, 1867; Lillie M., August 14, 1869; Ica D., November 9, 1870; Nancy E., December 26, 1872, and Stephen, August 25, 1877. Mr. and Mrs. Hinshaw are worthy citizens, and are highly respected by all who know them. Mr. Hinshaw owns 102 acres of land in the county. They reside in Section 27.

JONH HINSHAW, farmer, P. O. Snow Hill, was born in Highland County, Ohio, April 3, 1818. He is the son of John and Margaret (Ratcliff) Hinshaw, who were born in North Carolina, the former in 1781, and the latter in 1788. Mr. Hinshaw was educated in the district schools of Ohio; he came to this county in 1837. The event of his marriage took place September 11, 1841. The chosen companion through life being Teresa Wright, who was born in Clinton County, Ohio, August 23, 1824. She is the daughter of David and Teresa (Mitchell) Wright, the former a native of Virginia, born January 20, 1784, and the latter in Kentucky October 17, 1791. From 1845 to 1860, Mr. Hinshaw was engaged in blacksmithing. He enlisted, in August, 1862, in Company E, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry; his first introduction to the battle-field was at Richmond, Ky., where he received a slight wound and was taken prisoner. After being in the hands of the enemy for a few days, he was paroled and sent home, going into camp at Richmond, Ind., where he remained for a few weeks, when an exchange was made, and he was again sent to the front, joining Gen. Sherman's command at Vicksburg. From Vicksburg he went to Arkansas Post; from there to Milligan's Bend, where he was detailed to act as general nurse at Young's Point Hospital. Shortly after this he was taken sick, and remained at Memphis and other points for about four months, before he gained sufficient strength to be sent home. He has since been engaged in farming and stock-raising; he owns 240 acres of land in the county; he is a member of the Society of Friends. He is a thorough gentleman, commanding the respect of all who know him. Mr. and Mrs. Hinshaw have been blessed with ten children, five of whom are living.: Teresa, born January 11, 1845; Sarah E., November 17, 1853; Lorinda, A. April 11, 1856; Delilah, June 5, 1859, and William, born May 10, 1865.

ARMINIOUS A. HINSHAW, farmer, P. O. Lynn, was born in this county August 11, 1847. He is the son of Timothy and Jayne (Wright) Hinshaw, who were natives of Ohio. Mr. Hinshaw was educated in the district schools of this county. The event of his marriage took place September 4, 1872, the chosen partner through life being Martha A. Baldwin, who was born in this county February 20, 1857. She is the daughter of Urbane and Hannah (Bales) Baldwin, the former born in North Carolina May 4, 1830, and the latter in this county September 26, 1833. Mr. Hinshaw owns a well-improved farm of eighty acres, and is an enterprising farmer; he and his worthy lady are consistent members of the Christian Church, and are highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. To brighten and cheer their home, they have been blessed with a daughter—Lulu V., born January 21, 1878.

ELZA HINSHAW, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Snow Hill, was born in Randolph County, Ind., July 4, 1847. He is the son of Absalom and Eliza (Carter) Hinshaw, natives of North Carolina. The subject of this sketch was married, July 31, 1869, to Mary E. Robbins, who was born in this county September 22, 1852. She is the daughter of Ezekiel and Ann (Platt) Robbins, the former born in New Jersey, and the latter in Ohio. This union has been blessed with Llewelen, born September 2, 1870; Laura W., September 7, 1872; Eliza A., September 27, 1874; Viola, October 14, 1876; Lotitia M., November 5, 1878, and Josephine, December 16, 1880. Mr. Lane settled in Hancock County, Ind., in 1850, and was engaged for three years in the saw-milling business; he then moved to Noblesville, Ind., and opened a grocery, and after remaining in that business for one year he returned to Hancock County, and again engaged in the saw-milling business until 1865, when he went into the army, Company D, Fifty-third Indiana Infantry, but, on account of ill-health, was discharged July 10, 1865. He then purchased a saw-mill, and was thus engaged until July, 1876, when he settled where he now resides, and took charge of the station and post office. He is a member of the M. E. Church and a thorough gentleman.

MOSES LASLEY, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, April 1, 1810. He is the son of Peter Lasley, who was born in Pennsylvania; his mother, Christina (Carnes) Lasley, was a native of Maryland. Mr. Lasley, with his parents, settled in this county in 1819. He was married March 28, 1833, to Margaret Johnson, who was born in Virginia August 12, 1812; her father, Henry, and mother, Agnes (Umphres) Johnson, were natives of Virginia. They have had born to them four children, three of whom are living—Andrew J., July 31, 1836; Levi J., August 15, 1845; and Henry H., September 9, 1849; Lavina, born March 4, 1842, is deceased. Mr. Lasley owns a farm of 735 acres; his house, barns and improvements show that he is an industrious, enterprising, prosperous farmer, and one worthy of imitation. He is a member of Winchester Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 56.

BENJAMIN MILLER, farmer, P. O. Snow Hill, was born in Ohio May 22, 1807. He is the son of John and Susanna (Wilkens) Miller. The subject of this sketch came to this county, entered land and settled where he now resides in 1831. He was married in 1833 to Phœbe Forecythe, and for five years they journeyed through life together, but, at the expiration of that time, Mrs. Miller was called from earth away. Mr. Miller was again married December 26, 1840, to Martha J. Calvert, who was born in Virginia August 15, 1816; she is the daughter of Francis Calvert. This union has been blessed with eight children, four of whom are living—Robert S., born January 23, 1843; Mary T., November 24, 1844; Catharine E. S., January 11, 1847; and Esther E., August 3, 1852. Mr. Miller may truly be termed one of the pioneers of the county, having been a resident for over fifty years; he has, by his untiring industry, made for himself a very fine farm of 160 acres; he is a gentleman who has gained the confidence and respect of a large circle of acquaintances.

JOHN MILLER, farmer, P. O. Trenton, was born in Ireland March 15, 1833. His father, William, and mother, Sarah (Clyde) Miller, were natives of Ireland. The subject of this sketch left his native land, and settled in this county in 1844; was educated in the district schools of the county. He was married June 6, 1861, to Margaret J. Porter, who was born in Ohio April 1, 1845; her father, John, and mother, Margaret (Neal) Porter, were natives of Ireland. They have had born to them—Sarah E., June 12, 1864; Minnie J., August 9, 1867; Letitia B., July 17, 1869; Thomas P., December 7, 1871; and John, October 30, 1874. Mr. M. owns a fine farm of 140 acres, and is known by a large circle of friends and acquaintances as an enterprising, industrious gentleman.

WILLIAM T. MILLER, farmer, P. O. Trenton, was born in this county March 22, 1845. His father, William, and mother, Sarah (Clyde) Miller, were born in Ireland, the former in January, 1804, and the latter August 15, 1803. Mr. Miller was educated in the district schools of this county. He was married April 15, 1868, to Eunice Dennis, who was born in North Carolina. In 1870, death entered the home circle, and took from it Mrs. Miller and an infant child. Mr. Miller then lived with his mother until June 3, 1871, when he was married to Viola Haynes, who was born in this county September 25, 1855; she is the daughter of Jesse Haynes, who was born in New York; her mother, Matilda (Cropper) Haynes, was born in Ohio. Their union has been blessed with—Eunice D., December 4, 1873; Jesse O., February 10, 1875; William W. C., March 16, 1878; and Aldes J. and Alden A., who were born January 3, 1880. Mr. Miller settled where he now resides in 1871; his entire farm was at that time a huge forest, but, by industry and hard work, he has made of it one among the neatest and best improved farms in the county. In 1877, Mr. M. erected on his farm, at a cost of $1,000, a barn, which is a model of beauty and convenience. Mr. M. is a consistent member of the Society of Friends, peaceable, temperate and kind to his family, and better by far would the improvements of the county be had we more such men as William T. Miller.

ISAAC A. MILLS, farmer, P. O. Trenton, is the son of Jesse Mills, who was born in North Carolina December 8, 1809. The subject of this sketch was born in this county February 13, 1843. He enlisted in 1861 in Company E, Fifty-seventh Indiana Infantry; went to Louisville, Ky., where he was taken sick; after remaining in a field hospital for three weeks, he was sent home, where he remained until 1862, joining his regiment just before going into the battle of Pittsburg Landing. In May, while assisting to unload a boat, Mr. Mills met with a severe accident, which almost cost him his left hand, on account of which he was unfitted for active service; he then served as hospital cook and nurse until he was discharged. Mr. Mills was married in 1865 to Catherine L. Thornburg, daughter of Daniel Thornburg. This union was blessed with Daniel N., born April 12, 1866. In 1868, Mr. Mills was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife. He then battled the hardships of life alone until September 15, 1869, when he was married to Jennie Pemberton, who was born in Indiana January 6, 1844; she is the daughter of Isaac Pemberton, who was a native of Ohio. The result of this union has been three children—Ollie A., April 6, 1873; Henry O., March 29, 1875; and George E., February 6, 1879. Mr. Mills owns a farm of fifty-seven acres in Section 25, and is a sterling gentleman, highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

JOEL MILLS, farmer, P. O. Johnson, was born in Wayne County, Ind., January 6, 1833. His father, Aaron Mills, was born in Warren County, Ohio, December 7, 1807. His mother, Rebecca (Small) Mills, was born in Ohio May, 1809. Mr. Mills was educated in the district schools of Wayne County, Ind. In 1854, Mr. M. associated himself with Anderson & Horn, in the saw-milling business at Lynn, this county. After being thus engaged for one year, he sold his interest in the mill and again resumed his former occupation, carpenter and joiner. He was married, November 10, 1855, to Cynthia Beard, who was born in this county May 19, 1840. Their union has been blessed with six children—Caroline E., born October 27, 1856; George W., March 24, 1859; Cassius C., September 24, 1861; Martin L., April 21, 1864; Rosa A., December 15, 1867, and Eva N., February 21, 1874. In 1878, Mr. Mills was elected Township Trustee, and was again elected to the same office in 1880. He is a member of the Friends Church. Owns a fine farm of 308 acres in Sections 10 and 15. Is a thorough gentleman, highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

JOEL A. NEWMAN, farmer P. O. Bloomingsport, was born in Ohio June 30, 1838. His father, Joseph, and mother, Rebecca (Pugh) Newman, were natives of Ohio. Mr. Newman was educated in the district schools of Ohio. He settled in this county in 1855. Mr. N. was married, in 1865, to Sarah E. Cornelius, who was born in Wayne County, Ind. Mrs. N. departed this life in about ten months after their marriage. Mr. Newman was again married, July 14, 1858, to Margaret A. Ellis, who was born in this county June 20, 1841. This union has been blessed with four children—William W., born June 30, 1859; Sarah E., August 17, 1861; Emma, February 24, 1864, and James L., September 7, 1865. Mr. N. enlisted in 1861, Company C., Nineteenth Indiana Infantry; was promoted to First Lieutenant. Took part in numerous battles and among them the one at Gainesville, where he was wounded, on account of which, he shortly afterward resigned. In 1864, Mr. N. was chosen by the people of this county to act as their Sheriff. He was again elected to the same office in 1866. Since he retired from office, he has been extensively engaged in farming. Owns 408 acres of land in this county, and is a gentleman who is highly respected by a large circle of acquaintances.

AARON OREN, farmer, P. O. Lynn, was born in this county September 18, 1842. He is the son of Jacob L. Oren, who was born in Ohio April 3, 1813. His mother, Mary (Frazer) Oren, was born in Ohio May 10, 1813. Mr. Oren was educated in the district schools of the county. He was married, November 30, 1865, to Martha Thornburgh, who was born in Delaware County, Ind, April 11, 1840. Her father, Edward W. Thornburg, was born in North Carolina. Her mother, Susanna Thornburg, was born in Ohio. They have had born to them Albert E., October 25, 1866; Charley J., August 5, 1868; Edward D., June 28, 1870; Mary L., August 25, 1874; Ira S., January 30, 1877, and Lindley I., June 13, 1879. Mr. Oren enlisted in 1864, Company C, Thirteenth Indiana Infantry. He spent most of his time in Georgia and Tennessee until June, of 1865, when he was discharged. He owns a farm of 122 acres, and is an enterprising farmer.

ABRAHAM SHEELY.

Abraham Sheely, the subject of this sketch, has been a long known and honored citizen of this county. He was born in Greene County, Ohio, August 6, 1838, and is the son of William and Permelia (Hanby) Sheely. Of six children, Abraham is the third, three of whom are now living. His father and mother were both born in Greene County, Ohio, the former in 1811, and the latter in 1813. They were never residents of this State, but lived and died in Ohio. Abraham was raised on a farm, and received a limited education from the common district schools of Ohio. His youthful days were uneventful, save that his lot as a farmer boy was beset with many privations and hard labor. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company D, One Hundred and Tenth Ohio Infantry, and served his country with fidelity for three years. He took an active part in the battles of Winchester, Locust Grove, Mine Run and the terrible and bloody battles of the "Wilderness." In the last-named battles, he was severely wounded in the left limb, above the knee, from the effects of which he has never entirely recovered, and on account of which is drawing a small Government pension. After being wounded, he was placed in the hospitals of Fredericksburg and Washington city, where he remained until the close of the war. He was discharged July 10, 1865. He entered the army as a private; was a gallant and faithful soldier, never sought promotion and was always ready for duty. At the close of the war, he came to this State, and settled on a farm in Delaware County, where he remained for four years. He then came to Randolph, and settled on the farm where he now resides. He is owner and proprietor of a well-improved farm of eighty-four acres. His farm buildings are of modern architecture, convenient and handsomely situated, an exact sketch of which is given in this work. He was married, March 7, 1864, to Caroline A. Palmer, of Alexandria, Va. His wife is an estimable lady, and was born at Athens, Me., August 26, 1836. Her father, Col. David Palmer, was a native of New Hampshire, and was born April 10, 1795. Her mother, Mary (Wentworth) Palmer, was born in the State of Maine March 30, 1794. Mr. and Mrs. Sheely are the parents of one child, a very interesting daughter—Mary Louisa, born December 10, 1865. Mr. Sheely has been a very industrious and frugal man. All that he possesses, he owes to his industry and enterprise. He is a useful and honored member of the Christian Church. He is also an active member of the Randolph County Agricultural Society, and has filled several important offices in this society. He gives especial attention to the raising of hogs and cattle, in addition to the cultivation of all kinds of grain. Mr. and Mrs. Sheely and their daughter are honored and useful members of society.

BENJAMIN SMITH, farmer, P. O. Bloomingsport. Born in this county August 16, 1828. His father, Temple Smith, was born in Kentucky July 26, 1805. His mother, Priscilla (Crosby) Smith, was a native of Alabama, born May 5, 1810. Mr. Smith was married, April 12, 1849, to Ellen Engle, who was born in New Jersey October 3, 1828. Her father and mother, Job and Louisa C. (Foreman) Engle, were natives of New Jersey Mr. and Mrs. Smith have had born to them—Isaac, June 23, 1850; Wesley O., September 15, 1857; John, March 12, 1860; Mary, August 12, 1865; Priscilla, March 12, 1868, and Rosella, born March 26, 1871. Mr. Smith owns a well improved farm of 160 acres in Section 13, on which he resides. He is always frank and always hospitable to friend and stranger; a kind husband and father, and genial as a companion and associate.

OBEDIAH STILWELL, farmer, P. O. Lynn. This estimable gentleman, born in Preble County, Ohio, March 25, 1832, is the son of Obediah and Margaret (Francis) Stilwell, who were natives of New Jersey, the former born April 18, 1789, and the latter September 27, 1790. The subject of this sketch has been—with the exception of one year during 1857–58, which was spent in Joe Daviess County, Ill.—a resident of this county since 1839. The event of his marriage took place September 23, 1852. The chosen companion through life, Miss Achsah Hill, was born in Randolph County, Ind., January 22, 1830; she is the daughter of Henry and Achsah (Peacock) Hill, who were natives of Randolph County, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Stilwell have been blessed with two children—George A., born June 28, 1853, and deceased August 14, 1854, and Henry C., born August 11, 1858. Mr. S. is a member of Lynn F. & A. M., No. 223; he owns a well improved farm of eighty acres in Section 4, on which he resides; he and his worthy lady enjoy the respect and confidence of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Thornburgh was educated in the district schools of the county; he was married, December 9, 1855, to Elizabeth Bales, who was born in Wayne County, Ind. They have born to them, Melinda E., June 15, 1860. In 1862, Mr. Thornburgh was called upon to mourn the loss of his beloved wife; he then battled with the hardships of life alone until June 9, 1864, when he married Sarah J. Hiatt, who was a native of Ireland, born October 10, 1837. She is the daughter of William and Sarah (Clyde) Miller, who were born in Ireland, the former January, 1804, and the latter August 15, 1803. They have had born to them—Martha W., November 1, 1867, and Jesse E, January 13, 1877. Mrs. Thornburgh had by her first husband, Mr. Hiatt, Rebecca E., born October 20, 1858, and William L., April 17, 1860. Mr. Thornburgh owns a farm of eighty acres in Section 1, and is a genial gentleman.

DAVID W. WILMORE, teacher, P. O. Johnson; he is the son of John L. and Mary (Lasley) Wilmore, who are natives of this State, the former born in Wayne County September 19, 1831, and the latter in Randolph County May 23, 1833. The subject of this sketch was born in Adams County, Ind., June 22, 1854; he was educated at Union City and at the high school of Winchester; began teaching in 1872, and since then has spent the larger part of his time in the school-room as teacher. The event of his marriage took place November 1, 1879, the chosen partner for life being Miss Alice Lasley, who was born in this county March 1, 1855. Mr. Wilmore is a genial gentleman, and is universally esteemed by all who know him. Mr. and Mrs. Wilmore have had born to them a son—Jay C., August 20, 1880.

WEST RIVER TOWNSHIP.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

ITS boundaries at present are as follows: North by White River and Stony Creek, east by Washington, south by Wayne County, west by Nettle Creek and Stony Creek.

West River Township was laid off in May, 1831, then comprising all west of Huntsville and eight miles north and south, taking the whole southwestern portion of the county, and by several changes became what it now is. Its extent is forty square miles, eight miles north and south, and five miles east and west. It embraces the north half of Township 18 and the south half of Township 19 (except a strip of one mile wide on the east side), and is wholly in Range 13 east. The sections in the township are as follows: Township 18, Range 13 east: Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18; Township 19, Range 13: Sections 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35.

The township takes in West River Valley (so far as it lies in Randolph County), as also the head-waters of Martindale Creek, running southward into White Water, and of Cabin Creek, flowing northward into White River.

The region is rich and beautiful, the surface is rolling and the scenery picturesque; the country is capable of a high cultivation, and much of it is already brought to that condition; the farms are fertile and well tilled. The muddy roads of the past have largely given place to the smooth, leveled, graveled pikes of the present era, which extend in several directions along and across the surface. It was settled as early as 1816, and perhaps even sooner than that. Hugh Botkin entered the township in 1816, settling southeast of Huntsville, near where now rises to view the stately, hospitable mansion of his worthy and enterprising son, William M. Botkin, Esq. When he came he found already here several settlers, the exact date of whose arrival, however, is not now known. Among them were these: Mr. Odle, one mile south of Botkin's; Joshua Wright, one-half mile south of Botkin's; Jesse Cox, east of Mr. Wright's; Jonah Heaton, three miles northwest of Huntsville. Seven entries had been made in 1815, and three were made in 1816. Mr. Botkin effected his entry of land September 29, 1817, W. N. E. 3, 18, 13, 80.26 acres, and before his had been sixteen entries. Joshua Wright (probably with his brother James) purchased his tract nine days before, and Jesse Cox seventeen days after Mr. Botkin. The other names (except Jonah Heaton's) do not appear at all as patentees. They were either "squatters" or lived on land entered by some one else. Jonah Heaton "entered" in 1819. William M. Botkin says that in 1817 there came to the region several settlers, viz., Joshua Ballinger, Samuel Jackson, Valentine Gibson, William Gibson, Joseph Hollingsworth (bought out Mr. Odle), William Peacock (afterward Associate Judge). Most of these names stand among the list of entries, some of them, however, not till the lapse of several years. William Smith came upon West River somewhere west of Botkin's, near the "boundary," August, 1817, and Jeremiah Smith says that the following were in the neighborhood when his father settled where they moved into the county:

William Blount and his two sons-in-law, John Proctor, Evan Shoemaker, John Jordan, Arny Hall, Thomas Brown, John Gwynn, James Malcom, Samuel Sales, David Jones, Isaac Barnes, came in 1818, as did also John E. Hodges, William Hunt and Frederick Zimmerman. Few of them appear as patentees. Evan Shoemaker lived on the tract east of the "boundary," and just across from the Mount Pleasant Methodist Meeting-House. Mr. Zimmerman bought out the Blount place, and resided there till he died, and his daughter Anna (widow of John Retz) occupies the place now. All of these except two were located on Sections 7, 8, 17 and 18, Township 18, Range 13, in West River Valley. Those near Hugh Botkin's were farther east. William Blount made the first entry in the township, in Section 8, now the Retz homestead farm, April 10, 1815. Hodge and Barnes made their entry in July, 1815. They did not move to their land till 1818. Mr. Smith states that they came out from Pennsylvania and made their purchases, and returned to the East, coming back to settle in 1818. Moses Martindale was unquestionably a very early settler, among the first if not the very first in the region. He made his first entry September 2, 1817, E. ½ N. E. ¼ 14, 18, 13, the extreme southeastern corner of what is now West River Township. In two weeks' time, he took up another tract, E. ½ S. W. ¼ 11, 18, 13, on the head-waters of the stream which gained the name (doubtless from him as the first settler upon its banks) of Martindale Creek. These entries of Martindale's were south and southeast of Botkin's, and near the other settlers in that vicinity. Of course, others also had found their way into the wild woods, but we have not been able to trace them.

The Congressional townships with the sections have already been named. The number of acres in West River Township is about twenty-five thousand six hundred.

The entries on record to the end of 1829 are given herewith:

ENTRIES.

William Blount, S. W. 8, 18, 13, April 10, 1815: Lot Huddleston, N. W. 17, 18, 13, May 3, 1815; John Jones, Fractional Section 18, 18, 13, May 3, 1815; John E. Hodge, N. W. 8, 18, 13, July 6, 1815; Isaac Barnes, Section 7, 18, 13, July 6, 1815; Arny Hall, E. S. E. 17, 18, 13, October 12, 1815; Cornelius Shane, N. E. 8, 18, 13, July 6, 1815; David Moore, W. S. MAP OF WEST RIVER TOWNSHIP

C. M. Stevenson

Mrs. C. M. Stevenson

Res. of C. M. Stevenson, West River Tp. Randolph Co. Ind.

September 10, 1823; Stephen Brewer, S. ½ S. ½ 20, 19, 13, January 26, 1825; Samuel Ruble, N. S. E. 8, 19, 13, June 24, 1825; Robert Gibson, E. S. E. 19, 19, 13, August 22, 1825; Valentine Gibson, W. N. E. 19, 19, 13, January 8, 1826; Thomas Worth, W. S. E. 17, 18, 13, September 26, 1827; Emson Wright, E. S. W. 8, 19, 13, June 16, 1828; Zach Dalley, S. W. S. E. 31, 19, 13, July 2, 1828; William Denton, S. ½ 20, 19, 13, November 1, 1828; Nancy Barnett, N. W. S. E. 31, 19, 13, August 27, 1828; Thomas Wilkinson, W. N. E. 7, 19, 13, October 7, 1829; John H. Denton, W. S. E. 30, 19, 13, October 13, 1829; Richard Robbins (colored), N. W. 18, 19, 13, October 17, 1829; Basil Hunt, E. N. W. 33, 19, 13, November 2, 1829.

The entries by years have been as below: 1815, seven entries, 1,230.68 acres; 1816, three entries, 400 acres; 1817, twelve entries, 1,831.98 acres; 1818, nine entries, 1,440 acres; 1819, eight entries, 826.44 acres; 1820, no entries; 1821, one entry, 80 acres; 1822, four entries, 322.96 acres; 1823, one entry, 159.37 acres; 1824, no entry; 1825, three entries, 228.97 acres; 1826, one entry, 80 acres; 1827, one entry, 80 acres; 1828, four entries, 405.20 acres; 1829, four entries, 331.88; total entries 58; total acres, 7,417.48; being an average of 128 acres per entry. The amount as above comprises about one-fourth of the land in the township.

The "new boundary" passes through the western part of the township in an angular direction, yet the sections are not fractional, since the survey is reckoned from the Second Meridian. The meridian and the base line were located and the range lines estimated, and then the land east of the "new boundary" was surveyed first, and, in process of time, that west of the twelve-mile strip was surveyed also.

FIRST THINGS.

We have been able to trace but few "first things" for West River Township. The beginning and progress of religious work may be seen in the detailed statement for the churches.

The mills were mostly in other portions of the county, and West River was not much of a mill stream near its upper course, and these settlers went chiefly down into Wayne County to find milling facilities already in operation. William Smith is said to have started a mill of some kind, but whether by horse or water power we cannot state. He was a blacksmith as well as a farmer, and one of the earliest things he did was to put up a shop in which to work at his trade. These smith shops were scattered over the county at various points, though we can name but few. Richard Robbins had one farther north in Stony Creek; James Frazier and his son Francis after him worked as a smith east of Lynn. The Fraziers were of a superior sort, being bell-makers as well as smiths. Francis Frazier, still living, boasts highly of the bells and the razors he can make. He declares that he has heard one of his cow bells seven miles, and that he can even now hammer out a razor that will beat the "boughten razors all hollow." At any rate, the old pioneer is a hale, cheerful octogenarian, and has been famous as Francis Frazier, the bell-maker, for half a century.

Several families of Hunts came into that locality from Kentucky—shrewd, energetic, upright people, who have left their mark, and many of their posterity also in this region. Most or all of them were Methodists, and one at least was a preacher, Rev. William Hunt, or "Old Billy Hunt," as he was familiarly called, for many years until his death not very long ago. Coming from Kentucky as they did, and belonging to the well-to-do classes, it was but natural that they should oppose the Abolitionists, which most of them did with a hearty good will for years during the early days of that struggle. The logic of events, however, is its own teacher, and most of their descendants of the present day are, like the mass of Randolph citizens, stalwart Republicans. One notable exception exists, however, in one of the sons of "Old Billy Hunt," Hon. Miles Hunt, who, in spite of all the turnings and overturnings in National affairs during fifty years, clings still to the name of Democracy, except that of late years he has "nailed his flag to the mast" on the "Prohibition ship," and intends to stick to the colors, "sink or swim."

West River Township, as also Nettle Creek, was in 1824 the scene of a most terrific tornado, which tore and twisted the giant forest trees for miles into inextricable confusion. This immense mass of timber lay for a decade or less upon the surface of the ground, and presented a literally impassable barrier. The fallen timber furnished in fact abundant opportunities for concealment, and in some cases fugitive slaves hid themselves in its coverts from their pursuers. In one instance, a man-hunter, baffled of his prey by this impregnable refuge, asked one of the old Abolitionists how far the fallen timber reached. The sturdy pioneer, determined both to keep the truth on his side and to mystify his questioner, replied: "Four or five miles west, and how far into Ohio I never heard." The fact hidden beneath this verbiage was that the fallen timber extended perhaps a mile east, and to the Ohio line was fifteen or twenty miles. But the slave-catcher never got any runaways out from that awful tangled, twisted, piled-up mass of tree trunks and brush and fresh grown shrubs, all heaped into one vast untraceable labyrinth of mystery.

This same gang of man hunters (for there were several) threatened to come and clean out that terrible place. "Do," was the reply; "we wish you would; it ought to be away, but none here has ever had the courage to begin the work." The villains swore awhile and cursed the Abolitionists, and then they let the fallen timber stay where it was, as other people before them had done. The jungle is said moreover to have been employed also as a den for a gang of robbers and counterfeiters, whose operations caused much trouble, some arrests and several trials in the attempt to rout the pestilent gang from the county.

One party is stated to have been in so desperate a pinch upon trial for passing counterfeit money, that, on asking to let him see the bill a moment, it was handed to him, when lo, quick as a flash, he swallowed the bank note, and the case against him had to be dropped, for the evidence had gone down his throat. Upon the court record the name of this very man appears coupled with a criminal charge, and upon that entry Mr. Smith makes substantially this comment: "Here is the first appearance of this name in the court records of Randolph, but not by any means the last, for it adorns (or otherwise) these pages off and on for at least twenty-five years to come."

Some old men tell tales, not needful to repeat at length, of charges and arrests and attempts at rescue, of prominent names coupled with rumors of forgery and counterfeiting, of surmises against residents of the region for the concealment of the haunts and the implements of crime among the secret coverts afforded by the fallen timber. But the gangs, if there were any, are long ago scattered, and the guilty parties, if there were such, have gone to meet the Judge of the living and the dead, and no special good could arise from unearthing the ancient charges made, and the ugly surmises indulged in, and the evil rumors afloat upon the air, against any or all the parties supposed or even known to have belonged to these ancient gangs of men in league for unlawful purposes. God is just; let Him administer the penalty for crime, if any there may have been, in His own appointed way.

Let not the obloquy existing against men in those wild and uncouth times be revived or renewed against their relations and descendants, now free from reproach and innocent of evil intent or conduct.

PIGEON ROOST.

The same region was remarkable also, moreover, as having furnished the place for an enormous pigeon roost located in the woods not very far from Huntsville during several years. Season after season would gather at the same spot countless millions of those feathered and winged bipeds, remaining for months to lay their eggs and hatch and rear their young. Subjected as they were to ceaseless attacks by men and boys, and losing hundreds and thousands of their number every year, after some time had elapsed, the annual gatherings seemed gradually to decrease in amount, and finally the famous pigeon roost became entirely deserted. The merciless cruelty of the featherless and wingless bipeds, who would tramp for miles through the woods to reach this helpless mass of fluttering and roaring life to make their causeless and deadly attacks upon these unsuspecting and bewildered victims was fearful. Mention may be found, slightly more at length possibly, in the reminiscences, of both the matters briefly touched upon above. The pigeon roost has been forsaken probably for full fifty years, and the fallen timber has been cleared away by natural decay, by human toil and by fire, that terrible destroyer of the works both of nature and of man, for nearly as long a time; and now no visible token, no trace is left to tell of the unspeakable havoc which on that sultry July afternoon in the summer of 1824 was made by that rumbling, crashing, thundering tempest as during those hours of mortal terror it lay in most terrific power, whirling and tearing and twisting those giant tree trunks as though they had been but chaff and stubble beneath its might. Nothing is left, in fact, except the memory of the terrible storm in the minds of a very few elderly persons, and a name—Fallen Timber—a petty country post office at a lone farmhouse miles away from even the pretense or semblance of a town. It ought to be said, perhaps, that this post office finds it habitat not in West River, but in Nettle Creek Township, which lies adjoining the former on the west.

FIRST SCHOOL.

Ira Swain, whose father came in 1815 to Wayne County near Randolph line, says that the first school in that neigboorhood was held in a little cabin, 14x18 feet, near David Moore's, probably in 1816 or 1817. The floor was puncheons and so was the door, and the benches were split poles with legs put in with an auger hole. The older pupils got wood enough at noon. That could be done without much trouble, though it took a large quantity of wood. But the trees were close at hand, and all that was needed was to take care that in felling they did not hit the house nor the children.

TANNERY.

Hugh Botkin was a tanner, and he had a tanyard in operation only a short time after making a settlement in the county; and some of the old troughs that were made and put into the earth more than sixty years ago are there in the ground yet, and firm and sound and solid still.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 18, Range 13—Sections 2, 9, 15, 1817, 1837, Jesse Cox, Achilles Morris, Jonathan Cox; Section 3, 1817, 1836, J. and J. Wright, September 20, 1817; Sections 4, 6, 1833, 1837; Sections 5, 14, 1817, 1838, William Smith, Moses Martindale Section 7, 1815, 1834, Isaac Barnes, July 6, 1815; Section 8, 1815, 1816, William Blount, April 10, 1815; Section 10, 1817, 1835, J. and M. Thornburg, September 17, 1817; Section 11, 1817, 1831, Moses Martindale, September 15, 1817; Section 16, school lands; Section 17, 1815, 1835, Job Huddleston, May 3, 1815; Section 18, 1815, 1831, John Jones, May 3, 1815 (where Evan Shoemaker lived).

Township 19, Range 13—Sections 7, 18, 1829, 1836: Section 8, 1822, 1836; Section 9, 1818, 1819, Thomas Gillum, April 29, 1818; Section 10, 1833, 1836; Section 11, 1832, 1836; Section 14, 1835, 1836; Section 15, 1820, 1835, John Adamson, December 9, 1820; Section 16, school land, 1831, 1832, probably first sold in county; Section 17, 1822, 1835, John Ballinger; Sections 19, 20, 1825, 1836, Valentine Gibson, Stephen Brewer; Sections 21, 28, 1819, 1834, Oliver Walker, Jonah Heaton: Sections 22, 27, 1833, 1835: Sections 23, 30, 35, 1835, 1836; Section 26, 1836; Section 29, 1834, 1836; Section 31, 1828, 1836; Section 32, 1817, 1838, Powers and Drew; Section 33, 1819, 1836, John Jackson; Section 34, 1831, 1836, Peter Botkin.

Entries in West River extended as to time of making them from 1815 to 1838 inclusive.

TOWNS.

BUENA VISTA.

Proprietors, William Gillam, John Heaston, Benjamin Peacock; twenty-five lots, two streets—Washington, east and west; Main, north and south. Location, Sections 3, 4, 9 and 10, 19, 13, in West River and White River Townships. Recorded July 1, 1851. The first store was built in 1854; Benjamin Peacock set up a hotel; Ezekiel Kirk and Benjamin Heaston were original residents; Dr. Keen lived there awhile, as also did Dr. Blumenbach. There has been a Presbyterian Church, but it has gone down, and the house has been used as a barn for many years.

The business now is as follows: Two stores, one saw-mill, one smith shop, one tile factory, one wagon shop, one church, a post office. The principal men are: Robert Starbuck, farmer, landlord, merchant; Joshua Johnson, blacksmith; Isaac Vaughn, saw-mill man; David Gray, tile maker; Simeon Gray, tile maker. Robert Starbuck owns 900 acres of land; Joshua Johnson owns two or three hundred acres. Buena Vista contains fifteen houses and seventy-five people. The town is much decayed. It is six miles from Winchester, three and one-half miles from Huntsville, eight miles from Farmland. The name of the post office is Cerro Gordo, and the Postmaster is Joshua Johnson. The country around Buena Vista is very good. Residents near Buena Vista are John Jenkins, Leroy Starbuck, Welcome Starbuck, Walter Starbuck, Jesse Rynard, Tyre Puckett, William Demory, etc.

Buena Vista is joined by pikes with Winchester, Unionsport, Huntsville, Economy, etc. It has no railroad. Its most convenient railroad point was at Winchester, but the Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western road, built in 1881–82, lies not very far from the town. The region is well settled, and filled with thriving and prosperous farmers. Unionsport is quite near Buena Vista, only two miles distant. A meeting-house connected with a burying ground is about half a mile west of the town on the pike between the two villages. The church was built a short time ago by a union effort, and was given into the care of the Friends, who occupied it for a time, but their occupancy has measurably ceased, and it stands nearly or quite vacant, at least for the present.

There used to be a Wesleyan Church in the vicinity, but it has ceased its activity, the members having died or moved away or, as in some cases, joined other branches of the Christian body.

HUNTSVILLE.

Twenty-eight lots, Miles and William Hunt, proprietors. Location, Sections 27 and 28, 19, 13, near the head of Cabin Creek. Recorded March 6, 1834.

Keener's Addition—Stephen Keener, proprietor; eight lots, four outlots. Recorded December 29, 1848.

Hunt's Addition—Twenty-nine lots, Bezal Hunt, proprietor. Recorded August 23, 1850. William J. Shearer, surveyor.

Distances—Arba, fifteen miles; Spartansburg, fifteen miles; Bloomingsport, seven miles; Lynn, eight and one-half miles; Winchester, nine miles: Losantville, eight and one-half miles; Unionsport, three miles; Macksville, nine miles.

James Pugh had a tanyard in 1834; Miles Hunt kept store: Parker Jewett had a smith shop. Huntsville stands in a fine and fruitful region far enough from other and larger towns to have some room to flourish. It has become quite a thriving country village, and seems likely to grow somewhat in time to come. Merchants in the town have been: Absalom Hunt, J. W. Keener, Andrews Bros., S. Hollister, Richard Jobes, Harvey Patty, Stephen Coffin, Rufus K. Mills, James N. Cropper, Levi Johnson, Cropper & Bro., R. C. Miller & Son, C. S. Hunt (druggist), Edward Cox (druggist). Physicians: Drs. Hunt, Chenoweth, Miller, Jordan Jobes, Eikenbery, Smith, Harvey, Parsons.

J. C. Pascal established a wagon shop thirty years ago. J. C. Harvey has a wagon shop now, and so has C. Pastor. The business of the town is as stated below: Two carpenters, three dry goods stores, one drug store, three smith shops, two wagon shops, one milliner store, one green house, one church (Methodist Episcopal), one schoolhouse, one shoe shop, one grist mill, two saw-mills, one harness shop, one post office (Trenton), one butcher shop, two hotels, two tile factories, one cabinet shop, one picture shop, three physicians, one lodge F. A. M., one lodge I. O. O. F., one Porter's Temperance League, one attorney.

RESIDENTS.

Peyton Johnson, farmer and millman; Daniel Cropper, hotel keeper; Fremont Garrett, attorney; Jeremiah Hiatt, lumberman and millman: James B. Robertson, physician; H. C. Hunt, physician; T. W. Jordan, physician; R. C. Miller, merchant; E. T. Cropper, merchant; Levi Johnson, merchant; Kepler, Lamm & Co., flour mill—two run; John Harvey, blacksmith; Charles Pastor, wagon shop; James C. Harvey, blacksmith and wagon shop;

RESIDENTS IN VICINITY.

W. M. Botkin, ex-Commissioner and farmer, two and one-half miles southeast; W. S. Hunt, farmer, etc., one mile northwest; J. J. and W. T. Farquhar, sheep growers; Joshua J. Shepherd, farmer and hog-raiser; Jesse Haines, farmer and hog-raiser; John H. Lewis, farmer; Robert B. Hunt, farmer; A. J. Christopher, cattle-raiser: Ira Swain, farmer and Postmaster, Swain's Hill; A. S. Cropper, farmer and carpenter; Charles W. Osborn, farmer; John Jenkins, farmer; John T. Hunnicutt, farmer; Joseph Cox, farmer; Stephen Keener, farmer and cheese-maker; Jacob Farquhar, farmer and stock-raiser. There are in Huntsville forty dwellings, twenty-one business houses, fifty families, forty-two voters and 163 inhabitants. Distances: Economy, seven miles; Lynn, seven miles; Bloomingsport, seven miles; Winchester, eight and one-half miles; Unionsport, three miles.

Huntsville is connected by pike with Winchester. The town is incorporated for school purposes, though why it is hard to see. The village is so small and the people so few that one is at a loss for any good reason for such a movement, yet if they are suited we do not know as other people have any right to complain.

The post office at Huntsville is called Trenton. It would be better to call the place so, too. To have the town differ in name from the post office is a needless trouble, and brings much confusion. The Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western Railroad is near the town.

SWAIN'S HILL POST OFFICE.

No town; Section 5, 8, 13; five miles from Losantville; three miles from Huntsville; near the twelve mile boundary at Ira Swain's.

Swain's Hill is simply a post office. Mr. Swain is a prominent settler, and an influential partisan, and desired a post office to be located in the vicinity for the convenience of his neighbors and himself; and his dwelling being on a sightly and beautiful hill, the name of Swain's Hill was conferred on the office, and Ira Swain himself was made Postmaster.

UNIONSPORT.

Location, 3, 4, 8 and 9, 19, 13, in White River and in West River Townships, two miles west of Buena Vista; Hiram Mendenhall, proprietor; thirty-two lots; S. D. Woodworth, surveyor. Recorded March 30, 1837. Streets: north and south, East, Summit, Meridian; east and west, North, Franklin, Main. The town seems to have been well supplied with streets.

Bloomingsport, six miles: Maxville, three and one-half miles; Huntsville, three miles; Winchester, seven miles; Lynn, nine miles; Buena Vista, two miles.

John O. Wattles lectured in this region some forty years ago, and induced a company to form a community in about 1840. It went on for a short time, but before long "winked out." A woolen factory was established in 1856. The mill was burned and another built in its place in 1866. It is now owned by Amos Mendenhall. A grist mill once stood where the factory now is.

Ithamar and John Pegg lived one and one-half mile north of the town; John and William Hollingsworth lived east of the village, near Friends' Meeting-House; Samuel Spray settled southeast of Unionsport. There are now in the town one church (Methodist Episcopal), one smith shop, two stores, one schoolhouse, one carriage shop, one post office, twenty-five houses, one woolen factory, one physician, 100 people (estimated), one tollgate. Principal citizens: Stephen Haynes, Samuel Briggs, Rufus K. Mills, Thomas W. Botkin, physician; Foster, Mendenhalls (sons of Hiram Mendenhall), George Slack, merchant. Unionsport is on Cabin Creek. A pike connects the town with Winchester, Buena Vista and Huntsville. The village is beautifully situated on rolling ground, the houses are bright, neat and tasteful, and altogether the town presents a delightful and cheerful aspect.

The new railroad (Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western), passes in this vicinity.

BIOGRAPHIES.

Hugh Botkin, born Virginia 1775; Tennessee, 1786; married Rachel Keener 1801; Wayne County, Ind., 1815; Randolph County 1816; thirteen children, seven boys and six girls. All thirteen lived to be grown, and all but one were married; seven are living now. He died in 1836 and his wife in 1837. He was a farmer and a tanner, as also an active Methodist, and a prominent and respected citizen. He lost his dwelling by fire, and did not succeed in amassing a fortune, but his children rank among the thriving and substantial citizens of the region.

William M. Botkin, son of Hugh Botkin, born in Randolph County, Ind., 1823; married Martha A. Hiatt in 1849, and Dosha Butler in 1868; ten children. He has 300 acres of land, and has a fine brick residence, one of the best in the township. He is an enterprising, wide-awake, prosperous farmer and business man, and has been County Commissioner one term (three years). He is an active Methodist, a thorough Republican, and an earnest temperance man, and is altogether an honor to the community in which he dwells, having been a resident of the neighborhood during his whole life, fifty-nine years.

Wm. Chamness was born in North Carolina in 1793, and came to Randolph County in 1816, settling west of Bloomingsport on a farm now owned by Elijah Bales, where old Billy Rish once lived, the land having been entered by Benj. Jones. He married Charity Moore, and afterward Margaret Hinshaw. He has had eleven children, ten of them coming to be grown and married, and seven now living, one in Howard County, one in Winchester, two in Wayne County, one near Bloomingsport, two in Wisconsin. He was brought up a Friend, but about twenty-five years ago he joined the United Brethren, to which he now belongs. He resides in West River Township near Wayne County line, and has done so for twenty-eight years past. His children are as follows: Abigail, Howard County, ten children; Sarah, Winchester, twelve children; Patsy (Hardwick), Wayne County, thirteen children; Isaac, Monroe, Wis., four children; Martin, dead, four children; Mary (Hockett), dead, ten children; Ruth (Love), Wayne County, nineteen children, fifteen grown; Margaret (Davis), dead, four children; Joshua, Bloomingsport, ten children; William, Sauk County, Wis., seven children; Rachel, died an infant. There have been eighty-six grandchildren; number of great-grandchildren unknown. Nathaniel Case, Isaiah Rogers, Benjamin Jones lived near Bloomingsport when he came in 1816. Joseph Jay, Samuel Smith, William Peacock, James Smith came he thinks in 1818. Mr. Chamness is eighty-nine years old, and feeble in health, but is cheerful and patient, waiting the hour of release from earthly cares, and happy notwithstanding all his hardships and trials in the soul-cheering presence of his Savior. He is an excellent specimen of the citizen of the middling class, with which our county and our State also abounds, and which are the strength and the glory of our beloved native land.

John Charles was born in Wayne County, Ind., in 1828. He is the son of Daniel Charles, who came from North Carolina to Wayne County in 1812, and who is still living in his eighty-third year, having been born in 1799. John Charles came to Randolph County in 1845. He married Eunice Swain in the same year, and Nancy Clark in 1862. He has had six children, and is at present a farmer, though he carried on a drug store also in Economy during several years. He was elected Justice of the Peace for White River Township, but the burden of labor or of honor proved too great, and he resigned the position before his time was half out. He was Township Trustee three years. He is an Elder among the Friends; was an old Abolitionist, and is a Republican. He is an intelligent and enterprising citizen, has a good and somewhat select library, and keeps himself well informed as to the progress of events in the country and in the world. The Underground Railroad had one of its prominent stations in the vicinity, the Worths, the Osborns, the Hunnicutts, the Swains, the Botkins, etc., being residents not far away, and many stirring events in that line occurred there during that early time.

William Cox, born in 1773 in South Carolina, came to Stillwater, Ohio, early, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1823, and settled west of where William Chamness now lives, in West River. He died in 1857, aged eighty-four years. He had been married three times. The names of his wives were Elizabeth Thomas, Nancy Mills and Laura Owens. The first wife died in 1849, the second in 1855, and the third is living still. She had been his wife only about two weeks, and she is now seventy-five years old, though at her marriage she was only a little above fifty. She was a maiden of fifty, and a wife of two weeks, and for twenty-four years she has been a widow.

Daniel Cropper, son of Bela W. Cropper, was born in Kentucky in 1825; went to Warren County, Ohio, in 1828, and moved to Randolph County, Ind., in 1833. He married Elizabeth Thornburg in 1849, and has five children. He resides in Huntsville, and is a farmer and hotel keeper. Mr. Cropper has a powder horn which belonged to his grandfather in Maryland before he emigrated from Maryland to Kentucky. His uncle carried it for years in the war of 1812. After that, Mr. Cropper's father had it, and gave it to him. His father entered 160 acres of land, and after paying for that, and paying also the man who moved them from Ohio to Randolph County, he had just $25 left. A rich man he was, farm all paid for and money to spend. His father was a worthy member of the Baptist Church, and a preacher among them.

Daniel Hunnicutt was born in 1770 in Virginia, and married Jane Walthal, who was born there in 1780. They moved to Fayette County, Ind., in 1827, and to Randolph County in 1832. They had seven children, all of whom were born in Virginia. Five of them are living, one in Indiana and four in Wisconsin. Mr. Hunnicutt was a farmer, and belonged to the Friends. He died many years ago. His son, John T., resides in the township still.

John T. Hunnicutt, born 1816 near Petersburg, Va.; Fayette County, Ind., 1827; Wayne County, 1828; West River, 1832; married Jane T. Charles, 1851, and Deborah (Hollingsworth) Arnett, 1872; five children; prosperous farmer; owns the place that used to be Daniel Worth's. He is a Friend, an old Abolitionist, a Republican, an active and radical temperance worker, and an excellent man.

Stephen Haynes, Unionsport; born Dutchess County, N. Y., 1800; Highland County, Ohio, 1808; Clinton County, Ohio, 1809; Dutchess County, N. Y., 1818; Herkimer County, N. Y., 1821; married Laura Gaines, Randolph County, Ind., 1834; Unionsport, 1873; first wife died 1877; married Eleanor Allison, 1879; nine children; carpenter and farmer and cabinet maker; an old Abolitionist, a Methodist, a Republican, somewhat eccentric, but a genial, enthusiastic and wide-awake worker in every good cause. Although eighty-two years old, he is still hale and sprightly, almost as active as a boy in his teens.

Samuel Jackson was born in North Carolina in 1796. He came to Ohio from his native State, and in 1820 to West River, Randolph Co., Ind., settling near Hugh Botkin's, one-half mile north of John F. Hunnicutt's on Martindale Creek. He married in Ohio Jemima Cox, daughter of William Cox, and they had eleven children, all grown and married, and nine living now, the youngest that is alive being forty years old, and the oldest sixty-four. One is in Missouri, four in Randolph, two in Iowa, one in Wayne County and one in Wisconsin. In politics he was a Whig. He died in 1848, aged fifty-two years. His wife was a Friend, and she died in 1861 aged sixty-seven. Mrs. Ballinger, daughter of Samuel Jackson, says that she can remember the storm of the fallen timber, and thinks that she was six or eight years old. She was born in 1820, and that would make the date of the storm be in 1826 or 1828. Jere Smith puts the time in 1824. She would then be four years old or more. Probably Mr. Smith is correct, and she was younger than she thinks. Mrs. Retz's memory also would seem to make the storm later than 1824. (See reminiscences of Anna Retz.) Mrs. Ballinger says that Carey Smith, brother of Jere Smith, was a Disciple preacher in those early times, and that Methodists held preaching at Hugh Botkin's and Jesse Cox's, and also at Mr. Lank's. Mr. Jackson's children were: William, dead, had seven children; Hannah (Hutchens, Chamness) six children; Betsey (Ballinger), Randolph County, eight children; Sarah (Hutchens), Iowa, twelve children; John, near Winchester, twelve children; Anna (Hutchens), Wisconsin, seven children; Jemima (Cox), lives in Randolph County, and has three children; Rebecca (Owens), resides in Kansas, and has seven children; Jacob, dead, had seven children. Jacob Jackson was Captain in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers in the war of 1861, and he was wounded in the army; Melinda (Condi) lives in Iowa, and has four children; Mary (Hutchens) lives in Wayne County, has nine children. There are or have been in all eighty-two grandchildren.

Peyton Johnson was born in 1809 in Campbell County, Ky.; married Elizabeth T. Butler; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1834; has five children, all living, all grown and all married; owns a saw-mill and a farm also; is an enterprising citizen, and an active business man.

Robert Lumpkin was born in 1756; married Elizabeth Forrest in 1785, who was born in 1766; moved to Tennessee; then to Randolph County, 1831. He was a wagoner in the Revolutionary war. He had twelve children, and raised eleven of the twelve. He died in 1842, eighty-six years old, and his wife died in 1846, eighty years old. His children were as given below: John, 1786, lives in Tennessee, and has twelve children; Mary, 1788 (Howard, Massey, Reek), Indiana, three children; James, 1791, lives in Indiana, has seven children; Robert, 1793, lives in Tennessee, has six children; Sarah, 1796 (Bookout), lives in Indiana, and has had twelve children; Richard, 1798, lives in Indiana, has ten children; William, 1800, lives in Indiana, has six children; Elizabeth (Weaver), 1803, lives in Tennessee, has eight children; Washington, 1806, lives in Tennessee, has six children; Nancy, 1809, lives in Indiana, has thirteen children; Anderson, 1812, lives in Iowa, has six children; grandchildren, eighty-three.

Albert Macy was born in North Carolina in 1774; married Nancy Hall; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1819, and settled near Huntsville. They had eight children, seven of them having been born in North Carolina, and one in Randolph County. His daughter Phebe is the wife of Ira Swain, of Swain's Hill, West River Township. Mr. Macy died many years ago.

William Macy was born in 1786 in Guilford County, N. C.; came to Randolph County Ind., in 1821; married Hannah Hinshaw in 1809, and died after 1867; had fifteen children, seven in North Carolina and eight in Randolph County, Ind., all of them born between 1809 and 1836. Six of his daughters married Hadleys (two families). William Macy moved to Morgan County, Ind., about 1860. He was a Friend, active, prominent and trustworthy.

Rufus K. Mills was born in W[illegible]ne County, Ind., in 1823. He married Elizabeth McPherson [illegible]344, and came to Randolph County in 1857. They have [illegible]e children. He is a farmer, merchant and trader, and resides at Unionsport. He has been Township Trustee five years, and Assessor several years. He is reckoned an upright and reliable man, and a worthy and substantial citizen. He is one of the old line Abolitionists and early Wesleyans

Anna (Zimmerman) Retz is the daughter of Frederick Zimmerman, and was born in Randolph County, Ind., in 1821. She married John Retz in 1837. They have had thirteen children, and seven of them are now living. Her husband, John Retz, died in 1876, being sixty-six years old, and having been born in 1810. She is still a widow, and resides on what was her father's farm, on which he settled in 1818. One of her sons was killed when coon hunting by the falling of a tree. She is an Episcopal Methodist, [illegible]lso was her husband. He was a farmer and a worthy citizen. She has resided in the county sixty-one years.

Evan Shoemaker is said by some to have come from Tennessee to Randolph County, Ind., in 1809, settling in West River Township, a little southeast of Mount Pleasant Meeting-House, and directly on the east side of the twelve-mile boundary. His brother Henry, who was unmarried, came with him. Evan died shortly afterward. but Henry is still living, in either Miami or Fulton County, Ind., ninety-six years old (1881). Shortly after their coming, the Indians stole four head of horses from them. Evan's son John was four years old at the time when his father came to Randolph, and he died in 1868, being sixty-three years old. John took care of his mother's family while they were growing up, his father having died while he was a half-grown boy. His mother married a man named Cartwright, and moved to Union County, Ind., but John continued to reside in Randolph, and, having lost his first wife about 1835, married Martha Kerr, who was living with his mother, then Mrs. Cartwright, in Union County, Ind. NOTE.—This relation is given by Mrs. Nancy (Shoemaker) Pierce, now residing near Thomas Marshall's, northeast of Economy, Ind. She says that her father, John Shoemaker, came with his father, Evan Shoemaker, in 1809, when he was four years old to Randolph County, Ind.; that he died in 1868, at sixty-three years old. If this statement is true, Mr. Shoemaker settled in Randolph five years earlier than the one who has been heretofore reckoned the first settler. We have at present no other means of testing the correctness of the lady's statement. Later researches seem to indicate that the lady is mistaken; that he did not come to Randolph before 1816 or thereabouts.

Robert Starbuck, Buena Vista, is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Stokes County in that State in 1814. He came to Virginia in 1823, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1833, settling near Buena Vista. He married late in life, being fifty-six years old at the time. His wife was Lucy Ann (Green) Gillam. They have one child. He has been a famer, merchant trader, hotel keeper, etc. He is a large land owner, having 900 acres in the vicinity of Buena Vista. His residence has been for many years at that town. He is a prominent and energetic citizen and business man.

Ira Swain, Swain's Hill, youngest son of Elihu Swain, born in Tennessee in 1809; Wayne County, Ind., 1815, near Randolph line; married Lydia Macy; came early to Randolph County; has several children; has been a farmer and an active business man. He was Treasurer of Randolph County during one term. In some way he was technically declared a defaulter for some amount, yet he is generally believed to have been the innocent victim of some mistake, and no one thinks that he willfully or knowingly misused a dollar of the public funds. Mr. Swain therefore still retains the confidence of his fellow-citizens, and has the sympathy of the public as for a misfortune instead of its condemnation as for a crime. He has lived near or in the county for sixty-five years, and is an active, inteiligent, enterprising and reliable citizen. During the anti-slavery struggle, he was a wide-awake Abolitionist and was honored and trusted among them; and during the existence of the Republican party he has been one of the foremost among the members and supporters of that organization, He is now in his seventh-fourth year, but retains his vigor and activity, both of body and mind, in a remarkable degree, as does also his worthy wife.

Thomas Worth was a native of North Carolina, and came to Randolph County in 1812. He was born in 1802, and married Sarah Macy, and afterward Nancy (Macy) Marshall. He had ten children—Theodore, Eliza, Aaron, Mary, Lucinda, Anna, David, Emily and two others. David was a member of the Sixty-ninth Indiana, and died in the service. Aaron has long been an active and efficient preacher in the Wesleyan Church. T. W. was a hearty supporter of the Wesleyans, and an old-fashioned Abolitionist and an out and out Republican.

He is said to have been liberal in his gifts to the Gospel ministry. He was a good, thorough, thriving farmer, and a quiet, steady, reliable man, being one of a family of ten children, and the brother of Daniel Worth and Lydia (Worth) Osborn. Lydia, was the wife of Isaiah Osborn, who was the son of Charles Osborn, famous in the anti-slavery movement among the Friends, and perhaps the pioneer in Abolition work in this country. [For Daniel Worth and the Osborns see Religion.]

Frederick Zimmerman was born in Tennessee. He moved first to Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna River, and then to Ohio, and after that to West River, Randolph County Co., Ind. The removal last mentioned was made in 1818, and he moved no more till the pall bearers bore his lifeless remains to the last narrow house, the place appointed for all the living. He bought out William Blount's 160 acres, and resided in the same place till his death in 1835. He had married in Tennessee Catherine Bowerman, and his widow survived him twenty-one years, dying in 1856. They had fourteen children, only three of whom are now living. One of them, Anna Retz, still lives on the old place. He was a Methodist and a Democrat.

WILLIAM ADAMSON, farmer, P. O. Cerro Gordo. He was born February 5, 1837, in West River Township, this county; he was educated in this county, and has followed farming from boyhood; he was married to Mary E. Stanley in September, 1867; she was born in Wayne County, Ind. Mr. Adamson was a gallant soldier in the war for the Union, serving through the war in Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Volunteers; he is an industrious, enterprising farmer, owning a beautiful farm of eighty-four acres of fertile land; he is Republican in politics, and a worthy citizen. He has two children living—Carrie E., born April 24, 1875, and Orrie B., May 29, 1876; he is of English descent.

CYRUS H. BALDWIN, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He was born July 7, 1840, in Wayne County, Ind.; he located in West River Township in 1849, and was educated in its district schools. He was married October 3, 1863, to Emily J. Pitts, who was a native of Wayne County, and born January 19, 1845. They have two children—Clayton D., born August 3, 1864, and Harriet O., June 18, 1867. He is a member of I. O. O. F., 248 Trenton Lodge; is liberal in politics, and a gentleman noted for his integrity.

MILTON H. BEESON, farmer, P. O. Trenton. This esteemed citizen was born February 19, 1826, in Wayne County, Ind., and settled here in February, 1873. He was educated in the common schools of Wayne County, and was married September 19, 1848, to Martha Sherry, who was born July 6, 1832, in Tippecanoe County, Ind. This union was blessed with six children, of which number five are living—Viola J., born March 4, 1851; A. C., September 13, 1853; Laura N., Novmber 16, 1855, deceased October 24, 1857; Ira A., January 21, 1858; Jesse E., February 3, 1861, and Mary J., March 6, 1865. His father, Isaac Beeson, was a native of Guilford County, N. C., where he was born in December, 1779; he settled in Wayne County, Ind., in 1806, on the land which he entered, and deceased there July 6, 1848. He was a genial companionable man and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The father of Mrs. Beeson was John Sherry, born January 7, 1799; settled in Tippecanoe County, Ind., and deceased March 17, 1867. Mr. Beeson and wife are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and universally esteemed for their sociability and hospitality. Their ancestors were of English descent and Quakers.

JEREMIAH BLY, farmer, P. O. Trenton. This worthy citizen was born May 13, 1829, in Germany; he came to Ohio in 1845, and after making several changes in his location, he finally settled here in the fall of 1848. Mr. Bly was educated in the schools of his native land, and is now engaged in farming and stock-raising. He was married on the 24 of October, 1850, to Mildred A. Johnson, who was born in the State of Virginia January 12, 1835. They have five children—Murray B., born October 7, 1857; Osceola, June 28, 1863; Payton G., June 1, 1868; Margaret, March 7, 1872, and Frank, December 20, 1875. Mrs. Bly is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he is a member of I. O. O. F. Lodge, No. 248; he served in Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, in the war for the Union, and losing his health was discharged. He owns a valuable farm of 207 acres of land, and is regarded as one of the best citizens in his vicinity.

THOMAS W. BOTKIN is a physician, and his post office address is Unionsport; he was born in Randolph County April 14, 1844; he is a son of Dr. John W. Botkin, an eminent physician, who has practiced extensively in Randolph and adjoining counties; his mother's maiden name was Mary Peacock. Thomas W. was educated in the common schools, and studied medicine with his father; he was also a student at the Eclectic Medical College of Indianapolis; he enlisted in Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and served through the war. After the cruel war was over he came home and engaged for a time in farming. On the first of September, 1868, Dr. Botkin was married to Mary E. Irvin, a daughter of Lafayette Irvin; she was born in this county February 17, 1851. The Doctor and Mrs. Botkin have surrounded their hearth stone with three children, viz.: John L., born September 5, 1874; Charles L., July 6, 1878; and Clyde E., June 29, 1882. Dr. Botkin has by his energy and success built up a lucrative practice, amounting to $18,000 per annum. Mrs. Botkin is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; her mother's maiden name was Cynthia E. Hill. She was born in Virginia March 29, 1827; her father was born in this county July 26, 1825. Dr. Botkin is a Republican in politics, and attentive to business; he and his estimable lady are well received in society, and popular among a large circle of friends.

J. A. BOTKIN, farmer and saw-milling, P. O. Lynn; he is a son of Peter and Elizabeth Botkin; his father was born in Knox County, Tenn., November 2, 1804, and came with parents in 1815, who settled at present site of Washington, Wayne Co., Ind., and two years later came to this county; his mother was born in Randolph County June 20, 1812. They were married in this county April 28, 1831, and settled on Martindale's Creek, West River Township, where they continued to reside until called away by death. His father died November 24, 1876, and his mother August 29, 1863. J. A. was born July 5, 1855, and married Ida M. Hunt November 17, 1875. Mr. Botkin has been engaged in different pursuits; lived in Missouri from fall of 1874 to 1875, when he returned to this county; formed a partnership with D. T. Harris, and in 1876 built a tile factory at Farmland, and manufactured tile for about three years, when they sold out to D. F. Young 26th of March, 1879, and December 25, 1879, bought the Jesse Smith farm of about one hundred and ninety acres, where he resided for a time in a house that withstood the terrific storm of 1824 (in the fallen timber belt). It is, perhaps, the oldest inhabited house in the county. He has successfully engaged in farming and saw-milling. Mr. and Mrs. Botkin are both active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Huntsville. In politics, he is a Republican, and in domestic relations a kind and devoted husband. Mr. Botkin sold his farm in West River Township, and located at Lynn, where he is now engaged in a tin store, and manufacturing tinware and all kinds of metalic roofing.

WILLIAM T. BOTKIN, farmer, P. O. Unionsport. The subject of this sketch was born in West River Township, this county, June 27, 1842; he was educated in the common schools in this county, and has gained much information from reading and observation; he was united in the holy bonds of matrimony November 9, 1865, to Martha F. Cropper, who was born May 24, 1844, in this county. Mr. Botkin has followed farming for a living, and by his industry and frugality has succeeded well in life; he owns a good farm of 119 acres of valuable land, and is considered to be a model farmer; he served in the war for the Union in Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, participating in all the battles of that organization; he was elected Assessor of West River Township in the year 1872, and again in 1874. The faithfulness and fidelity with which he performed this trust imposed upon him by his fellow-citizens, demonstrates the high regard in which he is held by them. These parents have been blessed by the birth of eight children, of which number seven are living—Mary E., born November 29, 1866; Farra L., April 7, 1868; Laura N., September 9, 1869; Abbie A., December 5, 1871; Guy W., October 1, 1875; Orpha G., August 23, 1877, and William H., July 31, 1879.

HENRY H. BROOKS, farmer, P. O. Cerro Gordo. This esteemed citizen was born March 8, 1841, in West River Township, this county; his father's name was Thomas Brooks, who was born in New Jersey May 17, 1790; served in the war of 1812; emigrated to this county in October, 1837, and deceased January 28, 1868; his mother's maiden name was Kimbrough, born March 19, 1803, still living at this date. Mr. Brooks was educated in the common schools of this county, and has followed farming and moving houses for a living; he was married, August 4, 1865, to Belinda E. Groshong, who was born February 22, 1849, in White River Township, this county; he has six children living—De Witt C., born May 7, 1866; Minnie M., December 8, 1867; Allen R, born March 9, 1871 (died May 26, 1871); George H., May 4, 1872; Martin T., March 19, 1875; Allie D., January 17, 1880, and Anne M., born May 29, 1882. The father of Mrs. Brooks, Zimri Groshong, was born in the year 1818 in Buchanan County, Mo., and at this date is still living; his family is of Scotch descent, and are worthy industrious citizens.

JOHN H. BUTLER, farmer, P. O. Trenton; he was born January 9, 1841, in Stony Creek Township, this county; he was educated in the common schools of this county, and has followed farming from boyhood; he was united in marriage, to Elizabeth Wilcox, December 14, 1865. She was born in Darke County Ohio, February 27, 1845, and came to this county with her parents in the fall of 1862. They have three children—Mary V., born November 2, 1866; Caroline V., December 29, 1869, and Charlie C., September 15, 1873; he and his wife are members of the Christian Church, and he of F. & A. M., Lodge No. 367, Huntsville; his father, James Butler, was a native of Virginia, where he was born in 1808; he came to this county in 1836, and deceased June, 1862. The forefathers of Mr. Butler were in the wars of the Revolution and 1812. The father of Mrs. Butler was John Wilcox, who was born in Butler County, Ohio, about the year 1808; came here in 1862, and at this date is living in Iowa. Mr. Butler is a kind and courteous gentleman.

WILLIAM TELL BURSEAR is a farmer, and resides in West River Township; he is a son of Martin and Sarah Bursear; his father was a native of Switzerland, and came to this county about the year 1803, and enlisted in the war of 1812 and served about six months. Soon after the close of the war, he married Sarah Calahan nee Vir, and moved to Hamilton County, Ohio, about 1815, where the elder Bursear died in 1833, and his widow removed to this county in 1856, and here, in December, 1879. William T. was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, August 14, 1821, and settled in West River Township, this county, in October, 1843, where he has resided ever since. On the 5th day of December, 1844, Mr. Bursear was married to Ann Howell. Since their marriage, they have had many additions (fourteen) to the first union, viz.: Mary J., John F., William H. and Joel W. (twins), Mahala M., Evaline and Emmeline (twins), Samuel T., David J., Robert M., Martha E. Lydia A., Dora A. and Benjamin F. Mrs. Bursear died June 19, 1879. Mr. Bursear obtained a fair education in youth, and began the battle of life by working for $4 per month. By his prsevering energy and great industry he has reared his large family, and secured a competence for his winter's age. In politics, he is a Democrat.

EDWARD MILSTEAD BARR.

Edward Milstead Barr was born in Loudoun County, Va., January 6, 1844. He is the son of George and Mary (Coe) Barr, and is the fifth of a family of ten children, all of whom are living at this writing. His brothers and sisters are all married, with the exception of two, four of whom reside in this State. His father and mother were both born in Loudoun County, Va., the former November 12, 1808, and the latter January 11, 1811. They were married in 1833, and raised and educated a large family of children. His mother died in the same county of her birth July 12, 1868. His father still lives in Clark County, Va., with his daughter, Mrs. Rowena C. Payne, but still keeps possession of the old homestead in Loudoun County. His mother had been a consistent and honored member of the Baptist Church all her life. His father was of Irish and his mother of English extraction.

The subject of this sketch spent his boyhood on a farm in his native county and State, until he was seventeen years old, receiving his education from the common schools of Virginia; his youthful experience was in common with boys of his time, save that he was very domestic in his likings and noted for his steady and industrious habits; he was a bright example of honesty and morality for the youth of his day.

In the winter of 1862, he emigrated to the State of Ohio, and settled in Licking County, where he hired out by the month as a farm hand.

In November, 1867, he moved from Licking County, Ohio, to Union County, Ind., where he again engaged in farming. He came to this county in October, 1869, and purchased eighty acres of land in West River Township, and settled upon it, where he has since resided. This farm is well improved, being supplied with convenient and commodious buildings, a sketch of which is given in this work.

He was married March 12, 1868, to Miss Rowena C. Davis, who is a most estimable lady and the daughter of Isaac and Martha (Barr) Davis. She was born in Union County, Ind , October 2, 1843. She is the second of a family of eight children, of whom four are now living. Her father was born in Butler County, Ohio., January 20, 1806, and her mother in Loudoun County, Va., October 8, 1813. Her father came to this State, in company with his parents, in the year 1808, and settled in Union County, where he died April 24, 1858. Her mother came to this State in the year 1839; was married to Isaac Davis September 14, 1841, and died May 27, 1864. Rowena was raised on a farm, and received a liberal education from the district schools of Union County and the Female College of Oxford, Ohio. From 1863 to 1868, she taught almost continuously in the public schools of Union County. In March of the latter year, she was married to the subject of this sketch, as elsewhere stated.

Mr. and Mrs. Barr have never been blessed with any children of their own, but have taken a bright little boy to raise, who is now ten years of age. His name is Alonzo Coffin, and he is the son of William R. and Rebecca Coffin. His mother died November 12, 1877. This boy is a very active, intelligent lad, and highly appreciates the comfortable home of Mr. and Mrs. Barr.

Mr. Barr usually votes the Republican ticket, but was educated in the Democratic school of politics, and affiliated with that party until since his residence in this county. He is an honored and useful member of Trenton Lodge, No. 248. I. O. O. F., and has filled all the chairs of his lodge three times, and been three times a representative to the Grand Lodge.

He and his excellent wife are acceptable members of the M. E. Church at Lebanon, near Huntsville. They are intelligent and respectable citizens of the county, and honored members of the community where they reside.

WILLIAM MILLER BOTKIN.

William Miller Botkin, a farmer and son of Hugh and Rachel K. Botkin, was born in Randolph County, Ind., July 7, 1823. He is the eleventh of a family of thirteen children, of whom seven are now living. His father was born in Pendleton County, Va., November 17, 1774, and his mother in Knox County, Tenn., February 25, 1786. They were married in Knox County, Tenn., in the year 1801, and removed to Wayne County, Ind., in 1815, and to Randolph County in 1817, where they settled on the farm now owned by the subject of this sketch; his father entered 120 acres of land, and continued to live on the farm until his death; his father died February 27, 1836, and his mother January 24, 1857.

The subject of this sketch was born and raised upon the farm he now owns. His boyhood was uneventful, and differed but little from that of the boyhood of farmers' sons in early days, save, probably, that he was noted for his untiring industry in his assistance in clearing his father's farm from the unbroken wilderness. These industrious habits formed in youth furnished the foundation of Mr. Botkin's success and usefulness in after years.

His educational advantages were confined to the common schools of West River Township, with the exception of one term in the Muncie schools. Mr. Botkin possesses a fair common school education, and has acquired a vast amount of general information from the reading of the literature of the day and his associations with his fellow-men.

He was but thirteen years of age when his father died, but lived on the farm with his mother until he was twenty-one; after which he hired out by the month as a farm laborer until he was twenty-seven, when he was first united in marriage to Martha A. Hiatt, daughter of Louis and Charity Hiatt, of Clinton County, Ohio, December 20, 1849.

After his marriage, he settled on his father's homestead, which he had commenced to purchase from the heirs; he continued the purchase of shares until the entire estate came into his possession.

By his first wife Mr. Botkin is the father of seven children, of whom five are now living—Emily C., born October 26, 1850, and deceased November 11, 1878; Mary V., born July 25, 1853; Louis A., born November 24, 1854; Hugh O., born May 4, 1857, and deceased in the spring of 1859 (was burned to death); Oliver P., born August 15, 1859; Elmer E., born November 10, 1861; Ira M., born December 14, 1863.

He was called to mourn the death of his wife September 27, 1864. She was a faithful companion and mother and a true and tried friend. Her frugality and industry were important factors in Mr. Botkin's success in life. She was an acceptable and honest member of the United Brethren Church, and remained faithful until death.

After the death of his wife, Mr. Botkin hired a housekeeper, and continued with his children to live upon his farm until his second marriage, which occurred October 15, 1868, to Docia C. Butler, the daughter of William and Thirza T. Butler, of Campbell County, Va. She removed with her parents from Virginia to this county in the year 1847, when she was but two years of age. Her parents are both living, and are honored citizens of this county.

By his second wife Mr. Botkin is the father of three children, all of whom are living—Martha A., born July 18, 1869; Thirza R., born June 27, 1873; John W., born July 4, 1878.

Mr. Botkin is the owner and proprietor of a farm of 320 acres of most excellent land, of which a greater portion is under a high state of cultivation. His farm is beautifully located, sloping gently to the south and east, well adapted to grazing, as well as the producing of grain, being supplied with an abundance of water. His farm buildings are of modern architecture, and are large and convenient. His house is a large brick structure, two stories in height, situated on a commanding knoll fronting the south. This house is both beautiful and convenient.

Mr. Botkin has been a life-long Republican, and was honored in 1876 by being elected to the office of County Commissioner for the Middle District; he held this office for one term, and served the county faithfully and honestly, giving entire satisfaction to his constituents.

Mr. and Mrs. Botkin are acceptable members of the M. E. Church, belonging to the Huntsville charge. Mr. B. is also a devoted member of the Huntsville Lodge, No. 248, F. & A. M.

Mr. and Mrs. B. are happily situated, surrounded with comfort, are honored members of society, and widely known for their hospitality.

JONAH L. CATEY.

William Catey, the father of this gentleman, was born in New Jersey December 15, 1812. In 1822, he came with his parents to Wayne County, Ind., where he grew to manhood. In that county, he married Miss Sarah Davisson, and shortly afterward removed to Randolph County, locating in West River Township; he entered eighty acres of government land, from which he developed a fine farm, adding to it from time to time, until his possessions aggregated over 200 acres; he was an energetic, industrious man, and bestowed great attention upon the cultivation and improvement of his farm. His first house was a hewed-log house, but this gave place, within a few years, to a neat, comfortable frame house. He was a man of progressive ideas, and kept pace with the march of improvement; he always took an active interest in politics, but never accepted public office. In early life he was a Whig, and later a Republican; he enjoyed the confidence and good will of all who knew him, and was always recognized as one of the best citizens of the community in which he lived. During a business trip to Wayne County, in 1862, he was taken ill, and two days later, September 13, he died in that county; he had borne a part in the pioneer development of both Wayne and Randolph Counties, and lived long enough to witness and enjoy the prosperity of later years. His wife was a native of North Carolina, where she was born March 21, 1814. She survived her husband nearly ten years, dying at the home in West River Township April 23, 1872.

Jonah L., their son, was born November 2, 1850, in West River Township, Randolph Co., Ind.; his early life was passed on the home farm, where he was engaged in assisting his father, except during the winter, when he attended school; he first attended the schools of his own neighborhood, and afterward, the graded schools at Economy, and the high school at Winchester. As he grew to maturity, he decided upon the adoption of the pursuit of farming as his occupation in life, and has been thus engaged for several years. On the 27th of January, 1872, he was united in marriage with Miss Nancy Massey, who was born in Wayne County. Ind., January 10, 1853, and is the daughter of Maberry Massey, Esq., a native of North Carolina, who came to Wayne County when a boy. By this union they are the parents of five children, viz.: William M., Zelma J., Alice, Byron R. and Elo, of whom two (Zelma and Byron) are deceased. Mr. Catey occupies and cultivates a farm of eighty-two acres, this being his share of the home farm, and the spot upon which his father first erected the pioneer home; he is a successful and energetic farmer, and as a citizen, enjoys the confidence and esteem of all who know him. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics is an enthusiastic Republican. In his father's family there were nine children, viz.: Rebecca, Moses D., Rachel, George W., Eliza, Willliam H., Samuel C., Jonah L. and John B. Of this number Rebecca, Moses D., Rachel, George W. and Eliza are deceased. Three of the brothers served in the Union army during the late war; Moses D. and George W. were members of Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, the latter dying at Young's Point, La., in March, 1863. William H. was in the One Hundred and Forty-seventh Indiana Infantry, and now resides in Illinois.

JOHN B. CATEY.

John B., son of William and Sarah Catey, was born August 18, 1855, in West River Township, Randolph Co., Ind., and was educated in the district schools of that township. His early life was spent in the performance of the varied duties of farm life, and upon reaching mature years he adopted the pursuit of farming, and, like his brother Jonah, has made it a success. He was married, on the 20th of September, 1876, to Miss Celina J. Morland, and by this union they are the parents of three children, named respectively Maud, Clyde and Oscar M., all of whom are now living. Mrs. Catey is the daughter of William Morland, a native of Ohio. Her mother, whose maiden name was Prudence Wright, was born in North Carolina February 28, 1812. Mr. Morland's family were highly respected citizens of Wayne County, Ind., where their daughter, Mrs. Catey, was born November 14, 1855. Mr. Catey and wife are worthy members of the M. E. Church, and enjoy the esteem of all who know them. In politics, Mr. Catey is an active Republican, but he has never sought nor accepted official position, preferring to give his attention exclusively to the pursuit in which he is engaged.

MILTON COFFIN, farmer P. O. Trenton. He was born November 11, 1823, in Guilford County, N. C.; he came to this State and county in the fall of of 1833. He was married, the first time, to Sarah Denney, in December, 1846. She was a native of Kentucky, and born there February, 1822. This union was blessed with four children, of whom three are living—William, born September 23, 1847; Jonathan, November 2, 1849, and Lewis J., September 10, 1859. He was married the second time, March 1, 1870, to Elizabeth Barr, who was a native of Virginia, and born there November 27, 1837. They had two children, one living—Edward M., born March 4, 1871. Mr. C. was educated in the common schools of this State, and has followed farming. He has been a consistent member of the M. E. Church for eight years. His father, Jonathan Coffin, was a native of North Carolina, where he was born about the year 1798; came with his family to this county in the fall of 1833, deceased February, 1875. Mr. C. is Republican in politics, of English descent, and a gentleman of undoubted integrity and great sociability.

MOSES E. CONYERS, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He was born August 12, 1843, in Wayne County, Ind.; he came to this county in 1851, and was united in marriage to Mary Allen, September 9, 1869. She was born in Wayne County, Ind., September 9, 1849. They have three children—Orran C., born September 26, 1870; James E., October 12, 1876, and Thomas B., April 17, 1880. He was educated in the common schools of this State, and has followed the occupation of a farmer. He enlisted in Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, and was consolidated in B, of the same infantry. He had a good record as a soldier, and was discharged from both on account of expiration of term of service. Mr. C. is an honored member of the F. & A. M., Huntsville Lodge, No. 367. His father, Ismael Conyers, was a native of Pennsylvania, where he was born March 22, 1813; after several changes, he finally located in this county in 1851. The father of Mrs. Conyers was born in this county, deceased 1852. Mr. Conyers had two brothers in the war for the Union—Austin F., in Company C, Nineteenth Indiana Infantry, and Alphonso W., in Company B, Seventh Cavalry. Mr. C. is of Irish and Dutch descent, and is noted for his integrity.

DANIEL CROPPER, hotel-keeper, Trenton. He was born March 5, 1825, in Kentucky. He received the rudiments of a common school education in this county, and was married, November 1, 1849, to Elizabeth Thornburg, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., August 16, 1829. They had five children, of which number three are living: Fannie E., born December 12, 1850, married to Samuel H. Stephenson; Melinda A., August 13, 1852, deceased August 10, 1854; Martha A., November 13, 1854, married to William H. Cox; Lydia E., March 25, 1864; and William A., November 30, 1858, deceased April 22, 1863. Bela W. Cropper, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in Kentucky January 8, 1791, deceased March 27, 1874; his wife was originally Elizabeth Ashby, a native of Kentucky, born October 20, 1794, now deceased. William Thornburg, born in Tennessee October 2, 1794, deceased May 23, 1880; his wife, originally Martha Bradshaw, was born in Tennessee January 8, 1796, deceased in November, 1868. Mr. C. is proprietor of the Cropper House, and is attentive and kind to all who call on him.

ALLEN S. CROPPER, farmer, P. O. Cerro Gordo. He was born April 7, 1827, in Henry County, Ky.; he came to Ohio in the fall of the same year with his parents, and from thence removed to this county in October, 1833. He was educated in the common schools of the county, and has followed the carpenter trade and farming. He was married, December 26, 1850, to Laura Haynes, who was born May 24, 1829, in the State of New York. They had two children—Jehiel G., born June 12, 1852, and Edmund A., November 20, 1865. On October 14, 1876, Mr. Cropper was bereaved by the loss of his beloved wife, who had been the companion of his youth. He and his wife were members of the Christian Church. He owns a good farm of 128 acres of land worth $50 per acre, and is Republican in politics. His father's name was Bela W. Cropper, born January 8, 1791, deceased March 27, 1874, in this county. His mother, originally Elizabeth Ashby, born 1794, in Shelby County, Ky., deceased in this county in the fall of 1875. His father, Bela, was in the war of 1812, under Col. Dick Johnson, of Kentucky, and took part in the battle of the Thames, where the celebrated Indian Chieftian Tecumseh was killed. Mr. Cropper is an industrious, honest citizen.

DAVID A. CROPPER, farmer, P. O. Unionsport. He was born April 4, 1842, in this county; he was educated in the common schools of the rural districts, and has followed farming for a business. Mr. C. was married, September 2, 1868, to Lydia A. Botkin, who was a daughter of Dr. Botkin, and born in this county June 15, 1849. These parents have one interesting daughter, Ada A., born October 19, 1869. Mr. Cropper learned the blacksmith trade in boyhood, but as stated, adopted farming, which is more congenial to his nature. He and his estimable wife are members of the M. E. Church, and are regarded as good citizens. He owns a good farm of 138 acres of land, and by his industry is succeeding well in its cultivation.

EDWARD T. CROPPER, merchant, Trenton. He was born December 23, 1841, in this county; he was united in marriage to Mary J. Keever, in October, 1866. She was born June 15, 1843, in Warren County, Ohio. Mr. C. was educated in the common schools of the county, and by his industry and economy has succeeded well in life. He followed farming in early life, but finding the mercantile business more congenial to his nature, engaged in it, which now demands his attention. He served in Company D, Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Infantry, in the war for the Union, and was a gallant soldier. He has a family of four children—Cora A., born August 1, 1867; Stephen L., December 14, 1872; Emma F., November 12, 1876, and Charles A., born January 12, 1881. He carries a well-selected stock of goods, with increasing sales reaching more than $12,000 annually. His card is: E. T. Cropper, dealer in dry goods, groceries and general merchandise, Huntsville, Ind.

ELISHA COX, farmer, P. O. Economy. He was born January 12, 1834, in Wayne County, Ind. He came to this county in the winter of 1865. Mr. Cox was educated in the common schools of this county, and is a successful farmer. He is genial and companionable, and in connection with other members of the family owns 259½ acres of valuable land. His father's name is Levi Cox, who was born October 23, 1789, in Georgia. He moved to Belmont County, Ohio, in 1798; from thence to Wayne County, Ind., and settled here in 1865. Deceased June 23, 1868. Lydia Williams, the maiden name of Mrs. Cox, and mother of the subject of this sketch, was a native of Belmont County, Ohio, where she was born May 30, 1808. She was married to Levi Cox July 17, 1828. Deceased June, 1845. Mr. Cox has two sisters and one brother—Rebecca, born June 7, 1830; Nathan, January 1, 1832, and Zelphina (now Mrs. Mendenhall), born April 1, 1840. This family is universally respected.

ELZE L. DAVISSON, farmer, P. O. Bloomingsport. He was born September 30, 1844, in Randolph County, Ind. He was educated in the common schools of his native district, and has followed farming. He was married, September 30, 1869, to Lydia A. Phillips, who was born September 18, 1852, in Washington Township, this county. They have reared two nephews and two nieces—Nora E. Davisson, born March 17, 1860; James N. Wright, April 17, 1866; William Hofford, October 17, 1863, and Maggie A. Hofford, March 10, 1871. Mr. Davisson served in the Fifty-fourth Indiana Infantry, Company I, and the One Hundred and Forty-seventh, Company A, in the war of the rebellion, and was a faithful soldier in the discharge of duty. His father and mother—Ira Davisson and Catharine Peacock, were married October 27, 1831. Ira Davisson, his father, was originally from North Carolina, where he was born May 25, 1812. He came to this county about the year 1820, remaining here until the date of his decease, September 15, 1865. The companion of Father Davisson was a native of New Jersey, where she was born June 22, 1814. She came to this county with her parents at an early date, and deceased October 12, 1868. Mr. Davisson commenced life a poor boy, but by his industry and energy is succeeding well in life. He owns a good farm of 140 acres of land, and is well suited to his chosen occupation.

JAMES M. DENNY is a farmer and school teacher, and his post office address is Trenton. He is a son of William and Mary Denny. His father was born in North Carolina, and emigrated with his parents to Kentucky, and from there to this county, where the family has resided ever since. His mother was born in Ohio, and came to this county while yet quite an infant with her parents. They died and left her an orphan in her youth. Mr. Denny's father and mother were married in 1842, and are still living in Nettle Creek Township. James M. was born November 20, 1843, and was reared on a farm. He was principally educated in the common schools; he has obtained a good education, and it is in a great measure due to self-culture and diligent study. He has been successfully engaged in the public schools of the county for ten years. On the 14th day of Augnst, 1870, Mr. Denny was married to Caroline Atkins. Their little family now consists of four additions, viz.: William I., James Marion, Luther U. G., and Gertie May. Mr. Denny is a "good old Jackson Democrat," and a model farmer.

GEORGE W. EDWARDS is a farmer, and his post office address is Trenton, He was born December 29, 1843, in Randolph County. He is a son of Zebulon Edwards, who was a son of Henry Edwards; his father and grandfather were natives of North Carolina. His mother's maiden name was Sallie McNeal. George W. was educated in the common schools; he was married, July 20, 1875, to Matilda Victoria Harris, who is a daughter of William P. Harris, and who was born in this county November 22, 1848. These parents have three children, namely: Ida O., born September 12, 1876; James A., April 5, 1879, and William Zebulon, June 19, 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Edwards enlisted twice during the late unpleasantness, for military duty; first, in Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and subsequently in Company F, One Hundred and Fortieth Volunteer Infantry. He is now located upon his farm of ninety-five acres of land, and is prosperous in his vocation. He and his worthy wife are hospitable and model society people.

JAMES EDWARDS, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He was born September 20, 1846, in this county. He received a common school education in his neighborhood, and has followed farming. He was married the first time, July 6, 1871, to Eliza Pastors, who was born December 27, 1849; deceased August 31, 1873. Two children blessed this union—Mary E., born March 12, 1872, and Lyda C., May 2, 1873. He was married the second time to Amanda York, May 6, 1876. She was born September 16, 1858. They have one child—Franklin, who was born September 12, 1878. Mr. Edwards served in the war for the Union, in Company A, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Indiana Infantry, and also in Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Indiana. His father, Benjamin Edwards, was a native of New Jersey, where he was born, September 15, 1798; he came to this county at an early date, and deceased August 29, 1865. His mother, Elizabeth Edwards, formerly Miss Chestnut, was a native of Kentucky, and born there May 22, 1801. She was the mother of twelve children, and for one of her age is remarkably active.

JOSIAH ENGLE, farmer, P. O. Bloomingsport. The subject of this sketch was born October 30, 1854, in Washington Township, this county. He was educated in the common schools of the neighborhood in which he lived, and is now a successful farmer. He began life at majority as a school-teacher. He was united in marriage, December, 1875, to Amanda Hoover, who was born October 23, 1855. These parents have three children—Arthur C., born October 31, 1876; Myrtie M., June 17, 1878, and Mary C., September 9, 1880. Mr. Engle and wife are worthy members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are among the best citizens of their vicinity. He owns a fertile farm of ninety-six acres of land; is a Republican from principle, and noted for his integrity.

ELIZABETH FENNIMORE, farming, P. O. Economy. This estimable lady was born July 12, 1828, in the State of New Jersey, and settled in this county about the year 1834. She was educated in the common schools of this county, and was married February 22, 1848, to Caleb Fennimore, who was also a native of New Jersey, and born March 31, 1815. Mrs. Fennimore was bereaved in the loss of her husband by death, March 24, 1876. Five children blessed their marriage—William L., born September 20, 1850; Samuel J., June 8, 1854; Aoley O., February 25, 1860, and Margaret A., July 11, 1864; and Leander, born June 15, 1857, and deceased June 2, 1858. Mrs. Fennimore is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and, with the assistance of her son, manages the farm, consisting of 100 acres of choice land. She deserves the credit due all worthy mothers who maintain their families under such circumstances.

ISAAC J. AND WILLIAM T. FARQUHAR, farmers, P. O. Trenton, importers and breeders of Cotswold and Southdown sheep. Isaac J. was born March 29, 1839, in West River Township, Randolph County, Ind. He is the son of Mahlon Farquhar, who was born in Greene County, Ohio, in the year 1810. Mr. Farquhar was married April 20, 1862, to Mahala Macy, daughter of Joseph Macy, of the seventh generation, and born December 19, 1841, and deceased January 26, 1879. Joseph Macy, was the son of Albert Macy, of the sixth generation, born July 9, 1803, at New Garden, N. C.; he moved, with his family, to this county in 1819; he married Sarah Hobson March 19, 1829. Albert Macy was the son of Joseph Macy, of the sixth generation, was born at Nantucket February 4, 1774, and died in this county May 10, 1847; he married Nancy Wall in North Carolina; she lived to the advanced age of ninety-seven years. Joseph Macy, of the fifth generation, was a son of Joseph Macy, born at Nantucket, October 4, 1735; moved to Guilford County, N. C., and died there in 1812; he was married to Mary Starbuck in 1757. Joseph Macy, fourth generation, son of Thomas Macy, third generation, was born April 8, 1809, at Nantucket; he married Hannah Hobs, in 1728, and, with his family, moved to New Garden, N. C., in 1733; he made a will on the 20th day of the 5th month in the 10th year of the reign of King George III, of Great Britain, giving each of his six children a part and parcel of his estate. Thomas Macy, third generation, son of John Macy, second generation, was born at Nantucket, in 1687, and died June 27, 1759; he was married to Deborah Coffin; in 1720, he assisted in capturing a whale, of which he took his share of the bone to England and purchased a bale of Irish linen, a clock and Sewall's History—the clock descended to Joseph Macy, and from him to his son, Paul, in 1832. He shortly afterward gave it to his son, Obed Macy, who is at present at Troy, Ohio. During all this time of one hundred and sixty years it has never been in the hands of a clock-maker but once, and still keeps excellent time. John Macy (second generation) was a son of Thomas Macy, of the first generation was born at Salisbury, Mass., July 14, 1655, and died at Nantucket, October 14, 1691; he married Deborah Gardner in 1676, who died in 1712; he was a house-carpenter, and there are now several houses on the Island which he helped to make. Thomas Macy, of the first generation, was born at Chilmark, England, in 1608, and died on the Island of Nantucket, April 19, 1682, at the age of seventy-four years; he was married to Sarah Hopcott at Chilmark, England (date not given); she survived him several years, living to the advanced age of ninety-four years. The history of Thomas Macy is too long for this work, suffice it to say he was a Christian of the Baptist persuasion, believing every one had a right to worship God according to his own conscience, for which belief and harboring Friend Quakers, he was hunted down by the Priests and Sheriff, and had to flee the country to save his life. He and his wife embarked in a little birch canoe (see Whittier's poem) while the Priests and Sheriff were after them, and, after a perilous voyage in their little craft, landed on the lonely Island of Nantucket. It is not known for certain what year Thomas Macy landed in this country, but it was some time in the year 1635 or 1636. He was a man that was held in very high esteem by his associates, and was looked to as a spiritual advisor; he was a merchant, planter and preacher, and held many positions of honor and trust in the new province. Much more could be written which would be of interest in regard to his history. Our subjects own good farms, well watered, and stocked with fine horses, cattle, sheep and hogs.

ALDEN L. GAINES, farmer, P. O. Trenton. This esteemed citizen was born March 17, 1848, in Herkimer County, N. Y., and came to this county in the fall of 1854. He was educated in the common schools of this county, and has followed farming for a living. He was united in marriage to Celia E. Harris, March 18, 1869, who was born October 21, 1851. They have two children—Clara L., born January 1, 1871, and Charlotte V., November 28, 1872. He served in the Twenty-second Indiana Regiment for a brief term on garrison duty at Indianapolis, Ind. Mr. Gaines has also worked at the carpenter trade, and is a stanch Republican. His father, Hoyt Gaines, is a native of Vermont, where he was born in the year 1812; he emigrated to this State with his family in the year 1854, and for one of his age is unusually active. His mother's name was Sophia Klingin, who was born in the State of New York, February 3, 1816, deceased in this State June 13, 1864. Mr. G. is noted for his integrity and sociability.

OLIVER P. GWIN, farmer, P. O. Economy. This worthy citizen was born February 4, 1831, in Wayne County, Ind. He was educated in the common schools of his native county, and was united in marriage August 7, 1852, to Eliza Worth, who was born May 3, 1834, deceased February 7, 1877. Eight children, living, blessed this union—John T., born November 16, 1856; Nancy, January 8, 1859; William L., July 30, 1861; David F., April 11, 1864; Minnie M., October 18, 1867; Lurana A., March 22, 1869; Aaron M., October 16, 1871, and George W., February 16, 1874. His father, John Gwin, was born about 1801, in Tennessee; came to Wayne County, Ind., 1818; deceased October 25, 1848; he married Elizabeth Worth, born about 1802, deceased December 24, 1863. Mr. G. and wife were worthy members of the M. E. Church, and now that she is gone to the great Unknown, he lives in the bright hope that he shall meet her again, to see and know her as she is. He is a substantial farmer, and owns a good farm of eighty acres of valuable land.

ELISHA P. GADDIS.

Elisha Peairs Gaddis, a farmer, is the son of William and Elizabeth Gaddis, and was born in Pennsylvania February 20, 1811. He is the fourth of a family of nine children, of whom five are now living. His father was born in Virginia, and his mother in Pennsylvania. His parents removed from Pennsylvania about the year 1816, and settled in Clinton County, Ohio, where they remained until their deaths.

Elisha lived on his father's farm until he was twenty-eight years of age, taking entire possession thereof when he was only fifteen, his father being a cripple from rheumatism. His educational advantages were very poor, attending school only for a brief period during the winter, at the common district school in the old pioneer log house, with greased paper for windows, hewed benches, etc. He has sufficient education to transact all business in his line.

He came to Indiana in 1838, and lived with his brother-in-law two years, who resided in Randolph County. He was married to Lydia Macy, daughter of Albert and Nancy Macy, of this county, August 25, 1840.

After marriage, he settled where he now resides, having purchased sixty acres of unimproved land and commenced clearing a farm from the forest. He is now owner and proprietor of 215 acres of excellent land, with 160 acres under a high state of cultivation. This farm is one of the best in the neighborhood and is very productive. His farm buildings are very good and convenient. He has given especial attention to the cultivation of a great variety of fruit, and it may be said that no farm in the county will excel this one in this respect.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaddis are the parents of eleven children, of whom nine are now living—Thomas W., born July 16, 1841; Sarah E., born October 17, 1842; Albert C., born October 28, 1844; Allen, born October 25, 1847, deceased May 19, 1850; Warren, born April 28, 1849, deceased May 27, 1850; Nancy E., born March 7, 1851; Hiram A., born April 10, 1853; Phebe E., born February 6, 1855; Austin F., born December 8, 1856; Caroline M., born August 28, 1860; Nora E., born August 9, 1864. Seven of this family of children are married, and the greater portion of them reside in this county. His sons are all farmers, and comfortably situated.

Thomas and Albert enlisted in the late war; the former was a member of Company D, Sixty-ninth Regiment, and served for three years; the latter in the One Hundred Days' service, and did good service during the Morgan raid. Thomas took an active part in some of the most important battles of the war —Vicksburg, Fort Donelson, Ball's Bluff, etc. At the last named place he was taken prisoner, but was very soon exchanged. He was mustered out with his regiment at the close of the war. He was a gallant soldier and was ever ready for duty. He was neither wounded nor in a hospital during the entire service.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaddis are of English extraction. Mr. Gaddis is a stanch Republican, and has served one term as Township Trustee. He and his excellent wife lead a quiet and honorable life, and are honored citizens of the county.

Lydia (Macy) Gaddis, the wife of Elisha P. Gaddis, and daughter of Albert and Nancy Macy, was born in Randolph County, Ind., May 11, 1821. She is the youngest of a family of eight children of whom four are living. Her early life was spent on the farm, doing the work common to farmer's daughters in pioneer times. Her education is very meager, having but little opportunities of attending school. She attended three or four short terms at the common district school. At the age of nineteen she was married to her present husband.

Mrs. Gaddis is a woman of noble impulses, and devoted to the interests of her family. She is the mother of eleven children, all of whom are honorable and upright citizens. She has borne the joys and sorrows of life with her husband for forty-two years. She is a woman of excellent health for one of her age, and is capable of doing and does do a great amount of labor. Her ancestors were the first settlers on the Island of Nantucket.

STEPHEN HAYNES.

This honored citizen is one of the pioneers of this county, having settled in West River Township in the year 1834. He was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., January 12, 1800. His father, Enoch Haynes, and his mother, Elizabeth (Birdsall) Haynes, were both natives of Dutchess County, N. Y. His grandparents were also natives of the same county and State. His parents were of English extraction, and his grandfather was a successful farmer, becoming very wealthy.

Stephen was the eighth of a family of eleven children, of whom three are now living, as follows: Asa Haynes, seventy-seven years old, and resides in Knox County, Ill.; Mrs. Patty Corbin, ninety years of age, and resides in Dutchess County, N. Y., and the subject of this sketch, who is in his eighty-third year. His father emigrated to the State of Ohio in the year 1808, where he died some years after, his mother having previously died in her native State. His father was twice married, and was the father of sixteen children; was of a roving disposition, and never accumulated much property. His second wife was Mary Forte, of New York.

The subject of this sketch was eight years of age when he emigrated with his father to Clinton County, Ohio; his father being very poor, was unable to give his children an education, and what little Stephen received was obtained after he became a man grown, at his own expense. At the age of fifteen, he was apprenticed at the cabinet-maker's business, a trade he followed with much success in connection with that of farming, for a great many years. In the year 1819, he returned to his native county and remained for about one year, when he moved to Herkimer County, where he was first married to Laura Gaynes, March 9, 1822. His wife was a most worthy Christian lady, and devoted wife and mother. She was the daughter of Jesse and Lucy Gaynes, and was born in the State of Vermont. As fruits of this marriage, Mr. Haynes is the father of eight children, six of whom are now living, as follows: Willard, Lucy, Jesse, Laura, Elizabeth, Asa, Sarah and Martha. He lived in Herkimer County for fifteen years after marriage, when he moved to Clinton County, Ohio, where he remained for one year; he then came to this State and county in the year 1834, as stated elsewhere. He entered 320 acres of land and developed a fine farm from the unbroken wilderness; he has accumulated a large amount of property, the most of which he has given to his children; he gave each one $1,600 as a start in life; he now lives in the little town of Unionsport in a very comfortable home, and cultivates one acre of ground; he was called to mourn the death of the dear wife of his youth in 1875, at the advanced age of seventy-three years; he was subsequently married to Mrs. Ellenor Allison, who was born in Northumberland County, England. She is the daughter of John and Mary Stephenson, and was born January 1, 1815. She emigrated to this county with her husband, Ralph Allison, in the year 1852. She is the mother of ten children. Her son, Peter Allison, enlisted in the Thirty-fifth Regiment Ohio Infantry, and was killed outright at the battle of Mission Ridge, March 5, 1865. Mr. Haynes' son, Asa, enlisted in the late war under Col. J. P. C. Shanks, and died with brain fever in the hospital at Vicksburg; his adopted son, George Smith, enlisted in the same regiment, and died of camp diarrhœa in Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Haynes have been honored and active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for a number of years (the former for fifty years, and the latter for twenty years).

Mr. Haynes was a Democrat in the earlier part of his life, but on account of the position of the party on the subject of slavery, he ceased to affiliate with it, and has for a number of years actively advocated the doctrines of the Republican party. He is a man of strong convictions, and advocates what he believes to be right with great energy, purely from a standpoint of duty; he is an uncompromising enemy of intemperance in all of its forms; he was for many years a member of the order of the Sons of Temperance, and worked zealously for the temperance cause.

Mr. Haynes and his wife are respected and useful citizens, and will hand down a name and history that will be revered by future posterity.

JESSE G. HAYNES.

This most estimable citizen, the son of Stephen and Laura (Gaynes) Haynes, was born in Herkimer County, N. Y., January 10, 1825; he is the second of a family of nine children, six of whom are now living; his father was born in the State of New York January 12, 1800, and his mother in the State of Vermont December 20, 1804; his father is still living in Unionsport, this county; his mother died in this county March 26, 1878. His parents removed from New York to Clinton County, Ohio, in the fall of 1834, and settled on a farm They remained here for one year, when they removed to this county, where his father entered a half-section of land near Unionsport; he subsequently purchased a forty-acre tract with slight improvements, and settled upon it. After three years, he sold the half-section and bought land adjoining the forty acres upon which he settled; he added to his purchases year after year, until he obtained a fine farm of 200 acres.

The subject of this sketch resided with his parents upon this farm until he was twenty-four years of age, devoting his time and energies in assisting his father upon the farm. His educational advantages were very meager, confined exclusively to such common district schools as the county at that time afforded. After he was twenty-four, he hired out by the month for one year as a farm laborer, when he was united in marriage with Matilda Cropper, daughter of Bela W. and Elizabeth Cropper, of Randolph County, January 4, 1849. After marriage, he settled upon his father's farm, where he remained for three years, when he purchased ninety-six acres of the farm upon which he now resides; his farm now consists of 180 acres, with 125 acres under a high state of cultivation; his farm is located two and one-fourth miles south of Unionsport, is a perfect square in form, sloping gently to the south. It is of an excellent quality of soil, beautifully situated and is very productive. Mr. Haynes is a scientific farmer, careful to keep his farm in excellent repair, and has provided commodious and convenient buildings. He has just completed a very excellent farmhouse, beautiful in architecture and convenient in construction. This building is two stories in height, containing nine rooms, a summer kitchen and wash-house.

Mr. and Mrs. Haynes are the parents of eight children, six of whom are now living—Emily A., born October 25, 1849; Alfred O., June 6, 1852, deceased November 2, 1854; Martha V., born September 25, 1853; Stephen M., June 30, 1858, deceased August 1, 1859; Asa O., born January 14, 1860; Effie A., April 12, 1861; Edna L., November 9, 1864; Frank M., March 5, 1868. His two eldest children are married and settled in this county, and together have nine children. Mr. Haynes has always been a stanch Republican, and has done much for the good of his party in this county.

Matilda Haynes, wife of Jesse G. Haynes, and daughter of Bela and Elizabeth Cropper, was born in Warren County, Ohio, February 17, 1829. She is the tenth of a family of fourteen children, of whom five are now living, all but one residing in this county. Her father was born in Woodford County, Ky., January 8, 1791, and departed this life March 27, 1873, aged eighty-two years two months and nine days. Her mother was born in Shelby County, Ky., October 22, 1794, and deceased October 31, 1875. Her parents removed from Kentucky to Ohio in the year 1828, and remained there until September, 1833, when they came to this State. The subject of this sketch was five years old when she came with her parents to this county. They settled on a farm where Matilda continued to live until her marriage. Mrs. Haynes' youthful experience was similar to that of most farmers' daughters in pioneer times, having comparatively no opportunities for obtaining an education, the schools being in a very primitive state. She is an honored and zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. and Mrs. Haynes are industrious and frugal, honest and generous. They have raised and educated a family of honorable children, and have secured a competency of property, and are honored citizens of the county.

WILLIAM P. HARRIS, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He was born December 29, 1821, in Campbell County, Va., and came to this county in March, 1837. He was educated in the common schools of Virginia, and is one of the substantial farmers of the county. He was united in the holy bonds of marriage to Louisa F. Butler, April 6, 1843. She was born September 6, 1824, in Campbell County, Va. They have six children living—Henry E., born March 18, 1844; Lucy A., September 4, 1846; Matilda V., September 26, 1848; Celia E., October 21, 1851; John C., April 16, 1857; and Selina F., May 11, 1859. Mr. Harris was elected Justice of the Peace in 1876, and was appointed in 1877 to the same office, there being some error in the date of his commission. He and his family are consistent members of the M. E. Church, and universally esteemed in their community. He is also an honored member of Huntsville Lodge, F. & A. M., 367. He owns a valuable farm of 251 acres of land in a high state of cultivation, and is an ardent Republican from principle. His father, John Harris, was a native of Virginia, where he was born March 16, 1791; he was married to Celia B. Lamb, April 2, 1818. She was born in Virginia February 13, 1801, and died in this county November 28, 1874. His father immigrated to this county in the year 1837, and deceased November 28, 1861.

HENRY E. HARRIS, farmer, P. O. Cerro Gordo. He was born March 18, 1844, in West River Township, this county. He was educated in the common schools of his neighborhood, and has been a farmer from boyhood. He was married to Sarah A. Gaddis, October 8, 1865. She was born October 17, 1843. They have three children—Lydia L., born May 14, 1867; Charles

A., June 30, 1868; and Cora M., October 22,1871. He served in Company D Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, participating in all the principal battles in which the regiment was engaged. He was wounded in the left wrist at Blakely, Ala., by a grape shot from the enemy's cannon, but was mustered out of service at the expiration of his term of enlistment. His father, William P. Harris, was born in Campbell County, Va., December 29, 1821, coming here about the year 1837. His wife's father's name is Elisha P. Gaddis, born about the year 1814 in Clinton County, Ohio. These people are of English descent, and are among the best families in the county. Mr. Harris and his wife are members of the M. E. Church, and are worthy citizens.

DAVID T. HARRIS, is a farmer, and his post office address is Trenton, Ind. His father, John G. Harris, was born in Campbell County, Va., in November, 1812, and emigrated to Randolph County in 1833, and died here July 20, 1872. His mother's maiden name was Abba Mills; she was born February 14, 1815, in the State of Ohio. Mr. Harris' father and mother were married at Hagerstown, Wayne Co., Ind. They emigrated to Randolph County in 1855, where they made themselves a farm out of the forest, and where they resided until the death of the elder Harris, since which time Mrs. Harris has become a resident of Winchester. David T. was married to Mary D. Botkin, June 8, 1874. She was born in Randolph County July 25, 1853. These parents have two children, viz.: Emmett B., born July 12, 1876, and Emily, born November 12, 1879. Mr. and Mrs. Harris were educated in the common schools. He has generally followed farming. He had two brothers in the war for the Union,viz.: John W., a member of Company F, Thirty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and was killed at Chickamauga September 20, 1863; William E., member of Company A, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, who served his time, and returned home. The Harris family is of Irish and English descent.

WILLIARD HAYNES, farmer, P. O. Unionsport. This worthy and industrious farmer was born in Herkimer County, N. Y., February 11, 1823. He was educated in the common schools of this county,which, in 1835,were in their pioneer state. He was married, May 21, 1846, to Delilah Wright, who was a native of Clinton County, and born there December 3, 1822. Stephen Haynes, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., January 12, 1800, and after making some changes, settled in this county in the year 1834; his wife and mother of Williard,was originally Laura Gaines, a native of Vermont, and born there about the year 1804; deceased March 25, 1875, in this county. The father of Mrs. Haynes (Empson Wright), was originally from Virginia, where he was born November 15, 1797. He came to this county about the year 1824; deceased November 28, 1853, on the land which he entered. His wife was originally Rachel Rubel, born February 1, 1801, in Tennessee (now deceased). The worthy wife of Mr. Haynes is a consistent member of the Christian Church, and he is a Republican, and one of the substantial farmers of the neighborhood in which he resides. Seven children have blessed this union—Laura E., born March 5, 1847; Sarah E., October 23, 1849; Louisa M., December 22, 1851; William H., April 23, 1855; Lucy A., October 3, 1857; Stephen C., October 13, 1859, and Harrison W., February 22, 1862.

ALPHEUS HOOFLAND, farmer, P. O. Cerro Gordo. He was born October 10, 1830, in Hamilton County, Ohio. He came to Wayne County, Ind., in the year 1832, and finally settled here in this county in 1833. His father, Isaac Hoofland, was a native of New Jersey, where he was born about the year 1790; he came to this county in his boyhood, and deceased September 3, 1850. His mother's maiden name was Hamilton. She was born about 1795, in Ohio, and came with her husband to Wayne County, Ind., in 1832, and from thence to this county in 1833, and deceased November 8, 1865. Mr. Hoofland was educated in the common schools of this county, and is a successful farmer. He was united in marriage to Isabella McNeal, January, 1852; she was born July 9, 1828, in Butler County, Ohio, and came to this county in 1851. This family is of Irish and English descent, and were of the Presbyterian faith. Mr. and Mrs. Hoofland are consistent members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and are noted for their integrity and hospitality.

MARTIN HOOVER, farmer, P. O. Bloomingsport. This model farmer was born March 29, 1829, in Wayne County, Ind. He was educated in the common schools, and has followed the occupation of farming and stock-raising. He was married the first time, March 4, 1852, to Mary C. Cook, who was born June 30, 1836, in Wayne County, Ind., and deceased March 4, 1874. This union was blessed with eight children, of which number three are living—Nancy, born July 19, 1853, and died July 5, 1871; Amanda, October 23, 1855; Andrew, January 9, 1858; Oliver, June 12, 1860, and deceased December 17, 1862; David E., December 26, 1862, deceased August 24, 1864, and Emma, June 8, 1866. Mr. Hoover was married the second time, March 30, 1876, to Helena A. Stevenson, who was originally Mrs. Huffman. One child was the result of this marriage—Olive, born April 1, 1878. Mr. Hoover and wife are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Republican, owns a valuable tract of 315 acres of land, and is noted for being a successful farmer and stock-raiser. His father's name was Andrew Hoover, born in Ohio, February 23, 1806, and came to Wayne County in 1811, and deceased September 22, 1857. His mother was originally Matilda Worl, a native of Kentucky, born November 9, 1809, and deceased in Wayne County, Ind., December 6, 1880.

WILLIAM H. HOWELL, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He was born November 4, 1849, in this county. He was educated in the common schools of his native county, and has followed farming from boyhood. They have three children—Edgar E., born December 7, 1871; Attie V., December 19, 1873, and William T., August, 1875. Mr. Howell and wife are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are considered worthy citizens. His father's name was William; he was born in Wayne County, Ind.; came to this county at an early date in its history, and deceased in the fall of 1875. Mr. Howell's parents were of English descent, and belonged to one of the best families of the county.

JOHN T. HUNNICUTT, farmer, P. O. Economy. This worthy citizen was born November 25, 1816, in Dinwiddie County, Va.; he came to Fayette County, Ind., in 1827, from thence to Wayne County in 1828, and finally settled in this county. He was educated in the common schools of this and Wayne County, and engaged sucessfully in farming. He was married, the first time to Jane Charles, on the 15th day of the first month, 1851. She was born on the 4th day of the fourth month, 1833, in Wayne County, Ind., deceased on the 22d day of the third month, 1861, in this county. Five children blessed this union—Charles D., born 17th day of the ninth month, 1852; Julia E., 19th day, tenth month, 1854; Albert C., 17th day of the first month, 1857; William P., 19th day, fifth month, 1859, and Mary J., 8th day, third month, 1861. Mr. H. was married the second time on the 28th day of the second month, 1872, to Deborah Arnett, formerly Hollingsworth, who was born on the 8th day, ninth month, 1829. He and his estimable family are members of the Church of Friends, and are universally esteemed. He is an ardent Republican, and owns a valuable farm of 250 acres of land in a good state of cultivation. His father, Daniel Hunnicutt, was originally from Virginia, where he was born; he died on the 30th day, tenth month, 1849, in this county; he was of English descent, and a member of the Friends' Church. Daniel Charles, the father of Mr. Hunnicutt's first wife, was born in North Carolina on the 16th day, tenth month, 1800, and came to Wayne County, Ind., in the fall of 1827 (deceased). Henry Hollingsworth was the father of his present wife, was originally from South Carolina, where he was born on the 20th day, first month, 1804; came to Wayne County in 1830; deceased on the 27th day, sixth month, 1876. This family has a good history and furnishes worthy examples to the living as to character and noble citizenship.

JESSE HUNT, farming and lumbering, P. O. Swain's Hill. He is a son of Jonathan W. and Sarah Hunt. His father was born in North Carolina, and mother, in Ohio. His father emigrated to this county about 1830, while yet a youth, and died November 1, 1873. His mother came to this county in 1857, and married Mr. Hunt a few months after her arrival. She married James Boling in July, 1876, and is still living in West River Township. Jesse was born in Randolph County, Ind., February 28, 1851, and married Frances A. Hunt, August 15, 1877. They have two children, viz., Virlen M. and Morney M. He obtained a fair education; commenced business by working land on shares, and by persevering industry has secured a nice home. In connection with farming, he carries on quite a trade in lumber. In politics, he is a Democrat. He is a kind father and devoted husband.

HENRY C. HUNT.

Henry C. Hunt, physician and surgeon, was born at Huntsville, Randolph Co., Ind., July 27, 1839. He is the son of Miles Hunt, who was born in Fleming County, Ky., in 1808. He was of English extraction; his great-great-grandfather emigrated from England in company with three brothers, one of whom settled in Maryland, one in Virginia and one in South Carolina. His grandfather's name was John Hunt, who had four brothers, as follows; Joseph, Reuben, Lewis and Samuel. His father (the grandfather of the subject of this sketch), Basil Hunt, emigrated to the Territory of Indiana in the year 1811, and settled on the Wabash River, in Sullivan County. He had four brothers, viz: John, Reuben, Abraham and Lewis. The father of Basil Hunt moved to Tennessee in very early times, and from there to Kentucky, taking all of his boys with him.

During the war of 1812, the family of Isaac Hutson, who were living in Illinois, was massacred by the Indians. Isaac Hutson married the grand aunt of the subject of this sketch, and during his temporary absence from home the Indians murdered his family and burned his house. To obtain revenge for this wrong, he disguised himself as an Indian and sought to slay the murderers of his family, but was himself killed by the Indians near Fort Harrison. Isaac Denton, the grand uncle of the subject of this sketch, was also murdered by the Indians near the same place, while on a surveying expedition under Gen. Hopkins.

Miles Hunt came to this county in 1825, and settled on a farm near Huntsville. He married Mary L. Botkin, in 1831, whose parents moved to this county from Tennessee in the year 1816. They were the parents of eleven children, seven boys and four girls.

Miles Hunt was elected to the State Legislature in 1837, and re-elected in 1838.

The subject of this sketch received his education from the subscription schools of this county. His advantages were poor, owing to the primitive condition of the schools and the limited circumstances of his parents. Notwithstanding the discouragements surrounding him, he succeeded by his own energies in obtaining a fair education.

In 1862, he enlisted in Company D, Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers. He did gallant service for his country, and made an honorable record as a soldier. He was severely wounded in the left limb at the battle of Richmond, Ky., from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. He received an honorable discharge in the spring of 1863. From the fall of 1863 to 1865, he was engaged in teaching in the public schools of Illinois, after which he returned to his native town in this county and commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Eikenberg. In the fall of 1867 and winter of 1868, he attended the Eclectic Medical Institute at Cincinnati, Ohio. He commenced the practice of his chosen profession at Losantville, this county, in the spring of 1868. He continued to practice at the above named place until 1873, when he returned to Huntsville, where he has continued in a lucrative and successful business ever since.

He was married to Martha J. Vanlandingham December 27, 1868. She was the daughter of James and Eleanor Vanlandingham, and was born in Fleming County, Ky., in 1839. She came to this county in 1852.

Dr. Hunt was called to mourn the death of his devoted wife, January 10, 1882. She left a kind husband and two affectionate daughters to mourn their loss. The names of her daughters are as follows: Lauretta W., born October

MRS. J. G. HAYNES

MRS. FRANCES C. JENKINS

RES. OF JOHN JENKINS, WEST RIVER TP. RANDOLPH CO. IND.

27, 1870, and Lola E., born November 16, 1872. His wife was a most estimable Christian lady, an affectionate mother, and an esteemed neighbor and friend. The Doctor has been very successful in his chosen profession, is highly esteemed as a citizen, and an honored and useful member of society.

GEORGE W. JARRETT, farmer, P. O. Winchester. He was born November 3, 1842, in Buchanan County, Mo. He was educated in the common schools of Indiana, and has been engaged in merchandising and farming for a living. He was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Anna C. Harris, October 5, 1865. She was born in this county December 9, 1847. Two children blessed this union—Clara A., born April 30, 1867, and Ward, December 20, 1868. He and wife belong to the M. E. Church, and are noted for their hospitality and integrity. Mr. J. enlisted in Company E, Fifty-seventh Indiana Infantry; served forty-three months, participating in all the important battles of the war. He was severely wounded in the forehead and left hip, at the bloody battle of Franklin, Tenn., and was discharged on that account from the service. His father, David Jarrett, was a native of Virginia, where he was born July 21, 1815; he moved to Missouri in the year 1841, and deceased there February 10, 1845. The family are of English descent, and are honored representatives of that race.

JOHN JENKINS.

This venerable and honored citizen is the son of Jacob and Hannah (Gawthorp) Jenkins, and was born in Frederick County, Va., February 7, 1810. He is the second of a family of ten children, of whom eight are now living. His father was born in Hampshire County, Va., November 16, 1781, and his mother in Frederick County, of the same State, December 12, 1788. His parents came to Ohio in 1836, and settled near Wilmington on a farm, where they remained until their deaths. His mother died May 23, 1847, and his father followed May 23, 1849.

John and his family came to Ohio in company with his parents, and settled near Spring Valley, where he remained near one year, when he came to this State and county and settled one and one-half miles north of Huntsville, upon the farm where he now resides, having resided here for forty-five years at the time of this writing. His first purchase was 280 acres with three acres cleared. He now owns 440 acres of excellent land, of which 230 acres are in a high state of cultivation. This farm is one of the best in the county, beautifully located, slightly rolling and sloping to the south and east. The soil is very fertile and well adapted to grazing as well as to producing all kinds of grain. Mr. Jenkins received his education from the common schools of Virginia, which were very poor in his time. He is well educated for one of his age and opportunities, having been a close student all of his life. He finds great comfort in reading the best literature of the day. In addition to his habits of reading, he is a close observer of human nature and the actions of his fellow-men. He was married to Frances C. Smith, daughter of George and Frances Smith, of Frederick County, Va., March 31, 1831.

They lived in Virginia until the fall of 1836, when they removed to Greene County, Ohio, where they remained a little less than one year, when they removed to Randolph County, Ind., and settled on the farm he now owns. He settled in the unbroken forest and set to work to develop a farm, with the results above mentioned. The toils and hardships he endured in this work were in common with pioneer life

Mr. Jenkins is the father of ten children, of whom four are now living. His children have all been married. A widowed daughter and his youngest recently married, make their home with their father. One of his sons lives near him and the other in Colorado. He was called to mourn the death of his devoted wife, January 3, 1877.

Mr. Jenkins was born and raised a member of the Society of Friends; he continued a faithful member of this church until 1842, when at the organization of the Presbyterian Church at Pleasant Ridge, he and his wife became members. They remained consistent members of this congregation until 1873, when the church at that place disbanded. They then cast their lots with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and have remained consistent members ever since,

As church members, both Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins were devoted and useful. Mr. Jenkins was a Ruling Elder during his entire membership with the Presbyterian congregation; and since he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church he has been honored with the positions of Class Leader, Trustee and Steward, the last named office he now holds and has for a number of years. Mr. Jenkins has long been a strong and uncompromising advocate of the temperance cause, and was for years a member of the order of Sons of Temperance. In the days of slavery, he entertained a bitter hatred for that institution, even from boyhood, this feeling being one of the strongest influences which caused him to remove to a free State.

In political preferments, he has always believed and acted with the Republicans, and has been industrious in his efforts for the success of his party. He was elected to the office of Township Trustee in the year 1839, and served in that capacity for six years. He has also filled the office of Road Superintendent for a number of years. In these offices he has served the people faithfully and honestly.

Mr. Jenkins is of English extraction on both his father's and mother's side; is a quiet, honest and upright citizen, unassuming in his manners, and it is those who know him best that love him most. He has a great fondness for antiquarian relics, and has retained quite a number that have come into his hands. Among these we will mention a few. He has two chairs made in 1795, another made in 1834; a broad-ax, made in 1833; a mattock, made in 1832; an auger, made in 1831, and his grandmother's Bible, published in 1722. One of the most valued articles in Mr. Jenkins' possession is a wreath made of the hair of each member of his family.

Mr. Jenkins has accumulated a library of well-selected books, and these form his constant companions when not engaged in the common routine of duties on the farm. He is well preserved for one of his age, has good health, and it is to be hoped will have yet many years of usefulness.

MRS. FRANCES C. S. JENKINS. This Christian lady was the wife of John Jenkins, and daughter of George and Frances Smith, of Back Creek Valley, Frederick County, Va.; was born July 5, 1810. She was married to John Jenkins March 31, 1831. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1830, and remained a devoted member until 1836, when she came with her husband to Indiana and settled in this county, when they united with the Presbyterian at Pleasant Ridge (an account of which is given in Mr. Jenkins' biography). She was the mother of ten children, six of whom preceded her to the spirit land. Her eldest son, Rev. George S. Jenkins, of the Northern Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died October 27, 1874. God spared her life until she was permitted to assist her husband in raising their children to manhood and womanhood, when He decreed that she should come up higher and reap the rewards of a faithful servant. She departed this life January 3, 1877. She was always the central and shining light in her Christian household, devoted to her family and the church. The Christian ministers sought her house as the stopping place when visiting in the neighborhood. She always welcomed them with words of comfort and cheer. She not only believed in Christian religion, but was a living example of its teachings. She was a most amiable companion, a devoted mother, a kind neighbor and an affectionate friend. Her demise left a vacancy in the circle of her friends and neighbors that cannot be filled. The funeral obsequies were held at the residence of her husband, and conducted by the Rev. A. M. Patterson, assisted by the Rev. J. F. Rhoades. After the impressive services over the remains, she was interred in the cemetery at Pleasant Ridge, there to await the resurrection of the justified.

JOSHUA G. JONES, farmer, P. O. Trenton. This esteemed citizen was born August 27, 1829, in Bath County, Ky; he came here in the fall of 1848, and received his education in the common and graded schools of this county. He was united in marriage, November 1, 1859, to Elizabeth A. Paschal, who was born September 5, 1830, in Warren County, Ohio. Mr. Jones followed teaching school for a number of years with good success, but is now engaged in farming. He was licensed to exhort in the Methodist Church February 28, 1875, and is noted for the zealous manner in which he performs his duty. He is a member of I. O. O. F., Trenton Lodge, No. 248, and also an ardent Republican. His father, James F. Jones, was a native of Kentucky, where he was born September 11, 1787; he served in the war of 1812, and deceased in this county July 17, 1868. His mother's maiden name was Stephens; she was born in Kentucky in 1796, and after suffering, with Christian patience bodily affliction for a number of years, deceased July 7, 1858. The father of Mrs. Jones (Jesse Z. Paschal), was born in Philadelphia, Penn., in the year 1795, and died in this county, January 11, 1865. He was also a soldier of 1812. Six children, of whom five are living, blessed the home of Mr. Jones—Aquila F., born July 4, 1860; Francis M., September 6, 1861 (deceased September 28, 1862); Ulela M., January 11, 1863; Indiana M., December 10, 1864; William M., November 2, 1867, and Minnie M., January 1, 1870.

LEVI JOHNSON, merchant, Trenton. He was born February 6, 1831, in this county. Mr. Johnson has been married twice; the first time to Maria Blake, November 21, 1857; she was a native of Virginia, and born there in the year 1840; she deceased September 15, 1858. The second time he was married to Bettie Butler, November 21, 1861; she was born in Campbell County, Va., June 17, 1842. They have one child—Lillie T., who was born November 13, 1862. He was educated in the common schools of Virginia, and has followed farming, and teaching music for twenty-five years; he also taught in the common schools in early life, but for eleven years, last past, he has been engaged in the mercantile business. He was elected to the office of Township Trustee, of West River Township in April, 1880, and so far has filled the position to the entire satisfaction of his constituency. His father, Jonathan Johnson, was originally from Virginia, where he was born in 1803, and deceased in West Virginia in the year 1862. Mr. Johnson is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and of I. O. O. F., No. 248, Trenton. He has a well selected stock of dry goods, with annual sales amounting to $20,000; his card is Levi Johnson, dealer in dry goods, clothing, groceries, hats, caps, boots, shoes, and general merchandise, Huntsville, Ind.

GEORGE KEVER, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He was born June 12, 1838, in Warren County Ohio; he came to this county with his parents about the year 1845. He was educated in the common schools of the county, and has followed farming. Mr. Kever was married to Elizabeth J. Harris October 9, 1867; she was born February 2, 1848. They have two children living—Mary A., born October 11, 1870; and Pearl, March 11, 1873. He served in company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, and was honorably discharged from the service having participated in all the principal battles in which his regiment was engaged. He owns a good farm of eighty acres of land, is a Republican in politics, an ardent temperance man, and a gentleman whose honesty and sociability are appreciated by all who know him.

HENRY H. LASLEY, farmer, P. O. Winchester. He was born September 9, 1849, in this county. He was educated in the district schools of his native township; followed the occupation of an artist from the age of fifteen years, and has engaged in farming since March, 1871. He was married, March 12, 1871, to Margaret A. Smith, who was born April 20, 1851, in Butler County, Ohio. He and his wife are members of the M. E. Church, and are highly esteemed in good society. Mr. L. is a member of I. O. O. F., No. 248, Trenton, and is worthy of so noble an order. His father, Moses Lasley, was a native of the State of Ohio, where he was born in the year 1810; he came to this State in March, 1819, and is still living at this date; he is one of the substantial farmers of the county. Mr. Lasley has three children—Ida M., born October 3, 1872; Emma C., September 21, 1876, and Maud, August 9, 1880.

EPHRAIM LEE, farmer, P. O. Swain's Hill. This esteemed pioneer was born November 7, 1824, in this county. He was educated in the common schools of this and Wayne Counties. He was married, September 25, 1845, to Elizabeth J. Ledbetter, who was a native of North Carolina. His father, Samuel, was originally from Tennessee, where he was born about 1803; he came to this State in 1820, and deceased in the summer of 1827. The father of Mrs Lee, Wesley S. Ledbetter, was born in South Carolina, and settled in Wayne County, Ind., in the year 1829, where he deceased October, 1870. Mr. Lee and wife are worthy members of the Church of Friends; he is a Republican, and a successful farmer. Nine children blessed this parental union—William R., born August 7, 1846; Phebe A., November 6, 1848; Ezra S., June 19, 1851; Minus W., November 7, 1853; Arminta A., May 23, 1856; John H., April 3, 1859; Sophia B., June 22, 1861; Samuel M., September 19, 1863, and Lavinia J., March 12, 1867. Mr. and Mrs. Lee are a genial couple and a model pair in society.

WILLIAM R. LEE, farmer, P. O. Economy. This social farmer was born August 7, 1846, in this county, and was educated in its rural district schools. He was married, August 12, 1867, to Livitta Wright, who was born September 27, 1845, in this county. Four children blessed this union, of which number three are living—Lillie C., born December 29, 1869, deceased February 13, 1870; Thomas E., March 12, 1873; Sarah A., February 29, 1870, and William E., March 28, 1880. Mr. Lee and wife are worthy members of the M. E. Church, and are much esteemed. Mr. L. served in Company C, Ninth Indiana Cavalry, participating in numerous skirmishes before and during the campaign of Gen. Thomas against the rebel Gen. Hood. Mr. Lee is an energetic, industrious farmer, and owns a good farm of 142 acres of land. The father of Mrs. Lee was Hicks K. Wright, born October 12, 1812, in Maryland, and finally settled in this county about the year 1841; deceased April 16, 1875; he was a prominent citizen of the county, and is spoken of elsewhere in this work.

MINUS W. LEE is a son of Ephraim Lee, of West River Township; he was born in Wayne County November 7, 1855, and was reared in Randolph County from early boyhood; he was married, May 22, 1876, to Phebe E. Gaddis, who was born in this county February 6, 1855. They have had two children, one of which is living now. Its name is Roscoe H., and he was born December 23, 1876. The other child was born April 2, 1879; was named Lena A., and died August 17, 1880. Mr. Lee is a young man of great promise, and was nominated by the National Greenback party for Congressman in 1880; he carried the full strength of his party, but it was in the minority, and he was not elected; he chose the profession of law; was admitted to the bar and began practicing at Bluffton, Wells Co., Ind., where he is now successfully engaged in a lucrative business.

THOMAS J. McKEE, farmer, P. O. Trenton; he was born in Preble County, Ohio, March 7, 1830; he came to this county in the winter, 1875; he was educated in the common schools of Ohio, and has followed farming for a living. Mr. McKee was married, April 26, 1862, to Ruth A. Brown, who was also a native of Preble County, Ohio, and born there December, 1842. They have six children—Clement B., born September 7, 1864; William M., June 20, 1867; Erastus A., December 14, 1870; Frank C., April 10, 1873; Viola M., December 16, 1875, and Emma G., April 11, 1878; his father, John McKee, was born 1779, and deceased in Preble County, Ohio, August 29, 1846; he was of Irish descent, and held to the Presbyterian faith. William Brown, the father of Mrs. McKee, was a native of Pennsylvania, and born there January 26, 1795; he came to Ohio at twelve years of age, and deceased there January 7, 1859. Mr. McKee is a Democrat of the old school, and he and wife are worthy members of the United Brethren Church; he is an industrious farmer, and owns a valuable tract of 120 acres of land.

ABEL H. MANN, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He was born July 18, 1835, in the State of Ohio. He was educated in the common schools of his native State, and came to this county in November, 1856; he was united in marriage, September 17, 1857, to Jane York. She was born February 5, 1832. They had seven children, of which number six are living—Mary C., Mahala, Laura F., George O., Reuben L. and Phebe. Mr. Mann has filled the position of Corporation Trustee of Huntsville, and is an industrious farmer; he owns a farm of eighty acres of land, and is much interested in its cultivation. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of I. O. O. F., No. 248 Trenton Lodge. His father's name is Isaac Mann, a native of Ohio, and born July 2, 1804; he came to this county in 1856, deceased November 7, 1876, in this county. Mr. Mann is generally respected, and noted for his sympathy in every good work.

WILLIAM W. MILLER, merchant, Trenton. He was born December 19, 1853, in this county; he was educated in the common and graded schools of the county. He was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Anna Beeson, October 28, 1877; she was born January 21, 1857, in Wayne County, Ind. Mr. Miller has been a farmer in early boyhood, but is now engaged in merchandising; he owns a lot on which is erected his dwelling and store-house; he keeps a full line of fancy goods of the value of $3,000, with anual sales reaching $8,000. He and his estimable wife are members of the M. E. Church, and enthusiastic temperance workers. The father of Mr. Miller (Robert C.), was born in Ireland, December 11, 1827, came to this country in 1844, and deceased June 28, 1879. JOHN B. MILLS, farmer, P. O. Trenton. This esteemed citizen was born October 4, 1827, in Wayne County, Ind., and came to this county in the spring of 1856; he was educated in the common schools of Wayne County, and from boyhood has been a farmer. He was married, Jan. 29, 1847, to Jane Lock, who was born May 23, 1830; deceased Dec. 11, 1880. His father, Moses Mills, was a native of Tennessee, where he was born Dec. 4, 1787; he was one of the first settlers of Wayne County. His mother, Elizabeth Mills, formerly Hamburg, was also a native of Tennessee, and born there March 12, 1792; deceased June 1, 1877. Mr. Mills is a worthy member of the Wesleyan Church, and of Trenton Lodge, No. 248, I. O. O. F. He owns a good farm of eighty acres of land, is industrious and energetic for one of his age. His parents were of English descent, and of Quaker religious faith. Mr. Mills has four children living—Moses A., born November 15, 1851; Henry I., January 15, 1854; Austin F., January 20, 1861, and Neva M., March 28, 1872. The family is much respected in the community in which it resides.

LYDIA MAXWELL.

This amiable and honored woman, the mother of Charles W. Osborn, and daughter of Job and Rhoda Worth, was born in Guilford County, N. C., November 1, 1805. She is a sister of Daniel Worth, and the only living child of Job and Rhoda Worth. She came with her parents to Indiana in 1824. Her education was obtained from the common schools of North Carolina and Indiana. She was well educated for one of her time, and at the age of nineteen she began the profession of teaching; she continued teaching a portion of the time for five years, when she was married, to Isaiah Osborn June 24, 1829. They settled in Economy, an account of which is given in Isaiah's biography. At the death of her first husband, she was left with the care of eight children, but being a woman of rare executive ability, and untiring industry, she provided comfortably for her fatherless children, giving them an education above the average of those around them. She remained a widow until 1858, when she was united in marriage to David Maxwell, of Union County, Ind. She and her second husband lived in Union and Henry Counties until his death, which occurred in the spring of 1880, since which time Lydia has found a home with her son Charles, where she is comfortably situated, and all that loving hands can do is done for her comfort and happiness. Mrs. Maxwell has been a useful and honored member of the Society of Friends all her life. She had a varied and extensive experience during the dark days of slavery. She has a never-failing memory, and relates many interesting incidents in the protection of runaway slaves. She has lived the life of a devoted Christian, has been a loving wife and faithful mother; she is well preserved for one of her age, and bids fair for yet many years of usefulness.

OLIVER H. MILLSPAUGH, farmer, P. O. Swain's Hill. He was born July 20, 1831, in Clermont County, Ohio; he went with his parents to Shelby County, from thence to Fayette County, and finally settled in this county in the fall of 1864; he was educated in the district schools of Fayette County, Ind., and was married, the first time, to Mary J. Mundemore, who was born May, 1834, and deceased June 23, 1869. Six children blessed this union—Edwin G., born October 14, 1852; Eveline, October 4, 1855; Sarah A., October 8, 1858; John C., December 1, 1860; William T., October 23, 1862, and Nellie R., August 26, 1866. Mr. M. was married, the second time, March 2, 1871, to Phebe Maulsby, who was born August 24, 1834. One child blessed this union—Mary L., born August 9, 1872. Mr. Millspaugh is a member of the Baptist Church, and a Democrat of the old school; he owns a valuable farm of 230 acres of land, and is considered a reliable citizen; his father, Gilbert C., was originally from New York, where he was born August, 1806; deceased in 1859, in Grant County, Ind.

GEORGE MOORE, farmer, P. O. Unionsport. This worthy pioneer was born September 13, 1808, in the State of Delaware; he settled in Wayne County, Ind., in the fall of 1817, and from thence located in West River Township, this county, in the spring of 1840; he was educated in the common schools of Wayne County, and was united in marriage, June 6, 1831, to Mary Hiatt, who was a native of North Carolina, and born July 9, 1814. She is a worthy member of the Christian Church. These parents had six children, of which number five are living—Mahala, born September 28, 1832, deceased February, 1834; William A., May 22, 1834; Rachel, March 29, 1836; Martha, October 16, 1837; David W., December 13, 1839 (served in Company D, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Indiana Infantry), and Henry H., December 7, 1840 (served in the same organization with his brother). This worthy citizen owns a valuable tract of 200 acres of land, and for one of his age is very active.

JOHN MOYER.

John Moyer is a resident of West River Township; he was born in the State of Pennsylvania December 25, 1811, and resided there until about thirty-five years ago; he was educated in the German schools of his native State, and is very much like a Pennsylvania "Dutchman." He was married, January 31, 1837, to Catherine Hafer, who was also born in Berks County of the same State in the year 1818.

Mr. and Mrs. Moyer emigrated to the woods in Randolph County, Ind., about thirty-six years ago, where, by great industry and hard labor they have procured and improved a valuable farm. They have seen the growth of the country from a howling wilderness to a high state of improvement, with plenty and to spare.

These parents have been gifted with seven children, of which number four are living, viz., Mary., born May 31, 1842; Julia A., born August 10, 1844; Catherine, born September 25, 1847, and Martha, born October 11, 1852.

Mr. Moyer's deceased children were as follows: Henry, born November 23, 1839—he enlisted in Company D, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, and died March 10, 1863, while in the service, and was brought home for burial; he participated in all the battles of his regiment till his death. Another son, William R., was born January 25, 1850, and died September 23, 1851; and a daughter, Eliza E, born August 11, 1855, and deceased June 28, 1863.

Mr. and Mrs. Moyer are members of the Christian Church, and are peaceable and respected citizens.

The two older daughters were married December 23, 1869; the elder, to John Allison, a native of England, and the other, to William S. Stakebake, who was born in Preble County, Ohio, March 12, 1850.

Mr. Allison died August 1, 1877, and left his widow and daughter, Katie, who was born December 1, 1870.

Mr. and Mrs. Stakebake are the parents of three children, namely: John M., born December 19, 1870; Millicent, born April 23, 1875, and Morton B., born March 24, 1877.

Mr. Moyer's daughter, Catherine, was married, December 19, 1876, to Mr. Pharoah W. Brewer, a native of this county, and son of Nathan Brewer. By this union there is a son, J. Fraze Brewer, born November 28, 1878, and one, Arthur B. Brewer, born March 5, 1882.

Mr. Moyer's daughter Martha was married, December 24, 1874, to Mr. David W. Townsend, and they have a son—Orley V., born February 5, 1877.

ISAIAH OSBORN.

ISAIAH OSBORN, the father of C. W. Osborn, and son of Charles and Sarah Osborn, was born in Knox County, Tenn., November 25, 1803. He was the fourth of a family of sixteen children, of whom six are now living. Charles Osborn, the father of Isaiah, was born in Guilford County, N. C., in the year 1775, and Sarah Newman, his mother, was born in Virginia in the year 1773. After marriage, they settled in Tennessee, and while residents here, Charles became the founder of the Manumission Societies of Tennessee and North Carolina. As the name indicates, these societies were formed for the purpose of liberating slaves from bondage. They removed to Mount Pleasant, Ohio, about the year 1817, where Charles commenced the publication of a paper entitled The Philanthropist, the first anti-slavery paper published in America. This paper boldly advocated the immediate and unconditional emancipation of the slaves. It was ably edited, and though taking a step far beyond public sentiment, had its influence in the final consummation of the cause that brought it into existence.

Benjamin Lundy, who subsequently published an anti-slavery paper entitled the Genius of Universal Emancipation, was a disciple of Osborn.

Charles and his family moved to Indiana about the year 1819, and settled in Wayne County, where he entered land and laid out the town of Economy, where he lived until the year 1842, when he removed to Michigan, and from thence to Porter County, Ind., where he died in the year 1850. He was an honored member of the Society of Friends, and was recorded a minister of the Gospel about the year 1808. As a minister, he traveled extensively over the United States, and in the years 1832 and 1833, he visited the Continent of Europe for the purpose of proclaiming the Gospel.

Charles Osborn was a remarkable man, noted for his strong convictions on all public questions, especially that of slavery, when he stood almost alone, and uncompromising in principle. He saw from the beginning the true nature of the Colonization Society, and voted alone against merging the Manumission Society, which he had founded, into that of colonization, thus placing conditions on emancipation which should be unconditional. He was devoted to the church, but his firm stand on the slavery question cost him his position; believing that he was right, as God gave him to see the right, he yielded up his membership in the church rather than retract from the stand he had taken. He died full of the faith he had so long preached, and which had sustained him during a long, eventful and useful life.

Isaiah lived with his father until the year 1822, when he emigrated to Greenville, Tenn., and engaged to Benjamin Lundy as a printer on his anti-slavery paper. He returned to Indiana in the year 1824, and located at Centerville, Wayne County, where he continued to work at the printer's trade in the employ of John Scott. He remained here until the spring of 1827, when he removed to Indianapolis, and worked in the office of John Douglass in the same capacity. He remained here for one year, when he returned to Wayne County and entered eighty acres of land. He was married to Lydia Worth, daughter of Job and Rhoda Worth, of Randolph County, June 24, 1829. His wife, who is the only living child of Job Worth's family, is a woman of more than ordinary abililty, and was eminently fitted to be the wife of the honored subject of this sketch. After marriage, they settled in Economy, where they remained for four years, Isaiah serving as Justice of the Peace during the entire time. They then moved on a farm situated one mile northeast of Economy, where they remained until the death of Isaiah, which occurred June 16, 1846. Mr. and Mrs. Osborn were the parents of eight children, of whom four are now living. Two of their children reside in Randolph County, one in Wayne County and the other in Henry County, this State. They were both acceptable and useful members of the Society of Friends, and remained so all of their lives. Isaiah entertained a strong anti-slavery sentiment from his youth, was a fine business man and had extensive experience in public life, of unquestioned integrity, and beloved by all who knew him. He had strong convictions for the right on all questions, and dared maintain them. He was particularly qualified for usefulness in either church or state, and, it may be truly said, he lived up to the full measure of his ability, and died honored and respected by all who knew him.

CHARLES W. OSBORN.

Charles Worth Osborn, son of Isaiah and Lydia Osborn, was born in Economy, Wayne Co., Ind., February 8, 1833. He is the second of a family of eight children, of whom four are now living. His boyhood was uneventful up to the death of his father, which occurred when he was thirteen years of age. After this sad affliction, the responsibility of the care of the farm rested principally upon Charles' shoulders. Although young in years, he was ripe in experience, and he was indeed a great stay to his mother in managing the farm and raising the family.

His education was principally confined to the common district schools. He attended the Union Literary Institute of this county in the year 1853. He also attended Antioch College for six months in the fall of 1856, and winter of 1857. His education was obtained at great sacrifice, having to work his way through. While attending the Literary Institute, a kind of agricultural institution, he paid his own way, and also that of a sister, by working on and superintending the farm connected with the institution. It is needless to state that in all of this work, Charles made the most of his advantages, was of untiring industry and succeeded in obtaining an education above that of the average young men of his time.

He began teaching school in the fall of 1854, and continued teaching during the winter, until 1866, with the exception of the fall and winter of his attendance at Antioch College. During the summer months he was generally engaged in farming. As a teacher, Charles was eminently successful, being a young man of more than ordinary energy and of unquestioned moral character. He was a living example to his pupils of purity of life and Christian deportment. He was especially adapted to the profession of teaching, and, after nearly twelve years of faithful work in the school-room, left the profession with many regrets. He not only attempted to train the minds of his pupils, but their hearts as well.

He was married to Asenith W. Wood, daughter of Jacob and Phœbe Wood, of Henry County, Ind., March 25, 1858. After marriage, he settled on his father's old homestead, in Wayne County, where he remained until the spring of 1860, when he removed to the farm where he now resides. He purchased this farm in 1857, and it consisted of fifty-three acres, with about twenty under cultivation. He now has sixty acres, fifty of which are under a high state of cultivation. He is comfortably situated, farm in good repair and provided with convenient and commodious buildings.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborn are the parents of six children, three of whom are now living—Arthur W., born January 7, 1859; Daniel W., October 19, 1860; Laura C., born June 4, 1865, deceased January 26, 1877; Edgar C., born October 25, 1872, deceased October 7, 1874; Carrie, born June 23, 1876, and deceased the same date, and William E., born June 23, 1876. Mr. and Mrs. Osborn have been active and useful members of the Society of Friends all of their lives. Charles was recorded a minister of this church in 1876, and his services in this capacity have been highly acceptable. He has been a strong advocate of the temperance cause for years, and has done much to mould public sentiment in favor of prohibition. He has acted as Superintendent of the Sabbath school at Economy continuously for ten years. He is a Republican in political preferment, and has always been anti-slavery in sentiment. Charles Osborn is a useful man in the community in which he lives. He is well qualified to serve in any capacity to which he may be called. He is systematical in all of his transactions and honest in all of his dealings.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborn lead a quiet and happy life, surrounded by loving and obedient children, endeavoring to make all around them better and happier by their presence. They are honored members of the church and society, and it is to be hoped that they will have many years of usefulness yet to come.

JOHN W. PRICE, farmer, P. O. Economy; he was born July 4, 1834, in Wayne County, and was educated in its common schools; he was united in marriage, October 1, 1857, to Jane Shugart, who was a native of Wayne County, Ind., and born June 15, 1838. This union was blessed with three children —Eva L., born January 20, 1859; William E., March 15, 1862, and George O., May 17, 1872; he and his family are worthy members of the M. E. Church; his father, William Price, was a native of North Carolina, born October 20, 1804; came to Wayne County, Ind., about the year 1817. Still living, at this date, his wife, originally Jane Massey, was a native of South Carolina, born 1808, deceased about the year 1869. Mr. Price is an energetic farmer and enjoys the confidence of his neighbors.

DAVID F. PURSLEY, farmer, P. O. Trenton. This farmer and soldier was born July 10, 1839, in this county; he was married, September, 1866, to Jane Clevenger, who was born February 26, 1850. They have three children —Franklin C., born May 1, 1868; William C., November 18, 1870, and Frederick E., May, 1876. Mr. P. had but little advantage of school and has followed farming; he early espoused the Union cause and enlisted in Company C, Nineteenth Indiana Infantry, serving through the war. The Nineteenth was assigned to the "Iron Brigade," of the Army of the Potomac, and Mr. Pursley participated in all the battles of that grand old organization; he was severely wounded in the left hip and wrist at the bloody battle of Antietam; he had three brothers in the war—Lafayette and Aleazer, who served in Company C, Nineteenth Indiana, and James M., who served in Company A, Eighty-fourth Indiana; his father's name was James M. Pursley, who was originally from Virginia, where he was born about the year 1805; deceased in this county, 1865; his wife's father's name was James M. Clevenger, who was a native of this State, born in the year 1828; deceased at Indianapolis, Ind., August, 1880. Mr. Pursley stands high in the community in which he lives.

ANNA RETZ, farming, P. O. Economy, was born September 23, 1820, in this county. She was educated in the common schools near where she has resided for over a half century; her maiden name was Zimmerman, and she was married, November 20, 1834, to John Retz, who was born July 30, 1810, in Germany; he came to this county in 1833, deceased August 4, 1876. Mrs. Retz is the mother of thirteen children, of which number seven are living. The living are Catharine, born August 23, 1837; Lewis W., December 16, 1844; Sarah, December 23, 1846; John W., December 11, 1847; Michael A., August 14, 1853; Mary C., January 29, 1855, and David, May 21, 1859. The deceased are Henry, born October 23, 1838, died October 28, 1838; William, January 23, 1843, died December 8, 1844; Daniel, January 15, 1850, died October 9, 1851; Charles, November 15, 1839, died October 8, 1858; Martha J., January 21, 1857, died October 21, 1858, and James Mc, December 18, 1862, died February 21, 1863. Mrs. Retz owns a valuable farm of 160 acres of land, is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and deserves much praise for rearing her large family and keeping them together.

JOSHUA J. SHEPPARD.

Joshua Johnson Sheppard, the son of William and Jane Sheppard, was born in Frederick County, Va., March 6, 1823. He is the seventh of a family of twelve children, of whom five are now living. His father was born in Pennsylvania February 23, 1791, and his mother in Virginia September 2, 1814. His parents settled in Virginia, where they remained until October, 1843, when they removed to this county and settled near Huntsville upon a farm rented of John Harris. They remained residents of this county until their deaths. His father died November 15, 1851, and his mother April 15, 1863.

The subject of this sketch was twenty-one years of age when he removed with his parents to this county. He continued with his father on the farm for one year afterward, when he was united in marriage with Martha Jane Paschall, daughter of Jesse Z. and Jane Paschall, of this county, December 5, 1844.

His education was limited to the insignificant subscription schools of Virginia. Notwithstanding the imperfection of these schools, he obtained a fair common-school education sufficient to transact all of his business. After marriage, he settled upon his father-in-law's farm and remained about two years, when he leased 160 acres of land three-quarters of a mile southeast of Huntsville, and remained one year. He then purchased forty acres of the farm of which he is now owner and proprietor. This tract was in the forest with no improvements, and he devoted his energies to the development of a farm. He now owns 160 acres of excellent land of which 120 acres are in a good state of cultivation. His farm consists of two eighty acre tracts separated by a forty. It is conveniently located, gently rolling, and is very productive. His farm buildings are both commodious and convenient; he has recently erected a most excellent farmhouse of modern architecture, two stories in height, situated on a beautiful eminence and facing to the west. It contains nine commodious rooms, and is tastefully furnished. His farm being well adapted to raising stock as well as grain, he gives increased attention to the production of corn and hogs; he has also given especial attention to underdraining, having no less than 1,500 rods of tiling, ranging from two and one-half to eight inches.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard are the parents of seven children. They also have an adopted daughter. They have been peculiarly unfortunate in the loss of their children by death, being called upon to mourn the demise of five. The following are the names, dates of the births and deaths of their children: William Z., born October 1, 1845, and died May 2, 1864; Oscar J., born August 3, 1847, and died August 20, 1856; James O., born August 3, 1847, and died August 15, 1847; Louisa J., born March 17, 1850, and died August 26, 1856; Julian H., born April 9, 1853; Emma M., born June 30, 1857, and died December 9, 1858; Marcellus C., born January 22, 1860; Minnie S. (the adopted daughter), born February 15, 1864.

His two living sons are married and live on their father's farm, which they cultivate in addition to forty acres which they together own.

His son, William Z., enlisted in the army December 25, 1863, in the Ninth Indiana Cavalry, Company D. He never left the camp at Indianapolis, but was taken sick and died in the hospital at that place of diphtheria.

Mr. Sheppard and daughter, Minnie, are acceptable members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Sheppard is an honored and active member of the I. O. O. F.; he belongs to Trenton Lodge, No. 248, and White River Encampment, No. 50. He has been a member of the Grand Lodge since 1870; he has passed the chairs of the subordinate lodge twice, and was District Deputy Grand Master eight years in succession. His sons are also worthy members of the same order. Mr. Sheppard has always been a stanch and active Republican, and he has done much to advance the interest of the party. While living in the South, he was uncompromisingly opposed to the institution of slavery, having formed a bitter hatred for it very early in life.

MARTHA JANE SHEPPARD, wife of Joshua J. Sheppard, and daughter of Jesse Z. and Jane Paschall, was born in Warren County, Ohio, October 31, 1821. She is the second of a family of nine children, of whom seven are now living. Her father was born in Pennsylvania November 28, 1794, and her mother in the same State October 12, 1802. They removed to this State and settled in this county about the year 1836. Her mother died in this county July 21, 1844, aged forty-one years nine months and twenty-one days. Her father died January 11, 1865, aged seventy years two months and fourteen days. Martha spent her youthful days upon the farm. Her experience in toils and hardships was about the same as that of most pioneer daughters. However, in addition to the various household duties of those times, she spent a large portion of her time serving as a hand upon the farm. Her education is very meager, having, comparatively speaking, no opportunities for attending school. She has always been industrious and frugal, and has been a helpmate indeed to her husband through all the years of their married life. Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard are quiet unassuming people, industrious and frugal. They are well situated in life, being surrounded by all that is necessary to make them happy.

JAMES STEVENSON.

James Stevenson, the son of George and Charlotte W. Stevenson, was born in Warren County, Ohio, September 25, 1847. He is the fourth of a family of seven children, of whom five are now living. His father was born in Warren County, Ohio, July 31, 1818. His parents moved to Randolph County in 1853, and settled two and three-quarters miles west of Bloomingsport on a farm of 220 acres. James passed his youthful days upon this farm until he was twenty-one years of age, rendering assistance in clearing a homestead.

His education was obtained from the district schools of this township, and through his efforts and meager advantages, he succeeded in acquiring a fair business education. After he was twenty-one, he hired out by the month as a farm laborer for one season, when he and his brother William rented a farm in partnership. This partnership continued for three years, when James was married to Elizabeth M. Davisson, daughter of Ira and Catherine Davisson, of Randolph County, August 15, 1872. His wife was born July 11, 1849. Her father was a native of North Carolina, and her mother of New Jersey. They moved to Randolph County very early in life, her father being ten and mother about seven years of age.

After marriage, James settled on a farm three miles south of Winchester, where he lived for one year. He then bought the farm upon which he now resides. It consists of eighty acres, with fifty-five under cultivation.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson are the parents of three interesting children, two of whom are now living—George, born March 22, 1873, and deceased September 22, 1873; Elza D., born November 23, 1874; Mary, born July 23, 1878.

In political preferments Mr. Stevenson has always been a Republican, and has always manifested a deep interest in the welfare of the party. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson are both industrious and frugal, kind neighbors and honored members of society.

CHARLES M. STEVENSON, whose portrait accompanied by that of his estimable lady are in this volume with a view of their pleasant home in West River Township, is a farmer and stock-raiser. He is a permanent resident of the county, and is interested in aiding to build up the country where he has chosen his home. He has surrounded himself with all the comforts of life, and erected for the habitation of his family a handsome and convenient dwelling, with all the appurtenances for the enjoyment of life. He has also made ample provision for the protection of his stock, and the care and preservation of his farm products. Although comparatively a young man, yet he has given proof of enterprising energy and permanent prosperity. Mr. Stevenson was born November 29, 1840, in Clinton County, in the State of Ohio, where he resided with his parents till he was six years old, when his father went to Warren County in search of a home, but remained only a short time. In the year 1847, the elder Mr. Stevenson with family, came to the forests of Randolph, where the subject of this sketch has resided ever since. Having come here when the country was mostly woods, he realizes what the woodman's ax has done when he casts about and sees the fertile fields, the great highways, hillsides covered with all kinds of domestic animals, and scores of elegant abodes in one glance, which he once saw a howling wilderness. His youth was spent as all the youths of the pioneers had to undergo, in hard work and deprivations, which the youth nowadays cannot realize. Mr. Stevenson was educated in the public schools of this county. They were not as they are now—equal to academies—but were of short sessions in winter time, not exceeding three months each year. And he can look back and see the old log cabin and the long, backless benches, and the inclined board projected from the wall, and think of his happy school-boy days that floated by, while the worried teacher looked grave, and kept in his reach the powerful persuader with which he often made impressions. Mr. Stevenson has been married twice. His first marriage took place in January, 1868. He was then married to Mary A. Cox, who was a native of this county, and was born on the 9th day of July, 1842. By this union there was one child, named Charity E., who was born July 4, 1869. Mrs. Stevenson died January 20, 1870. Mr. Stevenson, after having battled life alone for a year and three-fourths, contracted a second marriage with Emily A. Haynes, and the event was celebrated on the 21st day of September, 1871. Mrs. Stevenson was born in this county October 25, 1849, and is familiar with pioneer life. She was educated in the common schools, and is an estimable lady. She is a daughter of Jesse G. Haynes, and a grand-daughter of Stephen Haynes, who are mentioned elsewhere in this work. Her mother's maiden was Matilda Cropper; she was a daughter of Bela Cropper, an old pioneer. Since their union Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson have had four accessions to their family, viz.: James E., born September 6, 1872; Mary A., born September 7, 1874; Edna L., born March 22, 1876, and Laura M., born March 28, 1879. Mr. Stevenson's father's name was Clayton Stevenson. He was born in Warren County, Ohio, July 19, 1816. He was a farmer all his life, and a hard working man. He was a man of strong prejudices, of Scotch descent, and an early Abolitionist. He cast his religious faith with the Society of Friends. He was averse to the use of tobacco in any form. He once informed the writer that he could smell the smoke of a pipe or cigar along a highway, two hours after any one had passed along smoking. He could not bear the sight of tobacco at all. He had a horrid fear of fire; he usually put it all out before retiring at night, or leaving the house alone; he kept a wire door to close up the fire-place, which he never failed to close if he left the room for any length of time. The subject of this sketch is a member of F. & A. M., Lodge No. 367, Trenton, Ind. He owns a farm of 160 acres in a high state of cultivation with the improvements, of which the accompanying view is an exact representation.

CHARLES M. STINE, farmer, P. O. Winchester. He was born February 23, 1841, in Darke County, Ohio, and came here in the year 1842. He was educated in the common schools of this county, and has followed farming from boyhood. He was united in marriage to Mary A. Hill July 18, 1864. They have one child—Clara R., born September 18, 1868. Mr. Stine served in Company E, Eighth Indiana, participating in the battle of Rich Mountain, Va., and, upon being discharged, re-enlisted in Company C, Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, and was severely wounded in the right lung at Richmond, Ky. He was compelled to leave the army on that account. His father's name was James W. Stine, born in the year 1812, in the State of New Jersey, and deceased October 8, 1876, in this county. The family is of Dutch descent, and one of good standing in society. He and his worthy wife are faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are universally respected by their neighbors.

WILLIAM G. WRIGHT, farmer, P. O. Economy. This successful farmer was born January 16, 1838, in Wayne County, Ind. He settled in this county in the spring of 1843, and was educated in its district common schools. He was united in marriage to Catharine Grubbs, who was born April 29, 1837, in this county. They have four children—John W., born October 18, 1858; Hicks K., August 18, 1860; Sarah, March 12, 1865, and Martha J., August 3, 1868. Hicks K. Wright, the father of the subject of this sketch, was a native of the State of Maryland, and born October 12, 1812; he came to this county with his family in 1843. He served the people as County Commissioner for a number of years, and was noted for his ability and integrity. He deceased April 16, 1875; his wife, originally Sarah Stevens, was born January 30, 1812, in Maryland, and deceased in August, 1874. Mr. Wright is a Republican in politics, owns a valuable farm of 478 acres of land, and is universally esteemed.

REV. DANIEL WORTH.

Prominent among the early settlers of Randolph County was Daniel Worth, a man of more than ordinary ability, and a leader in anti-slavery, temperance and other reforms of his time. He early espoused the cause of anti-slavery, and devoted most of his time for more than twenty years to advocating it with a zeal and power, through suffering and imprisonment, that gave him a national reputation. His life stands out as a beacon light upon life's highway, showing that the path of duty leads to honor and distinction. Daniel Worth, the son of Job and Rhoda Worth, was born in Guilford County, N. C., May 3, 1795. He was the fourth of a family of ten children, of whom but one is now living. Job Worth, the father of Daniel, was born on the Island of Nantucket July 11, 1764. His mother was the daughter of Joseph and Mary Macy, and was born on the same Island December 26, 1769. The removed with their parents and settled in Guilford County, N. C., in the year 1770. Job Worth and Rhoda Macy were married about the year 1788, and continued to reside in Guilford County till the spring of 1822, when they removed to the western part of Indiana, where Job Worth died, September 30, 1822. After the death of her husband, Rhoda, with her three children, settled in the southern part of Randolph County, where she resided till her death, which occurred February 27, 1837. Daniel lived with his parents in North Carolina till he was twenty-one years of age. His educational advantages were very meager, but were the best the schools then afforded. Notwithstanding the inefficiency of the schools, he, by his perseverance and untiring energy, obtained a fair education. He not only obtained knowledge from the books he read, but was a close observer of human nature, and gained much knowledge from association with his fellow-men, which fitted him for a public teacher. He was married, March 5, 1818, to Elizabeth Swaim; she was the daughter of Joshua and Sarah (Elliott) Swaim, of Randolph County, N. C., and was born January 27, 1798.

After marriage, he settled on a farm in Guilford County, and remained about four years, when he removed to Indiana, and, after spending the summer on the Wabash, in the western part of the State, where he lost two children by death, he settled in the southern part of Randolph County in the spring of 1823, where he purchased eighty acres of land, on which he resided till the fall of 1850. In 1824, he was elected a member of the State Legislature, and for seven years was a member of the Senate and House of Representatives. About the year 1831, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, but severed his connection with that church in 1842, on account of its complicity with slavery, and assisted in organizing the Wesleyan Methodist Church, which would not fellowship slave-holders. He was licensed to preach in September, 1843, and was ordained an Elder in a Conference at Cincinnati, the following September. The greater portion of his time, from 1842 to 1850, was devoted to lecturing on the subjects of temperance and anti-slavery, and preaching, principally in Eastern Indiana.

In the fall of 1850, he left the farm and removed to Ohio, where he first located at Troy, taking charge of a church there. From Troy, he went to Wilmington; from Wilmington to Felicity, and from thence to Ripley. At all those places he was pastor of churches. After remaining in Ohio for six years, he returned to Indiana, locating at Carthage, and filling pulpits in various parts of the State. His denomination had planted some churches in the State of North Carolina. Three different ministers had been sent there to take charge of these churches, but each one of them in turn had been driven away by mob violence. It was thought that as Worth was a native of North Carolina, had spent his early manhood there, and as he and his wife had many relatives and friends there, that his presence would at least be less obnoxious than his unfortunate brethren. Circumstances seemed thus to point him out as the one to occupy this hitherto dangerous field. So, in the fall of 1857, in company with his invalid wife and unmarried daughter, he took his life in his hand, as it were, and returned to his native State to preach the Gospel of his Master. This he was permitted to do unmolested till the fall of 1859, when the South became excited and alarmed over John Brown's attempt to free the slaves of Virginia and other causes. In addition to preaching, Daniel Worth had been disseminating some anti-slavery literature. He had sold several copies of Helper's "Impending Crisis;" and for selling and circulating this incendiary document, he was arrested by the Sheriff of Guilford County, on the 23d of December, 1859. He had a preliminary trial in the presence of a large and excited crowd, in which he defended himself, arguing that slavery was an evil and that it was his duty as a minister to preach against it. He was bound over to court and held to bail in the sum of $5,000 for his appearance and a like sum to keep the peace. His friends would have furnished the bail, but he was liable to arrest on similar charges, and taken before a Judge who would not admit him to bail; and besides the mob was thirsting for his blood in case he was released. A dispatch to the New York Herald, of December 30, says: "I was glad to see that mob violence was not exercised on him." Another correspondent in the same paper says: "At the close of the examination, remarks were made by Ralph Gorrell, Esq., and Robert P. Dick, Esq., to the effect that the public mind was much excited by this examination, and that threats had been made as to a disposition of the prisoner, but that they would recommend the people to let the law have its course." The same correspondent thus describes Worth's appearance and demeanor in the presence of the above-described surroundings:

"The Rev. Daniel Worth is a large, portly man, with a fine head, an intellectual and expressive countenance, and a large, commanding eye. He is fluent in speech, and the general style and manner of his speaking are calculated to win attention. He did not appear to be at all embarrassed or frightened at his position, but, on the contrary, expressed his ideas and opinions with boldness and fearlessness." He was remanded to jail, where he lay for four months in a cold, filthy, uncomfortable building, awaiting trial. However, his friends were allowed to take him bedding and make him as comfortable as they could under the circumstances. He was first tried in Randolph County, where an indictment had been found against him for selling copies of the same book. He was found guilty and sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment in the county jail, the additional punishment of whipping, which was at the discretion of the court, being omitted. His second trial was held shortly after in the court of Guilford County, with the same penalty as the result. In the meantime, a third indictment was found against him in the Randolph Court for incendiary language in the pulpit. He appealed the two cases that had been decided against him to the Supreme Court, and was held to bail in the sum of $1,000 in each, and the same amount in the case pending. Being convinced that he could not obtain justice in the courts, he resolved, if possible, to leave the State. He knew that his enemies were watching him and guarding every avenue of escape should he give bail; but his friends arranged the matter so quietly that he was beyond the limits of the State before they knew of his release. The bonds were signed late in the evening, and he placed in a close carriage with two friends, one a slaveholder, well-armed (without his knowledge, however), and driven over unfrequented roads in a direction unexpected by his enemies. The following day was a drizzling one and but few people on the road, and they were not recognized by any one, and they succeeded in putting him on a train in Virginia, when he was soon north of Mason and Dixon's line. He now made a lecture tour through the Eastern and Northern States, reciting his prison experience, and firing the people against the institution of slavery, the object and spirit of which he so well knew by bitter experience. His friends of the North generously contributed the amount necessary to enable him to reimburse his bondsmen of the South. The bail bonds and costs amounted to nearly $4,000. The spring following his return to North Carolina, the wife of his youth died. She passed away May 12, 1858. He was united in a second marriage to Huldah Cude, a widowed sister to his former wife, May 19, 1859, who is still living and resides in Fountain City. At the close of his lecture tour, Worth returned to Indiana, where he was joined by his wife. They spent the summer of 1862 in visiting their children and friends in Iowa, after which they returned and settled in Fountain City, Wayne Co., Ind., where they remained till his death, which occurred December 12, 1862. Fountain City was the place where he had many times met in council with the friends of freedom; and it seems meet that this should be the place where his labors should close, and that he should be laid to rest by the side of H. P. Bennett, Benjamin Stanton, Daniel Pucket and others who stood beside him in the times that tried men's souls.

Daniel Worth was the father of eight children, only one of whom is now living—Emily Yard, who resides in Iowa. His son William, the only son who reached his majority, enlisted during the late war in the Thirty-ninth Iowa Regiment, but died in camp before the regiment left the State. William left one son, Charles Sumner Worth, the only descendant of Daniel's bearing the name of Worth.

Daniel Worth held the office of Justice of the Peace in this county for a number of years, as he also did in North Carolina before emigrating to this State. As a public officer, he manifested the same bold and fearless spirit that characterized his life, doing his duty regardless of consequences. His dress and manners were plain and simple. He canvassed the State for years in the interest of freedom, riding on horseback, clad in a suit manufactured, cut and made by his wife and daughters. In person, he was tall, measuring six feet and four inches in height, and in his old age reached the great weight of 300 pounds. He was a fine speaker and a good debater, being fluent in language, logical, sarcastic, abounding in wit, and never wanting an anecdote to illustrate his point. He had rare conversational powers, which drew persons around him at all gatherings.

FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

Franklin Township is located in the northern part of the county, being the smallest in extent of territory, as also the latest in formation. The township embraces twenty-four square miles, being six miles long by four miles wide. Franklin Township lies in the valley of the Mississinewa River, on both sides of that stream, the river dividing it into two unequal parts. As to surface, the township is mostly rolling, though in some portions inclined to be level.

It lies in Township 21 north, Range 13 east, embracing four miles wide of the east side of that township, and Sections 1 to 4, 9 to 16, 21 to 28 and 33 to 36. The streams of water in the township are the Mississinewa, in the north part, flowing westward; Day's Creek, entering the Mississinewa on the north, and Bear Creek on the south. Day's Creek comes from Jay County, and Bear Creek from White River Township. Mississinewa River is in this portion of its course a large and important stream, serving a good purpose for water power. Bear Creek is of considerable size, and in early times was utilized to some extent, though latterly it has been suffered to be unimproved for the most part.

The twelve mile boundary passes nearly through the center of the township, the angle of the boundary lying a little north of Ridgeville. Beginning at Fort Recovery it proceeds in a direct line to a point near Ridgeville, twelve miles west of the old or Wayne's boundary; then changing its course it extends to the Ohio River in a line parallel to the old boundary, and twelve miles distant therefrom. Franklin Township thus is seen to have been at first, so to speak, the outmost corner of civilization in this direction.

Like the rest of the county, this part of Randolph was covered with a heavy growth of deciduous timber of many kinds, among which oak, sugar maple and walnut were prominent. Many of the early pioneers made great quantities of sugar from their maple orchards in those original days, and though some things may have been scarce, "sweetening" was not. Deer, bears, wolves, etc., were plentiful, as were also turkeys, squirrels and all the animals of various kinds common to the climate and region, and hunters found the Mississinewa valley a very paradise for them. One of the first settlers killed six deer and wounded a seventh before ordinary breakfast time.

The first settlement in Franklin was made in 1817 by Meshach Lewallyn, an elderly man with a large family. The great body of the township remained a wilderness for many years afterward. A few settlers, however, made a location upon the river in the neighborhood, Mr. Lewallyn as just stated, in 1817, and Joab Ward in 1819.

Mr. Lewallyn about 1819 built a mill on the river, which has been a noted point ever since that day. The Mississinewa was in time of flood navigable for flat-boats to Lewallyn's mill, and not much above.

This place became the nearest point of connection between the settlements in Wayne County and the Wabash Valley, and for many years produce in large quantities was brought through the wilderness to Lewallyn's mill, and Joab Ward built boats and sold them to the produce owners to float it down the river into the Wabash Valley. Many curious and some dangerous advenutres occurred in connection with that old-time navigation down the booming Mississinewa during the spring flood upon the stream. In the reminiscences of Thomas Ward, Burkett Pierce, Arthur McKew, Edward Edger, William Robinson, etc., may be found statements concerning the matter, to which the reader is referred for more detailed information.

The Indians were yet residents of the region, and some tragic occurrences took place near Ridgeville. Fleming was shot and wounded near Joab Ward's, and killed at Meshach Lewallyn's, though not by him nor any of his family. Shadrach Lewallyn, one of Meshach's sons, shot and killed an Indian, and the natives were greatly enraged and made threats of vengeance. They were, however, quieted by the pacific efforts of Meshach Lewallyn, as also of David Connor, the Indian trader, who, though a rough and wild man himself, had yet a great influence over the savage red men of the forest; and he often employed it in the interest of peace and order, insomuch that he was, in solemn state and with imposing ceremony, according to their custom in such matters, installed a chieftain among the Miamis.

The early entries of land appear to have been the following: Meshach Lewallyn, parts of 1 and 12, 21, 13, July 19, 1817; Solomon Hornley, E. N. E. 13, 21, 13, December 11, 1817; John Armstrong, fractional 11 and 14, 21, 13, June 29, 1818; Benjamin Berry, N. W. fractional 11, 21, 13, January 29, 1824; James Addington, W. S. E. 10, 21, 13, September 20, 1828; David Hammer, W. N. E. 10, 21, 13, September 20, 1828; Francis Stephens, E. N. E. 9, 21, 13, May 1, 1830; Francis Stephens, W. N. E. 9, 21, 13, May 11, 1830; Burkett Pierce, W. N. W. 10, 21, 13, May 16, 1830; William Dembin, E. N. E. 10, 21, 13, August 21, 1830; William and Thomas Ward, in Section 11, 21, 13, August 6, 1831; Ezekiel Roe, in Section 3, 21, 13, November 12, 1831; Edward McKew, in Section 10, 21, 13, March 17, 1832; James Addington, in Section 10, 21, 13, March 17, 1832; George Meek, in Section 3, 21, 13, March 31, 1832; George Meek, in Section 3, 21, 13, March 31, 1832; John Addington, in Section 10, 21, 13, April 28, 1832; Abram Renbarger, in Section 11, 21, 13, July 18, 1832; James Stephens, in Section 10, 21, 13, February 16, 1833; Edward McKew, in Section 12, 21, 13, March 22, 1833; Sebastian Brunnengast, in Section 12, 21, 13, May 11, 1833; Jacob Winegartner, in Section 9, 21, 13, May 18, 1833; William R. Merine, 17, 21, 13, September 7, 1833; James Stephens, in Section 10, 21, 13, October 12, 1833; David Miller, in Section 9, 21, 13, November 21, 1833; Joseph Tulley, in Section 9, 21, 13, December 21, 1833; Randolph Hughes, in Section 4, 21, 13, March 11, 1834; John McNees, in Section 35, 21, 13, April 7, 1834; Thomas Green, in Section 26, 21, 13, April 7, 1834; Thomas Addington, in Section 26, 21, 13, May 27, 1834; John Willson, in Section 11, 21, 13, June 10, 1834; Andrew Stephens, in Section 4, 21, 13, June 10, 1834; Thomas Green, in Section 27, 21, 13, June 12, 1834; Jesse Addington, in Section 22, 21, 13, June 25, 1834; Andrew Stephens, in Section 9, 21, 13, July 7, 1834; Andrew Stephens, in Section 9, 21, 13, July 7, 1834; David H. Brown, in Section 30, 21, 13, July 7, 1834; David H. Brown, in Section 30, 21, 13, April 15, 1835; Seth Elliot, in Section 27, 21, 13, January 24, 1835; Joel Ward, in Section 12, 21, 13, April 20, 1835; James Addington, in Section 34, 21, 13, April 25, 1835; Joseph Addington, in Section 34, 21, 13, August 12, 1835; Thomas Addington, in Section 35, 21, 13, August 19, 1835; John Culp, in Section 24, 21, 13, October 5, 1835; Pardon Sherman, in Section 35, 21, 13, June 13, 1836.

Joab Ward, who came to Ridgeville in 1819, bought land on credit of Mr. Lewallyn; and for ten years those pioneers were literally in the woods, cut off from their fellow-countrymen, and dwelling far amidst the mighty forests. The next settlers after the Lewallyns and the Wards, were, so far as now known, James Addington and David Hammer, who entered, and, it is to be presumed, settled upon Section 10, about two miles west of Ridgeville and on the river.

An interesting incident is related (perhaps by Temple Smith) of a wedding at Meshach Lewallyn's, at which the groom and bride were a young Hammer and a daughter of Lewallyn's; and at the nuptial dinner the male guests attended dressed in buckskin breeches and hunting shirts and leather belts, with huge knives in their belts; and one of the "white braves" carved the turkey with a hunting knife taken from the belt round his waist. Rough times these would seem to have been, yet these people were upright, civilized American citizens; and, in such families dwelling in the forest thus, were trained such quiet, peaceful, cultured gentlemen as Hon. Thowas Ward and Arthur McKew, Thomas W. Kizer, Esq., and many others like them, who are at once the ornament and delight of the later cultivated and polished society of the present day.

We are unable to follow the course of settlement further with any certainty. About 1830, the current of emigration began to set with a slight force in that direction, which grew still stronger in 1832 and 1833, and from that time and onward till 1838 the township came to be filled with occupants, at least the land was by that time almost wholly entered. Not much needs to be said as to early efforts in the line of education and religion. The usual "woods schools" in the greased-paper log cabin were established in these forest nooks also.

Hon. Thomas Ward, now a gentleman of intelligence and distinction, and of high culture as well, got all his schooling in one of these old-fashioned seminaries; and such facts connected with the lives of our distinguished men may well put to shame thousands of our younger citizens, who, notwithstanding the boasted modern advantages a thousand-fold more showy and costly than those old time slab-seated puncheon-floored structures, have, nevertheless, failed to approve themselves men after the model of the backwoods times; and it may well raise a wonder whether, after all, some serious defect may not exist in our magnificent system of public education, failing, as many believe it to do, to develop the strong individual manhood and womanhood of the subjects of its training.

As to religion, noble souls and pious hearts found a dwelling place in those outposts, and the Gospel Shepherd sought out, the stray sheep in the wilderness, giving to them the needed care and comfort. And what was thus sown has proved to be good seed cast into a fruitful soil, which has in these latter years, brought forth thirty, sixty and a hundredfold.

The mineral advantages are found in its beds of lime rock, which between Deerfield and Ridgeville have been utilized for burning lime, and its banks of gravel which have, however, been suffered strangely enough to be useless till within a year or two past. The people are now waking up to the mine of value that lies in their gravel banks, and are rapidly constructing pikes in various directions; and in a few more years the citizens will wonder how they could have been content to drag through the impassable seas and oceans of mud in which for forty years past they had been helplessly floundering and hopelessly engulfed. Franklin is so small, and Ridgeville is so central, that there seems to have been no call for any other town to grow up within its limits. At any rate, no other has ever found place in that neighborhood.

The roads through Franklin are chiefly the route from Winchester to Ridgeville and northward, and the route from Greenville via Deerfield and Ridgeville into Delaware County. The railroads are the Richmond & Grand Rapids Road and the Union City & Logansport Road, crossing at Ridgeville, thus making that town an important center of trade, and furnishing to the township a good market and abundant commercial facilities.

Some twelve or fourteen years ago, the Free-Will Baptists, in connection with leading citizens of the place and region, established Ridgeville College, which has ever since been maintaining a heroic, and moreover a successful struggle for existence. Arthur McKew, Esq., of Ridgeville, not to mention others, is understood to have given at various times $11,000 to its funds. Ezekiel Clough, of Jackson Township, has contributed many thousand dollars to the same excellent purpose.

The township is occupied by an intelligent, moral population, and Ridgeville in particular has been successful through much of its existence in barring from its midst those curses to humanity and foes to happiness and peace—liquor saloons.

Franklin is bounded on the north by Jay County, on the east by Ward, on the south by White River and on the west by Green and Monroe.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 21, Range 13—Section 1, 1837; Sections 2, 21, 22, 28, 33, 1836–37; Section 3, 1831–36, Ezekiel Roe, November 12, 1831; Section 4, 1834–37, Randolph Hughes, March 11, 1834; Section 9, 1830–37, Francis Stephens, May 1, 1830; Section 10, 1828–32, James Addington, March 17, 1828; Section 11, 1832–37; Section 12, 1817–37, Meshach Lewallyn, July 19, 1817, first in township; Sections 13, 23, 1817–38, Solomon Horn and Jacob Sanders, December 11, 1817; Sections 14, 25, 1837–38; Sections 24, 34, 1835–37; Section 15, 1836–38; Section 16, school land; Section 26, 1834–38; Sections 27, 35, 1834–37; Section 36, 1837. The entire township was entered between 1817 and 1838 inclusive.

TOWNS.

Carlisle.—Location on Mississinewa River, Section 12, 21, 13, directly opposite the old town of Ridgeville, Edward McKew, proprietor; D. W. McNeal, surveyor; twenty-eight lots; recorded October 18, 1836. Ridgeville (first plat) was recorded September 21, 1837. Carlisle was south of the river, and Ridgeville was (and is) north of it. Both the towns were still-born. Sixteen years after 1836, no town was at either place, and the plat had relapsed into ordinary farm land. Ridgeville was laid out again, however, in about 1853, and this time the town began to grow. Yet it did not do much for a long time, not, in fact, till the Pan-Handle track was completed through its limits. But Carlisle never so much as "peeped." We have never heard that it ever had even so much as a beginning.

Olive Branch.—Stands upon Sections 27, 28, 33 and 34, Town 21, Range 13. It has two stores, two or three dwellings, one church, one schoolhouse, one smith shop, one wagon shop, one toll-gate, one lodge, F. & A. M., and one Granger Lodge. It is not laid out, though it has more business than some towns. A pike runs through it east and west. The people are trying to get a grant for a post office. How they will succeed cannot now be told, though their energy deserves, and we hope, may command success.

Ridgeville.—Location, Section 12, Town 21, Range 14, north side of Mississinewa River, William and John Addington, proprietors; Jere Smith, surveyor; sixteen lots; street east and west, Main street; recorded September 21, 1837. Ridgeville (new town), Arthur McKew and Joab Ward, proprietors; 128 lots; streets, north and south, Race, Walnut; east and west, Water, Main, First, Second, Third. Location, Section 12, Town 21, Range 13, north of Mississinewa River, at what is now the crossing of the Pan-Handle and Grand Rapids Railroads. Recorded January 5, 1853. McKew's First Addition, Arthur McKew, proprietor; forty-eight lots; location, north and east of the old town; new street, north and south, George; recorded April 30, 1867. McKew's Second Addition, Arthur McKew, proprietor; nine inlots, two outlots; location, west of Race, north of Second; recorded April 30, 1867. McKew's Third Addition, Arthur McKew, proprietor; fifteen lots, including college grounds, Lot No. 14; location, north of Logansport Railroad; recorded February 28, 1868. Addington's Addition, heirs of Addington, proprietors; fifty-eight lots, Section 12, Town 21, Range 14, north side of Mississinewa River; streets, north and south, College, Sheridan; recorded February 25, 1869. McKew's Fourth Addition, Arthur McKew, proprietor; twelve inlots, two outlots; west of George street; recorded June 22, 1869. Ward's First Addition, D. W. Ward, proprietor; twelve outlots, north of Second street, west of Grand Rapids Railroad; recorded December 20, 1869. Pierce's Addition, Pierce, proprietor; nine lots; recorded November 4, 1870. McKew's Fifth Addition, Arthur McKew, proprietor; forty-five lots; new street, old railroad bed, McKew street; recorded May 2, 1873. Thus it is seen that Ridgeville was laid out twice, and has had nine additions at various times. It was platted by William and John Addington in 1837. There had been a mill built by Meshach Lewallyn and a flat-boat factory, carried on by Jacob Ward for years, but not even the semblance of a town had come into being. And even after the village was located by Mr. Addington (who was the proprietor of the mill after Lewallyn), no growth took place. Only three or four houses were erected, and the town seemed still-born. For sixteen years, no business of importance was transacted in the place, and the lots had been remanded to their original farm state.

Some of the men who were, or had been, residents up to 1852, were Meshach Lewallyn, miller; Joab Ward, farmer and boat-builder; William Addington, Jerry Barker, Legraves and Jenkins. Jenkins had a store in 1837. Jerry Barker built a hewed-log house soon after. Lewallyn's mill was built about 1820, and in 1836, was owned by William Addington. At first, it was only a corn-cracker, and was afterward changed into a flour-mill, with a hand-bolt (water mill). The stones were home-made. Joab Ward and Arthur McKew re-laid the town in 1853, calling it Newtown. It stands on the Deerfield State road, as also at the crossing of the Pan-Handle (P. C. & St. L.) and the "Shoo-Fly" (Richmond & G. R.) Railroads, and on the Mississinewa River, at the head of flat-boat navigation. A fine bridge spans the Mississinewa south of the town. The country is good and the lands are fertile. During the summer of 1880, the people of the town and region began to build pikes from Ridgeville into the surrounding country, and a few years will doubtless witness a very great improvement in Franklin Township and the regions adjoining in this important respect.

In 1853, the Union & Logansport Railroad was projected, and there was large activity at Ridgeville. A long row of shanties for laborers was built. Arthur McKew, Robert Sumption, Dr. Bailey, Dr. Shoemaker, Robert Starbuck, etc., were there. Robert Sumption was building a hotel, and the railroad men hurried him up, telling him the railroad track would be down before his hotel would be done. In 1853–54, there were thirty carpenters at work in the town at once. Railroad work, however, soon ceased. The Logansport road was not made until 1867, and the "Shoo-Fly" in 1872.

Robert Sumption had a hotel in 1854. Robert Starbuck had a store; he built a pebble dash house, which is yet standing and in good repair. Arthur McKew had a store as early as 1850, or before. Dr. Shoemaker came in 1853, and Dr. Bailey in 1854.

The railroad ceased in 1857, and the town lagged. Mr. Sumption's hotel prospered, and the stores, also, but up to 1866 there were no more than one hundred people, perhaps not so many. From the completion of the Pan-Handle Railroad, the growth of the town has been constant. The foundation of Ridgeville College was laid in 1867, the instruction began in 1868, and the college building was inclosed and occupied in 1869. The number of students has never been large, there being now about eighty. First President, J. L. Collier; Present President, S. D. Bates; professors and teachers, Messrs. Atkinson, Reed, Moulton, Harrison, Boltz, Misses Brockett and Abbott; Executive Committee, Messrs. McKew, Farquhar, Pettijohn and Sumption; Treasurer, Robert Sumption. The college is under the control of the Free-Will Baptists.

The business of Ridgeville may be stated as follows: Two grist-mills, one water, one steam; two saw-mills, both steam; one handle factory; two dry goods stores, one large; four groceries, three shoe stores, three drug stores, two hardware stores, two harness shops, one tin and stove store, five physicians, three clergymen, four attorneys, three smith shops, three shoe shops, one jeweler, three barbers, two livery stables, two churches, one college, one post office, one schoolhouse, two depots, two hotels, one butcher shop, two grain merchants, one cooper shop, one furniture dealer, two stock buyers, two milliners, one agricultural store, one brick-yard, one tile factory, one sewing-machine store, one pump dealer, one book store, one lodge F. & A. M., one lodge I. O. O. F., one printing office, one coal dealer, one wood dealer, one lime dealer, etc., etc.

Principal men; Arthur McKew, shoe dealer, etc.; R. H. Sumption, trader; D. W. Porter, grocer; A. H. Farquhar, physician; Rev. S. D. Bates, President of Ridgeville College; Rev. Harrison, professor and Acting President of Ridgeville College; Brooks, blacksmith; Wellinger, butcher; James Addington, carpenter; Asa Orcutt, carpenter; E. Myers, architect; David S. Kitzelman, merchant, dry goods; Henry Kitzelman, dry goods; William E. Miller, merchant; C. C, Hiatt, physician; Joseph Edger, salesman; Robert Starbuck, business man and trader; Reuben Whipple, miller; Charles Starr, miller; J. W. Seney; grain dealer; Henry Meyer, Joseph Bowersox, miller.

Two railroads cross at Ridgeville, the P. C. & St. L. and the Grand Rapids (Pan-Handle & Shoo-Fly) Railroads. The Mississinewa River passes near the town on the south side. For many years this place was the point whence flat-boats were sent down the stream. laden with flour, bacon, apples, etc. Joab Ward built great numbers of these in the earlier days. That business, however, stopped long ago.

Ridgeville is now a prosperous and thriving villlage, and an important and growing center of business and trade. In the vicinity is a good lime kiln, and there is also a rock quarry on the banks of the Mississinewa. A fine state of moral sentiment exists, and temperance and good order largely prevail. Saloons, for the most part, have been suppressed, and wherever the public feeling and principle are strong enough to prevent their existence, good morals are sure to be in the ascendant.

Distances: Deerfield, three miles; Union City, fourteen miles; Winchester, nine miles; Randolph, three and one-half miles; Fairview, nine miles; Emmettsville, four miles; Farmland, twelve miles.

For nearly or quite half a century, the dwellers in that region have been floundering, helpless and well-nigh hopeless, in the mud. But they are now waking up to the hitherto unrecognized fact that gravel banks are located here, and that for the express purpose of being spread out over the surface of the highways; and they are actively engaged in putting that late-found knowledge into energetic practice. Several pikes have already been commenced, and some, perhaps, have been completed, and ere long the prospect is that the reign of mud, for that section of country at least, will be over.

BIOGRAPHIES.

Below are given, some of them briefly, accounts of the personal history of a few of the residents of the county:

Jesse Addingion was born in Wayne County, Ind., in 1814, and his wife, Margaret Sullivan, in North Carolina in 1815. She came to Washington, Ind., in 1828, and moved to Wayne County, Ind., in 1831. They ware married in 1834, and moved to what is now Franklin Township in the same year. They settled on Bear Creek, "in the woods," three and a half miles from Ridgeville. He has always been a farmer, has had three children, is a Methodist and Republican; only one child of theirs is living.

Joseph Edger, Ridgeville, was born in 1822 in Harrison County, Ky.; came to Darke County, Ohio, in 1824, his father died there, and he was brought up by his uncle, Edward Edger. In 1837, he accompanied this uncle to Deerfield, Randolph Co., which town having been laid out a few years before that date, had not yet began to grow. Four log cabins at that primal period constituted the sum total of that embryo town. In one of them, Henry Taylor played at keeping hotel, and also sold whisky. In another, Henry Sweet worked as a blacksmith. Jonathan Thomas lived near and was a farmer. William Anderson was also a resident, but what was his occupation is to us utterly unknown. Edward Edger came there to show the dwellers in those woods what could be accomplished in the business of a merchant, bringing with him a magnificent stock of goods, the value of which could not have been less than $200. After a time, a second store was opened by John Jenkinson. A somewhat amusing instance of apparent larceny occurred in connection with Mr. Jenkinson's stock of goods. Some ribbons were missing, and in these days the absence of a few rolls of ribbons would be readily discovered. The lost treasure was looked for high and low, and were given over at last as having been stolen. They had been stolen in fact. but not by felonious biped burglars. They were found weeks afterward in a mouse hole in one of the logs of the wall. George Ritenour owned a mill one mile below Deerfield very early, as he was one among the very first settlers in the region. Since that primeval period, there have been as merchants, among others, Beales' branch store, in a log cabin; H. L. Searl, B W. Hawkins, Fitzpatrick & Edger, Putnam & Avery, etc.

Hotel keepers: Henry Taylor, H. L. Searl (excellent hotel), Judge John Mock, Wellington Stuart, Benjamin Thorn, Uriah Pierce, Mrs. Novis, etc.

The first physician was Dr. Ayres; he went to Marion, and is there still. Others have been Drs. Longshove, Beales, Floyd, McAfee, Washburne, Banks, Snow, Bosworth, Purcell, Clovinger, etc.

There has been for a long time a flouring mill, built and at first operated by Jason Whipple. There was for many years a woolen factory by Robert Murray; it is now gone. Joseph Edger had a grain house; he also built an ashery, the second and the last in the county.

Deerfield was at one time an important center of trade and business, and bid fair to become a prosperous place. It was rather too high up the river for flat-boats. Two, and only two, were built and launched there. Deerfield is now nearly extinct. Union, Ridgeville, Randolph have "sucked out" nearly all the life it ever had. Henry Taylor was the first settler in the town of Deerfield. Burkett Pierce was the first in Ward Township, in 1820, probably.

Joseph Edger married Alice Kinnear in 1846, and has had six children. He has lived at Deerfield, Winchester and Ridgeville; went to New Orleans and Texas, hunting a home, but came back to Ridgeville, where he now resides. He was partner with his uncle Edward in a store at Deerfield; built an ashery and operated it two years; clerked for Hawkins; partner with Fitzpatrick four years; was several years at Winchester, selling out to Harmon Clark: sold grain and produce at Winchester, but failed, and tried farming two years; started for the Southwest and went to New Orleans and Texas, returning at length to Randolph County and settling at Ridgeville. In 1874, he was elected Justice of the Peace, but after serving three years, he resigned the office. He is now selling boots and shoes for Arthur McKew.

George Huffman came to Randolph County, two miles west of Winchester, in 1818; moved to Franklin Township, on Bear Creek, in 1838, and died in 1863, having had ten children.

Their names, etc., are as follows: Polly (Parsons); Nancy (Lidy), five children; Samuel, dead; Lydia (Sutton), two children; John (married Susan McNees), four children; Henry (married Lydia Debay), two children; William (married Jane McGuire), seven children; Isaiah (Mary McNees, Prudence Wright), five children; Jeremiah (Mary Ann Coons and Tabitha Miller), ten children; Simon (married Miss McNees), one child; Milton (married three times), two children. Mr. Huffman's descendants who survive all reside in Randolph but two, and they are all farmers by occupation.

Elizabeth Janes, Ridgeville, was born in 1797, near Columbus, Ohio. The region must have been a deep and pathless wilderness, since the date of her birth is five years before the admission of Ohio as a State. She married Samuel Janes, and lived for many years near Hill Grove, Darke Co., Ohio. They reared a large family, and her husband died at Hill Grove, aged about eighty years, and was buried at Union City Cemetery. The aged widow removed to Huntington to reside with her daughter at that place, and in 1876, changed her home to Ridgeville, Randolph County, with her son William, continuing with him until her death, May 5, 1882, at the ripe age of eighty-four years. Her funeral was preached by Rev. Prof. Harrison, of Ridgeville, at that place, and her remains were deposited beside the body of her husband, in the cemetery at Union City, Ind. One of her sons was Dr. John M. Janes, formerly of Union City; later, and now, a practicing physician in Illinois.

Arthur McKew was the son of Edward McKew, who moved to Ridgeville, Ind., in 1831, from Fayette County, Ind., and previously from Cincinnati. He was born August 14, 1819, above Cincinnati, in Ohio, and was taken to Fayette County, Ind., in 1819, and to Ridgeville in 1831. He married Margery Ward, daughter of Joab Ward, and sister of Hon. Thomas Ward, of Winchester, Ind., in 1844. They have had six children, one only of whom is now living. He farmed in Jay County four years, but returned to Ridgeville and sold goods, and has done so ever since. He owned a mill twenty-eight years at Ridgeville, and now he runs a boot and shoe store, a farm, etc., being understood to be wealthy. He was County Commissioner of Randolph County two terms, and President of Winchester National Bank for sixteen months. He is a Republican in politics, and by religious profession, a Methodist. He is a man of high public spirit, greatly interested in all schemes of public advantage, and is a supporter of the temperance cause, and of intelligence and morality in general. He was one of the chief founders of Ridgeville College, as also he has been one of its firmest friends and most efficient helpers since its establishment. He is still in active business. His wife is a worthy and estimable lady, a fit companion for her respected husband, though for some years feeble as to bodily health. Arthur McKew died January, 1882, highly respected and greatly lamented; he was in his sixty-third year.

Jeremiah L. Mock, son of Daniel Mock, of Ward Township, was born in 1815, in Ohio; came to Randolph in 1828; married Matilda Pierce, in 1834, who was the daughter of Burkett Pierce, and born in 1817, and died in 1873. Mr. Mock has had ten children, and has resided in Franklin Township, northeast of Ridgeville, for twenty-eight or thirty years, being a member of the Democratic party and in vocation a farmer. When he came, with his father, to Ward Township, southeast of Deerfield, some of the settlers southeast and northeast of that town were Francis Peake, Eli Blount, Riley Marshall, James Massey, —— Massey, —— Massey, —— Massey, Reason Malott, Allan Wall, Samuel Kane, Daniel B. Miller, Jephtha Sutton, William Kizer (south of Deerfield), William Jackson (head of Mud Creek, farmer). David Conner still had his trading post east of Deerfield. We had supposed that Conner left that post sooner than 1828.

Pardon Sherman was born in 1801, in Greene County, N. Y. He married Mary D. Parke, in 1826; they came to White River, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1835, and to Franklin Township in 1837. He entered eighty acres, on which he still resides, having been a farmer ever since. They have had six children; four are living, and two are married; one lives in Randolph County, Ind., one in Illinois and two in Minnesota. The settlers when he came here were William Wright, west of New Dayton, on Bear Creek; Seth Elliott, north of Wright's; Jonathan Addington, near Elliott's; Jesse Addington, near the Mississinewa; George Huffman, died in 1869; James Addington, near Jesse Addington's. After his arrival came Mary Helms, 1837; Jesse Helms, 1845; William Huffman, 1845; John Henry, 1841; Josiah Bundy, 1845. Mr. Bundy died in Kansas. The country settled slowly. It was difficult of access, and few people found it. Mr. Sherman is a Republican and a Methodist, residing at New Dayton. His son has kept a store there for many years.

Mr. Sherman was one of fourteen children, eight boys and six girls, all grown, only eight of whom, however, were married, and only two are now living. His wife died in January, 1882, and her husband ended his life among mortal men in about a month afterward.

Francis and James Stevens came in 1830, from Monroe County, Ohio, to Franklin Township, west of Ridgeville. Francis during his life had nine children, and James had seven children. They each entered eighty acres; they were both farmers, and have been dead fifteen or twenty years.

Andrew and Alexander Stevens came in 1835. Andrew had eight children, three now living. Alexander had twelve children, four now alive. Andrew has been dead twenty years. Alexander has been dead twenty-five years. James Stevens has three sons living in Jay County. Andrew Stevens has three sons living in the region, Garvin, Jacob and Francis. Alexander Stevens has two sons, Joseph and Elijah. The Stevenses have always been active farmers and Democrats from olden time.

Robert H. Sumption, Ridgeville, was born in Darke County, Ohio, in 1817; moved to Deerfield, Ind., in 1835, and graduated at Green Castle, Ind., in 1845, teaching school more or less during his time of study. He married Berilla Ward, in 1845, and moved to St. Joseph County, Mich., teaching and farming till 1854. They returned to Ridgeville in that year, and he kept hotel in that place till 1872. Since that time, he has been a real estate dealer. They have three children; the two sons are railroad agents and operators. The daughter is a graduate of Ridgeville College; has been a teacher in Nebraska and is now employed in Ridgeville among her youthful acquaintances and friends, making a success of her chosen profession. Mr. S. is a Free Will Baptist and a Republican; he is an influential member of the community, being a member of the Executive Committee of Ridgeville College, and also the Treasurer of the institution, having been one of its active friends from the beginning. He was acquainted with the famous Indian trader, David Conner, in early times, especially during the residence of Mr. Conner at the place of his final settlement, below Marion, having taught school in his neighborhood, Mr. Conner being, also, among his most liberal patrons. Mr. Sumption has been a citizen of Ridgeville ever since the renewal of the town as the village of Newtown. The new name did not hold, however, but Ridgeville it was from the beginning, and Ridgeville it is to-day, and will continue doubtless so to be while countless ages roll, or at least while the "Yankee Nation" lasts on the shores of America.

[The name of Newtown did "stick" somewhat for awhile. In the "Soldiers' Record," a volunteer is said to have died (in 1863 or 1864, perhaps) in Newtown, Ind., meaning the new town of Ridgeville.]

John Woodard, Franklin Township, was born in New Jersey in 1801; married Sarah Lake; came to Green Township in 1837; has had ten children, six living and five married; is a farmer; entered forty acres when he came; was poor; has worked hard and has gained a competence for his old age. He is a Republican.

Early settlers: Peter Hester, Monroe Township; David Haas, buried on Hester's farm; William Gray, Green Township; Benjamin Lewallyn, Green Township, moved to Kansas; Joab Ward, Ridgeville; Jacob Winegartner, below Ridgeville; Andrew Martin, Monroe Township; David Call, Monroe Township.

There was once a little town called Rockingham, laid out by John Marine on the Mississinewa below Ridgeville. It has been extinct a long, long time. It never had much growth, and gradually went down, until not a vestige remains. Hopewell Church (old) was built about 1840. Hopewell Church (new) was built about 1877. The cemetery there was laid out in early times, and has been in use as a burial ground for many years.

Joab Ward, Ridgeville, was born in North Carolina December 14, 1790; came to Ross County, Ohio, about 1800, and to Champaign County, Ohio, on King's Creek, between 1813 and 1819; married Amy Grave in 1813; moved to near Ridgeville April 7, 1819; changed his residence for a short time to a farm east of Winchester, for fear of the Indians, but returned soon afterward to his former abode, near Ridgeville, and never moved elsewhere from that time till his death. He bought of Meshach Lewallyn a small tract of land, reckoned to be fifty acres, at $3 per acre. The land was situated south of the river, near the present water tank. Mr. W. built a house, scutching down the logs and making a stick chimney and a clapboard roof. In about 1838, he put in new sills, raised the building to a story and a half, pebble dashed and shingled it, making, also, two brick chimneys, and it is a good house to this day, still occupied as a residence, after standing sixty-three years, A fine spring was near, which in those times was reckoned a very great advantage. He had fifteen children, one still-born, and twelve grew up, nine living still. William, died at seventeen; Mary (John Sumption), died in 1845, three children; Thomas, living at Winchester; Margery (McKew), living at Ridgeville, four children; Sarah, died a little girl; Berilla (Sumption), lives at Ridgeville, four children; Eleanor (Pettijohn), lives in Jay County, seven children; Edith H. (Moffatt), Hancock County, three children; Harriet P. (Thomson), Whitley County, three children; Susannah, died a child; David, died at Ridgeville in 1874, five children; Joel, lives near Ridgeville, three children; Lydia (Way), Winchester, four children; Joab, lives south of Ridgeville, three children.

[Note.—Eleanor's children were Elizabeth, Lot, Dan, Jay, Ella, Asa, Grace, all very short names but the first.]

Joab Ward had been a trader in Ohio, but he had "broken up," and plunged into the Western woods, going to the bounds of civilization, Ridgeville then being the extreme outskirt and corner of white settlement. His health was poor and his prospects were not bright. Without means, without health, with a growing family, he still lived in hope, and did his best, looking and wishing for better times. He first settled in a camp, cleared some land, made sugar, killed deer, etc. He was a great hunter, having killed more than once two deer with the same shot. At one time, he killed six deer and crippled the seventh in one morning before ordinary breakfast time. He used to hunt deer by driving sharpened stakes into the ground, with points upward at the places where the deer would jump into the field, often crippling them thus. Several times four were killed by him in a single day. He died November 7, 1874, having lived there nearly fifty-six years, and being eighty-four years old. He was a Whig and a Republican. His wife was a very religious woman, though she was deprived, by long distance, from meetings of religious societies; she died in 1864. Both are buried at White River Burying Ground.

Mr. Ward was employed for many years in building flat boats for sale to persons who wished to transport merchandise, during the season of floods, down the Mississinewa to the Wabash Valley for traffic with the Indians and the early settlers in that region. He was for nearly sixty years a prominent citizen of that portion of the county, the township receiving from him the name it still bears. When first formed, Ward Township comprised the entire north part of the county, out of which, in process of time, were created four distinct townships—Green, Franklin, Ward and Jackson. Mr. Ward was greatly respected and highly esteemed, though quiet and unassuming, and not inclined to press into active public life.

BENJAMIN ADINGTON, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville. Benjamin Adington was born in Wayne County, Ind., June 28, 1824. His father, Joseph, was a native of South Carolina, and his mother, whose maiden name was Ceilie Townsend, was born in North Carolina. They came to Randolph County, Ind., in the spring of 1834. The father died in 1837, and the mother in 1853. His grandfather Townsend was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Mr. Adington was married in 1850 to Rebecca Harrald, who died March 4, 1876. They were the parents of seven children, six of whom are now living—Cornelius M., Sylvester, Milford, Elvira, Emma and Asa. Lincoln died in infancy. Mrs. Adington was the daughter of Amasa and Leah (White) Harrald. In June, 1878, Mr. Adington was married to Jane Day, his present companion. Her son, Joseph T., is a successful school teacher. Mr. Adington was engaged for some time in milling pursuits, but since the year 1863 he has given his attention to farming. He has 140 acres of land in Section 27. He is a Republican, and a member of the Society of Friends. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ELISHA T. BAILEY, physician, Ridgeville. Elisha T. Bailey was born in Clinton County, Ohio, September 19, 1821. His father, Hiram Bailey, was born in Sussex County, Va., in 1796, and his mother, whose maiden name was Rachel Thomas, was born in Warren County, Ohio, in 1802. The parents removed to Wayne County, Ind., in 1830, where they remained until death. The mother died in 1868, and the father in 1872. Elisha, their son, attended the common school and worked on the farm until twenty-two years of age, and then began the study of medicine under Dr. Stanton Judkins, brother of Prof. Judkins, of Cincinnati. In 1846, he was examined by the Wayne County Medical Board, and licensed to practice medicine. In 1847, he located at Emmettsville, Randolph County, and practiced four years, then attended the Miami Medical College at Cincinnati, Ohio, graduating in that institution. In 1854, he located at Ridgeville, where he has ever since continued the practice of his profession. He was appointed Postmaster at Emmettsville in 1848, and at Ridgeville in 1862, having held the office ever since. He also served as Township Trustee four years. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits until his partner, James Addington, went into the Union army. In his religious relations, Mr. Bailey is identified with the Friends. He is also a Master Mason. He has fifty-five acres of good land in Section 2, and enjoys a comfortable share of worldly prosperity. In 1845, he was married to Julia A. Morgan, a native of Randolph County, who died in November 17, 1854. On the 27th of September, 1856, he married Paulina Mack. Her father, Jeremiah L. Mack, was a native of Ohio, and her mother, Matilda (Pierce) Mack, a native of Randolph County. The second marriage was blessed by four children—Minnie E., Roselle, Ralph and Ferrel. The mother died March 3, 1873.

JOSEPH BUTTERWORTH.

Joseph Butterworth, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in England June 28, 1813, and came to the United States about the year 1820 with his father, Thomas Butterworth. They settled at Baltimore, Md., where the father died about the year 1826. His mother was also a native of England, and died at Baltimore, March 18, 1835, and was buried at Cedar Grove, fifteen miles away. Mr. Butterworth removed to Ohio April 25, 1836, and located within four miles of Dayton May 2, finding employment in a cotton factory. He came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838, and entered eighty acres of land, afterward purchasing forty acres additional. He worked on the farm of Joab Ward, although he had no experience in farm work. He was married December 20, 1840, to Mary Sumption, a native of Darke County, Ohio. Her father, Charles S. Sumption, was born in April, 1791, and her mother, Mary Embry, was born July 12, 1799, in Tennessee. Her mother died March 24, 1839, and her father February 10, 1852. Mr. Butterworth and wife are the parents of six children—Charles S., James M., Susan M., Hannah E., Annetta and Thomas H. Thomas H. died March 3, 1864; Charles S. married Mary E. Parkison; Susan M. married Elisha B. West, and was united with her present husband, Charles Manford, in 1880; Hannah E. was married to John C. Minton, and Annetta was married in 1878 to Charles A. Minton. Mr. Butterworth and wife and three children are members of the M. E. Church. His son, Charles S. was a member of Company F, Seventy-fifth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry.

JOHN M. COONS.

John M. Coons, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Highland County, Ohio, January 3, 1827. His father, Michael, was born in Virginia, and his mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Alison, was born in the State of Delaware; his father died in 1865. The family came to Indiana in 1837, and settled on the line between Randolph and Jay Counties. The nearest neighbor was a mile distant. There was no schoolhouse near by, and the subject of this sketch often went as far as Richmond, Ind., to mill. He once killed a wolf and received $5 bounty for its scalp, at Portland. His grandfather was a soldier in the Revolution, and fought at the battle of Bunker Hill, and his two brothers served in the Union army during the war of the rebellion. Mr. Coons is an ordained minister of the Christain Church, and one of the oldest members of the East Indiana Conference. His wife is also a member of this church. He is engaged in the pursuit of farming. He has about 300 acres of good land. He is a member of Doric Lodge, No. 362, and is at present Master of the lodge. His son, George F., is a Past Grand of Powers Lodge, No. 496, I. O. O. F., and his son, John W., is a Master Mason. Mr. Coons was married, on the 26th of October, 1843, to Margaret M. Wilson. They are the parents of six children—John W., George F., Sarah E., James P. and Martha Ann and an infant; the latter three are deceased. James Wilson, the father of Mrs. Coons, was born in Virginia in 1777, and died in Randolph County, Ind., at the age of seventy-five years. Her mother died in Virginia. Her father settled in Randolph County, Ind., in 1836.

JOSEPH EDGER, shoe dealer, Ridgeville, was born in Harrison County, Ky., September 25, 1822. His father, Thomas Edger, was born in the same State November 14, 1791. His mother, Nancy Edger, was born in Ireland. They moved to Butler Township, Darke County, Ohio, in 1824, where the father died April 1, 1836, and the mother October, 1829. Mr. Edger came to Randolph County in 1837 with his uncle Edward. He was educated in the common schools of this county. He served two terms as Justice of the Peace; was re-elected, and resigned. He was married, December 3, 1846, to Alice Kinnear. Her father was born in Virginia in 1780, and her mother, whose maiden name was Sarah Gray, was born in Ireland in 1792. Mr. Edger and wife are the parents of six children—Sarah E., Nancy, Eliza, James W., Thomas and Archibald. The two last named are deceased. Mr. Edger has long been engaged in mercantile pursuits, and is now a partner with Arthur McKews in the mercantile business at Ridgeville. He has been in this business six years, and has the largest and best establishment of the kind in Ridgeville. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, of the Chapter at Winchester, and Muncie Commandery, K. T.

JOHN R. FRENCH, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville. John R. French was born in Randolph County, Ind., May 6, 1859. His father, Howell B. French, was born in Ohio, and his mother, whose maiden name was Sarah F. Flood, was also a native of that State; his parents are both living in Randolph County; his Grandfather Flood, was perhaps the first Methodist preacher in this county, and he and his Grandfather French laid out the first burying-ground in Greene Township; his Grandfather Miller was one of the first settlers in Franklin Township. Mr. French formerly taught school, but is now engaged in the pursuit of farming. He was married, August 9, 1878, to Miss Alice A. Miller. They have one daughter—Leonora Garfield. Jacob Miller, the father of Mrs. French, is a native of Indiana; her mother's maiden name was Mahala Green; her father was a member of the Eighteenth Indiana Regiment during the late war, and was killed at the battle of Antietam a few days after his enlistment.

GEORGE L. GEGNER, harness-maker, Ridgeville, was born in Germany November 29, 1842, and came to the United States when six months of age; his parents, George and Johanna Gegner, were both natives of Germany; his father died at Cincinnati, Ohio, December 4, 1877. George L. received a good common-school education at Cincinnati; he came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1869, and has ever since been engaged in the harness business at Ridgeville; he enlisted in Company A, Second Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in the Union army, at the first call for three months' volunteers, and re-enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirtieth Indiana Infantry Regiment for three years, working his way from the ranks to the office of First Lieutenant. He participated in the battles of Resaca, Buzzard Roost, Rocky Face Ridge, Lost Mountain, Pine Mountain, Kenesaw, Neal Dow Church, Decatur, Alatoona, Jonesboro, Lovejoy's, Nashville, Tenn., Smithfield, N. C., and others. On the 8th of March, 1866, he married Elizabeth Wayman, who was born at New Castle, Ind., December 2, 1842; her father, Milton Wayman, was born in Kentucky; he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Middletown, Md., and has been thus engaged for twenty-six years; he is now sixty-seven years of age. Mr. Gegner and wife have five children, viz.: Charles M., Mary, Jennie R., William L. and John W. Mr. Gegner has succeeded well in business, and is now in comfortable circumstances, having a good business block and residence. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. She was identified with the schools of Howard and Madison Counties as a teacher.

JOHN I. HOKE, jeweler, Ridgeville. John I. Hoke was born in Jackson Township, Randolph Co., Ind., May 12, 1849; his father, Seth Hoke, was born in Pennsylvania August 20, 1824; his mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Johnson, was born near Dayton, Ohio, in 1829. She came to Randolph County about 1833, and his father came about 1845. They are now living in Union City, and are probably the oldest settlers there. The father enlisted as a substitute for Eli Noffinger, Jr., in the Thirty-eighth Indiana Regiment, in 1864, and took part in the battle of Nashville. The subject of this sketch was married, December 30, 1876, to Mary E. White, daughter of Thomas and Barbara White, of Jay County, Ind. Mrs. Hoke was born in that county December 1, 1854; her father, Thomas White, was born July 15, 1826, and her mother was born September 21, 1830. They are both living at Portland, Jay Co., Ind. Mr. Hoke engaged in the jewelry trade and has ever since followed that occupation; he has been in the business at Ridgeville for four years; he keeps an assortment of clocks and watches, and does a general repair business. Mr. Hoke and wife are the parents of one daughter—Edith L. His Grandfather Johnson served in the Revolutionary war. His grandmother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Coblentz, married Thomas Young. They lived together about three years, and had one son—John. One day, in 1820, the elder Young started to Dayton, Ohio, with a load of corn, but disappeared mysteriously, and nothing further was ever heard from him. Mr. Hoke's grandfather subsequently married the supposed widow of Young. The son, John, was subsequently killed in a distillery at La Fayette, Ind.

REV. THOMAS HARRISON, A. M., Ridgeville, was born at Thirsk, in Yorkshire, England, in 1813. His father, early in life, became a minister of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and continued in the ministry until his death, at the age of seventy-seven. The son received a liberal education at an academy, commencing the study of Latin when only eleven years old. As he early evinced a fondness for reading, he was put to the printing business, at an office in connection with which there was a large book store. Here, he acquired a an extensive acquaintance with general literature. At the age of seventeen, he began to preach and lecture. After residing some time in the city of York, he came, in 1835, to the United States, and located at Springfield, Ohio, where he was associated with John M. Gallagher (brother of William D., the poet), in editing and publishing the Springfield Pioneer. Not relishing the bitterness and acrimony of party politics, he disposed of his interest in the business, and in 1841 became assistant editor of the Western Christian Advocate, C. Elliott, D. D., being the principal. Here he remained until 1848, when, meeting with an accident which resulted in the loss of a limb, he determined to turn his attention to teaching. For some time previous, he had an inclination in this direction, thinking it a fine field for usefulness, notwithstanding its arduous duties. He wrote to his friend, S. Howard, D. D., then Principal of the High School at Springfield, Ohio, who offered him a position in the institution. Here he labored until 1852, when, upon the invitation of a number of friends, he opened an academy in New Carlisle, where he remained until the breaking-out of the rebellion. Nearly all the young men left and joined the Union army. He then spent a short time in lecturing, when he was elected Superintendent of the Union Schools of Springfield. In 1864, he was elected President of Moore's Hill College, Indiana. During the six years he remained there, the average number of students was about 350 annually, while previously it was about 150. Having several sons who had received an education there, and who wished to prepare for business life, he thought it advisable to move to a larger place, where they could have the requisite facilities. In 1872, he was elected Principal of the High School at Shelbyville, Ind., several of the citizens there desiring to have a more extended course of study in the institution. In 1878, after attending a normal school and some county institutes, where he had a large amount of teaching and lecturing to do, he was attacked with nervous prostration, and suffered severely for several months, but by rest and the unremitting attention of his family, he was restored to health. In 1880, he was elected Acting President of Ridgeville College, and Professor of Latin and Greek. During 1880, the number of students was double that of the preceding year. While connected with literary institutions, Prof. Harrison has made it a practice to go about the country on Saturdays, lecturing on science and education, and preaching on Sundays. Three of his brothers became ministers of the Gospel, and one, Judge Harrison, of Columbus, Ohio, a Member of Congress. One of his sisters married a minister, and two of his nephews are ministers of the Gospel, making eight ministers in the family and its connections. His wife is a sister of C. Morris, attorney at law, Troy, Ohio. For several years she was President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the Sixth Congressional District of Indiana. One of his sons is a lawyer, one a physician and the other an editor. One of his daughters is the wife of Prof. R. W. Wood, and the other of Dr. Cushman. The Professor is the originator of the Numeral System of Musical Notation, and author of several works on music. He is also author of a work on elocution. His attainments as an educator and scholar have called forth the heartiest commendation from prominent literary men, among whom are Dr. Elliott, of the Advocate; Mr. Hobbs, Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of Indiana; Prof. Staley, of the Frankfort (Ind.) Crescent, and many others.

CHRISTOPHER C. HIATT, physician, Ridgeville, was born in Randolph County, Ind., March 18, 1832. He is the son of Silas and Mary Hiatt, both natives of Virginia. His father, Silas Hiatt, came to Randolph County, Ind., in the year 1818, and helped to build the first cabin in Winchester, near the present site of J. Norman's bank. In 1862, the subject of this biography enlisted as a private soldier in the Fifth Indiana Cavalry, Ninetieth Regiment. He was promoted to the office of Surgeon. He was in the Department of the Ohio, and was present at the first capture of Knoxville, September 1, 1863. He was also in the battles of Blountville, Danville, Bean Station, Walker's Ford, and other engagements. After the battle of Walker's Ford, they were sent to join Gen. Sherman's command at Tunnel Hill, and his regiment was sent with Gen. Stoneman to raid on Macon, but were nearly all captured by the rebels. Surg. Hiatt was detailed to return to Marietta, Ga., to take care of the sick and wounded, and was shortly afterward sent to Indianapolis, Ind., before the State election of 1864, and remained until after the Presidential election, and was assigned to do duty as Examining Surgeon of Recruits. Rejoined his regiment—those who were taken prisoners having, in the meantime, been exchanged. The regiment was again fitted for the field, and ordered to Nashville, to participate in the last fight at that city, but arrived too late to take any part in that action. They were next sent to Pulaski, Tenn., where Dr. Hiatt was placed in charge of the hospital as Surgeon, remaining until September, 1865. He had charge of all sick and wounded and about 400 small-pox patients, as well as the sick in the military prison. He finally fell a victim to small-pox, but escaped with a light attack. Under a law giving three months' pay as a bounty to all officers who should remain to the close of the war, he remained and drew the bounty.

MILTON R. HIATT, druggist, Ridgeville, was born in Jay County, Ind. He is the son of Jonathan Hiatt, a native of Virginia. His grandfather was one of the early settlers of Randolph County, Ind. Mr. Hiatt enjoyed a common-school education in his native county, and afterward attended the college at Oberlin, Ohio, for one year. He graduated in the Commercial College at Dayton, Ohio, in 1866. In 1869, he married Levina Mastick, a lady of fine accomplishments. She was at one time a teacher in the Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, also in the college at Ridgeville in this county. Her father, Owen Mastick, was a native of Vermont, and her mother a native of Connecticut. Until twenty-six years of age, Mr. Hiatt was engaged in farming, but afterward adopted mercantile pursuits. For fourteen years, he has been engaged in the drug trade at Ridgeville, and has one of the finest stores in Randolph County. It is situated on the corner of Walnut and Main streets. Mr. Hiatt was elected Town Clerk at the organization of Ridgeville, and served four years, and is now the Treasurer of the corporation and Secretary of the Board of Bidgeville College, in which capacity he is serving his second term. By his own efforts and industry, he has succeeded in accumulating property to the value of several thousand dollars. His brother, John W., who now resides in Nebraska, was a soldier in the Union army. His wife is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church.

GEORGE W. HOLOWELL, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born July 11, 1842. His father was William Holowell, and his mother before marriage, was Catharine Newburn. Both were natives of Ohio. Mr. Holowell came to Indiana in 1847. He enlisted in the Fortieth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry and served four years. He participated in the battles of Mill Creek, Ky., Chickamauga, Nashville and other engagements, and at Kenesaw Mountain he was wounded in the arm and breast. He was married, February 6, 1868, to Julia A. Stephens, daughter of John Stephens; her parents are natives of Monroe County, Ohio. They have seven children living, viz., John W., Francis S., Jacob W., Jane G., George E., Adda E. and Oliver P. Adda E. died April 22, 1881. Mr. Holowell has a good farm of 160 acres, and is comfortably situated. In politics, he is a true Republican.

HALE HOLOWELL, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Randolph County, Ind., April 4, 1854. His father, William Holowell, was born in Preble County, Ohio; his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth McKerr; his paternal grandfather served in the war of 1812. Mr. Holowell was married, December 31, 1874, to Luzena Riddlebarger, daughter of David and Mary A. Riddlebarger, both of whom are now living at Ridgeville. They have one daughter living. Mrs. Holowell's grandfather served in the war of 1812; her father, David Riddlebarger, was born in Virginia; her mother, whose maiden name was Mary A. Rhoades, was born in Indiana.

HENRY D. HORN, farmer, P. O. Sherman, was born in Randolph County, Ind., February 15, 1840; his parents, Jacob and Sarah Horn, were natives of North Carolina; they came to Randolph County in 1830; his mother died in 1873 and his father in 1878. His grandfather Wood was in the war of 1812. Mr. Horn was married to Sarah J. Maltbie December 29, 1860. They have four children living, viz., Ida M., Annie B., George Thomas and James A. Mrs. Horn is the daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth O. (Brown) Maltbie, the former a native of Ohio and the latter a native of Kentucky; her mother is living at Farmland. Mr. Horn is engaged at the pursuit of farming. He is a member of the Society of Friends, and in politics a Republican. His wife is a member of the Disciples' or Christian Church. She has two sisters—Malinda A., wife of Stephen Norman, Rachel M., and two brothers—George W. and Robert T., both of whom are dead.

MARION L. JACK, tinner, Ridgeville, was born in Ward Township, Randolph County, Ind., November 4, 1856. His father, John W. Jack, and his mother, Mary E. (Lewis) Jack, were both natives of that township, and his grandfather, Robert Jack, was one of the very early settlers of this county. Mr. Jack is engaged in the tinware and stove business at Ridgeville. He is an enterprising young man. He was married, December 4, 1879, to Miss Mary E. Collins, a native of Jay County, Ind., and daughter of Martin T. and Victoria Collins.

WILLIAM M. JANES, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Campbell County, Ky., October 29, 1817. His father, Samuel Janes, was born in Virginia October 15, 1796, and his mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth McCollum, was born in Kentucky October 26, 1798. His father was an officer in the war of 1812, and fought gallantly in a number of battles. At the surrender of Hull at Detroit, he forced his sword into the ground and broke it, rather than humiliate himself by handing it to a British officer. The subject of this biography first visited Randolph County in 1828, but did not settle here until 1868. On the 10th of February, 1842, he was married to Lucinda Baughman, a native of Virginia; her parents were both natives of that State. In early life, Mr. Janes was engaged in boating on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. He kept hotel in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1863 and 1864, and in Covington, Ky., for the next three years. He has been engaged at the carpenter's trade ever since, and is still an able and efficient hand. He has a good residence on the corner of Main and Portland streets, Ridgeville, and seven and a half acres of good land adjoining the town. He served as Justice of the Peace three years and Trustee six years in Adams County, Ohio. Both himself and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was made a Master Mason in 1842, and a Royal Arch Mason in 1844. His mother died at the age of eighty-four years six months and ten days. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for more than fifty years. Mr. Janes and wife have two adopted daughters—Mary A. and Annie Belle, both estimable young ladies.

MRS. ELMIRA McKEW, farming, P. O. Ridgeville. Elmira Taylor was born in Virginia February 14, 1837. Her father, James Taylor, and her mother, Ann (Thomas) Taylor, were both natives of that State. Her grandfather served in the war of 1812. Her father died in Virginia. Her mother still resides there, at an advanced age. Miss Taylor was married, in 1855, to George McKew, a native of Ireland. He came to Randolph County in 1836, and died in 1870. She has two children living, named Ella and Robb, respectively. Mrs. McKew has 140 acres of good land in section 12, under a fine state of cultivation.

ISAIAH C. MILNER, farmer, P. O. Clark's. Isaiah C. Milner was born in Randolph County, Ind., September 10, 1822. His father, John Milner, was born in Virginia, and his mother, whose maiden name was Nancy Case, was born in North Carolina; she died August 25, 1846, and his father died May 23, 1850. They came to Randolph County about the year 1820. His grandfather Milner was in the Revolutionary War, and was wounded, and, although entitled to a pension, he always refused to apply for it. His maternal grandfather, Case, also served in the Revolutionary war for five years. Mr. Milner was reared in the county in which he now lives, and is well known. He taught school in his younger days during the winters, and worked at the carpenter's trade during the remainder of the year. For the past twenty-eight years, he has been engaged in farming. May 8, 1853, he was married to Elizabeth A. Freeman. They have three children—Mary J., Sarah S. and Nathaniel M. Mrs. Milner is the daughter of Thornton S. and Nancy P. (Holingsworth) Freeman, both natives of South Carolina. Her mother is still living; her father died February 19, 1849. Mr. Milner was elected Township Trustee in 1859, and, after serving four years, was re-elected. He also served as Land Appraiser and Assessor. He has 160 acres of good land, in Section 26, where he located when thirty-two years of age. He is a Republican in politics. His family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

HENRY T. KITSELMAN, merchant, P. O. Ridgeville. Henry T. Kitselman was born in Wayne County, Ind., March 17, 1853. His father was Joseph Loven, but he was adopted and reared by Davis S. Kitselman. He enjoyed good educational advantages in youth, and attended college for more than two years. He was married to Martha Niswonger in January, 1874. Her parents, Joseph and Elizabeth, are both living at Ridgeville. Mr. and Mrs. Kitselman are the parents of three children, two of whom (Nina and Zella) are now living; Elsie died in February, 1880. After the close of his school life, Mr. Kitselman acted as express agent for three years, but has since been engaged in mercantile pursuits. He is now the senior member of the firm of Kitselman, Seaney & Co., dealers in dry goods, clothing, etc. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as is also his wife; he is also a member of Ridgeville Lodge, I. O. O. F. He has long been identified with the Republican party, and has served as Town Clerk and Councilman, and is at present a member of the School Board. He has some valuable town property, and is comfortably situated.

DAVIS S. KITSELMAN, hardware, Ridgeville. Davis S. Kitselman was born in Chester County, Penn., October 23, 1819. His father, John H., and his mother, whose maiden name was Mary Graham, were both natives of that county, and both died there—the father in 1841, and the mother in 1849. John H. Kitselman served in the war of 1812, and his father in the war of the Revolution, and was in the encampment at Valley Forge. Davis S. Kitselman came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1854, and has resided here ever since. He married Mahala A. Starbuck, a native of Indiana—born October 19, 1833. She is a member of the Baptist Church; her father was a native of North Carolina. This union was blessed by seven children, viz., Alva L., Mary A., Davis M., Ida F., Carle M., Edwin F. and Anna B.; they also have an adopted son, Henry T. Mr. Kitselman was reared on a farm, but has, at various times been engaged in other pursuits, among them, the occupation of milling, and has spent a good portion of his life in mercantile pursuits. For six years he was engaged in the drug trade, with Dr. Ward, and for the past seven years, has been in the hardware trade at Ridgeville. His store is on the corner of First and Walnut streets, where he keeps a general assortment of hardware, stoves and tinware. He has been a member of the Town Council of Ridgeville, and is a Past Grand in Ridgeville Lodge, No. 207, I. O. O. F. He has 135 acres of good land, a neat, comfortable residence and several town lots.

ARTHUR McKEW.

Arthur McKew, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Ridgeville, was born near Cincinnati, Ohio, August 12, 1819. His parents came to the United States from Ireland, and were married in Pennsylvania. They removed to Fayette County, Ind., when their son, Arthur, was but a child, and he grew up among the scenes that marked the pioneer period in this State. His educational privileges were necessarily very limited, yet by close application and faithful study he acquired sufficient knowledge to enable him to conduct intelligently and successfully an extensive business in later years, and qualify himself for a varied and successful career as a merchant, miller and banker. When about twelve years of age he came to Randolph County, Ind, with his parents, and located with them on a farm directly across the river from the present site of Ridgeville. Here a great portion of his time was employed in assisting his father to clear his land and cultivate his farm, until he had nearly attained his twenty-first year. During this period, however, he spent a term of four months at school in Fayette County, which closed his school life. Upon nearing his majority, he started out to earn a livelihood for himself, and for the next three years worked as a farm laborer, at very low wages, but managing to save a portion of the little pittance he earned. After working thus for about three years, he learned the plasterer's trade, without assistance from any one, and was engaged at this pursuit, in connection with farming, until about twenty-eight years old. By that time, he had saved enough from his earnings to enable him to purchase a small farm, and invested it accordingly. He purchased sixty acres, and opened a store at what was then the cross-roads, but now the principal part of the town of Ridgeville. This little farm was the nucleus of a large landed estate, comprising 1,200 acres in a body, and the little store the beginning of a prosperous mercantile career. He conducted a large and promiscuous trade with farmers throughout the surrounding country, buying from them everything convertible into cash, and keeping his store supplied with the class of merchandise most in demand. His personal popularity, and his honorable and manly treatment of his customers secured to his establishment a large trade from all the surrounding country throughout a period of many years. His business grew with the years, and he became identified with other enterprises, thus making his interests varied and extensive. In 1854, he built a large and commodious storeroom at Ridgeville, and, in 1859, erected the "River Mill" at that point. In 1866, however, he tore down this establishment, replacing it with a larger and better mill, introducing steam power, and in every way improving his facilities for manufacturing the best of flour. He sold this mill in 1870, and purchased one at Walton, Ind., in 1875, removing it to Ridgeville. This mill, with all its fine machinery, together with a valuable lot of grain, were destroyed by fire on the 5th of May, 1877, but not discouraged by this disaster, he at once began the erection of a fine fire-proof mill, with all its appointments and machinery of the latest and most approved style. His industry and fine financial ability could not fail to return him golden rewards, and his fortune accumulated rapidly. Yet he never possessed any sordid propensities, and, instead of seeking to add to a fortune already ample, he found the greatest pleasure in disbursing his money in ways that would do good to his fellow-men, and ease the burden of some one less fortunate than he. It was written of him, by one who knew well, that "there is no material improvement in the town of Ridgeville that is not a monument to the industry and public spirit of this good man. There was never, during his lifetime, any good work commenced in this community that did not have him for a leader. He was one of the men born to lead; one of the men to whom it was given the power to succeed in almost every undertaking, and one of the grand old pioneers whose hands molded the growth and improvement of this county, and whose heart and pure life assisted to form habits aright in the lives of our people."

He was liberal to the poor, and his many acts of kindness and charity to this class gained him a place in their hearts that can never be filled by another. He contributed largely of his means to encourage public improvements throughout the county, and using his influence for the success of every enterprise designed to benefit the public. It is chiefly to his influence that Ridgeville is indebted for its excellent railroad facilities. He was one of the earliest friends of the Cincinnati, Richmond & Fort Wayne Railroad, and served as one of its Directors.

Although himself a Methodist, he gave to Ridgeville College (a Baptist institution) the ground upon which it is located, and this, with other donations, swelled his bounty toward this institution to the munificant sum of $11,000, while it proved his freedom from sectarian bias. He served as one of the Directors of this college from its founding until his death. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Winchester, and was the first Cashier of that institution. He founded the Ridgeville Bank, and served as its President until his decease.

In his political affiliations, Mr. McKew was at first an anti-slavery Whig. Later, however, he identified himself with the Republican party, and was a valued member of that organization. He filled several elective offices, among them that of County Commissioner, in which capacity his fine judgment proved of great value to the material interests of the county. He was an uncompromising temperance man, and a strong ally of the temperance cause. He united with the order of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons in 1851, and for more than thirty years was an active member. He transferred his membership to Doric Lodge, No. 362, at Ridgeville, upon its organization, and was identified with it at the time of his death. He was a Royal Arch Mason in the Council at Winchester, and was unanimously admitted as a Sir Knight in the Commandery at Richmond, Ind., but was never initiated. He died on the 1st day of January, 1882, mourned by all who had known him in life.

He was married, in March, 1844, to Margery, daughter of Joab Ward, and sister of Hon. Thomas Ward, of Winchester. Six children were the fruits of this union, all of whom are now deceased, save Melissa E., wife of W. F. Studebaker, of Ridgeville. His wife still survives him, occupying the home where they spent the years of a happy wedded life, ere death severed the tie that had so long bound their hearts as one.

Although dead, Arthur McKew has left a name that will always be honored and revered by those who knew him in life, while his connection with the public improvements of this county have placed him among its leading citizens.

ASA ORCUTT, carpenter, Ridgeville, was born in Randolph County, Ind., October 10, 1840. His father, Jacob C., was born in Massachusetts, and his mother, whose maiden name was Christina Rarick, was born in Pennsylvania. They came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838, where the father died in 1846, and the mother in 1873. His father was a soldier in the Indian wars, and his grandfather Rarick in the war of the Revolution. Mr. Orcutt was married, on the 24th of August, 1862, to Miss Anna E. Haershman, daughter of Jacob Haershman, a native of Pennsylvania. He died in 1863. They have one son—Reuben, born January 23, 1864. Mr. Orcutt was reared a farmer, and followed that occupation until sixteen years of age. He learned the carpenter's trade, and has ever since been engaged in that vocation. He has succeeded by industry, and is now comfortably situated.

HENRY A. RARICK, milling, Ridgeville, was born in Dayton, Ohio, June 12, 1846. His father, Dr. H. J. Rarick, was born in Germany, and his mother, whose maiden name was Catharine Wertz, was born in Pennsylvania. Both are now living at Dayton, Ohio. Mr. Rarick came to Indiana in 1876. In 1862, he enlisted in the Union army, and was engaged in thirteen battles, among which were the battles of Arkansas Post, Vicksburg, Stone River and Chickamauga. He was in the Red River expedition, and was twice wounded, but not seriously. He was mustered out of the service in 1865. On the 16th of October, 1867, he was married to Isabella Ray, daughter of William Ray, a tanner, of Indianapolis, Ind. Mr. Rarick has long been engaged in milling pursuits, but has recently adopted the vocation of farming. He has a good farm of eighty acres in Section 22. He was a member of the Seventeenth Independent O. B. Light Artillery, and still retains, as a relic, the saber he carried through the war.

ABRAHAM ROE, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Ohio April 10, 1819. His father, Ezekiel, was born in Pennsylvania, and his mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Funk, a native of the same State. His father died June 20, 1860, and his mother in 1863, both in Randolph County, Ind. Mr. Roe came to this county at a time when Indians and wild game abounded. He has killed, according to his own testimony, 970 deer, the largest part of this number having been killed in this county, and his father was also a successful marksman. Mr. Roe was married, February 28, 1844, to Hannah Renbarger, a native of Randolph County, Ind. They are the parents of four children, only one of whom, Elizabeth, now survives. She is the wife of L. L. Williams. Mrs. Roe is the daughter of Abraham and Rachael (Luellen) Renbarger, the former a native of Kentucky, and the latter of Ohio. Mr. Roe has always followed the occupation of farming. He has eighty acres of fine land, and is a successful farmer. He and wife are members of the M. E. Church, and in politics he is identified with the Republican party.

MRS. ANGELINE WHIPPLE, housekeeper, Ridgeville, was born in Randolph County, Ind. Her father, Reuben Whipple, was born in Delaware County, Ohio, in January, 1834. Her mother, whose maiden name was Mary Orcutt, was born in Darke County, Ohio, October 18, 1838. Mrs. Whipple was married, on the 4th of May, 1876, to Newton McKew, a native of Randolph County, Ind., and son of Arthur McKew. Her husband was born July 13, 1854, and died July 6, 1879. They had two children—Newton A. and Ida, of whom only the former survives. Ida died September 25, 1878, aged thirteen months. Mr. McKew was a member of the M. E. Church, and a life member of the Missionary Society. Reuben Whipple was a member of the Eighty-fourth Indiana Regiment. He enlisted in 1861, and served three years.

ALEXANDER WOOD, farmer and lawyer, Ridgeville, was born in Darke County, Ohio, October 30, 1832. His father, Samuel Wood, was born in Virginia May 22, 1794, and his mother, Elizabeth (Thompson) Wood, was born at Elizabethtown N. J., March 4, 1801. His grandfather was born July 4, 1760, in North Carolina, and his grandmother, Jemima Phillips, was born in Delaware January 26, 1774. They were married January 15, 1793. Mr. Wood's parents came to Randolph County, Ind., in February, 1837. His father served in the war of 1812, and his grandfather Wood in the Revolutionary war under Gen. Greene. He was wounded in the hip at Gilford Station, and was at the battle of Bunker Hill, Eutaw Springs, and others. His grandfather, Thompson, served one year in the war of 1812. Mr. Wood was reared on a farm in this county, and in youth enjoyed good educational advantages. After completing the common school course, he graduated in the classical department of Ridgeville College. He studied law, and on the 4th of July, 1855, was admitted to the bar. His time since that has been devoted more or less to his profession, and by diligence in his chosen field he has made life a success. He has a handsome residence and 100 acres of land adjoining the corporation of Ridgeville, also a good business house on Walnut street, in Ridgeville. His brothers, George and William, were both killed by Indians, in Minnesota, in 1857; his brother, Charles R., enlisted in Company G, Eighth Indiana Regiment, in August, and died on the field in November of the same year; another brother, Elijah, enlisted in the three months' service when but sixteen years of age, and re-enlisted, in 1863, in the Seventh Indiana Cavalry. He received a wound in the arm, from the effects of which he died in August, 1864. Elisha, the twin brother of Elijah, enlisted in Company B, Seventh Indiana Cavalry, and served until the close of the war, and was mustered out under the general order disbanding the troops. The latter was a graduate in the classical course at Ridgeville College, also at Ann Arbor, Mich., Law School, and is now practicing law at Long Prairie, Minn. He has been engaged in some very important cases, and the Omaha papers speak of him in the highest terms as a lawyer and orator, when he was a member of the bar in that State.

ANDREW J. WOOD, grocer, Ridgeville, was born at Ridgeville, Randolph Co., Ind., September 12, 1842. His father, Samuel Wood, was born in Virginia, and his mother, Elizabeth, in New Jersey. They came to Randolph County, Ind., about the year 1836, where the father died in 1846. Mr. Wood enlisted in the Nineteenth Indiana Infantry, July 15, 1861, and re-enlisted in 1864, serving as Second Duty Sergeant. He participated in the battles of Gainesville, the second Bull Run, South Mountain, Fredericksburg, Antietam, Fitzhugh's, Gettysburg, Chancellorsville, Mine Run, Spottsylvania, the Wilderness, Laurel Hill, and minor engagements. He was wounded in the hip, while bearing the flag of his regiment. He has saved a portion of the flag, as well as the ball that pierced him. The flag was literally torn into shreds by the storm of bullets. His ancestors were soldiers, his father having served in the war of 1812, and his grandfather in the war of the Revolution. He was wounded at the battle of Bunker Hill. Mr. Wood was reared on a farm, but since the war has been in the grocery trade at Ridgeville. He has built up a good trade, and by industry has accumulated a comfortable share of this world's goods. He was married, July 25, 1867, to Rebecca Finch, a native of Ohio. Her parents were natives of the same State. Mr. Wood and wife are the parents of six children, viz.: Maud, Rex, Lenna, Alonzo, Annie, and one who died in infancy. Mr. Wood was made a Master Mason in 1864. He was Marshal of the town of Ridgeville for three years, and has held other positions of honor and trust. He recently spent three months on a hunting excursion in Montana, Dakota and Wyoming. During the war, a minie ball struck his cartridge-box, exploding sixty rounds of ammunition.

JOHN W. SEANEY, merchant, Ridgeville, was born in Wayne County, Ind., August 5, 1843. His father, Owen Seaney, was born in North Carolina, and came to Wayne County, Ind., at an early day; he married Martha Grimes, a native of the latter county. Both died in that county, the mother in June, 1846, and the father on the 17th of March, 1871. John W. Seaney came to Randolph County, Ind., and was married to Rosannah Starbuck December 5, 1866. Her father, Robert Starbuck, was a native of North Carolina, and her mother, whose maiden name was Hannah Addleman, was a native of Chester County, Penn. Her mother died April 8, 1870. Mr. Seaney and wife are the parents of five children, viz.: Erminnie, Oran E., Bertha E., Ina Ethel, Erma E., and of this number the eldest, Erminnie, is deceased. Mr. Seaney was reared on a farm; he taught school five years, then, in 1866, began the dry goods trade, as the successor of E. T. Bailey; he was also in the grocery trade for a time; he is now a member of the dry goods firm of Kitselman, Seaney & Co., who carry the largest stock of dry goods and ready-made clothing in Ridgeville. In 1870, Mr. Seaney was elected Trustee of Franklin Township, and served four terms consecutively. He has a good residence on the corner of Portland and Second streets, and is comfortably situated. His wife was born February 20, 1842. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and an estimable lady.

ANDERSON SLUSHER, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Wayne County, Ind., September 15, 1842; his parents, George and Sarah Slusher, are both natives of Virginia. They came to Randolph County in 1844, and now reside in Franklin Township. Mr. Slusher served the Union cause as a member of the Thirty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Regiment, and participated in the battles of Stone River and Chickamauga. In the latter engagement, he was shot through the face, and was honorably discharged in consequence of his wound; he was married, in June, 1865, to Eliza Ann Silvers; her father, George Deboyd, was born in Virginia, and her mother, Millie Waters, in Kentucky. Mr. Slusher and wife are the parents of six children, viz.: Annettie, Lucy, Alice, Nora, Arlie and Ella. Mr. Slusher has 112 acres of fine land in Section 21, and is a successful farmer.

JOHN E. SMITHSON, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Randolph County, Ind., May 15, 1830; his father, George W. Smithson, was born in Virginia; his mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Thornburg, was born in North Carolina. They came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1824, and settled in Stony Creek Township; his father was the second Justice of the Peace elected in that township; he was elected to this office in 1827, and re-elected in 1832; he was subsequently the candidate of the Abolition party for the office of Commissioner, but his party being in the minority, he was defeated. He was President of a society for the promulgation of the doctrines of Abolition. Grandfather Smithson was a Revolutionary soldier. The subject of this biography enjoyed a common-school education; he was reared a farmer, and has followed that occupation in connection with stock-raising all his life; he was married, March 14, 1850, to Caroline Beck. They are the parents of ten children, viz.: Eliza Jane, Elvin L., George M., William H., Kellie S., Sater,

Charles W., John M., Finley S. and Ira E., all of whom are now living. Mrs. Smithson's father was a native of Pennsylvania, and her mother a native of Maryland. Mr. Smithson and wife are both members of the Christian Church, and Mr. Smithson is a member of the Masonic fraternity; he has 139 acres of fine land adjoining the farm of his father, in Section 15.

ISAAC N. STRATTON, merchant, Ridgeville, was born in Jay County, Ind., February 12, 1839. His father was born in Pennsylvania. His mother was born in West Virginia, but was reared in Ohio. They moved to Jay County, Ind., in 1837. His mother died in that county in 1857. His father still resides there, and at the age of eighty years is still hale and hearty. Mr. Stratton enjoyed a common-school education, and afterward taught school. He followed the occupation of farming in early life, and up to the outbreak of the late rebellion, but has since been otherwise engaged. He enlisted in the Thirty-ninth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, in July, 1861. Subsequently his regiment was supplied with horses, and served as mounted infantry. They "veteranized" in 1864, and were known as the Eighth Cavalry. Mr. Stratton participated in the battles of Pittsburg Landing, Stony Creek, Chickamauga, the battles around Chattanooga, and the entire series of battles from Atlanta to the surrender of Johnston. He was commissioned Lieutenant in 1862, and assigned to Company C. He was promoted to the office of Captain in 1864, taking command of Company I, and was mustered out in 1865. At the battle of Pittsburg Landing, he was wounded in the shoulder. Since the close of the war, he has been engaged chiefly in mercantile pursuits, and is now in the grocery trade at Ridgeville. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and I. O. O. F., and stands high in the community. On the 14th of February, 1867, he was married to Emma F. Hiatt. Her father, William Hiatt, was born in Randolph County, Ind., June 24, 1822. Her mother's maiden name was Malintance E. Ward. Both her parents are now deceased. Her father died in 1862, and her mother in 1868. Capt. Stratton and wife have five children living, viz.: Nellie G., Alice C., Melvin B., Ruth W. and Edith M.

ROBERT H. SUMPTION, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Darke County, Ohio, October 30, 1817. His father, Charles L., moved to Randolph County in 1835. His mother, Mary Embree, was born in Tennessee and died in Franklin Township, Randolph County, in 1839. His father died in 1851. The latter was Captain of a company in the war of 1812, and served under Gen. Harrison during the entire war. Mr. Sumption was married on the 23d of April, 1845, to Berilla Ward, who was born in Randolph County, Ind., January 25, 1825. Her father, Joab Ward, was born in North Carolina and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1819. Her mother, Amy Ward, was also a native of North Carolina. Mr. Sumption and wife have three children living, viz.: Josephine, David W. and Albert O., and one, William, deceased. Their children are all at present residing in the State of Nebraska, the sons being agents on the Union Pacific Railroad, while the daughter, Josephine, is teaching school at Madison, in that State. She was elected preceptress in the female department of Ridgeville College for 1881, having graduated at that institution with the highest honors. She stood at the head of her classes and had no superior in the school. Mr. Sumption and wife, as well as two of their children, are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church. He has been Postmaster for ten years and a Notary Public for eight years. He is Treasurer of the college at Ridgeville, a member of the College Financial Committee, and one of the College Trustees. He has a good private residence and two business houses at Ridgeville, also a number of town lots. D. W. died April 15, 1882; Josephine was married to Mr. Al Tyrrel, a banker of Madison, Neb., October 5, 1881.

JOAB WARD, JR., farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Franklin Township, Randolph County, Ind., May 14, 1846. His father, Joab Ward, was born in North Carolina, and his mother, whose maiden name was Amy Graves, was born in Ohio. Both parents are now deceased. His father came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1819, and died November 5, 1874, at the age of eighty-four years. His mother died in 1864, aged sixty-six years. Mr. Ward was married, April 26, 1866, to Ann Webb, who died July 5, 1875. There were four children by this marriage, two of whom, Della and Grant, are now living. On the 20th of November, 1879, Mr. Ward was wedded to Ruth Resur, his present companion. They have one son, Kit Carson. Mrs. Mary Ward is the daughter of Cyrus and Mary (West) Resur, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Ohio. She is a member of the United Brethren Church. Mr. Ward is a member of the M. E. Church, a Republican in politics and a good citizen. He has a good farm of 146 acres in Section 13. His brother, David, served in the Union army for three years. He was a member of the Sixty-ninth Indiana Regiment, and was appointed Hospital Steward. After the war, he practiced medicine. He died January 26, 1874.

GEORGE W. WESLER, farmer and proprietor of saw-mill, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Wayne County, Ind., August 26, 1847. His father, Thomas Wesler, was born in Chester County, Penn., April 12, 1799. His mother, Susanna (Conkle) Wesler, was born in the city of Philadelphia. She died in September, 1879, from the effects of injuries sustained by being thrown from a buggy. His grandfather, Conkle, was a Captain in the American Navy during the Revolution. He was captured by the British and held a prisoner until the close of the war. His great-grandfather was also a Revolutionary soldier, and was at the attack on Quebec. The elder Wesler, father of George W., settled in Wayne County, Ind., in 1834. The subject of this sketch enlisted, in 1864, in the One Hundred and Thirty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteers, and served five months. On the 23d of April, 1868, he was married to Miss Emily Henley. They have two children, Lizzie F. and Harry. Mrs. Wesler was born in Wayne County, Ind., September 8, 1850. Her father was a native of the same county. Her mother, Lucy A. Meridith before marriage, was born in North Carolina. Both her parents are now living at Richmond, Ind. Mr. Wesler engaged in the pursuit of farming, and was also a partner in the saw-mill firm of Wesler & Bornes, at Stone Station. He was an energetic man, and had made life a success. His wife is a member of the Society of Friends. On the 3d day of March, 1882, Mr. Wesler was instantly killed while getting ready to begin work in his saw-mill by an explosion of the boiler in the mill which destroyed the building and the machinery; three other men (employes in the mill) were also killed at the same time.

WARD TOWNSHIP.

GENERAL.

As at present constituted, it embraces Township 21 north, Range 14 east of the Second Principal Meridian, comprising a full township of thirty-six sections, equal to 23,040 acres. It lies wholly in the Mississinewa Valley. That river passes through the township in a direction nearly west and toward the north side of the township, the larger portion being south of the river. Massey's, Hickory and Mud Creeks, from the south, and Goshen Creek, from the north, flow through the township to the Mississinewa. It is one of the northern tier in the county, extending on the north to the Jay County line. The surface is level or moderately rolling. Near the river the land is somewhat hilly; farther toward the head of the streams, it becomes rather level, though less inclined to be marshy than if nearer the "divide" between the two rivers.

Originally, like the county in general, the earth was covered with a thick and heavy forest of many kinds of trees, the weight and burden of which sixty years of wearisome labor, performed by two or three generations of hardy yeomanry, have scarcely been able to remove. Indeed, much still remains, greatly more, in fact, than the farm needs of the county require. To get rid of the timber has, in days gone by, been a fearful task; a task, too, till within a few years, well-nigh useless, except that it was taken out of the way. The labor of clearing the ground and of fencing the fields, is greater by far than would readily be supposed, and the amount of work of that kind that the farmers of Randolph County have accomplished since first the white man's ax became a factor in the human problem in this region, is past all belief. The ringing ax, the crashing branches, the thundering trunk, the resounding maul, the cracking of the teamster's whip, all the various noises of a woodman's life, have for ages past been the music of the clearing. It is true, indeed, that now, when the timber is nearly gone, a market begins to spring up. The increasing needs of civilization in town and in country, the numberless uses of material of wood, the growing scarcity of forest trees throughout the country—all these conspire to create a larger demand for the timber product. Not twenty years ago, the stately walnut trees abounding throughout the woods were reckoned no more than oak or ash, and men employed that wood for uses of an ordinary kind. But now the highly increased price has swept the walnut almost wholly from among us, and ash is rapidly taking its place. Even the elm, that tree in olden time so utterly worthless, too mean to burn itself up, has lately come to be a marketable commodity, and farmers get more for the elms themselves than no long time ago the choicest woods could command.

The growth of the manufactures of the county, and that of the towns, large and small among us, and everywhere, the pike roads for convenient hauling, the railroads for general marketing, conspire to make the small remnant of the timber product which is yet in existence, worth indefinitely more than the whole vast body that sixty years ago hid the surface in everlasting shadow. The forest is melting away, and the tilled and fertile fields have been, through all these years, slowly and painfully, but with the certainty of fate, taking its place. The cabin has given way to the hewed-log house, and that again to the tasteful and neat frame dwelling, or even the palace-like brick or stone mansion. The scrub cattle roaming through the woods are beheld no more, but the well fenced pastures are adorned with the splendid blooded stock, the product of ages of improvement; the "elm peelers," those marvels of voracity and fleetness, that could gnaw the bark off the trees and could outrun a dog—oh! where are they? and echo answers, Where?

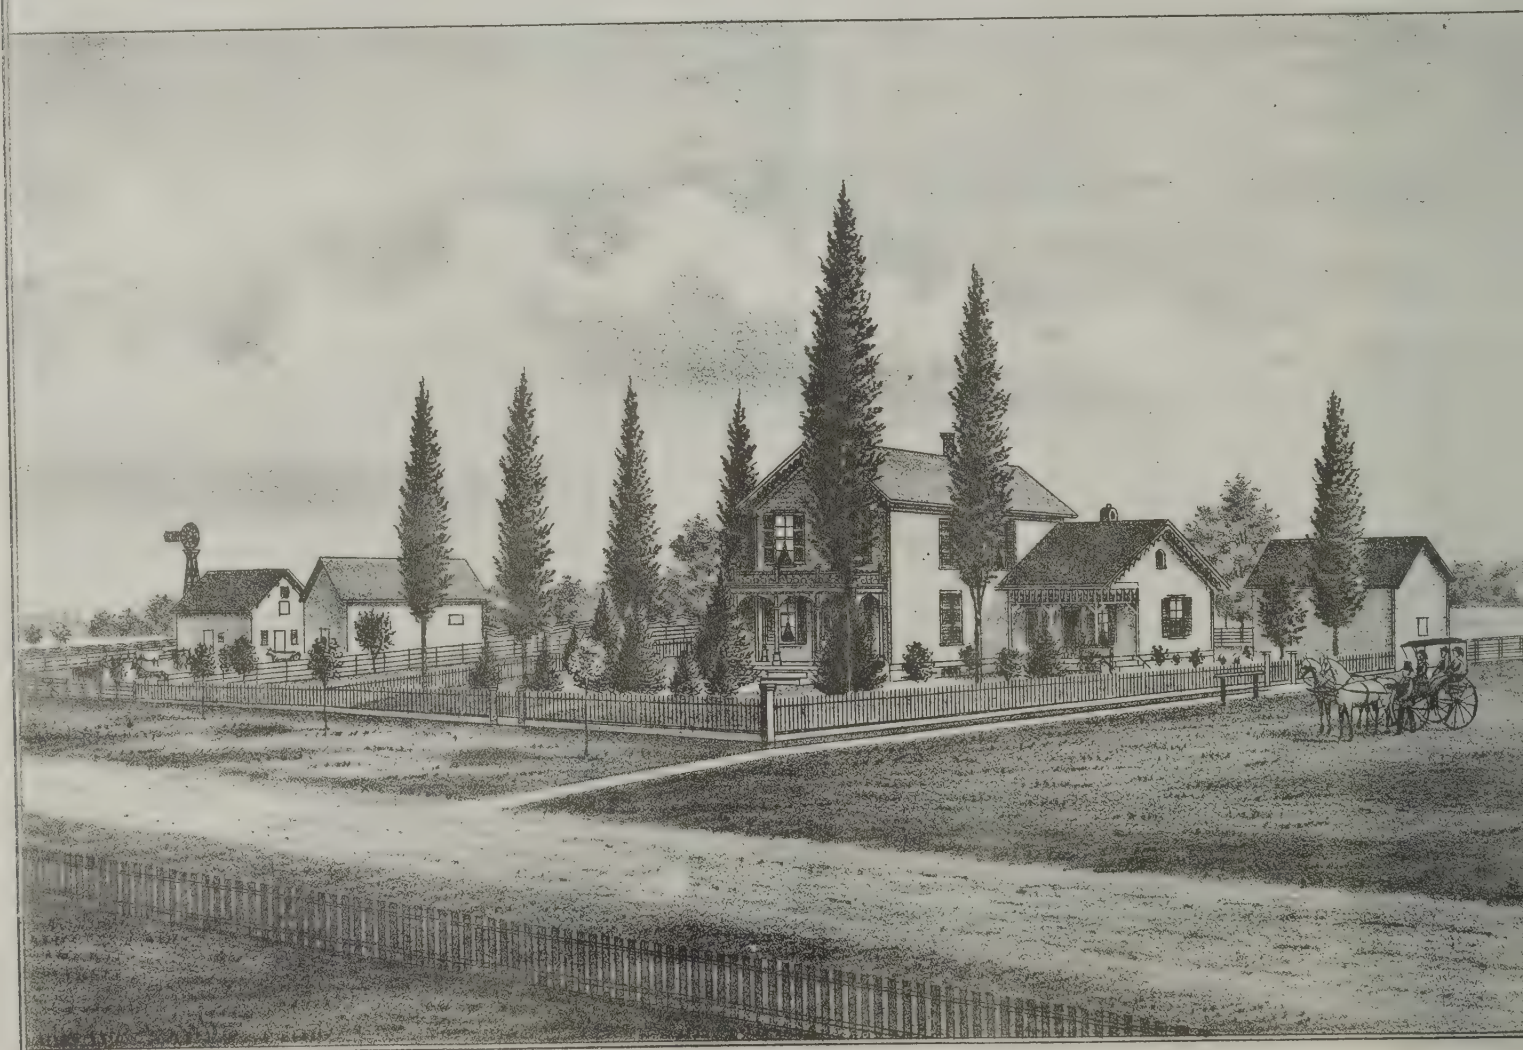
ALEX. VORHIS.

MRS ALEX. VORHIS.



RESIDENCE OF ALEX. VORHIS, {RANDOLPH.} WARD TP. RANDOLPH CO. IND.

In all these changes for the better, Ward Township has enjoyed a reasonable share. Her farms are cleared, her dwellings have arisen, tasteful and sightly, through all her borders; her barns receive with joy the overflowing products of her soil; her orchards and her grain fields and her meadows gladden the eyes, and enrich the pockets as well, of her skillful and prosperous farmers. But not of this latter state, but rather of the rude beginning of things do we purpose to speak.

EARLY HISTORY.

A few settlers found their way upon the Mississinewa very rly in the history of the county. When, in August, 1818, the first election was held in the then new county of Randolph, several families resided in the Mississinewa Valley, and most of them east of Deerfield. Just who were there at that early time cannot now with certainty be determined. The first entry in the Mississinewa Valley and in Ward Township as well, appears to have been near the river, and not far from the east side of the township. It comprised a whole section, Section 13, Town 21, Range 14, and was entered by James Strain. The tract lies between Judge Miller's old farm and the Mississinewa. Whether Mr. S. settled on the tract is not now known. We have not met his name in any account of the primitive settlement of the valley.

The next entry was by Daniel Richardson, S. W. Section 12, Town 21, Range 14, May 21, 1817. The land lay directly north of Strain's section, and on both sides of the river. June 10, 1817, or three weeks after Richardson's entry, eight other entries were made, all quarter sections but one, 1,360 acres in all. The parties were James Wilson, Benjamin Lewallyn, David Kite, Daniel Kite, James and John Jacobs, Joel Canady, James Reed. These tracts all lay in Sections 7, 8, 9 and 10, Township 21, Range 14, comprising one-quarter of Section 7, three-quarters of Section 8, one half of Section 9 and three eighties in Section 10. These lands extended from Burkett Pierce's, on the west, to one and one half miles east of Deerfield, three miles in length, but did not include the town itself. With Meshach Lewallyn's and James Strain's, the whole extent of the river for seven miles had been taken up, except one and three-fourths miles in two "gaps." In the course of three years, or by October, 1820, most of the rest of the land on and near the river and several tracts along Mud and Hickory and Goshen Creeks, had been purchased.

Martin Boots and Henry Kizer had located on Mud Creek, the latter far up near Stone Station. James and Tense Massey, Allen Wall and others, had settled on the river east of Deerfield. Robert Taylor was on the creek which comes from the north to the Mississinewa, at the Ritenour Church.

Samuel Cain, Jeremiah Lindsay, Jacob Weaver and William Jackson had entered land on Hickory Creek, south of Deerfield. James Jacobs had entered the Ritenour land. Joseph Hinshaw entered the land embracing the west part of Deerfield, June 23, 1817. The east part was in Section 16 and therefore school land.

But though the Mississinewa Valley was nearly all occupied within three or four years, or by the close of 1820, yet the growth of the region was exceedingly slow. The valley was isolated. The settlers could scarcely get out in any direction. They were away from any great route of travel. One of the chief western thoroughfares passed through Winchester, and connected the central portion and the White River Valley with the world at large. But not so with the Mississinewa. The regions north did not open till 1835 to 1837, and then only was the whole county occupied, and the world "swallowed them up" with settlements on every side. Deerfield sprang up and for many years became an important trade center. The swamps between Winchester and Deerfield stood almost as an impassable barrier until a late period. As late as 1859, there was a "corduroy bridge" on that northern road, one and one-fourth miles long. Imagine the road then, thirty or forty years before that time. But the forests have been cleared, and the swamps drained and the northern "pike" has been built, and Ward Township has gained full connection with the rest of the world.

Through the whole county, and in Ward Township as well, religion found early and effective entrance. As soon, perhaps, as 1823 or 1824, may be even before that, the "circuit riders" had ridden through swamps and crossed those creeks and found and fed those sheep in the wilderness. Meetings were had at Riley Marshall's, Allen Wall's and elsewhere east of Deerfield, and at some friendly dwelling west, perhaps at Mr. Ritenour's. But very early Ritenour's Meeting House was built and that graveyard established, and not long afterward, the old Prospect Meeting House was erected, and that second cemetery also dedicated to the memory of the dead ones dear. Two generations have come and gone, and those now ancient meeting houses have completed their work and fulfilled their mission. How many, many times have their sacred walls echoed the sound of the Gospel message as it fell upon the eager ears of the scores or even hundreds of anxious listeners gathered from their simple forest homes to take part in the holy service, and feed their longing souls with heavenly manna. But the cemeteries remain open, in those solemn inclosures, as of old, and often, alas! does the ground receive the dead from sight. Slowly, too, O how slowly, did the delights of knowledge and the means of instruction find their way among those people so far, so far away from their fellow-men. Still, schools were found even there. The log cabin, the huge stick chimney, the greased paper lights, the split pole seats, the puncheon floors, the slab writing desks against the wall, were prepared by these forest dwellers, and not a few who have since "made their mark" among men had their "start" in the wooden schoolhouses of Ward Township. Hon. Thomas Ward, Hon. Enos L. Watson, Thomas Kizer, Esq., Col. Martin B. Miller and more besides, emerged from those dim forest shades into the brighter sunshine of the county seat, or elsewhere. Mr. Ward says that he never attended any school in his life, except those taught in a greased paper log cabin.

But enough; we can no longer dwell upon the history in detail of Ward Township. Much that is of interest concerning its affairs will be found in the treatment of the topics which are considered in connection with the county at large. The entries of land in the early time, as they appear in the office of the County Auditor, are given below:

Ward Entries—James Strain, Section 13, 21, 14, October 16, 1816; Daniel Richardson, S. W. 12, 21, 14, May 21, 1817; James Willson, N. W. 10, 21, 14, June 10, 1817; James Willson, W. S. Ward is bounded north by Jay County, east by Jackson, south by White River, west by Franklin. Ward Township was entered mostly between 1836 and 1838 inclusive, during which time an immense amount of land was purchased in Randolph County of the United States, and great numbers of families took up their abode within its limits. Among the chief settlers on the Mississinewa may be named Burkett Pierce, Joab Ward, Elias Kizer, Daniel B. Miller, William Simmons, Messrs. Ritenour, Parsons, Cain and others not now in memory.

Mr. Parsons built the first mill on the Mississinewa after Lewallyn's at Ridgeville. That mill stood some years; was washed away, and Mr. Ritenour built another, 100 yards lower down.

Joab Ward's house was the scene of the encounter of the Indians with Ward and Kizer, and the shooting of Fleming in the bushes by Jesse and John Gray was near by. David Connor's trading house was above Deerfield, and the Mississinewa Valley witnessed many early trials and perils springing from the whisky so freely dealt by the traders of those times to those poor natives of the forest wilds. But those were days of ignorance. The children of many of the whisky-sellers of pioneer times are among the most sturdy advocates of total abstinence of the present day. Let our motto be, "Out of the darkness, into the light." Rather than widely parade in unseemly prominence any of the evil traits in the characters of the ancestral dwellers, it were better to follow the primal example of filial affection, and, like the children of Noah of old, taking a garment upon the shoulders of two, with mingled feelings of reverence and sorrow, lovingly to shield the unsightly failings from public gaze, and, in the full noontide radiance of this latter day, walk ever forward toward the light, onward and upward, ever into the light, honoring our fathers for their heroism, copying filially their virtues, shunning their failings, that our pathway may be like "the path of the just, shining more and more unto the perfect day."

ROADS.

Three old routes of travel passed through Ward Township—from Winchester to Ridgeville, from Winchester to Portland via Deerfield, and from Greenville northwest through Deerfield, Ridgeville and Fairview.

Two railroads pass through the township now—the Pan-Handle and the "Shoo-Fly," or, more strictly, the P., C. & St. L., and the Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroads. Three stations are in the township—Saratoga and Randolph, upon the P., C. & St. L.; and Stone Station, upon the Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad. They are but small towns. The larger towns adjacent—Union City, Winchester, Ridgeville, Farmland—sap their vitality and prevent their growth.

One principal pike, the one extending north toward Portland, has been in existence for several years, and it is of priceless value to those low and level regions, erewhile wellnigh impassable. The smooth and gravelly surface, the solid highway, is widely in contrast to the "corduroy" that used to stretch its rough and weary length for miles and miles at intervals toward the northern regions—northward, constantly northward, farther and still farther, across swamps, through jungles, over creeks and rivers, through bottomless morasses, into the gloomy, overshadowing forests, those rude paths, those primitive roads—they could not be called highways—would unroll their endless extent. And now these awful "corduroys," which used to jerk and shake and pound and rattle, with their endless "pounce" and "bounce," by sunlight and starlight, in rain or in shine, come winter come summer, do that fearful work no more forever!

Other pikes also are in process of construction—one east and west through Stone Station, through Saratoga east and west, and perhaps others still.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 21, Range 14—Section 1, 3, 19, 1836–37; Section. 2, 22, 1837; Section 4, 15, 1836; Section 5, 25, 1832–37; Section 6, 27, 1837–38; Section 7, 9, 17, 1817–36, Benjamin Lewallyn, Joel Canady, Joseph Hinshaw; Section 8, 1817–18, Jacobs, Kite, June 10, 1817; Sections 10, 12, 18, 1817–37, James Wilson, D. & J. Richardson, James Jacobs; Section 11, 23, 1831–37; Section 13, 1816, James Strain, October 16, 1816, first entry in township (whole section at once); Section 14, 1819–38, Joseph Cravens; Section 16, school land; Sections 20, 29, 1820–37, Martin Boots, Elias Kizer; Section 21, 1818–36, Richard Beeson, October 5, 1818; Section 24, 1818–37, James Massey, November 5, 1818; Section 28, 1819–36, John Hall, November 18, 1819; Section 30, 1822–38, Henry Kizer, May 4, 1822; Section 31, 1820–38; Sections 26, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36, 1836–38. Ward was entered between 1816 and 1838, inclusive.

TOWNS.

Deerfield—Location, Sections 16 and 17, 21, 14, south side of Mississinewa River; Curtis & Butler, proprietors; twenty-nine lots; streets, north and south, Meridian; east and west, Sycamore, Main, Hickory. Recorded October 14, 1833.

Lank's Addition (east of old town)—S. D. Woodworth, surveyor; twenty-six lots. Recorded October 10, 1837.

Edger & Searl's Addition—E. Edger and —— Searl, proprietors; twenty-eight lots. Recorded June 3, 1852. Winchester, seven and a half miles; Union City, ten and a half miles; Randolph, one mile; Farmland, fourteen miles; Stone Station, four miles; Ridgeville, three miles; Fairview, twelve miles; Portland (Jay County), ten miles.

The village was laid out in 1833, by Messrs. Curtis & Butler, and surveyed by D. W. McNeil, of Portland. The town is located north of Winchester, on the State road laid out from Greenville west, and running by Fairview into Delaware County. A pike connects the place with Winchester. The "Pan-Handle" (P., C. & St. L.) Railroad is within about a mile south of the town. The village grew at one time to be of considerable size, and was in early days the center of a large and prosperous trade, the best time in that respect being from 1845 to 1855. The principal business men of the place during or before that time were Messrs. Butler, Searl, Edger, Whipple and others. Much travel passed northward and westward upon the roads crossing each other at that place, although those highways, especially from Winchester north, were often wellnigh impassable, notably in the winter and spring. Much grain and stock changed hands there; many goods were sold; a woolen factory, a grist-mill, etc., were built, and altogether, that town became a lively place.

But the era of railroads in this region began, and drew the current of business elsewhere. Especially since the Union & Logansport and the R. & G. R. R. R.'s have been made has the town rapidly declined. There is now very little business. There is one small store; the wool factory has been burned; no grain, etc., is bought or handled, and trade is wellnigh extinct. The grist-mill still prospers, though its custom has fallen off. At one time it had a great run of business, people coming from Wabash, Centerville, Greenville, etc. There were other mills, but the Deerfield Mill had a great reputation, and drew much custom from an extensive region. A large number of business men have been at the town during its existence. Merchants: Edward Edger, Searl, U. Pierce, Fitzpatrick, George Wilt, Robert Watson, John Collett, David T. Holly, William Drew, Sam Clevinger, Daniel Pierce.

Hotels—Messrs. Thomas Butler, Searl, Mock, Voris, Wall, Pierce, Collett, Whipple, etc.

Physicians—Messrs. Longshore, McAfee, Banks, Washburn, Snow, Hearn, Smith, Hall, Bosworth, Lambert, Purcell, Ballard, Clevinger, etc.

Mr. Ritenour built a water grist-mill on Mississinewa River in early times, which was bought by Jason Whipple in 1847, and run by him till 1855. Jason Whipple built a new steam-mill in 1855, still in operation. A woolen factory was here for many years, owned at different times by Robert Murray and Dennis Hess, etc. It was twice burned, and the last time (1875) was not rebuilt. There was at one time a tannery and an ash factory.

There are at present one small store, one grist-mill, one smith shop, one church (Methodist), one schoolhouse, one post office, one toll gate, one saw-mill (near by). A new station (Randolph) has grown up where the pike crosses the Pan-Handle Railroad, one mile south of Deerfield.

The principal citizens of Deerfield and vicinity are Jason Whipple, Willis Whipple, Daniel Pierce, Benjamin Clevinger, Dr. Purcell, Burgett Pierce, William C. King, John Clapp, Quincy Pierce, John Michael, John Sipe, David Harker, Benjamin Clevinger (east of town), Robert Collins and others. There is a thriving store a mile north of town, on the pike which crosses the Mississinewa just north of the place.

At one time, Deerfield was the only post office between Winchester and Fort Wayne. Deerfield contains thirty houses and 200 people.

Randolph—Location, on Pan-Handle Railroad, eleven miles west of Union City, one mile south of (old) Deerfield, three miles east of Ridgeville, at the point where the Deerfield & Winchester Pike crosses that railroad, upon Sections 16, 17, 20 and 21, 21, 14. I. H. Fitzgerald, proprietor. Recorded May, 1867; seventy-four lots; size of lots, 44x125 feet; streets sixty feet wide; Main and Line streets, eighty feet wide; alleys, twenty feet wide.

Miller's Addition—Sylvester Miller, proprietor. Recorded July 8, 1874; twenty-four lots. The streets of the town are, north and south, Diamond, Pearl, Pike; east and west, Miller, Line, Main, South. The town lies on both sides of the railroad.

The growth of the place has been slow, and it is yet quite small, being too near Ridgeville (a point where two important railroads cross each other) for extensive trade. Some business, however, is done, and considerable grain and stock are handled.

There are as follows: One store, one smith shop, one warehouse, one post office, one toll gate, one schoolhouse, one lodge F. & A. M., one lodge I. O. O. F. Its chief citizens are Alexander Voris, Enos Myers, Benjamin Hawthorne, Thomas Addington, Darius Orr and others. The town contains about twenty houses and one hundred people.

Saratoga—Location, Section 25, 21, 14, on Pan-Handle Railroad; fifty-two lots; J. C. Albright, proprietor. The streets are, north and south, Barber; east and west, Washington. Recorded August 10, 1875

[Note.—Saratoga has been a town ten or twelve years or more than that.]

The town was begun under the name of Warren Station, about 1867, when the Pan-Handle Railroad was built, though the plat seems not to have been recorded till 1875. It grew up immediately upon the completion of the Union & Logansport Railroad, and has become the center of some trade.

There are three stores—John & J. F. Warren (grain-buyers), Cyrus Bowsman, Jacob Lucas. The smith shops are Davis, Elijah Frazier. There are two wagon shops—William Davis, Philip Devore; one saw-mill, J. St. Johns, corn-cracker; one milliner shop, Miss Bowsman; one post office, Cyrus Bowsman; one hotel, Cyrus Bowsman; one schoolhouse, two rooms; two churches—United Brethren, frame, 1870; Methodist Episcopal, brick, 1877; two physicians—Messrs. Evans and Ford; three carpenters—Harrison Pogue, George Browse, Enos Cole; thirty houses, 150 people, one cemetery.

The town has some growth, and does a fair business. It is seven miles from Union City, four miles from Randolph and five miles from Deerfield.

Residents in vicinity not already named are John Warren, in town; James Evans, southwest; Freeborn Charlton, west; Cyrus Cox, south; William Gaylor, southwest; Elisha Lawler, west; Joseph Lawler, north; V. R. Warren, north; Elihu Warren, north; Mrs. Lawler, west; N. Bowsman, north; George Limbard, northwest.

Stone Station (Clark Post Office)—Small unincorporated town and station on Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad, on Sections 30 and 31, 21, 14, four miles from Winchester and four miles from Ridgeville.

It is not a laid out town, but a small station on the Richmond & Fort Wayne Railroad, started about the time of the completion of that road, 1870. The place is small, with but little business.

There is one little store, kept by Thomas H. Johnson. There is a post office, Thomas H. Johnson; also one grain-buyer, Thomas H. Johnson. There is a saw-mill owned and run by Barnes & Clark. The place contains five or six houses. One stock-buyer lives near—George Wesler. He buys stock extensively, and Mr. Johnson handles a fair amount of grain. One pike has been built, passing east and west through the place, intending to connect the pike running north from Farmland with the Winchester & Deerfield pike. There seems no reason why Stone Station should not become a thriving little country center, suitable for a quiet village residence, near the railway but away from the bustle of a crowded town. A Free-Will Baptist society was formed in the vicinity in 1880–81, the meetings being held in Clark's Schoolhouse, one-half mile from the station. A church is soon to be built.

A fearful casualty occurred at the place in March, 1882. The boiler of a steam saw-mill exploded, killing several persons outright, and wounding others.

BIOGRAPHY.

Benjamin Clevinger was born in Pennsylvania in 1816, and came to Randolph County, Ind., about 1850; married first in Pennsylvania, but lost his wife there, and was married again, in Randolph County, in 1851. His second wife was Sarah Ann Smiley, who was born in 1838, and whose parents moved to Randolph County the same year. Mr. Clevinger moved to Pennsylvania after living awhile here, but he returned again and took up his permanent abode where he now lives, two miles east of Deerfield, on the Greenville State road. He has had only three children. He is a thriving farmer, owning about one hundred and forty acres of land; a Democrat in politics, and has been Township Trustee during two terms—1876–80. He is very careful of the public funds. Some think a little freer use of money would have been better economy in the long run. Mr. Clevinger is a respectable and influential citizen.

William Doty was born in Maryland. He came to Butler County, Ohio, and to Randolph County, Ind., the latter removal having been made in 1828. He was the father of eleven children, nine of whom are still living, and seven are married. Mr. Doty was a farmer, residing just across the Mississinewa River from Deerfield. He died about twenty years ago, and his wife sixteen years ago. There were but few settlers in what is now Ward Township when Mr. Doty came. The Masseys had come and gone; the Kizers, Burgett Pierce, Mr. Ritenour, Daniel B. Miller, Riley Marshall and a few others were living in the woods in that region. The town of Deerfield was not laid out (at least not recorded) till five years afterward (1833). A few settlers found their way to the Mississinewa very early, but the whole region remained nearly a wilderness till after 1825.

Samuel Emery. Among the quaint personages of the pioneer times of Randolph Co., Samuel Emery was conspicuous. We regret that no detailed history of him has been obtained. He was an early settler, among the first, and he died, a very old man, only a short time ago, yet no one has been found who can give a definite history of his life. Andrew Aker, in his "reminiscences," furnishes a hint from which to draw a picture of the odd, quaint, sturdy, brave, honest backwoodsman. He says, in substance: "There came to my store in Winchester a strange, uncouth-looking fellow, with a bundle of skins on his back. His pants were buckskin, and ripped up to the knee; the rim of his straw hat was half torn off, his shoes were ragged and tied up with hickory bark, and everything else in proportion. He wished to 'trade out' his roll of buckskins. He got several articles; we reckoned up, and found the account nearly even. He then said, 'I wish to get some other things—powder, lead and flints; will you trust me?' I asked Charles Conway. 'Oh, Sam Emery is all right; he is one of the substantial citizens out on the Mississinewa.' So I 'trusted' him, and he paid promptly. He traded much with me afterward, dealing always fairly, like the honorable man that he was." But no other story of him is at hand, and we add no more. [Mrs. Evans, daughter of Allen Wall, who settled on the river in 1819, says that Samuel Emery came years after her father, probably in 1826. He lived two miles north and one mile east of Deerfield, north of the river.]

Since writing the above, another incident has come to hand, which is so odd that we cannot withhold it. As to the truth of the tale we can say nothing, for we know nothing. A truthful man told us, but how it came to him we cannot tell.

Samuel Emery lost some money, and was considerably worried, for "money was money" in those times; besides, no one likes to lose a thing by having it stolen, at any time.

Edward Edger, then at Deerfield, thinking perhaps he could guess where the money had gone, since "boys will be boys," and sometimes think they need more than their "pap" thinks they do, advised Mr. Emery to a certain course, which he followed faithfully. He took the Bible and read a certain chapter five nights in succession, and told his family that he was doing it to find out who took his money, and that the one who had taken it would die on the fifth night. The last night, as the old man took down the Bible for the fifth time and began to read, one of the boys sang out, "Stop, dad; you might have a death in your own family!" He stopped, and made no more inquiry for his money (at least, not among the outside world). What transpired between "dad" and the boy, this deponent saith not, for a very good reason—he does not know. The boy who is concerned may be alive yet for all the author knows; if so, it is to be hoped that the whilom lad, be the story true or not true, will not be angry, since the crime, even if it were so, was not a very heinous one; and the story was really too good not to be told; and because, in so large and dry a work as a history has to be, some fun is, in fact, a sine qua non (thing indispensable); since also, according to the old couplet,

> "A little nonsense now and then
> Is relished by the best of men."

Some of the descendants of Mr. Emery are living in the region still.

Perry Fields lives east of Deerfield, on the old State road, and is a prosperous farmer and land-owner. He was born in North Carolina in 1802. His father moved to Tennessee in 1804. Perry Fields married Millie Bragg in 1826, and in 1833 they emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., settling in Ward Township. He bought 160 acres in the school section, and, soon after, forty acres more. He has kept on buying at various times until he now owns 365 acres. They have had five children. Three only are living, and they are married. Mr. Fields is a Methodist and a Democrat. He is aged, but active and sprightly for his years. Mrs. Fields died very suddenly in the early winter of 1880 (not far from Christmas). She was found in the morning, just before breakfast, sitting in her chair, entirely dead. She had been a member of the Methodist Church for nearly sixty years; in fact, ever since she was a young girl. She was an active Christian, and is greatly missed from her circle of friends and acquaintances. Her remains lie buried in Prospect Cemetery, and her aged, sorrowing companion is sadly, patiently waiting the final hour, when his body shall be laid solemnly and quietly by the side of that of this life-long bosom friend, and when his ransomed spirit shall go to meet her in the Paradise of rest on high.

[Perry Fields died August, 1882, aged eighty years.]

Jesse Gray was born September 9, 1789, at Newberry, S. C. His mother was a native of Ireland, and his father, having been born in Maryland, fought through the war of the Revolution, and emigrated to Wayne County, Ind., in 1810. Jesse Gray married Sarah Stone in 1808, and in 1811, in company with a brother-in-law, they set out for Indiana, the wives, children and movables "being brought upon horses equipped with pack-saddles." They did not sleep under a roof upon the route, but, finding some relatives in Knox County, Ky., they stopped there, doing this the more willingly since the Indians north of the Ohio River were hostile; the war with England was at hand, and the Indians mostly sided with the British. At the first call for volunteers, Jesse Gray answered the call, and joined the first company from that region. They were placed under Gen. Harrison's command at Cincinnati, and served in Northwestern Ohio. Returning from the war at its close, he found a wife overjoyed to see her husband once more, no word from him having reached her ears during his absence. They next moved to Wayne County, Ind., soon afterward to Butler County, Ohio, and in 1820, according to his memory, they emigrated to the banks of the Mississinewa River, in Randolph County, where he spent the time upon which, in his old age he looked back as his happiest years. His life was, however, by no means quiet, but full rather of adventure and romance. Deer-hunting, bear-killing, Indian-shooting and such like were but the events of his every-day career. He roamed the forests far and wide, Wayne, Randolph and Jay Counties, and we know not how much larger a scope of country, were the scenes of his wild pranks and his narrow escapes. Northern Randolph is full of verbal reminiscences of the old hunter, but accurate details are nevertheless not easily obtained. When Fleming, the Indian, was killed at Lewallyn's by Jesse Gray, and Smith, the mulatto whom Fleming had wounded, Gray was living on Mud Creek, near Elias Kizer's. On account of the trouble arising from that homicide, he left the county and the State, and resided for several years near Hill Grove, Ohio. Mr. Clapp, resident near Deerfield, saw him at Bridge's Mill, below Greenville, in 1826. Tyre Puckett says that Jesse Gray was indicted for the killing of Fleming, and that his father, Joseph Puckett, was one of the grand jury that found the indictment. William Warren says he was at Jesse Gray's house in 1832, and that he resided then near Hill Grove, Darke Co., Ohio. A lady resident near Deerfield says that her sister lived on old Jesse Gray's place five years, from about 1845 to 1859, and that that was north of the Loblolly, near the line of Adams and Wells Counties; that he was then a very old man, with a number of great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren. [She seems to be mistaken as to his great age at that time, since, if he was born in 1789, he would be in 1859 only seventy years of age.] His adventures were wild and romantic, and at least one person has written a life of the old pioneer, which, however, remains in phonetic manuscript, having never been published. The facts as to his early life before coming to Randolph or its vicinity were obtained from the gentleman who prepared the manuscript referred to, and who still [1881] has it in possession. Judge Wharry, of Greenville, an old man, and an almost life-long resident of that town, says that Jesse Gray, as early as 1824, had killed the Indian Fleming, had fled from Randolph on account of it, and was living near Hill Grove. He had a good farm there of 100 acres, but was a famous hunter. Judge Wharry says he has bought great quantities of furs and deerskins from Jesse Gray while he dwelt at Hill Grove, and also that Mr. Gray must have moved away to the "Loblolly" about 1840. Darke County History mentions Jesse Gray as settling probably the first in Jackson Township, a mile or two from Union City, Ohio, and not far from Hill Grove. After residing for many years north of the Loblolly, he is said to have removed to Jay County, in the region of Camden, and to have died there some years ago. His father, John Gray, is thought to have lived and died one mile north of Deerfield, having had eleven children. Jesse Gray himself was twice married, and had a large family. His brother, Hezekiah, went to Texas, and died there.

It is related of him in Darke County History that he used to tell of himself that at one time he encountered an armed Indian. He was armed also, and, being on equal footing, they, by mutual agreement, fired off their rifles and started for the next town. They came to a creek, and the Indian stooped down to drink. Jesse said that he left the Indian at the creek. What was done with him was not told, but the inference is that the old hunter made way with the Indian.

David S. Harker was born in Gloucester County, N. J., near Woodstown, January 22, 1827. His parents emigrated to Ohio in 1830, crossing the mountains in a wagon. He is the eldest of nine children—six boys and three girls. His father was a farmer, renting land in Butler and Warren Counties, Ohio. D. S. Harker, when twenty-one years old, married a daughter of Cornelius Whitenack, near Foster's Crossing, Warren Co., Ohio. Like his worthy father, they were very poor. His father gave him a cow and two pigs, and his mother gave him a bed; and they began housekeeping in an old shanty that had long been the resort of cattle, sheep and swine, having no chimney, windows nor doors, and built of round logs, in the middle of an open field. His wife's parents were also from New Jersey. They had a family of twelve children. The parents of both are dead, except his wife's mother, who is eighty years old, having 100 grandchildren and many great-grandchildren. Five years passed after he was married before he owned a horse. That time was spent in working by the day, month or job, cutting cord-wood, carrying rock on Gov. Morrow's mill-dam, up to his knees in water, etc., etc. He then purchased a team and began farming as a renter in Butler County, Ohio. In three years, he came to Ward Township, and purchased land where he now resides, and where he expects to spend the rest of his days. They have had twelve children; ten are living—three sons and seven daughters. Mr. Harker has been an active and earnest Methodist for more than thirty years, zealous for the church and for education, temperance and every good cause. He is a firm believer in the religion of the Bible, maintaining that Christ instituted His church for the salvation of the world, and that all other organizations are only "side-shows," good enough, perhaps, in their place, but powerless to save the souls of men. He says: "I believe that any man that preaches temperance and smokes and chews tobacco a hypocrite, and also that any young man who will choose an honorable occupation and stick to it, with economy, health and good habits, will certainly succeed."

Mr. Harker is an active, intelligent, estimable man, an honor to the community and respected by all who know him. He is a thorough Republican, and presents a pleasing spectacle of successful activity, being the owner of an excellent farm, with a good and substantial dwelling, for the comfort of his swarming family of ten living children.

Henry Kizer was born in Botetourt County, Va., in 1776; came to Ross County, Ohio, and then to Randolph County, Ind., in 1821. He had entered land in 1820, east of Stone Station, in Ward Township. The log house which he built not long after coming to the county is standing yet. His wife was born in 1770, being six years older than her husband. He died August 12, 1823, and his wife died the next day, August 13, 1823, both in middle life. They were earnest Methodists. Thomas W. Kizer, in speaking of his grandmother, when looking at the old family Bible, feelingly remarked: "There is not a word in this old Book that Grandmother has not read over and over." They had four children, all sons—Elias, Henry, Adam, William. Mr. and Mrs. K. are buried near Stone Station, in a private graveyard.

Andrew McCartney was born in Virginia or Tennessee, of Irish descent. He is said (how truly we do not know) to have been the father of twenty-seven children; was in the war of the rebellion, though old enough to have been exempt years before, belonging to the Eighty-fourth Indiana Regiment, and serving from August 21, 1862, to February 27, 1863.

Mr. McCartney is said to be a jovial and eccentric old man, and to have had a strange and eventful history, having resided in many places, and been married several times. His last marriage was in Ward Township, to a lady who is the daughter of [illegible] Key, an early pioneer of the Mississinewa Region from [illegible]ate of Tennessee, and a sister of John Key, a prominent [illegible]nt of that township.

[illegible]ld Mr. Key and his wife are both dead, and Mr. McCartney his wife occupy the old Key homestead. Andrew Key and wife were both buried at Prospect Graveyard, but no tombstones have been placed at their graves.

Mr. McCartney, true to his life-long adventurous instinct, has left his last wife, who is said not to be grieved above measure at her loss, and found for himself a residence in some other locality.

Daniel Mock was born in Rowan County, N. C., in 1784, coming afterward to Greene County, Ohio; he was in the war of 1812, receiving afterward a pension as a soldier. He became a settler in Ward Township in 1824, fixing his location on Clear Creek, south of the present residence of John H. Sipe. Mr. Mock had ten children, eight of whom were married, and are still living. His first wife died forty-three years ago, and his second wife eight years ago. Of the children, five reside in Indiana, two in Minnesota and one in Illinois. Mr. Mock purchased 160 acres, somewhat improved, and resided upon the tract until his death, not many years ago, a very old man. He was a farmer and a Democrat.

John Mock, the son of Daniel Mock, settled east of Deerfield, on Clear Creek, being born in 1811, and coming there with his father from Ohio in 1824. John Mock married Elizabeth Cain, and also Miss Watson, a sister of Hon. E. L. Watson, of Winchester, Ind. Mr. Mock had a large family; was a farmer and a merchant of Deerfield, and a prominent citizen in Randolph County. He was Justice of the Peace, and also Associate Judge with Peter S. Miller during the term including the year 1848. He emigrated West, and resides at Cambridge, Henry Co., Iowa, being a solid farmer of that region. He was in early times a Whig, and in later days a Republican. His second wife is still living. While residing in Randolph County, James G. Birney, the noted Abolitionist, and the first Liberty candidate for President of the United States, came into that neighborhood on business, and spent some time at his house, one result of which was that Mr. Mock also became an Abolitionist, and another result was that Mr, Birney became an extensive purchaser of lands in Randolph County, which land lay unoccupied, belonging to Mr. Birney's estate and his heirs, for many years. Mr. Mock was an active man in Randolph County, especially in his early manhood, and was well versed in pioneer affairs; and it is his delight now, in the evening of his bustling life, to dwell in memory upon those stirring scenes, and tell to listening friends the tales of his younger years. We had hoped to obtain for insertion in these columns an account of pioneer life and times from his lively pen, and have not been disappointed. The statement will be found in the "Reminiscences."

Amos Orcutt was born in 1825, in Darke County, Ohio, coming with his father to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838. He married, in 1848, Phœbe Ann Sutton, and has six children. They are all living, and four are married. He resides two and a half miles northwest of Deerfield, and is a farmer, owning 156 acres of land. In politics, he is a Democrat. He is a thriving citizen, and is prominent and respected.

Joseph Orcutt was born in 1795, in New York State; came to Rossville, Ohio, and to Darke County, Ohio, and, years afterward, to Ward Township, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1838. He entered seventy-six acres of land. His wife was Christina Rarick, sister of Philip Rarick, of Jay County. They were married in Darke County in 1820, and had eleven children. Ten of them grew up and were married, and nine are living now. His father was a Revolutionary soldier, receiving a wound in that war. Joseph Orcutt was a farmer, and also a teacher. He belonged to the Christian (New-Light) Church, and in politics was a Democrat. He died in 1848, only ten years after his emigration to this county, and while the region around him was still new and wild. His wife survived him twenty-four years, dying in 1872, having been left a widow with a large, dependent family.

Robert Parsons came of a distinguished stock in Tennessee. Three of his brothers were prominent attorneys in the Southern States, and one of them died by the bursting of a blood vessel while speaking on the stump as a candidate for Congress. Robert Parsons was born in 1775; removed in youth to Kentucky; about 1810, to Wayne County, Ind.; and in 1828 or 1829, he came to Deerfield, Randolph Co., Ind. Deerfield, however, was not laid out till years afterward. Mr. Parsons settled half a mile west of Deerfield, entered eighty acres of land, and built the first mill on the Mississinewa after Lewallyn's mill at Ridgeville. It was a log building, with two run of stones, grinding both corn and wheat. At first, flour was bolted by hand, but before long by water. The mill did a good business for those times, and stood some ten years. It was finally washed away, and Mr. Ritenour erected another, 200 yards farther down the river. That also has been gone for many years. Mr. Parsons married Mary Johnson, of Tennessee, a relative of President Andrew Johnson, and they had twelve children, only five of whom grew up and were married, and only one is now living. Mr. P. died near Deerfield about 1863, eighty-eight years old. His widow died in Miami County, Ohio, aged eighty years. Mr. Parsons was buried in Ritenour's Graveyard, west of Deerfield. He was a Democrat, voting, however, once for Henry Clay, with whom he was well acquainted. Two brothers of Mr. Parsons were slaveholders, owning 400 slaves apiece. His youngest brother, Silas, was living in Louisiana not long ago. The whole connection were prominent among their fellow-citizens, and many have become distinguished in the different professions.

Burgett Pierce was born in Virginia in 1793. His father and mother were Samuel and Delilah Pierce, and they moved to Ross County, Ohio, in 1800, ten miles from Chillicothe. Mr. Pierce was married to Elizabeth Ward, daughter of Joab Ward and sister of Thomas Ward, in 1815, she having been born in 1797. They moved to near Deerfield, Randolph County, in 1819 or 1820, and Mr. Pierce has resided in the same vicinity ever since that early time, more than sixty-three years. He owns the same farm still which first he occupied, though he has had his residence for some years with his son-in-law, William C. King, half a mile below Deerfield. His wife departed this life in 1859, aged about sixty-two years. Their children have been seven in number, to wit: Matilda, born in 1816, married Jeremiah L. Mock, had eight children, and died in 1876; Uriah, born in 1818, married Martha A. Mock, had six children, and died in 1878; Delila, died an infant; James, married Mercy Whipple, had thirteen children, three pairs of twins; Joel, married Sarah Collins and Julia Sherman, the last having one child; Nancy, 1828 (W. C. King), no children; Sarah, 1832. Burgett Pierce's descendants live mostly in Randolph County, and many of them are well-to-do farmers. Mr. Pierce is in his ninetieth year. Until lately, he has been hearty and sprightly. For a short time past, his powers have been failing, though he is still doing very well, considering his great age.

William Simmons came to Jackson Township very early, some say as early as 1827. He was an older brother of James Simmons, of Jackson Township. He used to live in Wayne County, Ind, as early as 1821, traveled through the region, hunting, to and from Fort Wayne along the "Quaker Trace." He moved to Blue River, and afterward returned to Randolph County. He died in middle life, having been the father of twenty-one children, all by the same mother. The children were all raised by hand, the mother being unable to suckle them. Twelve of the twenty-one became grown, and ten are living still. Several of the children were twins, and the statement has been made—whether true or not we cannot tell—that the children were all born within thirteen years. The fact of his having twenty-one children by the same wife seems to be undisputed and well authenticated. William Simmons lived on the Mississinewa, just south of New Pittsburg, and he is the same man who is mentioned in the history of Jay County as having been lost in the woods and nearly frozen to death about the time of the first settlement of that region, and as having been found by the Hawkins boys after he had been some days in the depths of the forest, and so severely frozen as to be made an almost helpless cripple during the rest of his life.

John B. Sipe is the son of Samuel Sipe, of Ward Township. He joined Company C, Ninetieth Indiana Regiment (Fifth Cavalry), August 8, 1862, and served nearly three years, receiving his discharge after the close of the war, June 30, 1865. Two of his brothers were in the same company, viz., Isaac and Martin (Van Buren). The latter was prisoner of war at Richmond, Belle Isle and Andersonville for many months, but was at length set free and joined his regiment. They were all mustered out together. John B. Sipe is married and has quite a large family of children. He resides on the old homestead; is a farmer and a Democrat. The voters of Ward Township chose him as their Trustee in the spring of 1880. He seems a genial and intelligent citizen, and will no doubt make a faithful and efficient public officer, and fully justify the confidence reposed in him by his fellow-citizens.

John H. Sipe is a farmer of Ward Township. He was born in Bedford County, Penn., in 1802; married Mary Brubaker in 1824, came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1842; has had nine children, five living and married. He bought at one time 120 and at another time 150 acres of land, but he has sold it all to his son. Four of his children reside near him, and one, a daughter, in Minnesota. In the early time of his settlement here, he engaged extensively in teaming, and made much money in that way. John Thomas and Perry Fields had had a sawmill near Mr. Sipe's, where the State road crosses Clear Creek, east of Deerfield. Mr. Sipe rebuilt the mill, and has kept it in operation till the spring of 1880. He enjoys good health, notwithstanding his age, appearing not more than seventy years old. In politics, he is a Democrat, as are, in fact, a great majority of the citizens in that Democratic stronghold.

Samuel Sipe was born in Pennsylvania in 1798; married Barbara Brubaker in 1823, and came to Ward Township, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1847. They have had ten children, nine of the number being now alive, and all of them are married. He entered no land, as he came to the county too late for that. He owned, however, 240 acres, was a thriving, prosperous farmer, a prominent and energetic citizen, and was a member of the Democratic party in politics. He died in 1875, being about seventy-seven years old, and was buried in Deerfield Cemetery, near the old chapel west of the town. His wife still survives her husband, enjoying a genial old age, and residing on the old farm with her son, John B. Sipe. [October 8, 1882, his aged widow, Mrs. Barbara Sipe, lay down to her last earthly rest, having borne the storms and trials of this earthly existence about seventy-seven years six months and twenty-six days, and in hope of a blessed immortality and an endless life in the upper and better kingdom].

Temple Smith was born in 1806, in Adair County, Ky.; went to Highland County, Ohio, in 1811, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1819. He has resided thirty-six years west of Bloomingsport—six years at Buena Vista, two years at Farmland, and fifteen years east of Stone Station, Ward Township. He married Priscilla Crossley in 1827 (born in 1809). They have had twelve children; six died in childhood and youth, and six have been married, and they have had thirty-seven grandchildren; three of the sons died of diphtheria, at the ages of nine, eighteen and twenty respectively. His wife died in January, 1882.

Allen Wall was among the very first residents of the Mississinewa Valley, above Deerfield. He was born in North Carolina in about 1779. His wife's maiden name was Sarah Beechy, and they had ten children, all grown and married, and seven are living yet. One daughter, sixty-five years old, is the wife of Jacob Evans, of Saratoga. Mr. Wall entered forty acres about two miles east of Deerfield, north of the Mississinewa, settling in the region about 1817–18. Samuel Emery lived not very far away, though he came years later. Mr. Wall died in 1835, aged about fifty-six. His wife died in 1841. He was a farmer, and he and his wife were Methodists. Nearly the only settlers east of Deerfield in 1819 were the Masseys and the Jacksons. Robert, James and Tense Massey were there some time before. James, at least, was in the county and on the Mississinewa in the summer of 1818. James and Tense Massey appear to have made their first entry in Sections 10 and 11, January 26, 1818, and William Jackson in Section 21, October 2, 1819. Mr. Wall was a farmer, and he and his people were Methodists. It is likely that he was a Democrat, as most (though, indeed, not all) of the dwellers in that region were and are of that political faith.

John R. Warren was born in North Carolina in 1813; came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1821, and married Ann Newton in 1834; moved to Ward Township, Randolph County, in 1836; entered 160 acres of land, and, shortly afterward, 160 more. He owned at one time 980 acres, and had it all under fence. He now owns none, but has his property in other forms. His first wife died in April, 1878, and his second wife in October, 1879. He has had ten children—three dead, seven living—seven married—all in the neighborhood, but one in Minnesota. Mr. Warren was a farmer and stock-dealer, and managed a large business; but he has now retired from active life. Both his wives have died within about one and a half years, and he feels deeply their loss. He is a Methodist of twenty years' standing, and a life-long Democrat.

Jason Whipple, Deerfield, was born in 1804, in Rhode Island; came to Delaware County, Ohio, in 1817; married Eliza H. Bass in Rhode Island in 1824; moved to Jay County, Ind., near and north of Liber, in 1836, and to Deerfield, Randolph County, in 1847, where he has resided ever since. He has had thirteen children, eleven of whom are living. They reside in Randolph, Jay and Adams Counties, Ind., in Missouri, Minnesota, and still elsewhere. He has been a farmer, a mechanic and a miller. Mr. Whipple built a steam grist-mill at Deerfield in 1855, and it is still doing good and extensive work, being now owned by his son, Willis Whipple. He has been twice married, and his second wife is yet living. Though in his seventy-eighth year, Mr Whipple is strong, hearty and vigorous, and does not look more than sixty-five. He has been an enterprising citizen, and his family form a valuable addition to the strength of the community. He is a sturdy Democrat of the olden time, clinging with unflinching tenacity to the political affiliations of his youthful days. Coming of age during the administration of the younger Adams, his first Presidential vote was given at the election of the grand old hero of New Orleans to the Chief Executive chair, and he has witnessed and taken part in the struggles, the victories and the defeats of that ancient and famous party of freemen from that time to the present. Long crowned with triumphant success, the leaders of that historic body of men administered with a bold and steady hand the affairs of the nation for nearly all the years since the accession of the stern and iron-willed Jackson to the Presidential office up to 1861; shut out since that time from the occupancy of the White House, except, indeed, during the incumbency of Andrew Johnson, who had been elected as a Republican with the lamented Lincoln, and who assumed the responsibilities of Presidential authority upon the assassination of his distinguished predecessor; they have, nevertheless, clung together, firm, notwithstanding defeat, and faithful through adversity, looking backward with admiration—nay, with reverence!—upon their ancient leaders, with fond affection and melancholy regret, upon their victorious progress during the years now long past and gone, and looking forward, moreover, with fond and anxious hope, with ardent desire and with longing expectation, to the successes which may yet, in the years that are still to come, by them again be accomplished.

THOMAS L. ADDINGTON, farmer, P. O. Randolph, is a native of Wayne County, Ind., and was born January 26, 1829. His father, James Addington, was a native of South Carolina, and came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1806. About the year 1809, he married Miss Nancy Lewellyn, by whom he had thirteen children, seven of whom they raised, viz.: John L. (deceased), William (killed by lightning in 1852), Benjamin G., Rachel, Thomas L. (our subject), Isaac and Mary. The elder Addington died in Kansas in 1860, while there visiting friends. His father-in-law, Meshack Lewellyn, came to this county about the year 1818, and erected the first mill on the Mississinewa River. He came from Tennessee to Wayne County, Ind., in 1806. Our subject, Thomas L. Addington, came with his parents to this county in 1832, and settled in the woods; he attended school in a log cabin with slab seats, greased paper windows and a board, supported on pins in the wall, for a writing-desk. The deer, wolves and other wild game were abundant. He was married, in September, 1852, to Miss Marybeth Woodard, by whom he had two children—Melissa and William. Mrs. Addington died in 1854, and in 1857 he married Miss Nancy Pierce, daughter of Burket Pierce, of whom we shall speak elsewhere in this work. By her he had four children—Marybeth (deceased), Elizabeth, Elsworth and Anthony. Mr. Addington resides on Section 20, and owns 130 acres. In March, 1850, he became a member of the Masonic fraternity, and in the fall of 1868, he became a member of the order of Odd Fellows. Mr. and Mrs. Addington are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Addington filled the office of Justice of the Peace for eight years.

DAVID ALMONRODE (deceased) was born in Rockbridge County, Va., November 16, 1814, and was a son of George and Margaret Almonrode; he came to this county with his widowed mother about the year 1836; he was first married, June 7, 1838, to Miss Esther Bousman, daughter of Adam Bousman, an early settler of this county. They had six children—Margaret, Susannah, Janetta (deceased), Adam, Rachel and Nancy J. Mr. Almonrode died July 14, 1880, loved by all. He was a worthy member of the United Brethren Church, and an ardent worker in the temperance cause, and was always ready to assist the poor and needy. Mrs. Almonrode is also a member of the church. Her son, Adam, was a soldier in the late war.

JOHN BEARY, farmer, P. O. Saratoga, was born in Virginia August 16, 1809, and is a son of Joseph and Barbara Beary (deceased). Joseph Beary was a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject was married in February, 1839, to Miss Susanna Overhulser, and the following fall emigrated to this county and located in the woods, where by hard labor he made a farm. He had two children by his first wife—John H. (deceased) and Barbara A. Mrs. Beary died, and he again married, January 23, 1845; this time to Miss Susannah Grow, by whom he had nine children, seven living—Isabelle, Catherine, Sarah, Elizabeth, Emeline E., Josephine S. and Daniel F. Mr. Beary was a member of the German Reformed Church. Sarah died June 13, 1882. Subject died August 15, 1881.

CYRUS BOUSMAN.

Cyrus Bousman was born in White River Township, Randolph Co., Ind., February 27, 1845, and is the son of George W. Bousman, one of the early settlers of this county. His father's father came from Germany, and finally to Preble County, Ohio. The mother of the subject of this sketch was born and raised in Rockbridge County, Va., and was there married to a man by the name of Holmes, who died at the end of five years, leaving her with two children and but little means. After the death of her husband, she loaded her worldly effects into a one-horse wagon, and with her two little girls and her young brother, traveled the distance of more than six hundred miles to Preble County, Ohio, where she met G. W. Bousman, to whom she was married in 1837. In the following year, they came to this county, with only means enough to enter a quarter section of land, upon which they settled and proceeded to make a farm. The land was then an unbroken wilderness filled with wild game, and they were without neighbors nearer than three miles, and but three neighbors within five miles. Upon this farm the subject of this sketch was born in 1845, and when nine years of age, was injured by a horse stepping on his foot and crushing it. This injury confined him to his bed for one year, after which he apparently recovered, but at the age of fourteen, the trouble again came on, this time confining him to his bed four years, and leaving him crippled for life. On account of this continued disability and poor school facilities, his education has been limited, being confined to three terms of school at the "old lost schoolhouse," and two terms at a seminary in Winchester.

In 1865, Mr. Bousman was married to Miss Margaret Ann Frase, and in 1866, they began life upon a rented farm. They changed location about once each year until 1869, when he took a lease on a piece of woodland belonging to his father, upon which they settled and on which he worked hard for four years. At the end of this time, poor health compelled a change of occupation. In 1873, they removed to the village of Saratoga, where Mr. Bousman engaged in a huckstering business for one year; he then learned photographing and carried on a gallery at Saratoga for three years. This business ceasing to be remunerative, he quit it in 1877, and started into a general store, selling dry goods groceries, and whatever is necessary and profitable in a small town. At the same time his wife opened a millinery store. These businesses they still carry on. In 1874, Mr. Bousman was made Postmaster at Saratoga, which position he yet fills, and all the time his wife has been his assistant. He has for some time been Freight and Ticket Agent for the Pan-Handle Railroad at Saratoga; also agent for the Adams Express Company. It is readily seen that he is a concentrated inhabitant, and is a useful and respected citizen. By integrity in business he has gained the confidence of the community in which he lives, and by energy, perseverance and correct habits, he has earned a competence, has accumulated property, and is in a fair way to enjoy a prosperity which a proper life will merit.

Margaret Ann Bousman, née Frase, is the daughter of John and Nancy Frase, and was born near the town of New Madison, Darke Co., Ohio, August 28, 1846. In 1851, she was brought to this county by her parents, where she was raised on a farm, and educated in the common district schools. In 1865, she was married to Cyrus Bousman, since which time her life has been parallel with his, and for whom she has been a helpmate and valuable assistant, and with whom she has made a comfortable success of life, with him attaining creditable social position, against adverse circumstances.

THOMAS H. CLARK, farmer, P. O. Clark, was born in Warren County, Ohio, August 26, 1846, and is a son of Thomas and Susannah Clark, also natives of Warren County, and who came to this county in 1847, and now reside in Winchester. Mr. Clark was brought up on a farm, and received a common-school education. He served twenty-two months in the late war in Company G, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Atlanta, Franklin, Nashville, Wise Fork and others. He was married, in 1866, to Miss Barbara Hobbick, by whom he had two children—Ida and Elmer. Mrs. Clark died in 1872, and, in 1875, he married Mrs. Jane Rittenour, by whom he has one child—Susannah C. Mrs. Clark had one child by her first husband, viz., William Rittenour. Mr. Clark is engaged in farming and stock-raising, and owns eighty acres of valuable land.

JOHN M. COLLETT, grain merchant, Randolph, was born in Warren County, Ohio, April 23, 1842, and is a son of Presley and Permelia Collett, who removed to Jay County, Ind., in 1852. He was married in 1863 to Miss Cynthia A. Whitenack, by whom he has seven children—Ida E., Permelia L., Florence R., Jasper I., Isaac N., Charles P. and William E. Mr. Collett served three years in the late war in Company H, One Hundredth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Vicksburg, Jackson, Miss., Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge; he was wounded at the last-named battle. He came to this county in 1870, and in 1873 engaged in the grain business at Deerfield Station, which he still successfully follows.

DR. ROYSTON FORD, physician and surgeon, Saratoga, was born in Darke County, Ohio, November 28, 1845, and is a son of Mordecai and Mary (Tillman) Ford, natives of Preble County, Ohio. The Doctor was reared on a farm, and received a common-school education. He began reading medicine at the age of fifteen, and entered the Allopathic Department of the Michigan State University at Ann Arbor in 1872, where he took a thorough course in medicine. He practiced medicine in Darke County, Ohio, until the fall of 1876, when he removed to Saratoga. Here he built up a good practice, and in the winter of 1879–80, attended the Cincinnati Hospital and School of Medicine and Surgery, graduating from the latter with high honors February 27, 1880. He then returned to his practice in Saratoga, Randolph Co., Ind., where he not only has his old practice but many new patients have been added to his list. The Doctor was married January 22, 1870, to Miss Elizabeth Albright, daughter of Simpson Albright, of Arcanum, Ohio. Our subject served in the late war in Company I, One Hundred and Fifty-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry during the summer of 1864.

DAVID S. HARKER, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Deerfield. Mr. Harker was born near Woodstown, Gloucester Co., N. J., January 22, 1827, and is a son of Enoch and Christiana Harker, also natives of New Jersey. His parents removed to Butler County, Ohio, in 1830. He was brought up on a farm, and educated in the common schools. February 3, 1848, he married Miss Mary Whitenack, a native of Warren County, Ohio, and daughter of Cornelius and Mary Whitenack. They began as renters, and lived in an old log cabin. Mr. Harker worked for ex-Gov. Morrow, of Ohio; he cleaned out his mill race; he cut wood for 40 cents per cord and boarded himself; but, by economy and hard work, he saved $200 the first two years of his married life, and he then began to farm. He now owns 303 acres of valuable land. He came to this county in 1857. Mr. and Mrs. Harker have had twelve children, of whom ten are living, viz., Rebecca, Joseph, Charles, Alice, Emma, Christiana, David, Hattie, Jennie and Adella G.

JOHN KEY, farmer, P. O. Saratoga, was born in Green County, East Tenn., February 6, 1829, and is a son of Andrew and Susannah (Fields) Key, who came to this county in 1829. They settled in the woods. The wild animals and turkeys were very numerous then. Mr. Key was formerly a pupil of Ebenezer Tucker. He helped clear his father's farm, and has since cleared two farms for himself. He was married in 1858 to Miss Avis Smith, a native of Hawkins County, East Tenn., and a daughter of Caleb C. Smith. They have had ten children, six of whom are living—Joanna, Ruth, Henry C., George, Nancy E. and Stella. In early life, Mr. Key taught school for the most part for nine years. He is now farming and raising stock, and owns 130 acres of land. In 1880, Mr. and Mrs. Key returned to their native State on a visit.

WILLIAM O. KING, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Deerfield, was born in Fayette County, Ohio, June 21, 1833, and is a son of Bennet and Susan (Proud) King, the former a native of Fayette County and the latter of Ross County, Ohio. They came to this county in 1837, and settled in the northwest corner of Green Township. Our subject was brought up on a farm, and received a limited education. At the age of nineteen, he learned the carpenter's trade, at which he worked until 1855. He was married, March 8, 1855, to Miss Sarah Pierce, daughter of Burket Pierce, who came to this county in 1819, and is still living, in his ninetieth year. Mr. King also buys and ships stock. He resides on Section 17, in a fine brick house which cost $4,000. He is a member of the Odd Fellows; has passed all the degrees and filled all the chairs. He filled the office of Assessor two terms and Land Appraiser one term. Mr. King's mother died September 7, 1882, in Oregon, Holt Co., Mo.

WILLIAM LEWIS, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville. This worthy old settler is a native of the town of Belbrook, Ohio, and was born September 3, 1826. His parents, Joel and Mercy Lewis, removed with their family to this county in 1827, and settled in the woods, where the deer, wolves and turkeys were numerous. The Indians were also in this locality at times. Our subject knows all about grubbing and picking brush, rolling logs, etc., and other hard farm work. He attended subscription school in an old log cabin, sat on a split-log seat, and wrote on a board supported by pins in the wall. The schoolhouse was covered with clapboards, which were secured by weight-poles. He was married, October 24, 1850, to Miss Anna Riddlebarger, by whom he has had eight children, six living—David J., Mary E., Thomas H., Isaac N., George W. and Jesse J. Mr. Lewis is engaged in farming and stock-raising, and owns 225 acres of land.

ELISHA L. LOLLAR, farmer, P. O. Saratoga. The subject of this sketch is a native of Randolph County, was born May 18, 1841, and is a son of Joseph Lollar, an early settler of this county, having located here in 1837. His mother was Sarah Pogue, daughter of William Pogue, also an early settler of this county. Mr. Lollar was brought up on a farm and educated mostly in the common schools. He was married, April 24, 1862, to Miss Mary A. Warren, daughter of John R. Warren, of whom we shall make further mention elsewhere in this work. They have had four children born to them, of whom three are living—Minnie A., Ezra E. and Annie C. Mr. Lollar is a prominent farmer and stock-raiser of Ward Township, and owns 185 acres of valuable land. In 1862, he left home and loved ones, and went into the rebellion to fight for the liberty of his country. He served in Company E, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battle of Chickamauga, where he was wounded, and afterward discharged on account of disability occasioned by said wound. Mr. and Mrs. Lollar are members of the United Brethren Church.

WILLIAM MONTGOMERY, farmer, P. O. Clark, was born in Guilford County, N. C., December 12, 1799, and is a son of Samuel and Mary Montgomery. His educational advantages were limited. He attended school in a log cabin, with puncheon seats and a dirt floor. He and his schoolmates employed their noons in cutting wood for the huge fire-place. He was married, in 1829, to Miss Sarah Hiatt, by whom he has had twelve children—John (deceased), Eli, Phineas, Priscilla, Betsy A., Joseph N., Cyrena, Thomas N (deceased), Lovina, Susannah (deceased), Milton M. and Christena. Four sons were in the late war—Eli, Phineas, Jasper and Thomas. Thomas N. died in the service. Mr. Montgomery came to this county in 1833, and settled in the woods, where nearly all kinds of wild game abounded. The Indians were also in or near the locality in which he settled. On one occasion, while out hunting, Mr. Montgomery became lost in the woods, and while wandering around he came to an Indian wigwam which was occupied by a lone Indian and his dog. The hospitable "red man of the forest" shared his narrow cot of leaves and deer skins with him, and they slept "heels to heels," for it was not wide enough for two to lie at one end. Mr. Montgomery owns eighty acres of land, and is engaged in farming.

THOMAS J. MOORE, laborer, New Pittsburg, was born in Liverpool, Eng., and is a son of Thomas and Margaret Moore. He came to America in 1834, and to Randolph County in October, 1870. He is an engineer by trade; was on Lake Ontario two years, and on the Hudson River one year. He is a member of the M. E. Church.

WILLIAM G. MOULTON, teacher, Saratoga. This enterprising young teacher is a native of Richmond, Ind., and was born August 5, 1856. His parents were George W. and Mary A. Moulton, of Auburn, N. Y., and New Paris, Ohio. He was reared on a farm and educated in Ridgeville College and Winchester Normal School. He began teaching in September, 1876, and is now Principal of the Saratoga Schools, which, under his wise management, are in a prosperous condition. He uses the latest normal methods in his work, and has established a systematic course of instruction. The Professor was married, April 25, 1880, to Miss Eva R. Koon, daughter of Harvey W. Koon, of New Pittsburg, this county. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is also a member of the Epsilon RhoLiterary Society of Ridgeville College.

THOMAS G. MULLEN, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Clark, was born in North Carolina January 28, 1828, and is a son of Thomas and Nancy Mullen, who removed from North Carolina to this county in 1829. Mr. Mullen received a common school education, and assisted his father on the farm. He was married, October 1, 1852, to Miss Susannah Johnson, a native of this county and daughter of John Johnson. They had six children, four living—James M., Louis A., Samantha J. and Phœbe A. Mrs. Mullen died, and on the 1st day of January, 1866, he married Mrs. Elmina Thompson, by whom he has had seven children; of these, six are living—Ida B., Frank, Flora and Clarence (twins), Bessie and Charles. Mrs. Mullen had one child by her first husband—Emma Thompson. Mr. Mullen owns 320 acres of land. He served in the late war for fourteen months in Company G, Fifty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Grand Gulf and Thompson's Hill.

URIAH PIERCE (deceased) was born in Ross County, Ohio, October 21, 1818, and is a son of Burket Pierce, who came to this county in 1819, and is still living at the age of ninety years. The country was wild, and there were no educational advantages except to study by his father's fire-side. He was married, in 1840, to Miss Martha A. Mock, a native of Greene County, Ohio, and daughter of Daniel Mock, who came to this county in 1824. They had six children, of whom three are living, viz.: Thomas N., John Q. and Daniel M. Thomas and John were soldiers in the late war. Mr. Pierce taught the first public school in his district, No. 3, Township 21; and organized the first Sabbath school in the neighborhood. He was a worthy member of the M. E. Church, a benevolent man, and a valuable member of society. He died March 11, 1878, loved by all.

ELWOOD O. PIERCE, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Ridgeville, was born in Randolph County August 27, 1855, and is a son of Joel Pierce (deceased). He was left an orphan, and his grandfather, Burket Pierce, raised him until fourteen years of age. He was educated at Ridgeville College; was married, October 2, 1876, to Miss Edith E. Thompson, by whom he has had two children, one living, viz.: Laura Alice. Mr. Pierce is engaged raising stock on Section 7, and owns ninety-four acres of valuable land.

DAVID POGUE, retired farmer, P. O. Saratoga, being an old settler of Randolph County, is entitled to more than a passing notice in a work like this. He was born May 26, 1828, and is a son of Robert Pogue, who came to this county in 1837, and now resides in Union City at the age of seventy-nine years. Mr. Pogue was brought up on a farm, and educated in a subscription school, which was taught in a log cabin, with a huge fire-place in one end, and a window the length of the building and only one light high. He sat on a puncheon seat, and wrote on a slab which was supported on pins in the wall. The door of schoolhouse was made of clapboards, as also was the roof, which was secured by weight-poles. When the Pogues settled in Ward Township the land was "in the green." Much credit is due to these old pioneers for their untiring labors in preparing the way for the prosperity of future generations. Many a day has Mr. Pogue worked in the clearing in his bare feet, sore and bleeding, and the ground frozen hard. They had to go to Richmond to mill, a distance of twenty-six miles. Our subject was married, February 15, 1855, to Miss Mary Barber, daughter of George W. Barber, an early settler of this county. They have no children, but have raised two others. Mr. and Mrs. Pogue are worthy members of the M. E. Church in Saratoga.

DR. JOHN PURCELL, physician, Deerfield, was born in Northumberland County, Penn., February 12, 1834, and is a son of David and Grace Purcell, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of New Jersey. The Doctor was brought up on a farm, and educated near and at Mount Gilead, Ohio. He read medicine under Dr. William Turner, of Waterford, Ohio. In 1867, he began the practice of medicine in that place, and in the fall of 1870 came to Deerfield, where he has built up a good practice. He was married, December 18, 1873, to Miss Sarah Lipps, by whom he has three children—David Guy, Frank M. and Charles M. He is a member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities.

JESSE RIDDLEBARGER, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Deerfield, is a native of Botetourt County, Va., and was born October 2, 1825. He is a son of David and Ann Riddlebarger, who removed with their family to near Dayton, Ohio, in 1829, and to this county in 1830. Mr. Riddlebarger was raised on a farm, and attended school in a log cabin with a greased paper window, clapboard roof, puncheon floor, and split slab seats. In those early days they went to Richmond to mill, a distance of over thirty miles. Mr. R. has many a time crushed corn in a hominy block. He was married, September 28, 1852, to Miss Lucinda Barnhart, a native of Fairfield County, Ohio, and daughter of Valentine Barnhart. They have had nine children, eight living—Josephine, Ella, Eva, Thomas, Claud, Mark, Oscar and Hattie. Mr. Riddlebarger owns 240 acres, and resides on Section 18.

MILES SCOTT, farmer, P. O. Harrisville. The subject of this sketch, having resided in Randolph County for nearly fifty years, is identified with its history, and is, therefore, entitled to more than a passing notice in a work like this. He was born in Wayne County, Ind., April 17, 1831, and is a son of Edward and Chloe Scott, who came to this county in 1832. He was brought up on a farm, and educated mostly in a subscription school, taught in a log cabin, with slab benches, a board supported by pins in the wall for desks, and greased paper pasted over a hole in the side of the house for a window. Mr. Scott knows all about grubbing and picking brush, rolling logs, and other hard work attending the making of a farm in the woodland. He was married, March 2, 1850, to Miss Sarah Ann Coffin, a native of Randolph County, and daughter of Stephen Coffin, an early settler of this county. They have had eight children, of whom four are living—Stephen C., Edward W., Luzena M. and William H. Mr. and Mrs. Scott are worthy members of the Christian Church at Harrisville. He has held the office of Justice of the Peace acceptably to his many constituents in Wayne Township for twelve years, and is the present incumbent.

EDWARD W. SCOTT, teacher, Harrisville. This enterprising young teacher is a native of Randolph County, and was born April 22, 1858. His father, Miles Scott, of Harrisville, came to this county when a small boy. Our subject was brought up on a farm and educated at Lebanon, Warren Co., Ohio. He is now teaching an interesting school at Randolph, Ward Township. He uses the latest approved normal methods in his work and has reduced his labors to a perfect system which the pupils all well understand. He is a member of Christian or New-Light Church.

JAMES A. SIPE (deceased) was born in Bedford County, Penn., May 12, 1823, and was a son of Conrad Sipe. During the progress of the Mexican war he enlisted in the service of the United States, in the company known as the Bedford Greys. He was at the cities of New Orleans, Buena Vista, Vera Cruz, Mexico and others. He came to this county in 1848, and October 6, 1850, he married Miss Nancy Sipe, daughter of John H. Sipe. They had twelve children, ten living, viz., Orlando, Almaretta, John O., Lucy L., Mary J., George M., Clara A., James F., Emma R. and Henry O. Mr. Sipe was a worthy member of the M. E. Church. He died March 27, 1875. He was a respected citizen, a benevolent man, and strong advocate of temperance.

JOHN SMILEY, farmer, P. O. Pittsburgh, was born in Botetourt County, Va., March 1, 1824, and is a son of Walter and Susan Smiley, also natives of Virginia. Mr. Smiley was educated in a subscription school taught in a log cabin. He came to this county in 1841, and settled in the woods; was married, September 10, 1857, to Miss Louisa Bragg, daughter of Ephraim Bragg, an early settler of this county. They have had twelve children, eleven living, viz., Hezekiah, Sarah J., Martha L., McLellan, William S., Mary A., Ezra, Emma, Henry, Noah and Pearla. Mr. Smiley owns forty acres of land on Section 12. Mr. and Mrs. Smiley are members of the Pleasant Grove Christian Church.

WALTER B. SMILEY, farmer, P. O. Randolph, was born in Green County, E. Tenn., June 1, 1826, and is a son of Walter and Susannah Smiley, natives of Botetourt County, Va. He was reared on a farm, and educated in the common schools. From 1844 to 1849, he worked in a woolen factory. He then learned the painter's trade, which he has followed more or less ever since. He came to this county in February, 1839. Was married, June 24, 1860, to Miss Huldah Bragg, a grand niece of Gen. Bragg. They have had ten children, of whom eight are living—Clement G., Janetta A., Sarah E., Emma B., Mary J., James C., Anna L. and Clara R. Mr. Smiley held the office of Constable for two years. Mrs. Smiley is a member of the Christian Church.

WILLIAM STICK, farmer and mechanic, P. O. Randolph, was born in Adams County, Penn., March 25, 1846, and is a son of Casper and Julia Stick, who removed with their family to this county in 1853. At the age of eighteen, Mr. Stick learned the carpenter trade, at which he has worked, for the most part, ever since. He was married, August 14, 1873, to Mrs. Sarah Alexander, daughter of Joel Williams, of this county. They have one child—Clyde H. Mrs. Stick had two children by her first husband—Harry O. and Violetta L. Alexander. Mr. Stick is engaged in farming at present, and owns thirty-six acres of land. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and Mrs. Stick is a member of the M. E. Church.

ALEXANDER VORHIS.

Alexander Vorhis was born September 7, 1842, in Hunterdon County, N. J., and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1852, with his father, Cornelius Vorhis. The latter was an enterprising, industrious man, and, had he lived, would doubtless have identified himself with the history and improvements of this county. He located near the village of Deerfield, in this county, and erected a dwelling house upon his land, but eleven days after the completion of his home he died. He left only a moderate estate to his family, and they were thrown largely upon their own resources for a livelihood. His wife kept hotel at Deerfield, pursuing this enterprise until her death, in 1864, and deriving a fair income from the public patronge. His son, the subject of this sketch, was employed about the hotel, assisting his mother in her labors, and attending the common schools in winter. His education, however, is largely self-acquired by a patient course of study at home, after the day's work was done, and the blazing fire on the hearth at night furnished him the light to pursue this effort to acquire knowledge. As he grew up he manifested a taste for business, and to those who watched his course it was apparent that he possessed the qualities that give assurance of success. He was sober, honest and industrious, and found plenty of friends to encourage him. At the age of twenty-two years, he opened a store at Deerfield, the capital for this enterprise having been loaned him by some of his friends. In due time he had paid his indebtedness and had a flourishing business. Two years later, he removed to Randolph, a station then recently established on the Cincinnati, Richmond & Fort Wayne Railroad, and for the next thirteen years was successfully engaged their in mercantile pursuits, serving as Postmaster at that point during six years of this period. In May, 1880, he began the study of the law, without a preceptor, having purchased the necessary text books, and devoted all his leisure time to this object. In November, 1881, he was admitted to the bar of Randolph County, and is rapidly rising in the estimation of the public and the legal fraternity. He has retired from the mercantile business, and devotes all his energy to the practice of his profession. He has the qualifications of a good lawyer, and his well-known integrity secures for him the confidence of all within the scope of his practice who have legal business to transact, while those who know him best predict for him a professional success not less pronounced than that which attended his life as a merchant. His industry and prudent management in mercantile life returned him a fortune which, though not colossal, is yet ample to secure him against the possibility of want, while his uniformly honorable dealings in business transactions secured for him the public confidence. Personally, he is a splendid specimen of physical manhood, tall and well proportioned, weighing 300 pounds; jolly and good-natured, able to receive or give a joke, and looking always at the bright side of life. His personal characteristics have won him friends, and perhaps no man in the community is more universally respected. In 1863, he was united in marriage with Miss Hettie M. Drew, a native of Steuben County, N. Y., and daughter of Rufus B. and Mary A. Drew, both of whom are now living in Steuben County, N. Y. His wife is an estimable lady, and shares with her husband the affectionate regard of the community in which they reside.

JOHN R. WARREN, having resided in this county for over forty years, is entitled to more than a passing notice in our county history. He was born in Randolph County, N. C., April 12, 1812, and is a son of James and Elizabeth Warren, who came to Wayne County about the year, 1821. James Warren was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was in the field when peace was declared. Our subject was raised on a farm, and attended subscription school in a log cabin, where he sat on a slab seat and wrote with a goose-quill on a board supported by pins in the wall. He was married, January 9, 1834, to Miss Ann Newton, and in 1836 removed to this county and purchased a pre-emption right to eighty acres of land on Section 26, in Ward Township. There was but ten acres of this cleared, and, except the ten acres, he has made a farm. He kept adding to this until at one time he owned one thousand acres. He sold his landed estate in 1875, and has retired to quiet life, and resides in the pleasant village of Saratoga, in Ward Township. He had ten children by his first wife, of whom seven are living, viz., Henry, Mary A., William, Mahala, Joseph, John F. and Martha. One of the deceased, Elizabeth, lived to the age of eighteen years. Mrs. Warren died April 21, 1877, and he again married to Mrs. Ann Dixon; she lived but about nine months, and he married a third time, September 16, 1880, this time to Mrs. Sarah A. Reid. Mr. and Mrs. Warren are members of the M. E. Church.

JAMES M. WARREN, farmer, P. O. Union City, is a native of this county, and was born May 18, 1840. He is a son of Dolphin and Nancy Warren. He was married, September 6, 1860, to Miss Sarah E. Miller, a native of this county, and daughter of Daniel B. Miller, late of Winchester. They have had four children, three living—Sarah E., Nancy A. and Daniel D. Mr. Warren is engaged in farming and stock-raising, and owns 390 acres of land. He also buys and sells stock. Mr. and Mrs. Warren are members of the Disciple Church.

WHIPPLE & HARKER, millers, Deerfield. This enterprising firm own and operate the flouring-mill at Deerfield. They run four set of buhrs, and make the best of flour. The mill was erected in 1854, by Willis Whipple, and his father, Jason Whipple. The mill now contains one purifier, and has a capacity of forty barrels in twenty-four hours. Willis Whipple, the senior member of the firm, was born in Rhode Island, November 25, 1827. His parents removed with their family to Jay County, Ind., in 1838. In 1848, he came to this county, and has been engaged in milling for the most part ever since. He was married, December 29, 1849, to Miss Margaret S. Miller, by whom he had one child, Mary A. (deceased). Mr. Whipple is a member of the M. E. Church. The junior member of the firm, Joseph E. Harker, was born in Warren County, Ohio, October 24, 1850, and is a son of David S. Harker, of Ward Township, who came to this county in 1857. Mr. Harker was educated at Ridgeville College. On the 10th of April, 1872, he married Miss Mary A. Whipple, daughter of Willis Whipple, of whom we spoke above. They had two children—Alma and Leamy W. Mrs. Harker died November 5, 1878.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP.

GENERAL.

Wayne Township was created (as it stands at present) in 1838. It lies on the east side of Randolph County, Ind., with Jackson Township north, Darke County east, Greensfork Township on the south and White River Township at the west. The township is about eight miles north and south, and five miles east and west, containing about forty sections. It lies on both sides of the old (Wayne's) boundary, embracing most of Township 17 and the south part of Township 18 north, Range 1 west, and the north part of Township 19, and all of Township 20, Range 15 east. It is located upon Greenville and Dismal Creeks, and also on White River and Little Mississinewa River. The surface is mostly level, and some of it quite low, though probably its entire extent is tillable by proper drainage. Greenville Creek is in the southeast, Dismal in the central east, Little Mississinewa in the center and northeast and White River in the west. The western part was first settled in 1818 and onward. The Greenville & Winchester State road passes through the southern part of the township, a part of that thoroughfare being piked. There are parts of four pikes within its bounds: First, State Line pike, from Union City south to the old Greenville State road, six and one-fourth miles; Winchester & Union pike (north), ten miles; Winchester & Union pike (south), ten miles; Arba & Bartonia pike (in the township), one mile. The country is under pretty good improvement, there being some fine residences and many good farms. The first settlers were at Jericho. Amos Peacock, Benoni Hill, Hiram Hill and Abram Peacock were perhaps the first. They came in 1818. Joshua Foster (on the Griffis farm) came very early, in 1819 or 1820. Robert Murphy, three and a half miles south of Union City, came in 1834. Settlers in that region and soon after were James Griffis, on the Williamson place, came in 1833. Smith Masterson lived one mile west of Murphy's. William Kennon lived on State road, near Bartonia, in 1832. He was the father of Smith Kennon, northwest of Bartonia. John Dixon lived one and a half miles north of Murphy. Mr. Green lived on the State road. The first important mill in Wayne Township was Cox's, on White River, about five miles east of Winchester, built in 1825, removed about ten years ago. It was sold to Joseph and Benjamin Pickett before a long time, and bought afterward (1853) by William Pickett, and run till 1864; stood idle through five dry years, and was pulled down in 1870. The first school probably was in Jericho settlement, among the Friends, in 1822 or 1823. Mariam Hill taught the school, in Friends' Meeting House, with twenty or twenty-five pupils. Friends' Meeting was established about 1821, at Jericho. The first school near Robert Murphy's, he says, was about 1838. Several settlers came in that year, and the neighbors built a little log cabin schoolhouse, with no windows, but a log cut out for light. The first meeting-house in his region was at South Salem. They used to go to Coletown, Ohio, at first where was a Congregational Church, Rev. Springer. The members of the Friends' Meeting were Benoni Hill, Amos Peacock, Henry Hill, Abram Peacock, Elijah Cox, William Cox. There was no preacher in the meeting for a long time. The first one in the bounds of the meeting was John Jones. It was a quaint but affecting sight to witness those faithful souls gathering in that humble woods cabin, and sitting in utter quiet, without a word of prayer or exhortation or song, waiting in stillness on the Lord for the power of His purifying spirit in their hearts, meeting thus week by week, month by month, year by year, without weariness and without failing, humbly and in love both with God and with men.

Different settlers came at various times. Some of those who are now prominent came later. James Griffis moved to the Griffis farm in about 1838; Norton, near Bartonia; Graves, old town of Randolph; Bailey, who kept a store and tavern just east of Randolph in 1846, and for years before and after, came very early The father of Thomas S. Kennon, northwest of Bartonia, came in 1830. Mr. Shockney, father of Samuel Shockney, west of Bartonia, emigrated from Maryland in 1840. Williamson, on the State Line pike, south of Union City, Ind., settled there in about 1838. Elihu Cammack, on the State road, east of Bartonia, settled there in 1846, but was born near Arba in 1817. William Pickett settled in White River Township in 1828, and in Wayne Township, at the Cox Mill property, in 1853. The Pollys and the Masons came in early. George Thomas, son of Benjamin Thomas, near Newport, Ind., settled in Randolph County (Jericho), in 1835, and his wife in Wayne Township in 1818. William A. Macy, north of Elihu Cammack's, came there in 1852. John Hartman, northwest of William A. Macy, settled there in 1848. Gullett, west of Robert Murphy's, came to that place about 1836. Poor settled near the Griffis farm. Joshua Foster came to the same neighborhood early—1820 or sooner; Sheets, north of Union, in 1830.

Two important railroads traverse Wayne Township, crossing each other at Union City—the "Bee Line" and the "Pan Handle," Union City being at the crossing, and Harrisville on the "Bee Line." The "Bee Line," the original Indianapolis & Bellefontaine road, was the second road in the State, built in 1851–53. The "Pan Handle" was begun about the same time, and constructed to Union City from Columbus soon after, but completed to Logansport about 1867. These roads are now parts respectively of two immense railroad corporations, holding each thousands of miles of track, and millions of dollars' worth of fixtures and apparatus.

The Greenville State road west through Wayne Township and Winchester was for many years one of the chief routes of travel between the East and the West.

At first, emigrants in great numbers passed westward, and in a few years vast droves of cattle came East on the same route. Many persons kept hotel and pasture and feed stations for people and for droves. Immense crowds of cattle used to go East along this route during twenty or thirty years—in fact, until the Bellefontaine Railroad dried up the business, in 1853—seven or eight hundred fat cattle would be in a single drove. The road would be tracked in straight, deep hollows, as if logs had been "plumped" down lengthwise and taken up, leaving a huge mark across the road.

In Wayne Township, James Griffis kept one of the chief stations for droves for many years. William Robison, whose father lived not far east of Winchester, says his father kept a tavern, and also fed cattle more or less. The charges seem to have been low enough, compared with these times. The price for man and horse (supper, lodging and breakfast for both) was 37½ cents. He says also that the boys had often to sleep in the barn on the hay-mow to make room for the travelers in the house. The business of feeding droves seems to have been lucrative. At least, the men who followed it appear generally to have become wealthy, principally, perhaps, for two reasons—first, they had of course large tracts of land for pasture; second, the feeding gave them a home market for all the corn and hay they could raise. The business of keeping tavern was indeed important in those early days. When all the travel from East to West went through "by land," great means of accommodation would be needed; and, as it is always, a public demand created a general supply, and on all the chief roads and in every town, one of the chief occupations used to be to keep travelers. Now that business is reduced to a minimum. The travel all goes on the railroads, and very little of it stops at all for anything, except, indeed, for a "smashup," and that occurrence pays no attention to hotels or anything else. The "Quaker Trace" passed through the township from south to north, via Bartonia and Salem, toward Fort Wayne. The township is tolerably well drained by White River to the west, Little Mississinewa River to the north, and Greenville and Dismal Creeks toward the east; yet portions of the township need ditching badly, and future years will doubtless witness solid improvement in this respect. Several pikes lie partly in the township. The State Line pike, north and south, from Union City, the two pikes connecting Union City with Winchester, the Union & Salem pike northward, a new one eastward from Winchester toward Jericho, and the pike westward from Greenville toward Bartonia, as also the Arba & Bartonia pike. If the Greenville & Winchester pike were only made through, and one extended northward from Bartonia via Salem, and from Elihu Cammack's northward to the Winchester & Union pike, Wayne Township would be "well out of the mud." For which joyful consummation let all good men earnestly labor and strive.

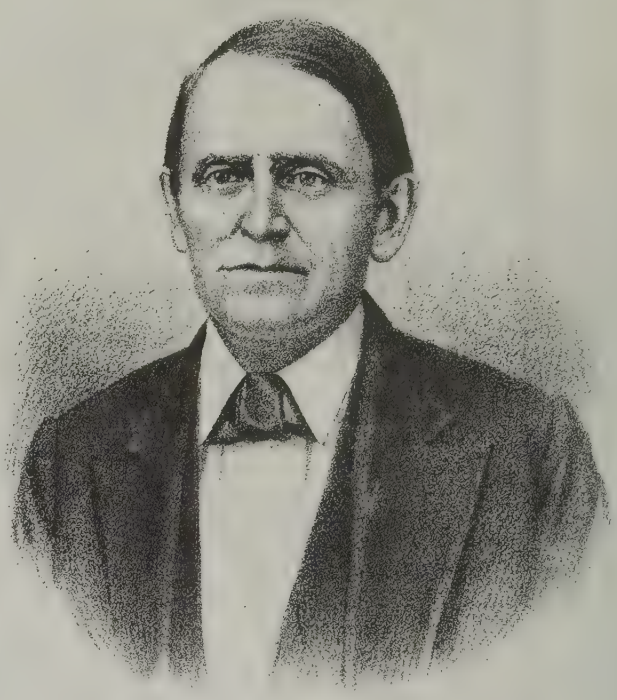
MRS A.J. CHENOWETH.



ABRAHAM J. CHENOWETH.

RES OF MRS ABRAHAM J. CHENOWETH. WAYNE TP. RANDOLPH, CO. IND.

A new and free pike is in construction from the Wayne County line straight north to the toll-gate southwest of Union City, which will be a very important road.

Politically, Wayne Township is stongly Republican. There is a considerable Democratic element, but it is largely in the minority.

CONTENTS.

Wayne Township contains sections as follows:

Township 17 north, Range 1 west, Sections 1, 2, 3, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 23 to 27 inclusive; Township 18 north, Range 1 west, Sections 23, 24, 25, 26, 35 and 36; Township 19 north, Range 15 east, Sections 4 to 9 inclusive; Township 20 north, Range 15 east, Sections 3 to 10, 15 to 21 and 28 to 33, inclusive.

Some of the sections are fractional, but the township embraces about forty-five square miles, or 28,800 acres.

Entries of land were made in Wayne Township by the record as follows: Jeremiah Moffitt, N. W. 18, 20, 15, 160 acres, Dec. 1, 1812; William Chenoweth, S. E. 24, 17, 1, 160 acres, September 24, 1817; William Chenoweth, S. E. 25, 17, 1, 160 acres, September 24, 1817; Abram Chenoweth, N. E. 26, 17, 1, 157.83 acres, September 24, 1817; Abram Chenoweth, N. W. 26, 17, 1, 157.83 acres, September 24, 1817; Abram Chenoweth, S. W. 26, 17, 1, 127.83 acres, September 24, 1817; Jeremiah Cox, Section 19. 20, 15, 640 acres, February 6, 1818; Abram Peacock, N. E. 30, 20, 15, 160 acres, April 15, 1818; Henry Hill, E. S. E. 30, 20, 15, 80 acres, April 15, 1818; Amos Peacock, E. N. E. 31, 20, 15, 80 acres, April 15, 1818; Benoni Hill, E. S. E. 31, 20, 15, 80 acres, April 15, 1818; Jeremiah Cox, S. E. 18, 20, 15, 160 acres, May 29, 1818; Christopher Baker, W. S. E. 20, 20, 15, 80 acres, May 17, 1818; Joshua Cox, W. N. W. 30, 20, 15, 80 acres, December 10, 1822; Amy Cox, W. N. E. 29, 20, 15, 80 acres, September 24, 1824; Jefferson L. Summers, N. W. N. E. 33, 17, 1, 39.64 acres, April 12, 1826; Solomon Cox, E. N. E. 29, 20, 15, 80 acres, May 16, 1826; Joshua Buckingham, E. N. E. 6, 19, 15, 79.60 acres, August 11, 1826.

The rest of the township, i. e., the great body of the land therein, lay vacant for several years, being entered chiefly from 1834 to 1838.

The first entry in the county seems to have been made within the present bounds of Wayne Township. The location is about a mile west of Harrisville, on the White River. How the man who made the entry got away in there, so far from any settlement, and why he entered that particular quarter-section, would be interesting at this day to know, but probably the facts will be forever hidden in the tomb of the forgotten past. This entry was made more than a year before the first settlement, which took place in April, 1814, and some fifteen miles southeast, on Nolan's Fork.

M. Moffitt did not settle on the land he had entered—not at that time, at any rate.

The next entry was made by the Chenoweths, directly east of Bartonia, on Greenville Creek, being Section 26, 17, 1, a part of which is still owned and occupied by the widow of Abram Chenoweth, who died a few years ago. Abram Chenoweth, the father of the Abram of later days, entered three quarter-sections in Section 26, on both sides of Greenville Creek, in 1817.

During the winter following (February 6, 1818), Jeremiah Cox, of Wayne County, who had been employed in milling for years in that region, came up to White River, a mile or two above Harrisville, and entered a whole section—Section 19, 20, 15—on both sides of the river, with a view of erecting mills after awhile in that new county—a purpose which he accomplished about 1825.

The same year, April 15, 1818, Abram and Amos Peacock and Henry and Benoni Hill made entries and effected a settlement shortly after, i. e., in 1818. They are supposed to have been the first actual settlers in Wayne Township.

The growth of this region was but slow. After the Chenoweth entries and the Jericho colony, but little was done till many years later. The Chenoweth land was not settled till more than twenty years later (1840). The Coxes, the Peacocks and Hills came in from Wayne County and the south, but the next considerable movement entered the territory south of Union City, breaking across the line from Ohio and the East.

The Chenoweth who entered the land so early in Wayne Township (September 24, 1817), lived near Spring Hill, Darke Co., Ohio. He was the grandfather of Abram Chenoweth, who died a few years ago, south of William A. Macy's, near Greenville Creek.

The first Chenoweth who resided on the land was Abram Chenoweth, cousin of the one spoken of just above. He made the settlement about 1840, and the other one, whose widow lives there now, came later.

By the end of 1826, only eighteen entries had been made, and that by fourteen persons. These entries comprised about thirty-one hundred acres. Nearly all, or 2,650 acres, were taken up in a few months, almost at first, from September 24, 1817, to May 29, 1818, by the settlement of Friends. They lived there, nearly in seclusion, for years, having communication with the White River settlers toward the west, but not much any other way, except, indeed, to go to the Whitewater Mills for grinding, and the Whitewater Yearly Meeting for religious purposes.

The first religious meeting in Wayne Township was probably that of the Friends, at Jericho, and the first school the one in their meeting-house.

There are not many churches in this township. There are, outside of Union City, only four—Methodist, at Bartonia; Friends', at Jericho; Christian, at Harrisville; and Disciple, at Salem. The Friends began their society about 1820; the church at Bartonia was built about 1850; the one at Harrisville, about 1860; and the one at Salem, perhaps about 1855.

The schools in Wayne Township are in a good condition. Four of the schoolhouses have been lately built new. They are substantial and sightly edifices, well suited to their purpose.

The Trustees of Wayne Township have been Robert Murphy, Alexander Gullett, Jacob A. Macy, William Turner and Robert McKee. Mr. McKee is building (fall of 1881) two new schoolhouses of brick.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 19, Range 15—Section 4, 1832–35; Section 5, 1833–38; Section 6, 1826–37, Joshua Buckingham August 11, 1826; Section 7, 1826–36, George W. Farrens, October 17, 1826; Section 8, 1833–37, Stanton Bailey, September 16, 1833; Section 9, 1831, Stanton Bailey, October 4, 1831.

Township 18, Range 1 west—Section 23, 1830–33, James Emerick and John Sheets, January 15, July 6, 1830; Section 24, 1831–37, John Sheets, September 21, 1831; Section 25, 1835–36, John Royer, September 21, 1835; Section 26, 1832–36, Thomas Peden, October 2, 1832; Sections 35, 36, 1836–37.

TOWNS.

The towns in Wayne Township are, or have been, Bartonia, Harrisville, Randolph, Salem and Union City. We describe them in order:

Bartonia.—Edward Barton, proprietor; A. D Way, surveyor; location, junction of Spartansburg & Arba pike with Greenville State road; twenty-seven lots; recorded October 1, 1849; streets, none named in the plat. Distances: Spartansburg, four miles; Union City, seven and one-third miles; Winchester, eight miles; Harrisville, six miles; Saratoga, four and three-fourths miles; Arba, seven and four-fifths miles. The town is located at the point where the Richmond pike running northward reaches the Greenville & Winchester road, and stands upon Section 26, 17, 1. Some business has been done in years past, but not very much. A store, a smith shop, a wagon shop, a physician, a post office and a church have been there much of the time for twenty-five or thirty years. At one time there were two stores, a smith shop, a cabinet shop, a turning shop, a post office, a meeting-house and two physicians. But little is left at present. The town has dwindled, many of the dwellings are removed, the others decayed and things are in a dull way indeed. There are now one store, one smith shop, one post office and one church (Methodist Episcopal). Principal residents near are W. S. Morton, west; T. S. Kennon, northwest; John Hartman, north; James Ruby, south; Daniel Stockdale, south; Richard Stockdale, southwest; Graves, Esq., west; Mr. Chenoweth, east; Branson Anderson, east; Reagan, east.

Bartonia is one of the polling places of Wayne Township, the other two being Union City and Harrisville. Bartonia is half a mile east of the site of the old town of Randolph, which, however, has been extinct for thirty years or more. The country around is rolling and fertile, and the residents are thrifty and prosperous, and some possess a comfortable fortune.

Harrisville.—Location, in Wayne Township, upon Sections 17, 18, Town 20, Range 15; on the Bee Line Railroad, four miles west of Union City, and seven miles east of Winchester; recorded June 17, 1854, Job Harris, proprietor; E. L. Watson, surveyor; seventeen lots. Dickinson's Addition, William Dickinson, proprietor; recorded August 18, 1854; E. L. Watson, surveyor; streets, north and south, Elm; east and west, North; lots eighteen to thirty-five, eighteen lots. J. Alexander's Addition, Joseph Alexander, proprietor; thirteen lots; recorded November 17, 1877; streets, east and west, Main; north and south, Mill and Sugar. Distances: Union City, four and one-half miles; Bartonia, six miles; Winchester, six and one-half miles; Saratoga, five and one-half miles; Arba, thirteen and a half miles; Spartansburg, ten miles; New Pittsburg, ten miles.

The town arose with the Bellefontaine Railroad. The business of the town was but little at first, and the improvement of the village has since been slow. There is but one public road, and that running north and south across the railroad track. The town is too near Union City to command much business. However, some growth has been attained, and it has become the center of a meager trade. Two small additions have been made to the plat of the village, indicating an increase of population. The antecedents and commencement of the place are as follows: In 1841, just forty-one years ago, and about ten years before the birth of the town, two small cabins stood upon the site where now appears the hamlet of Harrisville. One was occupied by Michael Ingle, father of Philip Ingle, still a resident of the town. Mr. Ingle died of cholera some years afterward on the Mississippi. The other settler was William Dickinson, who lived near where the church now stands. Others came and at length Job Harris. About 1851, Job Harris undertook to open a small store. He shortly afterward laid out the town. Before long, William Locke set up a blacksmith shop, and William Benson built a saw-mill. Mahlon Fous followed, making pumps, and sometimes tried his hand at repairing wagons. Dr. Dreer undertook to practice medicine, and Mr. Bone made and mended shoes. Job Harris kept a post office. Here we have the picture of the town in its earlier years, and truth compels us to state that the business of the ambitious little "ville" is not greatly more extensive at the present day. Some increase indeed there has been. The saw-mill was burned. Mr. Keister built another. That, too, was burned, and he built still another, attaching to it a grist-mill, and the two in one are there to-day. One store has sufficed for the trade of the town until the spring of 1881, and now there are two. A church (Christian) was formed in 1865, and a meeting-house was erected by them in 1866. Mr. Keister built a warehouse in 1880 and bought some grain. There are a smith shop and a post office, and the pump-maker continues his vocation; there are a physician and a clergyman and a Justice of the Peace, and the mill still rears its head amid the dwellings of the place. About twenty-five residences are found upon the various streets, and the church opens its hallowed doors for the services of religion. In those twenty-five residences, one hundred and nine people find a home and a resting-place, so that, take it all in all, Harrisville is quite a town—much more than many a one that persists in maintaining a name and a place in the world.

Its merchants have been Messrs. Harris, Benson, Millett, Parker & Horner, Hullinger, Eyinger, Sutton, Albright, Ackels. The physicians have been Messrs. Dreer, Adams, Hullinger, States, Owens. Blacksmiths: Messrs. Locke, Frazier, Kelzy, Robinson. Those now doing business are as follows: Selling goods, Messrs. Albright and Ackles; physician, Dr. Owen; clergyman, Rev. D. S. Davenport, Christian; blacksmith, Mr. Robinson; pump-maker, Mahlon Fous; miller, Mr. Keister; grist mill, Smith Bros. reside at Union City; Postmaster, Mr. Albright; grain dealer, Mr. Keister. Its citizens seem to have been attached to the place. Philip Ingle has resided here from the first. Mahlon Fous and William Locke also. Mr. Keister and Mr. Davenport have been here some fifteen years. No liquor is sold in the town. The Bee-Line Railroad passes through the place, and furnishes to the vicinity the convenience of a daily mail. No pike extends to the town, but it stands between two, the nearest about a mile off. When the citizens will arouse and put in that "gap," they will have free intercourse both by gravel pike and by rail with the whole boundless continent. May the wish and anxious hope ere long become a blest reality. Their school is about a half a mile away.

Wayne Township is divided into five voting precincts, and the polling places are Bartonia, Harrisville and three at Union City. The great body of the voting is done at the latter place, though Union City is near one corner of the township. In population, Harrisville ranks twelfth in Randolph County, the towns with more people being Union City, Winchester, Farmland, Lynn, Spartansburg, Morristown, Huntsville, Bloomingsport, Saratoga, Windsor. Messrs. Smith, proprietors of the foundry and machine shop at Union City, have lately (1882) fitted up a fine grist-mill at Harrisville, and they seem likely to command a good patronage and to achieve a substantial success for themselves, as well as to furnish a convenience to the region in which it is situated.

Settlers near Harrisville: William Dickinson and Michael Ingle came to the neighborhood about 1837. Samuel Conkling came from New Jersey about 1836, settling east of Whitesell's Graveyard; he raised ten children, and died in 1860, aged seventy-three. Thomas Welch the same year; he was an old man and died soon after; his son took the farm and resided there until he died, three years ago. William Martin came about 1835, living near the second toll-gate, west of Union; he died in 1872, sixty-six years old. Joel Elwell came from New Jersey in September, 1838; has been twice married, and has had eleven children, ten grown, seven married and six living. His first wife was Elizabeth Huston, and the second wife Mary Cole, married in 1878. Mr. Elwell was born in 1806, and is now in his seventy-sixth year. George Whitesell came in 1841; he settled two and a half miles northeast of Harrisville; had fourteen children, twelve grown and eleven married—seven living; he was born in 1790, in North Carolina, and died in 1863, seventy-three years old. He and his wife both died in Fountain County, Ind., in about a month after their removal thither, she being about sixty-five years old; his son, Tobias Whitesell, resides at Harrisville. Jacob Whitesell came to the neighborhood about 1839, settling near the Whitesell Cemetery, west of Union City, on the north pike; he died in 1877, in his seventy-ninth year, and Mary, his wife, in 1863, in her seventy-second year. Ezra Coddington came about 1855, from Richland County, Ohio; he is an old man, with a family of seven grown children. Much of the land north of Harrisville was owned and held by speculators, and thus was kept from occupancy. Some of it came into actual use only so late as 1880.

Randolph (old).—One mile west of Bartonia, on Greenville State road, on the east side of the "Old Boundary," Section 27, Town 17, Range 1; John McKim, James Green, proprietors; fourteen lots; recorded May 20, 1836; streets, east and west, Main (State road); north and south, Main Cross. Distances: Winchester, eight miles; Bartonia, one-half mile; Spartansburg, four miles; Union City, nine miles.

Randolph was probably the first town laid out in Wayne Township, but the business was never considerable. In 1846, there were two stores and one hotel, but probably nothing else. The hotel was kept by Bailey, and the stores were by Bailey and McIntosh. The town did not prosper, and was wholly extinct by 1852. At one time, James Polly kept hotel in the town. It is a curious reminiscence of that old dead town that one of its lots was sold for taxes, and was bid off for a dollar or so by an old colored man named William Lewis, and he undertook to make it a residence, hauling logs there to build a house. The owner of the farm which included the town forbid him entering upon the lot, and he never made good his title to the premises. What a man with plenty of money could have done, cannot now be told, but the colored man had to succumb and lose his dollar, and his labor in hauling the logs to boot. Citizens in the vicinity are Messrs. Graves, Mote, Kennon, Morton, Shockney, etc. The country is slightly rolling and slowly improving. There is no pike near the place, and no road but the State road, which in muddy weather is terrible. An old graveyard is near the town, which is still in use. Many of the residents in the region are thriving farmers. Messrs. Kennon, Shockney and Morton are especially prominent and enterprising.

Salem.—Location, Sections 11 and 12, Town 17, Range 1, southwest of Union City, east of "Old Boundary." Nine lots; plat recorded December 25, 1849, David Polly, proprietor; no streets named in the plat. Polly's Addition, David Polly, proprietor; seven lots (ten to fifteen inclusive); recorded October 5, 1858. Salem is located on the road running east from Jericho, three miles from the latter place. McIntosh & Polly had a store there in 1847. The town began about 1850. A post office was established about 1852 by the name of Balaka. Silas Gist had a cabinet shop. J. Locke had a smith shop. The persons who have sold goods there have been D. Polly, McIntosh, Wiggs & Polly, Joseph Shaw, Elijah Frazier, Hardin Law, Downing & Harkrider, Alfred Dixon, Montgar. The black smiths have been J. Locke, Joshua Harlan, Amos Coughren, Thompson, William Anderson and others. Cabinet shops: Silas Gist, John T. Adams, Springer, Harlan, etc. Wagon shop, Harlan. There has been a Disciples' Church thirty years or more, which has lately been revived. Among the settlers in the region have been Benjamin Dixon, Silas Dixon, Samuel Downing, Robert Murphy, William Woodbury, 1839; Nathan P. Woodbury, 1839; Edwin R. Woodbury, 1839; Peter Hoover, Ezekiel Gullett, Samuel Gullett, David Polly, 1840; Barnahill Polly, 1840. The town was begun mostly in the woods, and did some business for a time, but it has had the common fate of small towns near, but not on, a railroad. Business has all died out. A few old houses remain, most of which have families living in them. The store, the smith shop, the post office, all are gone. Only the church remains, in which services are held at irregular intervals. Salem is about four and a half miles from Union City, in a southwest direction. There is no pike near the town. Only mud roads exist there, and the country being level and the surface clay, the highways are, in the wet season, nearly impassable. The country thirty years ago was mostly in the woods, but improvement has gradually made its way till there are now good farms and comfortable residences to be found in the vicinity. A saw-mill has been in operation in the neighborhood for thirty years, until within a year or two, but now it is gone. In 1852, teams used to come down through the woods—roads newly cut out and bridged up a little, from Union City that had just started, after lumber to help to build the infant town. The immense lumber yards that are now the pride and the wonder of the thriving city, had not then been thought of. Alfred Lenox, in 1852, went from Union to Pollytown (as it was then called) and hauled a load of lumber to Union City, with six yoke of oxen. The load was a whopper, and men did not believe that he would get the load through, but he did. The region around is similar to the rest of this part of the country—somewhat level and inclined to be low, and needing good thorough draining, but improving gradually, and having some good farms and building.

Hayesville—Is a little suburb of Union City, Ind., located about a mile southwest of that town, at the junction of the south pike leading to Winchester and the new pike, extending from the south line of the county northward to Union City. It has grown up within six or eight years, having been named at the inauguration of President Hayes, in March, 1877. The statement is made that the people there resolved that, if Hayes should be declared elected, their suburb should be christened Hayesville, and if not, the name should be Elizabethtown. The place contains a store, a smith shop, a toll-gate, a schoolhouse and eight or ten dwellings not far off. Of course, the close proximity prevents business from centering there, yet it is a neat and pleasant hamlet, the houses being comparatively new and the residents quiet and industrious citizens.

JAMES ALEXANDER, a prominent farmer of Wayne Township, was born in Warren County, Ohio, January 8, 1818, being a son of Daniel and Sarah Alexander, who removed from the county of their nativity to Preble County, Ohio, in 1823, and not very long afterward to Warren County, in the same State. Daniel Alexander was a farmer, and James grew up a farmer's son, sharing from boyhood the labors and hardships of those rough and rugged days. His marriage occurred September 2, 1840, with Miss Julia A., daughter of Jacob Alexander. Eight children have been born to them, and six of the eight survive, viz., Milton H., Mary J., Sarah E., Hugh T., Henry J. and James B. Mr. Alexander is not an early pioneer of Randolph County, emigrating thither not till 1851; some portions of the county, however, were still uncleared, and he managed to settle in the woods, even at that late day. His wife and self are members of the Christian (New-Light) Church, and he is, in politics, a Republican. Mr. Alexander is a modest and retiring, yet an estimable and reliable citizen.

BRANSON ANDERSON. Born in 1814, in North Carolina, he came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1833; he entered forty acres adjoining John Hartman's old place on the west, but resides at the present time on the Greeneville State road, east of Bartonia. Mr. Anderson married Hester Green, in 1842, and they have had ten children, five of whom are still living. He now owns eighty acres, where he has his residence; he is a substanial farmer, and a reliable, life-long Democrat.

JOHN ANDERSON, born in 1785 in Maryland; went to North Carolina when young; married Priscilla Sexton about 1802; came to Richmond, Ind., 1829; came to Randolph County in 1833; settled north of Greenville Creek, near Abram Chenoweth's (Jacob Macy farm), entering forty acres of land there. He had twelve children, all grown, and ten married before he died. His children were eight boys and four girls. He died in 1850, and his wife in 1863, at the age of seventy-seven years; she was buried in Hoover's Graveyard. Mr. Anderson was a Democrat.

LEVEN BARTON (father of Mrs. Norton, of Bartonia) came to Bartonia about 1850, or probably sooner; he lived there about two years, then moved to Iowa, and died there. Edward Barton, son of Leven Barton, came to Randolph County, Ind., about 1846. He laid out Bartonia in 1849 (plat recorded October 1, 1849), and resided there about six years, and then removed to Iowa, in 1852, and died there. He was an enterprising citizen, a member of the Methodist Church and an excellent, upright and trustworthy man.

JACOB BENNETT lives south of the toll-gate southwest of Union City, near Hayesville. He was born in Virginia in 1809; came to Meigs County, Ohio, in 1840; moved to Jay County, Ind., in 1850; moved to Mercer County, Ohio, in 1852, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1866. He married Rachel McLaughlin in 1830, who died in 1854; he then married Elizabeth Beechan in 1855. He has had fourteen children, of whom ten are now living. Mr. Bennett has been an active, enterprising farmer all his life. He owns 146 acres of land, is a Republican and an Episcopal Methodist, and has been a Methodist local preacher for thirty years.

HENRY BURKET was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, and is a son of Isaac and Catharine Burket, the former a native of North Carolina, and the latter of Ohio. Mr. Burket was raised on a farm, receiving only a common education. In 1854, he married Miss Jane Hulse, by whom he had five children, three of whom are yet living. His wife died on April 12, 1870, and on the 17th of the following September he married Mrs. Rachel A. Grim, by whom he has three children, all living. Mr. Burket has, since 1854, been the owner of a saw-mill, but in business he is classed as a farmer, living on his own farm of 160 acres, three miles west of Union City, and besides this he owns 80 acres in Darke County, Ohio. He and his wife are members of the German Reform Church.

ELIHA CAMMACK, son of John Cammack, born in Arba in 1817; married Rebecca Wiggs in 1837. Lived near Arba on the old farm till he moved to his present home on the State road, east of Bartonia, in 1846, in the green woods. He now owns 168 acres there, 80 acres near Spartansburg, besides several tracts of land elsewhere. He has resided where he now lives thirty-four years (except that he sold goods at Arba a few years, returning in 1873). He has been Commissioner of Randolph County ten years. He has a fine young vineyard with several hundred vines, giving splendid promise for the future. He is supposed to be the oldest living person native of Randolph and now residing in its limits. His wife was sick for years, lay very low for many months, and finally died in the summer of 1880. They have had six children—John Henry, born in 1838, twice married and has six children, is a farmer and sawmiller, Wayne Township, near his father's; Francis Marion, born in 1843, has three children, railroad clerk, Sidney, Ohio; Martha Ann, born in 1845, died an infant; George Washington, born in 1848; William Winfield, born in 1851, three children, farmer, lives one mile north of his father, near Greenville Creek; Elmena Henrietta, born in 1855, unmarried, and lives with her father. Mr. Cammack is a fine specimen of the sturdy Western farmer and business man, prompt, active, firm, public-spirited and energetic, hewing his steadfast way through hardship and toil to comfort and independence. His father and uncles were among the earliest settlers of Randolph County, near Arba. His father, John Cammack, entered land in 1814 or 1815, near Arba, and his uncle James entered his land near the same place. Of course Eliha Cammack took the brunt of pioneer life from the very start, witnessing and experiencing its many trials (and its pleasures as well) from the very beginning; for with all the hardships incident to such a life, inconceivable and well-nigh incredible to the present generation, there were also sources of delight open to those stalwart pioneers, affording them much enjoyment, and rendering them cheerful and contented with their lot, and even thankful and happy for all their blessings. E. C. was married in the fall of 1881, in Iowa, to a lady with the same name as himself. Mr. C. is sixty-four years of age, in the vigor of mature manhood, still hale and strong and giving promise of enjoying many years to come in the land of the living. He was, in old times, a Whig, and for years past a Republican, possessing a vigorous and independent mind, and commanding the respect and esteem of all who know him. Mr. Cammack, in December, 1881, removed to Iowa, because—well, because his wife lives there, and because—which is natural, you know—he wished to live where his wife does.

ABRAM I. CHENOWETH.

Abram I. Chenoweth, the first of the Chenoweth family of whom we have any record, came from England to America in 1720. They were two brothers, named Arthur and Richard Chenoweth, who settled in Berkeley County, Va., and each married and had several children. Arthur had several sons, named James, John, Abraham, William Thomas, Arthur and Richard. The fifth son, Thomas Chenoweth, married Mary Pricket, who bore him twelve children, namely, Martha, Sarah, Mary, John, Thomas, Arthur, Richard, William, Elijah, Ann, Hannah and Abraham. This youngest son, Abraham Chenowith, married Rebecca Herr, May 1, 1790. They had fourteen children, whose names were, Martha, William, Jacob, Ann, John, Susannah, Mary, Noah, Sarah, Hannah, Abraham, Rebecca, Joel and Gideon. Their third son, John Chenoweth, married Mary Barger, April 13, 1820, and by her had six children, namely, William, Jacob B., Abraham J., John B., Susan and Rebecca. John Chenoweth, the father, died on the 26th day of January, 1851, and of the children, William died February 20, 1837, and John B. died August 7, 1853. The mother died October 12, 1876. The others of the family are yet living.

Of the last above-named children, Abraham J. Chenoweth is the subject of this sketch, and was born in Pike County, Ohio, on the 9th of July, 1826. When quite young, his parents removed to Darke County, Ohio, and settled in Washington Township. Here he grew up, surrounded by the privations of a frontier life, and accustomed to the labor and toil of the backwoods. He was educated in the primitive schools of that day, and acquired the rudiments of an education. On the 25th day of August, 1848, he was married to Miss Celia Harris, a native of Campbell County, Va., and the daughter of Benjamin and Susan Harris, who were among the pioneers of this county. From this marriage have sprung eight children, six of whom are living.

In November, 1848, Mr. Chenoweth came to this county and settled on the northeast quarter of Section 26, in Wayne Township. Of this land, he had received from his father eighty acres, and by purchase from his brother, Jacob, he had acquired the other eighty. The land was wholly unimproved. In fact, Mr. C. cut away the underbrush and trees to make an opening for his log cabin, into which he removed and began the work of life. As a farmer he was eminently successful. To the original homestead he added other lands, until at the time of his death he was the owner of 576 acres.

Mr. Chenoweth united with the M. E. Church when he was fourteen years of age, and for thirty-eight years he was a consistent and influential member thereof, having been a Class-Leader thirteen years. He was exact in all his business transactions, cordial with his acquaintances, a kind-hearted and generous man. He died of typhoid fever November 9, 1878, and his mortal remains were followed to their final earthly resting-place in Union City Cemetery, by a large and sympathizing company of sorrowing relatives and friends.

Mrs. Celia H. Chenoweth was born in Campbell County, Va., March 1, 1828, and is the daughter of Benjamin and Susan Harris. When she was in her eighth year, her parents moved to Warren County, Ohio, and in the same year to Greene County, from which place, after a short sojourn, they removed to Randolph County in 1836, and settled on a piece of land in Washington Township. She received such education as the common schools of that day could afford, and grew up as the daughter of an early settler. When ten years of age, she united with the M. E. Church, and has ever since remained a member. On the 25th day of August, 1848, she was married, to Abraham J. Chenoweth, with whom she lived a pleasant, useful and prosperous life of a little more than thirty years, and whose respected and honored widow she now is. Her residence is yet on the old homestead, where she receives from her neighbors the respect and esteem which her virtues merit, and where she enjoys the competence which her industry and economy helped to accumulate.

JOHN T. CHENOWETH, born in Maryland in 1826. He came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1840. He was thrice married, to Rhoda Parker in 1847, to Hester Ramsey in 1852, and to Emily Lawrence in 1859. They have had eleven children, five of whom are living. Mr. C. is a Methodist and a Republican, thriving in business, and respected and esteemed in social life. He is a farmer by vocation; has been Assessor for both Green's Fork and Wayne Townships, and came within a few votes of obtaining the Republican nomination for Commissioner of Randolph County. Three of his brothers were in the Union army. Benjamin F., Fifty-seventh Indiana Infantry, had a finger shot off; discharged June 22, 1863. George W., Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, taken prisoner and released on parole at Richmond, Ky., August 30, 1862; wounded at Thomson's Hill, not very far from Grand Gulf, Miss., May 1, 1863; died May 14, 1863, of the wound received as before stated. Joshua B. joined the Eighty-fourth as a recruit. Account of land owned by the William Chenoweth family: John T. Chenoweth, Wayne Township, Jericho, 265 acres; W. C. Chenoweth, Green's Fork Township, 120 acres; Sarah Ann (Banks), Darke County, Ohio, 240 acres; Charles W. Chenoweth, Green's Fork Township, 200 acres; Oliver M. Chenoweth, Green's Fork Township, 180 acres; Edwin M. Chenoweth, Wayne Township, 140 acres; Benjamin F. Chenoweth, Green's Fork Township, 76 acres; Joshua B. Chenoweth, Wayne County, 155 acres; homestead, Green's Fork Township, 236 acres; Henrietta K. (Brown), Wayne County (dead), 160 acres. Total, 1,762 acres. The Chenoweth family held a large and interesting re-union August 26, 1882, at the old homestead near Arba, Ind. The family is numerous and wide-spread, and they belong to the enterprising and influential portion of the community.

OTIS COATS was born in White River Township, this county, October 25, 1842, and is a son of Isaac and Norena Coats. He was brought up on a farm, and, in common with the boys of his neighborhood, received his education in the common schools, and for three years was a teacher. On July 31, 1867, he married Miss Catharine Davenport, daughter of Rev. D. S. Davenport, mention of whom is made elsewhere in this book. They have six children, and are both members of the Christian Church. Mr. Coats is now engaged in farming.

ANCESTRY OF EZRA CODDINGTON.

William Coddington (grandfather of Ezra Coddington, resident of Wayne Township, Randolph Co., Ind.), was born February 8, 1751, and died in 1827. Hannah Coddington, wife of William Coddington, was born September 26, 1754. Their children were as follows: Isaac, born December 19, 1774, and died April 12, 1797; John, born April 4, 1777, and died in Illinois in 1845 at the age of sixty-five years; Betsey, born January 14, 1780; Robert, born December 10, 1781, died March 10, 1782; Benjamin, born June 19, 1783, died March 3, 1855, aged seventy-two; Martha, born December 5, 1785, died in two months. Benjamin Coddington was the father of Ezra Coddington. Benjamin's wife, Martha, was born February 12, 1786, and died October 15, 1826, aged forty years. Their children were as follows: Abraham, born June 14, 1805 (Ezra Coddington's oldest brother); Hannah, born June 12, 1807, living, has twelve children; Ezra, born May 12, 1809, is living, and has had seven children; Aza, born July 28, 1811, living, was never married, resides in Randolph County, Ind.; John, born May 30, 1815, died May 31, 1836, aged twenty-one years one day; Lydia, born October 10, 1816, died April 14, 1861, having had nine children; Samuel, born September 21, 1820, died July 16, 1863, four children; Effee, born December 16, 1822, living, has four children; Elizabeth, born June 26, 1825, living, has two children; Eleanor, born in 1827, died in 1878, eight children; Sarah, born in 1829, died in 1876. Thus, Ezra Coddington was one of eleven children, only six of whom are now living. An ancestor, probably the earliest in America of the family, was William Coddington, who, with eighteen others removing from Massachusetts to Narragansett Bay, purchased Aquitneck, settling in 1638, and of the little colony, William Coddington was chosen their first Governor. From him, as the original stock, are reckoned to have sprung the various branches of the connection throughout the country. Ezra Coddington's great-grandfather, whose name also was William Coddington, resided in New Jersey, where the family was numerous, but the exact connection from this William back to the William, Governor of Aquitneck and its infant colony, we are unable to trace. Ezra's grandfather, after his marriage, moved from New Jersey to Maryland some time after the Revolutionary war, and after his marriage, which latter event occurred, however, before the war, say 1772 or 1773, as his oldest child was born in 1774. His subsequent life was spent in Maryland, but the date of his death is to us unknown. He was well-to-do, having been the owner of 300 acres of land. Ezra's father, Benjamin Coddington, was born probably in New Jersey, and was taken by his father to Maryland upon their removal thither. Benjamin Coddington, father of Ezra R. Coddington, being married about 1804, removed from Maryland to Perry County, Pike Township, Ohio, sixty miles south of Columbus in 1816, remaining in the same county till his death in 1855. Ezra Coddington's grandfather, William Coddington, was a soldier through the entire war of the Revolution, being probably in the naval service. His great-grandfather's children were Robert, William, Benjamin, Betsey, Samuel—only five. The connection has been numerous, influential, and spread extensively through the country.

EZRA R. CODDINGTON, a farmer of Wayne Township, was born May 12, 1809, in Alleghany County, Md.; he is the son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Coddington, who settled in Perry County, Ohio, in 1816. Mr. Coddington received his early education in the log-cabin schoolhouses of early days, and in 1834 married Elizabeth J. Kennedy. They are the parents of seven children, four of whom are now living, viz., Elizabeth, Nelson, Samuel and Justina. Mr. Coddington came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1854; he has a farm of thirty-five acres under good cultivation. He is a member of the Christian Church, and in politics is a Republican, having been a Whig during the existence of that party.

JACOB CONKLYN is a native of this county, and was born April 14, 1846, being a son of Samuel and Catharine Conklyn, who were among the first settlers of the county. He received a common-school education, and in 1865 was married to Miss Mary A. Ingall, by whom he has had six children, four of whom are living. Mr. Conklyn is a successful farmer, living on his own farm of 140 acres, three miles west of Union City, and, with his wife, is a member of the Christian Church at Harrisville.

WASHINGTON CONKLYN is a native of Randolph County, being comparatively a young man, and born April 17, 1850; he was brought up on his father's farm, and is himself a farmer. His father, Samuel Conklyn (deceased) was a native of New Jersey, marrying, in 1831, Miss Sarah Smith, born in Ohio. They had six children, four of whom are still alive—Harriet, Catharine, Angeline and Washington. Samuel Conklyn was one of the earliest settlers of Wayne Township outside of Jericho, coming in 1834, when residents in the region were indeed "few and far between," and selecting for himself and his beloved flock a home in the wild and pathless woods. Washington Conklyn married Miss Julia Engle May 18, 1867, and they are the parents of four children—Sarah E., Sylvester F., William S. and Franklin C. He is a thriving and enterprising citizen, owning 160 acres of valuable land.

REV. DAVID S. DAVENPORT

was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, October 1, 1823. His parents, Noah and Catharine (Stutsman) Davenport, removed to Miami County, Ohio, in the spring of 1825, when the infant David was barely eighteen months old. When he had reached the age of twelve, they removed again to Elkhart County, Ind., and, after the lapse of ten years, he returned to the home of his boyhood, and on the 10th of September, 1846, he married Miss Margaret Coats. Their family has consisted of nine children, of which number, however, only three are living, all daughters, viz., Mary J., Martha A. and Catharine. Mr. Davenport united with the Christian (New-Light) Church in 1849, and belongs to the same denomination still. In 1856, he entered the ministry and was ordained in 1859. He came to Randolph County in 1865, and soon afterward organized the church at Harrisville. Through his labors, a large and prosperous society has been built up, and he is still its pastor, having been so at different times in all during sixteen years. Mr. Davenport has been incessant in labor both physical and ministerial. While resident in Ohio, he worked as a cooper. Becoming involved during the financial crisis, he came to Randolph well-nigh penniless. Taking up the business of bridge-building by day and preaching at night, he succeeded in paying his debts, and, moreover, laid by enough to purchase a small farm; he now owns sixty-six acres of land, and a dwelling and two lots at Harrisville. He has a good standing in his denomination, being Treasurer of the Eastern Indiana Christian Conference, and also Treasurer of the Indiana State Christian Missionary Board. Mr. Davenport was a member of the Ohio Home Guards who were ordered to the front by Gov. Brough May 2, 1864; he was in several skirmishes; was with Hunter at Lynchburg, at Cumberland during the engagement with Early, etc. Mr. Davenport is still actively and earnestly engaged in the work of preaching, rejoicing in the good measure of success with which the gracious Lord of the Vineyard has been pleased to vouchsafe to his labor of many years duration.

BENJAMIN DIXON was born in North Carolina, emigrated thence to Butler County, Ohio, and yet again to Randolph County, about 1835. He was married four times; his wives were Sarah Gullett (sister of Ezekiel Gullett), the mother of ten children; Sarah Eisenhour, married in Indiana, one child; Nancy Bright, married in Indiana, no children; Keziah (V) Barnes, a widow lady with a family of children. The fourth wife is still living with her son, John Barnes, at Spartansburg. Mr. Dixon died about 1876; he was very old; his hair white as snow, his step feeble and tottering and his frame trembling and decrepit; his surviving widow is also venerable with age. Mr. Dixon's children were Zilpha, Alfred, Andrew, Levi, Mary (died at twenty-one from bleeding at the nose), John, Silas, Sarah, Hugh (died at two years). Eight grew up and were married and had families before any of the eight died. Mr. Dixon was a farmer by occupation, a Presbyterian in religious profession, and a Democrat in politics. Failing to maintain a Presbyterian Church, those who had belonged thereto joined other denominations, and about 1850 he attached himself to the Disciple Church, and remained with it till his death. The older members of the Dixon connection are all dead. The last, Silas, departed this life, a feeble old man, in the winter of 1880–81. The settlers in 1835 were Peter Hoover, John Dixon, Smith Masterson, Mr. Kennon, Robert Murphy, two families by the name of Powell, James Griffis. John Dixon, brother of Benjamin Dixon, came before the other members of the connection.

SILAS DIXON was born in 1800 in North Carolina; came to Butler County, Ohio, in 1814, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1840. He has been married four times; his wives were Mary Gullett, Kezia Cartwright, Mary Linton and Matilda Macy. They have had four children. He lived for many years, probably since his first settlement in the county, southwest of Union City and northeast of South Salem; he was a farmer. He was afflicted for years during his old age, and finally died in the early winter of 1880–81, aged eighty years.

SAMUEL DOWNING, M. D., was born in Chester Co., S. C., April 6, 1805; his parents were John and Margaret. The father died in 1870, aged ninety-three years, and the mother about 1866, also very old. Dr. Downing was one of eight children. His father came from South Carolina to Bourbon Co., Ky., in 1813, to New Paris, Preble Co., Ohio, in 1815, and to Darke County, Ohio, in 1817, which latter point became his permanent residence, Samuel Downing being then twelve years old. In 1828, he began the study of medicine, privately for the most part, in which laborious but greatly useful profession he finally achieved an honorable success. In 1829, he married Elizabeth Baird, and to them were born ten children, seven of whom, as also his wife, survived him. They removed to the wilds of Randolph County, Ind., in 1837, settling four miles southwest of what is now Union City, Ind., near what afterward became South Salem, upon a tract of land containing 215 acres. At first, he was largely a farmer, but, as the country became more thickly settled, his medical duties chiefly absorbed his time and strength, for in those backwoods regions, to ride on horseback day and night, winter and summer, was no "child's play," but the business rather of a robust, stalwart man. February 5, 1843, he was baptized into the Christian faith by Rev. Elihu Harlan, to which profession he held fast with greater or less steadfastness to the end of his days. In 1859, he made an extended tour into Missouri and through the farther West in search of a new location, and in 1864 he removed to Northern Michigan as a pioneer into those regions. After a residence of some five years in that State, he returned in 1870 to Randolph County, Ind., and died after a stay of eight months there, July 7, 1871, at the house of his son, James L. Downing, at the age of sixty-six years three months and one day, leaving behind him his wife, seven children and twenty-five grandchildren to mourn his departure from the scenes of this mortal life. Dr. Downing was a genuine pioneer from his boyhood to his death. Born in South Carolina, an emigrant to Kentucky in 1813, to Ohio in 1815, and to Darke County, Ohio, in 1817, sixty-five years ago, coming to Randolph County, Ind., where all was wild and new, in 1837, forty-five years gone by, and to Northern Michigan in 1864, his whole career was that of one whose talents and whose strength were expended in those hardy and rugged labors the sternness and vigor of which none but an early settler can realize or even imagine. And during all this life-struggle, Dr. Downing was a man of ceaseless energy and unflagging perseverance, and he possessed, moreover, the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens in a high degree, serving them, in addition to his labors as a physician, in the position of a magistrate both in Randolph County and in Michigan, performing the duties of that station with faithfulness and success. He may have had faults (and who among men is sinless?), but they may well be buried, if any indeed there were, in the tomb of forgetfulness. Be it ours to speak rather of his excellences, which, indeed, were many, and of his praiseworthy characteristics, which were neither few nor small. While he was frank and outspoken, Dr. Downing was nevertheless genial, warm-hearted, hospitable and generous, quick and willing to bestow ever a helping hand, as ready to minister to the distresses of the poor and needy as to respond to the call of those who could boast abundance. Possessing a firm and resolute will, he could not be swerved from his convictions of justice and right, and, during a long and adventurous life, he was enabled to accomplish important and lasting results of good and blessing to his fellow-men for which many, now and in time to come, may well rejoice and be glad. His family and friends cherish the memory of his many virtues with deep and strong affection, and his fellow-citizens mournfully regret that they have been deprived of his companionship and assistance in the stern and active duties of life, and that he was cut off in his early old age from beholding and sharing the grand and triumphant successes of the later years produced by the abundant and persevering labors and hardships performed and endured by himself and such as he in that rugged older day when this blooming, smiling Western land was a dark and howling wilderness,

FRANCIS FRAZIER, bell-maker, was born in 1803 in North Carolina; came to McCowan's Creek, Ohio, in 1811; came to Randolph County, Ind., one mile east of Lynn, in 1817. His father was James Frazier, also a bell-maker; he (F. F.) married Lucinda Claywater in Clinton County, Ohio, in 1823, and they have had a eleven children, seven of whom are living. Mr. F. and his wife are both alive, though aged and somewhat feeble. Their children are as given below: Samuel, born 1824, eight children; John, born 1826, six children, resides in Iowa; Elisha, born 1827, eight children, resides at Saratoga, Randolph Co., Ind., is a farmer and blacksmith; James, born 1829, seven children, is a farmer; Lucinda, born 1831, one child, she died on Greensfork; Cyrus, born 1833, nine children, resides in Kansas, is a farmer; Hannah, born in 1835, two children, she died in 1870; Isaiah, born in 1837, six children, resides in Iowa, is a farmer; Thomas, born in 1839, died an infant; Francis born in 1842, six children, resides in Wayne Township, near his father's, is a farmer; Elihu, born 1843, four children, lives on his father's place, is a farmer. Mr. F. has had fifty-seven grandchildren. F. F. has been a farmer and a bell-maker. In his day, he was greatly famous for the excellence of his bells, and there was a great demand for them, as in those forest days every herd of cows and sheep, and the horses also, needed a bell to keep the herd together and to tell the anxious hunter of stock where his wandering herd might be. He used to sell readily all the bells he could make, getting orders from a distance which he could not fill. He tells some good stories in his reminiscences of the clearness and power of his bells. Mr. F. claims also that even now, old as he is, he can make a razor of better temper and keener edge than can be found in the stores. He is now very old and getting feeble, but he is still a jovial, genial companion, and an active, humble Christian, trusting God for daily bread, and waiting on the Lord in humility and sincerity, praising Him for all His tender mercies, and looking forward in joyful hope to the time now not far in the future, of final deliverance from all earthly troubles and cares, and of an abundant entrance into the Heavenly kingdom. F. F. is a member of the Friends' Meeting at Jericho, and a meek, faithful, joyful Christian. He moved to Wayne Township many years ago. He and his wife have been joined in matrimony fifty-nine years, and they have dwelt in tenderness of connubial love and the sweet and happy comfort of holy wedlock, bearing together the sorrows and trials of the family state in the patience of joyful hope, and looking forward together to the time of their glorious deliverance from all the burdens of this mortal existence, and a blissful entrance into the mansions prepared on the shining shore behind the dark rolling river.

SAMUEL L. FULKS is a son of William Fulks, now a resident of this county, and was born in Monroe County, Va., on the 28th day of December, 1850. He was brought up on a farm and educated in the common schools. In 1870, he came to this county, and was married to Miss Lucy Chenowith, daughter of the late Abraham Chenoweth, on August 30, 1872. They have had four children, one of whom is dead. Mr. Fulks is a farmer, living on his own farm of sixty-four acres, in Section 26, this township, and, with his wife, is a member of the M. E. Church.

PAUL GITTINGER (P. O. Union City), was born in Baltimore County, Md., January 25, 1820, being a son of Jacob and Mary E. Gittinger, who emigrated to Darke County, Ohio, in the autumn of 1833, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838. They settled in the dense, nearly unbroken forests of Jackson Township among the deer, turkeys and wolves, locating in the northeastern portion of the township and of the county. P. G. was nearly grown when he came to Randolph County, and having enjoyed some opportunity of early education, had engaged soon afterward in the business of teaching school, and continued in that employment (during the winter season) for twenty years. The schoolhouses at the time in that new and half-settled region were rude enough, made of round logs, with puncheon floor, clapboard door, stick chimney, dirt fire-place and hearth and a clapboard roof held to its place by weight-poles. The furniture consisted of split saplings for seats and puncheon writing desk, supported by pins driven into auger holes bored in the logs forming the walls of the house. Mr. G. has lived to see these rustic cabins replaced by comfortable and tasteful edifices, substantially and even elegantly built, and supplied with convenient and often beautiful furniture. He has himself done much toward accomplishing this pleasing change, serving as a Trustee for Jackson Township during several years, besides his efficient and successful labors in the school-room. His marriage took place November 13, 1844, the maiden name of his wife having been Miss Berilla Gist, whose parents were natives of Kentucky, removing to Darke County, Ohio, in the early time. Mr. G. has had six children, only two of whom are living, viz.: Martha G. and Sarah L. One son, Andrew, died in 1876, at the age of thirty years. They removed in 1865 to Darke County, Ohio, and returned to Randolph in 1869, settling at that time in Wayne Township. Mr. Gittinger and his family are worthy members of the Christian Church (called sometimes "New Lights)."

BENJAMIN F. GRAVES, is a son of the late Levi S. Graves, Esq., and was born in Wayne Township, Wayne County, Ind., January 11, 1849. When quite young, his father removed to Darke County, Ohio, and to Wayne Township, in this county, in 1862, buying and settling on a farm near Bartonia, where the subject of this sketch grew up, trained to farm labor, and receiving such education as was afforded by the common district schools. In 1870, he was elected as one of the Constables of Wayne Township, but resigned the office at the end of one year; was re-elected in 1873, but declined to qualify In 1875, he was appointed a special agent of the Treasury Department at Washington, but on account of the great risks attending the position, as well as the uncongeniality of the business, the place was soon abandoned. In 1876, he was elected a Justice of the Peace for Wayne Township, being commissioned by Gov. T. A. Hendricks, to serve as such magistrate for four years, from November 4, 1876. On January 4, 1877, he was admitted as an attorney to practice at the bar of Randolph County, but owing to the duties of his office, never engaged in a general practice. In August, 1878, he removed his office to Union City, and for a portion of that year was Acting Mayor of the city. In 1879, he was appointed a teacher for one of the Indian tribes in the Indian Territory, but declined to enter upon the work. In the spring of 1880, he removed to Kansas, intending to make it his future home, but not liking the prospects of the country, he at once returned to his old home in Randolph County, and was appointed the enumerator for Wayne Township, outside the corporation of Union City, for taking the tenth United States census. On the 17th day of May, 1879, he was married to Mary M. Note, youngest daughter of the late Henry Note, of this township, and by her has one child, Harry Bruce Fremont Grave, born March 2, 1880.

JAMES GRIFFIS, was born in Virginia about 1797. His parents brought him, when but a child, to Ross County, Ohio, settling in the Scioto Valley, not far from the year 1800, when even that region was well-nigh buried in the deep woods. They both died when he was young; and as a lone orphan-boy, poor and destitute, he was obliged to struggle up to manhood as he could. The means of education were but scanty, and he got but little, and that little "by the hardest." In youth, he worked mostly on the farm. In early manhood, however, he practiced flat-boating and rafting, taking boat loads of pork and flour and corn, etc., down the Scioto River to the Ohio and down that river to its mouth, and so along the Mississippi to the points for market along its banks, and frequently to New Orleans itself. He was engaged also at times in taking droves of cattle from Ohio across the Alleghany Mountains to the New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore markets. Thus he passed his life till about thirty-five years old, still remaining, notwithstanding all his hard toil, comparatively a poor man, realizing, by all this hard and rough traveling through the land and along the water-courses, not very much more than a livelihood. In 1832, he emigrated from the valley of the Scioto to the banks of Greenville Creek in Randolph County, Ind. (the old Williamson farm, just west of the Ohio line), in the unbroken forests of Wayne Township. After residing a few years at the place of his first settlement, he removed to the tract of land which continued to be his residence to the end of his life, the beautiful knoll where, years afterward, stood, as a waymark for the weary traveler, and where stands, till this day, the substantial and comfortable dwelling erected by him many years ago. This tract was not utterly "in the woods," since a settlement had been made upon it many years before, say in 1816 or thereabouts. Still, the clearing was but small, and there was, for a long time, nothing upon the premises, even after his occupation thereof, but ordinary log-cabin buildings of the most primitive kind; and he was obliged for many years to engage in chopping and burning and grubbing and clearing, and the laborious, wearisome toil of a pioneer life. His son, John W. Griffis, now resident in Chase County, Kan., in a narrative furnished by him, says: Living in a small log-cabin, he grubbed up the green saplings, and chopped down and rolled into huge heaps the large timber; he would burn brush at night and often would split rails by moonlight and carry them on his shoulder to the fence row. Now and then, though not often indeed, he became discouraged, throwing down his grubbing hoe, or his ax, and, going into his cabin to tell his wife that they never could make a living there in the woods, with his clothes all torn up with the brush, and his hands scratched and bleeding; and the giant tree-trunks, like mighty monsters, rearing their haughty heads on high and laughing at his feeble warfare against their supremacy. But, being a good deer-hunter, he would, after condoling their hardships awhile, shoulder his rifle, and, taking a stroll in the woods, would shoot a deer or two, and go out to his work again with fresh encouragement to continue the struggle. It may be as well to say here that he killed in the woods of Indiana, while resident there, upward of one hundred deer. Many, of course, did far more than that; but he spent his time mostly on the farm, hunting only from necessity or for recreation. Little money was needed in those times, but that was obtained chiefly, especially at first, by selling deer-skins; taxes, salt, powder and lead and iron required money; most articles of food and clothing could be raised or made. The milling was done at the Whitewater about Richmond, or on Stillwater beyond Greenville, and his trading mostly at Greenville. Once after having paid a "store-bill" of $50 at that village, he said to his wife: "Margaret, after this, if we can pay for a thing we will get it, and not otherwise," which he ever afterward made his rule. As he gradually opened his farm on the State road, and after people began to move in large numbers along that old thoroughfare toward the new and boundless West, his double log cabin became a general stopping place. And, when in a few years afterward, cattle-driving from the prairies of Western Indiana and from Illinois became an extensive occupation, vast numbers of such passed along the same grand thoroughfare, and Mr. Griffis having opened a large tract, preparing extensive pasture room, and raising heavy crops of corn as well, used to entertain drovers and feed their herds and flocks. The fact that he had himself been a drover in earlier life increased his acquaintance with this class of men, and induced many to incline to stop with him whenever they could well do so. This business of feeding droves was for years a very large one. In the year 1848, for instance, he kept, overnight, 18,634 head of cattle. Mr. Griffis raised a family of ten children, five boys and five girls, all of whom, as well as his wife, survived him. He died October 2, 1859, of hemorrhage of the bowels, being buried in the cemetery on the land owned by him. His wife died February 22, 1864, aged fifty-four years, and lies buried beside him. Mr. Griffis was no longer young when he married, being probably about thirty-three years old. He had worked several years for an employer in the Scioto Valley, at $1 per day and expenses paid. Not needing very much of his wages, he had permitted them to accumulate in his employer's hands to the amount of some $900; and after his marriage, he was induced to take, in lieu of his wages, some 400 acres of land in the woods of Wayne Township; and moved to the region in a one-horse wagon, having almost nothing remaining but his land. Mr. Griffis was an excellent citizen, and a most active, and enterprising business man, industrious and economical, but generous and hospitable, his friendly spirit and genial manners, as well as his principles of truth, honor and integrity, won him universal respect. Prompt and reliable in all his habits and methods, charitable to the poor, plain and unassuming in his personal deportment, deeply interested in the public welfare, strongly attached to his family and considerate for the welfare of friends—strictly moral and upright in all his conduct, his example was one commanding the public esteem and endearing him to all who knew him. In political faith, he was an earnest Whig of the old-time Henry Clay stamp. In 1846, he represented Randolph County in the State Legislature; and the energy displayed by him during his lifetime in the improvement of the region, and in the development of its resources, was remarkable. He was tall in person and robust in health, in so much that, during his last illness, he remarked that he had never before been so sick that he could not ride on horseback. His weight was about 200 pounds and his bodily strength was great, performing as he did, in his earlier years, a vast amount of physical labor. His children were as follows: Cynthia, twice married, four children, resides in Lincoln, Neb., husband an artist; Sarah Ann (Cadwallader), three children, resides at Union City, Ind., husband a banker; John W., several children, resides in Chase County, Kan.; Maria (Walker), resided in Darke County, Ohio, three children, is dead; Elizabeth (Studebaker), two children, resides in Greenville, Ohio, husband President of Farmers' Bank; W. Creighton, Union City, route agent from Indianapolis to St. Louis; Rebecca (Elston), Sharpege, Darke County, Ohio, three children, husband a farmer and stock dealer; Edward, unmarried, resides with Mr. Studebaker at Greenville, Ohio; James Hibben, twice married, no children, lately grocer, Union City, Ind.; Henry Clay, a lad, killed at the "Brough Rally" in 1863 by falling from a wagon, filled with men, and the passing of the wheel over his head.

EZEKIEL GULLETT was born in North Carolina about 1776. He married Mary Dixon, sister of Benjamin Dixon; they had ten children, all born in Ohio or North Carolina. They moved to Butler County, Ohio, at a very early date, and, after undergoing a full course of pioneer life in that region, resolved to try a second experience of a similar sort, and plunged into the wilderness of Randolph County, settling this time for life, in Wayne Township, some miles south of where Union City now stands. He was among the first in that region, only about half a dozen families having preceded them in that part of the township. The family came to Wayne Township in 1835, consisting of husband and wife and six children, four having been married in Ohio—George, Anna, Thomas and John. The six unmarried were Mary, Samuel Ezekiel, Eleanor and two others. The whole ten grew up, were married and had families. Six were sons and four were daughters; only four are now living. Mr. Gullett was a farmer, a Methodist and a Democrat. He was a substantial pioneer, residing in the township some twenty-six years. He was verging toward old age at his emigration to this county, being near sixty years old, and he died, July 18, 1861, aged eighty-four years. His wife outlived her husband somewhat, her death occurring on the "cold New Year's," January 1, 1864, about eighty years old.

SAMUEL GULLETT is the son of Ezekiel Gullett, having been born in Butler County, Ohio, about 1821. He came, with his father, to Wayne Township in 1835. He has been twice married. His first wife was Frances Wasson, daughter of David Wasson, a pioneer of the adjacent region in Darke County, Ohio, and she died in 1873. His second wife is Ellen Perrine, from Danville, Ind. They removed, not long ago, from their farm east of Salem, Randolph County, to Union City, where they now reside. He has had seven children, five of whom are living; one of his sons is Alexander, who has attained some distinction. He was a soldier; spent some time as a clerk in Washington City; was Township Trustee; became an attorney; was elected Prosecutor for the Judicial District to which Randolph County belongs, and, in 1880, removed to Colorado, where he is rising to prominence as a man of activity and enterprise in his profession and in business in general.

JOHN V. L. HARLAN is a native of the county. He is a son of Joshua and Lucinda Harlan, and was born on the 26th day of December, 1848. He was educated in the common district schools, and taught school one term. He learned the blacksmith trade and worked at it for some time. On January 27, 1872, he married Lucy A. Hartman, daughter of John Hartman, whose biography is given in this work. They have had five children, two of whom are dead. Mr. Harlan is now engaged in farming, living on his own farm, five miles southwest of Union City. He and his wife are both members of the Christian Church.

JOHN HARTMAN, was born in Adams County, near Harrisburg, Penn., June 12, 1804, being a son of John and Ann (Bishop) Hartman (both deceased), the former a native of Berks County, Penn., and the latter of Lancaster County in the same State. His education was received in the primitive cabin schoolhouse, with its usual appurtenances. The teacher was a Scotch-Irishman, who would "let out" school occasionally to "go on a spree." At the age of seventeen, Mr. H. learned the trade of a coverlet-weaver, working at that business for twelve years. He was married, February 7, 1828, to Miss Louisiana Alter, a niece of Hon. Jacob Alter, who was for many years a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature; as also a niece of Hon. Joseph Ritner, ex-Governor of the Keystone State. Mrs. Hartman was born in 1805, and died March 16, 1879. They came to near Greenville, Darke Co., Ohio, in 1833, seeing the stars fall in November of that year, and to Wayne Township, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1848. In 1832, they were in Greenville only thirteen houses. He settled three and one-half miles west of Greenville, and when he removed to Randolph County, he traded that land for 200 acres in Wayne Township, where he has since lived (till he removed in 1880 to Bartonia). His age is seventy-eight years, but he is hale and active, and seems more sprightly than many far younger men. He has been lately married again, to Miss Mary Woods, a daughter of Oliver Woods, Darke County, Ohio, May 16, 1880. He has had eleven children, as follows: Elizabeth, who married Windsor Wiggs, had seven children, and died in 1872 at Union City, Ind.; Jeremiah, born in 1833, two children, died in 1871; Solomon, born in 1835, seven children, resides in Wayne Township, and is a farmer and teacher (see below); Emeline, born 1838, two children, died 1858; John, born 1841, died a Union soldier, 1864, a member of the Fifty-seventh Indiana Infantry, Company C. He taught school five terms, and was at Lebanon Normal School when he enlisted. He was in four battles—Pittsburg Landing, Chattanooga and two others. At Pittsburg Landing he was hit six times, but not wounded. From Chattanooga, he came home to raise recruits, but while at home he was taken sick with lung fever, and the soldier who had passed through the dangers and the deaths of two years of war and battle unharmed, lay down to die amid friends and relatives in the home of his childhood, and passed from the scenes of earth afar from the roar of cannon and the din of conflict. But his comrades also were with him in his last hours, for they had come home to "veteranize," and they attended his funeral in a body, and laid him to rest with the honors of war in the Union City Cemetery, where a simple tombstone commemorates his youthful valor; Francis Marion, died one year old; Jacob, born in 1846, has one child, lives with his father; Lucy, born in 1849, has four children. Most of the descendants of John Hartman reside in Randolph County. There were three others, whose names cannot now be given. Mr. Hartman was, during three years, Township Trustee of Wayne Township, and his wife and himself are members of the Christian Church. J. H. is cheerful in disposition and genial in temper, active, industrious and frugal, esteemed by his neighbors and beloved by his acquaintances. In politics, he is a warm-hearted and enthusiastic Republican. He now (1882) resides at South Salem, Wayne Township.

SOLOMON HARTMAN is the son of John Hartman, Wayne Township. He was born in Darke County, Ohio, in 1855; came with his father to Randolph County, Ind., in 1848; attended Buckeye Seminary U. L. Institute, at Gettysburg, Penn. He taught school before he was seventeen, and has taught twenty-four winters. He married Sarah Ann Williamson in 1858, and they have had eight children. He is a prosperous and successful farmer, taking delight in caring for all his affairs in a neat and thorough manner. Though considered slightly eccentric by some, and being withal a man independent in opinion, he is a most energetic supporter of all good things. In politics, he used to be a strong Republican, but of late years he has thrown all the enthusiasm of his nature into the National Greenback movement; and he expects, erelong, to see the world "turned upside down," or, as he would say, turned "right side up," and hopes to witness the ushering in of the new era, when everybody shall have all the money he wishes, and more, too, and when that blessed time shall come may we all be there to see and to receive, moreover, each one his full and abundant share. Mr. H. resides near his father's old farm about five miles southwest of Union City and a little north of Greenville Creek. Mr. H. is a thoroughly enterprising and greatly public-spirited citizen, entering heartily into every movement for the advancement of the public welfare.

HENRY HILL, Jericho, was born in 1790 in North Carolina. Coming to Wayne County, Ind., in 1817, he changed his residence to Randolph County in 1818, entering eighty acres in Wayne Township, Jericho settlement, and residing there till his death in 1874, fifty-six years. Mr. Hill was three times married —to Achsah Peacock in 1814, who was born in 1793 and died in 1830; to Achsah Thomas in 1831, who died in 1835, and the third time in 1837 to Avis Woodard, who died in 1877. Mr. H. had ten children, all grown and all married, and eight are living still. Asenath (Thomas), born in 1815, married George Thomas in 1833; has had three children; resides at Jericho. Daniel, born in 1817, has been married three times; is publisher of peace literature at New Vienna, Ohio. Jesse, born in 1820; married Catherine Cox; has had two children, died many years ago. Margaret, born in 1824; married Alexander Mason; lived in Minnesota; had five children, died in 1878. Achsah, born in 1829; married Obadiah Stillwell; resides near Lynn; has had two children; husband is a farmer. William, born in 1832; married Hannah Stanbrey; has had nine children; resides in Iowa. Rachel, born in 1833; married Mr. Cox; has had eleven children. Isaac, born in 1835; no children. Henry, born in 1838; has had eleven children; resides at Jericho; is a farmer. Henry Hill, Sr., has had fifty-two grand-children and twenty-two great-grandchildren. He was a quiet, steady, reliable citizen, an Anti-Slavery Friend, a Republican, a thrifty and successful farmer, and an honest, faithful, upright man.

FANNY (DIGGS) HILL is the daughter of William Diggs, who was the first head of a family to settle on White River, in Randolph County. She was born in September, 1817, being supposed to have been the first white child born on White River. She was married to Matthew Hill, son of Benoni Hill, of Jericho, in 1836. Matthew Hill was born in 1814, and came with his parents to Randolph County in 1818. They have seven children, and they live on the land which he entered in 1837.

BENONI HILL was born in North Carolina, came to Jericho, Wayne Township, Randolph County, Ind., in 1818. Had ten children, seven of whom grew up, and died about 1870. His wife's maiden name was Polly Boswell, and she died about 1860. Mr. H. was a Friend, an Abolitionist, an Anti-Slavery Friend, a Republican, and altogether an excellent Christian man and citizen, having been one of the earliest pioneers of Wayne Township.

MATHEW HILL is the son of Benoni Hill (deceased), having been born in 1814, in North Carolina. He came with his father, at the age of four years, to Randolph County, in 1818. In 1837, he married Fanny Diggs, and they have had seven children, six of whom are living and one unmarried. Mr. H. entered eighty acres and now owns 120 acres, being a thriving and successful farmer. He was an Anti-Slavery Friend, and is now a Republican. Mr. Hill, like the great body of the society of which he has been a life-long member, an earnest, faithful, steadfast adherent of Christian principles, and a quiet, humble, unassuming but useful and esteemed member of the community.

CHRISTOPHER HOLLINGER was born in Lancaster County, Penn., June 4, 1833, and is a son of Samuel and Lucy Hollinger, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of England. He was brought up and educated in Darke County, Ohio, to which place his parents removed when he was four years old. In December, 1854, he was married to Miss Rebecca Shire, by whom he has had four children, only one of whom is now living. In 1872, Mr. Hollinger came to this county and settled at Harrisville, engaging in a general mercantile business for two years, being at the same time Postmaster at that place. In 1874, he sold out his store and bought a farm of 133 acres in Section 32, which he still owns, but resides at Harrisville, and carries on a business of carpentering and cabinet-making.

PETER HOOVER, Sr., born in Virginia; came to Randolph County, Ind., in the spring of 1834; had eight children, seven now living. He died many years ago, as also his wife. She belonged to the Presbyterian Church. He was a Democrat.

PETER HOOVER, Jr., born 1810, Pendleton County, Va.; came to Darke County, Ohio, 1833, and to Randolph County, Ind., 1834; entered 160 acres and has 160 acres still. He had only $2.50 when he got here, and he had his father and mother and their six children to care for. But by hard work and close economy he succeeded in assisting his parents, and also in gaining a reasonable competence for his old age. He was never married. An unmarried sister lives with him and cares for his affairs. He is an honest, sincere, hard-working, industrious, frugal and simple-hearted citizen; a sound Democrat and patriot of the olden time.

ANDREW HUTTON was born in York County, Penn., on February 4, 1834, and is a son of Solomon and Elizabeth Hutton, both natives of that county. In 1861, he married Miss Margaret Kiester, but they have no children. In 1876, he came to this county and purchased forty acres of land in Wayne Township, upon which he resides, and, besides farming, pursues the carpenter trade.

JOSIAH KAYLOR is a son of William and Rebecca Kaylor, and was born in Preble County, Ohio, February 21, 1838. He was raised on a farm and educated in the common district school. On April 18, 1860, he was married, to Miss Lucinda Kesler, and they have one child. He came to this county in February, 1878, and purchased a farm of 208 acres, five miles southwest of Union City, upon which he resides, engaged in farming and stock-raising. He also owns a quarter-section of land in Jay County. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM KENNON, born in Ireland, came to America when fourteen years old; lived for a time in Guernsey County, Ohio, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1830. He settled on the Downing place, south from the toll-gate south of Union City. He married Eleanor Smith, and had four children. He owned 210 acres of land, was a Democrat, was Justice of the Peace for four years, and was highly esteemed for integrity and intelligence. He died many years ago, as did also his wife, but the date of their death cannot now be exactly told.

THOMAS S. KENNON, born in Wayne Township 1834. Married Hannah Perkins, 1862; has five children; owns 360 acres; is a thriving, industrious, active farmer, and an extensive and successful stock dealer. He is likewise an earnest and enthusiastic politician, though he has never sought public office. He is a steadfast Republican, and takes a prominent part in public affairs. Mr. Kennon thinks that he is the oldest person born in Wayne Township who now resides therein. There were settlers in the township twelve years in advance of his father, and, probably, children born in it before 1854, but he thinks none such are living here now. He has always been a resident of the township. His educational privileges consisted of the schools in the old hewed-log and round-top schoolhouses of the period, as also a few months at the Union Literary Institute, a manual labor institution established in 1846, at the Greenville settlement, northeast of Spartansburg, and affording instruction to great numbers of the aspiring young men and women who were residents of the region at the time. T. S. K. was a volunteer in the civil war of 1861, first, in the Eighth Indiana three months, and again in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Infantry, rising to the rank of First Lieutenant of his company.

JOHN KUNKLE is a son of David and Miriam Kunkle, and was born in Darke County, Ohio, September 14, 1846. He came with his father to this county in April, 1854, and here he was educated in the common district school. On the 12th of February, 1869, he was married, to Miss Catharine Headrich, also a native of Darke County, and a daughter of Michael Headrich. She died March 31, 1880, leaving six children. She had been for four years a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Kunkle for five years worked at shoemaking, and for awhile was Postmaster of Bartonia. At present, he owns a farm of 100 acres in the south part of Wayne Township, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising.

WILLIAM A. MACY was born in Guilford County, N. C., November 6, 1809, being a son of Obed and Mary (Armfield) Macy, who were both natives of North Carolina. His education was very limited, the "Old North State" being more famous for "pitch tar, turpentine and lumber" than for "school keeping" or "book larnin." He married Miss Jemima Rogers, July 4, 1833, and they had five children. Both his wives (see below) have been members of the M. E. Church, and his present wife and himself still remain such. He has owned 200 acres of land but now retains but ninety acres, having given 110 to his children. In 1852, he went on a visit to his native State, and upon his return therefrom brought with him his aged mother who spent the remainder of her days in Randolph County. Mr. M. emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., the year of his marriage, 1833. He resided at Spartansburg three years, on the Rogers Place, east of Spartansburg five years, on a farm west of Granger Hall eleven years, and about twenty-eight years upon his farm north of Greenville Creek, near Abraham Chenoweth's. His wife died May 24, 1879, and was laid to rest in Arba Cemetery. In 1881, he was married again to Mrs. Morgan, widow of Frank G. Morgan, late of Spartansburg, and they now reside at that village. Mr. Macy, although seventy-three years old, appears cheerful and sprightly like a man of fifty years. He has had five children, only one of whom is living, to wit: Jacob Clarkson, who was born in 1839; married Mary Shreer in 1859, has had nine children, eight living, and lives on his father's old place, in Wayne Township. J. C. M. has been Township Trustee two terms, and is a stock-raiser and dealer and farmer. Another of the children of J. A. M. was Caroline, who became the wife of John H. Cammack in 1862, and after having been the mother of three children, died in 1869. W. A. M. is, of course, a member of the great, widespread, universal Macy family, sprung from the original Thomas Macy, of New England, who sailed across Massachusetts Bay, around Cape Cod to Nantucket Island. The voyage is probably a fact, but the story as rendered into verse by the poet Whittier, contains some poetic embellishments, or may possibly agree with popular tradition in that region. More than 2,000 persons have belonged to the "Macy tribe" since Thomas Macy, the sturdy Puritan,

"Upon Nantucket's dreary Isle
Drew up his boat at last."

Accounts of many other Macys are given in the course of this work. W. A. M. is a fine old gentleman, a prosperous farmer and blacksmith, an old-time Methodist and Abolitionist, a sincere and thorough Republican and a thoroughly upright and honest man. He suffered a severe affliction some three years ago in the loss of the life-long companion of his bosom, the sharer of his toils and his sorrows for well-nigh fifty years. In the winter of 1881–82, he was happily successful in gaining the affections and the hand of Mrs. Morgan, as already stated, and seems by this fortunate union to have renewed his manhood, and to have grown younger by twenty years.

DR. WILLIAM K. MARQUIS is a son of William and Polly Marquis, and was born in Darke County, Ohio, on the 9th day of April, 1832. His parents were natives of Hardy County, Va., and the mother is yet living at the age of eighty-seven years. He was brought up on a farm, received his education in the common schools, and read medicine with Dr. Enos Williams, of Darke County, beginning the practice of his profession in 1868. In 1853, he married Miss Mary Bennett, by whom he had nine children. She died in October, 1875, and in March, 1877, he married Miss Fannie Coats, by whom he has two children. For seventeen years he has been a minister of the German Baptist Church; at present lives on his own farm of fifty-five acres in southwest part of Wayne Township, this county, and is engaged in the practice of his profession.

MASON FAMILY.

Richard Mason (father of the "Mason's") was born in North Carolina in about 1795; came to Clinton County, Ohio, when a boy, perhaps in 1805, married Sarah Jackson in Ohio, moved thence to Wayne County, Ind., and to Kosciusko County, Ind., to the latter in 1834. He had ten children, and died in 1844 in the last named county, his wife dying in Randolph County, Ind., in 1850. His children all grew up and were married, and eight still survive. They are as follows: Thomas, ten children, resides at Union City, Ind.; Elizabeth (Mason), seven children, is dead; Delila (Harper), four children, lives in Iowa; Louisa (Drake), seven children, is dead; William, has seven children, resides in Union; Sarah (Gunter), one child, Kosciusko County; Salina (Frazier-Milnor) nine children, Iowa; Elihu, several children, resides in Ohio; Mary (Conkling), four children, Wayne Township; Jemima (Duncan), three children, Iowa. Six of them have been residents of Randolph County, Thomas, William, Salina, Elihu, Mary and Jemima; and Thomas, William and Mary live here still.

THOMAS MASON, Union City, son of Richard Mason, was born in Clinton County, Ohio, in 1813; moved to Wayne County, Ind., in 1815, married Jane Polly, in Wayne County, in 1830; moved to Kosciusko County in 1834, and to Randolph County in 1838; has made this county his home ever since that time. He settled three miles northwest of Salem and remained there till 1865, moving in that year to Union City, retaining, however, ownership of his farm. His wife, Jane Polly, was born in Preble County, Ohio, in 1812, and removed to Madison County and thence to Darke County, Ohio, the latter in 1819. Mr. M. and his wife are both active and sprightly, bearing their age well. They have been the parents of ten children, most of whom are still living. He has been all his life a farmer. He was at different times Assessor, both of personal property and of real estate, and was four years Justice of the Peace for Wayne Township. He was at one time a member of the Disciples' Church, but is not so at the present time. His wife belongs to that Society at Salem, Randolph County. He has been, as to politics, a life-long Democrat, though he sometimes "splits" his ticket, which a "free man" has a right to do if he chooses.

ANDREW McCONNELL was born in Miami County, Ohio, July 19, 1826, and is a son John and Elizabeth McConnell. He was raised on a farm and educated in the common schools. When he was a young man, he learned the blacksmith trade, which he followed for twenty years. He has been twice married, the first time to Miss Jane Inman, by whom he had six children, of whom four are now living. His second wife was Mrs. Matilda Clapp, by whom he has one child. Mr. McConnell came to this county in 1850, and at present resides at Bartonia, being a Justice of the Peace for Wayne Township.

JONATHAN J. MIKESELL was born in Darke County, Ohio, January 25, 1838, and is a son of Riley and Matilda Mikesell, the former a native of Virginia, and the latter of Ohio. Young Mikesell received his education in a little log schoolhouse furnished with slab seats, but so improved his time that he obtained the necessary certificate, and for awhile was engaged in teaching. He came to this county in 1855, and in 1862 married Miss Hannah Rarrick, daughter of Daniel Rarrick, and they have eight children. Mr. Mikesell now owns a farm in the south part of this township, and, besides farming, he is, in connection with his brother, Curtis O. Mikesell, engaged in manufacturing drain tile, to supply a constantly increasing demand in his locality.

D. T. MORRIS.

David T. Morris is a native of Fayette County, Ohio, and was born on the 15th day of December, 1823. His parents were John and Mary Morris, natives of the State of Delaware, who removed from Ohio to Campbell County, Ky., when the subject of this sketch was quite small. Here he grew up on a farm until he was fifteen years old, at which time he went with his parents to Cincinnati, Ohio, where his father engaged in business as a contractor and builder. Young Morris was educated principally at Farmers' College, situated at College Hill, near Cincinnati, which institution was then under the control and management of Gen. S. F. Cary. In 1849, he was married to Miss Mary A. Murphy, a native of Greene County, Ohio, and daughter of John C. Murphy, one of the pioneers of that county. They have had nine children, but four of whom—John H., Ada L., Charles C. and Samuel H.—are now living. In rearing and educating his family, Mr. Morris employs a governess, and has his children instructed at home. He has been prompted to this course by his location being remote from school facilities, as well as by his own preferences; yet no citizen pays school-tax more cheerfully than he. After engaging in business for himself, Mr. Morris tried various avocations. For awhile he was employed in book-keeping, then merchandising, then a hotel, and finally, farming. In 1858, he came to this county, and bought 200 acres of unimproved land on the Indiana side of the State line, four miles south of Union City. This land has been developed by industry and intelligent supervision into one of the most pleasant and sightly homesteads in the county, as our sketch herewith will show. Mr. Morris has a taste for the beautiful, and his hospitality is joined to a cordiality and good will that renders a visit to his house always agreeable. Besides the resources of his farm, he is the owner of valuable Western lands, and is a stockholder and Director of Citizens' Bank of Union City. Mr. Morris has always been a friend of public improvements, and among the foremost in local enterprises for the development of the country. Although employing a private teacher for his own children, he is an earnest advocate of public schools, and contributes cheerfully of his means for their support. He was one of the original incorporators, and has usually been a Director of the Union Agricultural Association, and has contributed of his time, his money and his labor to promote its success; and to his influence and example, as much as that of any other man, is to be attributed the better system of farming and improvement of farm stock of Randolph County. For some years he has given especial attention to the breeding of fine horses, being at this time the owner of "Montgomery Boy," a grandson of the famous Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and on the dam's side showing a pedigree from the best studs of Kentucky. Mr. Morris is in politics a Democrat, and is held in high esteem by his fellow-citizens.

WILLIAM S. MORTON was born at Richmond, Wayne Co., Ind., in 1822. He married Elizabeth Ann Barton (daughter of Leven Barton) in 1841, and moved to Randolph County, Ind., near Bartonia, in 1856, and that is still his home. They have had nine children, only three of whom are living. He is an enterprising and prominent citizen, a thriving farmer and stock-dealer, owning 230 acres of land. In politics, he is a thorough Republican.

JOHN W. MORTON is a son of William S. Morton, and was born in Wayne County, Ind., April 10, 1853. He was brought by his father to this county when a child, where he grew up on his father's farm, and was educated in the district schools. February 20, 1873, he married Miss Laura E. Daniels, daughter of William H. Daniels, of Georgia, and they have one child. Mr. Morton is a farmer, and owns a farm of eighty acres in the south part of Wayne Township.

NELSON MURPHY was born in Darke County, Ohio, October 8, 1835, being the son of Benjamin and Huldah Murphy. His parents came to Randolph County in 1838, when he was a child of three years, having grown up on his father's farm and received the usual backwoods education. He was married, in 1856, to Miss Sarah E. Vail, and they have been the parents of eight children, viz.: Ida M. (deceased), Amy J., William E., Henry L., Rena B., Robert Burns, Benjamin F. and Evan L. In 1867, he moved to Clay County, Ill., returning in 1871. He is the owner of 187 acres of excellent land and is an energetic and industrious farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are members of the Christian Church at Harrisville.

ROBERT MURPHY was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1804, his parents having emigrated thither from Pennsylvania. He came to Butler County, Ohio, in 1816, removing to Darke County, Ohio, in 1820. His marriage, to Elizabeth Devall took place in 1827 (who was born in 1807, and died in 1847). They came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1834, where he entered eighty acres of land (at two entries), and upon that land he has resided ever since (forty-eight years). Mr. M. has been the father of fifteen children, as follows: Benjamin, born 1828, October 19; William, born 1829, October 27; Absalom, born 1830, November 15; Alzinah, born 1831, November 30; Robert, born 1833, September 14; Albert, born 1834, December 8; Martin, born 1836, March 7; Elizabeth, born 1837, May 3; David, born 1838, August 5; Elcy, born 1839, December 23; Thomas, born 1841, October 12; Rachel, born 1842, September 8; Moses, born 1844, March 4; Asa, born 1845, November 10; John B., born 1847, March 1. His wife died March 1, 1847, upon the birth of her last child, and for that long time, more than thirty-five years, Mr. M. has lived unmarried. He has been Trustee of the Township many years, Administrator of many estates, etc., showing the confidence reposed by his fellow-citizens in his judgment and integrity. Eight of his children are still living, viz.: Benjamin, residing in Iowa, eight children; Albert, residing in Minnesota, seven children; Martin, residing in Union City, Ind., four children; Elizabeth (Locke), widow, one child; her husband was a soldier in the Union army, and was killed near Vicksburg, summer of 1863; David, resides on the home place, five children; Elcy (Harris), widow, lives near her father's, eight children; Moses, resides in Union City, two children; John B., resides in Minnesota, two children. He was originally a Presbyterian, but after coming to this region of country he joined the Protestant Methodists, and is connected with them still. Mr. M. has for fifty years or more, endeavored to exemplify the pure religion of the lowly Jesus by a meek and faithful Christian life, and in his old age he tries to serve and honor his loving Savior still. In politics, he is a sterling Republican. His first Presidential vote was given, in 1824, for John Quincy Adams, and since that time he has voted for President fourteen times.

HENRY OHLER was born in Tippecannoe County, Ind., in 1831. He is a son of Adam and Sarah Ohler, who removed to Ohio in 1834. He was married to Miss Sarah J. Shreers December 13, 1866, and they have had seven children, six of whom are living. He came to this county in 1868, and bought a farm of 148 acres four miles southwest of Union City, upon which he now resides. During the late war, he served four months as a member of the One Hundred and Fifty-second Regiment Ohio National Guards. His wife is a member of the Christian Church at Salem; but he holds no church relations.

AMOS PEACOCK and ABRAM PEACOCK came together from Carolina in the fall of 1818. Four families were in company—Amos Peacock, Abram Peacock, Henry Hill and Benoni Hill. The three last named settled in Jericho in 1818. Amos Peacock raised one crop in Wayne County, and came on in the fall of 1819. Amos Peacock had nine children—Aaron, Jonah, William, Elijah and Elisha (twins), Matilda, Abram, Anna and Abigail. Four are still living—William, Anna, Abigail and Elijah. William [see afterward]. Anna married Pleasant Diggs, son of old William Diggs, two children, Iowa. Abigail married Joseph Diggs, son of old William Diggs, five children, Iowa. Elijah lives in Jericho, Ind., and has had several children. They are all farmers, and all Quakers, and quiet, solid, substantial men and women. Amos Peacock died at Jericho July 2, 1850, aged sixty-two years nine months and eleven days. Hannah Peacock, his wife, died September 8, 1867, aged seventy-four years three months and twenty-seven days. He was born in North Carolina September 21, 1787. She was born in North Carolina May 11, 1793. They were married about 1812. Two children were born to them in Carolina, one in Wayne County, Ind., and six in Jericho.

WILLIAM PEACOCK was born in Wayne County, Ind., October 10, 1818, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1819, and has lived in Jericho ever since. He married Mary Thomas, daughter of Benjamin Thomas, near Newport, Ind., in 1840. They have had three children. He is a farmer, and a Friend, and until lately, a Republican, but now a "National Greenbacker;" he was in early times an original Anti-Slavery Friend, and a sincere and thorough Abolitionist; he has been for a number of years a Trustee of the Union Literary Institute, a manual labor institution established in 1845, by his father-in-law, Benjamin Thomas and others, for the education of colored and other indigent youth; he is greatly esteemed for his thorough integrity, and his sincere, quiet, solid, unobstrusive piety. After the dissolution of the society of Anti-Slavery Friends, he rejoined the "Body Friends," but lately, with a few others, he has withdrawn from them, forming a new "Meeting," claiming to adhere to the methods and usages of the early and original Friends. They are almost alone, the great mass of Friends having "progressed" greatly from the standards of action of fifty years ago. The "new method" Friends maintain, however, that they are in harmony not indeed with the measures of fifty years past, but with the principles and spirit of George Fox and William Penn, and the Quakers of "long, long ago."

ELIJAH H. PEACOCK is a twin-brother of Elisha Peacock, and they were born in Randolph County, Ind., January 28, 1820. They are sons of Amos and Hannah Peacock. Elijah received an education under the auspices of the Friends' Church, and for several years followed the carpenter trade. On November 15, 1853, he married Miss Agnes Brown, a native of Cheltenham, England, and they have seven children. Mr. Peacock is now a farmer, living on his own farm of 118 acres in the southwest part of Wayne Township.

WILLIAM PICKETT, was born in Orange County, N. C., 1802. In 1818, he went to Chatham County in the same State (on Haw River), to take care of his grandfather. He died in 1821, and W. P., after staying until the fall of 1822, emigrated to Richmond, Ind. He was married in 1826, and moved to Randolph County, five miles east of Winchester, in 1828. His first wife's name was Sarah Ann White, born in 1805. Mr. P. bought eighty acres in the green woods, of Benjamin Cox (nephew of Jeremiah Cox, the famous miller). Benjamin Cox was a Quaker minister and cousin to Mr. Pickett, since Jeremiah Cox's wife was the sister of Mr. P.'s father. Benjamin Cox was the son of John Cox, one of the earliest settlers on White River, east of Winchester, who fixed his residence two miles east of that place. Mr. and Mrs. Pickett were the parents of twelve children, six of them being still living. They were as given below: Esther, Mahlon, Hannah, Alfred, John W., Joel, Asenath, Lydia, Rebecca, Sarah, Mary and one other. Ten (or eleven) lived to be grown, to be married, and to have families. The number of grandchildren has been thirty-three. One of his sons, Alfred Pickett, born in 1833, joined the Eighty-fourth Indiana, in the war for the Union, in 1862; was wounded at Lookout Mountain, and died at the hospital. Mr. P. married for his second wife, Mrs. Mary (Hyatt) Coats, in 1875. She is the daughter of one of the first settlers, her father making his home east of Winchester, about 1818. Mr. P. and his wife, while well stricken in years are still healthy and cheerful, though, indeed, the days of severe labor for this aged couple are, and ought to be, over and done, and they richly deserve to spend the brief remainder of their earthly pilgrimage in quiet and patient waiting for the friendly messenger, whose tender call shall summon their chastened spirits to their final rest in the mansions on the heavenly shore. Mr. P. has always been, and still is, a worthy member of the Society of Friends.

JOHN PICKETT, was born in Orange County, N. C., August 4, 1808; he emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., with his father in 1829. Returning to North Carolina, he married Mary Pike, September 16, 1830, and, with his new-found wife, wended his cheerful way back to the Northwest, reaching his father's cabin December 24, 1830. Choosing a home for himself and wife in "Jericho Woods," he dwelt on the self-same spot for more than fifty years, rearing there a family of ten children. Five of them have outlived their father, as has also the wife of his youth and mother of his children. Mr. P. died in April, 1882, in his seventy-fourth year. He was a "Friend" by birthright, and by conviction as well, clinging with a firm and unwavering grasp to the faith, the methods and the Society of his youth and his early manhood. The storms of controversy and the whirlwind of division affected not his steadfast mind. He was a genuine pioneer of the olden time, and he gave little heed to the changing fashions of the modern day. What he was and had been, that he continued to be to the close of his earthly career. He was greatly attached to home and home life, leaving the farm upon which he dwelt only for necessary business. One by one, but alas! how frequently drop into the grave the venerable pioneers; the relics of the generation of the olden time, who, with severe and unremitting toil, in sterling honesty, and with unswerving integrity, laid the foundations broad and deep of the prosperity of the latter day.

BENJAMIN PIKE was born in North Carolina in 1825; came with his father to Randolph County, Ind., in 1831; married Rachel Cox, and has three children. He has been a farmer and huckster. He is a Friend, Abolitionist and Republican. His health is poor, but he manages to be engaged in his occupation much of the time. Mr. P. is a bluff and plain-spoken, but honest and upright citizen, and is endeavoring quietly but earnestly to accomplish a comfortable subsistence for himself and those placed under his care.

JOHN PIKE was born in North Carolina; came to Jericho, Randolph County, about 1831; was twice married and had seven children; was a farmer, tinker, clock peddler, blacksmith and what not; a Quaker in religion, and a Whig, Abolitionist and Republican in politics. Caring little for the opinions of the world, he asked simply what is right; and having answered the question to his own satisfaction, he followed steadily and faithfully the leadings of truth and the convictions of duty.

THE POLLY FAMILY were an important and prominent group in the early times of Wayne Township. The elder Polly was a native of Virginia, by name, William Polly, Sr. His birth was about 1774. He was taken to Kentucky when a lad and grew up there, marrying in that State. They emigrated to Ohio, county not known. Before 1812, he had settled in Preble County, Ohio, moving to Madison County in 1814, and to Darke County in 1819, twelve miles east of Greenville. He died there in 1846, at the age of seventy-two years. His wife's name was Jemima Kelso, who died at the age of sixty-two years. They had thirteen children; twelve grew to mature age; all the twelve were married, and eight are living still. Mr. P. was a farmer, as to his vocation, a Disciple in religious profession, and a Democrat in early times, but in his later years a "Liberty Man," voting for Birney for President. The names of his children are given below: Sarah (McIntosh), had eight children, is dead; James, has had nine children, is living in Iowa, eighty years; Mary (Snodgrass), nine boys, is dead; Elizabeth (Jackson-Harlan), had eight children, is dead; William, has nine children, farmer, near Hollansburg, Ohio, seventy-four years; Jemima (Harlan), eight children, lives in Iowa, seventy years old; Jane (Mason), ten children, resides at Union City, sixty-eight years; Isabella (Harlan), seven children, Iowa, sixty-six years; Nancy (Harlan), five children, is dead; Edith (Kenida), five children, is in Iowa; David, six children, resides near Camden, Jay Co., Ind.; Barnhill, four children, Monona County, Iowa; Lucinda, died at six years old. Eight of the above have resided at some time in Randolph County, viz.: Sarah, married William McIntosh, lived near the town of Randolph, west of Bartonia, and moved to Iowa and died in Monona County, in that State. James, also lived at Randolph, having a hotel there, and, besides that, keeping store on Greenville State road, east of the "Griffis' farm," and elsewhere. He moved to Iowa some thirty years ago, and resides there still. Mary, married Mr. Snodgrass, lived near the town of Randolph; moved to Delaware County, Ind., near Yorktown. Jemima (Harlan), lived near Salem, removed to New Lisbon, and to Iowa, residing now in that State. Nancy (Harlan), lived near Salem, but removed to Iowa. Sarah, married Thomas Mason, lives at Union City, Ind. David, owned a farm near Salem, laid out that town, sold goods there, and was otherwise a prominent man, removed to Union City, and was for years a leading merchant there; he failed in business and removed to near Camden, Jay Co., Ind., and now resides on a farm in that vicinity; he is a Republican, and a member of the Disciple Church. Barnhill, also lived near Salem for many years, moved to Marion, Ind., then to Minnesota, and still again to Iowa. He was a farmer, and a Republican, and a Disciple preacher, having labored thus in the Gospel for more than forty years. Thus it will be seen that the Polly family were leading citizens in the southern part of Wayne Township in early times, for many years. But like many others among the pioneer families, most of the members of the connection have changed their residences, and their places in this county during the olden time are filled by those who knew them not.

JOHN PRICE was a native of Baltimore County, Md. He was born January 5, 1826, being the son of Solomon and Barbara Price (deceased). They came to Darke County, Ohio, in 1834, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1837, the same year that vast numbers of other emigrants left their Eastern or Southern homes to plunge into the Western wilds where land was cheap, and wolves and deer and bears were abundant. John Price was a child of eight years old when he was brought to Darke County, Ohio, and a lad of thirteen when he found his way to Randolph; so that he has been a resident of this county for more than forty years. In 1852, he married Miss Sarah Dixon, daughter of John Dixon. They have had fourteen children, and nine of them are living, viz.: Mary A., Samuel H., Barbara E., Robert L., Martha E., Sarah C., John R., George E. and Emma M. Mr. Price is a large farmer, and raises stock extensively, owning 350 acres of land; he holds also twenty-seven shares in the Union City and White River Turnpike Company, he having been, moreover, Treasurer of that corporation for eight years. Mr. Price is an influential citizen, respected and esteemed by those who know him.

OLLEN SASSER was born in Greensfork Township, Randolph Co., Ind., May 13, 1836, being a son of William and Elizabeth Sasser, who were natives of North Carolina. He received a common-school education, being reared a farmer's son, and toiling throughout his life to clear away the heavy timber from the surface of the genial fruitful soil in the county of his birth and his lifelong abode. In March, 1859, he married Mrs. Eliza (Harless) Williams, daughter of Elias Harless. They have had four children, as also Mrs. Sasser was the mother of one son by her first marriage. The names of the children are—Sonora Victorine Augusta, Elizabeth Naomi, Luene Filena (and one other), and Alpheus Preston Williams. Mr. Sasser removed to Wayne Township in 1872; he follows the vocation of a farmer, owning seventy-five acres of land, and has been a lifelong Republican.

JOHN SHEETS was born in Maryland, of German descent, about 1799; emigrated to Ohio, and about 1830, to Wayne Township, Randolph Co., Ind., entering the farm afterward owned by James Smith, and now by Hon. Nathan Cadwallader, lying a little north of Union City, in Wayne Township. He married in Ohio, and was the father of eleven children, all of whom grew up and were married, and many of whom are still living, being widely separated through the West and Northwest. He moved to Eel River, Ind., in about 1846, and died at North Manchester, Eel River, Ind., in 1851, aged fifty-two years. Mr. Sheets was a farmer; in religious descent, a Lutheran, and in politics, a Whig. His son, Lewis Sheets, resided in this region till 1871; he built the Ensminger House, among the earliest in Union City. In 1871, he moved to Minnesota; he is also a farmer, owning 200 acres of land in Indiana and 400 acres in Minnesota; he is a Republican.

WILLIAM SHELLEY first opened his eyes upon the light of day in Montgomery County, Ohio, September 19, 1838, whose parents were Jacob and Rebecca Shelley. They came to Randolph County in 1846, William being a lad of eight years; his father being a farmer, William was reared to the vocation of a tiller of the ground, and he now owns and cultivates a nice, though small farm, comprising a tract of eighty acres of tilled land and woodland. He remained unmarried until 1873, and on the 5th of April, of that year, he was joined in the sacred bonds of wedlock to Miss Elizabeth Dixon. They have two children—Harry G. and Nora L. The parents are both acceptable members of the Christian society at Harrisville, Randolph Co., Ind.

WILLIAM SHOCKNEY, west of Bartonia, was born in Maryland in 1800; married Rachel Oursler in 1830, who was born in 1811, and to Jemima Manning in 1862, who was born in 1803. He had three children, only one of whom is now living. Mr. Shockney came to Randolph County in 1840, and died in 1875; his second wife survives her husband, and resides with her children in Auglaize County, Ohio; he was a farmer, owning 600 acres of land, being nearly the first settler in the region west of Bartonia, south of the State road. That whole stretch of country remained a wilderness for nearly or quite twenty years, after the country round it had been occupied.

SAMUEL H. SHOCKNEY is the son of William Shockney, having been born in Maryland in 1834; he came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1840, with his father when but six years old. In 1862, he married Sarah A. Butts, sister of Rev. Nathan T. Butts, born in 1842. They have had nine children, and six are living. The children are Rachel, Alisa, William Thomas, Samantha, Theodore Howard, Harry Belmont, Perley, and two others. Mr. Shockney resides on his father's homestead, consisting of 520 acres, 400 of which are cleared. In 1879, he erected a residence, cost $4,200, with the surroundings, $6.000. The house is 50x52 feet, two stories, twelve and eleven feet, and an attic, as also a basement under the whole house; building, frame; basement, stone; basement five rooms, six in each story above, besides five halls, and closets to every room. The house has forty-two doors, and twenty-seven large windows and nineteen attic windows and several in the basement. The house is splendidly finished; the front door alone, with surroundings, cost $200. Transoms are over every door, giving excellent ventilation. Mr. Shockney has a wind-pump, supplying water to the cellar, basement, kitchen, bath-room, barnyard, stable and field. He seems to be a plain, warm-hearted, genial farmer, not puffed up by his good fortune, but disposed to enjoy life in a healthful and sensible manner.

PETER M. SHULTZ was born in Nicholas County, Ky., August 23, 1833, and is a son of George M. and Martha Shultz, who removed from Kentucky to Highland County, Ohio, the same year in which Peter was born. He was educated in the common district schools of Highland County, and in 1852 came to Indiana and settled in this county. He learned the trade of carpenter and sawyer and followed it for some time, but of late years has turned his attention to farming. In 1853, he married Miss Julia A. Moore, and has four children. He was a soldier during the war, serving two years in Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Volunteers, holding a Lieutenant's commission at the time of his discharge; he and his wife are now members of the Christian Church at Harrisville.

WILLIAM SMITH was born in White River Township, Randolph Co., Ind., June 2, 1821, being a son of Durant Smith, who is one of the early pioneers of Randolph, and is still living at a great age, his wife having died a few years ago. Like most other boys he was reared on a farm, and went to school in a log cabin schoolhouse. He was married, in 1854, to Miss Catharine, daughter of Samuel Conklyn, who was himself one of the earliest pioneers of the eastern part of Wayne Township. Their children have been nine in number, to wit: Sarah E., George W., Viola, William R., Samuel D., Charles A., Mary M., Harry, Luetta. Mr. S. was a member of the Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, Company H, participating in various skirmishes and engagements. But by constant exposure his health failed, and he was accordingly discharged. Mr. S. has held the office of Assessor of Wayne Township from 1866 to 1870 inclusive, discharging the duties of his responsible position with credit and to the satisfaction of his fellow-citizens. He is the owner of thirty-five shares of stock in the Union City & White River Turnpike Company; was Director of the Company for five years, and Treasurer during two years. He owns eighty acres of land, being part of his father's homestead, as also lot No. 483, on North Columbia street, Union City. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the Christian Church at Harrisville, though by birthright Mr. S. belonged to the Society of Friends.

HANNAH TEETER was born in 1782, in Bedford County, Penn. Her husband's name was Abram Teeter, and he died in 1838, in Pennsylvania. She moved to Darke County, Ohio, in 1839, and Randolph County, Ind., in 1840; she had ten children and eight were with her, two having been married in Darke County, Ohio; there were four boys and six girls; two boys and three girls are living now. She entered forty acres where John D. Teeter now resides, south of Union City. She raised her family, remaining a widow during thirty-four years, and died in 1872, ninety years old. The old lady remained healthy and strong, except that she was for eight years subject to fits, and for the two last years of her life she was blind. Mrs. T. belonged to the Dunkards. Her son, David Teeter, bought a lot in Union City. The town was laid out in 1849, and the lots were sold in 1849–50, some of them at least. David Teeter built the house since called the "Star House," in the winter of 1849–50, the first house put up on the plat of the town, except that two cabins were on the ground when the plat was made. A frame house was raised for Henry Debolt in 1851, and in the spring of 1852 a frame was put up also for John Frazier and Jack Downing. Daniel Weimar was the contractor, but J. B. Teeter and Hezekiah Fowler put up the frames, both Debolt's and Frazier's. The next house put up was the Forest House, July, 1852. David Teeter died at his mother's in 1851. John P. Teeter, another son of Mrs. Hannah Teeter, was a carpenter, and worked at the business a long time, but for twelve years he has sold medicines through the region. He was born in 1830, married Maria Brandon, sister of Thomas A. Brandon, clergyman of Union City. They have seven children. He is a Republican, and a steady, thriving citizen. Mrs. Teeter was a remarkable instance of a resolute woman, a widow with eight children to be supported, who vigorously pushed her way into the wild woods and sternly fought the battles of poverty and distress, coming off grandly victorious. Boldly entering the virgin forest of Randolph in her fifty-eighth year, nearly old enough already to lay hard work aside, she yet survived thirty two years longer, battling with hard toil and advancing age combined, and only yielding in the conflict when twenty years were past above the allotted "threescore years and ten!"

GEORGE THOMAS, Jericho, is the son of Benjamin Thomas, Newport, Wayne Co., Ind. He was born in Wayne County, Ind., in 1814, and married Asenath Hill, daughter of Henry Hill, of Jericho, Ind., in 1833 (who was born in North Carolina in 1815). They settled in Jericho in 1835, went to Nora, Ill., in 1856; to Newport, Ind., in 1858; to Jericho, Ind., in 1860; to Iowa in 1863, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1873, and they now reside in Jericho, on a portion of her father's farm. They have had three children, one of whom is dead. The two surviving children are Elvira (Diggs), now of Iowa, who has one child; Sarah (Moore), and she resides at Jericho, and has ten children. Their husbands are both farmers. Mrs. Thomas' health has been very feeble for many years, but she still holds out and in fact enjoys better health at this time (January, 1883), than she has done for twenty years before. Mr. Thomas and his wife are both members of Friends. In early days they were Anti-Slavery Friends, their parents and relatives (as also themselves) uniting with that body of people upon the "separation," which occurred in about 1843, from the regular Orthodox Quakers, chiefly within the bounds of the Richmond Yearly Meeting, then perhaps the largest in the world. The Thomases, the Hills and others, were very active among many others in promoting the Free Labor movement, which was, for a time, considered very important as a means of strengthening the Anti-Slavery feeling throughout the South. Nathan Thomas, Henry Charles, and perhaps more besides them, traveled through various Southern regions seeking out "Free-Labor cotton," planting "Free-Labor gins," etc., etc. For some years the movement showed considerable activity, evincing at least a high degree of conscientiousness on the part of its promoters, and a strong sensitiveness against giving countenance or support in any possible way to evil-doing.

ELIHU THOMPSON is a son of George and Hannah Thompson, and was born in Wayne County, Ind., on the 23d day of May, 1840. He was brought up on a farm, receiving only a limited education, such as was afforded by the district schools. He was one of nine children, and is the only one now living, three brothers—Wilson, Isaiah and Howard—having lost their lives while serving in the Union army during the war of the rebellion. In 1846, he came with his parents to this county, and in 1869, he was married to Miss Nancy Bowen, by whom he has had three children, one of whom is now dead. Mr. Thompson is now engaged in farming and stock-raising, and is the agent for the northern half of Indiana for the Mystic Carpet Sweeper.

JOHN M. TURNER was born in White River Township, Randolph Co., ind., September 14, 1840, being a son of William Turner, a former resident of Randolph, but now of Jay County, Ind. Reared on a farm and educated in the common schools of the time, he has become a steady, hard-working farmer, with sufficient learning to transact successfully the business of life. He was a member of Company H, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, remaining in the service one year. He was married, June 4, 1865, to Miss Mary J., daughter of John Hartman. They have had four children, viz., Effie C., Loftus O., Minnie A. and Mary O. Mrs. T. died March 9, 1879, having been a worthy and acceptable member of the Christian Church, to which Mr. T. himself also belongs. He remains a widower, his household affairs being cared for by his daughters, Effie and Minnie, who are respectively fifteen and eleven years old. Mr. T. owns 203 acres of land in Wayne Township, besides a half interest in 194 acres in Greensfork Township. He is a stanch Republican, and takes a deep interest in public affairs, having also served one term as Township Trustee of Wayne Township.

WILLIAM TURNER (now of Camden, Jay County). Mr. Turner (though not at this time a resident of the county yet), has spent so much of his time and his means here, that we think it proper to insert an account of him in this work, under the head of Wayne Township. William Turner was born in Virginia in 1816, being a son of Randolph Turner. They moved to Tennessee in 1818, and to Alabama in 1826. His father died in Alabama, in 1828, and in 1833, he came with his widowed mother to Randolph County, Ind. They came with a four-horse Carolina wagon and a one-horse carry-all. There were nine in the company, and it was in the fall of the year. During the journey, which lasted a month, they camped out in a tent. Their arrival in this county was in November, and snow had fallen. Their condition as to property was medium, being considered, in fact, as well off for these times. He married Margaret Monks, in 1839. She was the daughter of John Monks, and the sister of George W. Monks. They were the parents of thirteen children, eleven of whom lived to be grown and ten are living still. Eight of them are married and two are single. The children are: John, who has four children; Elmira, has one child; Susanna, has one child; Cyrus, has none; Julia Ann, who is dead; Thomas, who has three children; Matilda, who has four children; Elizabeth, who died at five years; Emma Catharine, died an infant; William, has no children; Jesse, has no children; Lucinda, single; Emma Catharine (second), single. Mr. Turner resided first south of Winchester, but moved to near Salem, southwest of Union City, in 1848, in which neighborhood he owned at one time 500 or 600 acres of land. He moved to Union City, residing in that vicinity three or four years, but for some years his home has been near Camden, Jay County. He had a fine landed property, but has suffered heavy financial reverses, and has lost the greater portion of his estate. Through most of his life he has been a farmer, working also for several years as a carpenter. He invested heavily in Union City, erecting the Opera Hall at a cost of $21,000, which turned out to be nearly a total loss. In politics, he was a Whig, and is a Republican. He joined the Methodists in 1833, the Disciples, at Salem, in 1850, and the United Brethren, near Camden, in 1880. Although prostrated by severe pecuniary losses, he is, nevertheless, not disheartened; but "hoping on, hoping ever," he is still struggling manfully in the great life-conflict, receiving meekly, moreover, the measure of success allotted by the Great Disposer of all things.

THOMAS WELCH was born in Randolph County, Ind., December 17, 1840, being a son of William and Elizabeth Welch, who came from Ohio in about 1837, settling in Randolph County. He was brought up on the farm, receiving his education in the common schools. He has been twice married, the first time to Miss Rebecca Shelley, in 1861, who died in 1875; and the second time, to Mrs. Margaret Coddington, October 7, 1880, who had been by a previous marriage the mother of five children, three of whom are living, viz., Mary J., Rosa and Ezra. Mr. W. has been the father of nine children, seven of whom still survive, viz., William, Jacob, Alice, Ida, James, Effie and Maggie. His present wife is a member of the Christian denomination. Mr. Welch owns 228 acres of land, and is an energetic and successful farmer. His grandparents, Thomas and Mary Welch, emigrated to Randolph in 1837, his grandfather having been a native of Pennsylvania, and bound out when a lad to a man by the name of Greer; but not being satisfied with his situation he left his employer, and thus became separated from the rest of his connection. He had a brother, Richard, who was a coverlet-weaver by trade, and when last known lived in Eastern Ohio.

JAMES WHITESELL (P. O. Harrisville) is a worthy farmer of Wayne Township, being a native of Montgomery County, Ohio, born February 9, 1818. His father, Jacob Whitesell, had his birth in North Carolina, and his mother, Mary Whitesell, in Ohio. Reared on a farm in the then new regions of Ohio, and educated in the traditional log cabin, on slab seats and warmed before fire-places with dirt hearths and walls, and stick-and-clay chimneys, he came, a youth of twenty years, to Randolph County, Ind., settling in the woods in 1838, during which year and the year previous, more than half the land in Randolph was entered for settlement. It was, indeed, a time for hard and steadfast work, in which chopping, rail-splitting, rolling logs, etc., were more common than horse-trading is at the present time. He has assisted at rolling logs and raising houses for weeks in succession. Mr. W. was married rather late in life, to Miss Elizabeth A. Coddington, daughter of Ezra R. Coddington, August 16 1856, at the age of thirty-eight years. They have been the parents of five children. Four are living, viz., Mary J., James, Perry and Laura B. Mr. W. served as Justice of the Peace for Wayne Township for three years. He owns 172 acres of land, and is a member of F. & A. M., being a prominent and respected citizen of the locality in which he resides.

ELIZABETH (HARTMAN) WIGGS, wife of Windsor Wiggs, now of Portland, Jay Co., Ind.; daughter of John Hartman, and the sister of Solomon Hartman, both of Wayne Township. She was born about 1830, probably in Pennsylvania; came with her father, first to near Greenville, Darke Co., Ohio, in 1832, and afterward to Wayne Township, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1848. She became the wife of Windsor Wiggs, Jr., and was the father of seven children, all girls—Cornelia (Coats), husband operator at Greenville; Belle (Starbuck), husband (a son of Edward Starbuck, late banker of Union City), now resident of Chicago; Carey (Johnson), husband telegrapher at Knightstown, Ind.; Sarah Frances, unmarried; Della, lately married at Portland, Ind.; Lucy, unmarried, at home with her father. Mrs. Wiggs died several years ago, and her husband, after awhile, married for his second wife, Mrs. Almaretta daughter of the famous Dr. Milligan, of Jay County, Ind., and later of Recovery, Mercer Co., Ohio, and they now reside at Portland, Jay County, after having dwelt for a time on a farm near Liber, in that county, upon one of the several farms inherited from her father. Mr. Wiggs is the son of Windsor Wiggs, Sr., a pioneer of Greensfork Township, Randolph County, and was for many years an active citizen of Randolph as farmer, merchant, grain-dealer, business man, auctioneer, etc., etc.

LUTHER C. WILLIAMSON, son of John M. and Nancy F. Williamson, was born in Wayne Township, this county, on the 16th day of January, 1849. He was raised on a farm and brought up to the business of farming. He was educated in the common schools of the township and in Union City graded school. After arriving at maturity, he taught one term of school in Blackford County, Ind. On the 24th day of August, 1872, he married Sarah, daughter of Henry Bowman, and they have three children, all living. They first settled on a small piece of land in Wayne Township, four miles southwest of Union City, to which he has added by purchase, until he has now seventy acres—"a small farm well tilled"—with good dwelling and outbuildings. In the spring of 1882 Mr. Williamson was elected Road Superintendent for Wayne Township, which office he now fills.

JOHN M. WILLIAMSON was born in 1812, and died in 1874, aged sixty-two years, being buried in Hoover Cemetery, south of Union City. He came early to this county, entering 200 acres in the forest, south of what is now Union City, Ind., but then a gloomy, dismal wilderness region. He married Nancy Wasson. They had ten children, eight of whom are yet alive. Their names, etc., are as follows: Harvey, lives in Jackson Township, has four children; John, lives in Wayne Township, has one child; Dock, lives in Wayne Township, has two children; Ivens, lives in Wayne Township, has two children; Philene (Graves), lives in Wayne Township, has one child; Isabella (Perkins), lives in Wayne Township, has no children; Baxter, lives in Wayne Township, unmarried; Peter, lives in Wayne Township, unmarried. Mr. W. died some years ago, owning at the time of his death 240 acres of land south of Union City, and his widow occupies the whole homestead still.

JAMES WOODBURY was born in Athens County, Ohio, June 19, 1825. He came with his father, Nathan P. Woodberry, to Wayne Township, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1839. November 4, 1849, he married Harriet Conkling. They have had seven children, all living and five married. His education was obtained mostly at home. He has taught school some, but his business has been farming, in which he takes an honest pride, and he rejoices in his abundant success. Mr. W. is an active and prominent citizen, in politics, in agriculture and in business matters in general, though he has scarcely ever held public office. He has been Township Treasurer, Manager of the Union Fair, held at Union City, member of County Executive Republican Committee, etc. In youth, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, though he is not a member at present. As to politics, in early manhood he was a Democrat, voting, however, for Gen. Taylor; but in 1856, he joined the Republican party, and is still a member thereof. Mr. W. is in the vigor of middle life; an energetic, successful farmer, and a valuable and respected citizen, owning an extensive and valuable farm some two miles southwest of Union City, from which, by means of agriculture, stock-raising, etc., he realizes a generous income.

THE WOODBERRYS. [NOTE.—In early times, it was the fashion to spell the name as given above, and we have written it accordingly. James Woodbury, however, chooses another method, which other method has, therefore, for him and his, been adopted.]

ROBERT WOODBERRY, great-grandfather of James Woodbury, came to Ohio about 1790 or sooner, being one of the shareholders in the Ohio Land Company of that day, and, as such shareholder, owning 1,300 acres of land. Nathan Woodberry, grandfather of James Woodbury, was born in Beverly, Essex Co., Mass., November 28, 1759, and came to Athens County, Ohio, before 1800, and resided there till his death. Nathan P. Woodberry, father of James Woodbury, was born in Athens County, Ohio, April 23, 1800. He came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1839, and settled about two miles south of Union City, near the gravel bank on the State line. He entered a half-section two miles northeast of Winchester, and purchased 480 acres south of Union City, on a part of which James Woodbury now resides. He first lived in a cabin on the Ohio side, but soon built a residence on his own land in Indiana, in which he lived for thirty years or more. He died March 15, 1878, aged seventy-seven years ten months twenty-two days, at his residence south of Union, where his aged widow still lives. He was married, August 29, 1824, to Susanna Jennings (who was born in Somerset County, Penn., in 1806), in Perry County, Ohio. They had nine children; eight came to be grown and married, and five are living. They were James, living, seven children; George, dead, twelve children; Charles, dead, five children; Nathan, living, one child; Sarah, living; Nancy, dead, two children; Lucinda, living, two children; Susanna, dead; Daniel, living, four children. He was a tall, straight, robust, young-looking old man; learned shoemaking in his youth, but was a farmer and brick-mason, a natural genius, and could do almost anything needful. His widow's health is good, her age being seventy-five years. Till 1856, he was a Democrat, but joined the Republicans in that year, and so continued till his death. In religious connection, he was a Methodist. When he died he was the owner of 200 acres of land. His father, Nathan Woodberry, was a Methodist nearly all his life, but in his later years, he joined the Christians (New Lights). He died in 1838, in his seventy-ninth year. N. W., the elder, was employed in the United States Naval Service during the Revolutionary war. He had on hand at the close of the war several thousand dollars of Continental money, which were a total loss. He left it with a friend to lay out for land, but that "friend" expended all his own and neglected to invest that belonging to Mr. W., and it became worthless. When in a naval engagement, a cannon-ball cut in two a cousin standing by his side, but left him unharmed. One of his children was born "in the woods." They lived eight miles from the nearest neighbor, and, not wishing to be alone, they started on horseback to go those eight miles; but the crisis came about midway of the distance, the child was born there in the woods, and they reached their destination about nightfall. Mr. Woodberry's house was a place for travelers to stop on their eastward way, and the statesmen of those times were often his guests. One night Lewis Cass was there, and the boys being noisy, Cass drew out a huge knife and jumped at them, crying, "Hush!" They hushed! Another time, one of them came up on horseback. The family were at dinner, eating mush and milk. One of the boys left the table to attend to the horse. The gentleman came in and slipped into the lad's seat, and took a bowl filling it with the simple and healthful food, much to the chagrin of the mistress of the mansion, that so distinguished a guest should have nothing but mush and milk!

EDWIN R. WOODBERRY was born in Athens County, Ohio, October 17, 1820, and is a son of William and Margaret Woodberry. He came to this county in 1839, and for two winters taught school in Darke County, Ohio, and one winter in this county. In the fall of 1841, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Duvall, by whom he has had fifteen children, thirteen of whom are now living. He now resides at the little village of Salem, four miles southwest of Union City, and by occupation is a carpenter. His wife died July 28, 1879.

UNION CITY.

DESCRIPTION---GENERAL—PLAT—ADDITION.

Two hundred and fifty-two lots; Jeremiah Smith, proprietor. Size of plat, 160 acres. Location, southeast quarter of Section 25, 18, 1, on Ohio line [extended afterward into Sections 24 and 36]. Recorded December 17, 1849. [Union City is in two States, Indiana and Ohio, but each State has a distinct corporation.]

The plat was corrected and enlarged, the plan being radically changed, the angle of the streets being made different, the lots smaller and more numerous, etc. The new plan and plat were recorded February 6, 1854, more than four years after the first was made. In the new plat there were 483 lots. The streets are mostly not "square with the world," but run at a considerable angle, the northward streets veering toward the west. The north and south streets (beginning with State Line) were as follows: State Line, Union, Columbia, Howard, Plum, Walnut, High (and Broadway, east of the Branham House, from Pearl to Chestnut, across the depot). The east and west streets, beginning at the north, were Division (directly east and west), Hickory, Oak, Pearl, Smith, Chestnut. Smith street is on the railroad, and Chestnut is south of the railroad. The streets are eighty feet wide, except Smith and Broadway, which are 100 feet, and Division and State Line, which are much narrower than eighty feet. The alleys in the original plat are thirty feet wide.

First addition, Converse's, J. N. Converse, proprietor. Recorded July 1, 1853. E. L. Watson, surveyor. Fifty-six acres, 220 lots. Location, south of the original plat, on the State line in the northeast quarter of Section 36, 18, 1. New streets east and west, Vine and Maple.

Second addition, Carter's; S. L. Carter, proprietor. Fifty lots. E. L. Watson, surveyor. Location, east of Howard and north of Division. New street east and west, Carter street. Recorded July 17, 1853.

Third addition, Converse and Mississinewa Valley Railroad; thirty-two lots, many of them large. Location, north of Division and west of Howard, in the northeast quarter of Section 25, 18, 1. Recorded December 13, 1856.

Fourth addition, Haney, Fisher & Ferguson's. Jacob Haney, R. L. Fisher, David Ferguson, proprietors. Forty-two lots. Location, some distance west, north of Oak. New streets north and south, Sycamore, Mulberry, Chatham. Recorded October 23, 1866.

Fifth addition, Minnick's; John Minnick, proprietor. Twelve lots. Location, north of a narrow street next north of Division and between Howard and Plum (south part of Lot 56, Converse and Mississinewa Valley Railroad Addition). Recorded August 26, 1867.

Sixth addition, Bradford's; Joel Bradford, proprietor. Nine lots. Location, between Union and State Line, north. Recorded September 30, 1867.

Seventh addition, Carter's Second; S. L Carter, proprietor. Forty-five lots. Between State Line and Howard, north part of town. Recorded November 2, 1872.

Eighth addition, S. C. Carter's; S. C. Carter, proprietor. Eight lots. Location, north of Minnick's Addition, between Howard and Plum, north part of Outlot No. 56. Recorded April 17, 1874.

Ninth addition, T R. Turner's; T. R. Turner, proprietor. Six lots. Location, east side of Howard, north of S. L. Carter's Addition. Recorded August 8, 1874.

Tenth addition, Worthington's; W. T. Worthington, proprietor. Fourteen lots. Location, west of Haney & Ferguson's Addition, west of Chatham street. Recorded December 24, 1874.

Eleventh addition, Worthington's Second, W. T. Worthington, proprietor. Fifteen lots. Location, north of Carter's Second Addition. Recorded December 24, 1874.

Twelfth addition, Fisher's; R. S. Fisher, Charley Heitzman, proprietors. Sixteen lots. Location, south of S. L. Carter's Second Addition, east of Howard. Recorded February 10, 1875.

Thirteenth addition, Gullett's; Alex Gullett, proprietor. Twenty-five lots. Location, east of Bothast's brickyard, northwest part of town. Recorded February 18, 1875.

Fourteenth addition, Doty's, Morris Doty, proprietor. Six outlots. Location, between Howard and Plum to North pike. Recorded August 27, 1875.

Fifteenth addition, Doty's Second; Morris Doty, proprietor. Five lots. Location, west of Plum, Park and north to pike. Recorded October 14, 1875.

Sixteenth addition, Turner's, August 8, 1874. Replatted by Third Building and Loan Association. Six lots. Location, same as Turner's Addition (ninth). Recorded June 1, 1880.

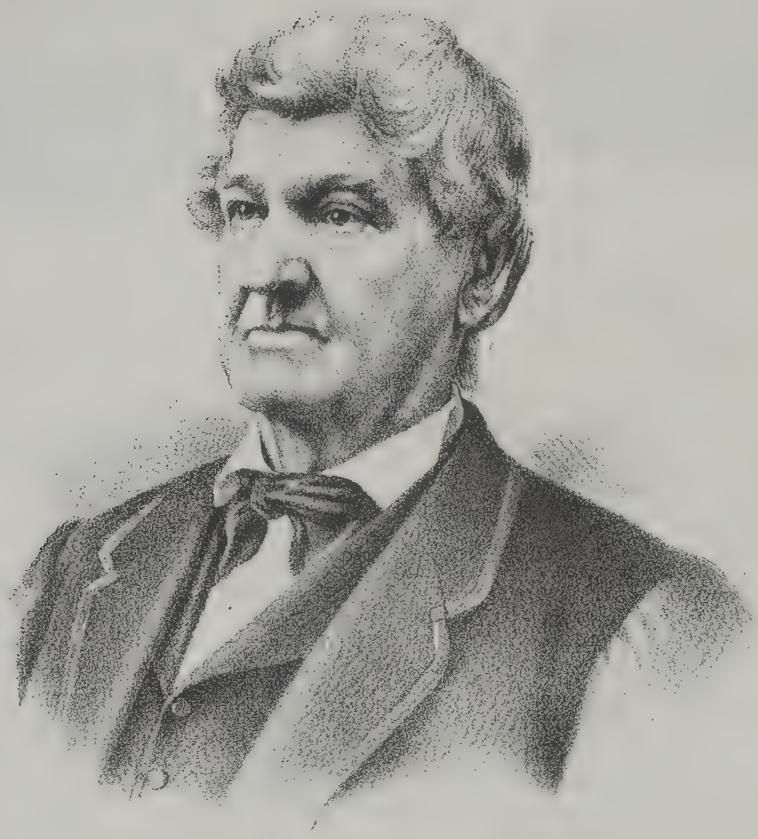
Seventeenth addition, Livengood's; Maria C. Livengood, administratrix of Jacob Livengood, proprietor. Forty-five lots. Location, north, between Howard and Plum, and west of Plum. New street, Lynn, east and west. Recorded April 6, 1877.

Eighteenth addition, Jackson's; J. R. Jackson, proprietor. Seventy-two lots and a park. Location, south of Park (including Park), west of Plum street. Recorded November, 1880. New streets north and south, Jackson; east and west, Fisher, Heitzman.

Union City, Ind., was first laid out by Hon. Jere Smith in 1849, containing 252 lots, and was afterward replatted and enlarged with 483 lots, this latter plat having been recorded February 6, 1854. The original plat of the town comprised 160 acres, or half a mile square, being the southeast quarter of Section 25, 18, 1 west.

Large additions have been made from time to time (about eighteen or more, in all) in Indiana, till the entire town in that State covers nearly a mile square—perhaps rather more than that.

It is a curious fact that, north of Division street, which marks the north line of the quarter-section, and of the original half-mile plat, there are scarcely any east and west streets. How the



Very respectfully yours &c.

MRS S. BRANHAM.

SIMEON BRANHAM.

Simeon Branham was born in Scott County, Ky., in 1806. His mother died in 1813; his father married again and removed to Jefferson County, Ind., in 1815 (sixty-seven years ago), and to Bartholomew County, Ind., 1820, after the public lands there had been surveyed, but before they had been offered for sale, Mr. Branham, the elder, died soon afterward (in 1822). The subject of our sketch was then a lad of sixteen years, one out of fifteen children, ten by the first wife and five by the second. Mr. Branham says: "My father was very poor, and his death left his widow utterly destitute. I assisted her to her brother's, forty miles distant, and then struck out into the world, to fight the battles of life, poor, friendless, an orphan. As I was going along through the woods on that sad journey of kindness and affection to assist my widowed and desolate step-mother, I looked out upon my future career, and reflected: 'Here I am, a poor, helpless orphan boy! What I become, I must, by God's help, achieve for myself. I cannot afford to drink spirits, nor use tobacco, for such an expense will keep me poor, and I can never rise. By the grace of God, I will never use either.' And I never have. By His strength I have been enabled to keep sacred the solemn vow that in my lonely and helpless orphanhood, in that dreary forest path I made." Simeon Branham moved to Jennings County, Ind., 1831; to Johnson County, Ind., 1849; and to Union City, August 23, 1853, and this city has been his home ever since that day. He married Jemima Chambers about 1835. They have had six children, five living still.

He was a carpenter and wagon-maker; sold goods for twelve years; followed railroading and track-laying for four years. At Union City he has kept eating house and hotel, as also a boot and shoe store, and a drug store. He built the Branham House in 1855, and opened hotel in 1856, and has continued in it mostly ever since. Mr. Branham is an ardent Republican, and an active member of the Disciple Church, having been a Trustee from the beginning. He has often been solicited to serve the town in various public capacities, but he has, for the most part declined such service. He was, however, Town Trustee, and also School Trustee of Union City. When he was a youth, he followed wagoning, wood-chopping, etc. He has chopped cordwood at 25 cents a cord and boarded himself.

Three brothers and two sisters are supposed to be living, one sister in Chicago, and one in Iowa. The brothers are in Anderson, Martinsville, and Princeton, Ind.

Mr. Branham has been, during his life, remarkably active, energetic and reliable, and has been blessed with a good degree of worldly success. He is highly esteemed and beloved by his fellow-townsmen, and by the public generally. His hotel was established almost at the commencment of the business activity of the place and of the railroads centering here, and it has enjoyed from the start an extensive and reliable patronage.

The reputation, success and esteem attained by our worthy friend is an affecting example of what, in this blessed country of ours, a poor, friendless orphan lad may achieve by the Divine blessing upon his faithful and persevering labors. Be the motto of every poor orphan, and of everybody else as well—

"Never give up! It is wiser and better
Always to hope, than once to despair."

JEMIMA CHAMBERS BRANHAM was born in the Territory of Indiana, in that portion which has since become Jefferson County, on the 10th day of October, 1811. Her parents were James and Mary Chambers, who were both natives of North Carolina, but came to the Territory of Indiana a short time prior to their marriage, probably in 1807. When she was ten years old, her father died, and eight months later, her mother died, leaving her and five other children with limited means and to the uncertainties of pioneer life. She was raised on a farm, without educational advantages, and subjected to the necessity of earning her own living. She was married to Simeon Branham at Vernon, in Jennings County, in 18—, since which time her life has been parallel with his, and to whom she has been a helpmeet and counselor in all the events of a long, active and useful life. Mother Branham yet lives in the enjoyment of fair health, and the love and respect of all with whom she is acquainted. It is a noteworthy fact, as seen by their biographies, that both her husband and herself were poor orphan children—she, at the age of ten, and he at about sixteen years. And that desolate, impoverished orphanage helped rather than hindered their substantial prosperity, since it gave them that stern energy and that sterling economy and that sturdy self-reliance, without which any advantages and opportunities, however great, prove ever useless and vain.

proprietors expected the citizens to communicate with each other in the north part of the town is hard to tell. Alleys even are by no means abundant, and now, since Howard street has been cut down to make what may be hoped to be a permanent grade, intercourse east and west in the north part of the city is almost wholly obstructed.

The various additions, with names of proprietors, date of record, number of lots, location, etc., may be found in the general statement at the commencement of this account of the city.

The location of the town is reasonably good. The ground has a considerable elevation in some parts, rising at Oak street to the height of say twelve feet above the railroad tracks at the depots. Drainage and sewerage are somewhat difficult, but, with proper care and skill of engineering, not impossible.

From Oak street north and south, and also from Plum and Howard streets east and west (in the main part of the town), the slope is gradual, but quite evident; and, by grading northward on Howard and Plum, a good drainage may be secured.

Much labor has been spent during past years to establish a suitable grade, not always, possibly, in the wisest manner, though doubtless every Council has tried to do what seemed to them to be for the best, and it is to be hoped that in time a satisfactory result may be accomplished.

The town has a very serious disadvantage in the fact that gravel suitable for hard and durable streets is not easily obtained. One would think that, perhaps, by and by, gravel banks or pits near some of the various railways centering here might be utilized, and the gravel be transported hither on the cars, and hauled by wagons or drays to the streets. At any rate, Union City has had difficulty enough, thus far, in constructing streets, and with only moderate success.

It ought to be stated that, during the spring and summer of 1882, a grand work has been performed in connection with the sidewalks of the town, and that the same work is still going on with wonderful energy and success.

Columbia, Oak and Pearl streets have been supplied with walks of a most convenient and beautiful sort, the like of which is to be seen in but few towns of any size. These walks are constructed, some of solid concrete and some of natural stone. The concrete presents a smooth, continuous surface, apparently firm and lasting, and the natural rock is laid down in large slabs, say four by ten feet, and several inches thick.

The tract of land which forms the original plat of Union City, Ind., was purchased by Hon. Jere Smith, of Augustus Loveland, May 7, 1849. Mr. Smith purchased also forty acres in Ohio in 1852, between the two plats, of Fowler, father of Gabriel Fowler, now a business man of the place. That latter tract remained unplatted and unimproved until about 1870. Union City, Ohio, as originally platted, lay east of the forty-acre tract, which lay vacant between the two towns, preventing Union City, Ohio, from building up close to the State line. About ten years ago, this forty-acre tract was platted, and has been considerably improved. Much of it is occupied with shops, factories, lumber-yards, etc.

The streets on the Indiana side are mostly at oblique angles, some, however, being at right angles to each other, and some not so. Those that cross the railroad ("Bee-Line") run northwest at an angle of several degrees, except State Line, which extends north and south.

The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati & St. Louis ("Pan-Handle") Railroad crosses here the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis ("Bee-Line") Railroad, and the Dayton & Union Railroad has its northern terminus at this place. The city has therefore excellent railroad accommodations, enjoying direct and speedy communication with Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis—in fact, with the whole outside world.

WATER WORKS.

It possesses a splendid system of water works, by means of a grand and apparently inexhaustible well of water, sunk in the south part of the city to the depth of some twenty-one feet, connected with powerful steam works. It has been greatly deepened by boring. Through a network of mains and smaller pipes, the water is carried throughout the whole chief portion of the city, thus furnishing the town both for private purposes and for public use. Numerous manufacturing establishments draw from this well a plentiful supply of water. A grist-mill, several saw-mills, planing-mills, stave factory, flax-mill, engine house, etc., etc., are supplied with all they need, besides all other public and private uses; and still, thus far, there is enough and to spare. Hydrants, public watering troughs, private fountains, livery stables, hotels, passenger depots and dwellings as well find no lack of the life-giving fluid. Street-sprinklers and the fire department, moreover, obtain their abundant supply in the same exhaustless source—this wondrous public well! The water works are indeed a priceless treasure to Union City. The original cost was $40,000. The capacity of the well has been estimated at 800 gallons per minute.

As though it were an underground ocean, it seems thus far to have borne triumphantly every requirement. Whether there is a limit, and if so, when it will be reached, cannot be foreseen. The cost and trouble of obtaining and maintaining this supply of water for the various purposes of the city and its inhabitants has been and is exceedingly heavy; and the thought that, after all, the source may fail, or be found to be inadequate, is not pleasant to contemplate, and it is highly desirable that such a contingency may never arise, but that future generations may rejoice, even as does the present one, in a plentiful, undiminished, perennial flow of pure, limpid, health-giving water; that the supply may continue to be, like the floods from the springs of salvation, "enough for all, enough for each, enough for ever more;" or, at any rate, enough so long as men remain on the earth to stand in need of the life preserving fluid. During the summer of 1881, much labor was expended in trying to enlarge the supply, an account of which has already been given in another article, entitled "Union City Water Works."

EARLY HISTORY.

In the spring of 1849, the ground on which this enterprising town has since been built was owned by a settler by the name of Augustus Loveland. There was on the tract scarcely a sign of alteration or improvement by human hands. Mr. Loveland, its owner, had a little opening and a cabin house and a log stable. The cabin stood just north of the present residence of Hon. N. Cadwallader, and the stable stood some rods farther west. He had a well in front of his cabin, which continued in use for many years after the establishment of the town, and the site of which may still be known by a heap of cobble-stones near the sidewalk on the west side of Howard street, just north of Pearl, almost in front of the old Jackson property.

The Messrs. Smith (Jeremiah and Oliver H.) having succeeded in establishing the Bellefontaine Railroad upon its present route, conceived the idea of building up a town at the State line. Accordingly, the Loveland tract was purchased by Jeremiah Smith in May, 1849, and steps were immediately taken for the survey and platting of a town site. The growth of the place was rendered more certain by the fact that the railroad from Bellefontaine to Indianapolis was built by two companies, and in those days goods had always to be trans-shipped at the termination of each road. About the same time, moreover, measures were taken which were effectual to change the route of the road which had been projected, and upon which much work had already been done, from Greenville to Winchester, so that the junction with the Bellefontaine route should be at the State line, thus securing at once three important outlets to the embryo town—east, west and south—even before the new city had begun to be, except in the brain of those who had so shrewdly planned and managed the whole affair. And besides, a road was planned and built from Columbus to Union City, thus making four roads to start the town with, which, in those times, was an immense advantage.

The town was surveyed and platted some time between May and December, 1849, as the land was purchased in May and the plat was recorded in December of that year. The lots were offered some time in the winter or spring of 1850, and, among other purchasers, David Teeter became the owner of a lot in the projected town. Mr. Teeter was the brother of John Teeter, now living south of Union City, and the son of the Widow Teeter, who, with her large family, planted her stake in this wild forest nearly fifty years ago. At the time of that purchase (February, 1850), no buildings were on the original site of Union City but the cabin and the stable of Augustus Loveland, as above described.

There was a house north of Division street, between Howard and Columbia, not far from where old Mr. Carter used to live. It was occupied by a Mr. Ricard. The eighty-acre tract was owned by a Mr. Crumrine, and Ricard rented it. Samuel Carter bought the land afterward of Mr. Crumrine. On the lot purchased by him, David Teeter proceeded, shortly afterward (say March or April, 1850), to erect a dwelling. That edifice was and is at the southeast corner of Oak and Howard, and has long been known as the Star House. It was the first building erected in Union City. Mr. Teeter did not live to finish it. He had been feeble in health for some time, and he grew worse, and died in May, 1850. The house was sold to Benjamin Hawkins, and he finished it. Mr. Montgar lived in it awhile. No other house was built in 1850. The second house was put up for Henry Debolt. It was a frame, and was built by John Teeter in the spring of 1851, and it stood near the present site of the opera house.

The third was the house where Dr. Yergin now lives, a one-story frame building, replaced, in June, 1881, by an edifice with brick front. Daniel Weimar took the contract, and John Teeter and Hezekiah Fowler, brother to Gabriel Fowler, built it for John Frazier and Jack Downing, intending it for a saloon. They used it for a year, perhaps, and quit. Those two houses were the only ones built in 1851; but in the spring of 1852, things began to open out pretty lively. Four railroad tracks were rapidly concentrating upon that point in the woods on the Ohio line, all of which were soon completed to Union City, but the western end of the fourth (Union City to Logansport) had to wait for several years.

The people, in the spring of 1852, seemed to begin to realize the situation, and many appeared determined to become masters of it, if possible. And so, early in 1852, settlers began to arrive. As already stated, there were just three dwelling houses—the original Loveland log mansion, the Star House (unfinished), and the house built for Henry Debolt. But by July, 1852, several houses had been erected and several residents were on the ground.

Alfred Lenox, one of the earliest residents, says that when he came, July 2, 1852, the residents on both sides of the line, but mostly in Ohio, were Messrs. J. D. Carter, Montgar, Dr. John Diehl, W. A. C. Dixon, Jacob Livengood, John Hayes, Schultz Hayes, Henry Debolt, —— Miller, John Teeter, Seth Hoke, John Koons. J. J. Turpen came the same day—July 2, 1852.

The first saloon was kept in the building on Pearl street.

The demon of liquor proved itself worthy of its ancient name on its first introduction into the town, created a great row, and caused the discharge of seventeen railroad hands soon after that grog shop was opened. That saloon and another, by means of some pretty energetic measures, were obliged to "dry up." Other attempts have been made to plant the fiery traffic in the midst of the places of business and the quiet homes of our citizens on the Indiana side, but without much success.

Abram Hoke, R. B. McKee, Dr. J. N. Converse, Benjamin Hawkins, Mr. Searl, Enos Turpen, Simeon Branham, William Anderson, Samuel L. Carter, R. A. Willson, and doubtless many others, came in 1852 or early in 1853.

Business first began near the point where the Deerfield & Greenville wagon road crosses the Dayton & Union Railroad. J. J. Turpen was weatherboarding there a building for a store in July, 1852. The building stands there yet. He set up the store of which he had charge, the goods belonging to Mr. Ward, contractor on the Piqua road, in August, 1852, the first on this ground. John D. Carter had built a saw-mill near the brewery, and cut the first log about April 1, 1852. Alfred Lenox had the first grocery, October to December, 1852, near the Deerfield Crossing. He had a fine run of business, but his partner left, and, having no spare time himself (Lenox was working hands on the Dayton & Union Railroad), he sold the goods to a Greenville firm in December, 1852.

At this date, Messrs. Turpen, Lenox, Hayes, Livengood, Johnson, Wintermote and some others had dwellings near the Deerfield Crossing.

Mr. Livengood had built a boarding house, perhaps the first on that ground, just opposite the store building above mentioned, and east of the Deerfield road, and was boarding scores of hands who were working on the railroads. That boarding house is one of the cluster east of the Deerfield road, at the extreme eastern end of Union City, Ohio, north of the railroad tracks.

About this time, the iron tracks, which had been so long in preparation, were nearing the point of conjunction at the new city in the woods at the line; and on Christmas Day, December 25, 1852, the Dayton & Union track-layers, straining a point and laying their iron almost any way so as only to get it down, reached the line with their iron, extending the rail about a foot upon the sacred soil of Indiana. The Indianapolis line also was near at hand, and before many days, the western track was in town also, reaching the State line from the west, and the two tracks were so joined that, on January 24, 1853, the first through passenger train went from Dayton via Union City to Indianapolis. There was quite a village grown up between the months of September and December, 1852, near the Deerfield Crossing, as though business might perhaps take hold at that place. But it did not do so. That point proved to be away from trade, and business left that spot and wandered westward. The dwellings, however, still remain (some dozen small ones), and are occupied. They are far east of the main town of Union City, Ohio, and seem almost, as it were, a village or hamlet by themselves. A strong effort was made to establish things in Ohio, near the mill, and brewery and foundry. Mr. Carter had built a saw-mill. David Fruits put up an immense four-story frame, intended for an opera house, hotel and what not, but he soon "got through his pile," and his great frame stood there for a time, projecting far into the upper air, and nicknamed the "deadening" by the neighbors, until at length somebody bought it, took one story from the top and finished the rest for use [Orr House]. Before long, a grist-mill, a brewery, a foundry, etc., were erected, a store or two was started, and heroic efforts were made to hold the town in the Buckeye State. But all would not do. General business could not be made to "stick" over there, but it insisted on fleeing across the line and building its cozy nest in the balmy Hoosier State.

In fact, the original intention of the projectors was that the town should be in Hoosierdom, and their plans could not be readily thwarted. Besides, to make assurance doubly sure, Mr. Smith purchased forty acres of land directly on the State line, on the Ohio side, and held it vacant, refusing to sell to anybody any of that tract, thus utterly preventing the Ohio side from building up to the business part of the Indiana side. And that gap between the two corporations continued for about twenty years, until the supremacy of Union City, Ind., was supposed to be so firmly established as to need to fear no rivalship.

The road from Bellefontaine was more tardy in its movements, and midsummer had nearly come before the line was complete between the capital of the Hoosier State to the city of the beautiful spring (Bellefontaine—beautiful fountain).

About January, 1853, Courtney Hayes started a grocery across the track from the old Orr Building (Ohio). There were several residences in Indiana, and a hotel or two had been started but no other business had yet begun there. In February, 1853, Benjamin Hawkins built a frame house where Stewart's (brick) grocery now stands, and put in a store of dry goods, and Jesse Paxson became his clerk.

[Jesse Paxson says Mr. Hawkins hauled his goods from Greenville, and that the store was opened out before the railroad reached this place. And Robert B. McKee, who came here in September, 1852, insists that Benjamin Hawkins was selling goods at Union when he came, in September, 1852. Mr. Paxson would be most likely to be correct, because he built the house, and, when the goods began to arrive, Mr. Hawkins told Mr. Paxson to open out the goods and go to selling them as his clerk, without ever asking him beforehand or making any engagement with him.]

About the same time, Mr. Searl built what is now the Negley Building, east of the Branham House, for a grain warehouse. The grain business rose, almost at a bound, to immense proportions. The firm changed partners more or less. It was Searl, Searl & Hawkins, Converse, Paxson & Searl, etc.

Mr. Lenox says: "That warehouse handled more grain than any other in this city has ever done in the same time. Hundreds of wagon loads have been in waiting at once, and the grain men had to work day and night to keep up with the business. Grain was hauled from Recovery, from New Corydon, and from within six miles of Richmond."

The second warehouse was built by James White, but it was burned in 1857, before it had stood a year. Some men had been gambling there till a late hour, and the building had in some way been set on fire. In half an hour after they left, the house was all in flames. It had been set on fire before. A kindled fire was found in a flour barrel up stairs, but it was put out. One man lost his all, $3,000, burned in a safe within the building, which (the safe) another man had carelessly left open. The safe had been sold to the County Commissioners, and they were to have taken it the afternoon before, but no car could be had, and the agent promised a car the next day. The safe was left partly open, and its contents were destroyed.

The third warehouse was put up by Turpen & Coats, at the west end of the old Dayton & Union depot. It is there yet, and used by A. A. Knapp for water pipes, flue, fire bricks, etc.

In 1855, three years after Union City began, there were six dry goods stores—Messrs. Lenox, Turpen, McFarlan, White, Hawkins and one other—three more than now (1881). John D. Carter and Montgar, in 1854, had a store on the Ohio side, and a large trade. Cadwallader & Co. tried it there later, but did not succeed, and quit and went elsewhere. The foundry, Ohio side, was begun early, but it has done no work since 1870. The brewery began later, and kept at work many years, but has been idle for some time.

There were in early times some saloons in Union City (Indiana side), but Alfred Lenox routed one, and Simeon Branham another, probably in 1855. This (Indiana) side of the town has never taken kindly to saloons, and, for the most part, has kept them out. Union City, Ohio, however, is sufficiently infested with the nuisance. Simeon Branham says that in 1853 the citizens were Seth Hoke, April, 1852; J. E. Paxson, 1852; Alfred Lenox, July 2, 1852; Joel N. Converse, 1852; Rufus A. Willson, March, 1853; Joseph J. Turpen, July 2, 1852; Abram Hoke, 1853; Armstrong; Courtney Hayes, 1852; Henry Debolt, 1852; W. A. C. Dixon, 1852; Benjamin Hawkins, 1852; —— Searl, 1852; Simeon Branham, August 23, 1853; Calvin R. Searl; Robert McKee, September, 1852; Josiah Montgar; Samuel Carter, 1853; William Anderson, August, 1852.

FIRST THINGS.

The first house erected was the Star House, by Mr Teeter, in 1850. The first hotel was the Forest House, built (raised) July 2, 1852, and kept by —— Miller. The first store was that of J. J. Turpen (Ohio side, Deerfield Crossing), August, 1852. The first grocery was by Alfred Lenox (Deerfield Crossing), October to December, 1852. The first store, Indiana side, was by B. Hawkins, February, 1853 [see Paxson's statement]. The first grain house was by Hawkins & Searl, February, 1853. The first railroad agent was R. A. Willson, opening the first set of railroad books in Union City. He managed all three of the roads for some time. The Bee-Line was two roads for awhile. The first cars from this place were loaded with grain by Hawkins & Searl, on both roads. J. E. Paxson set up the first boot and shoe store in 1856. William Anderson set up the first blacksmith shop in August, 1852, and his shop is running yet (1881). The first hardware store was by Dukemineer & Maloy. The first stove store man was a Mr. Smith (or Evans). The first millinery establishment was by Mrs. Bennett. The first drug store belonged to Simmons & Hill, 1854 or 1855. The first livery stable was by Alfred Lenox, in 1855. The first hotel was kept by —— Miller, Forest House, in 1852. The first book store was set up by Espy & Steele. The first bank was the First National Bank, Edward Starbuck, President, 1865. The only private establishment that has been kept up from the very beginning is William Anderson's smith shop, August, 1852. Three others come near that, but do not reach it. Paxson's shoe store began in 1856, and is here yet (1880). Turpen & Harris' grocery began in 1857, and is here yet. Branham's Hotel was built in 1855–56, and opened in 1856, and is still flourishing. Kuntz & Willson began their lumber-yard in 1867. Kirschbaum & Co. began their store in 1865. Joseph Bowers opened a clothing store in 1862. Joseph T. Shaw began selling dry goods in 1864. Tritt & Robbins began the grocery trade in 1871. C. S. Hardy commenced his drug store in 1867. J. M. Shank set up his tin and stove store in 1858. J. S. Starbuck began a wholesale grocery in 1868. Bentley Masslich bought into the Eagle in 1864. William Kerr bought Mr. Beechler's tin and stove store in 1869. Samuel Carter commenced his present business in 1869. Buckingham began his nursery and gardening business many years ago. Henry Fey began the butchering business here long, long ago. Swain & Platt began in the book store in 1876. Stewart & Swain set up their grocery in 1865. W. K. Smith began the shoe business in 1859. J. D. Smith set up his jewelry store in 1865. Dr. Ferguson began the practice of medicine in Union City in 1867. Anderson began to sell lime in 1863. Charles Heitzman set up as a butcher in 1865. John W. Starbuck began his drug store in 1872. A. A. Knapp began to sell pipe, fire brick, flues, etc., in 1875. The first school was taught in the fall of 1853, by Miss Mary Ensminger, in her father's house, with perhaps half a dozen pupils. The house is yet standing, on Howard street, just south of the Star House. The first public school was taught in the winter of 1853–54, by George W. Brainard, in the little frame house lately occupied by Mr. Woods. The first church organization was the Methodist Episcopal, in 1852. There were four members, two on probation. The first preaching-place was Henry Debolt's house. The first Sunday school was in 1853; Superintendent, Rev. J. T. Farson; attendance, twenty-five; place, old Bee-Line boarding car. The two first brick edifices are thought to have been Branham's Hotel, 1855, and the building on the southwest corner of Columbia and Pearl—erected by I. P. Gray. The first lumber-yard of any importance was that of Samuel Carter, south of the railroad crossing, in 1862. The first saw-mill was built by John D. Carter in 1852. The first grist-mill belonged to Hobbes (Ohio side), began in 1857 (nearly). McMillan built a warehouse (Ohio side), and then it was changed into a mill by Hobbs about 1857. The first public schoolhouse was built in 1858. The first church was the Disciples' Church, built in 1853–58. The first child born was Henry Debolt's, dead. The first child born now living was Edward Hoke, son of Seth Hoke, born November 17, 1852. The first magistrate was Esquire Evans. The first attorney was William P. Debolt. The first physician was Dr. Diehl, or perhaps Dr. Twiford, 1852. Isaac Sarp burned the first brick-kiln in 1854 or 1855. Solomon Young was the first butcher, in 1852. John Teeter built the State Line Hotel in 1853. The first tin shop was by Patrick Howard, now of Piqua. John Koons commenced the furniture business in 1856. George Grahs began tailoring in 1856. William Thokey commenced at the same time. The Citizens' Bank was organized in 1865. R. J. Clark commenced the bakery business in 1865. Benjamin T. Wilkinson was the first gardener on the ground, commencing in 1858 (Ohio side, where he still resides). [Mr. Wilkinson is an original character, and an account of his life would require a book by itself]. The State Line House (now Orr House), was built very early.

The principal settlers near Union City were Mr. Fowler (Ohio), father of Gabriel Fowler, grocer, on the Fowler farm; Mr. Sheets, on the Smith (now Cadwallader) farm, north of town; Mr. Roe, father of Harrison Roe, south of town; Thomas Peyton, on the Converse farm, west of town; "Kid" Marquis, on the Parent farm, south of town.

UNION CITY, OHIO.

This town, though entirely distinct and separate from Union City, Ind., is yet closely connected in business and social interests therewith. It seems proper, therefore, and in a manner necessary, that a brief notice thereof should be given in this work.

A town is said by some to have been platted on the Ohio side in 1838, by whom we do not know, nor just where that plat was located. It is also said that Mr. Hayes made the first location of a town there, at the east side of the present town, near the Deerfield road, as also that Mr. Fruits and Mr. Colclazer added to the town. An additional plat was made by Josiah Montgar, probably in 1852. The petition for the plat, however, was presented to the Board of County Commissioners of Darke County, Ohio, September, 1853, and granted December 5, 1853, and the plat was recorded January 5, 1854. This plat consisted of forty acres, which Mr Montgar had lately purchased of Messrs. Smith, lying on both sides of the railroad. Mr. Montgar donated ten acres to the railroad for shops, depot, switches, warehouses, and what not, and a saw-mill was built opposite where the brewery was located.

John Hayes made an addition to the town, and so also did Frederick Roe and Mr. Brownley. Jere Smith added ten acres to the plat. Fowler made two additions, and others also have been appended from time to time, the last one, perhaps, being Archard's Addition. The following statement is made, in substance, by John D. Carter, who claims that his family was the first to move to the infant city.

At the first settlement of Union City, the only residents were Augustus Loveland, on the Indiana side, and John Hayes and Schultz Hayes and Mr. Conway and Mr. Frederic Roe, perhaps, on the Ohio side. John Hayes lived near the point at which the Greenville wagon road crosses the Bee-Line Railroad, on the west side of that thoroughfare, and Schultz Hayes on the farm still occupied by a gentleman of the same name and connection; and a Mr. Conway had lived in the same vicinity. They had made small openings, but all besides was deep and tangled wildwood and heavy and unbroken forest. The Greenville Creek region had been settled for a long time, and the land there was already mostly occupied. The Deerfield road was largely traveled, and Schultz Hayes kept a tavern, which enjoyed an abundant and extensive patronage.

John D. Carter moved upon the Conway farm in August, 1851, being the first family to come there after the location of the town, having been induced so to do by the urgent solicitation of Hon. Jeremiah Smith, one of the proprietors of the embryo city. He was but a boy, as it were, not yet twenty-one years of age, though a married man withal. Having erected a saw-mill near Winchester, it had been burned, and the citizens there, Elias Kizer and others, had aided him generously in preparing to rebuild at that place; but, through the glowing persuasions of Mr. Smith, he changed his purpose. His saw-mill at Union City, Ohio, was erected in the fall of 1851, and commenced operations in the spring of 1852, perhaps in April of that year. Mr. Carter, as stated, came upon the ground in August, 1851; Henry Debolt, not long after; and Mr. Montgar, in November of the same year, who purchased a forty-acre tract on the present site of Union City, Ohio, and, in connection with Mr. Hayes, Mr. Roe, etc., laid out that town.

Thus far is the statement taken from the lips of Mr. John D. Carter. Just who came after Messrs. Carter, Debolt and Montgar, who appear to have settled in 1851, we have not been able to discover.

EARLY BUSINESS (OHIO SIDE).

The first smith shop was put up by Frederick Roe, in 1853, at the south end of Division street (Ohio side), in the woods. In the same year, Lewis Gillaum had a shoe shop. A cooper shop was run by P. R. Galloway for eight months in 1855. Woodbury & Hulse had another smith shop upon Division street not very far from the same time.

David Fruits set up a shingle machine in the northeast part of the town in 1853, and ran it until 1855.

Henry Weinland had a saw-mill on the west side of Division street, near the railroad (Ohio side).

S. P. McMillan and Thomas Workman erected a steam grist-mill, with four run of buhrs, which is yet in operation, with a capacity of 100 barrels per day. The first dry goods store on that ground was by Morgan & Carter, in 1853, opposite the flouring-mill. Brown & Archard opened a wholesale liquor store in 1856. In 1857, P. R. Galloway set up a hoop-pole establishment, which was the largest at that time in the State of Ohio. During the winters of 1858 and 1859, the shipments were 400 car-loads.

The first store of all was on the Deerfield road, just north of the railroad, in September, 1852, and Alfred Lenox started a grocery in the same vicinity, running it only a short time.

About 1853, Katzenbarger & Stahl opened a bakery, and M. B. Dickey began tailoring, both near the flouring-mill.

Mr. J. D. Carter, now of Winchester, says that he moved rom that place to Union City, Ohio, building the first saw-mill on that ground in 1852, and a residence; and that his family were the first to move to that town, that his mill was opposite the brewery, and that he remained at Union City till 1857. In 1860, Witham & Son built a handle factory, east of State Line and south of the railroad. The building was burned, and a new one built in 1874, now owned by Carter & Son.

In 1876, there was business as follows: A stave factory, with twenty to thirty hands; a planing-mill, with twelve to fifteen hands; a furniture factory, ten to fifteen hands; a hub and spoke factory, ten to fifteen hands; two steam saw-mills and another furniture factory; a steam grist-mill with four run of buhrs; five brick manufactories and a tile factory. At present, the business may be briefly described thus (it has been partly stated already): G. Lambert & Son's grain warehouse, handling 250,000 bushels yearly; Snook's brick, tile and neckyoke factory (the latter not running). The brick factory can make 10,000 brick per day. The tile factory turns out about $6,000 worth per year. The stave factory, by Wiggim & Son, in 1870, with sheds 1,200 feet and two dry houses. Capacity, 20,000 staves and 8,000 to 10,000 heading per day.

Turning factory by Carter & Son, producing 500 dozen clamps, 50,000 broom handles, 2,000,000 trunk slats and the same number of trunk handles. Worth of products, $25,000 annually. Force, eighteen to twenty hands.

Furniture factory, John Koons built in 1876. Saw-mill, wagon factory, turning factory, etc., by John T. Hartzell, in 1878.

Tub and pail factory; Hook Brothers, came to Union City, Ind., in 1877, and to their present location in 1879 They employ thirty-five hands and make 100,000 vessels annually. Value, $30,000 per year. Their engine, and that of Carter & Sons also, was made by Smith Brothers, Union City, Ind.

Furniture factory, Meanck & Son, in 1863, eight or ten hands.

Paper bagging factory, McKee & Robison, in 1880, in the Orr Building, five to eight hands.

Handle factory, Lambert & Son, in 1880, extensive establishment, and do a large amount of work.

Lumber-yard (hardwood), Jones, Ebert & Benner, 1880, large business; buy from an extensive region, and ship great quantities to the seaboard and elsewhere.

Lumber-yard, Kuntz & Willson, in 1880, a branch of the immense establishment of Peter Kuntz, increasing largely his already wonderful business.

There is one church, United Brethren; pastor, Rev. Keister, active and useful and successful. There is one school building, brick, built in 1870, two stories, containing five rooms; in course of enlargement summer of 1882. Principal, Gillum Cromer; four subordinates. Town officers, 1880: Mayor, William M. Grimes; Clerk, James McMahan; Treasurer, H. S. Stockdale; Marshal, W. R. Gard; Councilmen, Messrs. Norris, Purcell, Spangle, Eldridge, Thomas, Hankman.

Resident attorneys, Messrs. Baker and Pickett.

There is one physician and no post office, and no post office in Jackson Township, Union City, Ind., serving for the population of both parts of the city, and that and other outside offices supplying the entire township.

It was the expectation that the Ohio side would be the main town, but Jere Smith "knew better." It was not "his calculation," and it turned out the way he wished and intended. The town grew up on the west side of the line, and for many years the Ohio side was only a feeble suburb separated from the main part by a considerable vacant space, owned by Smith, and kept out of market on purpose to hinder the growth of the Ohio side till the other part had attained a clear and permanent strength.

Most of the owners of the business establishments named reside in Indiana. There are, besides those, a few groceries, a store or two, a blacksmith shop or two, and a host of liquor saloons. There used to be a foundry and a brewery, but both are discontinued years ago.

The grist-mill described is in operation at present, run by Mr. Wunder.

Much of the custom of the groggeries comes from the Indiana side, and their presence is an unmitigated nuisance to the whole place and the entire region. Indeed, the non-drinking residents of the Ohio side maintain, with how much reason we cannot tell, that, were it not for the patronage afforded from Indiana, most of the saloons would be obliged to "dry up." When shall it once be?

PROGRESS.

A large amount of business seemed waiting for the new railroad and the town. The completion of these pioneer tracks marked, indeed, a grand era in the life of this region. Grain, stock and trade in general began to pour in from far and near, especially from the great, destitute region lying toward the north. The grain trade of the infant town was very great. The capacity of the new warehouse was tested to the uttermost, and the crew of men employed to handle the grain were pressed day and night. Within three or four years, no fewer than six dry goods stores in this "new town in the woods" displayed their contents and their wares to tempt the eyes and the hearts of the teamsters fresh from the farms in the surrounding regions. Other establishments, too—groceries, hardware stores, tin shops, hotels, doctors' offices, smith shops—all were here. So great was this wagon trade from the north that for many years the Union City magnates would give no encouragement to any scheme for building a northern road to Portland, Jay County, because it would give those northern "back-country" men a nearer railroad point. And they fought it so much as to produce the result that when Portland obtained her road, it came not through Union City, but through Winchester; and that now, while Portland has two thriving roads, the track to that place via Union City is still unlaid, and will perhaps long continue so. But in 1852, the Bellefontaine & Indianapolis Railroad, through Union City, and the road to Dayton and Cincinnati were truly a Godsend, and sent a thrill of new life throughout this whole region, then, in fact, largely a wilderness.

The advancement of Union City, Ind., was at first, therefore, quite brisk—too rapid, in fact, for a solid and healthy growth. It was then for several years comparatively at a standstill. Since 1872, the upward movement has been strong and nearly constant. Before 1869, there had been no costly buildings nor residences. Most were frame, and the few brick ones were but of moderate size. Branham Hotel was the only large brick edifice. At about 1869, Esquire Jackson erected a fine dwelling on West Pearl street, and, soon afterward, Col. Isaac P. Gray built the dwelling (then thought to be wonderful), now the residence of Hon. N. Cadwallader. Just after these erections, building took a new impulse. Three brick edifices went up near Paxson's shoe store. The Citizens' Bank, and some others on Oak street were erected about the same time. These all were at that time reckoned to be fine structures, and counted an honor to the little "wooden city."

In 1870, the corporation limit north was the alley, or narrow street, between Brandon and Tritt, and there was just one house on Howard and one on Plum north of that (except, indeed, the "cooper's" and Mr. Livengood's, both of which were far in the country). But the city has been extended largely since that date, and the mania for building has become very strong and many costly residences and business blocks have made their appearance in various directions, so that now those former structures, which seemed, when built, to be so splendid, have fallen far into the background.

The general business of the town has increased very greatly, and, considering that the city has no public advantages of location or official business, being not the county seat, and being directly on the line between two counties and two States as well, and having no natural water privilege of any sort, its growth has indeed been a thing showing a marked energy and most praiseworthy activity on the part of her principal men, and in some respects, at least, it is superior to any town in the region. In 1882, the improvement still continues; several dwellings are being erected; the business of the principal firms is apparently and largely increasing; some new establishments have been set up, among them the Union City Carriage Company, with a capital of $10,000, intended to employ thirty-five hands, as also the Heat Fender Company doing an extensive business.

STREETS—IMPROVEMENTS.

Considerable labor and expense have been applied to grading and graveling the streets of Union City. Many think, indeed, that no small amount has been unwisely expended, in changing grade, regrading, digging up streets once graveled, etc.; but what human enterprise is free from mistakes? Within a year or two past, several thousand dollars have been expended upon North Howard street, making a regular and even slope northward, to give free and easy drainage to that part of the city. During 1881, the city graded and graveled West Pearl street, making a fine highway for the western travel, as also a good connection between the factories in the western part of the town and the business part of the city. In fact, the improvement of Pearl street was one of the conditions upon which Woolley & Fisher consented to establish their electric light and motor factory near its western terminus.

The Council, during 1881-82, constructed a capacious sewer, to supply the constantly growing demand for adequate and permanent sewerage for the needs of the town. Two thousand dollars are already on hand, which, with the further avails of the sewer tax that the Council are authorized to levy each year, will suffice to complete the payment for that necessary purpose. It is to be hoped that, before long, some system of lighting the streets can be established, which, indeed, the steady growth of the city will call for as a necessary improvement before the lapse of many more years.

The water works, described more at length elsewhere, have been and are of incalculable benefit to the town, and have done much toward its permanent growth and prosperity.

PROMINENT MEN.

The advance of the city, especially since 1872, has been, on the whole, brisk and substantial. Most of those who are now solid business men had originally little or no capital—country lads, wood-choppers, apprentices, farmers' boys who left home to try their fortunes, or because the farm was too little for all the male members of the flock.

Simeon Branham was an orphan lad, who began with nothing.

Peter Kuntz, the prince of lumber-dealers, began life as a wood chopper.

Jesse Paxson, boot and shoe dealer, came to Union City a poor carpenter.

Bentley Masslich was an apprentice lad.

Nathan Cadwallader was a farmer's boy, a widow's son, and her only one.

Messrs. Smith's grandfather was a blacksmith.

W. H. Anderson and E. L. Anderson were country lads.

Messrs. Kirschbaum and Bowers, our enterprising merchants, were men of little means at first, and they are only in early middle life still.

Samuel L. Carter was a carpenter for nearly twenty years, and still works as hard as ever.

John Koons was bred a farmer, and was a journeyman carpenter for years.

R. S. Fisher's father was left an orphan lad in Carolina, and came to Indiana alone on horseback, over mountain and valley and flood. His wife made her first bedstead in her rude log cabin from two pole benches, with clapboards laid across.

Simon Hedrick was a country boy. Dr. Joel N. Converse was also poor in his boyhood and youth. John T. Shaw was the son of a shoemaker. William Kerr was a tinner's apprentice.

John S. Starbuck was a farmer's son, and a farmer himself. Edward Starbuck was a farmer and a brick-mason. A. A. Knapp was a tinner. John W. Starbuck was a farmer's son and a brick-mason. Ephraim Bowen was a farmer's son. Rufus A. Willson was the son of a New York farmer.

A knowledge of facts is lacking as to the rest of the prominent citizens, but probably not one in fifty of those who are at the head of business was anything but a poor, hard-working lad, and many of them were very poor. The same thing, indeed, is true of the whole county. Moorman Way was an orphan boy, and for years after his manhood was a carpenter and a poor man. Thomas Ward's father, when he came to the county in 1819, was too poor to enter forty acres of land. Thomas W. Kizer is the son of a pioneer farmer. Mark Diggs was an early settler, who entered his quarter-section in the woods sixty years ago. Henry H. Neff, James S. Cottom, the Carters, etc., are sons of pioneers who had only a moderate amount of this world's goods, Henry Neff being a printer's apprentice, and James Cottom a dry goods clerk. Asahel Stone was a carpenter's son, and a carpenter himself. J. B. McKinney's father was very poor.

These are but specimens of the whole group of active business men in the county.

Daniel B. Miller, Ephraim L. Bowen, James Ruby, the Warrens, Arthur McKew, Elihu Cammack, Ezekiel Clough, William O. King, the Starbucks, Gideon Shaw, Philip Barger, the Hirsches, Lemuel Wiggins, Willson Anderson, John Randle, William Shoemake, William M. Campbell, and scores of others, have all been of the same sort, the sons of poor men, and most or all of them hard-working farmers, mechanics, artisans or tradesmen. Let their children and their posterity heed the salutary lesson afforded by their laborious, energetic and successful career.

Thus the whole town, and the county as well, is the growth of native energy, and thorough and persistent application to business. During the past eight years, many fine residences and substantial business blocks have been built, streets have been widened, graded and graveled, and, altogether, the town has been greatly enlarged, improved and beautified, and now does a very large amount of business of many kinds.

The people, as a whole, are an upright, moral, intelligent, enterprising, thriving and prosperous community, though it must be confessed that here, as well as elsewhere, vice dares to show its hydra head, and manages to accomplish somewhat of its mischievous, tormenting, fatal work.

OFFICIAL HISTORY.

Union City, Ind., was early organized as a town, but no record can be found before 1863. From that time to the city charter the officers were as follows:

Presidents of Board of Trustees. — Messrs. Weddington, Lambert, Maloy, White, Hill, Cowdery, Swain, Cranor, Jaqua and Harris.

Clerks of Board.—Messrs. Reeder, Swain, Gregory, Beall, Smith, Lambert, Wiley, Johnson, Converse.

Treasurers.—Messrs. Cadwallader, Polly, Coats, Anderson, Johnson.

Marshals.—Messrs. Sutton, Harkrader, Murphy, Nickey, Mason, Headington.

Since the city charter (1875) the officers have been—Mayors, Lambert, Ross, Shockney, Stall; Treasurers, Tansey, Grahs; Clerks, Converse, Gregory, Woodbury; Marshals, Reeves, Murray.

The Trustees have been Messrs. Maloy, Grahs, Simmons, William Branham, Weddington, Hoke, Lambert, Coons, Gregory, Hill, White, Coats, Wiggs, Heitzman, Cowdery, Humphrey, W. K. Smith, Willson, Frey, Cranor, Gist, J. Dye Smith, Mathes, Jaqua, Knapp, Johnson, Ewen, Kerr, Ladd, Harris, Frank.

Councilmen since the city corporation was created have been Messrs. Coddington, Pierce, Koons, Stall, Harris, Frank, Doty, Wetz, Reeder, Bowersox, Castle, Rubey, Witham, John D. Smith, Jones, Vestal, Ladd, Nivison, Masslich, Frey; City Engineer, S. R. Bell; City Attorney, Pierre Gray.

Probably Union City was organized as a town almost as soon as it began to be settled, but the records are not at hand earlier than 1863. The minutes for 1863 speak of ordinances passed in April, 1855.

In 1865, the Assessor reported the assessment at $357,564.

Treasurer's report for 1865–66 was as follows: Dr., $2,976.40; Cr., $2,946.76; on hand, $33.75. Officers "held over" 1866–67; election notice illegal. In 1867, Trustees borrowed $4,600 to build schoolhouse, addition to old one.

Treasurers' report April, 1867—Dr., $2,168.41; Cr., $1,841.11; on hand, $327.30. Trustees received for services $36 each. May, 1868, city bought a gravel bank of Jonathan Mote, fourteen acres, for $1,000. City reported in debt above resources $2,922.95.

Treasurer's report—Dr., May, 1870, $7,833.28; Cr., $7,631.39; balance, $201.89. Office of Town Engineer created.

July 20, 1870, wards declared as follows: First Ward, north of Oak and east of Howard; Second Ward, north of Oak and west of Howard; Third Ward, south of Oak and east of Howard, north of railroad; Fourth Ward, south of Oak and west of Howard, north of railroad; Fifth Ward, south of railroad.

Treasurer's report April 27, 1871—Dr., $5,102.71; Cr., $5,058; on hand, $43.71.

Treasurer's report April, 1872—Dr., $4,003.12; Cr., $3,996.39; on hand, $6.73.

Marshal's report May, 1872—Paid out for improvements $5,892.

August, 1873, water works contracted for, and built shortly afterward. Treasurer's report for 1875–76—Dr., $18,140,47; Cr., $16,954.07; on hand, $1,154.40.

Bonds of officers as follows: Mayor, $3,000; Clerk, $2,000; Treasurer, $30,000; Marshal, $2,000; Assessor, $1,000.

April, 1878, running expenses of water works for a year, $2,727.93.

April, 1880, James Moorman offered Moorman's Park, east side of Columbia street, to the city, and the Council accepted the donation on the conditions specified. In 1880, Howard street was cut through so as to make an even slope and a sufficient drainage north from Oak street, leaving the banks on each side in the highest place some ten feet. In 1881, Pearl street was graded and graveled to its extreme western terminus.

Howard street has been further improved by the laying of sidewalks (stone or brick) along much of its northern portion, and gutters, etc., in some places. The city is now laying water pipes far along the new improvements, giving North Howard, etc., the full advantages of the water works.

TREASURER'S REPORT, APRIL 17, 1882.

The salaries of the officers in 1881 were as follows: Mayor, $200; Clerk, $300; Treasurer, $300; Marshal, $500; Councilmen, $50; Attorney, $200; night police, $45 per month: Superintendent Water Works, 30 cents per hour; Board of Water Works, $25 each; Board of Health, $10 (five members). The salaries of the officers alone foot up about $2,500 yearly, while water works, street cuttings, grades, sewers and what not, make city taxes a fearful burden to be borne. It was an unfortunate circumstance connected with the water works that the city encountered a serious and expensive law suit for infringement of patent, which was settled at last, after great outlay of money, by purchasing of the plaintiffs the right to continue their machinery and methods,

In May, 1882, the salaries of the city officers were raised as follows; Board of Health. Secretary, $50; others $20; Mayor, $350; Clerk, $350; Treasurer, $350; Marshal, $600; Council, $80; Attorney, $200; night police, $600; Water Works Trustees, $35; City Engineer, 35 cents per hour; Street Commissioner, 20 cents per hour; increase about $1,000 per year, total about $3,500.

BUSINESS IN DETAIL.

We give a somewhat more detailed statement of some of the business of the city, chiefly by describing the establishments themselves.

There are several fine business blocks, among which are Bowers & Co's. large three-story brick, Kirschbaum & Cos., large three-story brick, Smith Bros.', large three-story brick, Opera Block, large three-story brick, and others.

There are now many splendid residences; among them are those of Charles W. Pierce, C. S. Hardy, W. H. Anderson, E. L. Anderson, Charles S. Hook, North Howard street; Hon. N. Cadwallader, William Harris, Pearl street; W. K. Smith, E. H. Turpen, Columbia street; J. D. Smith, South Columbia street; Gov. I. P. Gray, Oak street, and many others. Robert B. McKee and Charles T. Tritt are now (June, 1882) erecting fine residences on North Howard.

A very large amount of business is done in Union City for the population of the place. The town is especially noted for the extent of its trade in lumber and wood-work in general, in dry goods and clothing, etc., and in eggs, poultry and butter. In its lumber trade, it surpasses every interior town in Indiana; in the last point, very few towns in the Nation can equal it, while its dry goods stores, specially those of Messrs. Bowers and Kirschbaum, do an immense business. There are in the town (Indiana and Ohio) twelve or more establishments dealing in lumber and wood in various ways: Peter Kuntz all kinds—saw-mill, planes, door, sash, etc., 200 machines, with building, fixtures and general hardware. He handled in 1879 2,800 car loads of lumber, much of his trade being wholesale. Hundreds of car loads annually are sent by him directly from the great lumber centers to their various destinations. His trade embraces the whole Mississippi Valley from Northern Michigan to the forest near the Gulf of Mexico. He employs fifty to sixty hands, and owns machinery enough to carry on his extensive works..

Witham & Anderson also have an extensive and flourishing lumber and hardware establishment, with abundant machinery for preparing lumber in general. They employ thirty or forty hands, and carry on a prosperous and increasing business.

Samuel L. Carter has a saw-mill and turning machinery, etc., handling many thousand feet of hard lumber. He employs about twenty hands, and does a large business (Ohio side).

J. T. Hartzell has had a saw mill and turning establishment, wagon factory, etc., and he also has dealt extensively in hard wood lumber chiefly (Ohio side). Besides this, he has sold tin, stoves and hardware, sewing machines, pumps, wagons, carriages, lightning rods, agricultural implements, machinery, etc. (Indiana side). During 1881, he removed much of his business to Greenville, Ohio. In the spring of 1882, he sold out his tinware and stoves and closed out his hardware.

Wiggim & Sons have a stave factory, employing many hands (Ohio side).

Hook Bros. have a tub and pail factory, employing thirty hands (Ohio side).

John Koons has a furniture factory, employing several hands (Ohio side).

Ross & Prior have a carriage-factory, employing ten hands, and turning out a large amount of excellent work.

Lambert & Son have a turning establishment, doing all kinds of turning work for the wholesale market (Ohio side).

There are yet two other lumber firms, dealing chiefly in hard-wood lumber and walnut and poplar, the home product of the region. One lately formed, Jones, Ebbert & Benner, handles a very large amount of hard wood lumber gathered from the region. Fisher deals principally in hickory. There are also two other factories in town. In these establishments a very large aggregate of business is transacted in wood and lumber. All together they handle many thousand dollars' worth and millions on millions of feet of lumber and wood in all their forms—house-furnishing, wagons, neck-yokes, single trees, tongues, spokes, thills, etc., etc. Some years ago, much lumber in the shape of whole logs was shipped directly to Europe.

The whole lumber and wood trade of Union City gives employment to several hundred men. As a single specimen we append the following statement:

Number of logs brought to Union City during the winter of 1880-81 up to February 10—J. W. Lambert, 750; S. L. Carter, 2,000; John Koons, 150; Peter Kuntz, 8,400; Jones, Benner & Co., 6,000; J. H Snooks, 200; A. B. Fisher, 700; J. R. Jackson, 140; J. T. Hartzell, 6,000; total, 24,340. Many of the logs were very large. At an average of 300 feet for each log the total amount will be 7,302,000 feet.

Mr. Lambert has bought besides 120,000 butts. Hook & Co. have purchased large amounts of tub and pail timber. Wiggim & Co. have bought stave timber. All together the lumber and wood trade is very great.

Mr. John Glunt brought to Union City a single log containing 1,500 feet of lumber—the king of the market. Solomon Hartman from four ash trees cut from one acre of ground marketed logs enough to bring him $78, and he hauled elm logs enough in a single day to bring $4.50. The amount paid out by the log and timber dealers in this town during the winter of 1880-81 was very great. At an average of $1.25 per hundred, and it was probably more than that, the sum paid for logs alone would be over $90,000. The other timber bought in town from the farmers in the surrounding region will swell the amount to more than $100,000—a fine sum, the power of which will make itself felt in a quickened impulse to business of all kinds during the year to come.

The egg, butter and poultry business has grown in the hands of the energetic firms who carry it on to very large proportions. The two firms, Turpen & Harris and John S. Starbuck, employ jointly more than forty hands, and probably $1,000,000 per year. Their business extends over a large portion of the country. It is perfectly wonderful how a small town like Union City can command such a trade in lumber and wood and in the egg and poultry business as the men engaged therein have attained. This whole matter shows in a striking manner what activity and enterprise when wisely and skillfully directed can accomplish. Besides these chief industries of the place, there are others of profit and importance, which we cannot stop to describe at large. The business of Union City may be stated as follows: Two grist mills, one of which, D. H. Reeder (now Converse & Co.), proprietor, employs the patent process; has four run of buhrs, and a capacity of 100 barrels per day; two corn mills, turning out a large amount of meal and feed daily; three brick yards, making yearly many hundred thousand brick, and employing many hands; one tile factory, making 100,000 tile with fifteen hands; four grain buyers' handling yearly hundreds of thousands of bushels. One agricultural association, two agricultural implement houses, two artists, eleven attorneys, four bakeries, two banks, one band association, six barber shops, seven blacksmith shops, several boarding houses, one bookseller, three boot and shoe stores, three brick yards, five building and loan associations, two carriage factories, two cemeteries, two cigar factories, three clothing stores, two coal dealers, two cooper shops, two corn crackers, seven churches, three dentists, one dramatic association, nine draymen, seven dress-maker shops, three drug stores, three dry goods stores, 700 dwellings, three egg and poultry houses, one engine and hose company, one electric light company (closed), two express offices, one fair ground, one flax mill, two foundries, four furniture establishments, five grain-buyers, four gardeners, two grist mills, sixteen groceries, one gunsmith, one handle factory, three hardware stores, five harness shops, one heat fender company, five hotels, two insurance companies, two ice dealers, three jewelers, one junk shop (gone), two lime dealers, four livery stables, seven lodges, two loan brokers, eleven lumber dealers, two machine shops, two marble dealers, eight marriage dowry associations (dead), four meat markets, two milkmen, seven millinery stores, two nurseries, two newsmen, two organ dealers, two paint shops, two parks, two passenger depots, four peddlers and hucksters, two photographers, eighteen physicians, one pipe, flue and fire brick store, two plumbers, one post office, three printing offices, one public hall, five restaurants, four real estate agents, three railroads, several saloons (Ohio side), five saw-mills, four schoolhouses, two sewing machine establishments, eight shoe shops, one stave factory, one stone dealer, three stove stores, four tailor shops, one telephone exchange, two telegraph offices, one tile factory, three tin stores, two tobacconists, one tub and pail factory, three undertakers, two wagon-makers, one water works, several weavers, three wood dealers and three wool dealers. There is the usual complement of draymen, wagoners, masons, carpenters, sawyers, dress-makers, shoe-makers, plasterers, whitewashers and laborers of all kinds to supply the constant and occasional needs of so many people dwelling in the city and the region.

Wool dealers—Bowers & Bro., Kirschbaum & Co., Shaw, Downing and Reger.

BUSINESS—CONTINUED.

We give additional information as to various matters of interest in connection with the city in the succeeding article, in alphabetical order.

NOTE.—For churches, banks, insurance, clergymen, schools, attorneys, physicians, the press, etc., see "General Articles" under each head.

AMUSEMENTS.

For years traveling troupes of various kinds—musical, theatrical, etc.—have visited the town, receiving fair and sometimes strong patronage. During the winter of 1880–81, the opera hall was fitted up for a skating rink, and recreation of an active kind was furnished to such as desired it. Occasional concerts have been held, sometimes securing enthusiastic support.

Throughout the season of 1881–82, a greatly increased patronage has been afforded to performing companies of various sorts, the opera hall being occupied in this way during a large part of the winter.

BANKS.

[See under the head of miscellany.]

CARRIAGE-MAKING.

In the fall of 1881, a new company was organized with a capital of $10,000, for carriage-making, styled the Union City Carriage Company. The partners are James Starbuck, Pierre Gray and Charles G. Tritt, three active young business men, who have been brought up in Union City, and who have the disposition and the "grit" to prove in the homes of their childhood and amid the haunts of their youth that they have in them the stuff that men are made of. The firm is not yet under full headway, but they begin well, and in the spring of 1882 expect to have in their employment thirty-five hands. The enterprise will add one more to the establishments that have grown up in Union City to add to the activity and the wealth of the town. The work which they have completed and offered to the public finds ready and speedy sale, and the firm are encouraged to proceed with their praiseworthy enterprise.

CARRIAGE WORKS, G. W. ROSS.

[See biography of G. W. Ross.]

DENTISTRY.

Messrs. Cowdery & Lefevre are dentists of long standing in their profession. D. Cowdery has been a resident of Union City for many years, and Dr. Lefevre for a shorter time. We have no special biography of these gentlemen and no definite account of their business in the city and vicinity, but they are men of prominence in their profession, and command their full share of the patronage afforded to the department to which they are devoted. Dr. Cowdery has lately obtained authority to use "vitalized air" in the extraction of teeth and the performance of dental operations in general, which is said to be of great advantage in such matters.

ELECTRIC LIGHT AND MOTOR COMPANY, WOOLLEY & FISHER.

These works began their operations January, 1881, employing now fifteen hands, with the expectation of an enlargement of the force to fifty or even more. Mr. Woolley has great ingenuity as an inventor, and has devoted much of his thought to electric force and machinery for producing and applying it.

Mr. Woolley has furnished the genius and Mr. Fisher the money, and the two combined have expended $20,000 in the works in question. They expect to construct (and are now doing so) electric light apparatus, both for towns and large establishments and for general household use. The large lights are to be run by steam or other power; the smaller ones by an electric battery. It is also a part of the business of this firm to make electric motors for light work, such as to propel sewing machines, etc. These proprietors, in February, 1881, made an exhibition of an electric light on the occasion of a ball at the opera house in Union City, producing for eight hours a light equal to the power of 6,000 candles, or the full light of the sun, at a cost besides the running expenses, of 16 cents. Where the power is furnished by steam, as in factories, etc., the expense will be merely nominal. The things which they are making and expecting to be able to produce are solely the invention of Mr. Woolley, he having already taken out several important patents in this country, and his intention being, if he has not already done so, to secure patents in the leading countries of Europe, protecting these creations of his fertile brain.

The light which their generators produce is soft, equable and wonderfully clear and full, and they are confident that the light can be furnished by means of their generators at a cost of only one-third that of ordinary coal oil lamps. They have a small engine weighing only thirty-nine ounces with a capacity of 1,000 pounds per foot per minute, which is indeed a "little giant," and the most powerful machine of its size and weight in the world. Everything about their establishment shows neatness, orderliness and thorough mastery of business, and the financial partner is, as doubtless is also the other, a genteel, modest, unassuming, but intelligent and energetic gentleman, intent on business, and knowing full well how to manage and control it for purposes of use and profit.

July, 1882—Their business has not yet commanded the success for which the projectors supposed they had good reason to hope and to expect, and the lack of means seems likely to hamper their efforts. In fact, the establishment is now (September, 1882), closed, and their buildings have been sold to a new firm, established for carrying on a new and totally different business, viz., to the Heat Fender Company, lately formed in Union City.

EXPRESS OFFICE.

The United States Express office was established at the commencement of business on the railroads centering in the town. Some of the agents have been Robert Johnson, Charles Williamson, W. W. Vance, Henry Kitzelman, J. W. Gillies, W. W. Nivison and perhaps others. The last named is the present incumbent. He seems to be an energetic, faithful, reliable, accommodating public servant, conducting the business of the office on the true principle, that the duty of a public official is to render the utmost possible service to the community in the most pleasant and agreeable way. The express office is, in fact, a most wonderful advantage to the business public and to the people at large, and such officials as our worthy friend Nivison make us vividly realize that interesting fact.

The Merchants Union Express Company was established at Union City for a time, but that company went down.

The business of the express company at this point is very large. The local business is extensive, but the transfer is ten times as great. Five railroad tracks center here, and several hack and mail routes besides. Two of the three lines are among the most important routes in the United States. At present, sixteen express trains pass this office every twenty-four hours, carrying sixteen messengers in charge of the business of the company on these trains. It is an interesting fact that during the whole twenty-seven years of business not a cent of loss of any kind by robbing or otherwise has ever been suffered by the public at this office. Such a fact speaks volumes for the general faithfulness with which the great companies of the country perform their duties and discharge their obligations to the people whose servants they are.

There are several express companies in the United States, the chief of which are: Adams, Wells, Fargo & Co., American, United States. There are some others, but they are of limited extent.

The general business of the country is divided among the various companies by mutual arrangement, generally no two companies operate on the same road, though to this rule there are several exceptions.

The United States Express does business mostly as follows: Southern New York, Northwestern Pennsylvania, Northern Ohio, Southern Michigan, Northern Indiana and Illinois, Southern Wisconsin, parts of Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas.

The companies overlap over each other considerably as to territory, and no brief description can set the matter forth fully in detail. The express companies, as they have grown up within the last thirty or forty years, are in truth a grand public convenience, almost beyond conception. How the public could do without them is not easy to see.

FLAX MILL, J. L. FRANK.

This establishment was built in 1869 by Mr. Mathers for a bagging factory. It was operated thus for some four years, when the enterprise failed, and the bagging factory building was sold, and transformed into a grist mill. In 1876, Coddington & Bowen and the Withams revived the flax mill, running it one year, and Coddington & Bowen two years till the spring of 1880. At that time, John L. Frank purchased the works, and handled the business during the fall of 1880. If there were an abundant supply within reach, 1,500 tons of raw material could be manufactured. Only 570 tons, however, were obtained, which were worked up in about one hundred days. The flax straw is spread, rotted, stacked, and at length made into tow to be spun into bagging. Their market is at Lima, Ohio, Peru, Ind., St. Louis, Mo., and elsewhere. The price used to be $80 to $90 per ton of lint, but the free admission of jute from abroad lowers the price of flax material and that of all its products being possibly an advantage to the consumer, but otherwise to the manufacturer and the producer. The first year, about seven hundred tons were purchased and worked at from $6 to $8 per ton of straw. Last year (1880), the price of straw was $4.50 per ton; in 1881, $4. In 1882, Mr. Frank, the proprietor, offered $5 to $5.50 for good, clean, tramped straw, and a smaller price for machine thrashed, since tramping by horses greatly improved the material.

FOUNDRY.

Many years ago a foundry was established in Union City, Ohio, and carried on for some time by Alexander White. The works were discontinued, however, and for a considerable space of time Union City was without anything of the kind. But in 1874, the Smith brothers set up their business near the town, as described in the succeeding statement.

A new foundry was established in 1882, which is now in operation, of which we have not obtained a particular account, only that it is owned by Col Patchell, an active and worthy citizen of the town.

MACHINE SHOP, SMITH BROS.

Three brothers, William P., James and John Smith, came from Scotland, the former in 1866, and the two latter in 1872. William learned his business in Scotland, and the other two in this county. William carried on his business for three years at Providence, R. I. In 1874, the brothers set up their works at Union City, Ind., and their business and their success have been alike increasing, and with gratifying rapidity and certainty. At first they had hardly work for themselves; now they employ constantly eight hands, with the fair prospect of a still larger growth in the near future. Their business consists in the making and repairing of machinery in general. They construct steam engines, steam pumps and many other things. Their trade extends throughout several counties, to Urbana, Hamilton and elsewhere. They intend before long to establish a foundry, for which they have the building already prepared. The Smith brothers are, like most of the business men of Union City, active and energetic, putting their own hands to the wheel, and counting all the time for full men at the business which they control. In politics they are Republican.

William and James are married, the former with four and the latter with three children. They are still in the morning of life, and may enjoy the hope of many active and successful years in their vocation, a calling alike honorable to themselves and useful to their fellow-men.

Smith Bros., in the spring of 1882, established a grist mill at Harrisville, which seems to be doing good and acceptable work.

W. A. WILEY & CO., GRAIN DEALERS.

The warehouse now occupied by this firm was built in 1858 by D. J. Manzy & Burnett. It was sold to Wharton & Moore; then to W. & F. G. Wiggs, in 1868; then to Wiggs & Wiley in 1876, and to W. A. Wiley & Co. in 1878.

The partners were William A. Wiley and Simon Hendrick. The house is one of long standing, and has always borne a high reputation, and done a strong and healthy business. The present firm are fine, genial gentlemen, and good business men. Mr. Wiley is an efficient member of the Disciple Church, being chorister and Sunday School Superintendent, and Mr. Hendrick belongs to the Presbyterian Church, is a leading member and a Ruling Elder. They are both highly esteemed by their friends and the public. The partnership was ended in the fall of 1880 by the expiration of its term, but Mr. Wiley continues the business alone at the same place.

At the present time (February, 1882), Mr. Wiley is engaged in business in Chicago. His home, however, is still at Union City. Whether his employment there will be permanent time will reveal.

There are also several other grain buyers in Union City—C. W. Pierce, Messrs. Wellborn and Lambert & Son; some mention is made of them elsewhere.

Mr. Pierce and also Messrs. Wellborn have mills for manufacturing meal and chop feed, which work is done by them extensively.

George W. Wiggs, agent for Charles W. Cummings, grain exporter, Philadelphia. His agency at this place began in 1876, buying about five hundred thousand bushels the first year. Since that time, his purchases of wheat and corn have risen to an amount varying from 1,500,000 to 2,500,000 annually. Sometimes a quantity equal to 1,000 to 2,000 cars has been bought by him during a single month.

The orders and the purchase are made by telegraph, and the grain shipped direct to Philadelphia or New York. Union City seems very favorably located for a business of this sort, and Mr. Wiggs operates throughout the State of Indiana with great efficiency and signal success.

GRIST MILL—NEW PROCESS.

This mill was placed in a building which had been erected for a bagging factory in 1869 by Mathers, in connection with a flax mill. After running the works for some time, he failed, and the building was bought for a grist mill. Bowersox & Reeder placed in the building a new-process mill, about 1874, at a cost of about $15,000, and the establishment has been in operation ever since. It was in the hands of Bowersox & Reeder till October, 1878; then of Reeder & Co. till the winter of 1880-81, at which time the property came into the hands of Dr. Joel N. Converse, now of Chicago; and the mill is now operated by Harry Converse, under the firm name of Converse & Co. The mill contains three run of buhrs for wheat and one for corn, besides another run for the process of regrinding. The present capacity of the machinery is 350 bushels of wheat in twenty-four hours, with two run of buhrs.

The new process consists of machinery for the purifying and regrinding of the middlings. They pass through a kind of fanning mill that subjects them to an air blast, which cools and purifies by removing the woody fiber and the germ of the kernel, and after that the middlings pass to the special run and are reground, and the substance is then conveyed into the head of the bolt, and the flour thus obtained is the finest of the whole. There is also a bran duster, which consists of a cylinder with revolving brushes, which brushes the bran and takes every dust of flour therefrom, and the flour thus obtained is of an excellent quality. And the quantity saved, moreover, is considerable, since the makers propose to sell the proprietors a new bran duster, and to wait for payment until the amount saved thereby shall be equal in value to the price of the machine. The machinery in the mill is very excellent, and the results accomplished are of the highest order. New works have been added during the present year to the value of $1,500 or over, it being the determination of the enterprising proprietors to make all the appliances of the mill equal to the very best in the region.

GRIST MILL—UNION CITY, OHIO.

This mill was built before 1855 by McMillen, and owned by McMillen, Burnet & Stubbs, Burnet, Hayes & Stubbs, Cranor & Fisher, Rogers, Weimar, McFeely, the latter becoming its proprietor in 1879.

The mill contains four run of buhrs, three for wheat and one for corn, etc., and has a capacity of 100 barrels in twenty-four hours. The mill has for some time been doing but little, yet it is capable, under proper and efficient management, of good, thorough, reliable work.

A cooper shop is maintained in connection with the mill, for the supply of barrels for the use of the establishment to send its flour to market.

GROCERS.

There has been a good supply of these needful establishments from the beginning, and the number is now greater than ever, in fact, too great for detailed mention. The biographies of several of the principal citizens thus engaged will be found in their appropriate places, but for an account of the establishments themselves we have no room.

J. T. Hartzell, hardware, has for several years carried on an extensive and constantly increasing business. There seems to be hardly any limit to his activity and enterprise. He is at present a dealer in tin, stoves and hardware; has a turning factory; deals extensively in lumber; has a wagon shop; runs wagons for peddling, for pumps, for lightning rods, for sewing machines; he has lately bought the wood and timber on 100 acres, and is engaged in having the wood and timber removed from the land; owns a saw-mill for the manufacture of lumber, etc. He employs about forty hands. It is hard to tell what will spring up next under his omnipresent energy.

He has also started manufacturing at Greenville, Ohio. It has been said that he will remove entirely from Union City to Greenville, Ohio. Whether the rumor has any foundation cannot now be told. At this writing (August, 1882), Mr. Hartzell's business has been mostly transferred to the town above named, though he still holds his residence at Union City.

There are two other hardware establishments—that of Jaqua & Kuntz and that in connection with the lumber works of Witham, Anderson & Co., in charge of George Gregory. They are carried on chiefly for the sale of hardware for building purposes.

HEAT FENDER COMPANY.

During the summer of 1882, a new association, called the Heat Fender Company, was created in Union City for the purpose of manufacturing a newly patented invention for conveying away surplus heat from stoves used for heating purposes during the summer. The company has purchased the property formerly occupied by the Electric Light Company, on the south side of Pearl street, near the railroad tracks, and it is the intention and expectation to enter extensively upon the manufacture and sale of the article in question. A considerable capital has been invested with the hope and prospect of certain and abundant returns. The invention was patented August 13, 1882, by B. S. Hite, of Mexico, Mo. Three companies have been organized for the manufacture of the heat fender—at Mexico Mo., at Union City, Tenn., and at Union City, Ind. The company at Union City, Ind., was organized August 14, 1882; capital, $50,000; share, $100. Officers—John Butcher, President; A. G. Waymire, Vice President; Preston N. Woodbury, Secretary; A. B. Cooper, Treasurer; John S. Starburk General Manager; John Butcher, A. G. Waymire, Preston N. Woodbury, John S. Starbuck, John L. Reeves, Henry Retenour, Directors. The machinery will soon be on hand and ready for operation. A considerable force will soon be employed, and by another year it is expected that one hundred to one hundred and fifty hands will be engaged in the business of the establishment.

UNION CITY HOSE COMPANY NO. 1.

This company was formed December, 1873, the number being limited to thirty members, R. J. Clark being chosen Foreman.

In 1879, the number of members was increased to forty. The present Foreman is Jacob S. Bowers, who is also Chief of the Union City Fire Department. The company hold monthly meetings for business, and have an appropriate uniform, with suitable laws for the government of their conduct as members of the company. It is composed wholly of volunteers. The fine for non-attendance at regular meetings is 10 cents, and for absence at fires 50 cents. The signal for meeting is five taps of their bell. Meetings for drill are held at the call of the Foreman. They own two hose reels and 1,000 feet of hose. Alarms often test the promptness and speed of the firemen, and they answer with great alacrity to the call, but fortunately, few real and extensive fires have occurred in the city since the creation of the hose company.

In 1881, the hose company visited Sidney, Ohio, by invitation, on the 4th of July, and in 1882 the Sidney boys were entertained at this place. The entertainments on both days were liberal and generous.

HOTELS.

The Branham House was opened in 1856, and has been the leading hotel of the place ever since. Several other public houses have been kept, among which have been the Star House, the Butcher House, State Line House, etc. The Butcher House has been run by Messrs. Butcher, Doty, Barnes, Austin, Winslow and others.

The oldest hotel in town was built on the north side of Pearl street, opposite the post office. The building was erected in July, 1852, and was opened for travelers under the name of the Forest House.

Since that time it has passed through many hands, bearing now the appellation of the Malen House. The State Line House was built very early, and has been open as a hotel nearly or quite all the time since its first erection; for some years past under the control of William Orr. The Star House, now in the hands of Mr. Baker, and occupied as a boarding house, is said by the early settlers to have been the first frame building erected on the present site of Union City.

Solomon Young, Union City, Ohio, has been a resident of the vicinity for at least thirty years. He is said to have been the first butcher in the place. He has been a farmer and trader, latterly a grain buyer, and at present a dealer in ice. He constructed a pond in the fall of 1880, and during the succeeding winter stored there several hundred tons of ice, and now deals out the cooling substance through the summers of fearful heat, greatly to the comfort of the citizens of the town. He intends to bore down into the vast subterranean river which has already been tapped in various places, to utilize still further its valuable waters by filling therewith his enlarged ice pond. Great, indeed, is the ingenuity of man, and wonderful his forethought; and unnumerable are the methods and the contrivances by which grievances are removed and comforts are increased and multiplied, and one of the best of them all is this one of storing up the frozen products of the cold of winter to temper, the torrid heats of a burning summer. Long may the ice man flourish, and his tribe increase, till the luxury of ice in summer may be brought within the reach of all! Mr. Young has in the late fall of 1881 purchased the old Orr Building, in Union City, Ohio, one of the first erected in that town, and is now (December, 1881) engaged in repairing and improving the property and the premises for a more remunerative and successful use.

There is also another ice dealer in town besides Mr. Young, an account of whose business is not now at hand. Besides these, some establishments procure ice during the winter for their own summer supply. Great quantities of this precious solid are used in these days. The egg and butter and poultry men, the butchers, the grocers, etc., employ much ice to preserve their commodities at a proper temperature. Hotels and private families alike patronize the ice business on an extensive scale; in fact, the production of cold in hot weather is, in these latter days, a wonderful promoter of comfort; and, although ice can even now be supplied at a surprisingly low rate, let us fondly hope that the time is not very far in the future when ice may come to be not a luxury at the command only of the rich, but a necessary of life and within easy reach of the masses of the people.

PETER KUNTZ, LUMBER WORKS.

This establishment is large, and growing larger and more extensive every year. [For a statement in detail, see account previously given, as also biography of P. Kuntz.]

WITHAM, ANDERSON & CO.

The lumber yard on the ground now occupied by this firm was established by Samuel Carter in 1858. Afterward Carr & Co. operated there; now Witham & Anderson occupy the place. The business of that yard has grown with the place and region till the amount of lumber handled has come to be something wonderful. They deal in all kinds of lumber and house furniture, including hardware. The firm receive about seven hundred car loads of lumber yearly, or probably a larger quantity than that.

They have all needed machinery for working lumber—surfacing machines, matching machines, siding saw, wood-worker, cut-off saws, mortising machines, tenon machines, lathes, jig saws, molding machines, frizzers, etc., etc. They employ thirty to forty hands, and sell above $100,000 per year.

The average stock on hand, including real estate and fixtures, may be estimated at $50,000.

HARDWOOD LUMBER.

About 1875, Thomas Jones, of Union City established a lumber yard for handling the various hard native woods marketed in the region. After operating alone for one year, Simon Hedrick became his partner for two years. About January, 1880, a new firm was formed, consisting of Jones, Benner & Ebert, which exists at the present time. Their business has steadily increased till they have come to operate on an extensive scale. They buy logs, and procure their manufacture into lumber of various kinds at the different points of purchase and storage. They get lumber from Dawn, Ansonia, Boundary City, Greenville, Palestine, Winchester, Union City, Dunkirk, Redkey, Hartford City, Shideler, Muncie, Recovery, etc. At Recovery and Hartford City the firm maintain depots for original shipment, having at Recovery alone at this time 100,000 feet of lumber prepared for market.

Their shipments are wholly to New England and the Eastern sea board, consisting of ash, oak, walnut, wild cherry, etc. As a specimen of their work it may be stated that in twenty-four days, during the winter of 1880, the firm paid out $9,400 at their office in Union City, Ohio, alone for logs, which were sawed into lumber on the ground by a mill hired by them, and set up in the yard for the purpose. Within eighteen months past, the amount of lumber handled by them has been in equal in value to $100,000 to $120,000. The amount of advantage which accrues to the farmers and producers of the region by means of the enterprise and the capital of such energetic business men is almost beyond belief. A few years ago timber stood on the ground a burden and a nuisance, costing untold labor and toil to clear its bulk from the face of the land and make ready the soil to receive the precious seed for the hoped-for crop, with nothing to show for the labor expended but the ashes left upon the ground by the consumption of the log heaps burned in the clearings.

Now the value of the timber alone far exceeds that of the land itself. Even the elm and the buttonwood, utterly worthless heretofore either for fuel or for merchandise, have come to possess a large marketable value, and it is now not a very uncommon occurrence that two or three trees cut and hauled to market will bring money enough to purchase a full acre of the soil on which they stood, with all the timber growing thereupon. Thus it is that the "middlemen" immensely enhance the worth of articles of commerce, and not infrequently absolutely create a large and profitable value for commodities which otherwise would have possessed none at all.

LUMBER YARD, UNION CITY, OHIO.

Peter Kuntz, the veteran lumber dealer in Union City, and Rufus A. Wilson, his former partner in that business, have entered into a new partnership, and established a new lumber yard on the Ohio side, immediately east of the State line, which may, in time, taking into account the well-known and long-tried activity and business tact of the enterprising proprietors, become an important and extensive establishment.

MERCHANTS.

The number of stores in Union City from first to last has been somewhat large. Within a short time after the commencement of the town, six stores were in successful operation. We are unable to name the persons who have from time to time sold goods to the citizens of the aspiring town and the inhabitants of the surrounding region. In truth, the trade centering at this railroad point was for years comparatively large. Grain was wagoned from far north to Recovery, Portland, New Corydon, and the goods sold by Union City merchants found their way far and wide throughout the northern woods. And for many years the business men of the embryo city were opposed to the extension of the Dayton & Union Railroad northwardly to Portland, because it would deprive them of the wagon trade from that section. Of late years the two rival establishments owned by Messrs. Bowers and Kirschbaum seem to have absorbed all the others, except indeed a single one rejoicing in the ownership of J. T. Shaw, who has held his ground in spite of all the difficulties for seventeen or eighteen years, and who still maintains his hold upon the confidence of his customers of past years, and doubtless gains others also by means of reliable goods and fair dealing.

It is somewhat remarkable that in a town of some four thousand people only three dry goods stores can to-day be found. Two of them, however, are very extensive, and the other one commands a substantial patronage. Some account of each will be discovered in the biographies of their proprietors respectively.

EGG, BUTTER AND POULTRY HOUSE, TURPEN & HARRIS, PROPRIETORS.

Among the kinds of business created by the needs of modern civilization hardly any is more remarkable or more noteworthy than the one here described. And that so extensive an establishment as the one now under consideration should spring up and flourish in a town so small and comparatively obscure as Union City is a curious specimen of the freaks of business, or rather of the certainty with which a combination of capital and business skill will create facilities for business and command assured and abundant success.

Mr. Harris came here not very many years ago with slender means, working for W. S. Osborn on a salary. After becoming acquainted, he was offered one-fourth interest in the concern, which netted him $1,000 the first year. He went in with E. H. Turpen, a substantial grocer of the place. They borrowed some money and undertook the pork-packing business, and, the year being a fortunate one, they realized a considerable amount. They built their brick edifice for their grocery business, took Mr. Osborn's packing house on shares for a year, and then bought him out. This business has grown greatly in their hands, having increased from $75,000 a year to $500,000 annually. They have managed also two other establishments of the kind, one at Toledo, Ohio, and one at Goshen, and while carrying on these they are supposed to have handled more trade of this kind than any other firm in the United States. They now have only the establishment at Union City, and handle more business of this sort than any other firm in the State of Indiana. This firm was the first in the West to employ a refrigerator for purposes of preservation of their goods, and now they conduct that branch of the business on a very large scale. They pack each winter 425 tons of ice, and have a capacity of storage at once for 4,000 barrels of eggs, which capacity is often utilized to the utmost. They handle yearly 2,000,000 pounds of butter, two to three hundred thousand pounds of poultry and 15,000 barrels of eggs. They throw away of spoiled eggs sometimes 1,000 dozen in a single day during the busy season. The temperature of their packing apartments is maintained throughout the entire season at about thirty-eight, only six degrees above freezing point. This establishment is an illustrious example of the necessity and the public advantage of "middlemen," so bitterly decried by many in the community. Without something of the sort carried on by them, the egg and butter business would be, during the hot season, nearly a dead loss, since for private parties to preserve and market these commodities at such times would be nearly impossible.

They gather the products of the farmers through a region hundreds of miles in extent, giving a constant and reliable price, and buying the whole product of the region, no matter how great the amount nor how dull the general market may be. They make their purchases, put the articles into a marketable condition, and, holding till the glut ceases, forward at a proper time for a remunerative sale, thus making a good profit for themselves indeed, but paying to the farmers at home, moreover, more than they could possibly realize at the general markets. The value of their labors to the community is therefore immense, effecting a saving to the producers of an amount far greater than even the profits which by their skill and forethought they are enabled to realize for themselves. In fact the "middleman" business, so much decried and so little understood, is, on the whole, the source of nearly all the profit which accrues to any class.

For the producers to market their own commodities would be utterly impossible, except at a ruinous loss. But by means of the despised and condemned "middlemen" of all kinds, conveyors, transporters, wholesale and retail dealers, agents and what not, business, instead of being ruinous and impossible, becomes for the whole country and the universal world, and for producers as well as for "middlemen" a grand, glorious, triumphant success. This branch may at times, like every other department of activity, be over done, but if that ever occurrs the matter very soon rights itself and an equilibrium takes place. Turpen & Harris procure their merchandise over a great extent of territory, through portions of Indiana, Ohio and Illinois. By agents at the principal shipping points, on salaries or on commission, by local agents, by wagons traversing the country and in every practicable way they succeed in gathering almost incredible amounts of these products of the farm. So delicate, so frail, so perishable, which nevertheless come to be and solely through the enlightened skill by which their capital and labor are constantly controlled, the source of immense profit to the producers and to the country at large. They employ at Union City alone about thirty hands. The buildings in which their extensive business is carried on are not, indeed, as they do not need to be, showy and expensive, yet in those humble edifices is handled an immense and well nigh incredible amount of merchandise, the value of which is created almost wholly by the energy and skill with which they employ the means under their control in this important department of commerce. [For other packing houses, see John S. Starbuck.]

PARKS, ETC.

In the spring of 1880, James Moorman, of Winchester, donated a fine tract of ground nearly in the heart of the town for a city park, to be kept and used for that exclusive purpose.

Some rather remarkable incidents were connected with Moorman's Park. The property some years ago belonged to William P. Debolt, Esq. He mortgaged it with other property to secure the payment of money, became unable to pay and the mortgage was foreclosed and the lands sold by the Sheriff James Moorman bought the property. Mrs. Debolt refused absolutely to leave the premises. A long and bitter legal struggle arose. Mrs. Debolt was put off by the officers of the law, but she immediately returned, and for weeks in the heart of winter, amid frost and rain and snow, did that resolute woman persist in holding fast by lodging on the porch of the dwelling, which was locked and watched by Deputy Sheriffs to keep her from entering. James Moorman made her offers, but they were rejected with scorn. At length, weary with the struggle, he donated the lots to Union City, which the council accepted, much against the judgment of many of the citizens, since it seemed to them to be taking up a dispute without occasion. Mrs. Debolt was at last taken by the Sheriff to Winchester, by order of Judge Monks, to answer for contempt of court, but was let go under strict promise that she would surrender the fort. There has been no further trouble, and the siege of "Fort Debolt" is only a memory of the past. In the course of the struggle, some one who was in sympathy with the lady stopped the chimney-top and raised the cry of fire. The officers inside opened the doors in alarm. Mrs. Debolt rushed in in spite of attempted force to prevent her and gained possession, and kept it till taken to Winchester, as before stated.

Of the rights of the controversy the public generally were not perhaps fully informed. Mrs. Debolt claimed that she had never knowingly signed away her right to the property, and that in justice one-third was still hers, while the other party declared, certainly with a strong show of reason, that his title was complete, and that she had not even the shadow of a valid claim. The court was certainly on the side of Moorman, and made her to cease her attempts to hold possession of the property by severe threats of greater severity unless she obeyed its mandates; yet the public tranquillity was for a time seriously disturbed by the controversy, since many sided with the woman, and more thought it an unwise thing to adopt the contest against Mrs. Debolt. The matter soon quieted down, however, and little or nothing has been heard of it since. Mrs. Debolt, indeed, has undertaken at times to gather fruits from the trees upon the lots, and once at least, during the summer of 1881, she was arrested and thrown into the calaboose by the Town Marshal for trespassing thus upon the premises, contrary to the express and strict ordinance of the City Council concerning the property.

The whole case is a curious episode in the dull routine of city life, showing how perplexing are the instances of conflicting claims which arise in the course of business, and how much trouble a single resolute and persistent (not to say stubborn and obstinate) individual may cause to his neighbors and the community.

PARKS, FAIR GROUNDS, ETC.

Besides Moorman Park, which cannot be used for religious or political gatherings, there is a park chiefly covered with natural timber, containing many acres, and besides this the fair grounds. Both these inclosures are well suited for public assemblies or for private pleasure parties. Good platforms have been erected, excellent wells have been prepared and the shade is beautiful and abundant, and both locations are used in this way for picnics, conventions, rallies, celebrations, camp meetings, etc., etc.

PIKES.

The roads to Union City during the first years of its existence were horrible enough. In muddy times, they were simply awful. Pikes began to be built, however, and the good work has gone on until now nearly or quite every road leading into town has been made into a pike. The number extending outward from the city as a center are eight in number: 1, the North Pike to Winchester, ten miles; 2, the South Pike to Winchester, ten miles; 3, the South State Line Pike, six and one-fourth miles, connecting at the south end with a pike leading to Greenville, Ohio; 4, the pike to Hill Grove, leading to Greenville, eleven miles; 5, the Teegarden Pike, leading north and east (worn out); 6, the Salem Pike, leading northward nine miles to the line of Jay County; this road has a branch to New Pittsburg, also on the Jay County line; 7, the State line, leading north; 8, a pike leading southeast to Darlington, etc.

Some of these roads become badly cut up during the rain and frost of winter, but they do great good nevertheless. They are a vast improvement on the bottomless sea of mud that tried men's temper and their horses' pulling qualities as well in the days of "auld lang syne." A proper system of road work such as might easily be devised and perfected would vastly improve the common highways and make them all nearly equal to pikes with little additional expense. The system of road working now in vogue with slight modifications would answer every purpose. Much of the road work as now done is only a nuisance rather than an advantage. The gravel obtainable for the construction of pikes in this region is not always of the best quality, and the durability of the road bed is somewhat lessened thereby. Two new pikes, both of them of considerable advantage to the prosperity of Union City, are in process of construction during the summer of 1882. First, one leading from the Winchester & Deerfield Pike eastward through Saratoga to the toll gate northwest of Union City; second, one commencing at the Wayne County line, southeast of Spartansburg, and running directly north to the toll gate southwest of Union City. Both these roads are being made under the provisions of the free pike law in force in the State of Indiana. The first opens a large scope of fine farming country, and gives the citizens in that locality an excellent avenue of communication both east and west. The second is longer and still more important, reaching out through the extreme southern portions of the county, and affording to some of the oldest and richest portions of our territory a direct and substantial highway to the markets of Union City.

POST OFFICE.

The post office was established at the commencement of the town. It found temporary accommodations in various places. It was kept besides other locations at one time southwest corner Oak and Columbia; at another in a small building on Pearl street, now occupied by the Young Men's Christain Association, and still again in the Hardy Block, southeast corner Pearl and Columbia. Though for a long time migratory, it has found, it may be hoped, a fixed abode in the northwest corner of the Branham Block, on East Pearl street.

The Postmasters have been many, some of whom are here given, somewhat (possibly not quite) in order of their appointment: Messrs. Miller, J. E. Paxson, John Diehl, Rulon, Thomas Wiley, Richard Barrett, Valentine Thomson, Hedgepeth, J. R. Jackson, A. B. Cooper (present incumbent).

The office, from being at first very small and insignificant, has become a large and important one with a salary of $1,200 per year. There are in connection with it 664 boxes.

There are several side mails branching from this point as follows: 1, Spartansburg, Arby & Richmond Hack Line, daily, supplying Bartonia, Spartansburg, Arba and other places; 2 Union & Recovery Hack Route, supplying Castle, Allensville, Jordan, Salimony and Recovery.

It is also a money order office, doing a large amount of business in that line. The general income of the office amounts yearly to a large sum. The Postmasters of Union City have for many years, perhaps always, been noted for their kind and accommodating disposition, and especially does the present incumbent present a fine illustration of the principle that the business of a public servant is to subserve the interests of the public in his department of labor in every reasonable and practicable way.

Mr. Cooper, the present occupant of the office, after a service in the office as deputy and as principal during several years, received in 1880 a re-appointment and a commission for four years in accordance with a petition numerously signed by the residents of the vicinity asking for his continuance in the position.

Two chief national mail routes, those by the "Bee-Line" and the "Pan-Handle" Railways, meet and cross at Union City, as also the route from Cincinnati via Dayton, Ohio, comes to this point; besides, there are the hack routes previously mentioned.

PUBLIC HALLS, ETC.

There have been at different times various halls fitted up for public purposes. Among them have been the following: Paxson's Hall, Scanlan's Hall, Cranor's Hall, Kirschbaum's Hall, Fletcher's Hall, Opera Hall, Temperance Hall, Temperance Tabernacle. These halls have been opened at various times, generally about two having been in use simultaneously. There is now but one, viz., the Opera Hall, third floor, corner of Oak and Howard. The Temperance Tabernacle, erected for temperance meetings and for other general uses, has been sold and changed into a carriage warehouse.

RAILROADS.

Since Union City is perhaps the most important railroad center in Randolph County, it will not be thought amiss to connect the account of the various railroads extending in different directions through the county with our description of that town. There are indeed at present several railroad crossings—Winchester, Ridgeville, Lynn and Union City are now favored with the possession of that important advantage. The Richmond & Grand Rapids Railroad crosses in the county three other tracks, all three being eastward bound. At Lynn, it crosses the new road, the Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western (I., B. & W.). At Winchester, the same road (the Grand Rapids) crosses the Bee Line, and at Ridgeville the Pan Handle. But Union City is a grand center to all roads being the point of conjunction of the two great throughfares, perhaps the greatest and most extensive in the State or even in the country, the Bee Line and the Pan Handle, or, speaking more exactly and more technically, the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis and the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati & St. Louis, and being the point where the Dayton & Union Railroad, a direct line from Cincinnati and the south, joins the two great routes already referred to. While, therefore, at the other railroad crossings within the county a north and south road strikes an east and west road, at Union City the oldest north and south road in the region strikes both the great old and permanent trans-continental routes of travel and commerce. Hence the statements concerning the various railroads crossing the soil of Randolph will be given at this time and in conjunction with the history of Union City.

The track of the Union & Dayton Railroad was laid to the State line in Union City December 25, 1852. Some weeks elapsed, however, before the track was suitable for general traffic. One gentleman says that the first passenger train through from Dayton to Indianapolis passed over the road January 24, 1853. The east part of the Indianapolis & Bellefontaine Railroad was brought here, and the two parts were joined together, in perhaps July, 1853.

That part of the Pan Handle, now the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad, from Columbus to Union City, was completed in about 1856. The other part from Union City to Logansport was completed in about 1867. Two other roads were graded to reach this city, viz., the Louisville & ——— Railroad and the Portland Railroad, but as yet they are simply grades and nothing more.

As it is, five tracks converge at this point from so many different directions, furnishing sure and speedy connections with the whole country, and making Union City an important railroad center.

A vast amount of business, both local and transfer, is done at this place. The express office also does a very large business.

There is one extensive roundhouse belonging to the Bee-Line Railroad. The Pan Handle has a passenger and freight depot combined. The Bee Line and the Dayton & Union Railroads are united in management, and have a passenger and a freight depot used by both. Each passenger depot has a telegraph office; only the Bee Line does general business.

The Branham House is the grand railroad hotel of the town, established in 1856, and still owned and managed by Simeon Branham, Esq., in connection with one of his sons. It is an excellent hotel; its worthy proprietor is an upright, Christian gentleman, and his discreet and liberal management of the public house under his control has done much to give character abroad to our ambitious and enterprising little city.

The number of railroad employes in Union City is 150 or more. The business transacted by the different roads is almost beyond belief. Sixteen passenger trains and twenty-two freight trains arrive or depart or both from Union City every twenty-four hours as follows: D. &. W. R. R., passenger, four, freight, two; Pan Handle, passenger, six, freight, ten; Bee Line, passenger, six, freight, ten.

The freight trains are very large, and often run in sections, two and sometimes three sections in one train. Counting the sections as single trains, there are sometimes (including all the roads) fifty or more trains in a single day.

It is wonderful, and yet it is said to be the truth, that during almost thirty years of constant and ceaseless traffic not an injurious accident of any kind has ever happened at the grand railroad crossing at Columbia street by a collision at that point. It makes one think of the movements of the stars in their course, and of the "music of the spheres."

Several sad injuries resulting in death have indeed occurred in and near the town. It is reasonably thought, however, that in most of the cases and possibly in all the employes of the road have not been in fault. The railroad management is, in truth, an immense business, wonderful for its extent and its complications and for its endlessness of detail, and requires for its safe and successful handling a care, a skill, a patience and an attention close, persistent, uninterrupted both night and day, almost, one would think, beyond the power of man to accomplish; yet the work is done here and throughout the whole land with a perfection, a thoroughness and a comparative safety and freedom from casualty agreeable to contemplate and wonderful to behold. True, indeed, that, taken in the aggregate, many great and terrible casualties have taken place; yet, compared with the immense and inconceivable amount of traffic transacted upon the railways of the land, the natural and unavoidable liabilities to accidents of every conceivable sort, the comparative freedom from injury to life and limb is indeed wonderful, is little short of miraculous, and shows a power in the human mind to develop, regulate and control the forces of nature to the needs of the great family of man well nigh inconceivable. And all this business has grown up in the country and world within the last half century, and for the West most of the whole vast traffic, comprising scores of thousands of miles of track, tens of thousands of cars, thousands of huge locomotives, besides the towns, the depots, the engine works, the car works, the iron and steel factories and all and sundry the places and appliances for the carrying on of this incredible mass of human activity within thirty years. Great is commerce! Great has she always been, and greater still and ever greater, and daily and yearly more indescribably and inconceivably great in extent, in richness and in capability for the use and comfort of human kind.

DAYTON & UNION RAILROAD.

The Dayton & Union Railroad was the first road completed to Union City, December 25, 1852. Great activity was at that time shown in the construction of railroads. A track had been laid from Dayton to Greenville, and a route was projected and work done thereon from the latter point to Winchester, Ind., and the early completion of the track on that route was supposed to be a fixed fact. However, by the efforts of the Messrs. Smith, in behalf of their embryo town, Union City, the route was changed to that place. The track was laid to Union City December 25, 1852, and shortly afterward business began upon the road. For a time, the amount of traffic done upon that road was very large, but, as direct lines to the eastern seaboard developed their capacity for business, its importance as a throughfare of trade and travel grew less. Still, a large traffic is carried on over ths route, and the Dayton & Union line adds greatly to the businese facilities of the place and the region. It is said by railroad experts that it makes the best financial showing of any road in the United States, 42 per cent of its gross earnings being net profit.

Three trains daily each way pass over its track—two passenger and one freight train. During some eight years past, the management of the Dayton & Union Railroad has been in joint connection with the Bee Line and the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton (C., H. & D.) Railroads.

BEE-LINE RAILROAD—NOW C., C., C. & I.

The Bee Line from Indianapolis to Bellefontaine is the pioneer road of this region, having been projected in 1847 and completed in 1853, though the Dayton & Union Railroad was completed before the Bee Line. The charter was granted by the Legislature of Indiana during the winter of 1847–48. Work was begun upon the route in 1849, and the Indiana portion was joined to the Dayton & Union Railroad in January, 1853, and the Ohio portion was completed in the summer of 1853. At first the route from Indianapolis and Bellefontaine belonged to two companies. In 1859, a consolidation occurred, and in 1868 a further union took place, forming the Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati Railroad, under the name of the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis Railroad, or familiarly the Bee Line. It transacts an immense amount of business, general and local, the statistics in detail, of which, however, cannot readily be obtained. Its trains are three passenger trains each way daily and five regular freight trains, often increased to ten or even more than that, making a grand total of from sixteen to twenty or thirty or even more trains daily. Counting the five radiating tracks as separate roads and reckoning the trains running on each as being distinct from seventy to one hundred trains daily reach or leave this city as a grand center of railway traffic and travel. The contrast between the new and the old in this respect is amazing. Imagine for a moment the business now handled by means of 100 daily trains to and from a single point to be transacted by horse power! The thought itself is preposterous; to make it a reality would be utterly impracticable.

The company have a passenger depot, a commodious freight warehouse and an extensive roundhouse. They maintain also a telegraph office, operated both for the company's business and also for the general public. The agents have been these: R. A. Willson, S. C. Weddington, C. Williamson, Anthony Cost, O. E. Tiffany, George W. Kendrick, H. S. Watson, R. T. Johnson, J. Q. Van Winkle, F. E. Vestal, R. T. Johnson.

R. A. Willson says that he began the office work for all the roads in 1853. The repair shops of the company are at Brightwood, near Indianapolis.

The Bee Line have in Randolph County five stations—Union City, Harrisville, Winchester, Farmland and Morristown or Parker. And in the order of business they would be Union City, Winchester, Farmland, Morristown, Harrisville. The passenger depot and roundhouse are in Indiana; the freight house is in Ohio.

"Reminiscences of the Bee Line Railroad," given in substance by Thomas Neely, Esq., then and now of Muncie, Ind., in Delaware County History: Kingman Bros., Chicago; page thirty-nine: "I thought we ought to have a railroad connection, but did not know where. I carried round a paper, but excited no special interest. Dr. Anthony laughed at the idea, and called it foolishness. A meeting was called, a large crowd attended and speeches were made, but no one had any idea to what point the road should run. Some said, 'to the canal at Fort Wayne.' I said no, for that will freeze up. Various points were suggested, Indianapolis, Connorsville, Fort Wayne, Bellefontaine. The two latter places made special overtures, The question was decided in a novel way. At a meeting held in the woods where Union City now stands, after several speeches had been made from a box, the matter was put to vote. Bellefontaine was directed to take one side and all others the other side. Bellefontaine carried by two-thirds over all other points. Thus the Bee Line was born, O. H. Smith was made President, and the grand system of railroads for the great Northwest was begun." One track, indeed, then existed in the State, viz., from Indianapolis to Madison, on the Ohio River, but it was isolated and comparatively unimportant. But after the Bellefontaine had been extended to the lakes at Cleveland, the Great West began to wake to the mighty possibilities of continental travel and commerce.

PAN HANDLE RAILROAD—P., C. & ST. L.

That part of the system of railway called the Pan Handle road which was first completed to Union City was the track from Columbus to this point, which was put into operation about 1856. The next part was the road from Union City to Logansport. Both these divisions together amount to 197 miles. At the present time, in these days of consolidation of railways, it belongs to the system of roads owned by the Pennsylvania Railway. This immense corporation now controls about one-twelfth of all the roads in the United States. The track from Pittsburgh to St. Louis with connecting branches is entitled the P., C. & St. L. (Pittsburgh, Chicago & St. Louis) Railroad, and the Columbus & Logansport track is a part of the P., C. & St. L. road, being the second division of the C., C., C. & I. road, this second division extending from Bradford to Chicago.

The passenger house at Union City was erected in 1866 or 1867, since which time its agents at this point have been David H. Reeder, E. H. Judge, N. Hamlin and P. A. Taylor. Six passenger trains and ten freight trains run daily on its tracks. The freight trains are often double or even treble, making probably a number equal to twenty freight trains per day, or, in all twenty-six trains besides frequent excursion trains to different points at various times. The amount of business done upon this road, general and local, is thus seen to be immense—almost incredible. We have no data at hand for determining the gross income of the road, either in the whole or at this point. The company has a telegraph office in its depot, the business of which, however, is confined to the affairs of the company itself. The employes of the Pan Handle Road resident at Union City amount to a large number, though just how many it is not easy to tell. Though doing a very large business, yet, strange to say, it has no separate freight house, its necessities in that respect being supplied by a comparatively small room in one end of the passenger house. The agent for some years past has been P. A. Taylor, and the freight agent Mr. Etmire, who, though possessing some rather striking pecularities, is, nevertheless, an energetic and valuable public servant.

NOTE.—Some of the roads mentioned do not reach Union City.

RICHMOND & GRAND RAPIDS RAILROAD.

About 1869–70, a railroad was built through Randolph County north and south from Richmond into Michigan, via Winchester, Portland, Decatur and Fort Wayne. It passes through Washington, White River and Franklin Townships. The points in the county are Johnson's Station, Lynn, Rural, Winchester, Stone Station and Ridgeville. Considerable business is done upon the road, though by far less than upon the great east and west throughfares.

As it is now, all the townships have railroads but Green,

West River, Nettle Creek, Stony Creek and Greensfork. The railroad in progress through the southern part of the county will cross Nettle Creek, West River, Washington and Greensfork.

The projected road from Union City to Bluffton will cross Jackson, but Green and Stony Creek seem to be doomed to be without iron tracks across their surface.

UNION & BLUFFTON RAILROAD.

About 1855, a railroad was projected from Union to Portland, Jay County, and the track was mostly graded, but the road was not completed. About 1866, the project was revived, new stock was obtained, considerable work was done and it was thought the route would be opened for travel in a few months. The matter failed again, however, and it remains a failure to the present day. About the same time, a route was projected connecting Camden, Jay County, with Bluffton, Wells County, and after the grade was nearly completed the work was suspended for lack of funds, and the whole thing has lain in statu quo, lo these many years!

The proposal is now made to build a road from Bluffton to Union City, by way of Camden, Antioch, Boundary City and New Pittsburgh, uniting the two grades above mentioned. This road if built will be an excellent thing for the region traversed thereby, and especially for the towns through which it will pass, and will make an additional road for the thriving town at the terminus.

Aid to the amount of $100,000 is asked from the region through which it passes. Wayne and Jackson Townships, Randolph County, have voted their share; what the votes of the townships concerned in Jay County will do is yet to be told.

RAILROAD CONNECTING UNION AND CAMBRIDGE CITY.

Many years ago, another road also was chartered and much work laid out upon its track extending southwestwardly, making Cambridge City, Wayne County, a point in its route. Those were the days of mighty endeavor and costly failure. So, after getting to about the same point, the grading of the track, the funds were exhausted and the project stopped. Every now and then an attempt is made to revive the enterprise, but thus far without success. There has been perhaps more thought expended upon the northeastern extension of the route from Union City through Darke and Mercer Counties, Ohio, but still nothing has come of the talking and thinking, and probably the fact of the completion of the L., E. & W. road, via Recovery and Portland to Muncie, will injure the prospects of the route at the head of this article.

INDIANAPOLIS, BLOOMINGTON & WESTERN RAILROAD.

A railroad is in process of construction through the southern part of the county, making Lynn, Losantville and possibly other places to be points in its route. Work is progressing upon the track, and the present prospect seems fair for its completion.

Still the history of a thousand and one railroad enterprises in this land of ours forcibly reminds us that "Many a slip is between cup and lip," and teaches the disheartening fact that millions of expenditure lie useless and waste in half-built railroad tracks and routes cut through the woods; and that many a poor unfortunate town site has found itself stranded high on the barren shore of the land of failure.

If the two roads, the one from Bluffton to Union City and this one through the southern townships should both prove to be accomplished facts, every township in the county except Green and Stony Creek will be crossed by railroads, and furnished with convenient and accessible points of communication with the great outside world. Green also is not very far from several roads, but the prospect for a track over its soil or for a railroad town upon its surface is at the present time not encouraging

[July, 1882—The road herein spoken of has its track laid, and regular trains have commenced to make their runs. With its eastern and western connections, the Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western is expected to take its place at once among the great throughfares between the mighty East and the magnificent West.]

H. Wiggim, stave and heading factory, Union City, Ohio, formerly Wiggim & Son, but the son, Amos Wiggim, died in the fall of 1879. The factory is not now in operation, but it is expected to start again soon. When in full work the establishment will employ twenty-five to thirty hands. The timber is purchased principally from the region, brought in wagons. Their market is Dayton, Springfield, Xenia, Richmond, etc. The manufacturing process is quite curious. The wood is taken in large blocks and put into steam boxes, of which there are six, holding each three cords. The timber is cut into staves by a suitable machine and then the staves are piled in open sheds to dry. The drying requires three months. Heading is cut by another machine, which will turn out 10,000 pieces per day. The stave machine will cut from eighteen to twenty thousand staves per day.

Their machines are: For staves, equalizing saw and cutter and stave jointer; for heading, saw, planer and jointer and heading rounder.

STOVE STORES.

There are three of these establishments. The oldest is that of J. M. Shank, which has been in existence for some twenty-four years, having been begun in 1858. The next is that of William Kerr, opened in 1867, and the last belongs to the Shugars Brothers, who commenced their business in this line in the fall of 1881. All three of these establishments are thriving and prosperous, and the demand for goods and work of the sort furnished and performed by their proprietors appears to be constantly and largely on the increase.

TELEPHONE COMPANY.

The Citizens' Bell Telephone Company of Union City, Ind., was formed October 21, 1880, with a capital stock of $3,000, divided into thirty shares of $100 each. The officers are: W. K. Smith, President; William Harris, Vice President; George W. Wiggs, Secretary; E. M. Tansey, Auditor and Treasurer; Pierre Gray, General Manager. The above gentlemen with Charles W. Pierce form the Board of Directors.

The company went into operation with forty-nine subscribers, March 14, 1881, at $3 per month for one year. July 12, 1881, there were fifty-seven subscribers. The work of the company is in satisfactory condition, the subscribers being highly pleased with the convenience afforded by the telephone instrument.

TILE FACTORY.

See biography of J. H. Snooks, Union City, Ohio.

TUB AND PAIL FACTORY.

The establishment is owned and operated by the Hook Brothers. They originally set up their business in Cardington, Ohio, in 1869, and removed to Union City in 1877. At first the location of their works was on the Indiana side, near the Smith Bros. machine shop, in the west part of town. After two years the location of the business was changed to the Ohio side. Their investment in 1880 was about $10,000, and they employ twenty-five to thirty hands, buying their lumber in bolts, and making 10,000 tubs and pails a year. They conduct also a branch establishment at Versailles, Darke Co., Ohio, at which they manufacture rough lumber into staves and heading. They ship their tubs and pails extensively to Minnesota, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Iowa and elsewhere. The firm are intending soon to put in new machinery and thus to double their capacity for production. The business is prosperous, and promises well for the time to come.

TURNING FACTORY.

See biography of S. L. Carter, Union City.

J. T. HARTZELL, WAGON WORKS.

In 1879, Mr. Hartzell set up wagon works, and is doing considerable work in that branch of industry. He also carries on an extensive manufacturing at Greenville, Ohio, established in the winter of 1880–81. [See J. T. Hartzell, given elsewhere.]

WATER WORKS.

Some mention has already been made of the water works constructed by the authorities of Union City, Ind., at very great labor and expense. We give at this time some further information concerning them.

The well is twenty-five feet wide and twenty-three feet deep. The bottom of the well is at the gravel, the thickness of which is fifteen feet. Below this is six or eight feet of hardpan; then comes fifteen feet of quicksand, below that three feet gravel, still deeper about ten feet clay of a very fine quality, and below the clay quicksand again. How deep the quicksand is has not been determined. During 1881, efforts were made to obtain a greater supply of water. Two pipes have been inserted about eleven feet below the surface of the upper gravel, and the Superintendent is now (July, 1881), sinking a four inch pipe, having bored to the lower quicksand mentioned above.

The capacity of the well at the present time is about one hundred and eighty thousand gallons in twenty-four hours, and that amount has been taken a portion of the time during the present summer. The range of the operation of the works has been from 3,800 strokes of the pump to 9,400, at twenty gallons per stroke. Since January 1, 1882, to the afternoon of July 26, 1881, the number of strokes has been 517,423, averaging 2,500 strokes per day. The engine is self-regulating, standing at forty pounds pressure, which can, however, be increased if needful to eighty pounds. Nine thousand strokes a day are equal to 7,500 gallons an hour, or 125 gallons or about three barrels every minute, making 4,500 barrels per day. It is evident that two things must be done—the supply of water must be increased and the wasteful use must be prevented. At one time during the hot season in the month of July, 1881, if a fire had occurred a supply of water could have been maintained not over fifteen minutes, which is a state of affairs sufficiently alarming. The annual expenses of the works are about as follows:

The income from rent for the use of water for 1880 was about $2,700. The number of connections was about one hundred and seventy. The Bee-Line roundhouse used an immense quantity, paying $975 a year, which seems perhaps a small sum for so large a use as they make; yet the bargain is, nevertheless, not an unprofitable one for the city, since they use chiefly surplus water, i. e., after it has passed through the general system of pipes. In the fall and early winter of 1881, the water supply was extended far north along Howard and far west along Pearl street.

One would think that meters should be employed, so that each may pay in proportion to the quantity used, which is now far from being the case. The action of the steam works sustaining a continual head of water sufficient to fill all the pipes of the city is maintained without intermission. And in case of increased demand, such as the occurrence of a fire, a heavier pressure is at once produced by creating a greater head of steam. Thus far the strength of the engine has been abundantly equal to every need.

SAW-MILL.

Mr. Fisher, of the firm of Woolley & Fisher, has erected a saw-mill near the electric light and motor works, and has purchased during the winter of 1880–81 a large quantity of hickory timber, amounting to many thousand feet, which the mill is now working up into tongues, neck-yokes and similar things, according to the nature and capacity of the material. Mr. Fisher is already largely engaged in this branch of business, owning one saw-mill at Xenia, Ind., and renting two others in different places. He contemplates erecting a turning establishment to enable him to complete the working up of the material which passes through his saw-mill.

In 1879, Lambert Bros., wood-workers, established a spoke and hub factory in Union City, Ohio, and are doing a large business in that line. [See other account of Lambert & Son.]

BIOGRAPHIES.

We give below, biographical sketches of present or former residents of Union City. Some have already been furnished under the heads of attorneys, physicians, clergymen, church members, the "press," military history, etc.

W. L. ALEXANDER was born in Wayne County, Ind., in 1838. His father, William Alexander, came to Wayne County, Ind., from Burke County, N. C., in 1810, six years before Indiana became a State. He was the father of seventeen children, twelve of whom lived to be grown and were married, and seven are living now. He died in Wayne County July, 1856, aged eighty years three months and twenty days. In early days he was a Democrat, and a supporter of Jackson, but afterward became a Whig, voting for Gen. Harrison, and still later was a Free-Soiler. In religion, he was a Presbyterian of the strictest sort. In business, he was a farmer in easy circumstances, a quiet, peaceable, industrious, thriving, prosperous citizen. The son, William L., grew up on the farm, and at the age of twenty-three he enlisted in the military volunteer service, joining the Twenty-eighth Indiana Regiment, Company C, in September, 1861. He was chiefly on detached duty at headquarters, at Indianapolis, remaining in the service about eighteen months. He had married a wife before the war. His first wife was Caroline Baker; married January, 1859. They had two children, and she died in 1864. He married again in 1873, his second wife being Elcinda Keister. They have had three children. His second wife died in the spring of 1881, and his children being all dead but one, he was left thus well-nigh "alone in the world." After the war and the death of his first wife, he spent several years in traveling, being engaged in business in various ways. After that he engaged in farming near Union City till 1878, in which year he entered the grain business with John Price, and in 1881, in connection with Mr. Worth, purchased the establishment of C. W. Pierce, a dealer of high reputation and long standing in Union City. Mr. Alexander is a member of the United Brethren Church, and in political faith is a Republican. In the winter of 1881–82, he took his third wife, in the person of Mrs. Lucinda Wright, a widow lady of Union City, Ohio. He sold out his grain establishment in the spring of 1882, but is still a resident of the town, and has re-entered active business, this time as a livery keeper, having purchased the interest of Butterfield in the stable next north of the Worthington Corner.

EDMUND L. ANDERSON, dry goods merchant (son of Harrison Anderson), was born in Greensfork Township in 1844. He married Lydia P. Paxson June, 1865, and moved to Union City in 1873. He enlisted in the Seventh Indiana Cavalry, July, 1863, and was discharged January, 1865. They have had four children. He was for three years a farmer, five years he sold goods at Spartansburg, in the firm of Anderson & Hill, for three years, in the boot and shoe business at Union City, under the firm of Paxson & Anderson, and has been four years doing business alone in dry goods, clothing, hats and caps, boots and shoes, carpets, etc. Mr. Anderson was for fourteen years a Deacon in the Disciple Church, but some time ago, for reasons of his own, resigned the position. He has been an active temperance worker, and was a zealous church member. In 1879, he purchased Oak Grove, N. Howard, upon which he built an elegant residence. There are now standing upon the premises about three hundred trees of various kinds, from fifteen to twenty-five feet high, forming already a grateful shade, and promising in future a high degree of beauty and comfort. Mr. Anderson is still a young man (thirty-six years), but he has already achieved a flattering success, and may hope, through the Divine blessing, for many years of activity and usefulness. In the summer of 1880, he sold out his stock of goods, and spent some time in traveling through Nebraska, Dakota, Texas, etc. In February, 1881, Mr. Anderson purchased of Mr. G. Fowler his stock of groceries, and resumed business, this time as a grocer. In March, 1882, Mr. Anderson sold out his establishment to Stephen Ladd, long a resident of Union City, and later removed his business to Bloomington, Ill. He is at present spending time upon his farm in the vicinity of Spartansburg, having built and furnished there a fine residence.

WILLIAM ANDERSON, blacksmith, was born in New Jersey in 1827; came to Randolph County in 1841; learned the blacksmith trade in Greenville, Ohio, in 1845–48, and settled at Union City in 1852 (August), and carries on the same shop still. He married Esther Ann House in 1851. They have had seven children, all living. His establishment is the only one (so far as known), that has stood during the whole life of the town (1852–82). He began his shop in August, 1852, some five months before the first rail was laid to the town, and his faithful hammer has been going "rap rap" on the resounding anvil ever since, and the familiar, cheerful sound greets us still. He does little work now, his sons following the business in his stead. Mr. Anderson has hammered out a comfortable competence, and is reckoned one among the substantial citizens of the town.

WILLIAM H. ANDERSON, lumber dealer, was born near Bethel, Wayne Co., Ind.; was brought up a farmer, and became a clerk at Richmond, Ind.; after three years, coming to Union City. He began business as a grocer, with W. H. Swain, continuing for several years, then becoming a dealer in dry goods, still afterward being engaged in the Citizens' Bank, and now in the lumber and hardware business (under the style of Witham, Anderson & Co., which see). Their business is quite large and increasingly successful. Mr. Anderson has been for many years an active member of the Disciple Church of Union City, as also his worthy and exemplary wife, and he is Trustee and Elder in that society. Mr. Anderson is an upright and public-spirited citizen, and interested to promote the general welfare. In political connection, he is Republican. He enjoys a high and well deserved reputation for business talent and integrity, and reliability in general. He has erected for his residence a tasteful and commodious mansion on North Howard street, which for architectural beauty and chaste elegance cannot easily be surpassed. Mr. Anderson presents another instance among the class so common in our county, and throughout the entire land, of a youth born and reared upon a farm, trained to industry, economy and thrift.

CHARLES AVERY, late of Union City, came with his parents to Deerfield in an early day. He was a young man and boarded with Edward Edger. He married first a Miss Deem, and afterward her sister. He sold goods at Deerfield, then at Winchester, and afterward at Union City. From Union City he removed to Marion, Grant Co., Ind., and afterward to Lower California, where he now resides, so far as known. Mr. Anderson was an active business man, being for a considerable time in partnership with W. B. Pierce, under the firm name of Pierce & Avery, carrying on a general produce business, including butter, eggs and poultry. In Winchester, Mr. Avery was connected with Ernestus Putman, formerly of that town.

ADOLPHUS BARNES was born in North Carolina in 1828, and came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1829; to Randolph County in 1830 and to Spartansburg in 1835. That town was then very new. He resided there till 1878 (forty-three years), and then moved to Union City, at which he now resides. He married, in 1844, Eliza J. Bates, daughter of John Bates, near Tampico, Ohio. Mr. Bates was killed by the falling of a tree in his clearing a year or two before his daughter's marriage. They have had seven children, six now living. Two are at home and four are married—two in Union City, one at Spartansburg and one at Winchester. Their names are Margaret (Custer Dubois), three children; John A. Barnes, clerk, Kirschbaum, two children; Elizabeth (Campbell), Spartansburg, three children; Mary M., (Leavell), Winchester, two children. Richard A. Leavell was Clerk of the Circuit Court for Randolph County one term. Mr. Barnes and his wife and some of his children are worthy members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has been a hotel-keeper and a merchant for twenty to twenty-five years. In Union City, he has been Clerk, Deputy Assessor, Delinquent Tax Collector, etc.

A. J. S. BOWERS, merchant, was born in 1841, in Philadelphia, of German parents. At the age of seventeen, he went to Pontotoc, Miss. (1858), as clerk for three years; returned to Philadelphia, and, in 1862 (at twenty-one years), he came to Union City, setting up as a clothing dealer and merchant tailor. The firm was at first Meyer & Bowers; then A. J. S. Bowers (till 1880); now Bowers & Bro. Mr. Bowers was married, in 1870, to Abigail Lewisson, of Philadelphia, and they have three children. Mr. Bowers' firm now conduct a general business—dry goods, clothing, hats, carpets, etc., etc. They have perhaps the finest and most splendid business block in the city, and claim they do a business second to none in the county. They have indeed a wonderfully prosperous establishment. Over the entrance of the cashier's inclosure is the motto, "No mortal can command success, but our purpose is to deserve it," and they do. By activity, energy, unfailing courtesy, low and uniform prices, a skillful adaptation in stock to the multiplied and ever varying wants of their numerous and ever increasing host of customers, coupled of course with a high degree of business shrewdness, Mr. Bowers has succeeded, not alone in "deserving," but also in "commanding" a triumphant mercantile success. For many years the firm occupied a building northeast corner Columbia and Pearl, but in 1875 he erected his present superb business block, corner Columbia and Oak, at which palatial quarters the firm receive their delighted patrons. Employment is furnished by them to about thirty-five hands, and their sales for 1879 were about $100,000, which amount they very largely exceeded in 1882. Messrs. Bowers & Kirschbaum are both of them of Jewish parentage and profession, but, by their honorable dealing, they have established a high reputation for integrity, and have done much to soften down and even to remove the prejudice which used so largely to prevail against that worthy and useful portion of our citizens. The Jews are, in fact, as a class, active, thriving, energetic, economical and, in many respects, especially valuable members of the body politic. And it is a pleasant spectacle to witness the dying out of "race animosities," and the gentle, harmonious blending of all classes of our people into one vast, grand, triumphant American nation. Mr. Bowers, on account of failing health, sold out to Coons Bros., of Philadelphia, December, 1882, and is himself about to remove thither.

JOHN BUTCHER was born in Gallia County, Ohio, in 1840, being one of seven children. His father moved to Jay County, Ind., in 1851, and, after living there about thirteen years, returned to Gallia County, Ohio, in 1864. J. B. married, in 1859, Susanna Constable, in Jackson Township, Randolph County, on the Mississinewa River. He attended school in boyhood at Lotz's Schoolhouse, a log building "all of the olden time," having the privileges also, a rare one for those times, of a select school at North Salem, taught by Jonas Chandler, an excellent teacher of that day, who emigrated to Minnesota, and was drowned by accident in that country. Mr. Butcher came to Randolph County in 1865, spending one year as a grocer. He moved then to Missouri, teaching four years, keeping hotel one year and being a grocer four years. Returning to Union City in 1875, he became traveling salesman for Hommowun & Meredith's tobacco factory one year; kept grocery two years, and has been life insurance agent three years, being now general manager of the Pioneer Mutual Life Insurance Association, formed at Union City in 1880. Mr. Butcher has had three children, one of whom is dead, and one of whom is the wife of George W. Patchel, of the Times. Mr. Butcher has been for twenty-one years a church member, joining at first the Christians (New Lights), and six years ago the Methodist Episcopal Church at Union City. He has been Steward for three years. In politics, he is a Republican. He belongs to A., F. & A. M., both the blue lodge and the chapter. Mr. Butcher is a gentleman of character and standing, respected by his fellow-citizens, and a substantial member of the community.

NATHAN CADWALLADER, Banker.

Nathan Cadwallader, banker, was born in Warren County, Ohio, in 1826. His father moved to Greensfork, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1833. He was an active, thriving man, but he died in 1840. Nathan was the only boy, and but fourteen years old. By the "turn of times" and the worthlessness of "sale notes" the family became somewhat poor. Nathan's boyish management was none of the best. They had one old bay mare, and no way to get any more or to get much else. He "gouged along" after a "fashion," borrowed a horse sometimes, etc. He did most of the work that was done, though his sisters helped what they could in loading, cleaning grain, etc. They cleaned grain by "flapping" it on a sheet, and had to haul everything on a sled. A wagon was a luxury not to be thought of. Two brothers, Thomas and Abner (his father), came together, and settled west of Arba. Uncle Thomas is living yet, eighty-five years old, and his wife is over eighty. [He died a few months ago.]

A. C. married Mary Thomas in about the year 1825. She died in 1868. They had five children—Nathan, Vashti (Williams), Janet Gray Heitzman (widow), Sarepta (Chenoweth), Rachel (Bowen)—all living. N. C. attended school at Winchester Seminary, under Prof. Cole, twelve weeks. To show the primitive simplicity of those times, it may not be amiss to state that when Prof. Cole advised his aspiring country lads to invest in a box of blacking and a brush and to try their qualities, Nathan obediently procured the articles, but was utterly at a non plus, because he had no knowledge of the modus operandi, never having seen an application of the stuff. He probably has learned how by this time. He taught school four terms; was clerk for Needham, Mauzy & Co.; bought out Mauzy and sold goods at Spartansburg; bought out Needham and sold at Newport three or four years; was partner with Raiford Wiggs at Union City; went to Cincinnati, in the firm of Gray, Cadwallader & Wiggs, as wholesale grocers; returned to Union City, and, with Col. I. P. Gray, established the Citizens' Bank in 1865. This was re-organized (same name), under Indiana law, in 1873, and he was made President. Mr. C. was State Senator in 1876 and in 1880. He has been twice married, first to Elizabeth Celinda Mauzy, then to Sarah Griffis (1854). He has three children. His present wife is a daughter of James Griffis, so long proprietor of the Griffis farm, on the Greenville State road. Mr. C., though poor when a boy, has, through his well-directed efforts, aided by a succession of fortunate circumstances, acquired a handsome fortune, and it will ever be a consolation to his filial heart that he had the unspeakable happiness to minister to the wants of his aged mother, and to smooth by the utmost kindness in his power her pathway to the tomb. She was a gentle, affectionate, pious Quaker, eminently religious and a beautiful and shining example of the loveliness of the Christian graces in their power over human life. It may be well to say that in his religious feelings and opinions, Mr. C. inclines to those of his revered and sainted mother. She had been for many years an invalid, and her husband, kind, gentle, loving as he was during his life, would help his wife in every way possible, as by doing out the washing while his horses were eating their dinner, etc. She lived to be aged, and died not very long ago; in the fullness of years and ripe for the golden harvest of eternal life.

MRS. MARY E. CARTER, Bradford, is the daughter of Hon. Jeremiah and Mrs. Cynthia Dye Smith, of Winchester, and the sister of William K. and John Dye Smith, Esqs., prominent residents of Union City, Randolph Co., Ind. She was born at Winchester, Ind., in 1842, and was educated in the schools of that town, with perhaps a single term at Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis. In about 1866, she was married to Frank B. Carter, a member of the Carter family, so long famous in the history of that town. They have had two children, only one of whom is now living. Their residence was at Winchester till about 1874, at which time a removal was made to Bradford, Ohio, where she still resides. She has a comfortable estate, inherited from her distinguished father, the proceeds of which affords her a competent and abundant income.

ROBERT J. CLARK, baker, was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1837; came to Springfield, Ohio, in 1847. He joined the Fifteenth Ohio Cavalry in 1861, and was discharged in the winter of 1864–65, having served more than three years and six months. His regiment was under Gen. Lew Wallace at Shiloh; under Gen. Kilpatrick at Corinth; in Straight's raid toward Macon, Ga.; under Gen. McPherson at Resaca, being one of his body guard when he was killed; went up to Knoxville with Sherman after Longstreet; went back to Chattanooga after the capture of Atlanta, and was discharged some months afterward. He lived two years in Xenia, Ohio, and in 1867 came to Union City. December, 1865, he married Anna J. Hall, and they have three children. He is a baker and confectioner. When he came to Union City, he was worth just $60. He has built up a thriving, prosperous and successful business, employing now a capital of $3,000, and five hands besides his own family. Mr. C. belongs to the Presbyterian Church, is a Republican in politics, and enjoys fully the confidence of his fellow-townsmen and of the community.

REV. THOMAS COLCLAZER was born in Washington City in 1811, and came to Coshocton County, Ohio, in 1827. In 1838, he married Hannah Johnson, but they had no children. From his early boyhood till he threw down his hammer and took up the Gospel trumpet, he was a blacksmith. He was converted to Christ at a camp-meeting on Dowdy's Fork, in the north part of Coshocton County, Ohio, in 1829, under the preaching of the sainted Bigelow. Shortly afterward, in 1830, he was licensed as an exhorter; in 1840, as a preacher, and in 1851 he began to "ride circuit," his first work of this kind being at Deerfield and vicinity in 1851 and 1852. It thus came to pass that he was the earliest preacher at Union City, when it first began to be. His fields of labor in later years were Middletown, Henry County; Perkinsville, below Anderson; Bethlehem, sixteen miles east of Indianapolis; Alexandria, Philadelphia (west of Greenfield) and elsewhere. He died suddenly, in 1865, at Union City. Coming to the house of Bro. S. L. Carter, he was taken ill on Monday morning at 11 o'clock, and on Tuesday at 5 A. M. he breathed his last. His worthy widow still resides at Union City, Ohio, commanding the esteem of all who know her.

A. B. COOPER was born at Ripley, Jackson Co., W. Va., in 1840. His mother dying when he was an infant, he was brought up by his grandfather. At twenty years of age, he became clerk in the Pomeroy Coal Company's store, and continued one year. En isting in the service of the United States August 11, 1861, after a somewhat unusual course of events, he became a member of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry. A company was raised for an independent cavalry regiment. On reaching Columbus the authorities declined to accept them unless they would sell their horses to the United States, which they declined to do. Sending them home by some of the company, twenty-seven of their number joining with two other similar squads, forming a company, went on to Philadelphia to join an independent regiment, understood to be in process of formation there. Having reached that city, it was discovered that this regiment could not be organized unless they would go into the service as a Pennsylvania regiment, which was finally done, and they became the Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry. The first eighteen months was a severe service in the Army of the James, which, however, we cannot now describe. In an expedition of fifteen days to South Anna Bridge, twelve miles east of Richmond, they picked up the rebel Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, who had been wounded, and was visiting in that region on furlough. In an engagement, thirty-five miles from Suffolk City, Va., on the Blackwater, they captured many rebels, as also the famous Rocket Battery, sent out from Pittsburgh, Penn., and captured previously by the confederates. The regiment was actively engaged, and was in various battles and skirmishes in many places. They were at the taking of Norfolk, the capture of Suffolk, the siege of Yorktown, the battle at the White House, on the Pamunkey River, and in front of Petersburg and Richmond. The affair at South Anna Bridge was by the Eleventh Pennsylvania alone. They burnt the bridge, captured 500 horses and mules, and so many stores that they had to be burned because there were too many for the regiment to take away with them. During the last eighteen months, Mr. Cooper was on detached duty at Newport News, Va., as clerk in the Commissary Department. He witnessed the fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac, as also the blowing up of the Congress and the sinking of the Cumberland. There was no fight on land, but the Union forces were at the time hemmed in by the rebels under McGruder, the Federal commander being Gen. Mansfield. After his discharge, September 1, 1864, at City Point, Va., he remained a year in the same position. He then went to Middleport, near Pomeroy, Ohio; attended the Pomeroy Academy for one year, and was employed as clerk in the store of the Pomeroy Coal & Salt Company during two years. In 1869, he came to Union City, and took a position in Avery & Starbuck's wholesale packing-house, being foreman in that establishment for three years. In 1874, he became assistant under Capt. Jackson in the post office at Union City. In 1876, he was appointed Postmaster upon the resignation of Capt. Jackson, and was re-appointed to the same position in 1880 by the unanimous recommendation of the citizens of the town. Mr. Cooper married Rosaline E. Hoffman, in 1868, in Clermont County, Ohio, and they have had three children, one of whom is dead. He is a worthy and active member of the M. E. Church in Union City, and a "true-blue" Republican. Mr. C. is a gentleman of good business habits, and possesses in a high degree, the esteem of those who know him.

SAMUEL J. FISHER

is a young man residing at Union City, Ind., possessing a fine talent for business and enjoying a rising reputation. He was b rn in Pittsburgh, Penn., August 12, 1853. His parents were George H. Fisher and Louisa C. (Collett) Fisher; his mother died about 1865, and his father married again, his second wife being Miss Mary A. Abrams, who still survives. Mr. G. H. Fisher has been the father of six children. S. J. F. resided with his parents at various places, Pittsburgh, Penn., Ironton, Ohio, Dayton, etc., his father having been engaged in the iron business during almost his entire life, being at present Superintendent of Clifton Iron Works at Clifton, W. Va. S. J. Fisher was taken by his parents to Ironton, Ohio, in 1856, when three years of age, residing there till 1874; he went thence to Dayton, afterward to Delaware, Ohio, and still again to Union City, Ind., settling in the latter place March 21, 1878. He attended school at Ironton, pursuing also a commercial course at Eastman's, at Poughkeepsie, and at Nelson's Commercial College, Cincinnati. At Dayton, he was clerk in a drug store. He spent also one season as clerk and part owner of the steamboat Willie J., running from Cincinnati to Vicksburg and other ports on the Mississippi and some of its branches. At Union City, his business has been that of a dealer in coal, lime, wood, etc. His marriage took place December 26, 1878, to Eliza R. Grebel, of Dayton, Ohio, and they have three children. Mr. Fisher is a Republican in politics, and is a member of F. & A. M.

H. S. FOSTER was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, in 1834; married Maggie M. Crabbs in 1871, and has had three children. He attended Lebanon Normal School, and has been a teacher twenty-four years—five years at Dayton, Ohio, five years at Union City, Ind., besides several other places. His wife died several years ago, and he is now (December, 1880) a widower. He is an Episcopal Methodist, a Republican, a member of the Y. M. C. A., an ardent supporter of the temperance cause, and in general of every good and useful work. Two or three years ago, he left the business of teaching and engaged in making and selling a patent ironing-board, of which business he seems to be making a gratifying success. Since the death of his wife, he has resided with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Crabbs, who is a resident of Union City, and an active and zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In the fall of 1881, he was married to his second wife, Miss Meck, daughter of Rev. H. J. Meck, of Bluffton, Ind. They reside in Union City, though much of his time is spent abroad in connection with his business.

JOHN L. FRANK, born 1835, in Pennsylvania; Darke County, Ohio, 1837; Piqua, Miami Co., Ohio, 1842. Enlisted in the Eleventh Ohio, three-months' service, 1861; Ninety-fourth Ohio, three-years service; served in that regiment two years, eleven months. Married Nancy Stevenson, of Greenville, Ohio, 1865; moved to Union City, Ind., 1866; five children. He is a brick-mason, and has worked on nearly all the brick edifices in Union City, among others Branham House, 1855, Cranor's hardware store, Smith Bros.' Block, W. K. Smith's residence, Paxson & Turpen's Block, Citizens' Bank, Anderson Building, Hartzell dwelling, Pierce dwelling, Lutheran parsonage, Methodist Episcopal (new) Church, Disciple Church, Bowers Block, Fletcher Block, Kuntz factory, Starbuck Block, Stewart Block, Esquire Jackson's dwelling, E. L. Anderson's former dwelling, Col. Gray's and Hon. Cadwallader's residences, Masslich Building, schoolhouses both sides State line, and many others. He has been a member of the City Council, and in 1880 purchased the flax factory. He is a Republican and a substantial citizen. He still owns and operates the flax-mill, conferring an advantage upon the region by furn shing a market for material which would otherwise prove nearly worthless.

JEFFERSON GIST was born in Kentucky in 1818. His father, Joseph Gist, came to Darke County, Ohio, in 1826. J. G. came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1835, and settled in Randolph County, east of Arba, in 1839. After hammering away at that location for eighteen years, he tried Illinois for two years, but returned to Bethel, Wayne County, near his former place of business, establishing himself there in 1860. After ten years of steady work in that quiet country village he concluded to try his fortunes in a somewhat larger place, and selected Union City, coming hither in 1870; since which the merry clatter of his hammer upon the ringing anvil has until lately been heard without cessation, "week in, week out," as the days and the years roll unceasingly by, like the flowing river's mighty current, rolling downward, ever downward. Mr. G. learned his trade of Samuel Van Nuys, Esq., a blacksmith, living north of Bethel, and has followed it from that day to this, more than forty years. He has been thrice married, taking wives as follows: First wife, 1838, Abigail Stewart, one child, died in 1839; second wife, 1841, Mary Tillson, three children, died in 1850; third wife, Anna Polly, daughter of William Polly, of Darke County, Ohio. Mr. Gist has been a member of the Disciple Church for forty-two years. In politics he was in early life a Democrat, then a Free-Soiler, then a Republican. He is a fine specimen of an honest, upright, hard-working mechanic, an honor to the race and a blessing to the land! Within a year past, he has ceased work upon the anvil, which is well, since almost half a century of ceaseless toil has given him a right to rest.

GEORGE GRAHS, tailor, was born in the Kingdom of Hanover, Germany, in 1830, being one of eight children. He emigrated to New York City in 1851, went to Chicago in the same year, to Cincinnati in 1852, and to Union City in 1856, residing here ever since. He married Anna Rosenbush in 1855, and they have had five children, four living. Henry, one of his sons, is clerk in the Commercial Bank of Union City, and the other is engaged with his father in merchant tailoring. He learned the tailoring business in his native village in Germany, and has followed it ever since. He set up with Mr. Thokey as a merchant tailor, continuing eight years, then selling out to A. J. S. Bowers; he worked at his trade for Bowers for fourteen years. In 1878, he began a separate business in connection with his son, in which they are still engaged. Mr. Grahs is an industrious and thrifty citizen. Six years ago (1876), he erected a fine brick residence on West Division street, which he now occupies. In politics, he has always been a Republican. In religion, he is a German Lutheran. He was for eight years a member of the Town Council, has been trustee of his church for more than twenty years, and was one of the building committee for the erection of the meeting-house and parsonage. He has been a member of the I. O. O. F. for thirty years, uniting with a German branch of that order in Cincinnati in 1852. Mr. Grahs has won a substantial reputation among his fellow-citizens by his unvarying uprightness and his unremitting industry, and stands to-day as one of the reliable members of the community. One of his sons, Henry Grahs, was in the spring of 1880 elected Treasurer of Union City, and in May, 1882, was chosen again without opposition for a second term.

OLIVER C. GORDON, boot and shoe dealer, was born in 1845, in Henry County, Ind., came to Arba, Ind., in 1846; his mother died when he was three months old, and his father when Oliver was eight years of age; he being brought up by his maternal aunt, Mrs. Jordan Fulghum; he enlisted in the Sixty-ninth Indiana Volunteers, Company E, in 1863, and was discharged at the close of the war. O. C. G. was clerk and merchant at Arba four years, mail carrier between Richmond and Union City one year, and bookseller in Union City five years, in the firms successively of Gordon & Co. and Gordon & Hill. He was elected Treasurer of Randolph County in 1876, and re-elected in 1878. In 1880, he bought a share in a boot and shoe firm with Robert B. McKee at Union City, and a few months afterward Mr. McKee sold his interest in the establishment to Ansel B. Thomas, so that the firm is now Gordon & Thomas. Mr. Gordon married Margaret Keever in 1866, and they have three children. He is a Republican, wide-awake and reliable, active and successful in business and of an estimable reputation. Mr. Gordon is at present erecting a convenient and tasteful dwelling on Plum street in Union City, and has come to be reckoned among the prominent citizens of the town.

A. EISENHOUR, harne-s-maker. Mr. Eisenhour has been a substantial citizen of this thriving town for some sixteen or seventeen years, having been engaged in the useful and honorable occupation of harness-making during all that time. He was born and raised in Darke County, Ohio. He has been married for many years, and his wife is living, but they have no children. Mr. Eisenhour is a quiet, industrious, enterprising gentleman, obeying carefully at least that important rule, called by some the Eleventh Commandment, "Mind your own business." Year in year out Mr. E. is found at his post, furnishing his goods to all who desire them. In August, 1882, he was badly hurt by handling a high-spirited and unruly horse, insomuch that his life was for a time despaired of, but he is at this time (September, 1882,) in a fair way to recover from the injury received by the accident.

JOHN FISHER

was born in North Carolina in 1792, near the old "Guilford Battle Ground." He left that State in 1816 on horseback, and rode alone (except two days' journey) all the way to Lebanon, Ohio; and (after five or six days spent in visiting friends there) to Wayne County, Ind., having been fifteen days on the road—a pretty quick trip compared with the speed often made by families and groups coming through on a "moving" expedition. He entered 160 acres in the winter of 1816–17, worked about, put up a cabin, was married to Jane Starbuck September 16, 1819, by Adam Boyd, the only Justice of the Peace in Wayne County at the time (so Mr. Fisher states). There were no Justices in New Garden Township till 1822 or 1823. Edward Starbuck and Solomon Thomas were the first, and they were elected both at once. Mr. F. and his wife began to keep "cabin" October 7, 1819; and they lived on that farm till January, 1866, more than forty-six years. They have been married nearly sixty-one years! [1880.] They came to Union City in 1866. Mr. F. is now in his eighty-eighth year, and his wife in her seventy-seventh. They are sprightly for their age, both living with their son-in-law, Capt. J. R. Jackson. John Fisher was an orphan boy at six years old. His father died in December, and his mother in September, 1798. He was raised by an older brother. His father had ten children, who all lived to be grown and have families. Jane Starbuck (his wife) was born in 1803 in Guilford County, N. C. She came with her father, Edward Starbuck, to Wayne County in 1817. She is one of eighteen children who were all living and married when the youngest was twenty-three years old! And now (1882), when the youngest is forty-four, twelve of the eighteen are living still! John and Jane Fisher have had sixteen children; eight lived to be grown and six are living yet. The eight grown were Daniel, born in 1821 in Champaign County, Ill., 400 acres of land, three children; Joseph, born in 1823 in California, and in 1850 died there; Edward, Vermillion County, Ill., 240 acres, seven children; Phebe (Baldwin, Bailey, Reed), Winchester, five children; Robert S. [see his account elsewhere]; Anna (Commons, Pierce), Union City, one child; John, Champaign County, Ill., eighty acres, one child; Lydia (Jackson), Union City, two children. John Fisher died at the residence of his son-in-law, Charles W. Pierce, in Union City, Ind., February 8, 1881, in his eighty-ninth year. He had enjoyed fine health for so old a man for years, and there seemed no apparent reason why he might not tarry among the living for years to come. But it was not to be. In one of the fearfully slippery times during the winter of 1880–81, in undertaking to go up the steps at the door of Mr. Pierce's dwelling, he slipped and fell and broke his thigh. He lingered for some weeks, and died as already stated. His work was done, and the hour for which he had been long waiting came at last. He had lived a gentle, quiet, Christian life, mostly after the manner of the Friends for almost a century; and the dear Lord gently led him into the "upper fold" at last. In his youth he joined the Methodists (1819), but afterward he united with the Friends; and in the "separation" he went with the "Anti-Slavery wing," and remained such in sentiment till his death. He was a man of sterling, Christian principle, and lived a steady, consistent life; always standing firmly on the side of truth and right as he viewed them. At the time of his death he was the oldest citizen of the town, greatly respected and beloved. He had voted at every Presidential election since Madison's second term, elected in 1812, till 1880, making in all eighteen times for the office of President of the United States. He voted for Madison and Monroe and Adams, against Jackson and Van Buren; for Harrison and Taylor, against Polk, Pierce, Buchanan; for Lincoln, Grant, Hayes and Garfield. The life of such a man is, as it were, a key to the history of the times. Though an orphan in his boyhood, and without property in his early manhood, it came to pass that, through the blessing of God upon industry, and frugality through a long and useful life, he was enabled to attain a competence, and spent his latter years in the enjoyment of abundance. All of his six surviving children were present to comfort his closing hours, and to follow his remains to their last earthly resting place in the Union City Cemetery. The funeral exercises were held at the house of C. W. Pierce, his son-in-law. They were conducted in an affecting and impressive manner by Rev. H. J. Meck, pastor of the M. E. Church, Union City, in the presence of a large company of children and relatives and friends. Father Fisher was one of a company of perhaps 100 old men who had voted at the election in 1840, when Gen. Harrison was chosen President, who were seated on the platform at the meeting held at the Tabernacle (outside of it) at Union City, in the campaign of 1880, and addressed by Gen. Benjamin Harrison, grandson of President Harrison, a prominent leader of the Republicans in Indiana, and at the Senatorial election in the winter of 1880–81, chosen Senator of the United States for the State of Indiana for six years ensuing. The meeting was large and enthusiastic, consisting of 3,000 or 4,000 people, gathering in from miles around in every direction, although the speech had been intended simply for Union City and the immediate vicinity. The names of some of the old gentle, men assembled on the platform at that interesting meeting were John Fisher-Robert Murphy, Simeon Branham, Samuel Arbaugh, Morrow, Harvey Julian, Ezra Coddington, Thomas Devor, William Iliff, Adolph Warren, John C. Taylor, Lewis McFarland, J. J. Alexander, Joseph Alexander, James Alexander, Thomas Clevinger, James Marquis, John Wharry, William Thom, Harrison Anderson, E. Tucker, Jacob Snell, William H. Swain, H. W. Darwin, John Commons, John S. Johnson, B. T. Wilkerson, S. M. Skinner, Robert Pogue, Jesse Paxson (disabled), William Macy, Uriah Ball, Jefferson Gist, David Ferguson, S. L. Carter, C. L. Carter, John Mitchell, John Kemble, William Parent, M. S. Willis, James Warren, and a large number of others not now remembered. This band of veterans assembled at Branham's Hotel, and, with William Isenhart and John Hartman as flag-bearers, escorted the orator of the meeting, Gen. Ben Harrison, to the platform, from which he delivered his address to a very large crowd. [See also Reminiscences of John Fisher and Jane Fisher.]

GEORGE GREGORY was born in Addison County, Vt., March 28, 1826, of Quaker parentage. His father died in 1830, and in 1833 both his grandfathers with all their grandchildren, emigrated to Ohio. His mother settled with her father's family in Woodstock, Champaign Co., Ohio, while the Gregorys went to Delaware County. In 1839, she moved to North Lewisburg, Ohio, to enjoy the Society of Friends. In 1847, G. G. married Mary V. Winder and settled as a farmer. In 1850, their eldest child was born, now the wife of Edwin M. Tansey, of Union City, and in 1851 his wife died. In 1852, he started West, settling in Webster County, Iowa, residing there till 1860, and marrying Elizabeth F. Davis. In Webster County, Iowa, he sold dry goods, and was also County Treasurer for two years (1856–58). In February, 1860, he set out for Pike's Peak, and engaged in mining. In March, 1861, he went to New Mexico, traveling over large portions of that territory, inhabited by Indians alone, and returning to Denver the last of June. On the 4th of July, 1861, the people at Denver refused even to hoist the Stars and Stripes, and he left in disgust, for he would not stay where the national flag was flouted in disgrace. He had always been a Democrat, voting in 1860 for Stephen A. Douglas, but since that time he has been a Republican. He came to Iowa, and in September, 1861, enlisted as a private in the Tenth Iowa Regiment. In about four months he was detailed into the Quartermaster's Department, and in January, 1862, was commissioned Second Lieutenant in Company K, Tenth Iowa Regiment. Their Colonel had been a General in the Hungarian Army. Mr. G. was at the battles of New Madrid, Mo., Tiptonville, Iuka and Corinth, and was with Gen. Grant up to the fall of Vicksburg, at Port Gibson, Raymond, Jackson and Champion Hills. At the latter place he was seriously hurt by the concussion of a shell, from the effects of which his hearing has ever since been seriously impaired. He did no further duty, remaining with the regiment till the fall of Vicksburg. He could see Gens. Grant and Pemberton as they sat under the shade of a tree on the evening of the 3d of July, arranging for the surrender. No cannon roared, no musketry rattled, a strange calm was upon the air that day after the constant roar of the previous forty days. Being disabled for duty, he resigned his commission August 31, 1863, and returned to his family in Ohio. In October he came to Union City, Ind., which has mostly been his residence to this time. From 1865 to 1870, he was salesman and clerk in Dukemineer & Maloy's hardware store. D. & M. sold to Cadwallader & Bowen in 1870; in 1872, Cadwallader sold to B. F. Coddington, Mr. G. remaining with the firm till 1873. In October he removed to Colorado, at the foot of the mountains. Returning in 1875, he took his old place till the firm sold out in 1878. In March, 1878, he entered a hardware store for Witham & Anderson, and is there yet. His second wife died January 30, 1881. He now resides with his son-in-law, Edwin M. Tansey, Cashier of the Citizens' Bank, and a most estimable and thoroughly reliable citizen and friend. Mr. G. is a substantial and worthy citizen, though not much inclined to public life, having been County Treasurer in Iowa, as stated above, as also Councilman of Union City two years, from 1865 to 1867. He is faithful in business, exemplary in his morals and a reliable member of the community.

CHARLES S. HARDY, druggist, born December 20, 1846, at Lebanon, Warren County, Ind.; educated in common and private schools; was bookkeeper in Cincinnati two years, came to Union City winter 1866–67, has been in the drug business, mostly alone, and his establishment is the oldest of that sort in town. He married, in 1872, Miss Eugenia Posey, of Richmond, Ind. They have two children. Miss Posey, before her marriage, had been for years a successful teacher in the public schools of Richmond, Union City, etc. Mr. Hardy was School Trustee one term, and, since 1877, has been Vice President of the Commercial Bank. He is a worthy and valuable citizen, and well deserves the reputation and success he has attained.

M. A. HARLAN is a gentleman of good standing and high promise. He was born in 1850 at Hollandsburg, Darke County, Ohio, being one of seven children, five of whom are living. Mr. H. was brought up, as the great majority of our active business men have been, on a farm. His education was obtained at the common schools, at Whitewater Academy (Hillsboro, Ind.), and by one term at Holbrook's Normal School, Lebanon, Ohio. He began active life as a teacher at the age of seventeen. Besides other places he was employed six years in the public schools of Union City, Ohio; and has been for the past three years in those of Union City, Ind. He has been teaching music for twelve years, completing his musical education at the Central Conservatory of Music, at Columbus, Ind., in 1880. His present positions are Teacher in Preparatory High School and Superintendent of Musical Instruction in the public schools of Union City, Ind. Mr. H. has belonged to the Christian (New Lights) denomination, and in politics is a Republican. He also is a member of the Knights of Pythias. In 1872, he came to Union City, Ind., and has been a resident there ever since. He was married in 1869 to Amanda Peden, of Darke County, Ohio, and they have had one child, and he is living. Mr. H. enjoys a rising reputation in his profession, being active, enterprising and reliable, sociable and genial withal, beloved alike by pupils and patrons, and esteemed by the community at large. December, 1882, his worthy companion and himself united with the M. E. Church, Union City, Ind.

WILLIAM HARRIS is one of the solid men of Union City, a man of sterling enterprise, who takes pride in his business, and is an honor to the city in which he resides. He was born in Ovid, Seneca Co., N. Y., in August, 1845, being the son of William Harris, a carriage-maker of that county, who died before his son William was born. William resided at Ovid till twenty years old, and in 1865 moved to Findlay, Hancock Co., Ohio. After clerking there for six months, he found his way to Union City, Ind. During three years he was in the employ of W. S. Osborn, egg and butter packer, having an "interest" in the establishment during the last year. In 1868, he entered the firm of Turpen & Harris, of which he has been a member ever since. In 1868, he married Anna E., daughter of Enos H. Turpen, and they have had six children, five of them living, all daughters. In political sentiment, he is a Democrat. He has been a member of the Board of Control of Union City, for four years, and Treasurer of the School Board for two years. Mr. H. is a man of enlightened business views and energetic temperament, having done much to advance the interests of the city, and is highly respected by his fellow-citizens. His career in the egg, butter and poultry business is a striking example of what may be done, even in a small interior town, by intelligent skill and faithful devotion to business. We give elsewhere a detailed account of the establishment of which he is the chief manager. Mr. Harris, from being a poor man without means or the apparent prospect thereof, has become, in the course of twelve or thirteen years, and solely by his active, enlightened and judicious enterprise, one of the solid men of the city. In the fall of 1880, he purchased the beautiful and commodious mansion erected and owned by Dr. Joel N. Converse, one of the pioneers and so long one of the chief men of Union City, at a cost, it is understood, of $15,000. He is still in the prime of life and health, and of business activity, and it is to be hoped that he may long be spared to his friends and to the community, that his activity may continue to be in the future, as it has already been in the past, a fountain of material good and financial blessing to himself and to the country.

E. J. HARSHMAN, Union City, Ohio, is a native of Randolph County, Ind.; he was born in Jackson Township, in 1842, the son of Reuben Harshman, an early settler, and one of nine children. He grew up a farmer's son, attending only the schools of the neighborhood. In 1862, he joined the Fifty-fourth Indiana Regiment at Indianapolis, and after the end of his term of service he was mustered out, December, 1863. After spending some time at Dayton, Chicago and at his father's home, he entered the saddler's shop of Eisenhour & Co., at Union City, and acquired that trade. After some years spent otherwise, he opened a shop for himself in 1871, and is still thus employed. He married Sally French, in 1871, and they have had three children, all living. In politics, he is a Democrat. Mr. H. is industrious and thriving, a quiet member of society, diligent in his business, and confided in by his friends and the public.

SIMON HEDRICK, grain dealer, born in Fairfield County, Ohio, 1836; taken to Mercer County, Ohio, in 1839; married Amy Vail, 1860; has had five children, and has resided in Union City, Ind., for many years; his education was gained at the common schools, at Liber College, and at Lebanon Normal School, Lebanon, Ohio; he taught school several years; he has also been an agent, carpenter, lumber dealer, was for three years a grain dealer, and has since been handling lumber. Mr. Hedrick has been a church member twenty-five years, and also for six years an Elder in the Presbyterian Church, Union City; he helped to organize the first Presbyterian Sunday school there, and was for ten years its Superintendent; he was Chorister also for several years. He is an ardent Republican, an efficient worker for temperance, an active member of the Y. M. C. A., and a strong helper in every good cause. Mr. H. in his early life was a teacher, engaging in that employment for many years in Mercer and Darke Counties, Ohio, and in Randolph County, Ind., spending several of those years in the schools of Union City, Ohio, and Indiana; his health proving unequal to the labor of continued teaching, he resumed his trade as a carpenter, taking up after a time the lumber-buying business. At length he entered the grain trade, as a partner with William A. Wiley, of Union City, for two years. At the expiration of the period, he commenced with Mr. Fowler, in the same occupation, but the building changing hands, having been purchased by R. Kirschbaum, Mr. Hedrick quit the grain trade. For some months he has been working insurance and other matters of agency, as also, more especially in the purchase and sale of lumber throughout the region. Mr. Hedrick and his estimable lady are excellent members of society, and they have a most lovely and interesting group of children, the eldest of whom, Miss Aurie Hedrick, was a graduate from the Union City High School, belonging to the class of 1880, since which time she has occupied a position as teacher in the public schools of the city.

ABRAM HOKE was born in Paradise, Penn., in 1818; came to Richland County, Ohio, in 1828, and removed to Union City, Ind., in 1853; he was married to Sarah Sennett in 1840; they have had six children, all living; he was for six years a hatter; in 1844, he became a carpenter, and has worked in that employment till lately; he has now taken up bee-raising; he is a Republican and a Methodist, though troubles in the church have caused him to withdraw from membership; his children are: John W., carpenter, married, two children, Union City; Jane A. (Humphries), four children; Martin T., carpenter, unmarried, resides at home; Samuel B., carpenter, married, three children, Iowa; Helen, single, tailoress, lives at home; Alice, young, resides at home. They seem to be a sensible, active, well-trained family, worthy, industrious and prosperous. Mr. Hoke was, in the spring of 1882, appointed by the Common Council of Union City, Ind., as Street Commissioner, and he has been for some months actively employed in the duties pertaining to that office.

SETH HOKE, jeweler, born in Pennsylvania, 1823; came to the West, 1838, to Jackson Township, Randolph Co., Ind., 1845, and to Union City, in 1852 (April): he was a carpenter till 1865, and since then has been selling jewelry; his son, Edward, was the first child (now living) born in Union City, November 17, 1852. Henry Debolt's child was born sooner, but that child is dead. S. H. was for nine months a soldier in the Thirty-eighth Indiana Volunteer Infantry—fall of 1864 to spring of 1865; he married Elizabeth Johnson, 1846. They have had nine children, seven living. Mr. Hoke is a steady, industrious, thriving citizen, and commands the respect of the community; he is one of the "pioneers," who came here in April, 1852, when the settlers were very few, and scarcely a house had been built in the town.

HOOK BROTHERS. Charles S. Hook was born in Montreal, Canada, 1846. William J. Hook was born as above in 1844. Both of them are of English descent. William married M. J. St. John, and has three children. Charles married Ella H. Maxwell, and has three children. They are partners in the tub and pail factory business, an account of which may be found elsewhere. They are intelligent and enterprising gentlemen, and are achieving, as they deserve, a thorough and permanent success. They are both active and enthusiastic Republicans. Charles and his wife belong to the Presbyterian Church of Union City, of which he has been chosen Deacon; he has been for some years a member of the City School Board, and he seems to be a careful, prudent and faithful official. Though the Hook Brothers are comparatively young, they have business capacity adequate to conduct an extensive and profitable concern, which we may fairly hope their Union City Tub and Pail Factory will more and more come to be as the years come and go. Though their works are in Ohio, they are both residents of Union City, Ind., having recently purchased fine dwellings on North Howard street, that street and that part of it being one of the most desirable in the entire city. Their father, aged but active, and a native of England, makes his home in his declining years with his son Charles.

JOSEPH R. JACKSON, born at Spartansburg, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1840. His parents were early settlers of the region and of that class so largely represented in the Old Burnt District, "North Carolina emigrants," coming from their youthful homes afar to get free from the curse and blight of slavery. His father died in 1850 at Spartansburg, of consumption. Since that time, Joseph has had to "paddle his own canoe;" until seventeen years old he worked on a farm, attending school winters; then taught school, going to Lebanon Normal School summers; while there the war broke out, and he enlisted in the Eighth Indiana, three months, and served in Virginia; taught school the next winter, and enlisted again in the Sixty-ninth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, being commissioned as First Lieutenant Company F. He was promoted Captain after the battle of "Chickasaw Bayou" for recapturing a section of artillery from the rebels, and was in all the initial engagements of the siege of Vicksburg, after which he served on staff duty or as a mounted scout in Texas, Louisiana, his experience in that line being wonderful and varied. Since the war, Capt. Jackson has resided in Union City, serving eight years as Postmaster under President Grant. Since that time he has been engaged as loan agent. Capt. Jackson was married to Miss Fisher, daughter of John and Jane Fisher. They have had two children. Captain Jackson is a man of fine qualities and of sterling principle as well, and deeply interested in all good and useful projects, and is highly and deservedly esteemed by his fellow-citizens. He is an active and enthusiastic Republican; he was a faithful and energetic public officer, and so far as his health will permit, is an active and enterprising man of affairs. His health has been for years very precarious though less so now than formerly. He spent much time at the Cleveland Water Cure, and by great care and prudence he has been able for some years past to attend to business.

ALLEN JAQUA & CO., hardware. Mr. Jaqua came to Union City some thirteen or fourteen years ago, as an attorney at law. Before long he entered the lumber business with Peter Kuntz, after that he engaged in hardware with the same firm. In 1880, a fine brick store was erected by the firm and their hardware store is now carried on by Mr. Jaqua in that new, commodious edifice. Mr. Jaqua formerly resided at Portland, and married his wife in Jay County; she being a Miss Lewis, a member of a prominet family in that region. Mr. Jaqua was in youth and early manhood a radical Abolitionist, and a participant in the gallant struggles for freedom in Kansas in the heroic days of that youthful member of the sisterhood of States, and, later, an active Republican; but since that time, perhaps in the Greeley campaign of 1872, he left the Republican ranks; and, during the latter years, he has been a prominent partisan of the Democratic faith. Mr. Jaqua has been a member of the Town Board of Trustees, Clerk of the Board, a member of the School Board, etc., showing that, even in the strongly Republican town of Union City, he has been honored by the generous confidence of his fellow-citizens.

THOMAS JONES is one of the active men of Union City, and belongs to the class so numerous in that thriving town whose indomitable energy and enlightened and persevering industry have turned that place, so lately a waste and desolate wilderness, into a thronged and crowded mart of business and commerce. In fact, the entire history of that wide-awake little city illustrates for the thousandth time the truth universally declared, and yet greatly overlooked and sometimes well-nigh forgotten, that capital, labor and skill, combined with economy, integrity and honor, lay the sure and solid foundations of lasting individual prosperity and success, as well as of wide spread and permanent public advantage, comfort and well being. Especially is the fact illustrated and the truth enforced that properly regulated credit, i. e., the labor and skill of one man, combined with the surplus capital of another, in other words, the labor of men with a lack of capital of their own joined to the capital of men who prefer not to labor, or, to state the doctrine in still a different way, the employment by the younger class who have energy and character, but who lack means, of the surplus capital possessed by their older fellow-citizens, produces results, great, beneficent, far-reaching; accomplishes benefits for the whole human race, and for every individual thereof, otherwise utterly and forever impossible. Thomas Jones was born in Miami County, Ohio, in 1841. When four years old, in 1845, he went with his parents to Delaware County, Ind., locating on the Mississinewa, twelve miles north of Muncie, a region, even at that late day, wild and vacant and covered with the vast unbroken woods. He belonged to one of those pioneer families, almost a host in itself, numbering fourteen children. In youth, he attended school a little, in the traditional log-cabin schoolhouse, with capacious fire-place, having no jambs but only back wall and a huge mouth above, with immense back logs lugged in by four and five of the largest scholars, and fire enough to roast an ox alive. In all he went to school perhaps six months, to Martin Reasoner a few days, to Mr. Butcher six weeks, and to a lady in the summer perhaps one month, and all the time in the spelling book. Next he went to a Mr. Wharton, a superior teacher, who took supreme delight in seeing his pupils learn. To him he went three full months, and beginning in the First Reader, went rapidly onward, gaining the Third Reader, reaching also the practice of writing and the study of arithmetic, accomplishing a partial knowledge of the "Simple Rules." Once more young Thomas attended school, this last time, when about fifteen years old, for two or three weeks to one John Lee, boldly attempting through that whole period the mysteries of the Fourth Reader, as also holding fast to writing and arithmetic. Thus fitfully and by spells did he attain to such a height of knowledge, and such was the foundation laid in his case for the intelligence needful in the pursuits of an active business life. Mr. Jones grew up in that neighborhood and began adult life as a farmer, marrying Kate Negley (sister of Hon. Charles Negley) in 1864. In 1866, he moved to Darke County, Ohio, locating within two miles of Union City. In 1868, he moved to the town, and took up carpentering and cabinet making: after two years thus spent, he became for three years foreman in Peter Kuntz's lumber yard. In 1876, he set up a hardwood lumber yard on the Ohio side himself. After a year alone, he took Simon Hedrick as a partner for two years, and, about January, 1880, he became a member of the firm of Jones, Benner & Ebert, which for two and a half years past [June, 1882] has been carrying on a large and prosperous business in their line. Mr. Jones is a member of the City Council (1880-82), and belongs to the I. O. O. F., and to the Union City Hose Company. He is in politics a Republican, and in religious connection a Disciple, having been a member for eleven years, and a Trustee of the congregation for five years. Though married for seventeen years, they have no children. But their household is not without the presence and the blessing of dear beloved ones. A brother of Mrs. Negley, dying with consumption at their own house, left to their affectionate care three children, the mother also having gone to the better land; and to guard and guide these objects of their love thus providentially left to their watch-care, has been for years the delight of their hearts. These children—Laura, seventeen years; Josephine, fourteen years, and Charles, thirteen years—still survive, to repay with the fullness of filial affection the wealth of love which has for years been lavished upon them.

PATRICK G. KENNEDY, grocer, was born in 1839, in County Kerry, Ireland; came to America in 1854, went to Sidney, and then to Piqua, Ohio, and to Union City, Ind., in 1858. He was married to Catharine J. Weize, in 1864. He had been, when a lad in Ireland, a clerk in a wholesale and retail grocery store. He became in America, at first, a common laborer, then a clerk in Piqua, and at Union City he set up a grocery store, which he carried on till his death, in 1875. He was, in religion, a Catholic, and, in politics, a Democrat.

C. S. KENNEDY (brother of the foregoing) was born in County Kerry, Ireland, in 1841. He was a clerk two years in Ireland, and came to Union City, Ind., in 1867, and served as clerk for his brother till his brother's death in 1875. In 1876, he set up in business for himself. He married Margaret Stack in 1878. He is a Democrat and a Catholic.

WILLIAM KERR, hardware, etc. Mr. Kerr began in the stove and tin business in about 1869 in Union City. By diligence and thrift, he increased his trade, and in a few years he added general hardware, and now he carries on perhaps the leading house in the city in his department. His father and several brothers are employed with him, and together they make a strong and energetic company of artizans. Mr. Kerr is one of the many leading citizens of Union City, who have begun with little and worked themselves into prominence and distinction, and have laid the foundations of prosperity and business success. Mr. Kerr and his father and brothers are Democrats in politics, and altogether active, worthy and reliable citizens, adding substantially to the enterprise of the city where they reside. The elder Kerr and his sons, William and Michael, were all three soldiers in the Union army, and Michael spent three years in the regular service upon the Western plains. All three were in the same battery—Nineteenth Indiana—and Michael in the Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry Regiment.

R. KIRSCHBAUM, merchant, born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1841; came to America in 1858. After attending school a short time, he came to Union City; remaining a little while with his brother, he soon set up a store at Portland, Jay Co., Ind., with his brother, October, 1858. Afterward he took the business alone, and has continued it (in another firm) ever since. He removed to Union City in 1865, setting up in dry goods, etc., and he has been engaged in that line since that time. He married Flora Kahn, of Indianapolis, and they have four children. Besides the immense "Beehive" establishment at Union City, he has (with partners) two large branch stores; first, Portland, Jay Co., Ind., Kirschbaum & Silvernale; second, Hartford, Blackford Co., Ind. (at first Kirschbaum & Winters, but now Kirschbaum & Weiler). These branches are extensive, selling great quantities of goods; but the main store, at Union City, outdoes them both—that is truly immense The building is a large three-story brick, with a partial iron front. The lower story is literally crammed with goods of all sorts—dry goods, clothing, hats, carpets, etc., etc. The building (as well as the goods) belongs to Mr. K., and his business comprises selling dry goods, etc., tailoring, wool buying, etc., both wholesale and retail. In his employ may be found about twenty-five persons, clerks, tailors, seamstresses. By buying very largely for cash in the great cities, Mr. K. can sell at low prices, and yet thrive at the business. Twenty-two years ago his beginning was small through scarcity of means; now the splendid trade palace, corner of Pearl and Columbia, is filled with piles of goods of every imaginable variety; growing ever beautifully and rapidly less, yet ever replenishing, garments and goods disappearing as by magic every hour, the shelves and counters, nevertheless remaining constantly full. The activity shown, and the immense amount of sales day by day, clearly show what energy, prudence and trading skill can achieve. Mr. Kirschbaum is still in the prime of manhood, not yet forty years old. He seems to have been born a merchant, as his activity as a store-keeper began at Portland in 1858, and his business shrewdness and tact and success have been increasing year by year. In his eighteenth year, he took successfully the position of salesman and manager of an important mercantile enterprise. His residence is a plain, substantial mansion, Columbia, north of Oak, east side. Mr. K., in the winter of 1880–81, purchased the Coats' warehouse, and commenced the grain business, thus enlarging his already very extensive operations. When asked why he had begun this new branch of activity, he is said to have replied: "Because I would like to keep myself busy." Active, energetic business men possessing "snap," nerve and stamina, are the bone and sinew, and muscle and brains as well of any place, and Union City seems to be blessed with a fair share of this class of men, which fact, indeed, explains the secret of its abundant and constantly growing prosperity.

A. A. KNAPP,

Engineer, plumber, flue dealer, etc, was born in Wooster, Ohio, in 1837; resided in Mansfield, Ohio, from 1838, till 1858; Recovery, Ohio, till 1861. He enlisted in Company K, Seventeenth Ohio Volunteers in 1861 (three months). On discharge, he formed a new company, and was made their Captain; Company K, Fortieth Ohio. After two and a half years of service, a horse fell upon him, severely injuring his spine, and he was discharged for disability. He had learned the tinner's trade at Mansfield, Ohio, and was working at the trade when the war broke out. After leaving the army, he was a trader, money-loaner, carriage dealer, etc.; was one and a half years with Col. Cranor in hardware. He took up buying walnut logs, and sending them to Europe whole, also owning and running a saw-mill at Redkey, Ind. Spring of 1873, he was elected member of Council (Trustees) In that, it was resolved to erect water works, and Capt. Knapp was appointed Superintendent of Construction of water works. After their completion, he was kept in position as Superintendent of Water Works, which he held for more than seven years. In 1874, he began business as plumber and gas and steam-fitter, and in 1875 as agent for fire clay flues, fire brick, terra cotta goods, vases, etc. This trade was a new thing here, and a demand for them had to be created. The first year he had hard work to sell forty pieces of flues. He bought fifty, and had ten left over. From February, 1880 (to April), he sold nine car-loads, 1,200 feet each. He sold in 1879 forty-three carloads sewer pipe, and seventeen car-loads from February to April, 1880. The first two years, he sold only three pair of vases, and that by the severest begging. From February to April, 1880, he disposed of 400 vases of various sizes. These facts show the incredible increase of this trade. Capt. K. has agents in 120 towns. At Muncie alone there are sold $150 worth per month of the various articles of this business. The works are at Calumet, Ohio, Jefferson County. These article are wonderfully neat and tasteful, and highly ornamental. They are strong and durable, impervious to water and imperishable by fire, easily and cheaply put up, and they would seem to be, by all means, preferable. Since this account was written, the business referred to has increased still more largely, but the present statistics we have not room to state.

JOHN KOONS, furniture dealer, born in 1829 in Germany, near Bingen, "fair Bingen on the Rhine;" came to America in 1842; he spent his time on a farm till 1848; then worked as a carpenter, working at Dayton, Cincinnati, New Orleans, etc. He settled in Union City June, 1852, when everything was "in the woods," working as a carpenter till 1856, and in that year began a cabinet shop. In 1854, he married Mary Caron, of Greenville, Ohio. They have had seven children. He is a Catholic and a Democrat, and is noted for his quiet and sturdy independence of thought and action. He is highly respected by his fellow-citizens as being enterprising and successful in his business, and upright in his dealings. He has been engaged in handling furniture for nearly twenty-five years, and now carries it on extensively, both wholesale and retail, in all its branches. He owns a factory run by steam power; is also an "undertaker," and deals extensively in lumber. He is supposed to have acquired a substantial fortune, owning, besides his factory, furniture shop and other town property, several fine farms in the region.

PETER KUNTZ, lumberman (brother of John Koons above). Mr. Koons was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Europe, in the year 1839; he came to Darke County, Ohio, in 1842, and to Union City in 1867. He married Mary Higi in 1879. From 1859 to 1865, he was a wood-chopper, and thus made his start. He sold lumber in Greenville, Ohio, two years, and set up at Union City in 1867; 1867–73, Kuntz & Willson, and Peter Kuntz alone, 1873–82. The first year, the firm sold $45,000 worth, the last year of Kuntz & Willson, $100,000, and 1879, $285,000. He has a saw-mill, planing-mill, sash and door factory, etc. The establishment has about forty different machines for working in wood. He receives and handles lumber from Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Canada. His business is very largely wholesale, more than 70 per cent of the lumber not coming to Union City at all; he bought in 1879 about two thousand eight hundred carloads; he employs in his business here fifty to sixty hands. He is a Catholic and a Democrat. He gave $5,000 as a fund to support a Catholic free school in Union City, and has offered a like sum to Greenville, Ohio, on condition that the Catholics there prepare therefor by building a house, etc., which, however, has not yet been done. Mr. Kuntz, by his prompt and energetic management, has built up an immense business. Though somewhat brusque and forbidding in personal address, he has yet, by consummate business tact, drawn to his establishment a host of customers, and that host grows ever larger year by year. During the winter of 1880–81, Mr. Kuntz bought an immense quantity of logs of all kinds, paying generous prices, enriching the happy farmers, buying even elm, supposed until lately to be the most worthless of all trees. One man said that he made $1.50 a day in hauling elm to market, besides getting the stuff out of his way. The same man sold to Mr. Kuntz the logs from four ash trees, all standing on a single acre of ground, receiving for the same $78!

STEPHEN H. LADD, grocer, was born in Meredith, N. H., in 1827, his parents being Stephen Ladd and Sarah Adams; his father was born in Sandwich, N. H., in 1796, and died in Lawrence, Mass., in 1882, eighty-six years old; his mother died at the same place in 1878, eighty-two years old, both being then nearly of the same age. They were the parents of eight children, four sons and four daughters, all of whom became grown; seven of them were married and five are still living; three reside in Massachusetts or New Hampshire and two are in Union City. Stephen Ladd, the elder, was a farmer, a Democrat and a Universalist, and his wife was an old-fashioned Baptist. Stephen H. Ladd left home at eleven years old as a peanut boy on the railroad, and he has been engaged upon railroads ever since until about three years ago as brakeman, conductor, foreman and engineer, having been engineer more than thirty years, the last ten years of which were spent in Union City as foreman of the locomotive department at Union City. The roads with which he has been connected have been the Boston & Maine, the Pennsylvania Central, the Ohio & Indiana (Crestline & Ft. Wayne) and the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis (C., C., C. & I.) Railways. Mr. Ladd quit railroading in April, 1880, and in the spring of 1882, he began business as a grocer at Union City, Ind., in which he is now engaged. Mr. Ladd was married, in July, 1857, to Miss Sarah F. Hoover, of Crestline, Ohio, and they have had seven children, six of whom are living. Their names are given herewith: Ida G., Venia F., Rosa W., Hattie May (dead), Henry L., Maude D., Walter C. He is a strong temperance man and an enthusiastic Republican. Mr. Ladd has been but little connected with official station, his only engagement of that sort having been Councilman of Union City during two terms (four years). Mr. Ladd is a gentleman possessing great energy of character, and has been successful in obtaining a competence, owning a fine residence upon West Pearl street in Union City. One of his children is married, and one of them has been for some years a member of the choir in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Union City.

G. LAMBERT was born in Pennsylvania in 1825. In 1850, he emigrated to Miami County, Ohio; in 1852, to Clark County, Ohio; in 1859, to Champaign County, Ohio; in 1869, to near Union City, Ohio; and in 1877, to the city itself (Ohio side). He has been a farmer all his life except from 1877 to the present time, which latter years have been spent as a grain-buyer. He is a member of the United Brethren Church; and voted for James A. Garfield for President. He has had ten children, nine of them now living. He and his sons are engaged in business of several kinds. For several years, he and one son have been operating as dealers in grain. In 1880, the firm was formed of Lambert, Parent & Co., and exists to-day and deals extensively in grain, handling some 200,000 bushels during a single year. One of the sons, J. W. Lambert, is a partner in a handle factory, established in 1880. The firm turns fork handles, neck-yokes, single-trees, spokes and hubs. They have bought $7,000 to $8,000 worth of "butts" as material for their work in a single year. Their establishment seems active and prosperous. One of them is also a partner in the firm of Lambert & McKenzie, saddle and harness makers, Union City, Ohio. They employ in all about twenty-five hands. One of the sons is a very active member of the United Brethren Church, being teacher in the Sunday school, class leader, etc.

ALFRED LENOX

was born in Shelby County, Ohio, September 4, 1819, while the territory now comprising that county was yet a part of Miami County. His father was John Lenox, a native of Virginia, who was brought by his parents to Mariettta, Ohio, in the early settlement of that locality, and who removed to what is now Shelby County in 1810. J. L. enlisted at the beginning of the war of 1812, and served until its close, having attained the rank of Captain of scouts. He returned to his original settlement, four miles north of where the town of Sidney now is, and where he cleared a farm and raised a family. Upon this farm, young Alfred was raised, accustomed to farm work and wholly deprived of public school facilities. This deficiency was supplied by the energy and enterprise of his father, who, at his own expense, built a schoolhouse and employed a teacher for his own and for his neighbors' children. From this primitive school young Lenox entered a select school in Piqua, from which he received a certificate of graduation. On the 5th day of November, 1840, he was married to Miss Frances Ann Gish, of Montgomery County, Ohio, and to them have been born ten children, seven of whom are now living.

During the ten years from 1840 to 1850, Mr. Lenox was engaged in farming in the locality in which he was raised. During the succeeding four years, he was engaged upon public works, principally on the "Bee Line" Railway, as contractor and superintendent of construction, in which capacity he laid the first track and constructed the first railroad works at Union City. A part of this time, he was proprietor and manager of the Forest House, the first hotel in the place. In 1854, he engaged in merchandising, keeping a general store for three years. The same year, he lost heavily by fire. Changing his business, he kept a livery-stable six years. In 1862, he was commissioned a Captain in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteers, and was detailed on recruiting service, and afterward as Government detective. Being dissatisfied with the service, he resigned his commission and recruited a company for the One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Indiana Volunteers, with which he entered the field as its Captain, being mustered out with his company at Winchester, Va., by reason of the termination of the war. Capt. Lenox returned to Union City, and as superintendent of construction assisted in building the railroad from Union City to Logansport. After its completion, he opened a restaurant, in which business he has continued until the present time. Mr. Lenox came to Union City in 1852, and has been a resident of the place ever since, he and his wife having now nearly or quite the longest residence in the town. He finished the first house in the city, and has witnessed the growth of the place from an unbroken forest to its present condition. He has always been active in promoting the business interests of the town and in undertakings for the bettering of society. He has been foremost among the friends of public schools and all educational enterprises. Union City, like most new railroad towns, was overrun with grog-shops and whisky saloons. Mr. Lenox being a pronounced temperance man, and being encouraged and supported by other good citizens, made war upon the traffic, and after years of persevering effort, with expenditure of considerable money and at great personal risk, the open sale of intoxicating liquors on the Indiana side of the town was entirely suppressed, nor have they since been here sold openly as a beverage. For this exemption, the citizens of the town were originally indebted very largely to the energy and steadfast activity of Capt. Lenox, as much so, perhaps, as to any other one man. Mr. and Mrs. Lenox are yet citizens of Union City, living in the enjoyment of a fair degree of health, surrounded by their children, grandchildren and one great-grandchild, and having the respect and esteem of all citizens. We but express the sentiment of all when we say that it is hoped that they may live yet many years as landmarks of the good city, and in the enjoyment of advantages which their own efforts have been so instrumental in establishing.

N. B. LEWIS was born in 1849, at Cheshire, Delaware Co., Ohio. He was one of fifteen children by two marriages. In 1853, his father removed to New Corydon, Jay County, Ind., and, in 1859, to Union City, Ind. He was a blacksmith, and was poor, and young Noe had to work in his father's shop to help "keep the wolf from the door," and so he got very little school training. At twenty-two, he left the smith shop, and became a dry goods clerk with Wiggs, Polly & Co., and, in 1875, entering the boot and shoe establishment of Anderson & Johnson; he has been connected with that house to the present time, under three different firms. Mr. Lewis married Emma Polly, daughter of David Polly, in December, 1871. They have had two children, neither one living. His wife is a Disciple; he belongs to the I. O. O. F., and the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Lewis, though a young man, is a quiet, worthy, industrious citizen, and is rapidly gaining the respect and confidence of his fellow-townsmen.

WILLIAM MARSH, flagman, was born in Butler Co., Ohio, in 1818; was engaged in railroading for thirty years; he laid the track from Greenville to Union in 1852; was baggage-master on the D. & U. R R. trains for twelve years, switchman on the "Bee-Line" three years, hand on the track three years, and for nine years past, flagman at the main crossing on Columbia street. He is employed by the "Bee-Line," and the "Pan-Handle" pays half his salary. Mr. Marsh states it as a fact, that the (nearly) twenty-eight years since trains began to pass this crossing, not an accident, nor an injury of any kind has ever occurred in connection with that crossing. More than 200,000 trains and teams, vehicles, and passengers innumerable (perhaps scores of millions), have passed that street, yet, during all that time, through all these twenty-eight years of constant traffic and travel, no train, no vehicle, no living creature, no man, woman nor child, has suffered the slightest injury. Such a fact speaks volumes for the wonderful and unfailing care by the railroad companies in their intercourse with the public, and for their faithful employes, in guarding the lives and the safety of the persons, and the property intrusted to their charge. It seems a pleasing and an assuring sight for persons desirous to attempt that dangerous passage to see the "grizzly locks" of our "old friend Marsh," waving his flag, and when he gives the signal to cross, they go rapidly but trustingly forward; sure that when he proclaims to "go ahead," no harm will happen as they jog on their onward way. Long, long may he live to wave that signal flag, and to enjoy the proud satisfaction arising from the thought that his "backward signal" or his "forward wave" has served to guard hundreds of thousands of lives and myriads of animals and vehicles from passing on to destruction, or has beckoned them onward in safety and in peace. Though his position might, by haughty aristocrats, be reckoned humble and obscure, yet it may with truth be affirmed that the faithful labor and care of one man like Flagman Marsh, is worth indefinitely more to the world than the labor performed by a dozen millionaires, yet the millionaire is good in his place, and so is the flagman at a grand thoroughfare railway crossing. Hurrah for the flagman, and may we always have one as good.

ROBERT B. McKEE was born in 1830 in Adams County, Penn.; came to Darke County, Ohio, in 1838, and to Union City, Ind., in 1852 (October). He married Margaret Manuel in 1855, and has six children, all living but one. His business for twenty-eight years has been that of a salesman in Union City, seventeen years with Joseph Turpen (five years of that time as partner), eleven years with Kirschbaum & Co. In 1880, in connection with O. C. Gordon, Treasurer of Randolph County, he bought Paxson's boot and shoe store, under the firm name of Gordon & McKee. He is Township Trustee for Wayne Township, having been elected in 1878 and again in 1880. He is an active Republican, and a prominent citizen. In 1881, he sold out his part of the shoe store to I. A. Thomas, late of Winchester, Ind., and is chiefly engaged in dealing in horses, besides his employment as Township Trustee. During the summer of 1882, he has been and is busying himself in erecting a commodious residence upon North Howard street, which is expected to be an unique model of beauty and convenience.

CHARLES McKENZIE has spent a life of great adventure and varied experience, having been a rover from his youth. He was born in Nicholas County, Ky., in 1822, being the son of James McKenzie, who was born in Maryland, of Scotch descent, July 4, 1776; moved to Darke County, Ohio, in 1812; was in the war of 1812; removed after the war to Kentucky; was the father of ten children, and died in Kentucky, twelve miles from Maysville, in 1831. C. W. McKenzie came with his widowed mother to Greenville, Darke Co., Ohio, during the cholera season in 1832; he traveled somewhat in his boyhood. In his early manhood, he went to Canada, and, becoming acquainted with the "Kanucks," was employed in several trips to Hudson's Bay, some of the time as bearer of messages for the Hudson's Bay Company, remaining in that country several years. Returning to the States, he spent three years (1842–1845) in La Grange County, Ind., going then to Jackson, Mich., and to Detroit; he afterward went East to New York, and by ocean voyage to New Orleans; set out for Cuba, was wrecked and landed at Mobile, Ala.; went to South America for some months, and spent two years in Central America, returning to the United States again, and so onward to the present time. He has been several voyages to Europe, once in 1854, and the last time some years ago. He enlisted in the One Hundred and Eighteenth Ohio, from Lima, Allen Co., Ohio, Company I; served from August 12, 1862, to March 24, 1863; was crippled by a car accident at Cynthiana, Ky., and discharged therefor, receiving a back pension of $1,100, under the Act of Congress for that purpose. He has traveled over the whole country, North, South, East and West, being at the "Centennial" in 1876. He visits this county every few years, having a brother and sister residing at Union City (McKenzie and Mrs. Eisenhour). He has many relatives in this region. Jesse Gray, the famous hunter, was his sister's father-in-law; William Vail, a noted pioneer and resident of Jay County, Ind., is his brother-in-law, and Charles Sumption, father of Robert Sumption, of Ridgeville, was his uncle.

MARTIN MURPHY was born in Wayne Township, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1836; his school privileges were very limited, attending solely at the old log cabin, standing on the site of the eight-sided schoolhouse, near the Downing farm, west of the Hoover Cemetery. At sixteen, he went for himself, working out by the month for $12 to $18 a month. In 1861, he enlisted in the Seventeenth Ohio (three months') Regiment, and served four months and eight days. He did not re-enlist, but served his country faithfully at home. For five years he was employed in a livery stable, under different proprietors, Branham, Ospy, Ruby, etc. In 1868, he became Marshal of Union City, in which position he served for eight years. He was Constable of Wayne Township for two years; he has also been a veterinary surgeon for twenty years, which vocation he follows still, besides being employed in the livery stable of George W. Prior. He married Mary E. Enochs in 1863. They have had eight children, five of whom are living. Mr. Murphy is a reliable citizen, and a thorough Republican. His father, an aged gentleman and a pioneer of Wayne Township, still resides on the land which he first occupied nearly fifty years ago. Though feeble from age, he enjoys reasonable health and strength, and the comfort and peace that spring from a long life spent in the service of God, and faith in Jesus Christ for forgiveness and salvation.

W. S. MURRAY is still a young man, and, in the beginning of what may yet prove to be a life of activity and usefulness to his country and his kind. He was born in Madison County, Ind., March 4, 1853, the day that Franklin Pierce was inaugurated President. He is one of eight children, his father being a carpenter, now resident in Union City. In 1861, when eight years old, his father having brought him to Deerfield, Randolph, County, and, in 1865, they moved to Union City. W. S. M. attended the Union City schools, gaining a moderate education. In 1872, he entered Branham's Restaurant, continuing therein five years. In 1878, he was elected Constable of Wayne Township, and, in 1881, City Marshal of Union City. His official duties have been performed with accuracy and faithfulness, and to the satisfaction of the community. September 30, 1875, he married Harriet Seibert, of Greenville, Ohio, and they have had two children, one of them being now living. He is a Republican, a member of K. of P., and of the Improved Order of Red Men (I. O. O. R.) In May, 1882, he was re-elected to the position of City Marshal, having been nominated at the Republican primary election by a large majority. In August, 1882, he resigned the office of City Marshal, and accepted employment from the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad Company as Station Freight Agent at Union City.

JESSE PAXSON, boot and shoe dealer, was born in 1810 in Pennsylvania; went to Columbiana County, Ohio, in 1818; went to Canal Dover in 1827–30; to Newville and to Brookville. He married Mary Slusser, and lived at Brookville several years. Two children were born, both died, and his wife also. In 1839, he "tramped" to Lake Erie, Cleveland, Sandusky, Toledo, Logansport, Indianapolis and Vernon. From Vernon to Madison were twenty-four miles of railway, the first he had seen, and the first in the State. He (and his comrade) rode those twenty-four miles on the cars; took boat on the Ohio River for Cincinnati; thence "tramped" to Goshen, Clermont Co., Ohio. There he tarried and married Catharine Bronson; had one child; lost it at Newville, Richland Co., Ohio, where his father lived. His wife was taken sick, and they returned to Goshen to her father's. She died there with consumption, that scourge of the human race. He traveled, and, finally, at Piqua, married Jane Walkup, his present wife, in 1848. Soon after this, they moved to Camden, Jay Co., Ind., and, in 1852, came to Union City. His business had been chiefly carpentering and cabinet-making. In 1856, he set up in the boot and shoe business, which has been his occupation ever since that time. Lately his health has been poor, and his failing strength has obliged him to cease from active life. He sold his store to Gordon & McKee, and has been spending his time apart from the cares of business, being now already past his "threescore years and ten," the allotted age of mortal man.

CHARLES W. PIERCE. The warehouse on the lot where Charles W. Pierce now (1881) does business, was built by Shreer & Hill for a flouring-mill in 1861. Mr. Shreer retired in 1862, giving place to Mr. McFeeley. The mill machinery was removed in 1868 or 1869, and the business was changed to that of the grain trade. Mr. McFeely died in 1872, and Hiram Vail took his place till 1873. N. Cadwallader succeeded Mr. Vail, and, in turn, sold out to Charles W. Pierce in 1874. November 5, 1875, Mr. Pierce bought out Mr. Hill and has since been sole proprietor. In 1875, the business reached $100,000. In 1879, it had grown to about $260,000. The warehouse was burned in 1878, but was rebuilt at once on a larger scale. The establishment is popular, its business and trade is steadily increasing. Mr. Pierce is connected with the M. E. Church and active in all good causes. His excellent wife is a daughter of John and Jane Fisher, a worthy and aged couple who are old pioneers, coming to the region in 1817, before Randolph was formed. Mr Pierce has just erected a splendid residence, which, when finished and furnished, will be an ornament to the city. In the spring of 1881, Mr. P. sold his grain establishment to Worth & Alexander, and he is at present engaged in "Marriage Dowry" (summer 1881). In the spring of 1882, Mr. P. is understood to have bought a cattle ranche in Arkansas, and he spent some months in that region. In July, 1882, he resumed the grain-buying business at his old stand in Union City, Ind.

WILLIAM M. REEVES was born in Jackson Township, Randolph Co., Ind., September 19, 1834, being a son of James Reeves, an early pioneer of that region. He grew up a farmer's son, with only the learning obtained from the common country school of the period. In the fall of 1855, he married Esther Wiley, the daughter of Rev. Thomas Wiley, late of Jackson Township. They have had four children, and all are living. Before the war, he was a farmer. He enlisted in August, 1862, in Company F, Sixty-ninth Indiana Regiment; remained in the service till mustered out, at the close of the war, July 5, 1865. He was wounded by a piece of a shell striking his head at Thomson's Hill at Port Gibson, Miss., May 1, 1863. He remained in the hospital (on James' Plantation) between Grand Gulf and Vicksburg one month, and then went with the regiment (convalescent, but not able for duty), till September 22, 1863. At that date, he received leave of absence for twenty days, and he left Brashear City, La., for the North and for home. The twenty days were all consumed in reaching home. He got his papers renewed twice, but, in about twenty-five days, he learned that his regiment was on its way to Texas, and he joined them at New Orleans, and went forward, landing at Matagorda Island, Texas, and continuing with his comrades till the end. He had been captured (at Richmond, Ky.), August 20, 1862, and paroled, but returned after a short time. He was mustered as Second Sergeant; was promoted Orderly, Second Lieutenant and First Lieutenant. Mr. Reeves removed to Union City in 1874; was a butcher two years, and for five years he has been and is now on the city police. In religion, he is a Disciple, and in politics, a Republican. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Reeves is an esteemed and valuable citizen. In August, 1882, he was appointed City Marshal in place of Winfield S. Murray, resigned.

MRS. ESTHER (McFARLAND) REEVES.

Mrs. Esther (McFarland) Reeves, is the wife of Dr John L. Reeves. This estimable lady is the daughter of William and Flora McFarland, who came to Randolph County, Ind., in the early winter of 1838, when their daughter was a few months old. Her father was a native of Kentucky, and her mother a native of Virginia. Both were born in 1799, within a week of each other, and both emigrated to Ohio in early life. They were married in Highland County, Ohio, and some years afterward removed to Darke County, settling near New Madison. Three of their children were born in Highland County, and there were eleven in all, every one of whom lived to be grown and to be married, and six of the eleven are living still. Mr. McFarland was a pioneer during all his early life, Jackson Township being almost wholly in the woods when he made his entry into her borders. He was a sturdy, hard-working farmer, entering the land in the extreme northwestern part of Jackson Township, upon which he many years later laid out the town of New Pittsburg, on the line of the contemplated railroad leading from Union City to Portland, at the point where that line crosses from Randolph County into Jay. The town began to grow but the railroad track was not laid, and to this day nought but an unused "grade" exists to show what came of the thousands of dollars expended by the too eager stockholders upon that projected route. Mr. McFarland and his wife were both members of the Disciple Church, and in political faith and connection he was and still is a Democrat. His wife died in 1879, aged eighty years, and he is living still at Ridgeville, Ind., sprightly and vigorous, though bearing the weight of eighty-three years of labor and toil. Mrs. Reeves was born near New Madison, Darke Co., Ohio, July 9, 1838, and was brought to Jackson Township, Randolph County, when only a few months old. She grew up an artless country girl at her father's backwoods home, having scanty means of education, attending a log-cabin schoolhouse with a wide-mouthed chimney, and other similar backwoods appliances, going one and a half and two miles, and in all not more than twelve months. She was married to Dr. John L. Reeves in 1855, being scarcely seventeen years old. She has been the mother of four children. Mrs. Reeves is an active woman in society, having been a member of the Disciples' Church for twenty-eight years, and belonging to that society in Union City ever since their removal to the place. A sketch of her husband's life and career has been already given to some extent and little more need be said. With possibly one or two exceptions no person now living in the region came earlier to Jackson Township than he. All the first settlers but himself (except his mother and James Porter and his aged wife) are either dead or moved far away. His boyhood and youthful days were spent in truly backwoods fashion. He was the son of a famous hunter and a hunter himself, bringing down many an antlered denizen of the mighty forest shades. He remembers to have witnessed what is now understood to have been the earliest white man's burial within the limits of Jackson Township, which took place about 1838, or sooner, at what is now Pleasant Hill Burial-Ground, east of North Salem. The name of the man was Walker, who was a teacher, and some of whose family are residents of the region still, one of his daughters being the wife of one of the sons of Ezekiel Clough, an octogenarian pioneer of Jay County, and later a resident of Jackson Township in Randolph. Dr Reeves, though hardly an old man, being several years on the sunny side of threescore, is beginning to assume almost unconsciously the dignity of an ancient pioneer. At any rate, he delights to regale his friends with the recital of his youthful adventures while threading the paths, almost untrodden, winding scarcely visible among the gigantic tree trunks, lifting their widespreading tops above the deeply shaded earth. At one time, with a comrade older than himself, he was tracking game close by the graveyard above mentioned, when suddenly two deer showed themselves. Each took aim, and each drew trigger, and both deer bounded out of sight in opposite directions. The gun of the older hunter snapped, and he saw only one deer and thought both guns had missed fire. He was provoked at first to think that neither gun had been faithful to its master. But while he would not believe the youthful hunter's declaration that his weapon had done its work and that a wounded deer was limping feebly along the forest paths, he was more deeply mortified and chagrined to find, as they did in a few minutes, the deer that had been aimed at by the gun in the hand of the youthful hunter lying bleeding and helpless, panting and ready to die, while the other one of the pair had passed into the shadow of the woods wholly unhurt. Mr. and Mrs. Reeves furnish fine examples of genuine friendliness and generous hospitality, being loved by their neighbors and esteemed by all who know them. Dr. Reeves is an earnest and unflinching Republican in politics, maintaining sturdily, however, as a cardinal principle of political activity that partisan action must be held always subordinate to public virtue and sterling individual integrity. [Note.—A slight correction is needed in the biography of Dr. Reeves elsewhere given. The date of his taking up the plastering trade should be 1848 instead of 1851.]

GEORGE W. ROSS, carriage-maker, was born in 1837, in Springfield, Ohio; was brought to Darke County, Ohio, in 1838; came to Union City, Ind., in 1863; married Melissa Moist in 1868, and they have one child. Mr. Ross made pumps one year, and has been engaged in carriage making seventeen years. His business is flourishing and prosperous, and he employs several hands. The firm has been as follows: Ross & Evans, Ross & Shoper, Ross & Knapp, Ross alone. Mr. Ross is a Republican and a Disciple. He is enterprising, reliable and estimable.

JAMES FINLEY RUBEY, son of James and Hannah J. Rubey, was born August 11, 1850, being one of a family of ten children. His birthplace and youthful residence were on a farm near Hollansburg, Darke County, Ohio, his father being a physician, having an extensive practice. James spent his boyhood and youth with his father, attending the country school, as also the Hollansburg Village School, and for about three years he belonged to the Union City graded school, ending his literary education with his eighteenth year. In 1867, he moved with his father to Union City, Ind., which town has been his place of residence to the present time. In 1870, he completed a business course in the Miami Commercial College, at Dayton, Ohio. After spending eighteen months in the grain warehouse of Spencer Hill, at Union City, he entered the First National Bank as book-keeper in 1872, serving two years in that capacity, and three years as assistant cashier, and three years also as assistant cashier in the Commercial Bank (being the First National Bank reorganized). In January, 1881, Mr. Rubey was promoted to the position of cashier of the Commercial Bank, which place he still retains. He married Julia L. Skinner in 1875, and they have had two children, both living. Mr. Rubey is Republican in political faith, and belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, having become a member in 1868, under the pastorate of Rev. Greenman. He has held the office in that church of Recording Steward for several years. In 1878, he was elected to a place in the Union City Common Council, and was a leading and influential member of that body during his term of office. In 1882, he was a second time elected a member of Council, and now belongs to that body. Although a young man, Mr. Rubey gives evidence of sterling character, and enjoys a high reputation for ability and business talent, as well as for uprightness and integrity, and there would seem to be no obstacle in his pathway toward a prosperous and successful career during his maturity of manhood, if it should please a gracious Providence to spare his life and strength during the years that are to come, till he shall reach his threescore and ten.

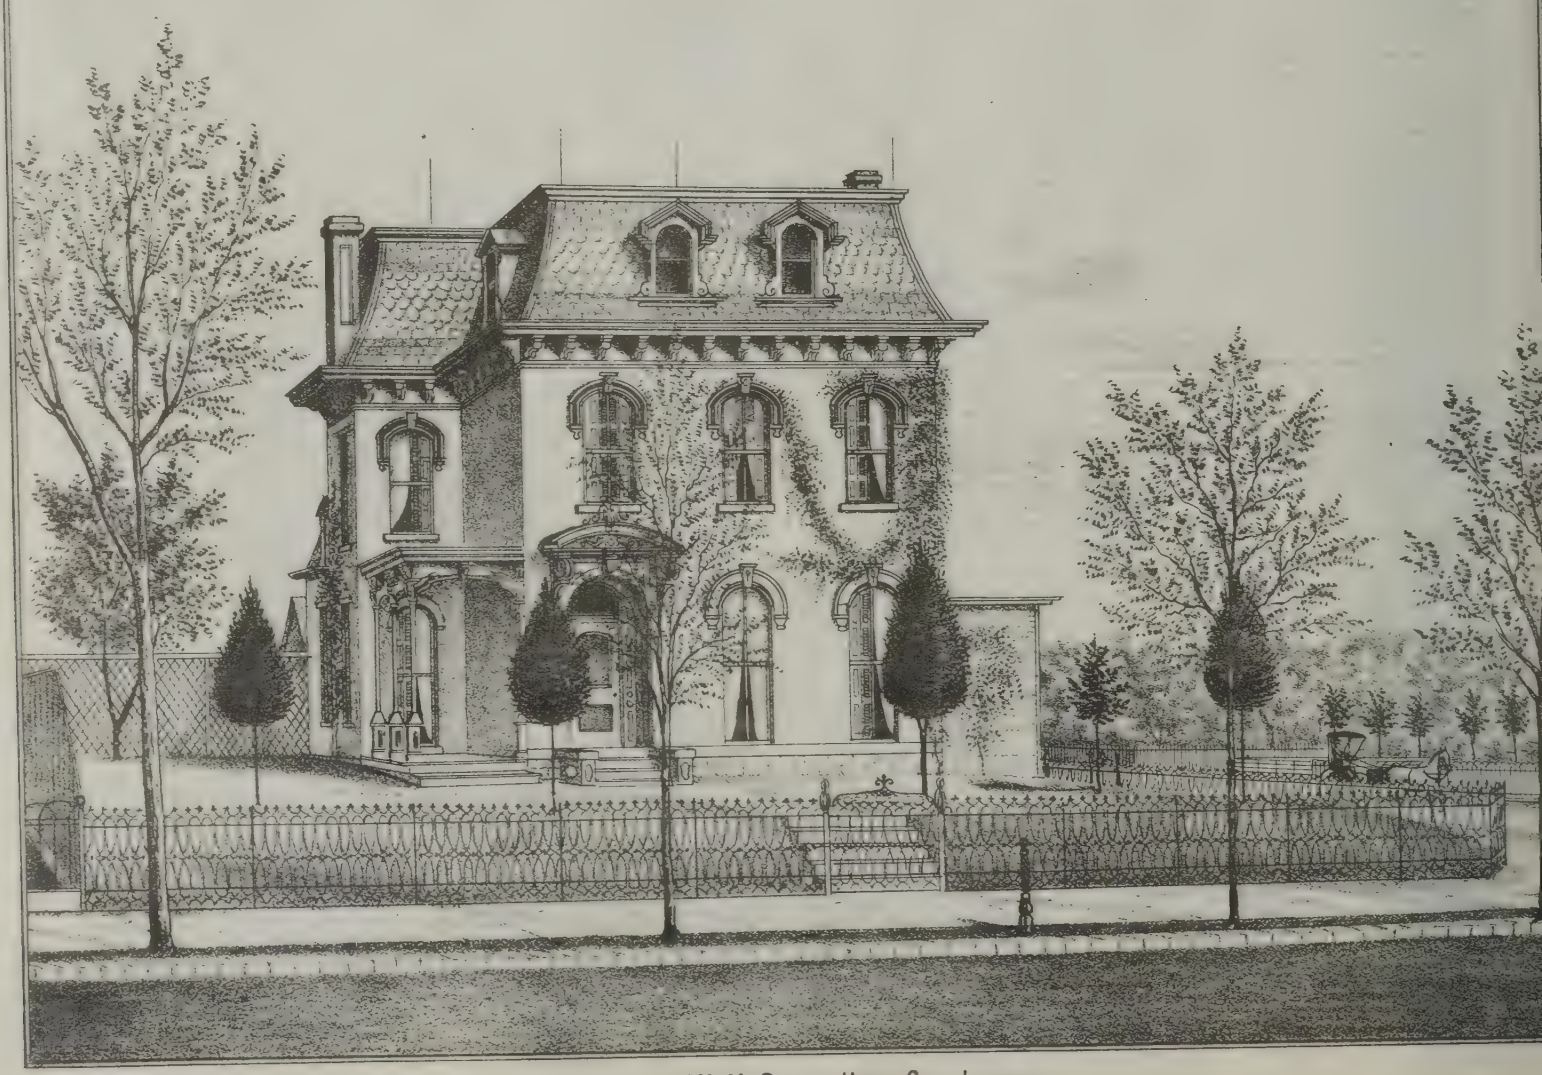
RESIDENCE OF DR. WILLIAM COMMONS, NORTH COLUMBIA ST. UNION CITY, IND.



RESIDENCE OF W. K. SMITH, UNION CITY, INDIANA.

JOSEPH L. SCHRONTZ, barber, was born in New York City, and came to Union City, Ind., in 1856; married Alice Roll in 1872, and has had two children. He set up a barber shop in 1868, being prosperous in the business, and "running" five chairs; sold out his shop in 1880 to his brother, Charles H. Schrontz. His establishment was the oldest of the kind in town. They are Catholics, being originally from Germany. The father of J. L. Schrontz emigrated from that country before his son's birth, and died in 1874, being the father of nine children.

JOHN M. SHANK, stove store, born in Montgomery County, Ohio, in 1831; came to Preble County, Ohio, in 1852, and to Union City, Ind., in 1858. He learned the tinner's trade in Preble County, Ohio, during two and a half years, receiving 10 cents a day and his board; was a journeyman for several years, and set up at Union City in 1858. He was married to Sarah Stoner in 1858. They have five children. His establishment is by far the oldest of the kind in the town. Mr. Shank has been Councilman two years, a church member ten years (United Brethren and Methodist Episcopal); Trustee of Methodist Episcopal two years; member of Union City Lodge, F. A. M., 270, having filled every official position; member of Royal Arch Chapter, No. 94, and holding honorable stations therein.

JOHN THOMPSON SHAW was born in Greensfork Township, Randolph County, May 4, 1831, the spring after his father moved to the county. They occupied the tract lying in the extreme southeast corner of Greensfork Township and Randolph County. In 1846, they moved to Hollansburg, Darke Co., Ohio; in 1848, to Bethel, Wayne Co., Ind., and in 1849 to the John Harlan farm south of Spartansburg. At the age of eighteen, he worked a year or so at shoe-making in Spartansburg with his brother Samuel, and during two or three years afterward with John Taylor at the same place. He entered the grocery business there in 1854, and the trade in dry goods in 1857, continuing therein till the present time, the first seven years of the time at Spartansburg, and for eighteen years at Union City, Ind, his establishment being one of three now existing in that city. Mr. Shaw married Priscilla C. Starbuck in 1853, and they have had seven children, three of whom are living. Mr. Shaw joined the Disciple Church at Spartansburg in 1861, and is still a member of that religious society, being an active worker, and for eight years Deacon in the Disciple Church in Union City, sometimes going out to hold religious meetings for worship and instruction with good acceptance. He is a man of character and standing, an active and thorough temperance man, of good business habits, and esteemed by his fellow-citizens. In politics, he is a Republican, and belongs to the I. O. O. F. For eight years his residence was on the "Ohio side," though his business has been all the time in Indiana, where also he now resides. January, 1883, he opened the "Trade Palace" in connection with a new firm, Shaw, Downing & Reger.

COPPY C. SMITH is the son of James C. and Jane D. Smith. J. C. Smith was born in Pennsylvania, Greene County, September 28, 1819, and emigrated to Ohio in 1827. His wife, Jane D. Smith, was born in Butler County, Ohio, October 25, 1821. They had five children, viz.: Coppy C., born January 5, 1840; Jessie D., born September 22, 1841; Alfred R., born January 23, 1844; Alice, born July 5, 1849; Laura, born July 30, 1852; all in Butler County, Ohio. Coppy C. Smith was born in the year 1840; he moved to Union County, Ind., in 1855, and in 1867 settled on a farm near the toll-gate, northwest of Union City. Remaining there two years, he changed his residence to Union City, which has since that time been his home. His business in Union City has been the keeping of a livery stable, and also of a boarding house. Mr. C. was married March 6, 1862, to Miss Lavina Gear, of Hamilton, Butler Co., Ohio, who was born in 1838. They have had four children, only two of whom are now living, viz.; Lilly, born May 20, 1867; Emma, born April 13, 1871. Mr. C. C. Smith is a Democrat in politics, and so also is his father, James C. Smith, who has resided for many years in Randolph County, and now lives at Union City.

SMITH BROS. Not very many years ago three brothers, William P., James and John Smith, left their native Scotland and made their way across the dashing billows of the wide Atlantic, to find a home and room to work, and grow and flourish in this grand and wondrous commonwealth of the free. They came not, however, all at once. The first one named above led the way, exploring in anxious hope the strange and unknown land, coming in 1866, and six years afterward, the two latter ventured to follow their adventurous brother in his voyage toward the shores of the setting sun. William had learned his business as a foundryman and machinist in his native land, and in 1871 became able to set up for himself in Providence, R. I. In 1872, his brothers joined him from over the tossing deep, and learned of him the business, which together they since have pursued with gratifying success. After three years spent in that Eastern city, they thought it wise to try their fortunes in the great and growing West, and, coming to Union City, Ind., they set up an establishment in that thriving town as a foundry and machine shop. Their work at first was scant enough, having barely sufficient for their own employment. In process of time, however, integrity and skill reaped an abundant reward, and their business has largely increased, and their field of operations has been greatly extended. Originally they worked alone, but two years ago (1880), they had constant employment for eight hands, with the prospect of a much larger growth in the near future. Their business is chiefly the making and repairing of machinery in general. They build steam engines, steam pumps, and many things besides. Their trade reaches a large region of country in both Indiana and Ohio. They are expecting and intending before a very long time to set up a regular and separate foundry, for which purpose they have already prepared a building suitable for that branch of industry. The Smith Bros. are like a large proportion of the men engaged in business in Union City, full of enterprise and energy, "putting their own shoulders to the wheel," and counting, week in and week out, for "full hands" in carrying on their chosen avocation. In politics, they belong to the Republican party. William and James are both married, the former having four, and James three children; John, being the younger of the three brothers, is still unmarried. They are all only in the prime of life, and may reasonably look forward to many years of active and successful prosecution of their calling, a vocation, in fact, honorable to them as men, and productive of great advantage to the community at large. In the spring of 1882, the firm set up a grist-mill in the vicinity of Harrisville, and the enterprise bids fair to be crowned with success, and to become both a source of profit to themselves and a means of usefulness to the entire region.

GEORGE W. SMITH was born in 1837, in Champaign County, Ohio; moved to Woodford County, Ill., in 1853; enlisted in the Sixty-eighth Illinois Infantry, Company E. His regiment belonged to the Army of the Potomac, in the Second Army Corps, Gen. Hancock. He was Third Sergeant, and was detailed Post Commissary with the pay of Second Lieutenant. His discharge took place in August, 1864, and in 1865, he married Louisa Enyeart. They have two children. They removed to Union City in 1867. His business is that of an artist, landscape and portrait painter, etc., and he finds large and remunerative employment in his chosen vocation. He belongs to the Disciple Church, and in politics is a Republican.

SHUGARS & BROTHER, stove dealers. Jeremiah Shugars was born January 7, 1842, in Columbia County, Penn., learned the tinner's trade at Catawissa, Penn.; came West in 1863, finishing his trade at Williamsport, Warren Co., Ind., and came to Union City in 1870, after spending four years in Pennsylvania. He has worked in this place for Pope, Clapp & Hartzell, setting up business with his brother, Reuben H. Shugars, October 18, 1881. Jeremiah Shugars married, at Union City, Ind., Sarah Mason, daughter of William Mason, an old resident of Randolph County, and they have one child. He is a member of the Disciple Church, and is Democratic in politics. Reuben H. Shugars was born in 1840, January 27, in Columbia County, Penn. He was brought up on a farm, taught school six terms, clerked in a store two years, and took up the tin business with his brother Jeremiah at Limestoneville, Montour Co., Penn., in 1868, remaining two years, and after several years employment by the Pennsylvania Iron Company, he removed to Union City, Ind., in October, 1881, entering into partnership with his brother in stoves and tinware. He married Melinda Acor in 1869, and they have no children. Mr. S. and his estimable lady united with the Presbyterian Church in Union City shortly after their arrival at the place. They had previously belonged to the Lutheran Church at Danville, Montour Co., Penn. He is an industrious, estimable gentleman, sincere, warm-hearted and sympathetic, and is rapidly gaining friends by his praiseworthy conduct.

WILLIAM K. SMITH

was born in Randolph County, Ind., April 27, 1836, being the son of Jeremiah and Cynthia (Dye) Smith. His father was born in South Carolina and his mother in Ohio. His father's ancestors were from England. His great-great-grandfather was an English Quaker from Yorkshire, who settled in Pennsylvania, Bucks County, about 1727. His great-grandfather, David Smith, was born in 1736, and died in 1801. His grandfather, William Smith, was born in 1779, and died in 1831, having emigrated to Randolph County in 1817. His father, Jeremiah Smith, was born in 1805, dying in 1874 at Winchester, Ind., and his mother at the same place in 1872. Both lie side by side in the Union City Cemetery, where a beautiful and costly monument preserves and perpetuates their memory. William K. received his education chiefly at the Randolph County Seminary, which was at that time a valuable institution of learning, and under the energetic control of Profs. Spencer, Ferris, Cole, etc., many young men and women of promise found the means of a substantial education suited to the needs of those times. His father's desire was that William should become a member of the legal profession. But the young man's wishes did not lie in this direction, and in 1857 he entered a dry goods store in Union City as clerk; after about a year thus spent, he acted as agent in the railroad office for a few weeks, and then undertook a course of training in the Commercial College of Cincinnati. Having completed this course he began business as a retail dealer in boots and shoes in 1859. This business increased greatly and rapidly in his hands, so that from 1862 to 1870 the establishment did a large wholesale and jobbing trade. He has erected a substantial and commodious business house on Columbia street, as also a costly residence on the same street, in the north part of the city. Mr. S. was not connected with the army, except for a few days during the excitement of the Morgan raid in the summer of 1863. He is not a member of any religious society, but his wife was during her life connected with the Congregational Church. In politics he is, as also was his worthy father, an active and influential Democrat. In 1863, he married Elizabeth Farley, of Michigan, who died in 1880. They had two children, only one of whom is now living. Mr. S. feels keenly his bereavement, and has the deep sympathy of his friends and neighbors in his lonliness and affliction. During his more than twenty years of steady and careful attention to business, he has achieved a solid and substantial reputation; and his quiet, unobtrusive habits have endeared him to a large circle of friends, and he enjoys the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens in a high degree.

HENRY B. SMITH, HARTFORD, CITY, IND.

Henry B. Smith is a son of the late Judge Jeremiah Smith and Cynthia Dye Smith, was born in Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind., November 27, 1847. He attended the common schools at Winchester until the fall of 1862, at which time he entered the Northwestern Christian University at Indianapolis, where he remained two years. In 1865, he began to learn the trade of a jeweler, and in 1869, after completing his trade, he removed to Hartford City, Blackford Co., Ind., where he now resides. Engaging in the jewelry business, he continued therein with satisfactory success till 1876. In that year Mr. Smith was elected Clerk of the Blackford Circuit Court, and he is at this time the Democratic nominee for Joint Representative for the counties of Wells and Blackford. In 1879, he, along with others, organized the Citizens' Bank of Hartford City, and at the organization thereof he was chosen to be its President, and that position he still retains. February 8, 1872, Mr. S. was united in wedlock to Miss Nancy Alice Holliday, only daughter of the late Joseph W. and Elizabeth J. C. Holliday, and there have been born to them three daughters—Cynthia A., Elizabeth C. and Gretta. Mr. S. is a worthy member of a prominent family, children of a distinguished progenitor and pioneer, Judge Jeremiah Smith, a sketch of whose varied life has been elsewhere given. Although comparatively young he has already attained a fine reputation and an honorable standing among his fellow citizens.

JOHN DYE SMITH is the son of Hon. Jeremiah and Cynthia (Dye) Smith, and a native of Randolph County. He was born at Winchester, Ind., June 16, 1839, and spent his childhood and youth in his native town. His boyhood education was gained at the old Randolph Seminary under Profs. Faris, Spencer and Cole. In 1856, he entered the Northwestern (now Butler) University, Indianapolis, spending three years in that institution, taking the scientific course, but not graduating. The years 1859 and 1860, he spent in learning the jeweler's trade at Indianapolis with W. H. Talbott, jeweler of that city. He married Miss Adeline Teal, of Indianapolis in 1861, and settled in Winchester, purchasing the boot and shoe stock of J. B. Routh, of Winchester. He continued the business till 1863, and, in 1864, spent a summer at Shelbyville, Ind., closing out his stock. In the spring of 1865, Mr. S. set up as a jeweler in Union City, Ind., which has been his residence and his business to the present time. He has had two children, and they are both living. In politics, Mr. S. is a Democrat, and were his residence in a county where Democrats were numerous enough to give a man of that political faith the ghost of a chance, he would, doubtless, have become a prominent leader and office-holder. In a county so overwhelmingly Republican as Randolph, all the Democrats can do at the political feast is to stand afar off and look wishfully, but in vain, at the precious fruit to them forbidden. His talents, however, are not wholly lost to the public, since he has been for eight years one of the Board of Control of Union City, two years as Town Trustee under the old charter, and (nearly) six years as Councilman under the city organization. In 1878–80, he was appointed member of the Democratic State Central Committee for the Fifth Congressional District of Indiana. He was an original stockholder, and has been for ten years a Director, as also Secretary and Treasurer of the Winchester & Union Turnpike Company. Mr. S. has been an active and enterprising business man, and has the respect of the community, among whom he has resided so long. He has built up a thriving and successful business, his house being the leading establishment of the kind in this part of the State.

J. H. SNOOK was born in Maryland in 1829. Learned the tanner's trade at nineteen years of age; followed that business for nineteen years in his native State; left it for farming ten years; came to Union City, Ohio, in 1875. He had hitherto amassed no property, but he was energetic and upright, and had a huge family of boys, all like their father, able and willing to work. He obtained credit and bought out a brickyard from George Dutro, and working it for two years made 700,000 brick. In 1877, he began tile-making, at which also success has attended his efforts. Hitherto, by horse-power, he has manufactured several thousand dollars' worth of tile yearly, burning twenty-five to thirty kilns annually in two kilns. In 1880, he burned three kilns of brick, or 750,000 in number. In 1879, he erected a spoke factory, a building 30x80 feet, two stories high, with an engine room 30x40 feet, the latter being made in the most substantial manner. This factory has thus far been but little employed, yet the room is there and the machinery for extensive operations in that line, which will, in due time, if life be spared, be added. Within a few weeks past, Mr. S. has purchased and set up a new crushing and molding machine of the latest and most approved workmanship, at a cost of $1,000. The machine is indeed a wonderful triumph. The crusher grinds up the dirt, stones and all, and the molder projects an endless stream of "pipe," which is cut into tiles as fast as the pipe is pushed from the die. By this machine 600 rods, or nearly two miles of "pipe," can be made in a single day. Brick of excellent shape and finish can be molded also in the same machine by simply changing the "die," the work of a few moments, and Mr. S. declares that 20,000 brick can be thrown from this machine in one day. This work, as also the work in the spoke factory, is performed by the steam engine of sixty horse-power, and the force of the engine is carried to the tile and brick machine by a rope of half-inch steel wire 844 feet in length. Mr. S. thinks his tile factory to have been, under the old methods, the most extensive in the region, and he expects in the future to burn at least fifty kilns a year. His working force varies from ten to fifteen hands, and he hopes greatly to increase the scale of his business before a long time shall elapse. He came here without means. In six years' time he has secured an investment of more than $20 000, with an indebtedness of only about one-fourth that amount, and he is just beginning to be fixed for business. One secret of his success is that seven of his boys are old enough to work at the concern, and they do it with a will, thus reducing the need of hired help to a minimum. In fact, Mr. S. may well be called the father of a family, for his children number already eighteen, thirteen of whom are now living and twelve are at home, and eight (with the father) do substantially each a man's work in connection with the business under their hand. The size of the tile manufactured by his machine is from three to twelve inches, any size desired being produced simply by changing the die regulating the opening from which the clay is projected from the machine. His tile factory burned up December, 1882, causing a loss of several thousand dollars; but, with his accustomed energy, he is going straight ahead, rebuilding in a better and more substantial style.

ISAAC G. STAHL, dentist, was born in Belmont County, Ohio, in 1830; taken to Guernsey County, Ohio, in 1831; to Perry County, Ohio, in 1839; remembers the log-cabin campaign of 1840; went to Fairfield County, Ohio, in 1861; enlisted in the Eighty-eighth Ohio, Company A; became First Lieutenant of the One Hundred and Eighty-second Ohio; was discharged at the close of the war and went to Marysville, Ohio, in 1865, staying two years; to Adrian, Mich., in 1867; came to Union City, Ind., in 1868. Married Lavina Leggett, and they have one child. He was a clerk one year, and has been a dentist fourteen years. He was a member of the City Council (Trustee) three years, and is a Republican. His wife is a member of the Presbyterian Church at Union City, and they attend religious services with that society. Dr. S. is a worthy, intelligent, reliable man, deserving and receiving the esteem of those who know him. He was, in March, 1882, nominated for Mayor of Union City by the Republicans without opposition, and at the city election in May he was chosen by a large majority to that honorable and responsible post of public duty.

EDWARD STARBUCK, SR.

The history of the pioneer settler named above is so remarkable, and so many of his descendants reside in Randolph, that we insert a brief statement concerning him and his family in this work:

Edward Starbuck, Sr., Wayne County, Ind., was the son of William Starbuck, who was born on Nantucket Island, 1747, and moved to North Carolina, 1771; marrying soon afterward, Jane Taylor, of Virginia, a member of the Stuarts, once heirs to the English and Scotch crowns; he raised eleven children, nine girls. After the girls were all married, a lady visitor asked him, "How many sons-in-law have you?" "But nine," said he. "Anybody that would butt at that, ought to have his horns knocked off," retorted she.

Edward Starbuck, Sr., born in Guilford County, N. C., 1772; married Sarah Dwiggins, 1795. She died 1821, and he married Judith Gardner, 1822, who died 1851, and he married Hester Kemp, 1853; he died 1862, eighty-five years old, and she died 1868; he had eighteen children, ten by his first wife, and eight by his second; five boys and five girls at first, and four boys and four girls at last. All the eighteen grew up and were married, and when the youngest was twenty-three, all the children and the father were still alive; and now, when the youngest is forty-four years old, twelve are still living. Seven of them were present at a family re-union held at John Fisher's, September, 1877—William (eighty), Jane Fisher (seventy-four), Robert (seventy-two), Andrew (seventy), Mary Dwiggins (sixty-six), Cyrena Bickford (forty-seven) and John W. (forty-five). The occasion was the fifty-eighth anniversary of John and Jane Fisher's wedding day. The united ages were 454 years, an average of sixty-five years. When E. S. died, his offspring, children, grandchildren, etc., were nearly 300. His ten children by the first wife, were all born in North Carolina, the other eight all in Wayne County, Ind. The family may be described thus: Edward Starbuck, born Guilford County, N. C., May 15, 1777; parents, William Starbuck and Jane (Taylor) Starbuck. Marriage, first, Sarah Dwiggins, September 28, 1795; second, Judith Gardner, December 26, 1822; third, Hester Kemp, October 1, 1857; number of children, eighteen. Residence: 1777 to 1817, North Carolina; 1817 to 1862, Wayne County, Ind. Farmer, Whig and Republican, Friend. Died, Hillsboro, Ind., April 8, 1862, aged eighty-five. Buried, Mt. Vernon, Ind. (east of Newport). Children: Elizabeth (Knight), born 1796, eight children, died in North Carolina, 1875; William, born 1797, eight children, Wayne County, Ind.; James, born 1799, nine children, died 1861, age seventy-three; Phebe (Leverton), born 1801, nine children, died 1861, aged sixty; Jane (Fisher), born 1803, fourteen children, Union City, Ind., died 1881; Robert, born 1805, ten children, Ridgeville, Ind.; Andrew R., born 1807, eight children, Huntington, Ind.; Lydia (Turner-Reynolds), five children, died in Illinois, in 1878, seventy-one years old; Mary Ann (Dwiggins), eight children, Rensselaer County, Ind.; Edward, born 1813, three times married, nine children, died Union City, Ind., 1874, sixty-one years; Sarah (Brown) born 1824, lives in Iowa; Milton, born 1825, resides in Huntington County, Ind.; Ann (Grey), born 1827, lives in Iowa; Jesse, born in 1829, resides in Michigan; Cyrena (Bickford), born in 1830, no children, Huntington County, Ind.; John W., born 1832, five children, lives in Union City, Ind.; Nathan, born 1834, lives in Huntington County, Ind.; Susan (Roberts), born in 1838, resides in Wayne County, Ind.

It will be seen from the statement just given, that the "Starbuck family" have been and still are truly a "power in the land." Active, frugal, thriving, prolific, intelligent, sober-minded, devout, they have long been and they continue to be a fountain of life and light to the region and the world. Few families can be found so numerous and so long-lived. In 1862, the entire family of eighteen children, the father and the step-mother, were alive—the oldest child sixty-five, the youngest, twenty-three. Their united ages were then 957 years, an average of forty-six years. And in 1880, the ages of the thirteen living children made 778 years, averaging about sixty years,—the oldest, eighty-three; the youngest forty-two.

With such facts before us, with the fact that hundreds of families, hardy, robust, prolific, determined, aspiring, virtuous, pouring into our borders one grand, constant, perpetual inflowing stream of immigration, and of propagation, it ceases to be a mystery how and why this whilom waste and howling wilderness has come to be the "garden of the Lord;" a fertile and beautiful

G. W. PATCHELL.

Geo W Patchell,

George W., son of James and Mary A. Patchell, was born March 10, 1858, in the city of Pittsburgh, Penn. His father was born at Londonderry, Ireland, and came to the United States in 1847, when fourteen years of age, where he followed the trade of molding in iron. He was married, at Pittsburgh, to Miss Mary A. Fairbourne, a native of Derby, Eng., who came to the United States with her parents when an infant. In 1861, the father enlisted as a private in the One Hundred and Second Pennsylvania Regiment, remaining in the Union army until the close of the war. For gallant and meritorious service, he was promoted, by successive steps, from the ranks to the office of Colonel, in which capacity he returned home with his regiment; he came with his family to Union City, Ind., in 1867, where he still resides. George, his son, and the subject of this sketch, attended the schools of Pittsburgh until the removal of the family to Union City, and completed his course of study in the schools of this place. At the age of sixteen years, he entered upon an apprenticeship at the printer's trade, in the office of the Union Times, of which John Commons was then editor. Three years later, he purchased the Times, and has ever since continued as editor and proprietor of this paper. Under his management its sphere of usefulness has been extended, and it is recognized among the leading and influential journals of Eastern Indiana. It is a faithful exponent of the principles of the Republican party, and enjoys a very satisfactory circulation. Its editor, though a young man, has developed marked ability in his chosen profession, and occupies a high rank in the journalistic fraternity, while his social standing is of the best. Mr. Patchell was one of the charter members of Invincible Lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Union City, and is still an active and interested member of that fraternity. He was married, on the 14th of December, 1880, to Miss Lillie Butcher, a native of Union City, and daughter of John Butcher, Esq. She is an estimable lady, and shares with her husband the regard of a large circle of friends.

ROBERT S. FISHER.

Robert S. Fisher was born in Wayne County, Ind., north of Fountain City, in 1834. His early life was on his father's old homestead. His education was obtained at U. L. Institute and Earlham College; as also he had a commercial course at Richmond, Ind. He taught school several terms in Wayne and Union Counties; in 1860 entering the Winchester Bank in the employ of James Moorman, and soon showing marked ability. The National Bank at Union City was established in 1865, with Edward Starbuck as President, and Robert S. Fisher as Cashier. For fifteen years he was active and efficient in all public interests. He was a member and a liberal supporter of the M. E. Church and of the Y. M. C. A., giving freely of time and money in their help. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. He was twice married, first to Anna Henderson, second to Rosa Cottom, both of Winchester, and has had three children. Mr. F.

had gathered a handsome fortune and was just in the meridian of his business and moral activity. He had expressed to a friend his intention to "lighten up on business," and give his time and strength to benevolent work. He was taken suddenly sick, and died, after one week's illness, April 8, 1880. Disease, typhoid pneumonia. He said to Capt. Jackson, his brother-in-law (who has been for years very infirm in health), "I have for years expected to see you go, and now here you are seeing me die, but it is all right. My work is done!" He was buried in Union City Cemetery, the funeral ceremonies being conducted by Rev. H. J. Meck, pastor, assisted by Revs. Greenman, Lynch, Simpson, Vigus, and others, former pastors. [NOTE.—The funeral was during the session at this place of the Indiana Annual Conference, and great numbers of ministers and laymen from abroad were present.] He left a considerable fortune to be inherited by his surviving family.

land, flowing with milk and honey; a land swarming with a population, energetic, aspiring, ambitious, successful, rising ever higher and still higher in the scale of knowledge, virtue and prosperity, astonishing the world with multiplying proofs of greatness.

One thing is especially worthy of note in this whole pioneer history, and in similar pioneer history the world over, that emigrating nations as a rule, become strong and mighty. The colonies of the Greeks, the Romans, the Phenicians of olden time; the hordes of Northern barbarians upon Southern European and Asiatic climes, all formed great cities and strong peoples, famous for ages or even to the present day. Our whole land is one huge theater of emigration. From St. Augustine, and Jamestown, and Plymouth, to the latest rude cabin of the in-coming settler in the wilds of Oregon, or to the sod-hut on the Kansas prairies, the vast flood of emigration sweeps with ceaseless flow across the land; and there are life and light and power in the movement. No matter how poor and humble the emigration may be, the result is uniformly that the progeny, near or more remote, becomes strong and noble. Many, nay most of the great men and noble women of this mighty West, are the sons and daughters of fathers and mothers who were poor, and not a few, very poor. Some who have risen highest, have come up from the lowest depths of poverty! This, to a careless observer seems strange, yet it is an open secret. There is no mystery. It takes energy, a desire for better things and a will to accomplish them to make men emigrate; and these qualities, coupled indeed with virtue, integrity, and thrift, is what brings heroic success. The grand results of this world are produced by work, hardship, energy, frugality, perseverance, virtue; and these are, as a rule, exactly what the pioneer possesses; in fact, these are what makes him be a pioneer; and, having these, and what is better still, the fear and love of God in the heart, he goes straight forward, and bravely hews his way to triumphant success! All honor to the resolute, hardy pioneer—the sturdy, on-pushing emigrant!

Let no purse-proud aristocrat, himself, mayhap, the son or grandson of just such a poor emigrant; let no wide-mouthed demagogue despise nor decry the pioneer; nay, even though he may be poor, and low, and destitute; but let the haughty, rich and proud bow his head rather in reverent honor, as passes by his gilded mansion the covered, tattered wagon of the weary emigrant, drawn by gaunt and bony horses, or by slow and plodding oxen; the wagon filled with rosy girls, and followed by tramping, rollicking, barefooted boys, let him bow his head in honor of the future kings and queens of this wide-spreading land! Far worthier such a sight of honor and profound respect, than to see a fawning sycophant crawling for votes; or a wily, smooth-tongued, base-hearted demagogue, luring the "dear people" to assist his aspiring steps to climb over their heads to high and lucrative positions, which he is no wise competent to fill. Well says the poet:

"Is there for honest poverty,
Who hangs his head and a' that?
The coward slave, we pass him by;
We dare be poor for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Our toils obscure, and a' that,
The rank is but the guinea's stamp;
The man's the gowd, for a' that!

"What though on hamely fare we dine,
Wear hoddin grey, and a' that;
Gie fools their silks, and knaves their wine;
A man's a man for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Their tinsel show, and a' that,
The honest man, though e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men, for a' that!

"Ye see yon birkie, called a lord—
Wha struts and stares, and a' that;
Though hundreds worship at his word,
He's but a coof for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
His riband, star, and a' that,
The man of independent mind,
He looks and laughs at a' that.

"A king can mak' a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that;
But an honest man's aboon his might,
Guid faith, he canna do that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Their dignities, and a' that,
The pith o' sense, and pride o' worth
Are higher ranks than a' that!

"Then let us pray that come it may,
As come it will for a' that,
That sense and worth, o'er all the earth
May bear the gree, and a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
It's comin' yet, for a' that,
That man to man, the warld o'er.
Shall brithers be and a' that!'"

JOHN S. STARBUCK is a son of Edward Starbuck, banker (late of Union City, Ind.). He was born in Wayne County, Ind., in 1840; came to Union City in 1868; married Rhoda A. Robertson in 1865, and Sarah A. Zinn in 1874. He has four children. Mr. S. was a farmer till 1868, then a wholesale grocer (including eggs, butter and poultry)—at first, J. Starbuck & Co., but for ten years, alone. The business was extensive and prosperous. It is really wonderful how great the egg, butter and poultry business has come of late years to be. Some claim the trade to be greater than the pork trade or the wheat trade. At any rate it has grown to be immense. And it is another curious fact, how so small a town as Union City should be able to boast two among the largest and most important establishments of the kind in the United States. Mr. Starbuck employs from eight to sixteen hands. He is a Methodist and a Republican; was for several years Superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School in Union City, and is in all respects a valuable citizen, an active Christian and a reliable man, a worthy son of an excellent, estimable and deeply lamented sire. Mr. S., in the spring of 1882, sold out his packing establishment, and after he engaged in handling coal for awhile, in September, 1882, he became a member of a company for manufacturing and handling a new patent invention, called the "Heat Fender," the object of which is to cause the free escape of heat during warm weather from stoves used for cooking, etc.

JOHN W. STARBUCK, druggist, is the youngest son of Edward Starbuck, Sr., late of Wayne County, Ind. He has been twice married, and has five children. He has resided in Union City for many years, being for a long time a plasterer by trade. He went into the drug business; has been a partner with his eldest son James for some eight or ten years, and for about two years with another son, both establishments being in Union City. Mr. S. is a prominent citizen; has been a member of the Board of Trustees, Assessor, etc. He has been for many years a leading member of the Disciple Church, and is in politics an active Republican.

B. F. W. STEWART, born in Butler County, Ohio, in 1830, came to Darke County, in 1832, and to Union City, Ind., in 1860. He married Amanda Powell in 1849, Martha Robbins in 1855, and Mary C. Johnson in 1865, and he has had twelve children, eight of whom are living. He was in early life a farmer, but has been for years in the grocery business, in connection with several firms, Stewart & Bunch, Stewart & Strong, Stewart & Swain, Stewart alone, Stewart & Stout, twenty years in all. He has been a member of the Disciple Church for thirty-seven years. He is an Elder, and has been for six years Secretary of the Disciple Sunday School in Union City. He is a Republican. Mr. Stewart in the winter of 1881-82, sold out his share in the firm of Stewart & Stout; but in March, 1882, he entered a new firm with Mr. Wright in his old place of business, where they are doing an encouraging business on the basis of ready pay.

GOTTFRIED STUMPPF, born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1833, came to Philadelphia in 1853; went to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1854, to Logan County, Ohio in 1857, and came to Union City, Ind., in 1863. He married Louisa Ruckwiedt in 1863 (who died in 1878). They have had six children. He runs a bakery, grocery and eating saloon. He is a Lutheran in religion and a Democrat in politics.

W. H. SWAIN was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, in 1822, married Eliza Jane Bales in 1844; came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1833, and to Union City, Ind., in 1865. He has six children, five living. He was a farmer and carpenter till he came to this place. First (at Union City) a grocer, eleven or twelve years—Stewart & Swain, Swain & Anderson, Swain & Platt, Wiley & Swain, then alone. Since 1876, Swain & Platt have been booksellers and stationers. This firm is, perhaps, the leading firm of the kind in this county. Mr. Swain is of a quiet, retiring disposition, yet fond of a joke, not aspiring but respected and reliable. He has been Trustee, Councilman, Assessor, and, doubtless, if he would permit, would be selected for other important trusts. He is in politics a Republican.

GEORGE W. SUTTON was born in Pittston, Penn., December 7, 1845. He was raised on a farm, and educated in the common schools. In 1863, when but little past seventeen years of age, he enlisted in the Thirteenth Regiment New York Cavalry, and served two and a half years. He learned the plasterer's trade, which he followed for a short time. In 1867, he came to Union City, Ind., and has been engaged in various kinds of business, being lately the senior of the firm of Sutton & Law, grocers, of Union City. He is married and has one child, his wife's maiden name having been Clara A. Randall, of Dayton, Ohio.

WILLIAM THOKE (TOKAY) is a native of Germany, born in Hesse-Schomburg in 1826, and one of a family of nine children. His parents and the rest of the family remained in Germany. His father and mother are now dead, the former dying at seventy-four years old, and the latter at sixty-three. They grieved greatly to have him cross the mighty waters, but he came. His ocean passage was in a sailing vessel, and its length was seven weeks, a severe storm occurring while on their way. On landing at New York, he came immediately to Dayton, Ohio, and, in a year, he went to Greenville, and, after six months, to New Madison; thence after twenty-one months to Union City in 1855. At this place he has resided ever since. He learned the tailor's trade from his father in Germany, and has followed that business all his life. In Union City, he first had a shop for seven years; was foreman for Bowers fourteen years, and during four years past he has carried on a shop of his own again. He married Catharine Schmidt in 1856, and they have had five children, four of whom are living. He belongs to the German Lutheran Church, and is a respected, industrious, thriving citizen, and a valuable member of society. His wife, Catharine Schmidt, is a native of Hesse-Cassel, in Germany, born in 1834. She came to America in 1854, landing at New York and coming to Greenville, Ohio. Her father, Simon Schmidt, was a blacksmith. She was married to Mr. Thoke two years after her arrival in this country.

JOSEPH TRITT, father of Tilghman Tritt, was born about 1791 in Maryland; was twice married, having nine children. They emigrated to Greene County, Ohio, in 1843, afterward to Champaign County, Ohio, near Urbana, and still again to Illinois, where he died some years ago. He was a carpenter, and some of the time a merchant; prominent in military circles, holding official position in the militia, and an active, upright, sober-minded, influential citizen.

TILGHMAN TRITT is the son of Joseph Tritt, of Maryland, and born there, in the town of Frederick, in 1828; came to Greene County, Ohio, in 1843; married Elizabeth Rockfield in 1847; came to Union City in 1853; moved to Nebraska in 1871; returned to Union City in 1873, and still resides there. He has had four children. He has, in the course of his life, engaged in many occupations, having been undertaker, cabinet-maker, carpenter, butcher, grocer, bridge-builder, saw-miller, millwright, etc. For seven years, Mr. Tritt was Superintendent of Bridges on the Bee-Line Railroad, and the same on the "Pan-Handle" Railroad for three years; he was builder of bridges on the Midland Pacific Railroad in Nebraska for three years, and has worked largely as a millwright ever since 1847. Mr. Tritt is of Dutch and French descent; is a moral, upright citizen, a steady church-goer, a reliable business man, and a worthy and excellent member of the body politic.

CHARLES G. TRITT, grocer, meat merchant, carriage factory, was born in 1852 in Greene County, Ohio; came to Union City, Ind., in 1856; went to Nebraska in 1869, and returned to Union City in 1871. His education was obtained at the public schools, at Ridgeville College and Whitewater Seminary. He was a grocer from 1871 to 1881; firms, Tritt & Robbins, McNeal & Tritt, Tritt & Griffis, doing a business of $35,000 to $40,000 a year. This grocery is the second oldest one in town. Mr. Tritt, in 1881, established the butcher business under the firm of Tritt & Julian, sold his part of the grocery to Mr. Vinson and went into a carriage factory with James Starbuck and Pierre Gray. He married in 1880; is a member of the Disciple Congregation, a Republican, an active business man and an estimable citizen. It will be seen from this statement that Mr. Tritt has spent nearly his whole life as a resident of the town either as lad, youth or man, and he seems proud to show his youthful associates and his maturer friends that his early training has not been for nought. He is during the summer of 1882 erecting a commodious and tasteful residence upon a curious and unique pattern, combining, it is to be hoped, both cultured elegance and substantial comfort.

FREDERICK TREUDLEY, Superintendent Union City Schools, is a young man, a graduate of one of the colleges of Indiana and a successful instructor. He came to Union City in the fall of 1879, taking a position in the High School. Upon the death of Prof. Giles F. Meade, in February, 1880, Mr. T. was chosen to succeed him, and has retained the position to the present time. In the summer of 1880, he was married and they have two children. He is a gentleman of pleasing address, of good talents and fine culture; is an active Christian, being a member of the Disciple Church, and energetic in whatever tends to promote the public welfare; enthusiastic in his profession, beloved by his pupils, and standing high in the estimation of his fellow-citizens.

ENOS H. TURPEN, grocer, born in Warren County, Ohio, in 1826; was brought to Darke County in 1828, and came to Greenville, Ohio, to learn the tailor's trade in 1843; worked at Ithaca, Dallas and New Madison seven years; set up as a grocer in Union City, Ind., in 1856, and during ten years he was alone in business, but since 1866 the firm has been composed of C. H. Turpen and William Harris, under the style of Turpen & Harris. His wife's name was Julia Breitman, and they have had five children. The firm carry on a large grocery and produce business, including as a specialty the department of butter, eggs and poultry. This branch of their operations has grown to be very extensive. The money handled by them therein exceeds $500,000 in a single year. They are thought to be (as gatherers and shippers of these commodities) at least second, and possibly first, in the United States. They employ thirty hands, not reckoning the host of wagoners, peddlers, etc., concerned in the work at large. Their business extends over a large portion of the Western country. Mr. T. has been for over forty years an acceptable member of the M. E. Church, and his worthy and estimable lady is especially noted and beloved for her activity and efficiency in the work of religion and of benevolence in general. Mr. Turpen is an intelligent and industrious man of business, who, by careful economy and close attention to affairs as well as by tact and skill, has succeeded, by the steady help of his efficient and wide-awake partner, in establishing a solid, substantial business, and in acquiring a genteel and creditable income.

JOHN C. VAN NUYS was born near Bethel, Wayne Co., Ind., in 1830; has resided at Bethel, Richmond and Union City, and has been for many years a cabinet-maker and undertaker. He now follows the undertaking business in connection with Mr. Weymire, who has lately bought out Col. Isaac W. Snell, for many years employed in that department of business tn Union City. Mr. V. married Elizabeth Porch, and they have one child. He is a member of the Disciple Church, and is, in politics, a Republican. A brother of his, Cornelius Van Nuys, employed in the lumber works of Witham, Anderson & Co., was fatally wounded in the establishment belonging to that firm in October, 1881. A large quantity of lumber piled up (under his own supervision) behind his post of labor in the shop, fell forward upon him, forcing him suddenly upon the saw in motion at which he was working. He was badly cut about the face and head, and also seriously wounded in the body and loins by the mass of lumber striking him as it fell. He lingered some thirty-six hours and sank in death, leaving a stricken wife and weeping children to mourn in bitterness of grief the fearful and fatal catastrophe.

WILLIAM A. WILEY was born in Darke County, Ohio, in 1834. When two months old, his father moved to Illinois, and in a year they returned eastward, settling in White County, Ind., among the Indians. After nine years, they moved into Howard County, Ind., and in a short time his father died at the age of twenty-eight, being the first white person buried at Kokomo. Howard County, was still an Indian reservation. W. A. W. was then ten years old, and was put immediately to work; and from that time onward earned his own support. The first boots he ever had were bought with the money thus earned when a small lad. He had very little schooling in youth, learning to read at twelve, and having not above five months schooling till of age. At twenty-two years old, he went with a party of emigrants comprising thirteen families traveling in wagons and bound for the Blue Earth country, Minnesota, young Wiley helping drive their cattle to pay his board as he went. On reaching the Mississippi, taking a steamboat he passed up the river, after which, with a single comrade he "tramped" over portions of Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa. They traveled on foot, sleeping often on the ground under the open sky. His adventures were many, being much among the Indians who were hostile in feeling. Once between Faribault and Canon City in Minnesota, he met a rough and savage Sioux Indian, with painted face and warrior costume. He says, "I saw him coming; terribly scared, I walked on nevertheless, till as he came near, he looked so hideous that I stopped. He came up, and, as he passed, I 'shied' off and gave him the road. He turned toward me, and I gave a fearful spring. The savage fellow gave a loud, rough laugh, and went on, and I went on, too. He had a rifle and I had nothing, but he was not so hostile as I had feared; I was in the Spirit Lake country, just after the massacre in that region, and the Indians were hostile, and great fear was on the people. After seven months, I returned to Indiana, attended school, became myself a successful instructor, teaching at Bethel, Wayne County, Union City, Randolph County, and elsewhere." His teaching life was from 1859 till 1862. In 1860, he married Sarah Elizabeth, daughter of Felix G. Wiggs, and they have had two children, one of whom survives. Since 1862, Mr. Wiley has been a farmer, a merchant and a grain dealer. He is an active and influential member of the Disciple Church at Union City, having been chorister for five years, and Superintendent of the Sunday school for nine years. He is also an efficient friend and supporter of education. For eight years, he has been a member of the City School Board of Union City, and in 1881 he was elected for three years longer. He has been City Clerk. His training was Democratic and his first vote was for James Buchanan, but, ever since "Republicanism" has been his political faith. Mr. Wiley is an influential citizen, energetic in every matter of public welfare, and greatly esteemed by his fellow-townsmen. His father was Ezekiel F. Wiley, the son of William Wiley, Esq., who was the brother of Rev. Thomas Wiley, an early pioneer and preacher of Jackson Township, whose fame as a missionary is in all the region. W. A. W. is now doing business in Chicago, Ill.

RUFUS A. WILLSON, born 1818, Greenwich, N. Y.; Muncie, Ind., 1841; married Mary S. Dresser, 1849, and has had six children. They moved to Union City, February 2, 1853. Mr. Willson left home at seventeen, went to Troy, N. Y., as clerk for Messrs. Merritt, wholesale and commission grocery store three and one-half years, 1835–38; at home and school, and clerk in Columbian Hotel, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., 1838–43. At Muncie, Ind., he was Deputy Treasurer eight years, assisting also in the Auditor's office. At Union City, he became railroad agent, first for all three roads. He opened the first set of railroad books in the place, as also he had the express business. In 1856, he became agent of Dayton & Union Railroad, continuing for eleven years. Kuntz & Willson established a lumber yard, 1867–73, becoming the most extensive in the State. Mr. Willson has retired from active business. He is a worthy citizen, and an estimable man. Mrs. Willson is a most excellent lady, a worthy Presbyterian, and is highly esteemed by those who know her. Mr. Willson has been at different times a member of the City Board. In politics, he is a Democrat of long standing. In the fall of 1880, Mr. Willson resumed business as a lumber-dealer with his former partner, Peter Kuntz. The location of this new lumber yard is just east of the Ohio line, immediately north of the railroad tracks.

THOMAS T. WILLSON, photographer, Union City, was born Trumball County, Ohio, of Scotch-Irish descent, in 1834. He came to Hardin County, Ohio, in 1835, and to Union City, Ind., in 1860. In 1861, he married Sarah J. Kerschner, and they have had four children. He was a photographer for thirty-two years. He spent a considerable time in traveling in the practice of his business; working at Lima, Ohio; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Dubuque, Iowa; Springfield, Urbana, Bellefontaine, Sidney, Dayton, etc., 1849–1860; came then to Union City, and resided in that town for twenty-two years. He was an I. O. O. F., and a Democrat. Mr. Willson is a quiet, industrious, thriving citizen. Mr. Willson died in September, 1882. His wife was born in Bedford County, Penn., in 1840, was brought to Darke County, Ohio, in the same year, was married in 1861, and has carried on a milliner's shop since 1877.

WILLIAM T. WORTHINGTON

was born at Fredericksburg, Trumbull Co., Ohio, July 18, 1837. His father, Elias Worthington, was a native of Lancaster County, and his mother, whose maiden name was Eliza Ann Atkins, of Chester County, Penn. His paternal grandfather was William Worthington, being a native of Lancaster County, Penn., who had eight children, Elias Worthington being the youngest of the group, who are mostly residents of Pennsylvania, so far as living. Mr. Worthington's father had seven children, two boys and five girls, six of them being still alive, to wit, one son and five daughters. Elias Worthington died in 1869, having been born in 1805; and his wife in 1855, her birth having occurred in 1810. E. Worthington was a man in humble life, his vocation being that of a carpenter, earning an honorable and comfortable living by the labor of his hands. In politics, he was a Democrat. Both his wife and himself lie buried in the cemetery at St. Mary's, Auglaize County, Ohio. They moved from Eastern Ohio to Dayton in 1838, and to St. Mary's in 1850, at which place, as already stated, they both died. William, leaving home at the age of sixteen, went to New Madison, Ohio, in 1853, remaining there till 1856, to acquire the business of carriage-making. In that year, he changed his residence to Addison, Ohio; and the next year he became a citizen of Randolph County, Ind., settling in what was then the new but energetic little town of Union City, since which time (1857) his residence has continued at that place. After seven more years of single blessedness, he took to wife Miss Sarah M. Ross, and they have been the parents of three children. At Union City, he has followed various pursuits. Among them have been the ones stated below, viz.: wagon-making, seven years; selling drugs, one year; grocery trade, one year; millinery, several years; wholesale notions, three years; general trading, three years. He now deals in organs, buggies and sewing machines, doing an extensive and profitable business. In 1857 (March 10), he joined the New-School Presbyterian Church, but shortly after coming to Union City, he united with the Methodist Episcopal

Bentley Masslich

Lucia E. Masslich

BENTLEY MASSLICH.

Bentley Masslich (of whom a brief notice has already been given in connection with the article on the press) was born at Litiz, Lancaster Co., Penn., July 23, 1837, but he has been a resident of Union City, Ind., ever since April, 1859. Having learned the trade of a printer in his native State, he abandoned it on account of ill health, and came to Montgomery County, Ohio, engaging while there in surveying, music teaching, etc. Early in 1859, he returned to Pennsylvania, where he was married April 5, 1859, to Miss Louisa E. Bachman, teacher of French, German and music, in the Litiz Female Seminary. They came almost immediately to Union City, where, for some years, he succeeded in acquiring a scant livelihood, contending constantly with misfortune, sickness and death, losing in six years three children, as also his wife, who died June 1, 1865. During this period, he was employed in the jewelry trade, in photographing, etc., buying, in March, 1864, an interest in the office of the Union City Eagle, only a few months after it was established; but so many newspaper enterprises having failed here, people had little faith in its permanency, and some time elapsed before printing was remunerative and the paper on a paying basis. Early in 1866, Mr. Masslich, who up to this time had had successively L. G. Dynes, B. F. Diggs and George H. Bonebrake as partners, became sole proprietor of the Eagle, to enable him to advocate the claims of Col. Isaac P. Gray, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress, Mr. Bonebrake favoring Hon. George W. Julian. March 17, 1867, he was married to Miss Peninnah Watkins, a school teacher, resident near Fort Recovery, Ohio; but, in less than eighteen months, death claimed her as his prey, and a month later snatched away, also, her infant child, leaving Mr. M. once more bereft of hope and comfort. October 19, 1870, he was married to Miss Lucia E. Farson, of Champaign, Ill., by whom he has two sons and a daughter—Chester B., George B. and Nellie H. For twelve auspicious and prosperous years, happiness and contentment have marked their lot in life. As the editor of the Eagle, he has not been given to dashing editorials, but he enjoys the satisfaction of believing that he has opposed, with considerable success, many schemes and enterprises which seemed to him of at least questionable utility, or absolutely hurtful tendency. Among these have been lottery schemes and gift enterprises, "graveyard" insurance, marriage dowry associations, etc. He has contributed his share, in influence and in money, toward creating and maintaining the Union Agricultural and Mechanical Fair Association; toward the construction of railroads, turnpikes and all other public enterprises adapted to promote the general welfare. The Eagle has always been and still is a stanch and reliable Republican paper, steadfastly on the side of morality and temperance, and, for some time past, has been an advocate of Prohibition and Female Suffrage.

Mr. M. has taken a leading part in the establishment and management of Building and Loan Associations during the last ten years; owning stock in all five of such companies organized here up to September 1, 1881. He has been Secretary of four of them, and has assisted in securing from time to time, several new features in their workings. He is the author of the plan of the Fifth Building and Loan Association (of which he and Pierre Gray, Esq., have secured a copyright). This "Plan" provides for issuing stock monthly, permits the withdrawal of stock on demand or at ninety days' notice, and can allow a higher rate of interest than 6 per cent on such withdrawals; gives interest upon dues paid in advance, refunds dues paid on forfeited stock, less fines; provides various methods to secure the re-payment of loans, and in other ways favors the borrower, at the same time protecting the non-borrowers. Mr. M. was formerly a Moravian, but united, in 1870, with the Methodist Episcopal Church of Union City, being the first taken into membership in the new church building. He has been Organist a large part of the time, and Secretary of the Board of Trustees about seven years. He has been an active member of the Y. M. C. A. from the beginning of its existence in the city; helped to organize the S. S. V. & E. L.'s, and as Secretary of both these societies, and for their benefit he projected the two lecture courses referred to under the head of "Lectures" in this work. He is a charter member of Turpen Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 401, and is at this time Secretary of Union City Lodge, No. 152, I. O. O. F.

MRS. LUCIA E. MASSLICH

Is the second daughter of John T. and Harriet C. Farson, and was born in Newcastle, Coshocton Co., Ohio, December 2, 1847. Her father, whose biography is given among the list of clergymen, came to Union City in 1852, and lived for a few months in a log cabin near the site of what is now the handsome and comfortable residence of his daughter. She spent the happy days of childhood and youth attending school, some of her early teachers being Mrs. Osborne, Messrs. Dady, Hitchcock, Case, Farson (her father) and Wiley. In 1861, she removed with her parents to Urbana, Ill., where she attended the graded school for about three years, and before she was eighteen was given a position as teacher in the school in which she had been a pupil, where she taught for about three years, a few months of which time she attended school at the Normal University, Bloomington, Ill. Her father, meantime, removed to Champaign, Ill,, and Lucia taught what was known as the "Cloyd School" for one year. The following summer, she visited her old home, Union City, and was offered a situation as teacher in the public school here, which she accepted, and which was her last year as schoolma'am. In October, 1870, she was married to Bentley Masslich, and she is now the mother of three bright and affectionate children. Mrs. Masslich united with the Methodist Episcopal Church when about nine years of age, and has been an active and useful member. She is a fine alto singer, always a member of the choir, and now chorister of the Sunday school, also teacher of a young ladies class. Mrs. Masslich has been a helper and coworker with her husband in his office work, and all his labors in every worthy enterprise—except, as he says, Female Suffrage, for which she is not a strong advocate—in every department a safe counselor, and an efficient assistant. In truth, the words of Solomon may be fitly employed to describe her influence and her life—"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her. She will do him good, and not evil, all the days of her life. * * * Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband, also, and he praiseth her." Retiring in disposition, she is yet firm and steadfast to principle, and earnest and persevering in every work of mercy and love, desirous only and ever to be found and reckoned a servant and follower of her Divine Master and Lord.

UNION CITY, IND.

Church, of which body he has been for twenty-four years a member, and an office bearer for about twenty years. Mr. Worthington is an active and earnest Republican, a public-spirited citizen and altogether a valuable member of the community. Quiet, gentle and unassuming in his manners and habits, he is nevertheless, energetic and successful in business; and, by patient and assiduous application and a wise and careful economy, from being a poor lad of twenty years, and having but $40 in the world, he has become prominent and respected, possessing a competence in this world's goods, and commanding the respect and confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens.

SARAH M. (ROSS) WORTHINGTON, the wife of Mr. William T. Worthington, was born in Holmes County, Ohio, February 6, 1840, being one of ten children, six girls and four boys. Her father, Reynolds Ross, dying when she was only four years old, her mother, Eliza (Boone) Ross, supposed to have been a distant relative of Daniel Boone, the famous Kentucky pioneer hunter, was left on a farm to train and rear her numerous flock, a task which she performed worthily and well, as their subsequent lives have abundantly shown. Of the four sons, three were soldiers in the Union army, and one, a Captain, was severely wounded. Five of the daughters are living, all of whom have become estimable women and beloved and affectionate wives. Learning the business of millinery at the age of sixteen at Millersburg, she came to Union City, Ind., about 1863, and, after following her chosen vocation during a single year, she became the wife of Mr. William T. Worthington, her present husband. After a year's intermission, she again resumed her favorite occupation, and during twelve prosperous and successful years she continued therein, adding largely, moreover, by her industry and skill, to their otherwise considerable possessions. Their first child was born September 16, 1870, a daughter, Myrtle E., whose life, however, soon faded away, to bloom afresh in Paradise. May 1st, 1873, two others were born—William Harris and Nellie M. The daughter died in July of the succeeding year, but Harry, though feeble and sickly for a time, bids fair to recover. Mrs. Worthington having for years been a worthy and acceptable communicant in the Presbyterian Church, transferred her relation to the M. E. society, of which her husband had long been an efficient member. Blessed with a good stock of common sense, with activity, foresight and skill, Mrs. Worthington is recognized as a leader in social life, being highly esteemed, both in the church and out of it, for her active co-operation in all good things. Especially is she untiring in rendering assistance to the sick and afflicted, whether rich or poor. To-day scores of families have reason to bless her gentle ministrations and her loving sympathy. Mrs. Worthington is a faithful companion, a devoted mother, a reliable friend, an earnest Christian and an efficient colaborer in every praiseworthy enterprise. Long may she survive to be an honor to her sex and a steadfast helper in all that is useful and excellent.

WILLIAM WRIGHT, undertaker, was born in Butler County, Ohio, in 1831; was brought to Wayne County, Ind., in 1831; moved to Randolph County, Ind. (near Spartansburg), in 1863; came to Union City, Ind., in 1865; married Jane Kerlinger, who was raised in Maryland, and they have had three children. He has been carpenter, stock-dealer, hotel-keeper, undertaker, furniture dealer, and is now employed in the two last mentioned. Mr. Wright is a member of the Disciple Church, a Republican, and a steady, industrious, thriving, estimable, reliable citizen. One of his sons, in the spring of 1882, became a member of the grocery firm of Stewart & Wright, and they appear to be doing a safe and satisfactory business.

JOHN W. WILLIAMS.

James Williams, the father of this gentleman, was an early settler and prominent citizen of Erie, Penn. He was born at Carlisle, Cumberland Co., Penn., in March, 1800, and died at Erie, in the same State, in March, 1861, having been identified for many years with the mercantile interests of that city. He was the son of Isaac Williams, a survivor of the Wyoming massacre. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Davis, was the daughter of George Davis, Esq., Mercer County Penn.; she survived her husband six years, dying at Erie in 1867.

John W., the subject of this sketch, was born December 2, 1841, at Erie, Penn., and received his early education in the schools of that city, completing the course of study at the Erie Academy. At the conclusion of his studies, he entered the office of John B. Johnson as a student of law. Finishing his course of study in two and a half years, he left home to locate in the West; but at this juncture came the outbreak of the great rebellion, changing somewhat the plans he had formed. During the first year of the war (1861), he was connected with Capt. R. M. Brown, of the Fifteenth United States Infantry, at the recruiting and mustering rendezvous at Erie, Penn., his early home. In March, 1863, at the solicitation of Col. William Truesdail, Chief of Army Police, under Gen. Rosecrans, he connected himself with the Army Police, Department of the Cumberland, Gen. W. S. Rosecrans commanding, holding the position of Provost Judge of the Provost Marshal General's Department. This branch of the service (the Army Police) had control and supervision of all things connected with the Secret Service—sending out spies and scouts, and detecting crime and other misdemeanors within the army proper. He continued in that branch of the service until December, 1863, when he was taken ill with fever at Chattanooga, Tenn., and removed to the hospital at Nashville. At the latter place he lay ill for several weeks, and voluntarily retired from the service for the purpose of recuperating his health. Upon partially regaining his strength, he repaired to St. Louis, Mo., to unite himself again with the same branch of the service, under Gen. Rosecrans, who was then commanding the Department of the Missouri; and from St. Louis went to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he was appointed Chief Clerk of the Provost Marshal General's Office, Department of Kansas, Gen. S. R. Curtis, commanding. He continued to act in this capacity until about the 1st of September, 1865, by which time the war was ended, and all volunteer troops mustered out. This branch of the service had supervision and control of the entire scout system across the plains throughout Kansas and the Territories, and as Chief Clerk, Mr. Williams had charge of the assignment of scouts to their respective posts of duty. During the fall and winter of 1865 and the spring of 1866 he traveled extensively through the South and West, and in April, 1866, connected himself with the Omaha (Neb.) Republican as editor, occupying this position until July, 1866. He returned to Kansas at that time to engage in the practice of the law at Junction City, in Davies County, where he resided until 1872, practicing his profession and holding the office of United States Commissioner for the Western District of Kansas. In 1872, he located at Marion Center, in Marion County, Kan., where he practiced his profession until the summer of 1881, removing at that time to Union City, Ind., where he still resides. While a resident of Marion Center, Kan., on the 3d of May, 1876, he was united in marriage with Mrs. Margaret Casper, daughter of Chris and Mary Kinsler, of Ohio, and widow of William Casper, deceased.

Mr. Williams was what might be called one of the pioneer citizens of Western Kansas, and at the date of his removal to Junction City, that point was the farthest point west on the Kansas Pacific Railway (the first railway in the State), which had then barely reached that place. To a large extent, Junction City was the principal shipping point for supplies to New Mexico, Colorado and the Western borders. During his residence here he held various positions of elective trust, and was recognized among the leading citizens. During his identity with the State of Kansas in its early history, the position in which he was placed gave him an acquaintance with many of the prominent and leading frontiersmen who have become famous and are now widely known, among them being Kit Carson, James Bridger, James B. Hickock, John Harvey, Blunt, and others of equal note; and a useful store of knowledge was acquired by not infrequent mingling with the various tribes of Indians who inhabited the western border of Kansas, and now occupy the Indian Territory. Mr. Williams may fairly be called a Western man. He has traveled largely through the Indian Territory, Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, and all the Territories lying east of the Rocky Mountain range, and is familiar, from actual observation, with that country in its general outline. He imbibed largely of that spirit of daring and love of adventure which characterizes the citizens of the West, and has often run dangerous risks to gratify this propensity. Once, with a few companions, he traveled a number of miles in the saddle to witness a pitched battle between the Cheyenne and Kaw tribes of Indians, and was one of two white persons who witnessed the pitched fight between the Otoes and the Kiowas at a later date. Since his removal to Union City, he has practiced his profession very successfully, while he has established himself firmly in the estimation of all who know him, and is counted among the best citizens.

STONY CREEK TOWNSHIP.

DESCRIPTION.

Stony Creek includes parts of Townships 19 and 20, Range 12 east, as also some sections in Range 13, embracing in all twenty-nine and one-half sections; five miles north and south except Section 7, near the southeast corner and five and one-half miles east and west, and containing about 16,960 acres. E. 29, 20, 12, September 16, 1829; John Thornburg, W. N. W. 35, 20, 12, November 21, 1829; Benjamin Garrettson, E. N. E. 32, 20, 12, November 21, 1829; Isaac Thornburg, W. N. E. 27, 20, 12, November 21, 1829; Isaac Thornburg, E. N. W. 27, 20, 12, November 21, 1829; George and Samuel McNees, W. S. E. 24, 20, 12, December 17, 1829. Totals as follows: 1821, three entries, 240 acres; 1822, nine entries, 841.63 acres; 1823, five entries, 399.46 acres; 1824, one entry, 80 acres; 1825, two entries, 160 acres; 1826, three entries, 240 acres; 1827, two entries, 160 acres; 1828, five entries, 400 acres; 1829, fourteen entries, 1,168.64 acres. Total, 44 entries, 3,769.63 acres.

Of these, thirty-nine entries were of 80 acres, two for 160 acres, one for 128.64 acres, one for 118.86 acres, one for 41.63 acres, one for 40.20 acres. Thus it will be seen that the entries were made mostly by men of only moderate means. The township lies chiefly on Stony and Cabin Creeks and White River, containing a fine body of land, and being well settled with substantial improvements. The surface is level or rolling, heavily timbered at first, but now mostly cleared, The streams are permanent, affording abundant water and considerable power for machinery, especially upon Cabin and Stony Creeks. The mill upon Stony Creek near Windsor is thought to have been the fifth mill in the county, perhaps, as follows: Sample's Mill, Sampletown; Lewallyn's Mill, on Mississinewa, near Ridgeville. Jessup's Mills, on Greenville Creek, below Spartansburg; Jere Cox's Mill, on White River, east of Winchester; Windsor Mill, on Stony Creek, just above its mouth. The mills in Stony Creek Township, on Stony and Cabin Creeks, have always been and still are important and valuable.

The township contains several pikes—Windsor & Winchester, north part of the township; Farmland pike, south of Farmland; Losantsville pike, south from Windsor pike, and perhaps others.

The place and the time of the first settlement in the township cannot now be determined with absolute certainty. It has been claimed that John Thornburg, near Windsor, was the first settler, and that the time was 1823. Both of these would seem to be errors. John Thornburg did not come before about 1825, and when he came he found a considerable number of settlers already in the county. His son, Armfield Thornburg, a sprightly old man residing at Windsor, who was a lad several years old when his father came to the county, states as follows: When my father came to Randolph County and settled near Windsor in 1825, the following settlers were already on hand: John Castine and Solomon Hobaugh, his son-in-law, and John Coons, all of whom came in 1822; David Vestal, who had been elected Squire, Joseph Rooks and Abraham Clevenger, all of whom came in 1823; John Connor in 1824, George W. Smithson in 1825.

NOTE.—Isaac Branson came before all these, and his widow says he came in 1819. He sold out to Joseph Rooks, and must have been there and sold out to Joseph Rooks and moved to Nettle Creek before this time.

Probably, either David Vestal or Isaac Branson was the first actual bona fide settler, and Branson moved away soon, first to Nettle Creek and not very long afterward to Delaware County, and David Vestal sold out after several years to John Thornburg, and moved away to White Lick, below Indianapolis, in 1831, and died there. The Thornburgs, Job, Joab and John, all came in 1825, the first two of whom are living yet where they settled. Others came soon after, among whom were Randolph Smullen and William Moore in 1826, and perhaps others.

Some of the persons named as early settlers were only "squatters," and moved on into the woods before the advancing wave of settlement. Lemuel Vestal came in 1825, and with him John Demory, a freeman of color from Carolina, of whom mention is made elsewhere; Vestal undertook to build a mill near Windsor, as told in another place. Others may be mentioned as follows: John Hines and Paul Reagan in 1826; Wesley Terrell in 1827; Amos Smith and Benjamin Garretson in 1828; Solomon Wright in 1829, John Bond and Andrew G. Dye in 1831. Still others had already or did soon come, to wit: John Holloway, William Holloway, Jonathan Finzer, John Clevenger, Jonathan Clevenger, John Diggs.

Jacob McNees settled near Georgetown in 1829; Isaac Amburn came in west of Georgetown in the same year. Others had doubtless taken up their residence here, of whom no account has been obtained.

Stony Creek was settled largely at first by the Society of Friends, and to this day a very strong body of that people remain within its limits. Cedar and Poplar Run Meetings are both in Stony Creek, and very many of the honored pioneers of that section worshiped in these sanctuaries, and now lie awaiting the "Archangel's trump" in the humble inclosure of the dead which are near those sacred places of humble waiting upon the Spirit of the Lord. In life they spent their years in quiet industry and patient and sincere obedience to the guidance of the voice within; now for those earnest, steadfast souls, faith has been changed to sight and struggling prayer to triumphant praise. The first school in the township was taught in 1826 by Moses Hodson, then a young man, still living, but young no longer, his home being in Delaware County, four or five miles from Windsor. The schoolhouse stood between Joab and John Thornburg's. There were perhaps twenty pupils. Armfield Thornburg, that tells the story, was one of them.

Solomon Wright tells some queer tales "out of school" concerning the pupils and the teachers of "auld lang syne," one in particular, how the girls on the last day of school tore down the dirt back-wall of the stick chimney belonging to the cabin schoolhouse, and scattered the clay all over the puncheon floor.

Like other new and pioneer regions, Stony Creek has its traditions of odd and queer things taking place amid the mighty shadow of the giant forest. Of one early settler it is related that he had a family of fourteen children, and that another settler, a neighbor, going in early one morning found on the hearth a huge kettle of corn meal mush, and that while he sat there the youngsters crawled out from the straw upon the cabin floor one by one, and, taking each a pewter plate, went singly to the smoking mush for a bountiful share, and partook joyfully of a hearty breakfast. But what difference does it make? These tales told of early times are, many of them, fabrications, and more are greatly "stretched" from the original fact. But even if true as told, who cares? It is to be feared that, if their effeminate descendants were thrown into the same hard and rough condition, they would do even not so well as that; that they would have neither roof over their shiftless heads, straw to crawl out of nor a kettle of mush to eat from, pewter plate to handle it on, nor spoon with which to carry it to their mouths.

Stony Creek is bounded north by Monroe, east by White River and West River, south by Nettle Creek, west by Delaware County. In politics, Stony Creek is strongly Republican.

TOWNS.

There have been only two towns within the bounds of Stony Creek Township, and one of these has long been extinct. The two are Windsor and Georgetown, the latter "winked out" long years ago. (Neff Post Office is also in this township, but it never was anything but a store with a dwelling house standing near.)

Windsor.—Location, Section 29, Town 20, Range 12, on Winchester & Muncie pike, at the Delaware County line; Joseph Bond, surveyor; John Thornburg, proprietor; recorded January 30, 1832; forty lots; streets are, north and south, Mulberry, Oak; east and west, Main. First addition, Smith & Dye's, Jere Smith, Stephen Dye, proprietors; Jere Smith, surveyor; twenty lots; recorded September 7, 1837. Second Addition, Reece's, Thomas W. Reece, proprietor; eight lots; recorded August 9, 1877. Distances: Bloomingsport, twenty miles; Deerfield, twenty miles; Fairview, ten and a half miles; Farmland, five and four-fifths miles; Huntsville, thirteen and one-third miles; Linn, twenty-one and four-fifths miles; Losantsville, nine and a half miles; Morristown, two and a half miles.

The town was laid out by Joseph Thornburg in 1832, during what may aptly be termed the "era of town-platting," since many of the villages in Randolph were projected not far from that date. Windsor seems to have been aspiring, and to have had high prospects as well, for only five years after the record of the first survey of forty lots, twenty more (half the original number) were annexed to the growing town by Smith & Dye, thus affording fresh room to spread beyond the original limit. And it is undoubtedly true that, had the old order of business continued to prevail, Windsor might to-day have been an important and prosperous inland town. But the sad fact, sad for Windsor and its ambitious denizens, can neither be ignored nor changed, so the fates declared, and who can successfully rebel against fate? If there had been power in the beginning of railroad construction, to have drawn the Bee-Line route south of the river, instead of locating it on the north side through the unknown wilderness, then, indeed, might Windsor have come to be, not, indeed, like its illustrious namesake in a foreign island kingdom, a palatial residence for Her Majesty, the English Queen, but a wide-awake, bustling, prosperous commercial and manufacturing center, known and noted throughout the county and the region. But men cannot lose what they never had, so Windsor has not lost the greatness which she never possessed. And her people, instead of mourning over fancied unrealized possibilities, may be sincerely thankful that life, health and substantial comfort, and the means of solid happiness they still possess equally with the people of the proudest metropolis on the footstool.

The first business in Windsor was a shoeshop, by Isaiah Templin, and a small store by a man from Richmond, name forgotten. Soon was set up a smith shop by Andrew Knapp. The mill by John Thornburg was built in 1827. There was no other on White River but Judge Sample's and Cox's Mill, east of Winchester. There was also another shoe shop. The first wagon shop was by William Ludworth. Windsor at one time had a large business, having three good stores and a grocery, and other things to match. The activity of the place began some years before the town was recorded. It proved its right to be by its actual being. Business is like beauty—it is its own excuse for being. The merchants have been Garretson, Joseph and Moses Cranor, a good stock; Stephen Dye, grocery, with a good stock; Chandler, a big business, with two clerks; Andrew G. Dye, a nice stock; Pennington, Lindley Thornburg, John M. Terrell, Nathan and Joel Thornburg, Joseph Johnson and A. M. Dye, Armfield Thornburg, twelve years; William Davis, J. J. Clayton.

The first hotel was built by George Helm, from Pennsylvania, some years after the town started. That hotel was burned in 1856, and has never been built again. Helm had put up a dwelling-house, and he sold it to Cranor, for a hotel; Cranor sold to Armfield Thornburg, he to Kinard, he to Andrew Dye, and so on to the present time.

The blacksmiths have been (as is usual) numerous: Messrs. Knapp, Templin, T. W. Thornburg, Oliver Beck, A. J. Dixon, Davison, Hikus, Sudworth. The wagon shops have been, Messrs. Sudworth, George Dixon. Physicians: Drs. Davisson, Farrow, Chenoweth.

Present business: There is a goodly number of houses and business rooms, and, were the place to fill up to its capacity of furnishing facilities for work, it would even now be an active, busy town. But the real business is now small enough. There are two smith shops, one dry goods store, two millinery shops, one wagon shop, one shoe shop, one tan yard, one saw-mill (water and steam), one grist mill (water and steam), one physician, a good one, one post office, two churches (Methodist and Christian), one schoolhouse, one lodge of I. O. O. F., thirty to forty houses and 134 people (census of 1880).

The Postmaster is William Davis. The previous incumbents it would take too much time to tell. The first one, however, was Benjamin Garretson. Others have been Messrs. Kinard, Thornburg, etc. Thornburg held the office twelve years.

The most flourishing era for Windsor was just before the railroad was built, about 1850, though it kept a considerable amount of business till since the war. A good store was burned in 1878, owned by the Thornburgs. Windsor is a quiet, orderly town, with a people disposed to good things, and it seems a pity that the tide of fortune has kept so sternly against their commercial future.

The town is located on the west side of Stony Creek just above the mouth, and exactly on the county line, that being the western limit. It stands upon the pike running from Winchester to Muncie, nearly midway between the two, and it is connected by pikes to Winchester, Farmland, Maxville, Muncie, Losantsville, Union City and most of the outside world generally. A very large and important bridge crosses Stony Creek just east of the town. It was washed away, but has been rebuilt in a still more substantial manner than at first.

Georgetown.—J. M. McNees, proprietor; C. S. Goodrich, surveyor; location, Section 24, Town 20, Range 13, on Windsor pike, one mile west from Maxville; eighteen lots; recorded April 24, 1840; streets, north and south, Washington; east and west, Main. The town is located on the Winchester & Windsor Turnpike, one mile west of Maxville. It was laid out in the year 1835 by John M. McNees, and occupies land on the south side of White River. H. D. Huffman kept the first store in 1835. J. M McNees kept hotel in 1835, and years before. Emsley Humphries had a smith shop. Lewallyn kept the last store in 1853. The merchants there at various times were Messrs. Huffman, Clayton, Cunningham, Marine, Miller & Ford, Lowallyn. The smiths have been Messrs. Humphreys, Harris, Segraves. J. M. McNees kept hotel fourteen years. There were never more than six houses in Georgetown. The village is now wholly extinct. Several of the old lots are owned and built on separately, but there is no town. Dr. Keener resided there as a physician, as also Dr. Marine. How there should have been any town at all, or the hope or prospect of any, is a mystery, since Maxville was within a mile or even less than that. The record of the plat of the latter appears not to have been made until 1850, but the town itself was established many years before—as far back as about 1830. Though probably Maxville and Georgetown commenced their race for life not far from the same time, and it may have been the hope of each one of the rival "embryo cities," that she should outstrip and rival, or even swallow up the other. But old Father Time has been too mighty alike for both. Georgetown has already been numbered among the things that have been, and the other also, lingering on perhaps some years longer in appearance, has lost well-nigh all the reality and activity of business life.

When these towns—Maxville, Georgetown and Windsor—stood on the great thoroughfare between the East and the West, where scores, or even hundreds of travelers; where hundreds, and sometimes thousands, of animals, in immense droves and herds, passed daily; where thronging emigrants were constantly pressing eagerly westward, westward, always westward, there seemed a prospect that all three, especially the former and the latter, might find room and business for a substantial or even a vigorous growth; but when the rail track was laid, and the steam whistle set up its roar, and the engine began to roll, a woe was pronounced upon all towns, no matter how ambitious or aspiring, which lay away from the path of the "iron horse."

Neff.—Is a post office and store on the Losantville pike, north. There is no town, not even a "four corners." It is just one house and a store. The post office and the store were established some twenty-five years ago. The store appears to be doing a snug country business. Residents in the vicinity are William Clevinger, William Hewitt, John C. Clevinger, William Gilmore. The country around seems a fertile, prosperous region. The store is located on Section 10, Town 19, Range 12, two miles west of Pleasant View, and five miles north of Losantville. It is now kept by Alfred Canfield, who is also Postmaster. Some of the persons who have kept store there have been John Terrell, Avila Thornburg, —— Thornburg, John Oakerson, William Oakerson, Alfred Canfield. A very good stock is maintained for a country store.

BIOGRAPHY.

Isaac Amburn was the son of Samuel Amburn; he was born in Carolina in 1789, and he married Rebecca Hodgson, who was born in Virginia in 1795. They came to Ohio in 1816, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1829. They were the parents of ten children, all of whom have been married and had families. They are as given herewith: Mary, five children; Elizabeth, eleven children; Samuel, ten children; Catharine, ten children; Jacob, eight children; Hester, one child; Hannah, nine children; Rebecca, seven children; Cynthia, six children; Rachel, six children. Grandchildren, seventy-three. Isaac Amburn resided with his son Samuel till his death, September 23, 1881, he being ninety-two years old. He was buried at Union Cemetery, south of Windsor, the funeral being attended by a concourse perhaps the largest of the kind that ever assembled in the region. He had resided in this region fifty-two years.

Samuel Amburn was born in 1765, in Pennsylvania; moved to North Carolina, married Elizabeth Jones, who was born in 1761, as also a second wife. He had eight children, and died in 1860, aged ninety-five years. They came to Stony Creek Township in 1829. He was somewhat in years when he moved into the forests of Stony Creek Township, but he dwelt there more than a generation, and fell asleep at last with almost a century of years resting upon him. The Amburn family seems to be long-lived, his son Isaac dying at the age of ninety-two.

Samuel Amburn, Jr., was born in 1818, in Ohio; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1829; married Maria Smith in 1840; has had ten children; is a farmer; owns 240 acres of land; is a prominent and successful man of business and an active and influential citizen. When he moved to the county, William Moore, John Holloway, William Holloway, Joab Thornburg, Amos Smith, were already here. William Dixon and Jethro Hiatt came when Mr. Amburn's people came, in 1829. He had to go three miles to school when he was a lad, and thought it no hardship, often having to "wade the flats" knee deep. Wading the water in coon hunting, etc., through the woods was nothing but fun.

Joseph Bond, son of Samuel Bond, was born in North Carolina in 1779; married Rachel Herold, born in 1781, in 1802; came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1811, and to Randolph County, Ind., mouth of Cabin Creek, in 1839. They had twelve children, eleven grown, ten married, five now living. He died in 1840, and his wife in 1842. They were farmers and Friends. He was a steady, mild-tempered, genial, Christian man, beloved by all who knew him, and his record is on high. His father, Samuel Bond, was born in North Carolina in 1753, and his mother, Elizabeth Beals Bond, in 1755.

Zimri Bond, brother of John H. Bond, was born in Wayne County, Ind., moved to Randolph County, Ind., and afterward to Kansas, the latter movement being made in 1872. He died in Kansas in 1877, having had five children. He had a fine farm on Cabin Creek, but he went to stock-buying, etc., and failing in business, lost his farm, and like hundreds of others, moved on farther West to the region of cheap lands. He was an Anti-Slavery Friend, an Abolitionist, an Underground Railroad operator and a Republican. His family have returned to Randolph County to the region of their former home. His widow is an intelligent and active Quaker lady, who is trying in meekness to serve the Lord in purity of heart and to train up her orphaned family in the fear and love of God.

James Butler, born in Virginia in 1808, married Emeline Clay in Virginia in 1830, came to Randolph (Huntsville) in 1836, and to Stony Creek in 1838, and they have resided on the place ever since. They had ten children, four girls and six boys. All grew up and were married, and six are living now. Mr. Butler died in 1861, and Mrs. B. is living still, sixty-nine years old. They belong to the Christian Church. She has seven or eight great-grandchildren, and resides north of Pleasant Grove Church, in Stony Creek Township.

John Diggs was the brother of Mark Diggs, who is also dead, and of William Diggs, who is still living. He was born in Carolina August 8, 1802. He came from Carolina to Randolph County, upon White River, in 1821, and settled on Stony Creek in 1827. He had five children, and died January 22, 1863, aged sixty years five months and fourteen days. His wife, Catharine Diggs, died October 29, 1867, aged sixty-three years six months and thirteen days. He was a prominent and respected member among the Friends, and was buried in Poplar Run Cemetery, as is also his wife who survived her husband more than four years. He was a Whig, an Abolitionist and a Republican, but he remained with the "Body of Friends" at the "Separation," not deeming the alleged reasons for dividing the "Body" sufficient to justify the course pursued by the Anti-Slavery Friends.

Joseph Hewitt, born of Irish parents, came to Ross County, Ohio, in 1808; married Sally Putnam in 1831; came to Randolph County in 1841, and has had ten children, all grown and married, and nine living still. He now resides at Farmland, and is a farmer and stock-dealer. His children are: Catharine (Gilmore), has seven children, lives near Neff, Ind.; Lucinda (Thornburg), has seven children, resides in Randolph County, Ind.; Sophia (Adkins), has eleven children, lives in Missouri; Sarah Ann (Oakson), has seven children, lives in Farmland; Marion, has seven children, lives near Neff; Philip, has seven children, lives in Missouri; William, has three children, lives near Neff; Joseph, Jr., has six children, lives in Delaware County, Ind.; Peter Owen, has one child, lives in Farmland; Mary (McIntyre), dead.

Mr. Hewitt is a man of good judgment, and has been greatly confided in by his neighbors, being often chosen as arbitrator in disputes, as administrator in the settlement of estates, etc. He has been for many years, and is still, an active and exemplary church member and Christian worker.

William Hewitt was born in Ross County, Ohio, in 1840; came with his parents to Randolph County, Ind., in 1841; married Margaret E. Helm, of Henry County, Ind., in 1861, and they have three children. He owns 270 acres of land, and carries on farming extensively and successfully. He is a Methodist and a Republican. He enlisted in the Thirty-sixth Indiana; had bleeding at the lungs, and was discharged after nine months' service, on account of disability, and he has never been hearty since. His brother, Joseph, was in the same regiment and company (Company K, Thirty-sixth Infantry), and he was discharged, too, for loss of hearing.

Hosea Lamb was born in North Carolina, and came to Richmond before it was laid out as a town; cleared the ten acres on which Richmond was first built, and entered 160 acres in Nettle Creek, but settled in Stony Creek. He had nine children; was a farmer and a Friend, and died in 1855. His wife died in 1877, being a very old woman, and having lived a widow twenty-two years.

Restore Lamb, son of Hosea Lamb, died in 1878, aged about sixty years. His brother Isaac was accidentally shot and killed while duck-hunting. A gun was handed to him, muzzle foremost. It was dropped, and the gun went off. He was shot in the breast, causing his instant death. This sad casualty took place more than twenty years ago.

Joab McNees was born in 1781; lived in Tennessee; came to Randolph Co., Ind., settling in Stony Creek, near Georgetown, in 1829, and married Sarah McCollom in 1803. They had sixteen children, twelve grown and ten married. He moved eleven to Randolph County. Mr. McNees died in 1833, aged fifty-two years. His wife was born in 1783, and died in 1870, aged eighty-seven years. She lived a widow thirty-seven years. A rather remarkable life—thirty years a wife, the mother of sixteen children, and thirty-seven years a widow!

[NOTE.—The writer of these sketches knew a woman who was a wife at fifteen, lived with her husband sixty years, was the mother of nineteen children, raising about twelve, lived a widow eighteen years, and died at the full age of ninety-three years.]

John M. McNees, born in Tennessee in 1805, married Mary Ann Greenman in 1825 (who was born in 1801); came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1829; entered eighty acres of land, and lives on it still. Mr. McNees laid out Georgetown, one mile west of Farmland, in 1835, and kept hotel there fourteen years. There was very much travel on that road in those times, wagons, and men on horseback, and droves of horses, passing west; and, after some years, great droves would pass eastward. Sometimes 700 or 800 head of cattle would go by in a single drove. Georgetown never got to be much of a town. There never were more than six houses. The village is now totally extinct as such. Four houses stand there yet, but the lots are town lots no longer. Mr. McNees is a farmer, though now getting too old to perform much labor.

William Merryweather was born in England; emigrated to America and settled in the State of Delaware, but came to Randolph County in 1842, and resides there still. His wife also is a native of England. They have five children. Mr. Merryweather owns 200 acres of land, being an excellent farmer, an estimable citizen, and an intelligent and worthy man, nearly seventy-two years old. Mr. Merryweather and his wife are highly esteemed among their acquaintances for integrity and solid worth.

Henry Moore was born in Wilmington, Del., in 1804. He came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1816; married Mary Wright in 1831 (who was born in 1808), and settled in Randolph County in 1838, buying 160 acres of land in Stony Creek Township. He was a farmer, a Friend, a Whig, an Abolitionist and a Republican. He was the father of five children, and died in 1879, leaving a widow to mourn his loss, as also several children.

George Moore was the brother of Henry Moore, being born in 1806, and he emigrated from Delaware, on the Eastern seaboard, to Randolph County, in 1839, marrying Mary Hiatt in the same year. They have five children. Mr. Moore and his wife are an excellent and worthy couple, and they are thrifty and prosperous, he being the owner of 200 acres of excellent land. He was in early days a Whig, and has been, since 1856, a Republican.

Reuben Medlar was born in Pennsylvania in 1812; married Elizabeth Medlar in 1836; came to Montgomery County, Ohio, in 1837, and to Stony Creek, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1840. He made the journey from Pennsylvania in a one-horse wagon in twenty-one days. The cost was as follows: Toll-gates, $5.59½; other expenses, $28.52. They have had thirteen children, and six of the number are now living. Mrs. Medlar died in 1874, in her sixty-first year. Mr. Medlar is a thriving farmer, owning 210 acres of fine land in that fertile region; belongs to the Reformed (German) Church, and in politics is a Democrat.

Joseph Rooks was born in 1772, in Kentucky; came to Ohio; married Elizabeth Jackson; moved to Randolph County, Ind., about 1822, with fourteen children—five boys and nine girls.

[Mrs. Patsy Branson, of Muncie, Delaware Co., Ind., says Joseph Rooks had fourteen children in family, all at home at one time, and that she ate dinner there with the whole group of fourteen children.]

Mr. Rooks was tall and stout, and very strong. His standing weight is said to have been 220 pounds for sixty years. He was a giant in strength, and his boys were the same way.

The children were John, Uriah, Thomas, Samuel, William (five sons), Hannah, Sarah, Mary, Charity, Phœbe, Rebecca, Betsey, Sibyl, Lydia (nine daughters). Joseph Rooks and his family moved to Missouri in 1839. He died in Northwestern Missouri in 1869, aged ninety-seven years. His wife died August 17, 1880, aged ninety-four years. He cleared up two farms in Randolph County. First he settled on the Clevinger farm, east of Neff, and then on one northwest of Neff, in the forks of Little White River and Stony Creek. He owned there 300 acres. He sold out in 1838; moved to Missouri in 1839, and became a large land-owner in that State, having been said to be in possession, at one time, of 100 eighty-acre lots. Some odd stories are told of Mr. Rooks and his family, which fact, indeed, is not very strange for so immense a family in those hard old times. But what matter? Among these enfeebled generations it is impossible even to imagine what, in those rough and rugged days, was undergone, without even thinking it to be anything curious or unusual. They were at least not effeminate nor helpless. They boldly hewed their fearless way, rugged and stern, through trouble and difficulty appalling to gentler times. All honor to their heroism! The Indians else had still roamed the wilds over the ground where now fertile farms shine in beauty, and magnificent cities rise in gorgeous splendor to rejoice the sight.

Amos Smith was born in Highland County, Ohio, in 1799, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1829; married Margaret Thornburg in 1830, and has had five children. His wife died in 1879, aged seventy-six years, and the bereaved husband now lives with his son-in-law, George Clevinger, on the Windsor pike. He originally entered eighty acres. He belongs to the Christian (New-Light) Church. His race is almost run, yet he stands waiting in patient, exultant hope the issuing of the final order, "Open the crystal gates and let my faithful servant enter in!"

A large number of the aged veterans, settlers in this region in "auld lang syne," still linger on the shores of mortality, feeble, decrepit, but mostly cheerful and patient, awaiting in joyful hope the welcome summons, "It is enough; come up higher!"

Ira E. Smithson is a native of "Old Virginia," the proud "Old Dominion," the haughty "Mother of Presidents," the land of the "F. F. V.'s." He was born there in 1800. But he left his native soil and emigrated to Clinton County, Ohio, that old-time half-way house to weary emigrants, that stopping-place for thousands, whence again, a fresh start being taken, pushing their onward way toward the setting sun, a final halt would at length be called in the fruitful Hoosier land. And from Clinton County, once more resuming the impatient line of march, they stopped not, they stayed not, till they had found their old-time friends in the woods of Randolph. In 1839, this latter trip was accomplished, and this was the last march; for hither he had come to stay. And stay he did; and for full forty years Randolph County has furnished this pilgrim a domicile; and, though his wife has gone on before, and some of his children have passed "within the vail," this aged veteran still tarries among men in the "land of the dying." Mr. Smithson married Mary More in Ohio, and he has been the father of nine children. His wife is dead, and he, a feeble old man, an octogenarian, remains on the earth, residing with his son on the old homestead. His son Ira was born in Ohio in 1829; came with his parents to Randolph County, Ind., in 1839; is married, and has six children. He is a farmer and a Republican, and belongs to the Christian (New-Light) Church.

William Stanton was born in North Carolina in 1812, marrying Sarah Farlow, and afterward Rachel Leonard. He has had twelve children, six of whom are still living. The family came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1861, arriving at last, safe, after many troubles and hardships, at Mark Diggs', in Nettle Creek Township, fleeing from the Southern country to get away from slavery and the war. Some reminiscences from his lips appear under that heading in this work.

Isaac Thornburg was born in 1775, in North Carolina; came to Highland County, Ohio, in 1813, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1830. He married Rebecca Hodson in 1793, and had twelve children, nine grown and married. Nine were sons and three daughters. They were as follows: John, dead, had eleven children; Joab, living, has had nine children; Elizabeth, dead, six children; Joseph, dead, ten children; Job, living, seven children; Margaret, dead; Isaac, Jr., dead, five children; Edward, living, twelve children; Alexander, living, nine children; Jonathan, dead, eleven children; Thomas Wesley, dead, six children. Isaac Thornburg settled two miles east of Windsor; entered 160 acres of land; died in 1862, aged eighty-nine years. He was a Friend, a Whig, an anti-slavery man, a Republican; an excellent, careful, gentle, mild, faithful man. May the world see many like him as the ages roll. His second wife was Mary Ann (Bunker) Ring. He is said to have had over four hundred descendants.

Joab Thornburg was born in 1795, in North Carolina; came to Ohio in 1811; married Elizabeth Holloway in North Carolina, on Christmas Day, 1817; came to Stony Creek, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1825, entered eighty acres of land, and has resided there ever since—fifty-seven years. They have had nine children. He is a farmer and a Friend; was a Whig and an Abolitionist, and is a Republican. The aged couple are feeble, but not more so than would be expected, considering their age. There is something venerable in an ancient homestead, hallowed by the loves, the joys, the sorrows, the dear, the sad, the holy remembrances of almost sixty years of family life. Those who spend their lives in changing from place to place, having never a home, but only a temporary abode, occupying, in their whole lives upon earth, not a foot of land which they could call their own, know little of the real substance of home life. They live, indeed; their children grow up to full stature; but their residence is only half a home. He surely has abundant cause for rejoicing whose lot is cast where he can dwell from youth to old age, in a dear and blessed spot, to which sweet and precious memory clings with a close and perpetual tie. Let it be the ambition of every family to acquire that excellent earthly blessing, the ownership of a permanent home.

William Armfield Thornburg, Windsor, was born in North Carolina in 1816, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1825; married Maria Clevinger in 1835, and has had twelve children—ten grown and married, and nine living now. One, a son, resides at Union City, two in Illinois, five in or near Windsor, and one four miles southeast of Windsor. He was brought up a Friend, but has belonged mostly to the Methodists or United Brethren. In political faith he was a Whig, and is now a Republican. His business has been largely farming. He has sold goods twelve years, and kept a hotel at Windsor and at Williamsburg; operated a mill south of Windsor, and now resides in that town. Mr. Thornburg and his worthy companion seem thus far to have made their cheerful way through the hardships of their time, and to be passing peacefully onward toward that "bourn whence no traveler returns," and toward the blissful mansions prepared on high for the faithful, trustful, obedient ones who patiently accomplish their allotment in the world below.

David Vestal was born in North Carolina, coming to Randolph County perhaps in 1823; settled on Stony Creek, two and a half miles south of Windsor; was chosen Justice of the Peace very soon after; sold out to John Thornburg about 1830 or 1831, and left the county in the latter year, moving to White Lick, below Indianapolis, at which place he is understood to have died. They had five children at the time of removal. He was kind, genial and ob'liging, and his wife was an excellent woman. While he resided in the county, he was a prominent citizen of that region.

Winchester Herald, October 11, 1882: At a gravel pit near Ridgeville, a dozen human skeletons were unearthed, some of them in a remarkably good state of preservation, and specimens of them can be seen at the office of Dr. Shoemaker. They evidently belonged to Indians, and probably a century or more has elapsed since their interment. They were found at a depth of from six to twelve feet from the surface.

Same paper: David Mehaney, of Shawnee Mound, Tippecanoe County, while digging a ditch on his farm, found the remains of a mastodon.

Solomon Wright was born in Green County, Tenn., on Holston River, in 1802; came to Clinton County, Ohio, with his father, in 1804, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1817. His father moved here in 1817 or 1818, but Solomon came sooner. [See reminiscences.] Paul W., John and Henry H. Way, and some of the Diggses, had come already. His uncle, William Haworth, and also one of his older brothers, had preceded him to Randolph, and Solomon and still another brother came by themselves, with one horse between them, all the way from Clinton County, Ohio. Returning after some months to Ohio, he finally accompanied his father to his future home, probably in 1817, and for about sixty-five years the Hoosier State has reckoned him as one of her worthy denizens. Jesse Green, John Ballenger, Sumner Lee, Thomas Gillum and others came in company from Ohio, and settled on White River. Solomon's father took up his abode on what has since been known as the Brooks farm, two and a half miles west of Winchester. He married Margery Diggs in 1824, fifty-eight years ago. She was for many years of her later life much afflicted and very feeble, and, in the spring of 1881, she exchanged a habitation of clay for the robes of celestial beauty in the heavenly mansions. They were the parents of ten children, eight of whom survive—George W., ten children, resides near his father's; Hannah (Garrett, Thornburg), six children, resides in Iowa; Mary (Clayton), no children, lives near her father's home; William, lives near home, has twelve children; Lydia (Dick), lives near home, no children; Rachel (Hunt), lives nine miles south, eight children; John, resides near his father's, five children; Fanny (Taylor), resides at Fort Wayne, one child. Solomon Wright moved to Stony Creek Township many years ago (1829), and still resides near the mouth of Cabin Creek. He is eighty years old, but is strong and vigorous. His wife was an invalid, having become well-nigh helpless. She died in the spring of 1881, having filled the measure of her days and gone home to the mansions prepared on high. Solomon Wright is in religion an Anti-Slavery Friend; in politics, a Henry Clay Whig and a modern "Liberty man," and still later a Republican. His first vote was given for John Quincy Adams, and his last for James A. Garfield, fifty-six years having intervened between the first vote and the last. He seems strong and vigorous to last long enough to vote for several Presidents more; still, only God knoweth, and Friend Wright is four-score years old!

SAMUEL AMBURN. The subject of this sketch is one of the substantial farmers and citizens of Randolph County. He is the son of Isaac and Rebecca (Hodgen) Amburn, and was born in Clinton County, Ohio, November 18, 1818. He is the third of a family of nine children, of whom three are now living; his father was born in North Carolina June 4, 1789, and his mother was born in the same State September 15, 1795; his parents removed from North Carolina to Clinton County, Ohio, and came to this State in the year 1828, and located in this county. At that time there were but few improvements in the part of the county where they settled, the nearest neighbor being three miles distant. Samuel was busily engaged assisting his father to clear a farm from the wilderness until he was twenty-two years of age; his father being in very limited circumstances rendered Samuel's career as a youth peculiarly trying; his life was beset with hardships more severe than most sons of pioneers; his father being a hard worker and not given to speculation, believed that what he obtained in the way of property should be secured by the severest labor. Samuel's education was almost entirely neglected, and what little he did obtain was in a subscription school, where he paid his tuition by cutting and splitting rails. At the age of twenty-two, he bought forty acres of unimproved land situated one mile east of where he now resides, and set to work making a farm of his own. He was married to Maria Smith, daughter of Amos and Margaret Smith, of this county, August 27, 1840. After marriage, he and his wife settled on the forty acres he had previously purchased in the woods; he is now owner and proprietor of 280 acres of excellent land, with 175 acres under a high state of cultivation; his farm is one of the most beautiful and best improved in the county, being of an excellent quality of soil, gently rolling and tolerably well watered. Mr. Amburn has been eminently successful as a farmer, accumulating property very rapidly, and provided comfortable homes for five of his children. Mr. and Mrs. Amburn are the parents of ten children, eight of whom are now living—Amos W., born June 24, 1841; Elizabeth J., born June 25, 1843; Isaac L., born April 1, 1846; Lydia M., born July 25, 1848; John E., born November 3, 1850; Enos L., born June 28, 1853; Francis M., born February 9, 1856; Anthony W., born March 15, 1858; Rosa J., born October 4, 1861; Martha A., born June 18, 1864. Seven of their children are married, and comfortably situated in life. His son, Isaac L., enlisted in the Eighty-fourth Indiana Regiment, in the fall of 1861; he remained in the service for about six months, when his father took him home, he being under age, seventeen, and not able for active service. Mrs. Amburn is an acceptable and honored member of the Christian Church. Mr. Amburn usually affiliates with the Democratic party, but does not always draw party lines in casting his vote for county officers; he has always voted for Gen. Thomas Browne, a stanch Republican, for Congress and other offices. Mr. Amburn is pleasantly situated, having erected most excellent and comfortable buildings. His dwelling house is a beautiful two-story brick, and a model in architectural beauty and convenience, situated on a commanding eminence, surrounded with beautiful shade trees. He has been a most industrious, enterprising and liberal-hearted citizen, surrounded with an abundance of the necessaries and luxuries of life. Leads a quiet and frugal life, and is an honored citizen of the county.

FRANCIS M. AMBURN, farmer, P. O. Windsor, was born February 9, 1856, in Randolph County, Ind. He was married to Matilda A. Myers, June 3, 1874, who was born April 17, 1855. Her father, Henry Myers, was a native of Pennsylvania, and deceased in 1863, in this county. They have four children—Roy L., born September 30, 1874; Perly O., born January 4, 1877; Nellie May, born January 5, 1878, and Jossie A., born August 17, 1880. Mr. Amburn is a member of I. O. O. F., No. 517, Windsor Lodge; was educated in the common schools of the county, and is an energetic, industrious farmer.

JOHN H. BOND, farmer, P. O. Farmland, born in North Carolina, December 6, 1807; he emigrated to Wayne County, Ind., in the fall of 1811, where he was married to Emily Hockett, in September, 1828. Mr. B. came to this county in 1831 and settled on the farm where he now resides. He cleared the farm by his own industry, and soon made it change from the wilderness to that of a beautiful home. His wife was born April 13, 1811, in North Carolina, and immigrated with her parents to Wayne County, Ind., about the year 1815. Mr. B. is of Quaker descent and a member of the Church of Friends. He has held the office of Township Trustee, to which he was elected in 1840; owns a good farm of 126 acres of land; Republican in politics, and is kind, generous and of undoubted integrity.

ALBERT CANFIELD, merchant and Postmaster at Neff, this county, was born in Cambridge City, Wayne County, Ind., August 19, 1852. He is the son of Silas and Susan (Graham) Canfield, and is the third of a family of five sons, four of whom are now living. His father was born in the town of Reading, Steuben County, N. Y., March 22, 1817. His mother was born near the Natural Bridge, in Virginia. His father came to this State in the fall of 1845, and settled in Cambridge City, and was married to Susan Graham in the year 1848. After marriage they settled in Cambridge City, where they remained until their deaths. His mother died June 16, 1859, and his father November 8, 1879. Albert lived with his parents in Cambridge City until the fall of 1863, when he came to Randolph County and made his home with A. N. Thornburg until he was twenty-one years of age. While here, he was engaged in working on the farm during the spring and summer, and attending the district schools in the winter. In 1873 and 1874, he made his home with Judge W. R. West, of Anderson, his uncle, for the purpose of attending the Anderson High School. While in attendance at this school, he applied faithfully to his studies and advanced rapidly. After leaving the high school, he engaged in teaching in the common schools of Madison County for four months. At the expiration of his term of school, he engaged with a publishing house of Indianapolis as traveling salesman. He served this house acceptably for about six months, when he acted as traveling agent for about one year for two other firms. At the expiration of this service, he returned to this county and was engaged as a teacher in the public schools during the winter for about two years, and working on the farm during the spring and summer. In the spring of 1878, he engaged in a general mercantile business at Neff, this county, with James Dougherty as partner, under the title of Dougherty & Co. This co-partnership continued until January 20, 1879, when Mr. Canfield bought Mr. Dougherty's interest and has been alone in the business ever since. Mr. Canfield carries a well-selected stock of goods, embracing dry goods, groceries, hardware, boots and shoes, etc., and does a thriving business, his annual sales amounting to about $12,000. Neff is one of the best, if not the best, country business points in the county. Mr. C. was appointed Postmaster at Neff in 1878, and has held the office ever since. He was married to Miss Naomi M. Branson, daughter of Joseph B. and Catharine (Miller) Branson, of this county, May 1, 1879. Mr. and Mrs. Canfield are acceptable and honored members of the Christian Church. Mr. C. is also an honored member of Windsor Lodge, No. 517, I. O. O. F. He is a stanch and active Republican, an energetic and frugal business man, a genial and affable gentleman, and he and his good wife are favorites in the circle of their friends, and have a bright future before them.

NELSON T. CHENOWETH, physician, Windsor, born in Darke County, Ohio, October 8, 1837; he went to Illinois in 1857, from there back to Ohio in 1858, where he enlisted in the Eleventh Ohio Infantry, and afterward served as Captain in Company E, Sixty-ninth Infantry. After the war, he came to Wayne County, Ind., and entered the Miami Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1866, from which institution he graduated, with honors, in the following year. He located at Windsor, in this county, in 1868, and was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Laura E. Haynes, March 25, 1869. The Doctor's father, Thomas F. Chenoweth, was born in Ohio in 1808, and at this date is still living and quite active for one of his age. Dr. C. was educated in the common schools of Ohio, which were good at that time. He also attended a seminary and graded school, which more fully developed his mind and ability. In early manhood, he followed, successfully, farming and teaching. The Doctor is actively engaged in the practice of medicine, which annually reaches $2,000. He was a charter member and first Noble Grand of Windsor Lodge, No. 517, I. O. O. F., and is W. M. of F. & A. M., Farmland Lodge, 308. He is Republican in politics, a courteous gentleman, a skillful physician and an esteemed citizen. Two interesting children blessed his marriage union—Flora, born January 30, 1870, and Thomas W., April 13, 1872.

PHILIP K. DICK, farmer and miller, P. O. Farmland, born November 23, 1824, in the State of Ohio; he came to this county in the spring of 1848. His father, Philip, was a native of Virginia, where he was born February 22, 1795; deceased in Ohio, 1877. Mr. Dick was married the first time to Peggy Wallace, who was born August 12, 1832, deceased March 18, 1870. Seven children, living, blessed this union—Mary E., born July 12, 1851; Nancy J., February 25, 1853; Barbara E., February 10, 1855; Martha V., November 30, 1858; William L., March 6, 1861; Francis M., January 23, 1864, and Robert B., June 4, 1867. He was married the second time to Lydia Wright, who was born March 30, 1833. Mr. D. was educated in the common schools of Ohio, and has been a close student from boyhood. He has held the offices of Township Treasurer, Assessor and Justice of the Peace, giving entire satisfaction to his constituency. He is a member of the church of Friends, and an energetic worker in the temperance cause. Mr. D. owns a good farm of 120 acres of land, and a half-interest in a grist-mill on Cabin Creek, which has a capacity of fifty bushels of grain per day. His brother, Francis M. Dick, was in the war for the Union; he enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Infantry, serving through the war.

JOHN E. HEICKES, born in Adams County, Penn., May 14, 1830; he came to this county in April, 1868. His father's name was Emanuel Heickes, and was born in Pennsylvania October 12, 1785, died there 1862. Mr. Hickes was married to Leah Widner, of Pennsylvania, who was born May 22, 1829. They have five children living—Mary L., Arista, George C., Cora J. and Nelson M. He was educated in the common schools of his native State, and has gained much information by observation and traveling. He enlisted in the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Pennsylvania Infantry and the Third Artillery. He had charge of the rebel President's baggage while a prisoner at Fortress Monroe, and carries letters of recommendation from Gens. Butler, Ord and Miles. He is a member of the United Brethren Church, also of I. O. O. F., No. 1, of Fort Monroe, and is Republican in politics. He was the Postmaster of Windsor for three years, Notary Public for four years, and collects claims for soldiers and private citizens. He is considered to be a trustworthy citizen and those who have business in his line will find him prompt in discharge of whatever may be intrusted to his care. His address is Windsor, Ind.

SAMUEL HUPP, farmer, P. O. Parker, born May 5, 1825, in Virginia; he came to Ohio in 1830, to Delaware County in 1852, and from thence to this county in 1875. He was united in marriage to Mary Watt, who was born in the State of Ohio, December 10, 1830. Mr. Hupp received a common school education, and is a great friend to that cause. The father of Mr. Hupp, Emanuel, was in the war of 1812, and deceased in Ohio, about 1830. Joseph Watt, the father of Mrs. Hupp, was a native of Kentucky, where he was born 1805, and is still living at this date. Mr. H. is a member of the M. E. Church, and Parker Grange, No. 404. He is engaged in farming and stock-raising; owns a farm of eighty acres of fertile land, and seems contented in his chosen occupation. Nine children blessed this union—Emily E., married, born July 4, 1853; Florence B., married, born July 24, 1859; Mary A., married, born January 8, 1860; Martha E., married, born January 7, 1862; Caroline, born October 10, 1864; William E., February 28, 1866; Nora A., April 6, 1867; Charles W., January, 1870, and Joseph W., December 20, 1874.

ENOS A. LUKA, farmer, P. O. Farmland, born in Clinton County, Ohio, June 6, 1833; came to this county with his parents in the winter of the same year; he was married, December 28, 1853, to Sarah A. Clevenger, who was born February 25, 1837. These parents have five children living—William L., born May 24, 1856; Christian L., November 13, 1857; Elihu F., June 18, 1861; Anna M., November 21, 1865, and Curtis L., February 20, 1868. Mr. L. was educated in the common schools of this county, and has followed farming successfully. He is a member of the New Light Church, and of Windsor Lodge, I. O. O. F., 517. His father, George Luka, was a native of Virginia, and born July 14, 1806, deceased July 28, 1877. His wife's father, Lewis Clevenger, was born May 18, 1806, in North Carolina; he came to this county at an early date, and deceased January 20, 1851. Mr. Luka is a Republican in politics, but not a party man; he is a successful farmer, and generally esteemed.

WILLIAM MERRYWEATHER.

William Merryweather, son of Thomas and Elizabeth Merryweather, was born in Froddingham, Yorkshire, England, January 11, 1811. He is the youngest of a family of six children, of whom he is the only one known to be living. His father was a native of Wales, and his mother of England. His father's occupation was that of a dredger. His mother died in 1816, and his father in 1832.

William lived with his parents until he was eleven years of age, when he was compelled to earn his own living. He hired out at first as a farm hand, receiving for his first year's work his board only.

He came to the United States in the year 1831, and landed in New York City June 1 of that year.

His educational advantages were very poor, having attended school but a small portion of the time, from six to eleven years of age.

After his arrival in this country, he first settled at Wilmington, Del., where he had a brother living, and remained here until 1836. During his stay with his brother, he worked a part of the time in a spice mill, and part of the time on the farm.

He came to Richmond, Wayne Co., Ind., on the 10th of May, 1836. After hiring out as a farm hand for one year, he rented a farm, receiving one-third of what he raised, and continued to rent upon the same terms for five years.

He came to Randolph County in the year 1842, and settled on a farm one mile from where he now resides. He leased eighty acres of land with nine acres cleared and remained here for three years, when he purchased eighty acres of the farm he now owns, with two acres cleared, a log cabin and a few fruit trees as improvements. His farm now consists of 160 acres, with 130 under cultivation. A portion of his farm is quite rolling, healthfully and beautifully located, with a fine quality of soil. He has selected a beautiful site for his farm buildings, being a commanding knoll in close proximity to a fine spring, and surrounded with abundant shade. His buildings are large and convenient, and present a picturesque scene. Mr. Merryweather has one of the best stock farms in this county.

He was united in marriage to Hannah Tharp, daughter of George and Rebecca Tharp, of England, in Philadelphia, August 16, 1831, who still survives, and has been a true and faithful companion to her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Merryweather are the parents of nine children, of whom five are now living. Three of these children are married, and comfortably situated in this county. The unmarried ones reside at the old homestead. These children are all honored and useful citizens.

Their son, John, enlisted as a soldier in 1862, in the Eighty-fourth Regiment, Company A. He was a gallant soldier, and was engaged in all of the battles of his regiment with the exception of Chickamauga. He was wounded at the battle of Lovejoy, and was, for a time, in the hospital at Nashville. He served until the close of the war, and was mustered out with his regiment.

Mr. and Mrs. Merryweather are not members of any church, but are regular attendants at the meetings of the Society of Friends.

Mr. M. is a stanch Republican, and has served his county frequently for a great many years as juror.

This excellent and honored family lead a quiet and frugal life. They are well situated, being surrounded by all that is necessary to make them comfortable and happy. They are honored and useful members of society, and are well known throughout the county for their unlimited hospitality.

Mr. Merryweather has an excellent memory, and takes great delight in recounting his experience in his younger days, both in England and the United States.

JACOB R. MILLS, farmer, P. O. Farmland, born December 18, 1853, in this county. He was married, April, 1872, to Mary Robinson, who was born July, 1856. This union has been blessed with four children—Minnie N., born March 8, 1874; Joseph, March 21, 1876; Dovie L., March 9, 1878, and Clatie, born March 8, 1882. Mr. Mills had the advantages of the common schools and improved them as much as was in his power. He is Republican in politics, and engages in farming and buying poultry.

JOHN N. MOORE, farmer, P. O. Farmland, born April 12, 1834, in Wayne County, Ind. His father, Henry W. Moore, was originally from Delaware, where he was born in 1804, came to Wayne County in 1816, from thence he settled in this county in the year 1837, with his family. Mr. Moore was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, the first time to Eliza Hubbard, September 16,1858; the second time to Sarah C. Hubbard, sister to his first wife, July 13,1878. He was educated in the common schools of Wayne and Randolph Counties, and has followed the occupation of farming from boyhood. He is of German and English descent, owns a well-cultivated farm of 127 acres of land. Republican in politics, and is a worthy member of the Friends Church. Mr. Moore had three children by his first wife—Henry H., born August 15, 1859; Mary E., August 21, 1862, and Charity E., May 22, 1864. He has two children by his present wife—Lulu M., born April 30, 1877, and Onie C., August 26, 1878.

JOHN OZBUN, Farmland, born May 19, 1828, in this county. His father John, was orginally from North Carolina, where he was born about 1795. Mr. Ozbun was married to Miss C. Hockett, who was born August 28, 1835. Mr. Ozbun received a good common school education, considering the early disadvantages of the pioneer period. He has seven children living—Lydia J., Lindley M., Emma, Eli, William C., Charles H. and Wesley. He has followed teaching school for a number of years during the winter season, farming in the summer, and a minister in the Church of Friends. He is considered an honest, upright, true man and friend.

JOHN H. ROGERS, miller, Farmland, born August 19, 1851, in Columbus, Ohio, and came to this county in the winter of 1859. He was united in marriage to Nancy J. Dick, October 21, 1871. Mr. Rogers was educated in the graded and common schools of Ohio, and is a man of good mind. He has followed milling during life, and is considered to be a good one. He is a member of the Friends Church and an enterprising citizen in all the noble works of manhood. He is a member of the firm of Rogers & Dick, proprietors of the flouring mill, situated on Cabin Creek. His parents were born in England, his father, Edward, about 1832; his mother, 1830. His father came to Ohio from England in 1849, to Columbus, Ohio, and deceased in La Porte County in 1859. His mother lived in this county till 1879, when death removed her from these earth scenes. Mr. Rogers has four interesting children—Alonzo E., born December 30, 1872; Gertrude M., May 2, 1875; Edgar A., August 9, 1877, and Mary E., October 4, 1879. Those who call on the firm of Rogers & Dick will find them attentive to business, and courteous to customers.

ELIZABETH SAMPLE, farming, P. O. Windsor, was born December 4, 1808, in Adams County, Penn. She was married to John B. Sample January 17, 1836, who was born in 1791 in Pennsylvania, deceased August 28, 1854. They had six children—Sarah E., born November 20, 1836; John A., January 1, 1838; James B., June 9, 1841; Adam, December 25, 1843; William F., October 31, 1846, and Harriet N., December 17, 1850. Mrs. Sample sent one son to the late war, John A., who enlisted in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana Infantry. She is of German descent; a Presbyterian; owns a farm of fifty-one acres of good land, manages it well, and is a woman of sterling integrity.

ISAAC J. SMITH, farmer, P. O. Windsor, was born December 3, 1832, in this county. His father, Amos Smith, was born in Virginia June 28, 1799; immigrated to Ohio, and from thence to this county in 1827; he died October 9, 1882, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. Mr. Smith was married to Sarah M. Miles August 18, 1859. She was born June 24, 1840, and was of a kind and loving disposition. The union was a congenial one, and the years of wedded life passed happily until September 27, 1880, when death entered the home circle and took from its midst the amiable and beloved wife. Mr. Smith deeply feels his loss, and the exit of that pure life from the stage of action which had rendered his home so pleasant has filled his mind with sorrow. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Church, and was beloved by all who knew her. Mr. Smith was educated in the common schools of early days, but has made good use of this in business and in the accumulation of property. He owns 381 acres of valuable land, and engages extensively in buying and selling stock; he frequently has on hand fifty head of cattle and one hundred head of hogs. He is an ardent Republican, a member of the A., F. & A. M., No. 308, of Farmland, and an enterprising, courteous gentleman. The mother of the subject of this sketch died November 3, 1879, at the age of seventy-eight years.

HENRY STUDEBAKER, Farmland, was born July 3, 1842, in Miami County, Ohio; he came to this county in the spring of 1873, and was married to Mary Barnes February 10, 1862. Mrs. Studebaker was born in Clinton County, Ohio, January 20, 1846. They have one child, Edgar Q., born July 10, 1863. Mr. Studebaker was educated in the graded schools of Troy and Dayton, Ohio, which were the best in the county at that time. He has been engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods, and for seven years last past has been the proprietor of the flouring-mill where he now resides. Mr. Studebaker was in the navy during the war for the Union, taking part in the famous Red River expedition. He was assigned to the gunboat Mound City, and afterward to the Neosho. His father, John Studebaker, was originally from Pennsylvania, where he was born in the year 1812; he now resides in Ohio. The father of Mrs. Studebaker, James Barnes, was born in Highland County, Ohio, January 30, 1821; he came to this county in 1868. Mr. Studebaker owns valuable mill property, worth $5,000, with a capacity of grinding 12,000 bushels annually, and the people will find him a courteous business man and attentive to all who may favor him with their patronage.

ABRAHAM SYMONS, farmer, P. O. Farmland. The subject of this biography was born in Henry County, Ind., November 3, 1828, and settled in this county in the year 1855. He has been married twice, the first time to Mary C. Horn, February 17, 1852, who was born May 8, 1834, deceased April 16, 1866; the second time to his present wife, originally Mary E. Townsend, September 23, 1869, born April 3, 1842. Four children blessed the first union—William E., born March 28, 1853, deceased in infancy; Julian O., born August 8, 1855, died April 22, 1882; Wilson E., born December 18, 1857, and Luther B. F., September 2, 1861. Two children blessed the second marriage—John E., born July 1, 1871, and Sarah E., October 8, 1874. Mr. Symons had two brothers in the war for the Union—Joel, who served in the Fifty-ninth Indiana Regiment, and Benjamin F., who served in the Fifty-fourth. He was educated in the schools of pioneer days, and has followed the occupation of farming. He was reared under the kind influence of the Quaker Church, to which he belongs. He owns a good farm of sixty-five acres of land, and is at present Justice of the Peace of the township in which he resides, having served one term before.

JOSHUA SWINGLEY, farmer, P. O. Windsor, was born in Clinton County, Ohio, February 2, 1835, and came to this county in the fall of 1853. His father, Peter Swingley, originally came from Virginia, where he was born in 1810, deceased in Clinton County, Ohio, in 1842. Mr. Swingley was united in marriage to Judith A. Thornburg February 5, 1857, who was born May 9, 1839. Mr Swingley received a common-school education, and has devoted his time exclusively to farming and stock-raising. He is a member of the Christian Church and of the I. O. O. F., No. 517, of Windsor. He owns a well-cultivated farm of 106 acres of land, valued at $60 per acre. Republican in politics, and an esteemed citizen. They have four children living—Josephine, born September 5, 1860; John W., September 9, 1862; Martha J., February 10, 1868, and Edith, July 28, 1876.

WILLIAM TERRELL, farmer and minister, P. O. Windsor, born July 13, 1829, in Stony Creek Township, this county. He was married the first time to Rebecca Thornburg, November 22, 1849; two children blessed this union—Lucinda J., born December 8, 1850, and John W., November 19, 1852. Mr. Terrill was united in marriage the second time to Mary A. Thornburg, March 27, 1856; she was born December 12, 1838. They have eight children living—Margaret E., born October 22, 1858; Sarah E., May 10, 1861; George E. S. January 18, 1866; William, May 30, 1869; Susannah J., May 30, 1871; Mary M., May 7, 1873, and Della, May 30, 1875, and Lydia E. C., December 20, 1878. Mr. Terrill was educated in the old log schoolhouse of pioneer days, and for a number of years engaged in farming. He has been a devoted minister of the Christian Church for twenty-six years and has devoted much of his time to building up the denomination of his choice. He is a member of Whitney Lodge, No. F. & A. M. His father, George Wesley, was of English descent, came to this county in 1828, deceased 1878. Mr. Terrill is an active Republican; owns a valuable farm of 171 acres of land, and is hospitable and kind to all who meet him.

JOB THORNBURG. This venerable pioneer of Randolph County is the son of Isaac and Rebecca (Hodgen) Thornburg, and was born in Guilford County, N. C., September 29, 1801. He is the fifth of a family of twelve children, of whom three are now living; his father was born in Pennsylvania July 4, 1773, and mother in the same State July 24, 1773. They moved from Pennsylvania to North Carolina, where they were married, and remained until the year 1811, when they moved to Clinton County, Ohio, where they remained until 1827, when they came to this county and remained until their deaths; his mother died July 24, 1832, and his father June 28, 1862. Job lived with his parents on the farm until he was twenty-five years of age, when he, with a brother, removed to Indiana, and settled in Randolph County. After living with his brother for about one year, he returned to Ohio, and was united in marriage with Lydia Smith, daughter of James and Atlantic Smith, April 17, 1826. He and his wife returned to Indiana the following October, when he entered eighty acres of the farm upon which he now resides. He has spent the best portion of his life in clearing a farm from the unbroken forest. No one but those who have had the experience fully realize the amount of toil and hardship connected with the development of this country. The subject of this sketch has accomplished more of this kind of work than most men of this age; he early learned the lesson which insures success to every young man—industry and frugality. These qualities being leading motives in his life, he rapidly accumulated property. He has been the owner and proprietor of 437 acres of land, with about 300 acres improved. This land is excellent in quality, and well adapted to stock-raising as well as grain; he has disposed of all of his land, deeding it to his children and otherwise, with the exception of fifty acres. He is the father of ten children as follows: Atlantic, born January 18, 1826; Abijah, born February 8, 1828, deceased January 3, 1848; Jonathan J., born April 2, 1830; Thomas, born May 7, 1832, deceased October 28, 1846; James, born March 27, 1834; Ann, born September 19, 1836; Edward R., born December 4, 1838, deceased September 13, 1867; Tilnias, born November 27, 1840; Isaac D., born October 28, 1842; Rebecca, born September 3, 1845. His living children are all married and comfortably situated in life. Job's early education consisted of about three months' schooling, in the old pioneer log schoolhouse, with greased paper for windows, puncheon floor, hewed benches, etc. Notwithstanding the primitive condition of the schools, he has a fair common school education. He and his wife were raised members of the Society of Friends, and have ever remained faithful to their adopted church. Mr. Thornburg has served this county as juror more or less for thirty years. In politics, he is a stanch Republican, and has always affiliated with that party ever since its organization; he was a Whig, and strongly anti-slavery in sentiment. At the death of his father there were over 400 direct and indirect descendants of the family, and but three Democrats in all of that number. Mr. Thornburg makes his home the most of the time with his son, Tilnias, and has done so ever since the death of his wife, He is tolerably well preserved in health for one of his age, with the exception of a partial deafness caused by a slight stroke of paralysis, he seems to enjoy life very well; he has had a remarkable constitution to endure the toils and hardships of such a long life; he takes great delight in recounting his experience of pioneer times, and, having a clear and distinct memory of these times, his accounts are calculated to interest every one; he has been a useful man, both to society and the church; a kind husband and an affectionate father, and honored and respected by all who know him.

JONATHAN J. THORNBURG.

Jonathan J. Thornburg, is a native of this county and son of Job and Lydia Thornburg, was born April 2, 1830. He is the third of a family of ten children, seven of whom are living; he was raised on a farm, and received a limited education from the common district and subscription schools, which were very inferior, and open but a short period during the winter season; his youthful experience did not differ materially from that of most boys of pioneer times. He and his brother assisted their father (who was a very hard-working man) to clear a large amount of land from the unbroken wilderness. He was united in a first marriage, to Hannah Holloway, April 24, 1851. She was a most amiable Christian woman, and shared the joys and sorrows of life with her husband until 1869, when the fell destroyer removed her from the embrace of her loving family and kind friends. As fruits of his first marriage, Mr. Thornburg is the father of nine children, of whom six are living as follows: Lydia J., Mary L., Benjamin F., Sarah E., Martha A., Job S., Ellis, William and Rebecca E. He was united in a second marriage to Nancy Meier, September 7, 1871. His present wife, a most estimable and worthy lady, is the daughter of David and Nancy Morris, and was born in Fayette County, Ohio, July 27, 1829. She was previously married to John F. Meier, of Clinton County, Ohio, April 15, 1858; her first husband died in Ohio March 13, 1868; he was a man of the strictest integrity, a devoted husband and an honored citizen. Mrs. Thornburg received a limited education in the common schools of Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Thornburg are owners and proprietors of an excellent farm situated in Stony Creek Township, consisting of 240 acres, of which 180 are in a good state of cultivation. This farm is beautifully located and well improved, being supplied with excellent buildings, an exact representation of which is given in this work. Mr. Thornburg gives attentive attention to the raising of blooded stock in addition to raising all kinds of grain. Mr. and Mrs. Thornburg are acceptable members of the Society of Friends at Cedar, this county. Mr. Thornburg has alwas acted and voted with the Republican party, and has always manifested a deep interest in the welfare of the party. His excellent wife is a lady of rare executive ability, and has been of great service to her husband in the management of his business. They are both excellent citizens, surrounded by all of the necessaries and comforts of life, and valuable members of society.

JOAB THORNBURG, farmer, P. O. Neff, born in North Carolina in 1795; he was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Elizabeth Holloway, December 25, 1817; she was born September 17, 1794, in the State of Virginia. They have five children living—John L., Isaac, Asenath, Elisha and Jonathan T. Mr. T. was educated in the schools of North Carolina and was reared under the mild and gentle discipline of the Friends of that county. He and his aged companion have traveled life's pathway as members of the Friends' Church, and at this advanced date are waiting the summons of that Master whom they have served so faithfully to call them to rest. The winter's storms may beat fiercely above the grave so soon to claim them, the gentle rain of springtime fall upon their narrow earthly home, the beautiful flowers and green sward of summer grow upon the mound raised above them, yet all these will not effect the purity of their devoted Christian character which they leave behind as an example to those who follow after them.

THOMAS WALLACE.

Thomas Wallace, husband of Frances Wallace, and son of William and Mary Wallace, was born in Tennessee, March 21, 1807. He removed with his parents to Miami County, Ohio, about the year 1814, where he resided until the year 1838, when he came to this State and county. He was the third of a family of nine children, of whom three are now living. His parents were both born and raised in Tennessee. He lived on the farm with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age. Having comparatively no opportunity of attending school, his education was very meager. After he came of age, he worked out by the month on a farm until the year 1835, when he was united in marriage to Frances Hays, daughter of James and Catharine Hays, of Miami County, Ohio. This union took place on December 30. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Wallace lived in Ohio for about three years, when they moved to this county and settled near Windsor, where Mr. Wallace entered eighty-eight acres of land, being a portion of the farm where Mrs. Wallace now resides. They continued to live here until the death of Mr. Wallace, which occurred February 7, 1870. They were the parents of but one child, James Newton Wallace, who died at the age of two years. Mr. Wallace was an acceptable member of the M. E. Church, and remained faithful until death. In political preferment he was a stanch Republican; although he never sought for any office, he took a deep interest in the welfare of the party. He was a most industrious and frugal man, and accumulated property very rapidly. He developed a fine farm from the unbroken forests. He was quiet and retiring in his habits, but a man who had strong convictions on all current topics, and did fearlessly what he conceived to be his duty. Thus lived and passed away an honored and useful citizen of Randolph County.

FRANCES WALLACE, widow of Thomas Wallace and daughter of James and Catharine (Summly) Hays, was born in Miami County, Ohio, September 24, 1814. She is the third of a family of five children. Her father was born in South Carolina, August 31, 1789, and her mother was born in North Carolina in the year 1792. Her parents removed to Miami County, Ohio, about the year 1808, and remained there until the death of her mother, which occurred March, 1816. Her father came to Indiana in the year 1851, and made his home with his children until his death, which occurred September 16, 1874. Mrs. Wallace lived at home in Ohio until she was twenty-one years of age, engaged in the various and multiplied duties of a farmer's daughter, when she was united in marriage with Thomas Wallace. Her education is very limited, having but poor opportunities of attending school in her earlier life. Mrs. Wallace has been deprived the pleasure of raising any children of her own, but she has had the responsibility of raising four, three of whom lived with her until marriage. One of these, John A. Ineminger, enlisted as a soldier in the late war and died in hospital at Chattanooga, May 28, 1863. He served his country well until his death. Mrs. Wallace is owner of 368 acres, of which 160 acres are in a high state of cultivation. She disposes of her land to tenants, but keeps the management in her own hand. She has been an acceptable and honored member of the M. E. Church for thirty-five years. She has been an industrious woman all her life, passing through many hardships without a murmur. She is endowed with strong intellectual faculties and a remarkable memory. She looks after her business in detail, and is possessed with extraordinary executive ability. She is beloved as a neighbor and friend and will ever be honored by all who have known her.

WILLIAM WRIGHT, Farmland, was born September 17, 1831, in this county. He was married to Rebecca A. Thornburg, who was born July 25, 1835. They have eight children living—Fauny R., born March 29, 1859; Solomon M., January 6, 1864; Rolly R., March 6, 1866; Elizabeth M. H., March 24, 1868; Leoto O., March 9, 1871; Edward E., April 6, 1874; Noah V., February 14, 1880, and Bertha A., April 1, 1881. He was educated in the common and graded schools of the State. He has followed farming and stock-raising, and was in the hardware and grain trade at Farmland for some time. He was Township Trustee one term, being elected in 1860. He owns a good farm of 307 acres of land, worth $60 per acre. Is a member of the Friends' Church and is a recorded minister in that society, and is considered one of the best citizens of the vicinity in which he resides.

JOHN D. WRIGHT, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born March 6, 1837, in this county. His father, Solomon R., was originally from Tennessee, where he was born in 1801; from thence settled in this State about the year 1818. Mr. Wright was united in marriage to Miss Lydia A. Jackson, who was born September 28, 1847. Five children blessed this union, of whom four are living—Eva M., born October 15, 1866; Everett E., October 19, 1869; Maud E., February 27, 1873, and Lydia A., January 26, 1875. He was educated in the common schools of the State, attending Liber College one term. He is of Quaker descent and a member of that church. Mr. Wright has followed farming and stock-raising from boyhood, and owns a fertile farm of 179½ acres. Republican in politics, and an honest, industrious citizen.

GEORGE W. WORL, farmer, P. O. Neff, was born August 30, 1836, in Wayne County, Ind. His father, Robert Worl, was born in Kentucky about the year 1810. He immigrated to Wayne County at an early date, and deceased on the road to California in 1852. Mr. Worl was united in marriage to Lyda A. Ripley July 19, 1857. She was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, August 1, 1841. Mr. Worl was educated in the common schools of this State, and is a gentleman of good information and intelligence. He was elected Township Assessor in 1871, serving two terms, and Trustee of Stony Creek Township in 1875, in which capacity he also served two terms of two years each. In both of these offices he was noted for his ability and fidelity, which fully demonstrated the fact of the confidence and esteem in which he was held by his neighbors. He, with three brothers, served in the war for the Union. He enlisted in Company B, Thirty-sixth Indiana Infantry, serving through the war, and being wounded at the battle of Chickamauga. He is a member of the Christian Church, the A., F. & A. M. Lodge, No. 308, of Farmland, a Republican in politics, and a gentleman of the best social standing. Four children have blessed the marriage—Mary E., born May 6, 1858; Emma A., March 23, 1864; William M., May 22, 1867, and Ulysses S., September 28, 1872.

NETTLE CREEK TOWNSHIP.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

It embraces thirty-one and one-half sections, being seven miles long, north to south, and four and a half miles wide east to west. It lies wholly west of the Twelve-Mile boundary, and the land was surveyed about 1820 or 1821. It includes parts of Towns 18 and 19, Range 12 east, upon the upper course of Little White River. Settlement began later, of course, there than it did east of the boundaries." The township lies chiefly in the valley of the Little White River, and covers a fine scope of country. Much of it is gently rolling, presenting pleasant landscapes. The soil is well adapted to all kinds of farming, and fine crops are produced. Being settled later, improvements are not so much advanced as they are farther east, yet there are many fine farms, with good buildings, etc.

The earliest settler of whom we have heard is William Shullabarger, who came in 1820, settling south of Losantville. He was killed by the falling of a tree. The next settler (so far as we know) was John Burroughs, 1822, and also his brother, Thomas Burroughs, 1822. The following came soon afterward. Where they settled we do not know; Solomon Sparks, Mahlon Bronson, Isaac Branson, John Massey, Ichabod Tharpe, Phineas Macy, Mason Powell, Enoch Sayles, Jacob Tharpe, Henry Mossby and perhaps others.

Samuel Burroughs, son of John Burroughs, was the first child born in Nettle Creek Township, May 20, 1823.

The following came in the years named: John Clevinger, 1828; Anthony Johnson, 1829; Isaac Thornburg, 1830; Hamilton Snodgrass, 1830; William Snodgrass, 1830; John Snodgrass, 1830; John Bookout, 1831; Jordan Halsted, 1831; Henry Leaky, 1831; Reuben Johnson, 1832; Lewis W. Johnson, 1832; George W. Wine, 1834; Bright Cist, 1834; George Leaky, 1834; Christian Leaky, 1834; Wilkerson Gray, 1835; John Grubbs, came early; Byaleel Hunt, Joel Drake, Mark Diggs were there in 1838.

The settlers in this region had peculiarly severe hardships in the early time. Some of them were very poor, and all of them were greatly "put to it" to make their way. One pioneer in this township, when he first moved to the county, had one old horse only, and the horse died in a few days, which left them in a bad condition. The man cut his knee with his frow while splitting clapboards for his cabin, and was laid helpless on the puncheon floor for six weeks. His wife and her brother improved the season by making several barrels of sugar, which stood them in good stead to give in exchange for corn during the summer.

In a scope of two miles square there were owned but two wagons. One day, six horses were hitched to one of these wagons to go to mill. Twelve bushels were loaded in, and off the teams started. The horses would not pull together, got fast in a big mud-hole, and stopped. Six men unhitched each a horse, took each a sack of wheat and away to the mill, leaving the wagon to get out of the mud when it got a "good ready." Thus did the hardy pioneers of Nettle Creek bravely push their way, and some of them still survive to look back upon those rough and troublesome times and those awkward ways.

Isaac Branson was in Nettle Creek in 1824, in the time of the "Falling Timber," since one settler relates that her sister at that time was at Isaac Branson's, and that Mr. Branson's horse was hemmed up in the stable, but not hurt.

Nettle Creek Township is a fine rolling country, well adapted to all kinds of farming. It is in the southwest corner of the county. The only pike is the Windsor & Hagerstown pike, north and south, through Losantsville. There is but one town, Losantsville, or, as it was called at first, Hunt's Cross Roads. Nettle Creek is Republican in politics by a moderate majority, when State and National lines are drawn. As to religion, Methodists, Disciples, Friends, Christian, United Brethren, Baptists, etc., are represented. The first sermon in the region was preached at Thomas Burroughs', by Rev. Bowen, a Methodist. The people generally went to West River. Thomas Burroughs died in 1825, and his funeral was preached in his cabin by Henry Mossburg. The Baptist Meeting-House on the county line was built in 1825. A Methodist Meeting-House was built not twenty rods away, in 1840. The first schoolhouse was built in 1833. School was taught in it in 1833–34 by Mr. Evans. The next school was managed by Cornelius Murray and his sister. From these small and awkward beginnings, the township has slowly made a substantial growth, till now her school advantages compare favorably with the other townships of the county.

There are several churches in the township. There is no railroad anywhere within easy reach. Winchester, Hagerstown, Richmond and Muncie are the places at which the people of Nettle Creek must reach the railroads. Yet they might be worse off, since good pikes reach out to all these towns, and the farmers and business men of that region, instead of being obliged to hitch six horses to twelve bushels of grain, and then after getting their wagon mired, to carry their load off to the mill on the backs of the six horses, as of old, can now take almost any quantity they please and proceed pleasantly, easily and safely to the market of their choice in their own, or in adjoining counties. Nettle Creek is perhaps more purely agricultural than any township in the county, and the valley of the Little White River is truly a splendid region. As the traveler passes north from Losantsville on the good and serviceable pike that extends through the township, his eye beholds with delight the beauty of the landscape, displaying a splendid scope of country rescued from the domain of the original forest and subdued by the tireless industry of her stalwart farmers. Although much of the surface lies high enough for natural drainage, much, also, stood in need of human help in this respect; and in the last few years the modern system of tile drainage has been brought greatly into use, and the farming interest of that region has been largely strengthened and enriched by that means.

In early times, like many primitive communities, some roughness of manners and actions prevailed, but latterly the community has become fully the equal of the rest of the county in those things that tend to enlighten and elevate and refine the feelings and sentiments of the community. In religious things there is considerable variety of opinions and practice. In an early day, the Baptists established a large influence in that part of the county, and they have maintained to this day a larger following in that township than elsewhere in Randolph. In fact, the Baptist element, which holds in the county at large a strong, prominent and controlling position, has, for some reason, found in Randolph County but a meager support; and, outside of Nettle Creek, that branch of the Christian body has found but few adherents. It has been suggested, with how much justice we know not, that the "Disciples," so called, who are essentially and intensely Immersionists, and in many other respects like the Baptists proper, have in this region absorbed the Baptist element into their own body. We do not declare it as a fact, but give the statement as a theory proposed by some to account for the unusual fewness of the number of Baptists hereabouts, compared with many other portions of the country.

E. 5, 18, 12, August 10, 1831, Jesse Sisk.

It is seen by the statement just given that the settlement of the township was very sparse before 1830. In fact, the west part of the county in general had but few occupants before that date. A small number had made a beginning upon White River and Cabin Creek, but not many were even there, and away from those streams the cabins and the clearings were truly "few and far between."

Nettle Creek Township is bounded on the north by Stony Creek Township, on the east by West River Township, on the south by Wayne County, and on the west by Delaware County. Politically, Nettle Creek has a Republican majority, though the Democratic element is strong and active, and now and then, through dissensions in the Republican ranks, they manage to slip in one of their sort into some of the local offices.

Nettle Creek was entered between 1821 and 1838 inclusive.

TOWNS.

Fallen Timber Post Office.—No town (perhaps) Section 35, Town 19, Range 12; two miles northeast of Losantville, in the neighborhood of Hicks K. Wright's late residence. The name has been given from the fact that nearly sixty years ago a terrible tornado prostrated miles and miles of timber, falling, as it did, in a dense, heaped-up, impenetrable mass, and lying for many years upon the surface of the earth, an utter barrier to passage or communication across or among its overthrown tree-trunks. That mass of prostrate tree-trunks, entangled for years with shrubs and new-grown saplings, has for two generations disappeared from sight, and a single name, as above, is its only existing memorial.

Flemingsburg.—Location, northwest Section 23, Town 19, Range 12; forty lots; Reuben Hunt, Robert W. Butler, proprietors; recorded March 31, 1837. Distances: Four miles north of Losantsville; five miles northwest of Huntsville; one mile southwest of Pleasant View. This town seems to have been among the oldest in the county, but whether it ever existed except on paper, or whether any business was ever done there, we are unable to say. It is utterly extinct, and even the name seems to be wholly lost. It is to be presumed that at least a log cabin, store and a blacksmith shop were there, but we have obtained not the slightest outside information.

Losantsville.—Location, Sections 3, 4, 9 and 10, Township 18, Range 12 east; twenty-eight lots; Howard Hunt, proprietor; recorded February 22, 1851; streets, north and south, Cambridge; east and west, Main.

Distances: Arba, eighteen and one-half miles; Bloomingsport, ten and one-half miles; Fairview, twenty miles; Farmland, thirteen and one-half miles; Huntsville, eight and one-half miles; Lynn, fourteen miles; Union City, twenty-eight miles; Windsor, seven and one-half miles; Winchester, seventeen and one-half miles; Rural, fourteen and one-half miles; Richmond, twenty-four miles; Muncie, seventeen miles; Hagerstown, eight and one-half miles. Losantsville (at first called Hunt's Cross Roads) was laid out in 1851 by Howard Hunt. Its "antiquities" are as follows: Mr. Denny had a log-cabin store; Bright Cisk resided there in 1834, and had a grocery in 1842, and perhaps sooner than that. Howard Hunt had a grocery and a hotel in 1850. Moses Shores built a grocery at the southwest corner of the main crossing. Lemuel Wiggins bought him out, and he in turn sold his establishment to Samuel Burroughs and William Hendricks. However, Mr. Wiggins continued his residence at the place, and for twenty years has kept hotel at Losantsville, besides owning and running a store more than once, the last time for five or six years. William Chambers had a cabinet shop. Thomas Jones also worked at the same business afterward. Henry Blazer, Lewis Retz, John Sutton, William Bradfield, William McCollom, Charles Shaffer have had smith shops. A post office was established nearly twenty-five years ago. The Postmasters have been Messrs. Wiggins, Hendricks, McCollom, Canada, D. Wiggins, L. Wiggins. Mills Hunt, Esq., is a resident of the town, having been an inhabitant of the county more than fifty years. Losantsville is not extensive in the line of inhabitants. There are only eleven dwelling-houses. The present business may be described chiefly thus: One store, hotel and post office, Lemuel Wiggins; one smith shop, John Sutton; one shoemaker, William Horn; one grocer, William McCollom; one wagon shop, William McCollom; three physicians, Messrs. Berry, Frank and Lowe; one schoolhouse, one lodge (I. O. O. F.), one Porter's Temperance League, one Baptist Church, one Methodist Episcopal society, one Christian (New Light) society, both the latter occupying a public hall for their religious services.

Pleasant View.—Location, in Nettle Creek and Stony Creek Townships, upon Sections 11, 12, 13 and 14, Township 19, Range 12 east, Mark Diggs, proprietor. Number of lots not stated. No plat recorded so far as known; laid out in 1854. Being situated in two townships and four sections, its location is more extensive than its business. There has been a small amount of business from the beginning of the town. Mr. Davison had a saw-mill; William Kennedy had a store; Hiram Diggs also had a store; Mr. Carey had a smith shop in 1856; Solomon Hanscom started a furniture store, as also an undertaker's shop, in 1855, and it has been continued ever since; the latter business with them has become very extensive, the most so the proprietors claim of any of the kind in Randolph County. They make their own work and furnish coffins for at least 180 buryings per year. The merchants in Pleasant View have been Messrs. Kennedy, Diggs, Wright, East, McNees, Kelly, Moore, Bates, Lumpkin & Bro., Ross & Hanscom, Macy (whose store was blown up with powder), Jessup, Hanscom, Jessup & Carter, E. Carter & Son, G. Wright.

The physician has been Dr. Frank, in 1870. The smith shops have been run by Messrs. Johnson, Carey, Bowers, Snuth and Robison. Wagon shops, J. W. Paschal, Lamb & Williams. Saw-mill, Mr. Davison and others. Cabinet and undertaker's shop, Mr. Hanscom.

Present business: One store, G. Wright; one smith shop, Mr. Bowers; one wagon shop, Lamb & Williams; one saw-mill, Davison; one undertaker, Mr. Hanscom; one post office, name, Good View, Postmaster, G. Wright; one schoolhouse. Everything at this town is on a small scale. There is one pike, and the railroads were so far away as to hide the wonderful train, smoke, roar and all from the sight and sound of the villagers. But, in the spring of 1882, the I., B. & W. road was laid through the southern part of the portion extending east and west, connecting Columbus, Indianapolis, etc., and running near Losantsville, and not very far from the town with the pretty name, Pleasant View. Whether the proximity of this line of road will help or hinder this aspiring little hamlet, time, the great revealer, will unfold. Till then, let us wait in patience the revelations of the future. A thrifty and prosperous country region surrounds the town.

BIOGRAPHY.

John Bookout was born in Tennessee in 1807; came to Nettle Creek in 1831; married Nancy Laughlin in 1829; entered forty acres where he now lives, east of Losantsville. He has bought other land besides, but the land which he first entered is the homestead. He has had thirteen children, and is a farmer. He lives east of Losantsville. The region was considerably settled up when he came—John Snodgrass, north of Losantsville, now dead; Hamilton Snodgrass, son of John S., north of Losantsville, now living; Byron Carter, east of Losantsville, living; the Cisk family, an old man and his sons; Reuben Johnson, north of Losantsville; several families by the name of Burroughs lived south of Losantsville. Solomon Sparks, Israel Tharpe, Benjamin Antrim, Antony Johnson, Thomas Antrim, George Leaky, Henry Leaky, Anderson Moore, William Denny, Jacob Crouse were among those who had at this time made a settlement in this region. Mr. Bookout is a Baptist in religion and in politics a Democrat.

John Burroughs lived southwest of Losantsville. He was born in Virginia in 1793, came to Warren County, Ohio, in 1808, moved to Fayette County, still again to Randolph County, Ind., in 1822. He married Martha Chambers (who was born in 1799, in Wilkes County, N. C.), in 1816. They have had twelve children, ten of whom have been married. One died in Florence Prison, Jesse Burroughs. Mr. Burroughs died in 1862, sixty-nine years old. His widow is still living with her son, south of Losantsville; she is about eighty-three years old, yet she is active and cheerful, and her memory is fresh concerning old things. Some reminiscences are given by her as follows: "The 'Fallen Timber' was two years after we came here (1824). Plenty of Indians were still at Muncie, Yorktown, Smithfield, etc. While living in Fayette County, our folks went twice (in the spring and in the fall) into a fort at Elkhorn Creek. My youngest brother was born in that blockhouse. The tornado did but little damage where we lived. The body of the storm was farther east. John Burroughs' father, Thomas Burroughs, came when we did. Samuel Burroughs was the first white child born in Nettle Creek Township, May 20, 1823. He died eighteen years ago (in 1863)." Aunt Patsy Branson, now of Muncie, Ind., widow of Isaac Branson, who were pioneers of Stony Creek, and afterward of Nettle Creek, says that Mr. Burroughs' people were the only settlers in the region when they planted themselves in Nettle Creek, and that they used to hear the dogs bark and the roosters crow at Mr. Branson's through the woods several miles.

Jonathan Canady was born in North Carolina in 1821, came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1826, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1840. He married Susan Moore, and has had fourteen children; twelve of them are grown and eight are married; eight have taught school, two are attorneys, and one is a Justice of the Peace. They are an active and intelligent family and are Republicans.

Martin L. Canady was born in Randolph County, Ind., in 1848; married Sophronia E. Noll in 1869, and they have three children. He is a farmer and teacher, having taught school thirteen winters. He taught the first school that ever was held in Losantsville (in 1878), for it seems that ambitious little town never till 1878 rose to the diginity of possessing a school. The Township Trustees in that year, taking pity on her desolation, erected a neat and commodious school building, and now the aspiring Losantsvillans need not be obliged to submit to the humiliation of forever being bound to dance attendance upon an old-fashioned or even upon a new fangled country school.

Mr. Canady was elected magistrate of Nettle Creek Township in the spring of 1879, against a candidate who had held office for twenty-five years, and had never before been beaten. Mr. Canady was the census enumerator for 1880 in the census district in which he resides. He is a Republican, and seems to be rising in popularity and growing in fitness for public station.

Walter Canady came from North Carolina to Randolph County, Ind., in 1829, and lived and died there. He had a wife and five children. He was a farmer of Nettle Creek Township, entering land there when he came to the county.

John Clevenger, father of William Clevenger, near Neff, was born in Virginia in 1780; came to Ohio in 1803; married Maria Stathard in 1799 (born 1780); came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1828; entered 120 acres, being a part of William Clevenger's present farm. He had fourteen children; twelve lived to be grown and married and have large families, the whole twelve having 108 children, or an average on the twelve of exactly nine each. He died in 1872, aged ninety-two years and nine months. His wife died in 1846, being sixty-six years old. His children are as follows: Dosha (Dudley), born 1800, had twelve children: Samuel, born 1802, had eleven children; John, born 1803, had nine children; Wesley, born 1805, had nine children; Eliza, born 1809, had seven children; James, 1811, had five children; Nancy, 1811 (Raines), had nine children; Seppy, 1815, had five children; Fielding, 1817, had twelve children; Maria, 1819

(Thornburg), had twelve children; William, 1821, had six children; Mahala, 1824 (Thornburg), thirteen children; grandchildren, 108.

With this multiplying process as a specimen, the Clevenger name ought to be widely scattered throughout the land. Twelve children, with families having an average of nine apiece makes certainly an extensive connection.

Jonathan Clevenger came the same fall. The two families had arranged to meet on the way, and come the rest of the distance together. The plan failed in some way, and the families did not meet, and each one found his way alone. Mr. Clevenger was a sturdy Democrat. He voted for Jackson in 1828. He was an active member of the Christian (New Light) Church, and a worthy and exemplary citizen.

John C. Clevenger was born in Randolph County, Ind., in 1836. He has eleven children. He has held several local offices, having been Justice of the Peace four years and Township Trustee two years. It is quite remarkable that though a Democrat in a township that has a Republican majority of eighty, he was elected Trustee in the spring election of 1880 by twenty majority. He is an active citizen, and a useful member of the body politic. He is a farmer, and lives northwest of Losantsville.

Isaac Crouse was born in Randolph County in 1837; married Irene Watkins in 1859, who was born in 1844. They have three children. He is a farmer and a member of the Christian (New Light) Church. His home is near Losantsville. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that his wife was at his marriage with her only fifteen years old. Although now old enough to have had several children, her age is only thirty-three years. Should their married life last till she arrives at the age of ninety, her state of wedlock will have continued through the wonderful period of three-quarters of a century.

William Clevenger is the son of John Clevenger, who came to Randolph Co., Ind., in 1828. He was born in Ohio in 1821; came with his parents to Randolph County in 1828. He married Mary Jane Smithson in 1841, and has six children. He is an extensive farmer, and is a prominent citizen. He owns 320 acres of land. Although his father was a strong Jackson Democrat, yet William Clevenger on coming to his majority, after voting for Polk in 1844, radically changed his politics, and has voted the Abolition and Republican tickets ever since. His ballot was cast for Hall and Julian in 1848, when the ticket got only three votes in the township. He made a temperance pledge for himself when a boy fifteen years old. Seeing the evils of drink, and resolving never to touch it, he has kept his vow to this day. He joined a temperance society only three or four years ago, but has "lived" it from boyhood. A member of the Christian (New Light) Church, and a wide-awake, thriving, successful business man. In his youth and early manhood he did an immense amount of hard work, his brothers and himself, as he says, clearing more land than any other family in the township or perhaps in the county or even in the State. William Clevenger has been Road Supervisor for fifteen years, and is so still. Mr. Clevenger is a pleasant specimen of the prosperous and successful farmer. Hospitable, friendly, generous and enterprising, both himself and his wife are remarkable for their worthy and estimable characters. He has erected upon his extensive farm a substantial and commodious mansion, which will doubtless yield them pleasure and comfort during the remainder of their lives.

Jacob Crouse was born in North Carolina in 1799; married Hannah Johnson in 1824; emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., in 1832, settling one mile west of Losantsville. They have had seven children. His wife was a Baptist. He was not himself a member of any religious body, and in politics lived and died a Democrat of the Jacksonian stamp and style. He entered eighty acres of land, and he resided on the tract till his death in 1873, forty-one years. His wife lived only till 1864. Charles Crouse, his son, still occupies the original homestead, one mile west of Losantsville, being, like his mother, a Baptist, and, like his father, a Democrat.

Mark Diggs was born in North Carolina 1799, and was the son of William Diggs, the elder, whose son William came to White River in 1816. Mark Diggs came to White River, Randolph County, in 1821; married Susannah Way, daughter of Matthew Way, who was brother of Paul and Henry Way, and who died in Carolina in 1826. They had one child which died in infancy. Mark Diggs settled in 1827 on the farm where his widow now lives, near Pleasant View. He was a Friend, belonging to the body; in politics, a Whig and a Republican. He was an Elder in the Friends' Society, greatly respected and altogether a solid member. He owned at the time of his death in 1878 600 acres of land. At first he entered 240 acres. His widow is living still on the old homestead, which has been her residence for fifty-five years. Mrs. Mark Diggs has in her possession the family record of old William Way, her grandfather, and the father of Paul, Henry, William, Robert and Matthew Way, which is here transcribed. William Way, son of Paul and Mary Way, born July 8, 1756; died April 9, 1839, eighty-three years; Abigail (Ozborn), born September 26, 1756, died January 2, 1829, aged seventy-three years.

Names, etc., of their children—John, born February 27, 1777, died June 11, 1778; John, born December 9, 1778, died in 1856, aged seventy-eight years; Mary, born March 23, 1781; Matthew, born January 14, 1784, died in Carolina 1811; Paul W., born February 24, 1786, died October 20, 1856, seventy-two years old; Hannah, born November 14, 1788, died November 17, 1877; Lydia, born January 5, 1791; Henry H., born March 13, 1793, died an old man in Illinois; William, born June 7, 1795, died an old man in Wisconsin; Abigail (Clayton), born November 27, 1797, died spring 1880.

Matthew Way (above) was married in Carolina and had two children, dying in 1811 by being thrown from a horse. His wife died with her second child. Their children were: Susannah, born January 4, 1807; Moorman, born February 9, 1808, died in 1881. Susannah married Mark Diggs, but has no children living. Moorman Way was also married, but has no issue living.

NOTE.—For other particulars, see account by Stephen Moorman.

[Moorman Way died in the fall of 1881, leaving his large fortune to his only heir, his sister. Mrs. Susannah Diggs, widow of Mark Diggs, as above, who was already the possessor of a considerable estate from her husband, as already described.]

Wilkerson Gray was born in Kentucky in 1802; came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1816, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1835, entering a tract of land one-half mile west of Losantsville, and has lived there from that day to this. He married Matilda Long in 1820, and has been the father of ten children, eight of them being still living and married. His wife was born in 1805, and died in 1847. He has been a widower for thirty-four years. He was married very young, at eighteen years, and they had three children before he was twenty-one years of age. He lives on his old place with his son-in-law, Isaac Crouse, having attained the great age of fourscore years, and is strong and hearty, considering the length of time that he has tarried amidst sublunary scenes.

Jordan Halstead was born on the way to Ohio, at Allegheny Point, on the Ohio River, in 1805. His parents came to Butler County, Ohio, and then to Wayne County, Ind., in 1825. He maried Nancy McClanahan in 1828, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1831. They have had thirteen children. Nine are living and nine have been married. He has resided at his present home from the first (fifty-one years), and he now owns 244 acres of land.

Solomon Hanscom, Pleasant View, born in Maine; moved to Kentucky in 1839 and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1853; has had six children, and died in 1875. He was an undertaker and cabinet maker. His business has been continued by his two sons under the firm name of James W. Hanscom & Bro. He was a Presbyterian, then a Baptist and lastly a Friend. In politics, he was at first a Democrat and afterward a Republican.

William Hendricks came early to the county, and was Justice of the Peace twelve years. He married 100 couples during his term of office. He was also Township Trustee ten years, and was never defeated as a candidate for office till three years ago, at which time (spring of 1879) he ran for magistrate, and was beaten by M. L. Kennedy. He moved to Kansas in the spring of 1880. He was an exceedingly popular and greatly influential man. But it happened with him as it does with scores of prominent men—there comes a time when the popular feeling begins to cool toward them. And if they are shrewd enough (which most, however, are not) to realize the fact and gracefully bow themselves out, all goes well; but all are not thus keen-sighted, and a struggle against fate followed by defeat is the result. Mr. Hendricks doubtless will continue in the future as during the past a personage of influence and usefulness, retaining, as he does, the estimable qualities which for so many years of his earlier life enabled him to hold so firmly a commanding position among his fellow-men.

Miles Hunt was born in Kentucky September 10, 1808. He came early to this county in 1824, at the age of sixteen, and has been a resident of Randolph fifty-eight years. He has been identified with the interests of the county for more than half a century, representing the county at one time in the State Legislature when comparatively a young man. Mr. Hunt has raised a large family, now grown men and women, who are now among the useful and worthy citizens of their native commonwealth. He has been a life-long Democrat, being one of the few who have clung to that political faith in the face of the overwhelming adverse majorities for many years in this Republican county. Since the time of the Murphy revival he has been an active and enthusiastic temperance worker, being now engaged along with his worthy companion in the advocacy of the prohibition movement. He was one of the proprietors of the town of Huntsville forty-seven years ago when a young man twenty-six years ago, and he has for many years been a resident of Losantsville, formerly Hunt's Cross Roads. Mr. Hunt, though past threescore years and ten, is still vigorous and energetic, showing more strength and activity than many another person fifteen years his junior. Long may he survive to wave aloft the temperance banner, even until he shall behold it float in triumph over the last grim fortress of King Alcohol!

Antony Johnson came to Nettle Creek, Randolph County, Ind., as soon as 1829 (may be sooner than that). He and his wife are very old, he being eighty-six years old and she some younger. They reside on a small farm northeast of Losantsville. Full fifty years and even more have passed over their heads, for weal and woe, in sunshine or in storm, since first this now aged couple reared their humble home beneath the leafy shade of the giant trees of Randolph forests. The ax, that mighty instrument of fate in the brawny hands of the stalwart pioneer, has accomplished its wondrous task, and the sun pours down upon those now denuded fields its fiery rays, where, for long ages before, its utmost power could not avail to reach. And two generations have disappeared from sight, and been hidden beneath the crumbling mold of the lonely graveyard. Yet these two still survive, almost the only remnants of that early race who made the heroic onslaught upon the mighty forests which had for so long a time hidden the earth's genial surface deep and dark beneath its overreaching foliage. They yet remain. But not for long. Even while I write these lines as this memorial to the coming ages, the decree may have gone forth for them. "The silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the pitcher is broken at the fountain and the wheel is broken at the cistern. Let the dust return to dust as it was, and the spirit return to God who gave it." At any rate, for them speedily, for us all in God's in good time, the final summons will surely come.

Daniel E. Johnson is the son of Reuben Johnson, and the brother of L. Williams Johnson, and perhaps of others by that name in the vicinity. He is a wealthy farmer, residing northeast of Losantsville, in the fertile region of the Little White River. He is a thriving farmer, an active business man and a prominent Democrat. In much of Randolph County, Republican predominance is so strong as to cut Democrats off from all hope of preferment, and in Nettle Creek Township the Republican is generally the stronger side. But the Democrats in this township are a bold, defiant party, and sometimes, when the Republicans fall out among themselves, the other sort strike all as one and make a success. All honor to the sincere, upright, honest yeomanry, who fight for country and for principle, and not for spoil. And such, indeed, must the Democrats of Randolph be. For, buried deep under the weight of an opposing majority, sometimes of 2,200, what but solid convictions can keep the average Randolph County Democrat loyal and unyielding to his fealty? Party spoils there are none for him. His view of political duty holds him fast and firm as the "needle to the pole."

Reuben Johnson was born in Surry County, N. C., in 1796. He came to Hagerstown, Wayne Co., Ind., in 1830, and to Losantsville in 1832. He married Mary Harville, and had nine children. He died in 1857, and his wife in 1863. He was a farmer, a Baptist and a Democrat. Several of his sons are living, and are prominent citizens, residing in the vicinity of Losantsville.

Lewis Williams Johnson is the son of Reuben Johnson. He was born in North Carolina in 1819, came to Hagerstown, Wayne Co., Ind., in 1831, and to Nettle Creek, Randolph Co., Ind., in 1832. He married Eunice Hodgson in 1841, and Martha A. Canada in 1864 (who was born in 1845). He has had sixteen children; thirteen of them are living, seven have been married, and seven are at home. He is a prominent citizen and farmer. He is a member of the Christian (New Light) Church, and in politics a Democrat. He has been Township Trustee and Township Assessor. He is also a local preacher in the denomination to which he belongs, an estimable man and a valuable member of society.

George Leaky was born in Tennessee in 1804, emigrated to Clinton County, Ohio, in 1816, married Lydia Hiatt in 1823, and moved to Randolph County, Ind., in 1834. His first wife died in 1834, and he married Jane (Sanders) Peters in 1836. He was the father of ten children, all of whom are living, and all are married but one. He died in 1877 at the age of seventy-three. He entered at first eighty acres, and afterward 160 more, making for himself and family an extensive and profitable farm. He was a member of the Christian denomination, and died in 1877, leaving behind a large and interesting group of descendants and relatives.

Christian Leaky was the son of George Leaky, being born in Clinton County, Ohio, in 1829, and coming to Randolph County, Ind., in 1834. He married Sidney A. Snodgrass in 1854, and they have had six children. He is a member of the Christian (New Light) Church, a farmer by vocation, living north of Losantsville, and the owner of 360 acres of excellent land.

Henry Leaky was born in Tennessee in 1794, being an older brother of George Leaky. He came to Ohio in early life, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1831, having married Jane Frery a considerable time previous. They had seven children, and he died in 1867, being sixty-seven years old. He was a farmer and had filled the office of Justice of the Peace, both in Indiana and for a long time in Ohio, besides which, moreover, he held, during one term, the position of County Commissioner of Randolph. In religious connection, he belonged to the body calling themselves Christians.

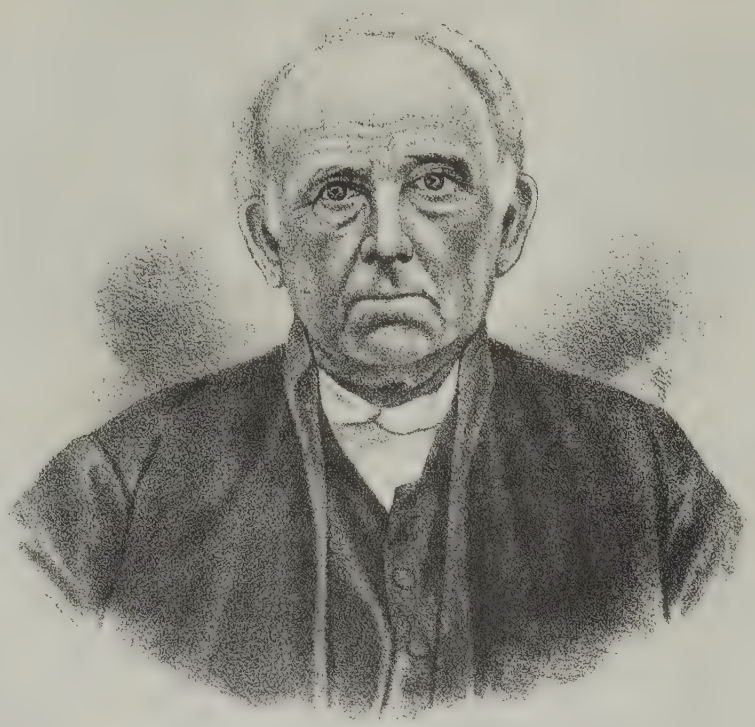
Anna Leaky (McGunnigill Snodgrass) married Charles McGunnigill, who came from South Carolina to Randolph County, Ind., in 1834. Mr. McGunnigill was born in 1801, and died in 1862. She has had ten children; seven of the children are living, and six have been married. She is now the wife of William Snodgrass, whose biography is given elsewhere.

David Metzgar lived south of Losantsville. He died in 1874. One of his sons died in Andersonville Prison. His daughter (wife of Frank Burroughs) lives on the old homestead, one and one-half miles south of Losantsville. He was a prominent citizen of Nettle Creek, but we have not at hand at this writing material for a more extended biography.

William Shullabarger came to Randolph County sixty years since. When he settled in Nettle Creek is not certainly known. He was killed many years ago by the falling of a tree upon him. His widow married William C. Hendricks, an account of whom is elsewhere given.

Hamilton Snodgrass has been a resident of Nettle Creek for more than half a century. His boyhood days were spent in different places, and in three States—Tennessee, Ohio and Indiana.

RES. OF ISAAC ROUTH, NETTLE CREEK TP. RANDOLPH, CO. IND.



MARK DIGGS.

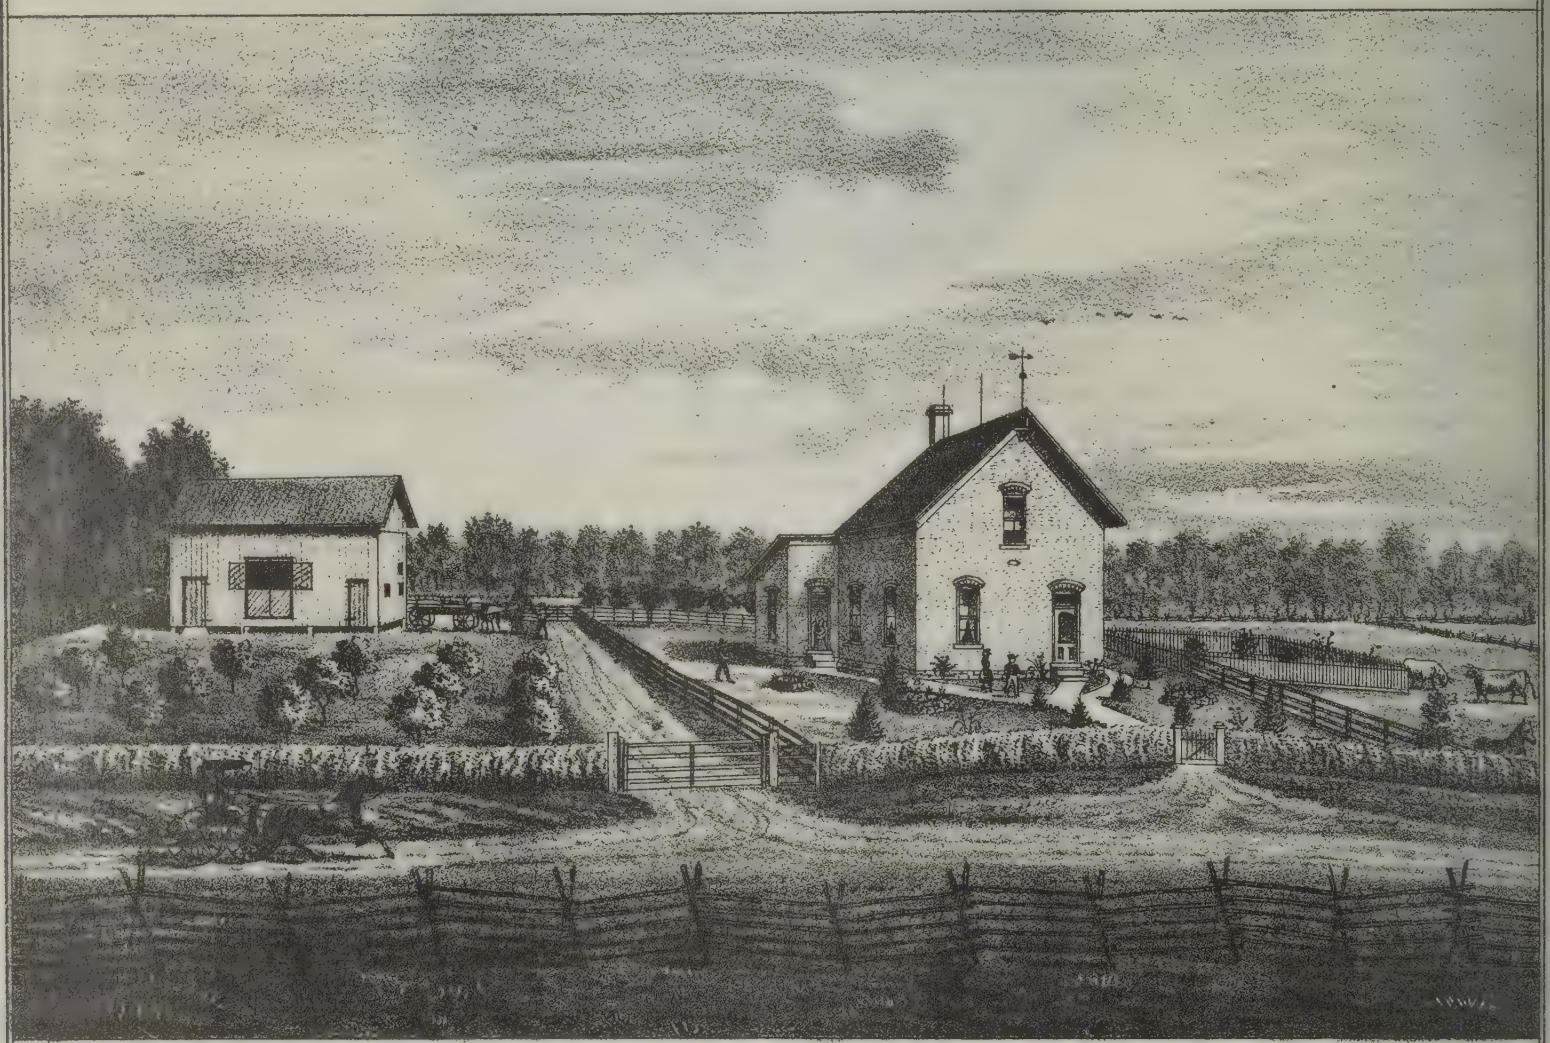
MARK DIGGS.

MARK DIGGS, deceased, was born in North Carolina April 23, 1799. He was the son of William and Fannie Diggs, and was the fifth of a family of nine children. He was raised on a farm and received a meager education from the schools of his native State. As a boy, he was remarkable for his honesty, morality and industry. In his earlier life were planted the seeds of Christian integrity, which ripened into an abundant harvest in later years. He came to this county in company with his parents, in the year 1822, and settled two miles west of Winchester, his father purchasing 160 acres of land with slight improvements, having a log cabin, a few acres cleared and an orchard. At the time of his settlement on this farm, there were but two log cabins upon the ground now occupied by the town of Winchester. His father lived on this farm until the death of his wife, when he made his home with his daughter, Ann Moorman, with whom he lived until his death. Mark Diggs was married to Susannah Way, November 9, 1826. After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Diggs settled on a farm in Nettle Creek Township, the same upon which the widow now resides. He entered 160 acres of fertile land, and through his untiring industry put it in a high state of cultivation. He lived on this farm until his death, which occurred June 6, 1878, at the age of seventy-nine years. He has but one brother living, William Diggs, who lives at Earlham, Iowa. Mark Diggs was a hard working man, and very economical in his habits. He accumulated quite a large estate, a portion of which his wife inherited. He had a birthright in the Society of Friends, and was a valuable and useful member of the church, having filled many important places of trust. He was quiet and reserved in his habits, and it was those who knew him best that loved him much.

SUSANNAH DIGGS.

SUSANNAH (WAY) DIGGS,

the widow of Mark Diggs, was born in Mulberry District, South Carolina, January 4, 1807. She is the daughter of Matthew and Agnes (Moorman) Way, and is the oldest of two children, and the only one now surviving, her only brother, Hon. Moorman Way, a pioneer and noted lawyer of Winchester, having died in 1881. She was left an orphan, when she was but a little more than one year old, and was raised and educated by her grandparents, William and Abigail Way, with whom she came to this county, in 1816, and settled in White River Township. Her educational advantages were very poor, the county at this time being an almost unbroken wilderness, and the schools were of the old pioneer kind. She was a hard-working woman, possessing a remarkably strong constitution, and practiced the strictest economy. She was married to Mark Diggs, as stated in his biography. Since his death, she has remained on the old homestead, and managed her financial affairs with marked ability. She was of inestimable advantage to her husband in managing his affairs. She spun and wove all of the wearing apparel of herself and husband for a great many years. She has never had any children of her own, but has partially raised and educated several. She has been an acceptable member of the Friends' Church all her life, is remarkably well preserved for one of her age, and honored by all who know her



RES. OF M. L. CANADY, LOSANTVILLE, NETTLE CREEK TP. RANDOLPH, CO. IND.

He was born in Tennessee in 1807, came to Ohio in 1811 and to Indiana in 1813, and to Randolph County in 1830. He has been twice married, and both his wives are dead. The first was Betsey Dixon, married in 1828. The second was Polly Ann (Street) Burroughs. She died in 1880. Mr. Snodgrass has had six children, is a farmer by occupation and a Democrat in politics. He resides a mile north of Losantsville. As would appear by the dates given above, his entire early and middle life was that of a pioneer. Born in Tennessee, near the opening of the century, brought to Ohio about the commencement of Tecumseh's war of 1811, and taken to Indiana in 1813 when only nine years old, changing his residence still again while yet only a young man in his prime, barely twenty-three years of age, this time to the then wild and unsettled regions of Randolph, it is clear that for him his calling in life was to march at the front and be a strong and gallant leader and one of the advance guard to the mighty army of civilization that were erelong to take full and permanent possession of the beautiful and glorious western wilderness. And he could well and worthily sing to the echoes of his resounding ax-blows and to the crackling crash of the mighty tree-trunks. But that song is for this region nearly done—the giants of the "grand old woods" have disappeared, and in their stead a puny, sickly race shabbily and scantily fill the places so long and so splendidly hiding the face of the ground beneath their deep, dark shades.

John Snodgrass was born in Virginia in 1763, moved to Tennessee in 1803, to Ohio in 1811, to Henry County, Ind., in 1813, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1830. He had eight children. His wife was Rhoda Mays, and he was married in Virginia long before he began his wanderings to find a suitable home. He was an old man when he came to Randolph, sixty-seven years of age, but his stay was but short among his children and friends. He died in 1834, and his wife eleven years after her husband, in 1845. Four of the children are living still. His residence was about a mile north of Losantsville. He was a farmer and a Democrat. Think of the life of this sturdy pioneer. Forty years among the rugged mountains of Virginia, eight years amid the forests of Tennessee, two years in Ohio through the Indian war of 1811–13, seventeen years buried in the woods of Henry County, Ind, and when within three years of his allotted threescore and ten, plunging yet once more, and for the last time, into the heart of the deep, unbroken forests of Randolph County, and lying down at length after so many tedious and wearisome years, beneath the oaks and the beeches, to die and be forever at rest, while his friends and his comrades, gathering around his mortal remains, sadly but hopefully say, "Life's fitful fever over, he sleeps well."

William Snodgrass is the son of John Snodgrass and the brother of Hamilton Snodgrass. He was born in Tennessee in 1809. He married Betsey Gray in 1836, and Anna (Leaky) McGunnigill in 1876. He has had eight children; seven are living, and all married. He came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1830, moved to Iowa in 1854, and returned to Nettle Creek, in 1869. Mr. Snodgrass is a farmer and a Democrat, somewhat advanced in years, but active and attentive to business. He is quiet, modest, unobtrusive in his manners, diligent and frugal in his business and careful and economical in his management, sincere in his own convictions and tolerant of those who may chance to differ with him. He resides on a farm north of Losantville, carrying on an extensive business in that line.

Lemuel Wiggins, Losantville, was born in Hocking County, Ohio, in 1820; came to Hagerstown, Ind.; thence he removed to Blountsville, Henry County, and lastly, to Losantville, in 1858. His first wife died of cholera in Blountsville. His second wife was Mary Stanley. He has had ten children. Mr. W. is an enterprising man, a sterling Republican and an active Methodist. He has been Township Trustee two years, is a merchant, a hotel-keeper; also a farmer, owning several farms; is Postmaster of the town, and a wide-awake, positive, energetic business man. He has been an extensive stock-raiser, as also a producer of fruit, since he has on the land he owns twelve orchards.

George W. Wine was a native of Loudoun County, Va., being born in 1793, and he died in Kosciusko County, Ind., in 1864, aged seventy one years. He married Margaret Durbin in Kentucky in 1817 (born 1799). He came to Ohio in 1802 (or before), to Wayne County, Ind., in 1829, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1834. They moved to Kosciusko County, Ind., in 1861, and he died there in 1864. They have had fourteen children, eleven of whom became grown, ten have been married and nine are still living. His widow resides at Losantsville, and belongs to the Christian (New Light) Church.

Mr. Wine was a soldier in the war of 1812, and received a pension, which, since his death, has been transferred to his widow, who receives it still. It is a noteworthy fact that he emigrated to Ohio just eighty years ago, during the very year, moreover, on which that now rich and powerful commonwealth became a member of the Federal Union, and has resided in that State during twenty-seven long and eventful years of the important formative period, when all was new and wild and rough, leaving it at length as long ago as the first year of "Old Hickory's" first term in the Presidency, now fifty-three years gone by.

Hicks K. Wright was an early settler in that region, and a very prominent citizen for many years. He was County Commissioner several terms, and also Township Trustee a long time, dying while in that office. He was an Episcopal Methodist. He raised a large family, several of whom are now living. Mr. W. died only a few years ago. His life is worthy, doubtless, of a larger and more definite mention in a history of Randolph; yet, while many, even of the prominent citizens, must be omitted, and only a few in all can be commemorated, it happens that our present subject falls among the great multitude concerning whom we have failed to obtain suitable materials for an extended sketch.

JOHN BOROUGHS, farmer, P. O. Losantville, was born in this county November 1, 1838. His father, John Boroughs, was a native of Virginia, born February 9, 1793; his mother, Martha (Chambers) Boroughs, was born in North Carolina May 8, 1799. Mr. Boroughs was married March 25, 1858, to Sarah J. Pollard, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., September 24, 1840. Her parents were natives of Indiana. This union has been blessed with two children—Lillie B., born October 7, 1861, who was married to James N. Johnson, of this county; Lillie B., deceased October 11, 1881. Their son, Jesse P., was born August 9, 1867, and is a bright, promising lad, of whom his father is very proud. Mr. Boroughs has a good farm of 120 acres; he is a sterling gentleman, and commands the respect and confidence of all who know him.

WILLIAM BOROUGHS, farmer, P. O. Losantville, was born in Nettle Creek Township, this county, March 21, 1832. His father, John Boroughs, was a native of Virginia, born February 9, 1793; his mother, Martha (Chambers) Boroughs, was born in North Carolina May 8, 1799. Mr. Boroughs was educated in the district schools of the county. Was married December 18, 1851, to Edith Lumpkin, who was born in this State February 9, 1833; her parents were natives of Tennessee. This union has been blessed with eight children, viz., Louisa J., born October 1, 1852; Erastus, April 25, 1854; Freely, June 18, 1858; Alonzo, April 3, 1860; Alfred L., September 7, 1863; Dora A., April 25, 1866; Harlan, February 14, 1872; Arthur, May 28, 1874. Mr. Boroughs owns a well-improved farm of 330 acres. He is a friend to education, a supporter and advocate of good schools, and ever stands ready to aid in advancing general improvements in his community. Peaceable, temperate, kind to his family, and in every way a worthy citizen.

CHARLES H. BARRAX, saw-milling, Goodview, was born in Virginia July 15, 1827. His parents were natives of Virginia. Mr. Barrax was educated at West Elk, Ohio. He was married, July 12, 1860, to Sarah Robinson, who was born in this county May 17, 1836, and the same year moved to Richmond, Ind., where they remained for eight years. They have had born to them one child, Minnie, born March 9, 1866. In 1868, they settled where they now reside. Since then, Mr. Barrax has been engaged in the grocery, drug and saw-milling business. He served for a term of eighteen months as Postmaster of the office at that time known as Melancthon but since changed to Goodview. He is now giving his whole attention to, and successfully conducting his saw-mill, which is located in Section 23. Mr. Barrax is an energetic, enterprising gentleman.

JONATHAN CANADY, farmer, P. O. Losantville, was born in North Carolina August 3, 1821. His father, Walter, and mother, Hannah (Adamson) Canady, were natives of North Carolina. Mr. Canady came to this State with his parents when eight years of age; was educated in the common schools of the county. Mr. Canady has been engaged in the mercantile business at Dalton, Bluntsville and Windsor. At the latter place, he lost his store and its contents by fire. He then settled on the farm where he now resides; he never moved from the farm where he now resides, having lived there for the past eighteen years. Mr. Canady was married, December 22, 1843, to Susannah Moore, who was born in Ohio April 10, 1823; her parents were natives of Virginia. This union has been blessed with children, twelve of whom lived to the age of maturity, and one who is dead. The living ones are Mary J., born February 13, 1844; Martha A., November 14, 1845; Louisa, February 18, 1846; Martin L., August 7, 1848; Silas A., July 18, 1854; William W., December 8, 1855; Etha L., died February 26, 1876; Enos, born October 2, 1856; Melissa E.,

March 7, 1858; Prentice A., December 8, 1859; Emma J., January 23, 1863, and Lillie V., April 26, 1864, of whom nine of the twelve have taught school in the schools of this county. Mr. Canady owns a well-improved farm of 171 acres in Sections 34 and 4. Is a consistent member of the Christian Church, and is a sterling gentleman, highly respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, and is a lover of education and always in favor of good schools. P. A. and Lillie, his youngest son and daughter, are attending Merom School, and P. A. will graduate this year at said college.

MAHLON H. CHAMNESS, farmer, P. O. Dalton, was born in this county January 24, 1840, and since that time has resided within a short distance of his birthplace. His father, Joshua, was born in North Carolina in 1806, and his mother in same State in 1809, and deceased April 22, 1881. They moved to this county in the year 1832. The subject of this sketch was married in 1862 to Miss Emily J. Hodgin, who was born in Randolph County, Ind. Their union has been blessed with three children—Lorinda A., born January 17, 1865; Mary A., October 13, 1867; Albert, August 19, 1873. Mary A. died March 4, 1873. Mr. Chamness is an energetic and earnest worker in the Church of Friends. Owns a farm of sixty acres. Is a gentleman of high social qualities and well respected by a large circle of acquaintances.

JOHN C. CLEVENGER.

John C. Clevenger, is a farmer, and son of Samuel B. and Mary Clevenger, was born in Randolph County, Ind., February 12, 1836. He is the fourth of a family of twelve children, eight of whom are now living. His father was born in Virginia February 15, 1802; his mother (Mary Truitt) was born in Maryland February 14, 1809. After marriage, his parents settled in Clinton County, Ohio, and after remaining here for a number of years they removed to Randolph County and settled in Stony Creek Township. They remained there on a rented farm about three years, then purchased eighty acres, and held it till 1856, when they sold out and purchased the farm now owned by the subject of this sketch, where they remained until their deaths. Mrs. Clevenger died May 24, 1864, and Mr. Clevenger died November 30, 1865. John lived with his father on the farm until his marriage, which occurred August 23, 1855; he was married to Amy A. Aker, of Randolph County. Mr. Clevenger obtained a fair education from the common district schools of the county. After his marriage, he settled on his father's farm, where he lived for about six years, when he moved upon a farm owned by Elisha Garrett, where he remained until the year 1865, when he purchased and moved on the farm he now owns. At the time of purchase, the farm consisted of 160 acres, a large portion of which was unimproved. It now consists of 240 acres, of which about 200 are under cultivation. This farm is well located and of a good quality of soil. Mr. and Mrs. Clevenger are the parents of thirteen children, of whom eight are living. Mr. Clevenger affiliates with the Democratic party, and was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace in 1872, and served for four years. He was elected Township Trustee in 1878, and served two terms. In both of these offices he served the people faithfully and honestly. He is an honored member of Windsor Lodge, No. 517, I. O. O. F. In addition to farming, Mr. Clevenger is engaged in buying and shipping stock of all kinds. Mr. and Mrs. Clevenger are both industrious and frugal people, well situated in life, and honored and useful citizens.

MARTIN L. CANADY.

Martin L. Canady was born in Randolph County, Ind., August 7, 1848, and is the son of Jonathan and Susanah (Moore) Canady. His father was born in Randolph County, N. C., August 3, 1821, and came to Wayne County, this State, in company with his parents when he was eight years of age. He came to this county in 1845, and settled near the town of Losantville on a farm. The mother of the subject of this sketch was born in Highland County, Ohio, April 10, 1823, and came with her parents to this county in 1826. Mr. Canady's parents are both living, in the enjoyment of fair health, one and a half miles from Losantville.

Martin was a farmer's boy, and received a liberal education from the district schools of his native township, and the county seminary of Winchester, under the supervision of Prof. Ferris. He began teaching in the public schools of this county when he was eighteen years of age, and has taught during the winter almost continuously ever since. At this writing, he is in charge of the school of his native town, Losantville. Mr. Canady has been eminently successful as a teacher and educator, and has done much for the cause of education in this county. He was married, August 31, 1869, to Miss Saffronia E. Noel, an estimable young lady and only daughter of James and Susan (Sisk) Noel. She was born in Edgar County, Ill., September 16, 1854. Her father was born near Paris, Edgar Co., Ill., December 20, 1820, and died six weeks before her birth. She came to this county in company with her mother when she was three years of age. Her mother was subsequently remarried, and now resides in Portland, Jay County, this State.

Mr. and Mrs. Canady are the parents of three children, as follows: Elbert N., born in Vermillion County, Ind., April 13, 1872; Jonathan A., in Jasper County, Ind., January 23, 1875, and Dollie, in Randolph County, Ind., December 14, 1878. Mr. Canady moved to Edgar County, Ill., soon after marriage and engaged in farming for one year, when he moved to Newport, Vermillion County, this State, where he lived for four years, engaged in teaching during the winter and running a saw-mill during the summer. He then moved to Jasper County, this State, where he remained for eighteen months, engaged in teaching and farming. He then returned to this county, purchased and settled on his father's farm. He retained possession of this farm until 1878, when he sold out and bought fifty acres where he now resides. This little farm is well improved and supplied with comfortable buildings. He has recently erected a brick residence, one and one-half stories in height, of modern architecture, a sketch of which is given in this work.

Mr. Canady is an active and energetic Republican in politics, and has filled several several important positions in the party; he was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace in 1878, and again re-elected in 1882. In 1880, he was appointed enumerator No. 171 in the Third District, under the supervision of Hon. J. W. Ridenower. He has filled all of these important offices with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. He is an efficient and active member of Losantville Lodge, No. 232, I. O. O. F., and Hagerstown Encampment, No. 25. He has passed all the chairs of his lodge twice, been four times elected Delegate to the Grand Lodge, has held the office of Secretary for a number of years and been Trustee ever since he became a member of the lodge. He takes a deep interest in the welfare of the order, and is ever actively engaged in its interest. He and his estimable lady are acceptable members of the Christian Church at Losantville, and honored and useful members of the community in which they reside.

HAMILTON P. FRANKS.

Hamilton P. Franks, physician and surgeon, was born in Hardin County, Ohio, March 8, 1849; he is the son of Peter and Mary (Brown) Franks, and is the sixth of a family of seven children, of whom four are now living. His father was born in Fayette County, Penn., December 17, 1813, and moved to Ohio with his parents when he was but three months old; his mother was born in Perry County, Ohio, November 11, 1817. After marriage, they settled on a farm in Hardin County, where they remained for a number of years, and subsequently removed to Licking County, where Peter Franks died April 24, 1878, and where Mary Franks, his widow, still resides. The subject of this sketch was raised on a farm until he was fifteen years of age, engaging in the duties common to the life of farmer boys, and receiving a liberal education from the common schools. At the age above mentioned, he commenced the study of dentistry with Dr. McBriar, of Newark, Ohio, with whom he remained for two years, when he located at Thornville, Perry Co., Ohio, and engaged in the practice of his profession. During his sojourn at Thornville, he commenced the study of medicine, which he prosecuted with vigor in connection with the practice of dentistry. He remained in Thornville until September, 1871, when he came to this county and located at Pleasant View, Nettle Creek Township, and engaged in the practice of medicine. He continued to practice in the above-named place until August, 1874, when he moved to Losantville of the same township, where he has since resided, and engaged in a very successful practice of his profession.

Dr. Franks has attended three courses of medical lectures—one at the Ohio Medical College of Cincinnati, one at the Kentucky School of Medicine of Louisville, Ky., and graduated at the Medical College of Indiana at Indianapolis March 1, 1882. Dr. Franks, although a comparatively young physician, has enjoyed an extensive practice, and his success has been a matter of pride to himself and friends. He is a diligent student, and keeps thoroughly posted in all of the latest phases of his profession. He is well adapted by nature to the profession of his choice, and has a brilliant prospective career.

He was united in marriage, November 8, 1870, to Miss Louisa A. McKinnon; his excellent wife is the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Arbogast) McKinnon, and was born in Logan County, Ohio, April 29, 1849; her parents are both living, and reside in Union County, Ohio; her father was born in Clark County, Ohio, February 22, 1811, and her mother February 4, 1813. Dr. and Mrs. Franks are the parents of two living children, four having died in infancy—Jessie M. was born November 8, 1872; Mary O., November 18, 1881. The Doctor and wife are acceptable and honored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Doctor is also a member of Losantville Lodge, No. 232, I. O. O. F., and a prominent member of the Randolph County Medical Society. He has recently erected a handsome two-story frame residence at Losantville, convenient and commodious. An exact sketch of the same is given in this work. Dr. and Mrs. Franks are honored and useful citizens of the county and valuable members of society.

J. W. HANSCOM & BRO., undertaking and furniture, Goodview. J. W. and J. S. Hanscom, were both born in Kentucky, the former November 9, 1842, and the latter July 15, 1853. They were educated at the Bourbon County Seminary, near Paris, Ky. Their father, Solomon Hanscom, was a native of Maine, their mother, Margaret (Ross) Hanscomb, was born in Kentucky. In 1855, they moved with their parents to Franklin, Johnson Co., Ind., where they remained for one year; they then settled at Pleasant View, where they now reside. On their arrival at this place, their father opened an undertaking and furniture establishment, which he continued to conduct until 1868, when he retired from business; his sons then formed a copartnership as above for the purpose of extending and continuing the business that their father had successfully carried on before them. These gentlemen are now doing an extensive business, and in their establishment may be found a large and well-selected stock of that class of goods usually found in an undertaking house. J. W. Hanscom was married, April 19, 1870, to Elizabeth Stump, who was born in Delaware County, Ind., November 28, 1849. Their union has been blessed with four children—Myrtle V., Leni L., Rufus R. and Maud.

JONATHAN J. JONES, farmer, P. O. Losantville, was born in Henry County, Ind., September 4, 1836; his father, Jacob Jones, was a native of North Carolina, born December 23, 1793; his mother, Matilda (Chapple) Jones, was also a native of North Carolina. Mr. Jones was married, February 14, 1861, to Susan Coralt, who was born in Ohio May 12, 1837. This union has been blessed with six children, viz., Thomas D., born September 2, 1863; Johnny, born October 19, 1866; Louis T., born August 27, 1869; Mollie J., born September 11, 1872; Eddie, born April 13, 1875; Charles, born December 24, 1878. Mr. Jones moved to this county in 1880; he owns a well-improved farm of 160 acres in Sections 14 and 15. Mr. Jones is a genial gentleman, and since his arrival into the county, has gained the respect and confidence of all who know him. Is also a prominent member of the I. O. O. F. at Losantville.

ISAAC R. MAULSBY, farmer, P. O. Losantville, was born in this county November 6, 1840; his father, Thomas Maulsby, was born in Tennessee January 5, 1805; his mother, Mary (Key) Maulsby, was a native of Virginia. Mr. Maulsby was married, September 27, 1865, to Miss Mannie Cory, who was born

Nathan Garrett A.E.C.

TAKEN ABOUT 1856.

MRS MALINDA GARRETT.

TAKEN ABOUT 1856.

NATHAN GARRETT.

This honored and useful citizen was born in Guilford County, N. C., November 19, 1806. He is the son of Caleb and Befulah (Jackson) Garrett, and was the second of a family of ten children, six of whom are now living. His parents removed from North Carolina about the year 1817, and settled in Salem, Ind., where Nathan received the greater portion of his education. From Salem his parents went to Danville, Ind., where they both died. Nathan was eighteen years of age when he came to Randolph County. He settled near Unionsport, and for several years engaged as teacher in the public schools. He was accounted a remarkable scholar for his time, having a knowledge of the classics as well as the common branches. As a teacher he was eminently successful, doing much to elevate the standard of education in the county. He was first married to Sarah Puckett, daughter of Joseph and Mary Puckett, of this county. After marriage he settled near Buena Vista, where he continued to teach in the public schools. He was the father of five children as fruits of his first marriage, and seven of his second. He was elected to the office of County Sheriff in the year 1835, and served for two terms. He was again elected to the office of County Auditor in the year 1846, and served in this capacity for fourteen years. That he served the people of the county faithfully as their public servant, his continuance in office for eighteen years is the best evidence. It is said of his services that he was complete master of all of the details of the offices that he filled. It is stated upon unquestionable authority that he could locate by section every resident of Randolph County at the time he was serving as County Auditor. He was called to mourn the death of his wife June, 1849. He was united in a second marriage to Mrs. Malinda R. Strahan December 24, 1850, who still survives. After a residence in Winchester for ten years after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Garrett settled upon a farm of 200 acres in Nettle Creek Township, where they continued to reside until Mr. Garrett's death, which occurred October 7, 1871, at the age of sixty-four years. He enlisted in Seventh Indiana Cavalry, under Col. J. P. C. Shanks and Lieut. Col. T. M. Browne, June, 1862. He enlisted as a private, but was soon promoted. He held the position of Quartermaster with the rank of First Lieutenant. As a soldier he served his country faithfully, and cast his might on the side of right when she trembled in the balance. And he lived to see the right prevail, and the shackles stricken from four millions of bondsmen. Mr. Garrett was a true patriot, and to him his beloved country was everything while men were nothing. He served his country faithfully for a term of three years, and was mustered out with his regiment at the close of the war. He returned to his home, where he remained until his death, conscious of the fact that he had done his whole duty to both his country and fellow-men; he had only to await the summons "come up higher." In politics, Mr. Garrett was an ardent and uncompromising Republican, and was ever active and vigilant in the support of the party of his choice. It may truthfully be said of Mr. Garrett that he was one man in ten thousand that are eminently fitted for serving the people. He was generous to a fault, of the kindest heart and noblest impulses. There was no sacrifice too great for him to make to accommodate a friend. He never forgot a favor, and always rewarded it, if in his power. One of the most striking characteristics of this remarkable man was his never failing memory. He never forgot a face nor a name. An example of his remarkable memory is stated in connection with his history as County Auditor. Thus lived and died one of Randolph County's most honored citizens, a faithful public servant, a brave soldier, a devoted husband, and an affectionate father, whose memory will ever be revered throughout coming ages.

MALINDA R. GARRETT.

This venerable lady is the daughter of Rev. Bazell and Mary Hunt, and widow of Nathan Garrett, and was born in Fleming County, Ky., February 4, 1817. Her father was born in Tennessee March 26, 1790, and her mother in Kentucky March 26, 1791. Malinda is the third of a family of ten children, of whom six are still living. Her parents settled in the State of Kentucky, where they remained until their children were all grown up, and the death of her mother, which occurred September 26, 1830. Her father removed to Indiana about the year 1858, and settled in Randolph County. He purchased a large tract of land in this county, where he lived until his death, October 29, 1869. Malinda lived with her parents until she was eighteen years of age, when she was united in marriage to George T. Strahan, of Kentucky, July 14, 1835. After marriage, they settled on a farm in their native State, where they continued to reside until the death of Mr. Strahan, which occurred April 17, 1847. After the lapse of one year Melinda removed to Indiana with her children, and settled on her father's farm in this county, where she remained until her marriage with Nathan Garrett December 24, 1850. Mr. and Mrs. Garrett lived in Winchester, this county, for ten years after their marriage, when they purchased the farm where Malinda now lives. This farm consists of 200 acres, with 120 under cultivation. Mrs. Garrett has entire control of this farm, and usually leaves it to some of her children. By her former husband she is the mother of four children, and by the latter seven. Her sons, David and S. P. Strahan, were gallant soldiers during the late war. David was the second enlisted soldier of Randolph County, Col. T. F. Colgrove being the first, and S. P. Strathan was the third to enlist, and the first wounded in battle. He was wounded in the battle of Rich Mountain. Being the first wounded soldier that enlisted in the county, after his return home he was visited by hundreds of people from this and adjoining counties, who had never seen a wounded soldier. These sons of Mrs. Garrett did gallant service in the defense of their country, and were honorably discharged. She is an industrious and frugal woman, possessing more than ordinary executive ability, and is an honored and useful member of society.

and raised in Henry County, Ind. Their union has been blessed with four children—Phila C., born May 14, 1867; Amy V., born December 29, 1869; Gilbert O., born August 30, 1873; Stephen C., born July 13, 1877. Mr. Maulsby owns a fine farm of 200 acres. Is a licentiate minister in the Baptist Church, and is ever willing and ready to aid in any enterprise that tends to elevate and enlighten his fellow-man.

RICHARD J. MAULSBY, farmer, P. O. Economy, was born in the house where he now resides, December 12, 1817. Thomas Maulsby, his father, was born in Tennessee January 6, 1805; his mother, Mary Maulsby, was a native of Virginia. The subject of this sketch was married, January 1, 1870, to Miss Ellen Hunt, who was born in this county June 7, 1851. Her parents were natives of North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Maulsby have had born to them three children—Mary E., born July 7, 1871; Thomas M., born November 21, 1872, and Oliver E., born December 9, 1877. Mr. Maulsby was educated in the Hagerstown Academy and the district schools of this county. He is an enterprising farmer, and one who believes in advancement. Has on his farm some improved breeds of stock and poultry. Mr. Maulsby is a hospitable, genial gentleman, and worthy of imitation.

SAMUEL NOFTSKER, farmer, P. O. Goodview, was born in Ohio November 16, 1834. His father, Christian Noftsker, was born in Pennsylvania November 22, 1800. His mother, Rachel (Parish) Noftsker, was a native of Ohio, born August 10, 1812. Samuel Noftsker, with his parents, settled in Delaware County, Ind., in 1837, where they remained until after the death of his father in 1869, when he, with his mother, settled where they now reside. Mr. Noftsker was educated in the district schools; has a good farm of forty acres in Section 14. Mr. Noftsker and mother are members of the Christian Church. Mr. Noftsker is a gentleman highly respected by all who know him. Mr. Noftsker was married, in 1882, to Miss Julia Freer, who was born in this county.

WILLIAM OAKERSON, farmer, P. O. Neff, was born in Kentucky April 1, 1808. His father and mother, John and Elizabeth (Todd) Oakerson, were natives of Maryland. Mr. Oakerson was married, March 20, 1828, to Mary Vallandingham, who was born in Kentucky January 5, 1804. Her parents were natives of Tennessee. They had born to them six children, of whom but two are living—James F. M., born June 24, 1835, and Alfred T., born January 9, 1843. July 27, 1870, Mr. Oakerson was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, and has since been living with his son Alfred, at the old home; except the past year, he has been living with his son James at the old homestead. Mr. Oakerson is an earnest worker in the Christian Church. Owns a fine farm of 180 acres in Section 23. Is an honest, upright gentleman, who has gained the confidence and respect of a large circle of acquaintances.

BURREL PIRKENS, farmer, P. O. Winchester, was born in Tennessee in 1813. His father, Stephen Pirkens, was a native of Virginia; his mother was born in Tennessee. Mr. Pirkens lived with John C. Carmichael until about eighteen years of age, when he became weary of the hardships that were daily imposed upon him, and concluded to leave his employer and seek his fortune elsewhere. For several years Mr. Pirkens was engaged in various avocations in Tennessee and along the river of that name. Mr. Pirkens has been married three times. His first wife, Mary Reeves, was a native of South Carolina, and bore him seven children, viz., Harrison, John, Priscilla, Stephen, Levi, Joel and Daniel. His second wife, Judy Felton, was born in North Carolina. Mr. Pirkens' third and present wife, Mahala Scott, is the mother of three children—Delmetta, Oda and Julian. Mr. Pirkens is a minister in the American Methodist Episcopal Church, and is an ardent worker in and supporter of the cause of Christ. He has a neat farm of seventy-two acres, and is considered to be an enterprising citizen.

ISAAC ROUTH.

This substantial and honored citizen is the son of James and Mary (Hooten) Routh, and was born in Wayne County, Ind., August 3, 1829. He is the fourth of a family of twelve children (ten males and two females), of whom four are now living. His father was born in Tennessee July 14, 1805, and his mother in Ohio in the year 1808. His father moved to Indiana about the year 1825, and settled in Wayne County, very soon after which his first wife died. He was subsequently married to Mary Hooten about the year 1828. About three years after this, he moved to Randolph County, and purchased 120 acres of unimproved land in Nettle Creek Township; he lived upon this piece of land about twelve years, when he sold it and bought 160 acres in the same township, where he lived for twenty years when he sold out and removed to the State of Kansas, where he remained for a short time, then returned to Indiana and remained for two years, when he removed to the State of Illinois, where his wife died, August, 1865. He then returned to Indiana and made his home with his son Isaac until his death. Isaac lived with his father on the farm until he was twenty-two years of age; he attended the common district school in winter, and four months at the County Seminary at Muncie. By his industry he obtained a good English education. He was engaged in teaching school during the winter for about ten years. In this work he was very successful. He was married to Mary A. Crouse, daughter of Jacob and Hannah Crouse of this county, November 13, 1851. Her parents were natives of North Carolina. After marriage Mr. Routh settled on a farm of eighty acres, situated immediately south of the one he now owns, where he lived about ten years, when he sold out and purchased 120 acres joining his present farm. His farm at present consists of 200 acres, with 160 acres well improved. His farm is gently rolling and very productive, and supplied with an abundance of water. He has excellent buildings, being large and convenient. His dwelling house was erected in 1876, one and a half stories in height, and is a model of convenience. It is situated on a commanding knoll surrounded by shade trees. Mr. and Mrs. Routh are the parents of eleven children, six of whom are living—Maria J., born October 25, 1852 deceased September 21, 1853; Charles W., born September 8, 1854; William R., April 18, 1857, deceased February 26, 1860; Hannah E., born April 20, 1859; James O., March 22, 1861; Jacob W., March 24, 1863, deceased September 9, 1864; Alves T., born February 3, 1865; Milo O., November 3, 1867; Martha E., September 19, 1869; Joseph A., May 20, 1873, deceased September 7, 1873; Omer E., born September 1, 1877, deceased September 23, 1877. One son, Charles W., is married and lives near his father; the remainder of the living children are at home with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Routh and three of their children are acceptable members of the Christian Church. Mr. Routh is a Democrat in political preferment, and has served one term as Township Trustee. He joined the I. O. O. F. Lodge in 1862, and remained an honored member until 1865, when he voluntarily withdrew, having a prospect at that time of leaving the State. Mr. and Mrs. Routh are industrious and lead a quiet but upright life, and are beloved by all who know them.

CHARLES WESLEY ROUTH, son of Isaac and Mary Routh, was born in Randolph County September 8, 1854. He is the second of a family of eleven children; he lived on the farm with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age; he received his education at the common district schools of the county, and obtained a very fair English education. After his twenty-second year, he rented land of his father for about five years, when he purchased seventy-six acres where he now resides. He was married to Sophrona Leeka, daughter of Christian and Sidney Leeka, of Randolph County, April 19, 1876. Mr and Mrs. Routh are honored members of the Christian Church. Mr. Routh affiliates with the Democratic party. Mr. and Mrs. Routh have a pleasant home, and are industrious and frugal and honored citizens.

IRA SMITHSON, farmer, P. O. Neff, was born in Ohio November 30, 1829. His father and mother were natives of Virginia. Mr. Smithson when ten years old came with his parents to this county; was married to Eliza J. Thornburg, March 20, 1832, who died January 15, 1850. Mr. Smithson was again married to Christena Clevenger, August 23, 1852, who was born in this county April 16, 1835. This union has been blessed with four children—Eliza J., born July 28, 1853; Edward W., February 18, 1856; Lorinda E., December 30, 1862; and Oliver P., July 3, 1867. Mr. Smithson settled on the farm of sixty acres where he now resides, in 1852. He was educated in the district schools of the county; he is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Smithson is an enterprising farmer and well respected by all who know him. His son, Oliver P., was born blind; he has attended three terms of school for the blind at Indianapolis and has made considerable proficiency.

CHARLES H. SMUTHERS, farmer, P. O. Trenton. He resides in Nettle Creek Township. Mr. Smuthers was born in Virginia February 25, 1833. His father, Charles, and his mother Evaline (Early) Smuthers, were natives of Virginia. When Charles H. was ten years old, his parents came with him to this county. He has always given his time to farming. In 1861, at the beginning of the war, he enlisted in Company E, of the Thirty-sixth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, and was in the Army of the Tennessee. He participated in the following hard-fought battles—Pittsburg Landing and Shiloh April 6 and 7, 1862; the siege of Corinth, Miss., in the summer of 1862; battle of Perryville, Ky., October 8, 1862; Resaca and Kenesaw Mountain and all the other conflicts in the famous Sherman's march to the sea, till the army arrived at Lovejoy. At the last-named place, Mr. Smuthers became unable for duty and his soldiery ended. He was discharged in 1864. On the 20th day of December, 1864, he was married to Miss Nancy Williams who was born in Virginia, June 4, 1841. Mr. Smuthers has a farm of eighty acres, which, by his industry, he has well improved. He and his estimable lady are widely known and favorably received by all who know them.

HAMILTON SNODGRASS is a farmer of Nettle Creek Township, and his post office address is Losantville. He was born in Tennessee July 29, 1807; his father and mother were natives of Virginia. Mr. Snodgrass was married, in 1828, to Elizabeth Dickson, who was born in Virginia October 3, 1798, and who died in 1863. By this union there were three children—Sidney, William A. J. and John. Mr. Snodgrass was a second time married, in 1864, to Mary A. Burris, who was born in Wayne County, Ind. By this union there were two children—Martha C. and David O. Mr. Snodgrass was again bereaved of his companion. September 15, 1880, he was a third time married, to Patience Wayne. Mr. Snodgrass was an early settler, having come to the county in 1828. He is familiar with the hardships and deprivations of frontier life, and has done much to build up his neighborhood. And while he was building up, the foundation was laid to level his fortune, for he had to pay $15,000 security debts. He is still enterprising and has a pleasant home.

JOHN SAWYER, farmer, P. O. Trenton, whose parents were natives of North Carolina, was born in Wayne County, Ind., in 1830. Mr. Sawyer was married, in 1856, to Miss A. M. Robinson, who departed this life in about eleven months after marriage. Mr. S. was again married, in 1858, to Miss Sarah J. Outland. This union was blessed with one child—Eli T., born April 29, 1860. In 1862, Mr. Sawyer was called upon to mourn the loss of his beloved wife. He fought the battles of life alone until May 1, 1863, when he was married to Rachel Scott. The result of this last union has been ten children, viz., Mark, born February 26, 1864; Sarah E., April 2, 1866; William C., August 19, 1867; John C., December 16, 1868; James W., December 20, 1870; Reuben, October 26, 1872; Susan, March 18, 1874; Mary, May 18, 1876; Elmer C., October 18, 1878; Carry, born October 4, 1880, deceased. Mr. Sawyer is an honest, upright gentleman, and highly respected by all who know him. Has a farm of eighty acres, under a good state of cultivation, in Section 25.

DAVID A. STAFFORD, farmer, P. O. Goodview, was born in Henry County, Ind., September 2, 1844. When six years of age, he moved with his mother to this county, and settled where he now resides. Mr. Stafford was married, March 12, 1866, to Miss Maria E. Wood, who was a native of this county. Their union has been blessed with four children—John F., born May 2, 1867; Nevad F., December 7, 1869; Sarah F., March 15, 1871; Ella M., January 2, 1873. Mr. Stafford was educated in the district schools of this county. Is an industrious, good citizen. Has a well-improved farm of eighty acres in Section 13.

JOHN T. VARDEMAN is a citizen of Nettle Creek Township, and his post office address is Losantville. Mr. Vardeman was born in Fayette County,

Ind., November 27, 1815, and resided there till he was past eighteen years old, when he moved to Wayne County and from there to Randolph County in the winter of 1861. He has been a resident of this county ever since. He was a son of William Vardeman, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Reed. His father was born in Lincoln County, Ky., July 28, 1790, and his mother in Virginia in 1795. On the 12th day of March, 1812, the elder Vardeman and wife landed on the West Fork of Whitewater, four miles from Connersville. The country was then wild and full of the natives, and this brave pioneer had to sit by his door with mouth full of bullets and with knife and tomahawk in hand many a long night, in defense of his family. Young John T. was educated in the schools of the day—in the buckeye log cabin, furnished with split log slabs without backs, and with greased paper windows. At the age of twenty-five, he began his career as a minister in the United Brethren Church, and he has obtained much of his knowledge while in the saddle in the tours of his circuit. He never studied grammar or mathematics in school. The Rev. Mr. Vardeman was married the first time to Martha Jenkins, a native of Fayette County and daughter of Azure and Ruth Jenkins. By this union there were six children—Joseph, Philip, Caleb W., Nancy and Amanda. The first three died in infancy. Mrs. Vardeman died and Mr. Vardeman subsequently married Rebecca Jenkins, the sister of his first wife. By this union, there were nine children—Martha J., John T., Sarah D., Elven M., Elleanor, Mary C., William M., Indiana, Alice and David E. Mr. Vardeman was again bereaved, and he was subsequently married to Sarah E. Boling, daughter of James and Ellen Boling. By this union, there were two children—Orpha and Jeremiah. The reverend gentleman represented his church seven times in the General Conference and half of the time as Presiding Elder. In 1869, he was elected Representative in the Legislature for Randolph County. He was an early Abolitionist and is in favor of prohibition.

STEPHEN D. WARWICK, farmer and carpenter, P. O. Swan's Hill, was born in Erie County, N. Y., June 18, 1837. When four months of age, moved with his parents to Michigan, and settled in Jackson County, where he remained until 1860, when he removed to Park County, Ind., where he resided until 1861, when he enlisted in Company A, Thirty-first Indiana Volunteers. Mr. Warwick took part in numerous battles, among which may be mentioned Pittsburg Landing, Shiloh and Fort Donnelson. He was discharged in October, 1863, and again enlisted in the One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Ohio National Guards for a term of three months, and during the time was stationed at Piedmont, Va., as patrol. Mr. W. was married June 11, 1865, to Elizabeth Conyers, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., April 20, 1841. Her father was a native of Pennsylvania. Her mother was born in Indiana. Mr. Warwick is a local minister in the United Brethren Church; owns a farm of eighty-four acres; is a sterling gentleman and commands the respect of a large circle of acquaintances.

ISAAC WOOD.

Isaac Wood was born in Franklin County, Va., December 9, 1818. He is the son of Philip and Ellenor (Green) Wood, and is the fifth of a family of eight children, of whom four are now living, as follows: Samuel, who resides in this county; Abraham, in Michigan; Jesse, in Wayne County, and the subject of this sketch. His father and mother were both born in Virginia, the former, of slave parentage, February 15, 1781, and the latter of free parentage, May 5, 1779. His father bought his freedom prior to the birth of Isaac, and moved to this State in 1840, and settled in this county, where he died in the year 1856. His mother died in Virginia, prior to the emigration of her husband. Isaac came to this State in 1837, and hired out to a farmer in Wayne County. He continued to work out by the month until 1845, when he came to this county and settled on the farm where he now resides. He at first purchased 160 acres of unimproved land, with the exception of a deadening of twenty acres. Through his untiring industry and frugality, he has added to this purchase until to-day he is owner and proprietor of 385 acres of excellent land, with 300 acres under a high state of cultivation. His land lies in two tracts, one of 320 acres in the form of a square, and one of sixty-five acres. This farm is well-improved, of fertile soil and supplied with a very comfortable farmhouse, and one of the largest and most convenient barns in the county, a sketch of which is given in this work. He was married, January 9, 1845, to Miss Sarah Thomas, a most estimable Christian lady, and daughter of Seth and Sarah (Clarke) Thomas. She was born in North Carolina, of free parentage, November 6, 1822. She emigrated to this State with her parents in the year 1837, and settled near Washington, Wayne County, where her parents died. Mrs. Wood is the only surviving child of a family of three. Mr. and Mrs. Wood received a limited education in Wayne County, this State, the latter also attending school while a resident of North Carolina. They have never been blessed with any children of their own, but have partially raised and educated two. Mrs. Wood is an honored and acceptable member of the M. E. Church at Bethel, this county. She has been a faithful and devoted wife and has been of great assistance to her husband in all of his undertakings. When Mr. Wood came to this county, he had but a few dollars that he had saved out of his hard earnings as a day laborer. He is now one of the most wealthy of his race in the county. He is a stanch Republican and takes a deep interest in the success of the party. He and his estimable lady are honored and respected citizens of the county and useful members of society.

JACKSON TOWNSHIP.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

It includes the north of Township 18 north, Range 1 west and the south half of Township 19 north, Range 1 west, both townships being fractional, and also fractional Township 21 north, Range 15 east, lying in the northeastern corner of the county, in the valley of the Mississinewa.

The waters of the township are the Mississinewa, Little Mississinewa and some smaller streams.

The old or Wayne's boundary divides the township into two parts somewhat cornerwise, entering near the northeast corner and passing out at the south side, crossing the township line about two and one-half miles west of the east line of the township, county and State. The P., C. & St. L. (Pan Handle) Railroad crosses the southwest corner of the township.

It was erected as a township in 1833. It contains about thirty sections, being six miles north and south and five miles from east to west. The Mississinewa flows from east to west, as also the Little Mississinewa northward to the Big Mississinewa. The land is rather level and somewhat low. It was at first considerably wet, much of the surface standing in the water a great part of the time. Clearing and ditching, however, have dried out the land pretty well, and the country is now good for farming, the low lands being the best. Originally the country was heavily timbered. Most of the farms are now well cleared, though some are still rather new. The improvements are middling, with some fine residences. There are several pikes in the township. The Union City & Salem pike divides the township north and south; the New Pittsburg pike extends from the Salem pike westward north to North Pittsburg, and the State Line pike (Union City to Recovery) extends along nearly the entire east line.

The first entry was made by John Abercrombie in October, 1816, on the river south of Pittsburg. The actual settlement began hardly as early. It has been difficult to trace the history of things to the first beginning. The earliest settlers seem to have left no trace behind, and but a slender memory of them remains among the residents of the present day. The bona fide occupation of the township seems to have taken place about 1829 perhaps somewhat earlier. A few seem to have spent some time there before that date. Thomas Shalor, a roving fellow, occupied the James Porter place perhaps in 1826, leaving the neighborhood about 1829. He is the same one mentioned by McKew & Hawkins as living in Jay County, in the region of Camden. Philip Storms is thought by some to have been the earliest resident. He is said to have lived somewhere in the region east of Jacob Johnson's, and afterward he resided several years at the Allensville crossing. One man states that Philip Storms was annoyed and injured by having men enter his selected location from under him, and that he became "fighting mad" on account of it, which is not much wonder, if the aggression were known and intended as such, since the act would be both a flagrant violation of "squatter" law, and a serious breach of natural justice and of the golden rule. Mr. Storms resided in the region for some time, as, several years later, he was appointed by the County Commissioners to be Road Supervisor of his district.

Some men by the name of Brockus, wild, rough men, who had however, estimable wives, were early settlers, their residence being across the Mississinewa, directly north of Handschey's first mill. They left before a very long time, but the clearing said to have been made by them was still to be seen many years afterward, and perhaps is there even to the present day.

An old man by the name of Ishmael Bunch lived on the land entered by John Jones, near Delphus Warren's. Jesse Gray was a famous pioneer and hunter, noted through all this region, and for many years, though his precise location on the Mississinewa at his first coming (about 1820) is not pointed out. He entered land in 1833 on the Mississinewa, directly north of Allensville, though he must have lived somewhere in the region for ten or twelve years, and, about the time of the killing of Fleming, he moved from the county to the vicinity of Hill Grove, Darke Co., Ohio, and still again in later years to Adams County, Ind. A settler by the name of Jacobs settled very early (in 1828) directly north of Allensville, on the north side of the Mississinewa. He was an old man in 1848, and died some years later, about 1852.

The entries began quite early, the first two having been made in 1816, the next two in 1819 and the fifth in 1826. Whether these purchasers settled their land seems doubtful. Their names have not been heard among those of early pioneers of the region. The entries were as follows:

John Abercrombie, on both sides of the Mississinewa River, directly south of Pittsburg, 1816; John Laverty, 1816, on the creek, about a mile nearly north of New Middletown; John C. Dunham, 1819, two separate quarter sections lying on both sides of the Mississinewa, two and one-half miles southeast of New Pittsburg; Abraham Royer, one and a half miles southeast of New Lisbon, between the Little Mississinewa and the Ohio line.

William Simmons came about 1828 down the Mississinewa from James Porter's, Simmons being in Ward Township, Allen Wall came in 1817, but he was in Ward Township. George Porter came in 1829. Messrs. Keys, Hodge, Manus and Fields lived southwest of Porter's in 1829, probably in Ward Township. James Porter settled in the same year (1829). Amos Smith came to New Lisbon in 1830. Eli Noffsinger settled near there the same year. Andrew Debolt came to Mt. Holly the next year. James Reeves and James Wickersham settled in 1832. Jacob Johnson came in 1833, Thomas Devore in 1834, Jasper Jacobs in 1832, Jesse Beach in 1833. John Hoke and Thomas Wiley came in 1836. John Hoke lives there still; Mr. Wiley moved to Union City and died there. [Mr. Hoke died during the summer of 1881.] Others had come in, though just when is not now known, viz., David Vance, Isaiah Cox, William Cox, near New Lisbon; Seth Macy, one and one-half miles west of Jacob Johnson's; John Skinner and James Skinner, one mile west of New Lisbon; James Warren, one-half mile south of New Middletown; John Warren, three miles west of New Middletown; William Warren at New Middletown. John Sheets had settled far south, near Union City, and possibly others. This account is doubtless not full nor entirely accurate, but it is nearly correct and as extensive as our information will permit.

The fourth entry in the township was by Abram Royer, W. S. E. 13, 18, 1, 80 acres, August 10, 1826, being land now owned by J. Noffsinger. He probably did not occupy it, as we have never heard his name mentioned as a settler. The fifty entry was by John Jones, W. N. W. 21, 21, 15, 80 acres, August 27, 1830, southwest of Dolphus Warren's, and now owned by him. The next entry was by James Simmons, W. ½ N. E. 20. 21, 15, a little west of the second entry. Simmons married, and settled in 1834. The entries up to April 12, 1837 appear by the record to have been as follows:

ENTRIES.

John Abercrombie, S. W. 7, 21, 15, October 16, 1816; John Laverty, W. S. W. 20, 21, 15, December 27, 1816; John C. Dunham, N. E. 8, 21, 15, August 18, 1819; John C. Dunham, S. E. 8, 21, 15, August 18, 1819; Abraham Royer, W. S. E. 13, 18, 1, August 10, 1826; John Jones, W. N. W. 21, 21, 15, August 27, 1830; James Simmons, W. N. The first settlers were inclined rather to hunt than to clear, but some moved away and others came in, and solid and permanent improvement began. Many, perhaps most, of the first comers were poor, some without even money to purchase land. Mr. Porter (James) says that he entered 120 acres forty acres at a time, walking mostly to Cincinnati and back, making each separate entry.

Mrs. Ruby, widow of Thomas Wiley, relates as an unusual thing that her husband hired a hewed log house, built before they moved there. Times were "rough" there for many years. There were no mills worth naming and the settlers had to go to Greenville, Stillwater, Richmond, Ridgeville, etc.

The first school in Mr. Porter's neighborhood was taught by George Porter's wife about 1836. The people used to go to meeting to the Prospect Meeting-House neighborhood. The first meeting Mr. Porter's folks attended was at Riley Marshall's, near Prospect. Marshall's was the preaching place, and it was held on a week day. Mrs. Porter used to take her baby and walk to meeting—three miles. The first school near Allensville was taught by Mrs. Beach at home. There may have been seven or eight pupils—a mere handful.

The first sermon was preached at Mr. Beach's by a Baptist preacher. The first mill was a corn cracker. Jacob Johnson built one afterward, which he said cost him $1.50. The stones were common gray heads dressed down. It would grind five or six bushels in twenty-four hours by running day and night. Mr. Skinner afterward built a pretty good mill for wheat and corn. Mr. Hinchy also built one with a saw-mill. The saw-mill is there yet. The grist mill at Allensville was built by Hinchy and some one else. It was sold to Bowersox & Achenbach; then to Shreeve, and Widow Shreeve owns it now. It has a very good reputation, and turns off reliable work.

The first organized religious society is supposed to have been the Disciples Church, New Lisbon, in 1839, and the first church erected to have been by them near New Lisbon in 1841. Many of the early settlers were church-going people. Smith, Wiley, Reeves, Mangus, Wickensham, Debolt, etc., were Disciples. Beach, Chandler and others near Allensville were Baptists.

It would seem from the above that in Jackson Township up to April 12, 1837, not quite four sections or about one thousand one hundred and forty acres of land had been entered, by about thirty-one persons, no entry being above 160 acres, and nearly all eighties or forties. The great rush of settlement came in 1837 and 1838. The entries in Jackson Township were made by men of very moderate pecuniary ability. Economy and thrift have, however, become the means of furnishing to many in the township comfortable and even luxurious homes, and a considerable number have acquired wealth. The body of the population remain, however, even as of old, and, from the beginning, industrious, sturdy, simple-hearted, independent farmers of moderate means and frugal habits.

ROADS.

Two chief roads were opened at an early day through the township, one being the route from Greenville, near Union City, via Deerfield, Ridgeville and Fairview into Delaware County. Though never a great route of travel like the Greenville, Winchester & Muncie road, yet in former days it took a considerable amount of business. The other is the old State road from Union City to Portland, Jay Co. It was at first a diagonal road, extending nearly in a straight line. That part of this road that lay in Randolph County has been nearly or quite all vacated. The part in Jay County mostly remains in use. Jackson has no railroad and no railroad point at hand, Union City, Recovery, Portland and Winchester all being at a distance, Union City, however, being the nearest, and at that point most of the trade of that region is handled.

The Portland & Union Railroad, projected many years ago, was graded through Jackson Township, and New Pittsburg was laid out for a center of trade, but the railroad was not completed; the track was never made, and the road is simply a useless bank of earth, and Jackson Township and New Pittsburg as well is out in the cold.

At the present writing (November, 1881), a project is on foot to build a road from Bluffton to Union City, and the route contemplated is to follow the old road bed from Union to Antioch; thence across not far from Collett, and so to another road bed, which was once made from Camden to Bluffton, thus securing the advantage of those old tracks and also giving an outlet to Camden, Jay County, that "spunky" little town hitherto left out by every road thus far built through that region. This would be the first railroad to pass through Jackson Township, and would revive such embryo towns as Pittsburg, at the Jay and Randolph line, and Boundary and Antioch, in Jay County, and enable Camden to grow and to increase the vitality which she has stubbornly maintained from her first establishment even to the present hour, in spite of fate and the railroads.

Jackson is the extreme northeast township of the county, and its boundaries are as follows: On the north by Jay County, on the east by Ohio, on the south by Wayne Township, on the west by Ward Township. Politically, Jackson Township is overwhelmingly Democratic. Originally it is said to have been almost wholly so, in so much that a story is told that at one time one Whig voted alone in Jackson Township. This can hardly be true, yet the time has been when the non-Democratic voters in Jackson Township were "mity skase" indeed. The Republican strength is said to be steadily growing there, but they are still in a large and for the present hopeless minority.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 19, Range 1 west—Sections 24, 25, 1837; Section 36, 1837–1838. The entries were made from 1816 to 1839, inclusive The first was made in 7, 21, 15, and the last in 9, 21, 15.

TOWNS.

Allensville—Location, Section 9, 21, 15, Trowbridge Allen, proprietor, A. D. Way, surveyor; twenty lots, situated on the Union & North Salem Pike, a little south of the Mississinewa River; recorded November 13, 1847. Streets—north and south, Race: east and west, Water, Walnut, Vine.

The town is dead, though not absolutely extinct. Jonathan Lambert first built a log cabin and put in a store there in about 1844 or 1845. The town was platted shortly afterward, and Lambert's store remained till perhaps 1856, and a Mr. Bowen succeeded him. Mr. Lambert took $1,200 stock in the railroad from Union City to Portland, and of course lost it all. Mr. Shanks also had a store, and sold it to Abraham Lambert, and afterward Ziba Davis bought him out. Ziba Davis had a smith shop from the beginning, and brought up his sons to the business, and most of them follow the vocation still, Ira and William residing at Saratoga, Royal H. at New Lisbon and Isaac at North Salem, Jay County,

Some of the early settlers in the neighborhood were Trowbridge Allen, Ziba Davis, Cortlandt Lambert, Mr. Hoover, father of Isaac Hoover, Abraham and Jeremiah Lambert, etc.

Allensville was never much of a town. Mr. Handschey built the steam grist mill still standing at Allensville about 1850, after having had for years a water mill on the Mississinewa, near the mouth of Little Mississinewa, built in 1840. That steam mill was sold to Bowersox, being owned afterward by Bowersox & Achenback. Mr. Shreev bought it of them, and his widow owns it still. It is a good mill, and does creditable and reliable work.

The "Quaker trace" passed through Jackson Township, past Mount Holly, Castle Post Office, near Allensville, crossing Mississinewa at the old ford, about eighty rods east of the turnpike bridge. The Salem & Union Pike passes through the town. Nothing has been there for many years except the old mill.

As to the towns of Jackson, not much can be said. Most of them are extinct or greatly dwindled. Allensville (Sockum) was never "any great shakes," and what life it had "winked out." New Lisbon had a brave start, and might have done well, but Union City cut off its wind, and it had to succumb.

New Middletown is worse faded than the other two. An old meeting-house opens its doors and a new schoolhouse welcomes a noisy troop of country lads and lasses, but as to the rest the passer by sadly asks "Where?" and echo softly whispers, "Where?" Of Mount Holly, with name so sweet and redolent, no vestige is left. A house is there, but it is only a country farm house, and suggests no thought of graveled streets and lighted palaces. As you pass the whilom town you behold an old farm house and an ancient barn; "only those and nothing more!"

New Pittsburg alone of all these interior towns—these places with high-sounding or euphonious names—retains a semblance of life. Though by no means so large and rich as old Pittsburg, where in days of auld lang syne the gay and courtly French erected Fort Duquesne, though not so glum as its black and sooty namesake at the head of the Ohio, neither is it so dirty and so grimy. Each town has simply done its best and its most, which, in truth, for these log house towns in the Randolph woods has not been very much. Should, indeed, the Union & Bluffton Railroad succeed in being built and take New Pittsburgh in its track, some life might peradventure be evoked from its dry bones, but who can tell?

Castle Post Office, no town, Section 22, 21, 15; five miles northwest of Union City. The place is on the Salem Pike. There is only a toll gate office, a store, a post office and a dwelling, all in the same small building, and occupied by a single family. The location is on 22, 21, 15. Some importance attaches to the spot, since, except Pittsburg in the extreme north, Castle is the only post office in Jackson Township. A considerable part of the north portion is supplied by Salem, on the county line in Jay County, three miles east of Pittsburg, and the southern part looks to Union City for its connection with the great world, and not in vain, for Union City is a center indeed.

New Middletown.—Henry Hinkle, proprietor; location, Section 30, Town 21, Range 15; recorded January 7, 1851. The streets were: North and south, Main; east and west, Main Cross (Deerfield road).

At first, Joshua Burton had a small store; Joseph had a smith shop; Samuel Lady and William Warren have had stores at this place at different times; Amos Cothron at one time had a smith shop. Many years ago a meeting-house was built. The business done at Middletown was never large. The place may be said to be extinct. The old church is still there; and a schoolhouse has been lately built, but the town itself is now only a name. There is a very small store. It stood upon the Greenville & Deerfield State road, about five miles from Union City.

Almost all the towns in this region were originally christened as "New" something or other—New Lisbon, New Pittsburg, New Middletown. They were indeed new then, but they are new no longer, and the affix "new" is mostly omitted, and their memory is retained simply as Middletown, Lisbon and Pittsburg.

Mt. Holly.—George Debolt, proprietor; C. S. Goodrich, surveyor; location, Section 27, Town 21, Range 15, northwest of Union City; twenty-eight lots; recorded May 23, 1840. The streets were: North and south, Main; east and west, Sycamore, Walnut and Cross. Town extinct.

Mt. Holly seems to have been ahead, as to time, of all the towns in that region. Their dates are as follows: Mt. Holly, 1840; Allensville, 1847; New Lisbon, 1848; New Middletown, 1851; New Pittsburg, 1856. Thus the town with the fragrant name had seven years the start of its earliest rival, and "Sokum" was so distant that she need have had no fear of her faraway neighbor. But old settlers insist upon it that Mt. Holly never had anything but one blacksmith shop. If so, so be it. It was saved the slow, tedious process of dying by inches or perishing by dull, stupid decay. Its proprietor had more exalted ideas of future greatness for his new town, since he made three cross streets, while most of the embryo cities at their first laying out, were fully contented with one, and several had no "cross streets" at all. But all in vain; survey and record were alike for naught.

New Lisbon.—Location, Section 12, Town 18, Range 1, near the boundary, north of Union City, on Little Mississinewa River. Thomas Wiley, proprietor; laid out in 1848; recorded January 19, 1850; fourteen lots. Streets: North and south, Main, Walnut; east and west, Elm. Polly's Addition, six lots (15 to 20), between the "Boundary" and the North and South road, John Polly, proprietor; recorded November 11, 1853. Distances: Union City, three and one-half miles; Middletown, three and one-half miles; Saratoga, five and one-half miles; Winchester, thirteen miles; New Pittsburg, eight and one-half miles. The town was situated on Section 12, Town 18, Range 1, being laid out by Rev. Thomas Wiley in 1848 (recorded 1850), when Union City was all a wilderness. There were, at one time, and not very long after its commencement, two stores, two smith shops, one cabinet shop, one hotel, one saw-mill, one church and some twelve dwelling-houses. The railroad and Union City killed the town. Some seven or eight dwellings remain. There is also a church near by. The business of the place is nearly extinct. A schoolhouse and a cemetery are also in the vicinity. The old church was taken away and a new one erected during the summer of 1881, a fine, large church, well suited for the purpose of worship and service, and quite tasteful in appearances. New Lisbon is three and a half miles north of Union City. It had a fine start, and but for the railroad would doubtless have made a creditable showing for business, but the fates decreed otherwise and New Lisbon has buildings still standing, enough to make quite a town, and the eight dwellings are all inhabited, but the only semblance of business is a smith shop, and the crowds on the Sabbath attending at the new meeting-house. The post office has been discontinued for fifteen or twenty years.

New Pittsburg.—Location, near Jay County line, upon the track of the Union City & Portland Railroad, Section 6, Town 21, Range 15, William McFarland, proprietor; recorded July 3, 1856; sixty-two lots. Streets: First street, north and south; Main, Elm, east and west.

New Pittsburg is on the route of a railroad projected and graded some twenty-five years ago from Union City to Portland, and at the line of Randolph and Jay Counties. The town is on Section 6, Town 21, Range 15, near the northwest corner of Jackson Township, and about one mile north of the Mississinewa River. The railroad failed, and New Pittsburg has dragged along trying to prosper, but not able to do so. It was set on foot in 1854 (recorded in 1856) by William McFarland. At one time, say about 1864, considerable life was shown. There were then two stores, two smith shops, a wagon shop and some other things. The business has mostly left the place, and the town is greatly decayed. There are now two small stores, a smith shop, a cooper shop, a wagon shop, one physician, one schoolhouse, a post office, two churches, some twenty dwellings (mostly poor and decayed) and perhaps one hundred people. A pike connects the town with Union City, a distance of twelve miles. The place would seem to be far enough from the railroad and from other places of trade, and so well connected with Union City by a substantial pike, that it might hold a fair share of business and maintain a moderate growth, but it appears not to do so.

The project of a railroad from Union City to Bluffton, to pass by New Pittsburg, Boundary, Antioch, Camden, etc., is now talked of. It would pass over two old grades, both in good condition. Should this proposal prove substantial, it would be the first road through Jackson Township, and would revive somewhat the towns named above, and perhaps enable Camden to secure a permanent growth, which is sincerely to be desired for all these places, since they have struggled so long and so gallantly against adverse odds, and some of them have held a substantial prosperity in spite of many obstacles.

BIOGRAPHIES.

Hampton Adkins, grandfather of Mrs. Jacob Gittinger (late of Jackson Township), was born in Delaware about 1776. He ran away from home at the age of seventeen years, making his way into Virginia. He volunteered in the United States Army under Gen. Anthony Wayne, in 1793, coming to Fort Washington (Cincinnati), marching with Wayne to Greenville and to Recovery, helping to gather the bones of St. Clair's men from that fatal field; helping, also, to crush the Indian power in the grand attack upon their forces on the Maumee in the fall of 1794.

Tarrying some years in Ohio, he returned to Delaware, and while there married Elizabeth Lowe. In 1806, they emigrated to Butler County. They had four children, two sons and two daughters, one daughter living. He was a farmer and a carpenter, removing finally to Darke County, Ohio, and dying in 1860, eighty-four years old. He was hearty and rugged and almost as sprightly as a young man, and might have reached a hundred years, but a cruel cancer attacked his jaw and ended his life in the extremity of mortal agony. He, too, belonged to the Democratic faith, and clung to his principles as the sheet anchor of safety for the country of his love.

George Adkins, father of Mrs. Jacob Gittinger (late of Jackson Township), was born in 1801 in the State of Delaware. His parents settled in Ohio in 1806, in Butler County. G. A. was twice married, his first wife being Jane Wilson and Mrs. Margaret (Gittinger) being their only child. His second wife was Mrs. Ramsey, and their children were five in number, four sons and one daughter, two or three of whom are living. Mr. Adkins was a farmer by vocation, a Presbyterian in religious connection, and a Democrat in politics. He was married in Butler County and resided there many years, but his death took place in Darke County, not very far from New Paris.

Ezekiel Clough, farmer, was born in New Hampshire in 1802, emigrated to Mill Creek, Ohio, not far from Cincinnati in 1818. His father died soon afterward, leaving the care of the family to Ezekiel, then about eighteen years old. They "rented" for several years, and then engaged in making brick in Cincinnati, by which he got his start. He married Anna Huddart, and in 1836 the couple moved to the "wilds of Jay," entering 640 acres of land In 1862, he changed his residence from Jay to Randolph, and in the latter county has been his residence from that date. Mr. Clough has, in the course of forty-five years, acquired a large fortune, which has been liberally employed in works of usefulness and benevolence. Mr. Clough has had nine children—William, Nancy, Ezekiel, Hannah, George, Jane, John (and two more). William was killed in the army at Port Gibson, Miss., May, 1863. In those early days, accommodations were poor and times were hard. The people used even to grate corn-meal for mush, and hoe-cake and buckwheat meal for batter-cakes; and if the settlers wished to have grain ground at the mill, they had to send it to Covington, six miles beyond Greenville, or even to Dayton sometimes; often half of the grist was given to pay for grinding and for hauling it to mill and back. Mr. C. was better off from the start than many of his brother settlers, and hence was spared some of the trials of poor pioneer life. He has been from the first an exemplary member of the Free-Will Baptist Church, and has spent much time and means in building up the interests of education and religion. He was one of the chief founders of Ridgeville College, being understood to have given to it, at the beginning, $10,000, and also much more besides since that time. Mr. C. is now about seventy-nine years of age, and is growing somewhat feeble from age. He is still active, however, and is often seen at Union City and elsewhere in the region.

Jacob Corl was born in Pennsylvania in 1805, married Elizabeth Stufft in 1825, came to Richland County, Ohio, in 1835, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838, settling in Jackson Township, south of New Pittsburg. He has had three children, only one now living. He bought eighty acres at first, and now owns 160 acres. He formerly belonged to the Episcopal Methodists, and now to the German Reformed Church, and he is a Democrat in politics.

Andrew Debolt, blacksmith, came to Jackson Township early in 1831. He is said to have been the father of twenty-seven children, nine by each of three wives (I give the statement as it was given to me). He died, seventy-eight years old, five or six years ago. His third wife is living still. He was a blacksmith and a hard-working man, though rough and passionate. It would be worth while to know how many of those children were living at home at once; how he managed to bring them up; how many were reared to adult age, and all and sundry about them every one, this deponent, however, saith not, for a somewhat good reason—he does not know. It would, indeed, be an affecting sight to behold a gathering of the descendants of some of these pioneer patriarchs at the ancient homestead, white-haired grandsires and aged matrons with silvery tresses, but with faces wreathed with gentle, loving smiles and soul filled with motherly kindness for all her progeny. Stalwart sons and sweet-voiced daughters, husbands and wives, bringing their children of the second and third, and, mayhap, the fourth, generation, to honor their common ancestry still spared in the land of the living, to behold so grateful a sight. Well might the aged patriarchs exclaim with Simeon of old, "Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servants depart in peace, for our eyes have beheld thy salvation," or with the psalmist, "Praise the Lord for his goodness, for his wonderful works to the children of men."

[Later information obliges me to say that the truth as to Andrew Debolt's family is, that he was married three times, and had four, seven and four children, respectively, or fifteen in all. I am sorry to cut the former story down so much, but historians must tell the truth, you know.]

Henry Debolt was born in 1817 in Butler County, Ohio; married Ann Mikesell in 1844; had eleven children, seven living, four married; came to Randolph County in 1844; lives on a part of the farm formerly occupied by Amos Smith. Mr. Debolt is a farmer; was Justice of the Peace seventeen years; Township Trustee four years; is a Disciple and a Democrat, and a highly respected and trustworthy citizen.

George Debolt (father of the above), Jackson Township, was born in 1794 in Hamilton County, Ohio; resided in Butler and Preble Counties, Ohio; came to Randolph County, Jackson Township, in 1844; married Rachel Clawson; had eight children, six living. He died in 1853, his wife in 1861. Mr. Debolt was Colonel in Butler County, Ohio, was Justice of the Peace in Jackson Township four years, and Probate Judge one term. He owned 220 acres of land, having entered 140 acres. He was a Democrat, and an active, intelligent and trustworthy citizen.

James Wickersham was the first Justice of the Peace in Jackson Township, and was succeeded by George Debolt.

Thomas Devor, farmer, was born in Maryland in 1803, came to Jackson Township in 1834, entered forty acres and soon after forty more, and lives on the same land now. He is seventy-seven years old, and the father of nine children, residing one-half mile north of Allensville on the Salem pike. He is somewhat feeble, though for his age he is doing well. His wife died a short time ago. He is a Republican. Mr. Devor has been a Justice of the Peace several years. There were but very few settlers in the township when he came forty-six years ago. A few families were near that place, a few near New Lisbon and Mt. Holly, and a Mr. Porter lived south of Pittsburg. The first school in the township was taught by Mrs. Beach in her own house. The first sermon was at the same place. For other items, see account of Jackson Township.

The following is an account of the ancestry of Jacob Gittinger, late of Jackson Township, Randolph County, Ind.:

Jacob Gittinger, grandfather of the one mentioned above, was born in Switzerland about 1760, or sooner; was married in that country and soon afterward emigrated to America, settling in Baltimore County, Md. He was a soldier for a time in the Revolutionary war. In politics, he was a Jeffersonian Republican, and afterward, a Jacksonian Democrat, and in religious connection a Lutheran. He had four sons and six daughters, all but one of whom grew up and were married. They all settled in Maryland, but their descendants are now widely scattered. As to occupation, Mr. Gittinger was a blacksmith and a farmer and also a hotel-keeper on the pike between Hanover and Baltimore. He died about 1846, in Baltimore County, Md., at the age of eighty-six years or more.

Jacob Gittinger (son of the above and father of the present Jacob Gittinger) was born in Maryland in 1786. He married, in Maryland, Mary Deal, in 1807 or 1808, and they were the parents of twelve children, nine sons and three daughters. All of them became grown except the youngest son, who died at seven years old, and six sons and one danghter are living still. Mr. Gittinger was a wagon-maker and a blacksmith and farmer. He was a Democrat in politics and belonged to the Methodists for many years, continuing in that connection to the close of his life. He moved to Ohio in 1835, tarrying awhile in Darke County, and settling in Randolph County, Ind., in 1838, in Jackson Township, not far from the Ohio line. He died about 1870, eighty-four years old, and his wife in 1860, aged seventy-two years. The whole family removed to Randolph County except one son, though not many are left in the region at the present time. The aged couple lie side by side in the burying-ground at Raper Chapel, in Darke County, Ohio.

He was a soldier in the war of 1812, being an Ensign in the Lighthorse Guards. He was not engaged in actual battle, but helped to guard Baltimore against the approach of Gen. Ross and Admiral Cockburn, the British commanders. Ensign Gittinger carried the flag of his company, and that banner was preserved as a sacred relic for more than fifty years until it fell to fragments by sheer old age.

Jacob Gittinger (the third), now living in Union City, Ind., was born in Baltimore County, Md., in 1817. He came with his father to Ohio in 1835, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838, the latter removal being when he was twenty-one years of age. Jacob's father had become straitened for means, and the young man had to strike out for himself, which he did manfully, earning by the severest labor and the closest economy, enough to obtain a comfortable home, which he owns to this day. In 1844, he married Margaret Adkins, in Darke County, Ohio, who was the daughter of George Adkins, and born in 1822 in Butler County, Ohio. They have been the parents of only two children, one son and one daughter, both of whom are living. Their residence has been in Jackson Township for nearly forty years, having removed to Union City in the spring of 1882. Mr. Gittinger is a Democrat, and his wife and himself have belonged to the German Reformed Church for many years. Mr. Gittinger belongs to an excellent stock, and is a fine specimen of the honest, industrious yeomanry of our country, upright, energetic, reliable, loving God and doing good to his fellow-men.

Benjamin F. Gittinger, son of Jacob and Mary Gittinger, was born in Baltimore County, Md., on the 30th day of December, 1828. His parents, though both natives of Maryland, were descended from German stock. When the subject of this sketch was in his ninth year, his parents came from their native State and settled in Darke County, Ohio. Two years thereafter, in 1839, the family removed to Randolph County, and settled on a piece of wild land in Jackson Township, where young Benjamin grew up in what was then backwoods, surrounded by the privations of a pioneer life, deprived of educational advantages and assisting in clearing up the farm and earning a living for the family. On arriving at maturity, young Gittinger started out to earn his own living and to make his own way in the world. Besides the traditional suit of "jean clothes," he was endowed with perseverance, with health, energy and a few implements of manual labor. Being now his own master, and the increased improvements of the country affording better educational advantages, and not being satisfied to begin life in earnest without some learning, he spent the winter seasons of the three succeeding years in the common district school. By this means he acquired the rudiments of an education, which he has developed by reading and observation, until he is now known as a reasonably well-informed man. By industry as a common laborer, and by the practice of a rigid economy, he had, at the age of twenty-five, accumulated $250, which he applied on the purchase of eighty acres of wild land in Jackson Township, which he disposed of at the end of one year at a good advance. With the proceeds of this sale, he went to Southern Iowa, where he purchased 200 acres of prairie land, returning to this, Randolph County, after an absence of four months, to continue his usual avocation of toil, and, by economy and sober habits, to add to his fund of cash.

On the 12th day of April, 1855, he was married to Miss Mary A. Harshman, daughter of Abram and Hannah Harshman, from which union there have sprung four children, three sons and one daughter.

Having sold his Iowa land and by adding to the purchase money his recent savings, he, in 1856, bought ninety acres of unimproved lands in Jackson Township, five miles north of Union City, upon which he settled and began the work of making a farm. This purchase was the nucleus of his present homestead, and to it has been added, as opportunity offered and means afforded, until he now possesses a farm of 200 acres of first quality of land, well drained and inclosed, with a well-arranged and sightly dwelling, barn and outhouses—in fact, a first-class farm, all reclaimed by his own endeavors from the forest and marsh. As a farmer, Mr. Gittinger has always been successful. Not being a believer in luck, but believing that the earth yielded her treasures to those who sought them aright, his crops were planted, harvested and housed in season.

Mr. Gittinger was made a Freemason in Deerfield Lodge, No. 117, in 1853, and at present is a member of Union City Lodge, No. 270. For thirty years he has been a consistent and reliable member of the Christian Church.

In politics, Mr. Gittinger is of Democratic antecedents, and, until 1860, voted the Democratic ticket, and as such has been elected twice Township Assessor. Being dissatisfied with the Charleston Convention, he declined to vote in 1860, but after the beginning of the war of the rebellion. he identified himself with the Republican party, and, though maintaining his political opinions with zeal and sometimes with pertinacity, and in face of a large local majority, he has retained the confidence and esteem of his neighbors and former political associates.

In the spring of 1882, Mr. Gittinger was nominated by the Republicans of Randolph County as a candidate for the important and responsible (though not, indeed, lucrative) office of County Commissioner for the Eastern District. This nomination, as against other candidates who were themselves also deservedly popular, is indeed a pleasing token of a confidence vouchsafed by his fellow-citizens, both in his ability and his integrity—not less than an acknowledgment of the claims of the locality of his residence.

The Harshmans (four brothers), Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Reuben Harshman, were born in Rockingham County, Va., and were brought by their father, James Harshman, to Preble County, Ohio, in 1807. Abraham and Jacob Harshman emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., in 1832. Reuben came in 1834, and Isaac about 1837 or 1838. They settled near and north of Saratoga and Middletown. Abraham Harshman was twice married, and had ten children, but he is dead and his widow lives on the old farm. Isaac Harshman moved to Illinois after awhile. He had eight or ten children; one of his daughters married William Debolt, Esq., of Union City, and she has lately achieved some notoriety in the famous siege of "Fort Debolt," during the spring of 1880.

Jacob Harshman had seven children. He is dead, and his widow married Ephraim Bragg, who is dead also, and she now lives a widow.

Reuben Harshman, was born in Virginia in 1807; was brought to Preble County, Ohio, in 1807, married Sarah Hereford, of Warren County, Ohio, in 1829, and came to Randolph County in 1834. They have had ten children, eight grown, and five are now living; seven have been married. He entered forty acres and bought forty more of Bennett Evans. They moved to Union City in 1875, Mr. Harshman having been afflicted with partial paralysis, and now reside with their son, who runs a harness shop in that town. Mrs. Harshman was born in Virginia in 1804, and is now in her seventy-seventh year, being in the enjoyment of health and activity. When they came to the county, they located between the settlements in the woods, Deerfield and Ridgeville being below, and New Pittsburg and Allensville above them. Mr. H. died in the spring of 1881, being buried in Prospect Cemetery, aged about seventy-four years.

Henry Hinkle was born in 1810 in Butler County, Ohio. His father, Joseph Hinkle, was a "character" in those regions, being the parents of seventeen children, one still-born, sixteen grown, fourteen married and twelve now living, four in Butler County, Ohio, two in Illinois, one in Michigan and five in Indiana. Joseph Hinkle volunteered in the war of 1812, and marched to Detroit, but the ranks were full, and he, with others, returned home, after an absence of some weeks. He died in Butler County, Ohio, July 3, 1881, aged ninety-four years and above from April 13, 1881. His wife died in 1859, aged sixty-eight years. Henry Hinkle came to Randolph County in 1841. He had, in 1833, married Eliza Ann Pentecost, in Butler County, Ohio. They have had eleven children, ten grown, nine married, eight living. He entered 160 acres, northeast quarter of Section 31, Town 21, Range 15, in November, 1837, the patent bearing the Presidential signature of Martin Van Buren. Mr. Hinkle is living still, a hale old man, as is also his wife, a cheerful old woman, a year younger than her husband. She was born in Warren County, Ohio, in 1811; moved to Union City, Ind., being one of thirteen children, eleven of them grown and ten married, only three living. They belong to the Regular Baptist Church. Mr. H. is a worthy, active, exemplary citizen, a fine specimen of the "Democrat of the olden time," as was his father before him. He resides about one-half mile south of Middletown, in Jackson Township. He has never held public office, except, indeed, that he has been Supervisor of Highways—a humble and thankless, yet greatly important office, in which, he says, his great vexation was that some of the men would not accomplish work enough to satisfy him, and their complaint of him was that he pressed them too hard, a very common complaint against faithful, energetic officers.

John Hoke was born in Pennsylvania in 1809; moved to Knox County, Ohio, in 1832; to Richland County, Ohio, in 1834; to Randolph County, Ind., in 1836; entered 160 acres in October, 1836 (southeast quarter of Section 12, Town 18, Range 1 west, east of Old Boundary); married Margaret Shaffer in 1834, and Mary Boitner in 1867. He has had fourteen children, eleven living; the youngest is not two years old. He has owned 500 acres of land, but has sold or given to his children, etc., until he has only 240 acres left. Mr. H. is a bluff, hale, jovial old man, who (although seventy-one years old) still does his share in the field. He eschews modern "improvements," and thinks reapers, riding-plows, etc., are an injury to the farmers. (John Hoke died September, 1881, by being thrown from a loaded wagon by his horses' running away.)

Jacob Johnson was born in 1792, in Maryland, and came to Jackson Township, Randolph County, Ind., in 1833. He had married Mary Vatenbaker in 1815, and is the father of thirteen children, twelve of whom lived to be grown. His daughter, Mrs. Sutton, says that those thirteen children all lived at home at the same time. There must have been a cabin full! Mr. J. is a farmer. He has been a Democrat all his life, giving his first Presidential vote for James Monroe, in 1816. He has been a voter through seventeen Presidential campaigns, and, in fact, longer, since he came to his majority in 1813, sixty-eight years ago. He has been confined to his bed for some years, but his mind is strong and clear and he delights to talk of old times. He entered eighty acres at first and then eighty more. Mr. J. was a soldier in the war of 1812, and has for many years drawn a pension of $8 a month for his services in that war. The first night they slept in a rail-pen without any roof on it. For their bedsteads they had poles with the ends bored into the sides of the pen, and for bed-cords they had twisted elm bark, a very good substitute. One of his daughters married Joseph Sutton, and the couple, now aged, live near the same place, and she has been the mother of seventeen children, thirteen now living (1880). There were seven boys and ten girls. The boys are all living and six girls; eight are married. The oldest daughter is the mother of eleven children, and there are in all thirty-eight grandchildren. Jacob Johnson is still alive, some eighty years old. Joseph Sutton's wife and her sister worked (week about) for six weeks, to pay for twelve bushels of corn. The work was 50 cents a week and the corn 25 cents a bushel. They (the girls) used to pull flax and thresh it and spread and dress it, and spin and weave it to boot. They would chop and grub in the clearing, ride horseback to mill, etc. People wore homespun and were glad to get that. They went to meeting dressed in home-made linen, were thankful, contented and happy. His aged wife died in the spring of 1881, and the husband followed his feeble companion in August of the same year, in the ninetieth year of his age. Their bodies lie side by side, and their spirits have gone to join each other in the skies. His brother, John Johnson, came about the same time, and died a short time ago, aged more than eighty-four years.

Robert F. Kemp was born in Maryland in 1809, married in that State, emigrated shortly afterward, to Richland County, Ohio (in 1835) and settled in Jackson Township, near New Pittsburg, in 1844, residing there still. They have had twelve children, ten of whom are grown, married and now living, most of them in Randolph County, Ind. They are like most of the settlers in Jackson Township, Democrats in politics. The aged couple, threescore and twelve years old, now keep house by themselves, the children all having made them separate houses and left the aged parents in the isolation of solitary home life, as in the olden days full fifty years ago, without not even a grandchild out of the numerous flock to keep them company. Long may they thus be able to care for their own wants, but if a feebleness and decrepitude come on, may they find an abundance of willing hands and ready steps to minister to the wants of their weakness and sorrow.

Philip Van Cortlandt Lambert (grandfather of L. D. Lambert) was born in New Jersey, moved to Danville, Ky., afterward to Paint Creek, Preble County, Ohio, and still again to Jackson Township, Randolph County, Ind., the last about 1843 or 1844. He was in the war of 1812, belonging to the Ohio Militia, and serving in several of the line of forts extending along the frontier from Cincinnati to Lake Erie. His son Jonathan, a mere lad, born in 1797, was with his father in the service. He also moved to Jackson Township, and they both died and were buried in Randolph County, having survived to a ripe old age.

James Porter was born in 1801, in Clermont County, Ohio; married Hannah Daines, in 1824, who was born in Waynesburg, Ohio, in 1805, and came to Jackson Township, Randolph County, Ind., in 1829. He entered 120 acres of land at three different times, going on foot mostly, each time to Cincinnati to accomplish the entry. They have had twelve children and have raised ten, all of the ten having been married. Mr. Porter and his wife are still hale and sprightly, having lived at their present home fifty-two years, and having witnessed the entire change in that section from utter savagery and wilderness desolation to the present condition as the comfortable abodes of civilized men.

John Poorman was born in Pennsylvania in 1815, and came to the West with his father when eight months old. They settled in Richland County and he grew to manhood and married in that region, the latter event taking place in 1837, and the name of his wife being Lucy Ann Brooks. They came to Randolph the next year (1838). He entered forty acres and afterward sold it and bought eighty acres. They had nine children, seven of whom grew up and were married, and six are now living—Peter, Henry, Margaret, John, Washington, Emmaretta, Martha Ellen, James and William. Mr. Porter's wife died in 1875, and he married Mary (Weimar) Anderson, and she is now living. Mr. Poorman was never a hunter. He belongs to the Christians (New Lights). His first wife was a Dunkard, and his second a Christian (New Light). In politics, Mr. Poorman has always been a Democrat, as was also his father before him. Mr. Poorman is one of the few remaining pioneer settlers of that region, most of the township being unbroken forest when he found his way thither. Some of the settlers when he came were the Porters, the Warrens, the Harshmans, Daniel Miller, Helms, Reeves, Smith, Mangus and others. Brockus and Storms had gone.

James Reeves was born in 1801 in Kentucky; moved with his father to Warren County, Ohio, in 1811, and to Darke County, Ohio, in 1824. He married Rachel Skinner in 1827; she was born in 1811, in North Carolina and came to Kentucky, and afterward to Seven-Mile Creek, ten miles from Eaton, Preble County, Ohio, and then to Long Prairie, Darke Co., Ohio, six miles north of Paris. Mr. Reeves came to Randolph County, Ind., Jackson Township, May 25, 1832. He said he was going to "play gentleman and hunt," but the second year he entered forty acres, and awhile after, forty more. On this small tract of land he raised his family of eleven children, ten of them growing up to maturity. The ten were all married and seven are living, five in Randolph County, one in Minnesota and one in Kansas. Mr. Reeves died in 1871, seventy years old, on the land he had tilled nearly forty years. He was a Jackson Democrat, but turned Republican, earning the name from his former political associates of "Black Abolitionist." In religion, he was a Disciple, in business a farmer, a steady, quiet, estimable, reliable man. His widow is still living, a sprightly, cheerful old lady, active and lively, though so severely afflicted from the effects of paralysis, nearly twenty years ago, as to be nearly deprived of strength. Mrs. Reeves spends her time alternately with her various children in Randolph County. She could tell many quaint and curious tales of the "olden time," when Jackson Township was a wild and howling wilderness, nearly fifty years ago. Mr. Reeves' first entry was November 3, 1834, the S. W. N. E. 22, 21, 15, forty acres; his second entry was made two years later, August 30, 1836. It is an interesting incident that while he was going from home on his trip to Cincinnati for the second entry, a gentleman called at Mr. Reeves' cabin and asked Mrs. Reeves if a certain "forty" in the neighborhood was vacant. "I cannot tell," said she; "my husband is probably by this time in Cincinnati, and if it is not already entered, it will be shortly." The man stared, but said nothing and went his way.

Amos Smith came in 1832. James Wickersham came nearly the same time; he had not built a cabin yet when Mr. Smith came. Andrew Debolt was here; he has been married three times, having four children by his first wife, seven by his second and four by his third; she is still living in Jackson Township; he came in 1831, and died seven or eight years ago. John Jones lived on Lowe's Branch, where Ishmael Bunch had lived; Jones entered the land. James Simmons was here, but not married. William Simmons was living on the Mississinewa; he had twenty-one children by one mother; she never nursed her children, but had to bring them up "by hand." A large number of them grew up. William Brockus was on William Simmons' place. Jerry Brockus lived on Gray's Branch, in Ohio. James Porter had come to the county in 1829.

James Skinner, maternal grandfather of Dr. John L. Reeves, was one among the early pioneers of Jackson Township, coming to that vicinity two years after his son-in-law, James Reeves, did. His death occurred there, in 1848, at the age of about seventy years. He was a Whig of the Revolutionary type, having been born during that eventful era, and having had his youthful training amidst the fresh and stirring memories of that grand and memorable struggle. His wife was what was called a "Hickory Quaker." They had been reared in Carolina and her father was a slaveholder, and she, moreover, became heir to an estate consisting partly of slaves. It went sorely against her conscience to participate in slaveholding, even in that indirect way, and she received the portions of the estate with much misgiving, declining at length to take the final installments. Dr. Reeves well remembers, when a lad, seeing his aged grandmother handling a quantity of silver in his lap, which had come from that source, saying while doing so: "I'll have no more of it; if my descendants choose to avail themselves of it, they may do so. I will not burden my conscience with it any longer." They were friends of the slaves in those times of "harboring runaways." James (Dr. Reeves) well remembers, also, seeing a handsome negro standing at the door, waiting for admittance, but inquiring for him shortly afterward, was greatly surprised to have his grandmother apparently deny that any negro had been there. He knew that he had seen the black face, and years elapsed before he found out why his grandmother should try to make him believe the contrary.

John Skinner, son of James Skinner and uncle of Dr. Reeves, built the first mill in the region. It stood on the Little Mississinewa, a little north of New Lisbon, being a log-cabin structure, and it was at first simply a corn-cracker, but was afterward changed to a wheat-mill, a hand-bolt being added. The mill answered well its purpose, standing and running for twenty or twenty-five years. The edifice has long been removed, but the mill-stones, backwoods gray-heads, as they were, are supposed to be lying buried where once the mill-race used to be.

Three brothers of James Skinner were with Jackson at New Orleans during the war of 1812, and two of those brothers were buried in that distant Southern clime. James himself volunteered also, but for some reason, not now known, he was sent home again. James Skinner emigrated from North Carolina to Ohio at an early day, at least before the war of 1812, having become at some time, not now known, a resident of Darke County, in that State. Mr. Skinner became a member of the Disciple Church at New Lisbon, continuing prominent therein until his death. His wife, Anna, died in 1846, aged about sixty-eight or sixty-nine years.

Eleanor (Smith-Wiley) Ruby, widow. This lady now resides at Union City; she is the daughter of Amos Smith, one of the first settlers in Jackson Township. He entered land southwest of New Lisbon, and some two or three miles north of Union City. She was born on the Little Miami in Ohio, in 1808. They moved to Middleboro, Ind., in 1809, and to Darke County, Ohio, in 1828. She married, in 1828, Thomas Wiley, a farmer boy, seventeen years old. Her husband was born April 11, 1811. She herself was not old, but she was three years older than her husband. That farmer boy, then unable to read, became afterward a noted and efficient preacher of the Gospel of Christ among the disciples, though at his marriage he was not even a church member. He died at Union City in 1861. They moved to near New Lisbon in 1836, and to Union City in 1852. After Mr. Wiley's death, she married John Ruby, farmer, and moved to Wayne County, for two years, and returned to Union City, where Mr. Ruby died, in 1873, aged nearly eighty years. She has had ten children, all by her first marriage, nine girls and one boy—Sally Ann (Thomson), Rebecca (Thomson), Nancy (Coldren), dead, Esther (Reeves), Gilbert S., Annie (Harlan), Elizabeth (Thomson), Abbie (Swisher), Mary Ellen (Vincent), Amaretta, died at eighteen months. Mrs. Ruby now resides at Union City, being seventy-four years of age.

Michael Shank was born in Virginia about 1785, being the son of Henry Shank, who was born about 1758. He came to Montgomery County, Ohio, with his father at twenty-one years old, about 1806, and they settled ten miles from Dayton. Two or three years afterward, he helped bring a drove of cattle to Greenville for meat for the Indians at one of their gatherings to confer with agents of the United States. M. S. entered 160 acres of land, and when twenty-four years of age, about 1809, he married Polly Davis, who was born in 1794 in Montgomery County, Ohio. They were the parents of six children, only two of whom are now living—Richard, with whom he has resided nearly forty years, and a married daughter. His wife died in 1841. His father had ten children, only two of whom are now living, the eldest son, Jacob, ninety-eight years old, and Michael, himself two years younger.

When Mr. Shank came to Ohio there were only two stores in Dayton and a few dwelling-houses. Mr. Shank's father died at seventy-five years of age, and his mother at sixty-three. His grandfather came from Germany. His father and mother both belonged to the United Brethren, and the former was probably a Democrat in politics.

Michael Shank has belonged to the United Brethren for seventy years; he voted for Jefferson and for Jackson, and for Democrats uniformly since that day. Richard Shank came with Michael Shank to Randolph County in 1875, and resides there still. Michael Shank was never in the war. When he helped drive the lot of cattle to Greenville, he was in the place only about an hour or two. They got there after dark, and returned that night to Mr. Studebaker's, some five or six miles (who had a fort or block-house for defense against the Indians). Mr. Shank had enjoyed tolerable health during his long life, except that he had the phthisic five or six years, about 1833 to 1839, and that he has been afflicted with nervous trembling for some eight or ten years past. He is now feeble and somewhat hard of hearing, but is able to walk about the house or yard, being in his ninety-seventh year, and probably the oldest person residing in Randolph County.

[It would be interesting to know what gathering of Indians is referred to in the above statement. The narrative would seem to refer to about 1809. We do not remember to have seen any account of such assemblage of Indians at Greenville at that date. Doubtless, however, Mr. Shank is correct, since he could hardly be mistaken as to an occurrence of that kind.]

Aaron Simmons was born in 1810 in Miami County, Ohio. He came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838, and married Rebecca Marquis in 1840. They have had six children. He entered 240 acres of land, and has dwelt in the same place more than forty years. Mr. Simmons and his family are Dunkards. The settlers when he came were Eli Noftsinger, east toward the Ohio line; James Wickersham, north of the Catholic Cemetery; Amos Smith, southwest of New Lisbon; Charles Smith, son of Amos Smith; William Warren, east of Aaron Simmons'; Thomas Wiley, New Lisbon; Jacob Johnson, west of Aaron Simmons; John Johnson, northwest of Aaron Simmons'; Andrew Debolt, Mt. Holly; John Sheets, Smith farm; William Byrum, came same year, just after N. Cadwallader and Simmons did.

Disciple Church was organized perhaps in 1839; log house built soon afterward, about 1847, the present meeting-house at New Lisbon was built. Dunkards resided in that region from early times, but no meeting-house was built by them till about 1870, at which time one was built one mile north of Union City, on the Ohio line, in Jackson Township. There are four ministers and about 250 members. They hold stated meetings on the first and third Sundays of each month, and they observe the Lord's Supper once a year. One of Aaron Simmons' sons is a minister among the Dunkards. They are very steady, sober-minded, Christian-hearted people. Originally, the State road from Greenville to Portland passed by Mr. Simmons' house, crossing the Mississinewa a mile southeast of Pittsburg, but within a few years most of that "angling" road has been discontinued, and this removal of the highway brings his dwelling nearly half a mile from any public road.

James Simmons was born in North Carolina in 1809, brought to Wayne County, Ind., in 1811; drove an ox-team with a wagon load of bacon from Richmond to Fort Wayne in 1821 (at twelve years old). From that time onward, he "went for himself." He drove team to Fort Wayne, drove hogs to Cincinnati, etc., etc. But he spent much of his time in Randolph County, Ind., from 1821. He took a claim, a tract occupied by one George Vance. He cleared and "cropped," raising corn and fattening hogs, and thus got money to enter his land. He had been through the country at different times, and he selected a claim as early as 1825, and settled, but not until 1832. In 1821, his uncle, William Simmons and himself, were hauling to Fort Wayne with three yoke of cattle. They slept under some oak trees that were afterward in his dooryard. These trees were near a beautiful spring, and he thought then: "How fine a piece for settlement," and years afterward, the twelve-year-old lad then grown a man, entered the tract and in due time married and established his home there. They are both buried in the Hawkins' Graveyard, near Antioch, Jay Co., Ind. He had three sons in the Union army—Joseph C., unassigned recruit, 1865, sick at hospital, in Indianapolis till the close of the war; Nathan C. joined Company F, Sixty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers; Benjamin W., Eleventh Ohio (three months), April 18, 1861, discharged September 5, 1861, then Company F, Sixty-ninth Indiana Regiment; he was never sick, but was wounded at Thomson's Hill May 1, 1863.

James Simmons, in 1831, entered a tract occupied by George Vance, and lived with Mr. Vance in the cabin built by Mr. Vance till Mr. S. got married, which he did in 1834, to Avaline Hawkins, daughter of Mr. Hawkins, pioneer of Jay County, Ind. After Mr. S. was married, he built a new cabin, and let Mr. Vance live still in the one built by him (Mr. V.). Mr. S. was twice married, and was the father of twelve children. He died in 1873, and his second wife yet survives him; his first wife died in 1863. He was an active, intelligent, enterprising, genial man, an ardent Whig and a straight-out Republican, and was highly esteemed by his fellow-citizens. He was a Whig from the beginning, and is said to have voted the Whig ticket alone in Jackson Township.

Samuel Simmons came some time before James Simmons, perhaps in 1827. William Simmons moved here, and then went to Blue River, for a year or more, and then returned. William is the one that was frozen so badly (see Jay County history). Samuel and William Simmons came nearly at the same time. Benjamin Simmons thinks that Samuel (his uncle) was perhaps the first settler in the township.

John Vance lived on James Simmons' place three or four years, till he (Simmons) got married. Several of the Simmons family emigrated to Oregon. Benjamin Simmons has had four uncles in Oregon, and a fifth died of small-pox, at St. Louis, on his way to Oregon, as also his eldest daughter. Samuel Simmons went to Oregon in 1837, among the first emigrants. Edward, John and Andrew went in 1851. Edward died there, in March, 1880. The other three are supposed to be living still. John Buff was an early settler, but did not stay long. John Jones was also among the first.

William Sizemore was born in North Carolina in 1780; came to Tennessee and afterward to Jackson Township, Randolph County, Ind., in the fall of 1834. He had nine children and was three times married, the last wife being now living. He lived a farmer and died in 1877, in his ninety-seventh year. He was buried in Prospect, but has no stone erected. His first wife was Esther Anderson, died in 1850, aged about sixty-six years, buried at Prospect with no tombstone; his second wife, Jedidah Fields, died May 17, 1859, aged between sixty-five and seventy years; buried at Prospect, no tombstone. He bought land of William Warren, Sr. His son, Edward Sizemore, born in 1822, lived east of Middletown.

Amos Smith was born in Pennsylvania about 1783, and moved to Kentucky when a young man; married Elizabeth Ashby, in Kentucky, about 1805, and came to Miami County, Ohio, about 1807; to Wayne County, Ind., about 1810; moved back to the Ohio settlements for fear of the Indians in 1811; returned to Wayne County again and afterward settled in Darke County, Ohio. In 1830, he came into the wilds of Jackson Township, Randolph County, being nearly or quite the first permanent settler in that township. He came in the spring with a son and daughter, partly grown, the boy to help him clear a patch and put out a crop, and the girl, Esther (now Mrs. Carn, of Grant County, Ind.), to cook and keep camp for them. Probably she helped outdoors, also, for the camp needed but little attention, and they had but little to cook, and the girls in those days could pile brush as fast as boys could. They put out their crop and he brought his whole family in August, and the whole company lived in a camp for some time. He had had fourteen children, eleven of whom grew up and were married. Two were married in Darke County, Ohio, and he brought nine into "Randolph woods;" and the others came afterward, bringing the whole family together. Four of them are living so far as known. He entered eighty acres of land, and on that homestead he resided nearly twenty-five years, tilling his land and working, also, somewhat as a cooper. He removed, in 1853, to Grant County, Ind., and died there about 1856, his wife outliving her husband and dying in 1863, seventy-six years old. Mr. Smith was, like many of the pioneers, a famous hunter. In politics, he was a sturdy Whig, and afterward a Republican, though he died not long after the rise of that party. He joined the Disciples shortly before his death. In politics, he was long nearly alone in that Democratic stronghold. At one time there were only three of his faith in politics in the township. As to the settlers in Jackson Township, it is probable that few permanent settlers were there much before Mr. Smith. An old man by the name of Ishmael Bunch lived about one-half mile southwest of Dolphus Warren's, on Lowe Branch. He was a "squatter" and did not reside there very long. Philip Storms was also in the region, owning no land, however. Eli Noffsinger, then a young man, made a clearing about the same time, and moved his mother and sisters up to his cabin perhaps the next spring. John Sheets came not long afterward. There was not a house from Hill Grove to New Lisbon. Andrew Debolt came about 1831. Mr. Smith appears to have been in the township four years before he entered his land, W. S. E. 27, 21, 15, eighty acres, May 15, 1834.

[Note.—Mr. Simmons seems to have come before Mr. Smith, and James Porter says that he came in 1829. Mr. Porter's first entry of land was in October 29, 1833. There seem to have been some settlers on the Mississinewa, in the west part of Jackson Township, before those in the neighborhood of New Lisbon. Mr. Porter says his brother George came in the spring of 1829, and raised a crop and brought his family in the fall of 1829, and that Thomas Shaler had been a "squatter" in the same neighborhood for some years. William Simmons probably lived in Ward Township, as he was down the Mississinewa from James Porter's.

James Warren was the father of the (older) Warrens, who are still residing in Jackson Township. He was born in 1787, in North Carolina, and came to Richmond, Ind., in 1825. He had married Elizabeth Cabaniss, in 1809, and they had ten children, eight of whom came to be married, and four are now living. He came to Jackson Township, Randolph County, Ind., in 1835, settling near New Middletown, between Union City and Deerfield. He died in 1876, in his ninetieth year. His wife died many years ago. He was a farmer and a Democrat. His sons were William, John and Dolphus Warren, who are still residents of Jackson, prominent and influential among the citizens there, large land owners and prosperous and successful farmers, and all thorough Democrats of long standing, except, indeed, Dolphus, who belongs to the Republican fold.

William Warren is the son of James Warren, and was born about 1811. He came to Randolph County about 1834, stopping first near New Lisbon, and afterward near New Middletown. He has had eleven children, seven of them now living. He entered forty acres at first and 240 acres in all. He is a farmer and a Democrat and an active man of business. He lives north of Middletown, Ind. He emigrated to Wayne County, Ind., in 1825, and married Elizabeth Newton in 1832.

James Wickersham was born in Philadelphia, Penn., in 1780. He learned the hatting business at Harrisburg, Penn., came to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1805, married Rachel Smith, sister of Amos Smith, and moved to Wayne County Ind., and, in 1832, to Jackson Township, Randolph County, Ind., and in 1867, to Jay County, Ind. He died in 1873, ninety-three years old, and his wife in 1855. They had eleven children, seven grown and five living. He was a hatter and then a farmer, he was also a grocer at New Lisbon awhile, etc. Mr. W. was Justice of the Peace both in Wayne and Randolph Counties. He has also been Township Trustee, Assessor, etc. He was a Disciple and a Democrat, and an upright, exemplary and trustworthy man. He is thought to have been the first Justice of the Peace in Jackson

Township. He entered his land July 29, 1835 (Section 13, Town 18, Range 1 west), forty acres. Like most of the pioneers of Jackson Township, Mr. W. had not much of this world's goods, but he had what is better, intelligence, sound judgment and the love of God in his heart, and these are better than a kingdom

John A. Wickersham is the son of James Wickersham. He was born in 1818, in Wayne County, Ind.; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1832; married Elizabeth Criviston in 1839; has had nine children, seven living, two married. He is a farmer, owning 190 acres of land; is a Disciple and a Republican. Mr. W. is an intelligent, estimable citizen, a thrifty and prosperous farmer and an upright and honorable man.

MINUS W. BERKHEIM, farmer, P. O. Union City, born November 4, 1851, in Jay County, Ind. He received a common school education, and was married, September 15, 1872, to Malissa Simmons, a native of Miami County, Ohio, who was born October 22, 1852. Four children blessed this union—Benjamin F., born August 11, 1873; Mary A., April 23, 1875; Clara M., October 28, 1877; and Charles L., May 24, 1880. Mr. Berkheim is a member of the Christian Church, and of the Masonic order. He owns a good farm of 109 acres, and is Democratic in politics. His father, Isaac Berkheim, is a native of Frederick County, Va., born June 26, 1808; came to Ohio in 1828, and from thence to Jay County, in 1833; he married Margaret Conoway, who was born April 23, 1813, deceased October 1, 1880. Benjamin Simmons, the father of Mrs. Berkheim, was a native of Miami County, Ohio, born October 30, 1827; came here twenty-six years ago; deceased, October, 1871; he married Jane Lindley, a native of Miami County, Ohio, born August 11, 1823. Mr. Berkheim is a social, companionable gentleman, and one whom people love to meet.

ELI BYRUM.

Eli Byrum was born in North Carolina in 1816, and died in Randolph County, Ind., in Febuary, 1877. His father, William Byrum, was a farmer and blacksmith, and a man of fine intellect. He was a prominent and leading citizen of his county, and was three times elected as its Representative in the Legislature of North Carolina. In 1838 or 1839, he came North, locating in Preble County, Ohio, and about a year later came to Randolph County, Ind. Eli, the subject of this sketch, accompanied his father in his removals, and at the time of the removal to Randolph County, purchased eighty acres adjoining his father's farm, in partnership with his brother Robert. His land was covered by a heavy growth of timber, and he devoted his time to clearing it and reducing it to a fine state of cultivation. At the age of twenty-nine years—in 1845—he was united in marriage with Rachel Newton, daughter of Henry and Mary Newton, who resided at that time near Richmond, Ind. In November, 1846, his wife died, leaving a daughter, who died a few months later. On the 25th of July, 1848, he married Miss Lucinda Fields, daughter of Lansford and Nancy Fields, who came from Tennessee to Randolph County, Ind., in 1832. By this second union Mr. Byrum and wife were the parents of thirteen children, nine of whom are now living, viz., Eli W., Fletcher N., Robert L., Lourinda, Enoch E., Drusilla, Emma J., Noah H., and Norman E. Mr. Byrum was one of the self-made men of this locality. He entered upon his career as a farmer, with a capital of only about $50, and with a tract of wild, unimproved land from which to develop a farm. Yet this small amount proved the foundation of an ample fortune, which accumulated year by year under his tireless energy and excellent management. He cleared two farms during his life; first the one near Lisbon, upon which he first located in this county, and afterward the one upon which he died. Gradually he enlarged the boundaries of his farm, by sundry purchases, until he possessed 340 acres, free from debt, and the larger portion of it under a fine state of cultivation. Upon the last-named farm his widow and children still reside. Mr. Byrum was reared in the Democratic school of politics, and for many years was an adherent of that party. Latterly, however, he cast aside party ties, and exercised the privilege of an independent voter. But he was never a politician, and never held an elective office. He confined his attention to the pursuit of farming, and managed his affairs with an abilily that returned him very satisfactory results, and placed him among the wealthy farmers of the township. In all his transactions, he was governed by a high sense of honor, and among all who knew him he was recognized as a man of irreproachable integrity, and a good citizen in the best sense of that term. He was a consistent member of the United Brethren Church, with which denomination his wife and family are still identified.

JOSEPH BROWN, farmer, P. O. Union City. This industrious citizen was born August 2, 1821, in the State of Maryland. He immigrated to Miami County, Ohio, in 1823, and from thence settled in this county in October, 1844. Mr. Brown was united in marriage, November 25, 1847, to Nancy A. Harshman, a native of this State, who was born July 11, 1829. The following children blessed this union: William S., born October 8, 1848; Mary A., September 28, 1851; Daniel W., April 26, 1857; Tillie C., November 6, 1859; Abraham November 3, 1864; Isaac E., January 12, 1865; Francis M., Febuary 27, 1870, and Albert, August 19, 1872. His father, Joseph Brown, was a native of Germany, and was born about the year 1798; came to the State of Maryland, and was married there to Margaret Lower. Abraham Horshner, the father of Mrs. Brown, was a native of Preble County, Ohio; born in 1797, and was married to Hanna Garner, of his native county. He came to this county in 1831; deceased, September 13, 1866, his wife having died October 2, 1840. William S., the son of the subject of this sketch, was married, December 1, 1872, to Evaline Simmons; they have two children—Phebe L. and Dora. Mary A. was married to Ira Porter, May 1, 1868; they have two children—Nancy E. and Rudolph. Mr. Brown owns a good farm of 200 acres of choice land, is Democratic in politics, and an enterprising citizen.

HENRY DEBOLT, farmer, P. O. Union City. This worthy citizen was born February 28, 1817, in Butler County, Ohio; he went to Preble County in 1839, and finally settled in this county in 1846. He was educated in the common schools of his native State, and was married April 14, 1840, to Ann Mikesell, who was a native of Preble County, Ohio, born December 20, 1823. This union was blessed by the birth of ten children, of which number seven are living—George M., born February 22, 1845; Oscar F., January 14, 1846, deceased May 21, 1852; Emmaretta, August 16, 1848, deceased August 27, 1849; Irene E., April 2, 1851; Annetta J., January 28, 1852; Cass C., September 22, 1853, deceased March 10, 1875; Martha C., May 17, 1855; John B., October 27, 1856, deceased December 6, 1856; Kate, July 20, 1858; Charles, March 15, 1860, and Henrie A., January 27, 1863. Mr. Debolt has served as Justice of the Peace of Jackson Township for over seventeen years, and was Justice of the same township for four consecutive years. He and his worthy wife are consistent members of the Disciple Church, and are generally esteemed. He is a Democrat of the old school, and enjoys the confidence of his friends. His father, John Debolt, was a native of Hamilton County, Ohio, born about 1797; came to this county in 1838, deceased 1852, in June. His wife was originally Rachel Clawson, born in 1800, deceased December 30, 1862. These people had many noble traits of character.

EZEKIEL C. CLOUGH.

Ezekiel C. Clough was born June 12, 1802, at Warren, in the State of New Hampshire. In 1818, his father started with his family to locate in the West, but while passing through the State of New York, one of his daughters was taken suddenly ill, and it was found necessary to remain there until she could recover. They remained in that State during the winter, the children attending school while their sister recovered her health. In the following spring, they resumed their journey, reaching Cincinnati, Ohio, in April, 1819. The family resources, which, at best, were never opulent, were much depleted by the long journey, and it became necessary for the several members of the family to engage in some kind of labor, to assist in its maintenance. Ezekiel found employment in a brick yard, and learned the brick-maker's trade. Within a year after their arrival in the West, the father died, and the maintenance of the family was assumed by the subject of this sketch, who did his part nobly, until all were old enough to take care of themselves. At a later date, he purchased the establishment of his employer, and manufactured brick on his own account, until 1826. In that year, he removed to Jay County, Ind., where he entered 640 acres of land. In the following year he was married, at Cincinnati, to Mary A. Huddart, and brought his wife to the wilderness, in the midst of which he had selected a place for a home. He began the task of clearing this large tract of land and preparing it for cultivation—an undertaking in which he succeeded nobly. By subsequent purchases he enlarged the boundaries of his farm, improving and beautifying each new tract, until he owned probably the largest and best cultivated tract of land in Jay County. He was always known as one of the most industrious men of the community, and to his industry, economy, and prudent management, are due the financial results that have made him a wealthy man. He has been economical, but he has never permitted this principle to beget a sordid or parsimonious nature. On the contrary, he has always been known for his charity and benevolence, and instead of seeking to hoard or augment a fortune already ample, he has found boundless pleasure in disbursing liberal sums in channels from which his fellow-men would reap benefits. His private charities are numerous—done in private, and known only to those who were the grateful recipients. In his public charities he has desired the same privacy, yet enough has transpired to mark him a public-spirited man of the most unselfish order, and to show that in all the years of his prosperity he has been the devoted friend of public improvement, public education, and the cause of religion. The first Baptist Church at North Salem was erected almost entirely at his expense, and the new house of worship was built upon land donated by him, and constructed and furnished largely from his liberal contributions. To the erection of Ridgeville College, he contributed a munificent amount, which, in deference to his modesty, was never made known. To the same institution he donated 220 acres of excellent farming land, worth at least $15,000, and holds three life-scholarships that cost him $900. He is one of the Trustees of this college, and has acted in that capacity ever since the organization of the board.

His has been a long and busy life, and he has not lived in vain. He has stamped his identifiy upon many of the most important institutions and public improvements in Randolph County, and has proved himself a blessing to the community. He has retired from active business, and now resides in the north part of Randolph County. He has transferred his large landed estate to his children, reserving only the proceeds of his farms during his life. He was identified with both Randolph and Jay Counties in their pioneer period, and has a vivid recollection of the events of early days. In the intervening years, he has been an interested witness of the progress and improvement of the locality with which he was identified in its earliest days of civilization, while every enterprise of a public nature has received his encouragement and support. Until 1874, he was permitted to enjoy the companionship of his devoted wife, who accompanied him to the wilderness in the prime of a happy young life, adding her efforts to his in transforming the forest into a home. On the 17th of August, 1874, she died, leaving a void in the hearts of her family never to be filled. They were the parents of seven children—William, the eldest, enlisted in Company F, of the Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, and was killed at the battle of Port Gibson, while fighting in defense of the Union and for the maintenance of our national integrity; Nancy married Mr. Lewis, and is now deceased; Ezekiel resides in Jackson Township, Randolph County; Hannah, Lottie and George W. are living, and John is deceased.

THOMAS DEVOR, farmer, P. O. Jordan. This worthy citizen was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, May 20, 1803. He was educated in the rural schools of his native State, and was married, April 8, 1831, to Nancy Coabstick, born December 9, 1811, in Butler County, Ohio. This union was blessed with the birth of nine children, of which number five are living—Margaret, born April 30, 1835; Benjamin, November 25, 1836; Rachel, October 16, 1838; Ann, October 5, 1842, and Mary, July 29, 1849. Mr. D. had one son in the war for the Union, John Q., who enlisted in the Fifth Indiana Cavalry. He was captured and imprisoned at Andersonville and other Southern prisons; he died from the effects of the terrible ordeal through which he passed while in those horrible pens. His father, John Devor, was a native of Pennsylvania; he settled in Ohio at an early date, and deceased July 25, 1828, in the seventieth year of his age. He was a man of noble impulse, and much of his character has found a place within the mind of his son. Mr. Devor is still active, and is a Republican in politics.

JOHN GITTINGER, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born September 6, 1809, in Maryland; he was educated in the rural schools of his native State, and at twenty-six years of age came to Ohio. He was married in Randolph County, Ind., September 28, 1848, to Dorothy Helm, who was born September 1, 1830. These parents were blessed with the birth of the following children: Jane, born December 16, 1849; Mary, October 14, 1851, deceased September 15, 1872; Ruth, March 26, 1854; Jacob and Samuel (twins), September 8, 1856, deceased September 28, same year; John J., December 9, 1857; Willard, November 25, 1859; Esther, April 19, 1862; Jonas, February 22, 1865; Daniel, July 21, 1867; Ann, October 31, 1870, and Olive, May 20, 1876. Mr. G. is a member of the Presbyterian Church, F. & A. M., No. 56, Winchester, and of Jackson Grange. His father, Jacob Gittinger, was a native of Baltimore County, Md., born March 25, 1785: he was an officer in the war of 1812; came to this county in the fall of 1838, deceased February 14, 1865; his wife's maiden name was Mary Deal, born September 6, 1792, in the same county and State aforesaid. She died February 10, 1861, in this county. Mr. Gittinger owns a well cultivated farm of 310 acres of valuable land, and is considered to be one of the best citizens of his neighborhood. Since the above was written, Mr. Gittinger has deceased. He died the 21st of August, 1882, quite suddenly. A few minutes before he passed away, he was engaged in sociable conversation with his family.

JACOB GITTINGER, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born September 19, 1817, in Carroll County, Md. He came to Darke County, Ohio, at eighteen years of age, and settled here in the fall of 1844. He was married in the early part of 1844, to Margaret Adkins, who was a native of Butler County, Ohio, born December 25, 1823. Two children blessed this union—William H., born May 26, 1845; he is an architect of considerable ability. The other child is a daughter, Lilly C., born February 19, 1851. Mr. G. is a self-made man, and has been intimately connected with the progress and development of the county. He and his wife are worthy members of the German Reformed Church. He owns a valuable farm of 100 acres of land, and is a Democrat in politics. His father and mother, Jacob and Mary Gittinger, are noticed elsewhere in this work. Suffice it to say that they were of the best families of their native State. The father of Mrs. Gittinger, was George Atkins, a native of Delaware, born in the year 1800, came to Butler County, Ohio, in 1807, and finally settled in Darke County, Ohio, where he deceased February, 1878; his wife, Jane Wilson, a native of Butler County, and a few years his junior, died April, 1823.

HENRY HANDSCHY, Jr. Henry Handschy, Sr., the father of this gentleman, was born in 1784, in the canton of Basel, Switzerland, and within fifteen miles of the city of Strasbourg, France. He emigrated to the United States with a younger brother in 1803, landing at Philadelphia, and removing thence to Lancaster County, Penn. In 1814, he removed to Franklin County, Penn., and while there he joined a volunteer infantry company organized for the defense of Baltimore, and arrived just in time to see the British fleet sail out of the harbor. From Franklin County, Penn., he removed to Loudoun County, Va. In 1817, he removed to Ohio, and purchased a farm of 160 acres in Perry Township, Muskingum County. Subsequently, he removed to Fairfield County, in the same State, and there married Mary Ann Weaver, in May, 1819. After a residence of two years in Fairfield County, he returned to his farm in Muskingum County, where he died on the 9th of November, 1861. In personal appearance he was a fine looking man—above the medium height, an entertaining conversationalist, and gifted with a remarkable memory. He was a fine debater, and well posted in the current topics of the day. Although he served as Justice of the Peace for a number of years, he never sought office, and never felt political ambition. In politics he was a Jeffersonian Democrat, and always maintained the principles enunciated by that great statesman. In religion he discarded all creeds and denominations, relying upon the Bible as the great founation-head, the source of all truth and righteousness. From this book he drew his conclusions, and in its promises he centered his faith and trust. He read it through many times, and always held it in the highest reverence. His wife survived him about ten years. She was born in April, 1794, in Westmoreland County, Penn., and removed with her parents to near New Baltimore, Fairfield Co., Ohio, where she married Mr. Handschy. Her parents were also from Switzerland. In the community where she resided for so many years, she was always looked upon as a "Mother in Israel." She was kind, compassionate and tender, and possessed the affectionate regard of all who knew her. She died March 3, 1870. Henry Handschy, Jr., son of Henry and Mary Handschy, was born April 20, 1820, in Muskingum County, Ohio. He was educated in the schools of his native State, and came to Indiana in May, 1840. On the 27th of October, 1841, he was united in marriage with Sarah Walker, and located upon a farm in Jackson Township, where he has ever since been engaged in agricultural pursuits, having improved his farm and enlarged its boundaries by subsequent purchases, until it now embraces 320 acres. Mr. Handschy has always entertained advanced ideas in the science of farming, and there are no farmers in the county who may be called his superiors as model agriculturists, and but few who are his equals. Foreseeing the great benefits to be derived from a proper system of artificial drainage, he became one of the first movers in the matter of inaugurating this improvement in Jackson Township, and is known to be the first man in Randolph County who secured a petition for an open ditch—the object being to effect drainage from his farm to the Mississinewa River, across intervening lands. Having taken the initiative in this matter, he set an example which has been extensively followed by his neighbors, while the value and availability of their lands have been largely enhanced by this action. Aside from farming, Mr. Handschy has devoted a great deal of attention to milling pursuits, feeling a commendable pride in this profession, at which, in former years, he was known to excel. By his long association with mechanical appliances, he has been able to invent many useful additions for the saving of labor, and to secure speed in the performance of work. His principal invention is an automatic flood-gate, for which he secured a patent on the 12th of September, 1882. This gate is designed for the use of mills operated by water-power, and is recognized as a valuable invention. During a residence of more than forty years in this county, Mr. Handschy has identified himself with many important public improvements, and has always manifested a willingness to encourage such improvements by liberal contributions and by personal coöperation. By honest toil and industry he has amassed a comfortable store of worldly wealth, and by his upright and honorable life, he has won and ever retained the confidence and good will of his fellow-men. Politically his sympathies are with the Democratic party, with which party he acts and votes. He has been identified with the Masonic fraternity for more than thirty years, having been initiated into the lodge at Deerfield, in this county, about the year 1851. He is a member of the Disciples Church, and is recognized as one of the best citizens of the community in which he resides. His wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Smith, was born September 16, 1819, and married Mr. Walker, who died after a few years of wedded happiness. The fruits of this union were three children, the eldest of whom—Sophia R.—is deceased, while Emily M. and Ellis W. still survive. Mrs. Handschy is an excellent lady, and by her kindness and charity has gained the affectionate regard of all who know her. Seven children are the fruits of her second marriage, viz.: Lydia A., Frederick, David, Joseph, Mary A., Loretta C. and Manda J., four of whom—Lydia, Frederick, David and Joseph are deceased.

LEANDER HARSHMAN, farmer, P. O. Union City, born June 2, 1842, in Preble County, Ohio, educated in this county, married August 28, 1866, to Mary E. Corl, who was born March 17, 1843, in this county. The following children were born to these parents: Anna B., November 15, 1869; Sarah E., October 25, 1869 (deceased March 2, 1870, burned to death by fire catching clothes); Clara J., December 29, 1871; Mary M., August 21, 1875; Della M., February 10, 1877, and William E., September 26, 1878. He and his wife are members of the German Baptist Church. Isaac Harshman is a native of Warren County, Ohio, born June 22, 1820, settled in this county in March, 1850; he married Nancy A. Robisson, January 28, 1841, she was a native of Butler County, Ohio, born July 12, 1817, deceased August 15, 1862. The following sons and daughters were born to them—Leander, June 2, 1842; Charlotte E., September 3, 1843; Henry B., February 14, 1866; Martha J., May 17, 1845; Martin V., April 25, 1847; John M. G., March 11, 1849; Eliza D., July 18, 1851; Alice A., December 17, 1853; James H., January 30, 1856, and Ida, September 12, 1858. The grandfather of these children was Elijah Harshman, a native of Virginia; he participated in the war of 1812, deceased January, 1857, in Preble County, Ohio; his wife was Nancy Wolf, born 1776 in Bourbon County, Ky. Jacob Corl, the father of Mrs. Harshman, is a native of Pennsylvania, born August 16, 1805; he was married, January 31, 1825, to Elizabeth Stuff, a native of Pennsylvania, born April 7, 1806. These old people are still living at this date, and are very active.

STEPHEN HINDSLEY was born in North Carolina August 20, 1818. Mr. Hindsley, after making several changes, finally selected Jackson Township as a desirable place to locate, and made his final settlement February 10, 1848. He married Miss Ann M. McConnell March 7, 1841, a native of Piqua, Ohio, born June 10, 1820. Ten children blessed this union, of which number nine are living. Sarah was born January 19, 1842; she became the wife of Westley Johnson; Joseph G. was born April 28, 1843, he married Mary C. Musselman; Malinda, born August 23, 1844, married Absalom Mangas; Rufus G., born February 21, 1847, married Malinda A. Noffsinger; John W., born July 26, 1849, married Martha J. Johnson; Mary E., born December 8, 1851, deceased September 16, 1853; George M., born March 23, 1854, married Caroline E. Warren; Melissa J., born September 10, 1856, married E. W. McFarland; Annetta, born October 23, 1858, deceased July 15, 1882, and James W., born August 14, 1860, married Rachel F. Byron. Mr. Hindsley and his daughters are worthy members of the Disciple Church. Mr. Hindsley is a social gentleman, and a Democrat of the old school. His father, John Hindsley, was a native of Maryland, born January 17, 1767. He united in matrimony with Miss Hannah Stone March 8, 1807; she was born March 8, 1788, in North Carolina. In the year 1823, Mr. John Hindsley and family settled in Granger County, Tenn.; thence in Darke County, Ohio. He deceased August 16, 1847, and his estimable wife September 6, 1866.

SQUIRE HINKLE was born July 10, 1853, in Jackson Township, Randolph County. He was educated in the common schools of this county: he is the owner of a fine farm and a pleasant home; he is a great lover of music, and is naturally a musician. He was married, April 11, 1875, to Henrietta Simmons, also a native of Randolph County, born December 25, 1853. They have three children—Dillie M., born January 25, 1875; Arrillus B., June 10, 1877, and Rolla R., born May 17, 1881. Mr. Hinkle's father, Henry Hinkle, is a native of Butler County, Ohio, born May 26, 1809. He came to this county about the year 1840; his wife, Eliza A. JAMES V. KING, physician, Castle. This esteemed citizen is a native of Brown County, Ohio, born July 5, 1823. He attended the common schools, Ripley College, of his native State, and settled in this county October, 1846. The Doctor was married, April 17, 1851, to Mary J. Devor, who was a native of Darke County, Ohio, born October, 1834. This union was blessed by the birth of eight children—Florence, July 22, 1852; William, August 1, 1855; Benjamin, June 24, 1857; Mary L. September 9, 1859; Eveline, September 16, 1864; Thomas, April 6, 1867; Harry, January 6, 1870, and Gertrude, August 16, 1873. Dr. King studied medicine under the eminent physician, Dr. Buckner, of Ohio, and has practiced continuously since 1845. He located in this county in 1846, and has filled the office of Township Trustee, besides superintending his farm of 140 acres. His father, William King, was a native of Adams County, Penn., born August 2, 1792. He was married to Miss Bonde, of Kentucky, in 1816, and deceased in Brown County, Ohio, December, 1859. He was in the war of 1812, and much of his patriotism and energy has descended to his son, the Doctor. The Doctor is considered to be a skillful physician, his practice amounts to $1,500 annually, and he is courteous and attentive to business. Dr. King's maternal grandfather was a Captain in the Revolutionary war, and the Doctor says he has often looked upon the old sword of Capt. Bonde, when a boy, with no little interest.

NORMAN McFARLAND, physician, New Pittsburg. This esteemed gentleman is a native of Darke County, Ohio, born June 10, 1842. He was principally educated at Antioch and Ridgeville Colleges. He was married, September 12, 1870, to Sarah Sanders, who was born at Mount Pleasant, Jay County, Ind., January 13, 1847. They have one child, Mary J., born November 12, 1875. After reading medicine under Drs. Simmons, Bailey and Anderson, he graduated in the Indiana Medical College, of Indianapolis, in the class of 1869, and subsequently attended the Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio. The Doctor has followed his profession successfully with an annual income of $1,500. He is a member of Union City Lodge, No. 152, I. O. O. F. He served in Company C, Fifth Indiana Cavalry, participating in all the principal engagements of that organization. His father Lewis McFarland, was born March 6, 1812, and resides at present near Union City. He married Charity Marquis, a native of Ohio, and born March 12, 1818. Jacob Sanders, the father of Mrs. McFarland, is a native of Philadelphia, Penn., born May 21, 1810, deceased at Ridgeville, Ind., August 10, 1863; he married Ruth Penock, February 3, 1833. Mr. M. and wife are worthy members of the Disciple Church, and are much interested in its behalf. He is an industrious farmer, and stands well in the community in which he lives. In politics, he is a Democrat, and is not only a farmer but a carpenter.

JOHN B. LYONS, Jackson, was born in Perry County, Ohio, November 29, 1849: he came with his parents to Jay County, Ind., in 1850. He was educated in the common schools of these days; was married April 23, 1874, to Rosa Snyder, who was a native of Darke County, Ohio, and born February 23, 1853. They have two children—Cora A., born January 20, 1875, and Albert L., August 3, 1877. Mrs. Lyons, is an estimable lady and sociable companion. She is a member of the Christian Church. Elijah Lyons, father of John B., was born September 24, 1824, in Columbiana County, Ohio. He moved to Jay County, Ind., in 1830, and January 12, 1821, married Mary Baily, a native of Pennsylvania. The father of Mrs. J. B. Lyons, was Pierson Snyder, a native of New Jersey, born April 20, 1820. After making several changes, he deceased in St. Clair, Mo., being killed March 14, 1863, by some deserters from the rebel Gen. Price's army. Helena Barkalow, the mother of Mrs. Lyons, was born in Warren County, Ohio, December 26, 1819. She married Mr. Snyder October 2, 1851, and deceased in Jay County, April 6, 1866. Mr. Lyons is a Democrat in politics. He is a social gentleman and well respected by his neighbors.

JOHN MANGAS, farmer, P. O. Union City. This industrious citizen was born February 25, 1834, in Richland County, Ohio; he came with his parents to this county in 1837, and was schooled among the scenes of those pioneer days. He was married February 4, 1858, to Hannah Stewart, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., May 15, 1841. One child blessed this union—Clark, born November 27, 1858; married Susan Stapesbury, December 11, 1879. Mr. M. owns a well-cultivated farm of 110 acres of land, and he and wife are zealous members of the Disciple Church. The father and mother of Mr Mangas are noticed elsewhere in this work. Isaac M. Stewart was the father of Mrs. Mangas, born June 16, 1818, a native of Ohio, deceased in Kansas; his wife was originally Cynthia Lambert, a native of Darke County, Ohio, born August 10, 1820, deceased December 13, 1861. Mrs. Noffsinger is a faithful member of the German Baptist Church; owns a good farm of 160 acres of land, and is a lady of whom her neighbors are proud. Mr. Eli Noffsinger died October 8, 1872; was a member of the German Baptist Church. Enos married Polly A. Stewart; Aaron, Mollie Sipple; Jesse P., Nancy C. Shinaberg; Andrew, first wife, Hettie N. Stover, second wife, Catherine Bowman; Saloma married George M. Lauter; John married Ann M. Bricker; Sarah A., married Silas A. Kreider.

ELI NOFFSINGER, farmer, P. O. Union City, born March 28, 1835, in Montgomery County, Ohio; came here in 1848; after making several changes, finally settled here in 1870. He was educated in the common schools of his native State, and was married September 3, 1857, to Martha Noffsinger, born December 31, 1838. The following children blessed this union: Elizabeth, born July 7, 1858, deceased November 26, 1864; Henry, December 22, 1859; Ida, October 18, 1861; Noah, February 13, 1864; Joseph, March 9, 1866; Edward, March 17, 1868; Clara J., January 1, 1872, and Dora, July 4, 1874. He and his worthy wife are members of the German Baptist Church. His father was Eli Noffsinger, born July 4, 1794, in Washington County, Pennsylvania, deceased in Illinois, 1861; his wife was originally Mary Pressel, a native of Virginia. Mr. Noffsinger is an industrious, conscientious gentleman.

JOHN POORMAN, farmer, P. O. Union City, born June 15, 1815, in Bedford County, Penn. He came to Richland County, Ohio, at one year of age, and from thence to this county in 1838. He was married, the first time, on September 6, 1837, to Lucy A. Brooks, born June 2, 1818, in York County, Penn. The following children blessed this union: Henry, born October 5, 1839, deceased January 6, 1869; Mary A., born September 22, 1841, deceased April 6, 1848; George W., born July 13, 1842, served in Company E, Eighty-fourth Indiana Infantry; Margaret J., born October 13, 1845; Emeretta M., born July 29, 1849; John N., born May 24, 1851; Martha E., born August 17, 1855, and James W., born April 22, 1861. Mr. Poorman lost his wife by death September 2, 1875. He was married the second time, January 7, 1877, to Mrs. Mary Anderson, who was born January 16, 1821, in Stark County, Ohio. His father, Peter Poorman, was a native of Pennsylvania; located in Richland County, Ohio; died July 9, 1830, his wife was originally Elizabeth Shaffer, a native of the same State, died in 1850. Mr. Poorman and wife are consistent members of the church, he of the Christian and she of the German Baptist. He is a Democrat in politics; owns a good farm of eighty acres of land, and is generally esteemed.

PETER POORMAN, Township Trustee, Union City. This worthy citizen is a native of Richland County, Ohio, born July 22, 1838. He came to this county with his parents at six weeks of age, and attended school in the rural districts of this township. He was married, August 5, 1858, to Mary Warren, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., September 6, 1833. The following children blessed this union: Elizabeth A., born January 10, 1860, deceased August 9, 1869; Eli N., born October 3, 1862, deceased August 20, 1868; Minerva E., born January 24, 1865, deceased August 21, 1868; Cora A., born March 24, 1870; James W., born May 5, 1872; Ettie B., born May 6, 1875, and Nilda L., born June 16, 1878. The father and mother of the subject of this sketch are noticed elsewhere in this work. Mr. Poorman has filled successfully the office of Township Assessor for six terms, and the people appreciating the honesty and integrity of this citizen, elected him Township Trustee in the spring of 1880. He and his worthy wife are members of the New-Light Church.

HENRY RICKERT, farmer, P. O. Jackson. This gentleman is one of the worthy farmers of his township; was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, April 16, 1848. Mr. Rickert, when a youth, had limited opportunities to attend school, and therefore his knowledge is derived principally from close observation and practical experience. On the 14th of August, 1873, he married Miss Wimer, a daughter of John Wimer, whose biography may be found on the pages of this volume. Miss Wimer is also a native of Montgomery County, Ohio, born January 7, 1852. Mr. Wimer and wife have three children living—Henry A., born August 1, 1875; Amos W., September 20, 1878, and Martin A., August 23, 1881. Mr. Rickert is a Democrat. He and his estimable wife are members of the German Baptist Church.

GEORGE RICKERT.

George Rickert was born February 15, 1840, in Montgomery County, Ohio. He is the son of John and Elizabeth Rickert, who were born in Germany, the former in August, 1801, and the latter in March, 1811. They were the parents of eight children, named respectively, Mary A., John, George, Jacob, Leonard, Samuel, Henry and Elizabeth, all of whom are now living except Mary A., Jacob, Leonard and Samuel. George, the subject of this sketch, came to Randolph County, Ind., with his parents in 1852. He attended the district schools of this county during the winter, and, during the remainder of the year, was engaged in assisting his father on the home farm. By the training of his early life, he became familiar with the details of farming, and as he grew to manhood adopted that pursuit, which he has ever since continued with marked success. On the 29th of March, 1866, he was united in marriage with Miss Sarah J. Stuck, who was born in Champaign County, Ohio, in March, 1848. The fruits of this union are three children, named respectively, William A., Mary E. and John E.

Like many of our substantial farmers and best citizens, Mr. Rickert is a self-made man, having earned his success by honest toil, steadily and gradually, without any sudden stroke of good fortune. He has a fine farm of eighty acres on the New Pittsburg pike, under splendid improvement, and with a handsome residence and substantial barn and outbuildings. He is a enterprising, industrious man, and, by honest toil, has accumulated a comfortable estate. He is honest and upright in his dealings with his fellow-men, and has gained the confidence and regard of all who know him, being recognized as one of the best citizens of his township. He is a member of the German Reformed Church, and in politics, is a Democrat.

His wife is the daughter of John Stuck, who was born in Pennsylvania in August, 1823, and is now a minister of the Gospel in Darke County, Ohio. She is an estimable lady, and possess the affectionate regard of the community in in which she resides.

JOSEPH SHREEV.

Joseph Shreev was born in Carroll County, Md., October 13, 1816, and died in Randolph County, Ind., August 13, 1879. In his youth he learned the miller's trade, and throughout his life, was engaged at that pursuit with marked success. When twenty-two years of age, he left home, and located on the Whitewater River, in Wayne County, Ind., where he operated a flouring-mill for William Mitchell. About ten years later, he removed to Dolluf's Mill, on Whitewater, where he remained about a year. Removing then to his farm, east of Union City, he was engaged in agricultural pursuits for twelve years. At the end of that time, he located in Union City, where, in partnership with Spencer Hill, he erected a flouring-mill, which has since been remodeled, and is now known as Pierce's Warehouse. In September, 1864, he removed to Jackson Township, Randolph County, and purchased a mill on the Mississinewa River. He remodeled this establishment, furnishing it throughout with new and improved machinery, and making it a first-class mill, operating it successfully until his decease.

He was twice married, first, on July 7, 1842, to Cynthia Ann Edwards, in Wayne County, Ind. By this union they were the parents of three children, only one of whom, Enos E., now survives. His wife died on the 30th day of March, 1850, and on the 18th of March, 1852, he was united in marriage with Emily Gibbs, a native of Darke County, Ohio, and daughter of David and Mary Gibbs. This second union was blessed by eight children, viz., David G., Andrew M., Senith E., Bryant J., Jacob W., Rebecca A., Edward Ellsworth and Wesley Preston. Of this number all are now living save Wesley P.

Mr. Shreev began life as a poor boy, without any capital but honesty and industry, and a strong determination to succeed. And these qualities proved the key to success, and enabled him, with good management, to accumulate a comfortable estate. He was a hard worker, and all that he acquired in the way of worldly wealth was the result of honest toil. In politics, he was a Republican, but with him, politics was a secondary consideration. His work demanded and received all of his attention, and he never consented to occupy an elective office, nor did he ever feel a desire for political recognition. He became an Odd Fellow at Westminster, Md., and retained his membership in that lodge until his death. In his business transactions, and in all his dealings with his fellow-men, he was scrupulously honest, and by his integrity, won the confidence and respect of all who knew him. Although not a pioneer, he was one of the most liberal of citizens, and took a hearty interest in the improvement of the county, contributing liberally to all enterprises of a public nature, and was especially the friend of public education and religion. He was a man of strong character, and in his death the community lost one of its best citizens. His wife survives him, and still controls the mill property. The mill is operated by her sons, who are gentlemen of fine business ability, and thoroughly familiar with the work in which they are engaged.

W. K. SIMMONS. The subject of this sketch is one of the substantial citizens of Randolph County. He is a native of this county; born August 31, 1841. His education was acquired in the district schools. Having served his majority at home, Mr. Simmons, on June 3, 1865, married Malinda A. Sell, May 11, 1845. They have three children—Dora, born March 29, 1868; Edar, September 15, 1869, and Esta, November 11, 1871. The above-named children are bright and intelligent, and are a great source of happiness for their parents. Mr. Simmons and wife are worthy members of the German Baptist Church, of which he has been a minister for twelve years. His father, Aaron Simmons, has been identified with this county since the year 1842; and has always been known as an honorable and respectable citizen. He is a native of Miami County, Ohio, born February 1, 1810. In the year 1840, he married Rebecca Marquis, she was born in Ohio, in 1819, February 2. Aaron Simmons and wife live on the Salem and Union Pike, two and one-half miles northwest of Union City. On the farm of W. K. Simmons is a flowing well, which has a capacity of about twelve gallons per minute. It has been dug seven years and has unceasingly continued in its wonderful supply of water.

NOAH S. SMITH, farmer, P. O. Union City. This industrious citizen was born December 21, 1854, in this county. He attended the district schools, and was married, December 24, 1874, to Martha J. Sell, who was born in Jackson Township, this county, October 3, 1853. Two children blessed this union—Troy, born July 1, 1876, and Lafayette, October 7, 1878, deceased July 13, 1879. Henry Smith, the father of the subject of this sketch, was a native of Pennsylvania, born May 27, 1816, came to this county in 1837, deceased September 29, 1880; his wife, formerly Elizabeth Noffsinger, was a native of Ohio, since deceased. Mr. Smith is energetic and thoroughly reliable in all his business relations.

EPHRAIM SPITLER, P. O. Jackson, was born June 15, 1834, in Montgomery Co., Ohio. He was educated in the common schools of his native State. On April 9, 1857, he united in marriage with Agnes A. Anderson, who was born in Juniatta County, Penn., June 30, 1834. They have seven children living—Harriett, born September 23, 1858; Joseph L., September 13, 1860; James H., October 25, 1862; Warren E., November 6, 1864; Martha J., January 7, 1867; Ora B., June 4, 1871, and Parker, October 13, 1875. Joseph Spitler, the father of the subject of this sketch, was a native of Ohio. He was born March, 1812, and married Miss Barbara Limbert. Mr. Spitler owns a valuable little farm of eighty acres. Is a worthy member of the United Brethren Church and a respected citizen. The father of Mrs. Spitler was James Anderson, a native of Pennsylvania, was born April 15, 1794. He married Ruth McChan, also a native of Pennsylvania; she was born January 6, 1800. They were united in the holy bonds of matrimony in the year 1820, November 20. In the year 1854, they moved to Darke County, Ohio, where they lived until their death. He deceased March 26, 1868, and his faithful wife Ruth, November 9, 1864

CHARLES TRINE.

George Trine, the paternal grandfather of this gentleman, was a native of Germany, but emigrated to the American Colonies at an early day, and espoused the American cause in the struggle for independence. At the battle of Bunker Hill, he was wounded in the left hand, and being permanently disabled, was a pensioner. He lived in Berks County, in the State of Pennsylvania, where he reared his family and died. The German orthography of the family name became anglicized after a residence of a few years in America, and was written as at present by his descendants. Jacob Trine, his son, and the father of the subject of this sketch, was born and reared in Berks County, Penn. He married in that county, and in 1832 removed with his family to Butler County, Ohio, where he followed the trades of weaving and dyeing until his death, which occurred in 1845, his wife having died in the preceding year.

Charles, the subject of this sketch, was born January 9, 1826, in Berks County, Penn., and accompanied his parents to Ohio when about six years of age. He grew up in that State, with but limited educational advantages, but studying hard in his leisure hours at home, when not engaged in assisting his father in the daily routine of work. When eighteen years of age, he went to learn the potter's trade at Miltonville, Ohio, and worked at this trade for nine years. He then rented a farm in Butler County, and for several years following was engaged in agricultural pursuits at various points in Ohio. In 1862, he purchased the farm upon which he still resides (consisting then of eighty acres), and in 1863 came with his family to live upon the new farm in Randolph County, Ind. What is now a fine farm was then principally in the forest, and almost destitute of improvement, with the exception of a little log-cabin, which for several years was the home of his family. But he was young and energetic, and not destined long to occupy a dwelling so humble. He cleared his farm, and in the meantime instituted many improvements, not the least of which was the purchase of an additional forty acres of land. In 1875, he erected a splendid brick mansion in the place of little log-house of earlier days. He has adhered closely to the pursuit of farming, and by honesty and industry has accumulated a comfortable fortune, while he has established himself permanently in the good will of his fellow-citizens.

He was married, July 1, 1849, to Miss Elizabeth Hinkle, in Butler County, Ohio. She was born in that county on the 13th of November, 1829, and is the daughter of Joseph Hinkle, an early settler of that county. Her grandfather Hinkle was one of the settlers killed by the Indians in the massacre at Newtown, above Cincinnati. Mrs. Trine is an excellent lady, and has done well her part in encouraging and helping her husband in his efforts to succeed, and still lives to share and enjoy the prosperity that has crowned their mutual labors. They are the parents of eight children, six of whom are now living, viz.: Squire H., married, and living in the State of Oregon; Sarah J., wife of Jacob Byrum, now living in Randolph County; William S., married, and living in Darke County, Ohio; Laura S., wife of Preston Hoke, now living in Jackson Township; Charles E. and Alpheus H. residing at home. Henry C., the eldest, and Josy, the youngest, are deceased.

Mr. Trine is a member of the Presbyterian Church at Union City. In his political affiliations he is a Republican, but has never sought or occupied any elective office. He has, however, been selected to fill offices of honor and trust in turnpike companies and other corporations. He has been a Director of the Union City Agricultural & Mechanical Association since the organization of that society, and President of the Board of Trustees of Lisbon Cemetery since the organization of that board.

WILLIAM WARREN is a native of Randolph County, N. C. He was born March 3, 1811. In the year 1825, he left his native State, and accompanied his parents to the West. They settled at Richmond, Ind., and in 1833 they made another change, and this time selected Randolph County as a desirable place to locate. He was educated in the common schools of the rural districts in this and his native State. On January 12, 1832, Miss Elizabeth Newton became his wife. The following children blessed this union: Mary, born September 6, 1833; Nancy A., April 11, 1835 (she died October 4, 1837); Newton H. was born May 4, 1837 (deceased same year); William was born October 4, 1838; Rachel, March 24, 1841; John, January 29, 1844; Eli, January 1, 1847; Lousetta, July 9, 1850, and Newton, May 17, 1854. Mrs. Warren died April 6, 1866. Mr. Warren again married. Miss Mary A. Dixon united in marriage with him on August 16, 1866. She was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, January 8, 1822. James Warren, the father of William, was a native of North Carolina, and was born November 16, 1787, and died June 27, 1876. Elizabeth Caviness, the mother of Mr. Warren, was also a native of North Carolina, and born January 9, 1790. She died August 28, 1865. Mr. Warren owns a valuable farm of 123 acres, and is one of the substantial citizens of the community.

GEORGE WARNER, farmer, P. O. Union City. This industrious citizen is a native of Carroll County, Md., born March 13, 1842. He came to Darke County, Ohio, in the year 1864, and from thence settled here in the spring of 1878. He was united in marriage, August 28, 1870, to Albina Skidmore, born in Darke County, Ohio, April 8, 1851. They had four children, of which number three are living—Effie (born August 16, 1871), Elvin (December 4, 1874), Earl (July 28, 1876, deceased August 2 same year) and Maggie (July 16, 1878). Mr. W. served in Company B, Forty-seventh Ohio Infantry, in the war for the Union. He was in several lively skirmishes, and was at the assault of Fort McAllister. He is Republican in politics, and he and wife are worthy members of the Disciple Church. The father of Mr. Warner is Elias Warner. He was a native of the State of Maryland; settled in Darke County, Ohio, in 1864, and is still living. His wife, originally Mary A. Morningstar, was also a native of Maryland, born about the year 1812, deceased October 16, 1873. The father of Mrs. Warner is Samuel C. Skidmore, a native of New Jersey, born July 18, 1817. He was married to Susannah Rarick, who was born October 29, 1829, in Darke County, Ohio, where she now resides.

D. WARREN. This substantial farmer is one of the leading agriculturists of Randolph County, coming to this county many years ago, and settling in the new and unimproved township of Jackson; he has, perhaps, done as much as any one citizen of the township in transforming a wilderness into a beautiful and productive farming district. Jackson Township stands second to none of the good townships found in the county, and its many broad and fertile acres amply testify, for the untiring energy of her citizens. The subject of this sketch was born in Guilford County, N. C., February 5, 1815. He came to Wayne County, Ind., in the year 1821, thence settled in this county thirty-three years ago (1849). Miss Nancy Taylor, a native of Kentucky, born June 20, 1821, became his wife April 11, 1836. The following children blessed this union: James M., born May 18, 1840; Sarah A., October 11, 1842; Elihu, February 17, 1845; Margaret M., February 14, 1849; John T., February 12, 1852; Elizabeth C., September 11, 1854; William H., January 1, 1857; Isaac W., February 22, 1859; Mary E., September 4, 1861, and Nancy L., August 28, 1864. Mr. Warren and family are earnest members of the Disciple Church, and are universally esteemed by their neighbors. He owns a large farm, all of which is susceptible of cultivation. The tract contains 837 acres, and as Mr. Warren engages extensively in stock-raising, quite a portion of his farm is pasture land. Mr. Warren is a man of strict honesty and integrity, a kind and indulgent parent, an affectionate husband, and a genial companion. He has the respect and confidence of the community among whom he has lived for nearly half a century. He is Republican in principle and practice, and has unlimited faith in the intelligence of the people of our country. Still in his strength and vigor, may this substantial farmer continue to enjoy the comforts of a pleasant home, and the esteem of his large circle of acquaintances.

JOHN M. WIMER, farmer, P. O. Union City, born June 7, 1830, in Ohio; came to this county in March, 1857. He attended school in his native State, and was married December 28, 1850, to Catharine Miers, a native of Montgomery County, Ohio, born October 9, 1831. The following children were born to them: Levina, January 7, 1852; Andrew J., March 11, 1853; deceased February 23, 1865; Franklin, January 28, 1855, died April 8, 1860; Mahala, September 20, 1857, died December 7, 1861; Sophia, December 18, 1859; Adam, April 9, 1861; Valentine, June 20, 1863; Amos, January 7, 1866; Henry, June 27, 1868; Eve A., April 21, 1871, and Susanah, March 3, 1874. Mr. W. and wife are members of the German Baptist Church, and they are generally esteemed. Michael Wimer, his father, was a native of Pennsylvania; settled in Preble County, Ohio, died about the year 1831; his wife was Catharine Studebaker. They were worthy people and generally loved.

GREEN TOWNSHIP.

Green Township is in the northwestern corner of the county, being the westernmost of the northern tier of townships—Jackson, Ward, Franklin and Green. It lies, like the others mentioned, in the valley of the Mississinewa River, and on both sides of that stream, the larger half of the township being on the south side.

Two principal creeks flow northward, Elkhorn and Mud Creeks, and one southwestward, Dinner Creek, from Jay County. The township is narrower than the other three northern townships by a mile and a half, that width being taken to form a part of Monroe, located directly south of Green and north of Stony Creek. The region, though lying away from the prior settlements established in the county, and neglected almost till the last, has proved to be good and fertile, and the citizens of that part of the county are proud of their location, thinking it in natural advantages not a whit behind the other townships of old Randolph.

The surface of the region is for the most part moderately rolling, though some portions are tolerably level. The country was originally burdened with a heavy growth of timber, a large amount of which still remains. The settlement of Green Township, as already stated, was not till long after the first occupation of the region. One might have supposed that, since the upper portions of the valley were taken up between 1816 and 1820, that pioneers would have passed down the river and planted their stakes along its lower course. Not so. The first entry in the bounds of Green Township was made August 18, 1832, sixteen years after the first entry in the upper valley, and by the close of 1835 only fifteen quarter sections had been purchased of the United States, or only about one-eighth of the whole. But, during the years 1836, 1837 and 1838, the rush for entries was great, and by the close of the latter year all the land in the county except the school sections and scattering pieces here and there that had escaped the notice of the general public, had passed into the hands of private owners, though not very much was yet occupied by bona fide settlers. The entries in Green Township up to November 11, 1835, are sat down below:

ENTRIES.

John Michael, N. W. 8, 21, 12, 160, August 18, 1832; Martin Boots, N. E. 9, 21, 12, 160, August 18, 1832; Alexander Garringer, E. N. W. 9, 21, 12, 80, October 5, 1832; Alexander Garringer, N. W. N. W. 9, 21, 12, 40, October 5, 1832; Thomas Brown, N. W. S. E. 11, 21, 12, 40, November 24, 1832; David Brown, S. E. S. E. 11, 21, 12, 40, December 1, 1832; John Garringer, N. N. E. 8, 21, 12, 80, March 30, 1833; Alexander Garringer, N. N. W. 10, 21, 12, 80, April 13, 1833; Jacob Winegartner, E. S. E. 8, 21, 13, 80, May 18, 1833; Isaac Garringer, N. E. N. W. 10, 21, 12, 40, August 24, 1833; William R. Marine, W. N. W. 17, 21, 13, 80, September 7, 1833; Alexander Garringer, S. E. S. W. 4, 21, 12, 40, September 7, 1833; Stephen Venard, N. W. S. E. 5, 21, 12, 40, October 4, 1833; James Brown, N. E. N. W. 13, 21, 12, 40, October 12, 1833; William Venard, E. S. E. 5, 21, 12, 80, October 26, 1833; John Garringer, W. S. W. 3, 21, 12, 80, November 9, 1833; Reuben Strong, N. E. 10, 21, 12, 160, November 23, 1833; Jonathan Green, N. W. N. W. 13, 21, 12, 40, November 24, 1833; James Bryan, E. N. E. 8. 21. 12, 80, December 28, 1833; Charles Perry, S. E. N. W. 10, 21, 12, 40, March 4, 1834; John Bone, W. S. W. 4, 21, 12, 80, June 10, 1834; Alexander Stephens, W. N. E. 8, 21, 13, 80, June 10, 1834; William P. Gray, N. E. N. W. 24, 21, 12, 40, July 7, 1834; Reuben Strong, N. W. 11, 21, 12, 160, August, 1834; Elijah Harbour, S. E. S. W. 2, 21, 12, 40, December 29, 1834; Elijah Harbour, S. E. 2, 21, 12, 160, December 29, 1834; Abner Woolverton, S. E. S. E. 4, 21, 12, 40, March 2, 1835; Jacob Clouse, part of 5, 21, 12, March 2, 1835; Ubery Sleener, S. E. S. W. and S. W. S. E. 7, 21, 13, 80, April 4, 1835; Isaac Garringer, S. W. S. E. 4, 21, 12, 40; Tunis Brooks, N. N. E. 20, 21, 12, 80, April 20, 1835; William McCammish, S. E. N. W. 24, 21, 12, 40, April 15, 1835; John Gray, N. E. S. W. 24, 21, 12, 40, August 3, 1835; Joseph Cross, S. W. N. W. 13, 21, 12, 40, November 11, 1835.

By examination it appears that every one of the forty-two entries above given except one was upon Mississinewa River, or near that stream or upon Elkhorn. Nearly the whole of the river across the entire township had been entered, and most of Elkhorn for two miles up that stream. The solitary outside entry had been made in Section 20, 21, 12, near Delaware line, some three miles south of the river.

A large part of these entries had been made in advance of settlement in Monroe Township. Only eight entries or 440 acres had been made, as stated in the history of Monroe Township, up to June, 1835, while forty-four entries to 2,560 acres had been effected in Green Township.

In 1832, six entries, 520 acres; in 1833, thirteen entries, 920 acres; in 1834, seven entries, 560 acres; in 1835, eight entries, about four hundred acres.

It is true, indeed, that the whole northern tier of townships and Wayne as well had remained mostly unoccupied up to 1834, or thirty years after the first emigration to the county. But the time had then come for the rush of entry and emigration, and in three years from 1835 nearly every acre of available land had been purchased. How much had been settled up to the close of 1838 we are not able to state.

Green Township is six and five-eighths miles long from east to west and four and one-half miles wide north and south, with Jay County north, Franklin Township east, Monroe Township south and Delaware County west, containing twenty-nine and three-fourths square miles, or about nineteen thousand and forty acres. It comprises the following sections:

Township 21, Range 12, parts of Sections 8, 17, 20, 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29; whole of Sections 1 to 4, 9 to 16 and 21 to 24.

Township 21, Range 13, Sections 5 to 8, 11 to 14, 17 to 20 and parts of Sections 29 and 30.

SETTLEMENT.

The first actual settlers in Green Township are supposed to have been Alexander Garringer and Martin Boots, opposite Fairview. They entered their land in August and October, 1832, and were living there in March, 1833, and probably in 1832. When the Greens and Browns came from Tennessee in March, 1833, Garringer and Boots were the only families in the township. In the spring of 1833, a company from Tennessee (see biography of Thomas Brown and Jonathan Green) settled not far from Steubenville, on both sides of the river, which colony made a brave beginning for that township of at least nine and perhaps more families in one group.

Philip Berger, who came in 1838, says: "The country was all woods. A few settlers were scattered here and there, but they had only cabins with small clearings like deep caves sunk far below the tops of the thick, almost unbroken forest. These little clearings made hardly a perceptible break in the vast, untrodden wilderness." When he came he says the residents were as follows: Alexander Garringer, across the river from Fairview; Martin Boots, across the river from Fairview; Mr. Porter, on the present site of Fairview—did not stay; Daniel Culver had bought out Mr. Porter, and was there at the time of Mr. Berger's arrival; Naselrod had been on Thomas Hubbard's place; Hubbard bought out Naselrod in 1837; Alexander Stevens had settled in the east part about 1830, perhaps the first in the township; John Bone lived below Fairview, and now resides in the town; Anthony Wayne McKinney came in 1837, and his son, John B. McKinney, lives now opposite Fairview in a splendid and costly mansion, being the owner of fourteen or fifteen hundred acres of land and of great herds of cattle and stock; Nathan Godwin came in 1837, and his son, Thomas Godwin, is a resident of Fairview; John Garringer came in 1836, and resided where Baldwin now lives; Martin Smith bought out Garringer in the fall of 1836; Bennet King, father of William O. King, residing near Deerfield, lived in the northwest corner of the county, northwest of Fairview; Bennet King went to Missouri and lives there yet; Elijah Harbour was west of Samuel Caylor's, in the fall of 1835; The Browns (Thomas and his three sons) had settled south of the river, perhaps in 1833 or 1834. They sold to Zebulon Cantrell in 1839, and left for Iowa; Israel Wirt entered south of Brown's in 1836, and moved there in the fall of 1837; he died in the summer of 1880, eighty-four years old; Tunis Brooks lived on Brook's Prairie. He had been there two or three years. Benjamin Mann was on the south side of the river, one mile west of Fairview. William Vineyard lived above Fairview. He was uncle to Edward Starbuck's first wife, her father being John Vineyard, brother to William, and a very nice and estimable gentleman, and much less backwoodsish than some others of the connection. James McProud was a very early settler, and is still living, having been a prominent citizen. Elijah Harbour came in 1834, settling north of Mississinewa and east of Fairview. He was buried in Fairview, having the largest country funeral ever known in that region. His death took place in 1869 or 1870. Nathan Davis, on the John Life farm; Ulrich Keener was on the Nancy Boots farm; David Milburn was on the north side, two miles east of Fairview; Jonathan, Joel and Julian Green lived near Steubenville; the Browns were north of Christian Life's, south of the river; Martin Boots was south of the river, near Fairview; Samuel Caylor came in 1837; John Life came in the spring or summer of 1838.

The first mail route was from Deerfield to Granville, Delaware County, once in two weeks, out and back on horseback, in 1843. The first mill was built by Anthony McKinney on the river below Fairview, where Woolverton's Mill now is. He had first a saw-mill, then a corn cracker, afterward a grist mill. He was making the dam in 1838. The saw mill began work in 1839, the corn mill in the fall, and the wheat mill in 1841 or 1842. The first school was in the winter of 1837 in a little round log cabin near Fairview, on the river bank. The first meeting was held in that same log cabin. The first church was built of logs for the Methodists about 1839 in Fairview. About 1844, a quarterly meeting was held at Thomas Hubbard's. Their house had just been built, and had no floor, and the sleepers served very well for seats. Methodist meetings used to be held at Nathan Godwin's. Christian (New Light) meetings were held at Martin Smith's. The schoolhouse now standing is the third; the first was log, the second frame, the third brick. The first brick house was either Samuel Caylor's or William Ore's. The first brick kiln was a small one of thirty or forty thousand for chimneys, burnt by Thomas Hubbard. Samuel Caylor burnt his own brick. The first reapers in the township were J. B. McKinney's and Philip Berger's. Mr. Berger's started first. They were the Kirby reaper, and the time was 1855 or 1856. The first threshing machine was run by Philip Stover, of Delaware County. It was a "falling beater" and "chaff-piler." He threshed first for old Elijah Harbour and then for Philip Berger.

The first Justice was John Garringer in 1838. People say that he kept his docket on slips of paper and stuck them in cracks in the logs of his cabin, and that nobody but himself could read them. The first burial in Fairview graveyard was that of an old lady, Mrs. Shirley, mother-in-law of Reuben Eppart. Mr. Godwin laid off the graveyard. Thomas Powell was buried in what is now J. B. McKinney's pasture before 1838. The spot is unknown. The first wheat in the settlement was raised by Thomas Hubbard, three acres, producing sixty bushels. Flat-boats and pirogues used to float down the river with apples, pork, flour and what not. One spring five boats came down loaded with charcoal. They were stove in, and the coal was lost. One broke in pieces going over McKinney's dam. Mr. Hubbard set out an orchard in 1840, getting the trees of Joab Ward, at Ridgeville. There were 120 trees, and he gave $9 a hundred, bringing them down the river in a canoe. The brick kiln of Thomas Hubbard was the first. William Ore, Samuel Caylor and J. B. McKinney each burned his own bricks for his house. There are no brick factories in the township, neither are there any tile factories, though much ditching has been done. However, there are no long company ditches made under authority of law. No pikes had been made in Green Township, strange as the fact may seem, till the summer of 1880. The people there made a beginning upon the east and west road leading from Ridgeville to Fairview, an old throughfare laid out some fifty or more years ago.

There are no railroads through the township. Three roads run near, but none touch its soil. Fairview, the chief town, is but a short distance from several railroad points, but is itself cut off from all. Several bridges have been erected in Green Township, one iron bridge at Fairview, one bridge north of Steubenville, one south of Emmetsville and perhaps others, all across the Mississinewa River. Although the settlement of this region was so late that much of the forest still remains standing, yet many of the residents have acquired comfortable fortunes and substantial and even elegant homes. In Green Township may be found, in fact, perhaps the most costly dwelling in Randolph County, that of John B. McKinney, Esq., opposite Fairview, of a peculiar style, unique but elegant, and very expensive, said to contain forty rooms. The people of Green Township are mostly moral, upright, industrious, frugal and thriving in their disposition, character and habits.

[For further details see mills, churches, schools, reminiscences, etc.]

The boundaries of Green may be stated thus: North by Jay County, east by Franklin, south by Monroe, west by Delaware County.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 21, Range 12—Sections 1, 5, 12, 21, 22, 23, 25, 26, 27, 28, entered in 1836–37; Section 2, 1834–37; Sections 3, 4, 20, 1833–36; Section 8, 1832–36; Sections 9, 13, 1832–37; Section 10, 1833–37; Section 11, 1832–34; Sections 14, 15, 17, 29, 1836; Section 16, school land; Section 24, 1835–37.

Township 21, Range 13—Sections 5, 6, 28, 1836–37; Sections 8, 17, 1833–37; Sections 19, 20, 29, 30, 1837; Section 7, 1835–37. Whole township entered between 1832 and 1837.

TOWNS.

Berlin.—Location, on south side of Mississinewa River, Section 4, Town 21, Range 12, opposite Fairview. Streets: North and south, Main; east and west, Water, Ash; thirty-one lots; B. Mann, proprietor; Moorman Way, surveyor; recorded December 13, 1833. Town extinct. "Died borning." It seems that the proprietors of Fairview and Berlin played at "cross purposes," and Fairview won for the time. Both towns could not live unless they had become doubly strong like Pittsburgh and Alleghany, or New York and Brooklyn. Berlin had, in truth, two years the start, and still she "lost."

Emmettsville—Was laid out some years ago, but no record has been made of the plat. It is located upon Sections 5, 6, 7 and 8, Town 21, Range 13, a little north of Mississinewa River, upon the Deerfield & Fairview State road, leading from Greenville, Ohio, northwestward. The surrounding country seems fertile and prosperous. In 1857, there were two wagon shops, Mercer and Hastings; two smith shops, Cool and Jenkins; one grocery, William Ore; one cabinet shop, Esquire Gordon; one saw-mill (with corn-cracker), H. Jenkins; one post office, D. Thornburg; one schoolhouse; one hotel, Gough; one physician, Felix Ore. The business men since that time have been as follows: Merchants, D. Ore, Jones, Wilson, Merricle, Bretch, Bickner, S. Ore, Webb, S. Ore (second); cabinet shops, Gordon, Sackman, Richardson; physicians, Ore, Bailey, Capron; smith shops, Cool, Jenkins, Reeves. The town is now nearly dead for business. Two churches are here—United Brethren and German Evangelical. There is a schoolhouse and a post office. The town has no railroad and no pike except that the first pike in the township is now (1880) in progress upon the old Deerfield State road, directly through the town, coming too late, however, to renew the life of the dead. The town, so far as business is concerned, is wholly dead. Not even a smith shop enlivens the street by its noisy din. The houses, several of them, stand vacant, dilapidated and ready to tumble down, and Emmettsville is altogether desolate and wo-begone.

Fairview.—Location, Section 4, Town 21, Range 12, northwest corner of township; Thomas Hubbard, Samuel Boots, Nathan Goodwin, Daniel Culver, proprietors; forty-eight lots. Recorded March 26, 1838. Streets: North and south, Main; east and west, North, Summit, Water. On the Mississinewa River, north side. Deerfield, twelve miles; Ridgeville, nine miles; Emmettsville, four miles; Farmland, eight miles.

The town was laid out in 1838 by Thomas Hubbard, Samuel Boots, Nathan Goodwin and Daniel Culver. It is located on Section 4, Town 21, Range 12, near the northwest corner of the township, and of Randolph County as well, on the Deerfield & Ridgeville road, which extends northwest past Emmettsville and Fairview into Delaware County. The ground on which it is built is finely rolling, unusually so for Randolph County. The business of the town began about as follows: Alex Garringer had a little store at his cabin south of the river, and he moved the goods over to the site of the town, and "set up" in 1839. Mr. G. also started a smith shop. He had had a shop over at his farm, but he changed locations. He was not a smith himself, but maintained a shop, hiring his workmen. Mr. Harris was the first physician, in 1842. He was also the first Postmaster. Mail was carried once in two weeks on horseback, from Deerfield to Greenville, Delaware County. A little cabin was used for a schoolhouse in 1837–38, standing near the river bridge on the north bank. A log church was built about 1839. The town grew gradually and not very slowly, and it came to be quite a stirring place. There were at one time (1845 to 1850) three or four thriving stores, two smith shops, three hotels and considerable other business of various kinds. The years during the war witnessed the greatest activity in goods. There was heavy stock trading and much other business. Fitzpatrick & Wilson drove and fed stock largely. The merchants at various times have been Messrs. Garringer, Cleveland, Messner, Fitzpatrick & Wilson, J. B. McKinney, John King, M. B. Smith, Elijah Harbor, G. H. Bird, George Blakely, Robert Starbuck, Monroe Starbuck, William E. Starbuck, James Reese, Mayner & Son; physicians, Harris, Godwin, Fausen, Moore, Vickers, Johnson, Davis, Fager; hotels, Bone, Richardson, Cleveland, Sullivan, McKinney, Haynes, Judy, Godwin; smith shops, Garringer, Ore, Dowden, Dixon, McClelland, Miller, Cawthorn, Bromagen; wagon shops, Messrs. Ziegler, Newstiel, Hester; Postmasters, Harris, Fitzpatrick, King, Reeves, Street, Mrs. Street, Starbuck, W. E. Starbuck, Mayner, Fager; saw-mill, Judy & Reese, Starbuck & Morris; the mill was finally moved to Morristown. The town is now much decayed. The business at present comprises two small stores, two smith shops, one post office, one tailor's shop, two churches, Christian (New Light) and Methodist. There was once a tanyard, but it has been gone for many years. The Christian Church was built in 1845 or 1846, but is not now used. The Methodist Church was built first, in 1839. The one now standing was built in 1849, and remodeled in 1874. There is a graveyard in connection with the Methodist Church, which is extensively used, being in reasonable repair. There are many tombstones, and a large number of soldiers have been buried therein. The cemetery was laid out by Nathan Godwin, before 1840. Residents in the vicinity are Thomas Hubbard, 160 acres; J. B. McKinney, 1,400 acres or more; W. E. Starbuck, 140 acres; Thomas Goodwin, 192 acres; Philip Barger, 247 acres; Chalkley Baldwin, 140 acres; James Maynor, 320 acres (mostly in Jay County); Sanford Spahr, 140 acres. The gentlemen named are all Republicans, except J. B. McKinney, who is a Democrat.

Bridges: There are three large bridges near Fairview, all of them over the Mississinewa. One is directly at Fairview, crossing over the river to the residence of J. B. McKinney, Esq., and constructed of iron. One wooden bridge near Samuel Caylor's. One wooden bridge near Evans'. No railroad comes to Fairview, and none passes through Green Township, yet five tracks pass near the township, and not very far from the town. The Pan-Handle passes through Redkey, Powers and Dunkirk, all in Jay County. Powers is seven miles, Redkey five miles and Dunkirk six and one-half miles from Fairview. The "Bee Line" passes through Farmland and Morristown. Farmland is eleven miles and Morristown eight miles distant. The "Shoo-Fly" Railroad passes through Ridgeville, crossing the Pan-Handle at that place. Ridgeville is eight miles from Fairview. The Muncie & Fort Wayne Railroad goes through Eaton, nine miles from Fairview. The Lake Erie & Western has a station at Albany, in Delaware County, two and one-half miles from Fairview. Thus Fairview is completely environed with railroads and railroad towns, so that there is little room left for it to thrive and prosper. There is no pike and none, in fact, in Green Township, but one is in process on the old Deerfield & Fairview State road having been begun during the summer of 1880.

Rockingham.—Section 17, Town 21, Range 13, ten miles northwest from Winchester, five miles west from Ridgeville, on Mississinewa River. Streets: North and south, Adams and Psample (sic); east and west, Jackson and Main. W. R. Merine, proprietor. Laid out December 27, 1833; acknowledged March 26, 1836; recorded March 31, 1836.

The village was laid out in 1833 by William R. Merine, and recorded in 1836. The town had so slight a growth and so early a death that until lately (August, 1881) no one was met with who had ever so much had heard of Rockingham or had the least idea of its location. John Ford, however, residing on Elkhorn, in Green Township, who moved to the county in 1839, says that (at some time, he does not say when) a good store was kept at the town of Rockingham, but that there was nothing else in the town. So that Rockingham lived its brief life not in vain, and spent all its days in accomplishing good to the surrounding region.

Mr. Green, son of Jonathan Green, one of the first settlers of Green Township, says that his father had a not too pleasant memorial of that town in the fact that he had to refund to the proprietors of that store several hundred dollars, without right or justice, which came near "breaking him up." But utter oblivion now rests upon the place, except in the memory of a very few among the pioneers or their immediate descendants. A clerk of that store had placed in the hands of Mr. Green, as Magistrate, notes for collection belonging to that firm, with verbal orders to pay the money, when obtained, to certain parties who had accounts against them. He did so, and then the proprietors of the store denied the authority of the clerk to act for them in that way. He, meanwhile, had "vamoosed the ranch," and Mr. Green was forced to account for the money to the original parties holding the notes. In these days, when rogues are pushed to find methods of raising the wind, this backwoods plan is worthy of consideration.

Shedville Hamlet.—Not incorporated; located on Sections 18 and 19, Town 21, Range 13; begun about 1880. It stands not on any stream, nor railroad, nor thoroughfare, nor pike, nor canal, but just right where it is close by a saw-mill. It is a little place, lately in the woods, has a store, a saw-mill, a smith shop and a wagon (repair) shop, and the enterprising denizens of the place have secured a mail route through the vicinity and a post office at their ambitious little hamlet. The store is owned by Alonzo Brinkley and the saw-mill by Miranda & Barger.

There is something peculiar about this town (by courtesy and name, though not incorporated nor even platted). There is not a dwelling in it and but three buildings, one of which is the saw-mill, a rough structure, made of posts, and a lumber roof. The business men of the place are all bachelors, and have to board out of town, though only two dwelling-houses are in sight. In some countries, and at sometimes, this humble beginning of things might be the starting point to future greatness. How it will be for Shedville during the ages that are to come, this aspiring little hamlet just budding into life among the older and more pretentious towns of old Randolph, forty years hence may perhaps reveal to those who may at that time be inhabitants of this region and to the dwellers in this county, in that distant era; and to the historian of that coming time, we trustfully commit the now latent possibilities and the yet unrevealed history of that rising city.

Steubenville.—Israel Wirt, Jonathan Green, proprietors. Location, Sections 13 and 14, Town 21, Range 12; C. G. Goodrich, surveyor. Plat surveyed December 24, 1839. Recorded July 28, 1840; twenty-four lots. Town extinct.

It was laid out by Israel Wirt and Jonathan Green in 1840. It stands upon Sections 13 and 14, Town 21, Range 12, on the south side of the Mississinewa River, though not very near to that stream. There was once a tanyard, a store, kept by Israel Wirt, a smith shop by Julian and four or five houses. A cemetery lies near the place which is still in use and in reasonable repair. The town never did much business, nor was ever prosperous, and it has been entirely dead for more than twenty years. The place is not even a "cross-roads," but a spot where an east and west road strikes a north and south one. Mr. Wirt, one of the proprietors, was one of the first pioneers of that region, and died in the summer of 1880, at the advanced age of about eighty years. The town was surveyed and platted December 24, 1839, and recorded July 28, 1840. Though planted during the early settlement of the township, fate was against it, and it had to succumb.

FACTS.

Thomas Hubbard has a stone quarry north of Fairview. Mr. Dougherty has a stone quarry one mile east of Fairview.

Green Township is somewhat strongly Republican in politics.

Gravel is by no means scarce, though the people are only lately beginning to realize what use to make of it and to apply it thereto. Sand is obtained chiefly from the bed of the Mississinewa, and the quality is good.

There have been no pikes in the region. The first in the township was commenced in 1880 from Ridgeville west to the county line via Fairview, and others, also, are projected in various directions.

RAILROADS.

No railroads cross the limits of Green, yet five lines are within a moderate distance from Fairview: Pan-Handle road, with stations as follows: Powers, seven miles from Fairview; Redkey, five miles; Dunkirk, six and one half miles.

"Bee Line"—Parker, eight miles; Farmland, eleven miles.

"Shoe-Fly and Pan-Handle Crossing"—Ridgeville, eight miles.

Muncie & Fort Wayne Railroad—Eaton, nine miles.

Lake Erie & Western—Albany, two and one-half miles

Thus the people of Green Township are well supplied with markets in every direction, but all outside their own limits, and, hereafter, towns in Green Township will be hard to find and equally difficult to locate and build.

Philip Barger born in Fayette County, Ohio, in 1815. His parents were Virginians who left that State on account of slavery. His father died when Philip was young. Mr. Barger came to look at the country in 1846, and entered land in the fall of that year (145 acres). He married Elizabeth Strong October 4, 1838, in Delaware County, Ind., came to Randolph County, Ind., to live and settle October 24, 1838. They have had seven children, four of whom grew up and three are living. His wife died August 7, 1877. He has been by occupation a farmer, and has also held several public trusts. He has been Township Assessor, Justice of the Peace four years, County Commissioner two terms, once about thirty years ago, and also in 1872–75. He was one of the board that built the new court house, and is satisfied that they did right. He has a fine farm, is an active, intelligent man, a Republican, a strong temperance man, and altogether a valuable and esteemed citizen. He is substantial and reliable, solid but not showy, fond of knowledge, has a large supply of instructive books, a steadfast friend and supporter of morality and education and of every good cause. Although verging toward threescore years and ten, he is yet strong and vigorous, and enjoys attention to business.

John Bone is an early settler. He has been twice married. He is a mechanic and a farmer, and, though now threescore years and ten, he yet practices his trade as a carpenter. He was once a Whig, but is now a Democrat, since he votes with that party. He is over seventy years old, and has resided in Green Township for more forty-five years and now resides in the little town of Fairview.

Thomas Brown was born in East Tennessee, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1832, settling in Green Township in 1833. His family were all grown and married, and all came together to the new country. They were David, Thomas and James, sons and married; Rebecca (Davis), —— (McCarnish), Sarah (Green), —— (White), Catharine (Gray). They all settled together, making up a colony in the woods. Nearly the whole connection (except the Greens) went to Iowa about 1837, leaving their places for other new-comers.

John Ford was born in the city of New York in 1802; his father removed to Richmond, Va., in 1808, and afterward to Rockbridge County, Va. In 1819, they came to Fayette County, Ohio, and, in 1823, to Clinton County, Ohio. Young Ford was now of age, but poor and destitute, yet bent on earning a home, and traveled a great deal in early life. He married Elizabeth Johnson in Clinton County in 1827. In 1829, he came to Randolph County, and roamed the woods back and forth. From Judge Sample's, on White River, to John Byles', in Delaware County, there was no road nor the semblance of one. He selected land where Albany now stands, but his uncle dissuaded him, declaring that he (Ford) would never live to see it settled. He did, finally, some years afterward, August 20, 1838, enter land in Green Township, 120 acres, E. N. E. and N. W. N. E. 25, 21, 12, on Elkhorn. He moved to the tract in 1839, and has resided upon it forty-two years. He is a farmer, has owned 240 acres, now has 160 acres. He was a Presbyterian, but there have been none in the region, and he has stood aloof from church membership. In politics, originally a Democrat, he has been of late years a Republican. When he raised his cabin men had to come from Cabin Creek to help him perform the work. When he explored the region, in 1829, he came to Sample's Mill, struck across the woods, pathless and waste, to John Byles', looked at the land, thence took an Indian trail to the "Godfrey trace," and followed it to somewhere north of Winchester, got lost, but found his way to Winchester before his comrades arrived. What was remarkable, he says he was not aware of any settlers on the Mississinewa. At Winchester the court house was made of beech logs. There was only one frame building in the town. From Winchester he struck for Greenville, performing the whole journey on foot.

(Note.—It would seem as though Mr. Ford's journey must have been earlier than he puts it, as the brick court house was let in 1826 and finished in 1828.)

Mr. Ford has been a great hunter, having killed eight deer in one day, and three or four often, and sometimes five. He has killed the highest number spoken of above in half a day. He shot forty-nine that first fall, from October to a little after New Year's. The skins and the hams he would sell, the rest of the carcass would, for the most part, be left in the woods.

Mr. Ford says there was one store and quite a good one, and nothing else, at the town of Rockingham, on the Mississinewa, located on Section 17, Town 21, Range 13, five miles west of Ridgeville, and recorded March 26, 1836. It seems that the town died, for Mr. Ford is the first person who appears to have known that such a town was ever there. He says that the store continued about eighteen months, but that the town was never built and that there was never anything besides. Mr. Ford has but a slender appreciation of the glory of Lewallyn's Mill, at Ridgeville, since he says that it was a little old "corn-cracker not much larger than a hog pen." Probably it was not very sightly beside the modern palaces at which farmers get their wheat changed to superfine flour of the most superior brand. However, many a worthy family were profoundly thankful for the existence of that poor little mill, and lived bounteously on the corn meal made by running the corn through its home-made mill-stones. Mr. Ford enjoys a sprightly old age, having borne cheerfully and well the hardships and privations of his wilderness hunter life.

Nathan Godwin was born in Delaware in 1780. He married Elizabeth West in 1810; she was born in 1784. They had seven children, all of whom are living, and all are married and have families, some of them large ones. Mr. Godwin has had forty-six grandchildren and eighty great-grandchildren. He emigrated from Delaware to Virginia, thence to Pennsylvania, thence to Highland County, Ohio, and from there to Green Township, Randolph County, Ind., in 1837. He entered 520 acres of land, and bought eighty acres more, making in all 600 acres. He was a farmer, a Methodist and a Republican. He lived to be very old, dying in 1875, at the great age of ninety-five years eight months and eight days. His body was interred at Fairview Cemetery, as was also his wife, who died many years before her husband, July 24, 1843, aged fifty-eight years nine months and three days.

Thomas Godwin is the youngest son of Nathan Godwin. He was born in 1800, married Nancy Ann Ewing, in 1845, has had ten children, six of whom are living, and three are married. He lives in the town of Fairview and keeps a hotel there, being also a farmer, owning 192 acres of land. He is a Methodist and a Republican. He is an active and respected member of the community, and a leading and influential citizen.

Jonathan Green was born in East Tennessee in 1792. He emigrated to Randolph County in 1832, living a year at Sampletown, and settling in Green Township in 1833. He entered three "forties" and followed the vocation of farming till his death, in 1859, at the age of sixty-seven. He was the first Justice of the Peace in Green Township, and held the office sixteen years. He married Sarah Brown in East Tennessee and they had eleven children, eight of whom grew up, seven were married and six are living now. When he came Alexander Garringer and Martin Boots were the only persons residing in the township, three miles down the river opposite Fairview. He came in March, cleared six acres and planted it in corn, having raised a crop in 1832 on White River, and, during the summer of 1834, bought a little corn and never bought another bushel of corn as long as he lived. Only one house was to be found on the way to White River, Peter Hester's. William Addington lived at Ridgeville. James Addington came on the Mississinewa after awhile. He came near being broken up at one time. The clerk of a mercantile firm at Rockingham (a town on the Mississinewa below Ridgeville, long years ago extinct) left some notes belonging to the firm with him, as Magistrate, to be collected, with orders to pay the money to certain creditors of the firm. He did so, but the firm denied his authority, and sued him for the money. The clerk had absconded, and as he could not prove his authority for the payments he had made, the rascally firm got judgment against him, and he had to refund to them $300 or $400, which in those times was a great sum. A large company of relatives came together from Tennessee, the Brown connection, comprising some nine families, and all settled on the Mississinewa. They stopped a year on White River and raised a crop, entered their land, went over to the Mississinewa and built shanties, and, in March, 1833, moved to their new homes, and settled down to live in good earnest. They had built up the "pens" to the chimneys, with no jambs, nor backwalls, nor chimney tops, and fixed those things afterward.

The wolves were thick around. One day the dogs barked, and father, looking out, saw two wolves near at hand. A loaded gun lay on the hooks just behind him, within easy reach, but, forgetting the gun, he slapped his hands and halloed at them and the villains scampered off. The hogs had to be penned up so tight that the wolves could not get at them.

Julian Green, son of Jonathan Green, was born in East Tennessee in 1828, coming with his father to Randolph in 1832, and his home has been here ever since. He is a farmer and has seven children, residing at present in Franklin Township.

Thomas Hubbard was born in Delaware in 1804, came to Ross County, Ohio, in 1807, to Fayette County, Ind., in 1811, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1837. He married Eleanor Rogers, born in 1807, in 1827, and they have had twelve children; nine of them are living and all the nine are married. Four live in Randolph County, one in Jay County, two in Iowa and two in California. Mr. Hubbard and his wife, though well advanced in years, enjoy good health and strength and seem happy in their old age. They live near Fairview on the land which he purchased when they came to the county forty-four years ago, and since their wedding day fifty-four years have elapsed into eternity, and should they be spared to see a few more annual suns complete their round, they will celebrate with thankful hearts, their "diamond wedding," which few, indeed, have ever beheld this side the opening gates of the "New Jerusalem."

William May, Emmettsville, was born in 1820, in Pennsylvania; came to Columbiana County, Ohio, in 1833, to Coshocton, Ohio, in 1838, to Union County, Ind., in 1840, Ripley County, Ind., in 1842, to Wayne County, Ind., in 1844, to Delaware County, Ind., in 1853, and to Green Township, Randolph County, Ind., in 1857. He has been twice married, the first time, in 1843, and the second time in 1848. He has had eleven children, ten of whom are now living. He is a farmer, a member of the United Brethren Church and a Republican.

Antony W. McKinney was born in Pennsylvania. He came to Green Township, Randolph County, in 1837. He has had eleven children, eight still alive, and seven are married. His children reside in Randolph, Jay and Delaware Counties and in Nebraska. His father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, who died at Fairview, aged ninety years. Mr. McKinney also died at Fairview, Ind., an old man. He was a farmer and a Democrat, and had been a soldier in the war of 1812. It is a noteworthy fact that when he arrived in Randolph County, he had just 60 cents and no more. As poor as he was, his son, John W. McKinney, now owns some 1,500 acres of land and supports hundreds of cattle for market in the larger towns and more distant cities. The wealth that they possess has every cent been acquired since that important day when the elder McKinney became a denizen of Randolph. His father must have felt an admiration for the daring soldier who captured Stony Point at midnight in the old Revolutionary war, since he named his son after the gallant hero, Anthony Wayne, "Mad Anthony," whom the Indian chief called the "General who never slept," who, by his valor and prowess, retrieved the shameful disasters and defeats of the past campaigns, and taught the haughty savages submission to the power of the whites.

John B. McKinney, son of Antony W. McKinney, resides across the Mississinewa River, south from Fairview. He owns 1,400 acres or more of land, and is a great stock dealer and raiser, owning hundreds of cattle. He has a wife and three children, and the finest residence in Green Township, and there are few, if any, equal to it (outside the cities) in Randolph County. He is an energetic and successful business man, an active Democrat in politics and a prominent citizen.

James McProud was born in Warren County, Ohio, in 1801, came to Randolph County in 1827, and moved here in 1829. He married Hannah Roberts in Ohio before he was of age. They have had nine children, all of whom became grown and were married, and seven are living still. He has spent his life as a farmer, now owning 160 acres, but having been possessed at one period of a whole section. He is a Methodist, the first Methodist preaching in the township having taken place at his house. In politics, he was a Democrat, voting for "Old Hickory." Becoming afterward a Whig, in course of time he joined the Republican party, to which he still adheres. Though over eighty years old, he is still hale and sprightly and vigorous. He is fond of recounting the old-time exploits and adventures, of which he has experienced his full share. The "circuit rider" at the "first preaching" was George Bowers, and his "circuit" comprised a horseback journey through a forest and flood of 250 miles. His aged wife, the sharer of the hardships of his pioneer life, died January 11, 1881, aged seventy-four years, four months and eleven days, of paralysis. She had been a member of the Methodist Church more than sixty years, and married not quite as long. Her family has consisted of nine children, six boys and three girls, all grown, married and settled in life, and seven living at the present time. Her funeral was attended by a large concourse of friends and neighbors, the services being conducted by Rev. John A. Moorman, of Farmland, Ind., and her remains being laid in Hopewell Cemetery.

Israel Wirt was born in 1796, and settled in Green Township very early, entering land in 1836, and moving in 1837. He was one of the proprietors of the little town of Steubenville, which was laid out in 1839, but has been extinct for more than twenty years. He was a farmer and business man, keeping a store also at Steubenville for several years. He owned a considerable body of land near that place, and built a comfortable reidence there. He had a family of several children, and died at the age of eighty-four years, in August, 1880, leaving to his heirs a considerable fortune.

PHILIP BARGER, farmer, P. O. Fairview, was born in Fayette County, Ohio, April 26, 1815. His father, Philip Barger, Sr., was born in Montgomery County, Va., and moved to Fayette County, Ohio, in 1804. His mother, whose maiden name was Polly Shroyer, was also a native of Montgomery County, Va. She died in Fayette County, Ohio, in 1819, and her husband died about the year 1822. Philip Barger, Sr., served in the war of 1812. The subject of this sketch came to Randolph County, Ind., at an early day, and entered a tract of government land, which he cleared and improved. On the 4th of October, 1838, he was married to Elizabeth Strong, daughter of Reuben Strong, of Delaware County, Ind. Her father was born in Massachusetts, and her mother, whose maiden name was Barbara Boots, was born in Virginia. Mrs. Barger died in August, 1877, in her fifty-fifth year. She bore her husband seven children, three of whom—Lusetta, Lewis and Napoleon B., now survive. John W., Henry C., Miriam and an infant are deceased. Mr. Barger has 247 acres of fine land in Sections 3 and 4, and is engaged at the occupation of farming. He is a member of the M. E. Church, and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In politics, he is a Republican.

SAMUEL CAYLOR, farmer, P. O. Emmettsville, was born in Ross County, Ohio, November 26, 1811. His parents, Jacob and Catnarine (Atcher) Caylor, were natives of Virginia, the former born December 25, 1777, and the latter April 6, 1782. They located in Fayette County, Ohio, in 1819, where they remained until death. Their parents came from Germany. The subject of this sketch was married, January 16, 1834, to Annie Life, in Fayette County, Ohio, and soon after removed to Delaware County, Ind. In 1837, he removed to Randolph County, locating upon a tract of Government land, which he had entered a short time previously, consisting of 120 acres. Shortly afterward he went to Ross County, Ohio, with an old mare and a mule colt, and sold them for $40. Adding $10 to this amount, he purchased an additional forty acres of land, and about a year later he purchased forty acres more with $50 received from his father. His land was all heavily timbered, and was cleared by his own labor. He continued to enlarge the boundaries of his farm until his possessions aggregated 1,800 acres. Of this amount, nearly 500 acres have been given by him to various members of his family. He had two children by the first wife, one of whom died in infancy, and the other, Christopher, in 1837. On the 4th of July, 1838, he married Elizabeth Boots, a native of Fayette County, Ohio. They are the parents of seven children—Mary, Martin, Jacob, Martha, John, Melissa and Sarah.

SILAS S. CLARK, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in the fort at Fort Wayne, Ind., March 2, 1830. His father, Mahlon Clark, was born in Randolph County, N. C., in 1795. His mother, whose maiden name was Margaret Cartwright, was a native of Guilford County, N. C. She was a second cousin of Rev. Peter Cartwright, the famous pioneer Methodist circuit preacher. His father, Mahlon Clark, located in Randolph County, Ind., in 1818, but soon went to Fort Wayne, where he embarked in trading with the Indians. Several years later he returned to Randolph County, Ind. The subject of this sketch was married, September 1, 1853, to Emily J. Moore, a native of Randolph County, Ind. Her father, Elmos Moore, was born in Randolph County, N. C., and her mother, whose maiden name was Ailey Middleton, was a native of the same county. Mr. Clark and wife are the parents of six children—Martha A., John C., Emma Z., Sarah L., James O. and Mary E., one of whom, Mary E., is deceased. During the late war, Mr. Clark was a soldier in the Union army. He enlisted in the Ninth Indiana Regiment on the 6th of October, 1864, and served until the close of the war. He was in the battles of Pulaski, Franklin and Columbia, Tenn., after which he fell ill, and has never since regained his former health. During the earlier years of his life he was engaged at the shoemaker's trade, but, after the war, adopted farming, which he has followed ever since. He has forty acres in Green Township. He was appointed Justice of the Peace, and, after serving three years, was elected for a term of four years. In politics, he is a Republican. Himself and wife are members of the Christian Church.

JOHN C. CLARK, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in Randolph County, Ind., in 1856. His father, S. S. Clark, was born within the old fort at Fort Wayne, Ind., March 2, 1830. His mother, whose maiden name was Emily J. Moore, was born in Randolph County, Ind. His father served in the Ninth Indiana Regiment United States Volunteers, during the war of the rebellion. On the 5th of May, 1880, Mr. Clark was married to Miss Sarah E. Gantz, whose parents were both natives of Randolph County, Ind. MILTON MERANDA, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in Clark County, Ohio, December 22, 1840. His father, Robert L. Meranda, was born in Bourbon County, Ky., October 9, 1809, but was reared and educated in Clark County, Ohio. His mother's maiden name was Mercer C. Davis. She was born near Yellow Springs, Ohio, in 1814. Both came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1849, locating in Franklin Township, where they remained until death. Milton, the subject of this biography, enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Indiana Regiment for the three months' service early in the late war, and re-enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, for one year. He participated in the battles at Nashville, Wise's Ford and elsewhere. He was married, on the 1st of October, 1865, to Matilda A. Faust, daughter of Christian Faust, who was born in Knox County, Tenn. Mr. Meranda and wife are the parents of six children, viz., William F., Rosanna, James I., Lillian, Peter L. and Doralee. He was engaged in farming during the greater part of his life, but for the past twelve years he has been engaged in milling pursuits, having an interest in a good saw-mill at Shedville. In politics, he is a Democrat. Both himself and wife are members of the Christian Church.

LUTHER L. MOORMAN, farmer, P. O. Ridgeville, was born March 14, 1844, in White River Township, Randolph Co., Ind., and has been a resident of this county ever since. His father, John A. Moorman, was born in North Carolina. His mother's maiden name was Nancy Hiatt. At the outbreak of the rebellion in 1861, the subject of this sketch (then a mere boy) enlisted in Company C, Nineteenth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He enlisted on the 6th of July, 1861, for three years, but soon after entering the field his health failed, and he was honorably discharged on the 16th of the following December. Regaining his health, in the spring of 1862 he assisted in recruiting a company for the Fifty-fifth Indiana Regiment, and was mustered in as First Duty Sergeant of that company, which was known as Company F. He was tendered a Lieutenancy in the Fifty-fourth Regiment, but the precarious state of his health would not permit him to accept the office. On the 10th of November, 1863, he was married to Amanda McCracken. Her father, Robert McCracken, was born in Fayette County, Penn., and her mother, Sarah Highambotham, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio. Mr. Moorman was elected Justice of the Peace, and is now serving his second term as Trustee of Green Township. Mr. Moorman is a member of the M. P. Church, and his wife is a member of the U. B. Church.

CLARK REED is a citizen of Green Township, and is an enterprising farmer. He was always very zealous for the promotion of public schools in his school district, and for the education of his children. He was born in Greene County, Ohio, October 17, 1828, and resided there till February, 1857, when he moved to this county. He was educated in the public schools of the city of "Oldtown," in Greene County, Ohio. This was originally an old Indian town. The public schools had in those days already advanced considerably. Mr. Clark Reed was a son of Abner Reed, and his mother's maiden name was Cynthia Adams. Mr. Abner Reed was born in Northbridge, Worcester Co., Mass., September 11, 1783. His father was a soldier of the Revolution, and his mother was a daughter of Capt. John Brown, a distinguished soldier of the English and French war, and for many years a member of the General Court of Massachusetts, and who, with nine sons, fought for the new Union in Revolution. The elder Mr. Reed came West to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1815, and, in company with his brother Ezra, his wife's brother Amasa Adams, and Thomas Watson, engaged in the cloak business. In about one year afterward, he returned to his native State, and on the 8th day of May, 1816, he married Cynthia Adams at Worcester, Mass. In two weeks afterward, the young couple started to Greene County, Ohio, and, after being six weeks on the road, arrived there in June. The three former partners then bought a tract of land together, which afterward became the sole property of Mr. Abner Reed, where he resided till he died. Mr. Clark Reed was married, October 24, 1852, to Sarah A. Brotherton. She was a daughter of John Brotherton, of Delaware County, Ind. Five years after this marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Reed emigrated West, and located in Green Township, Randolph County, where they have resided ever since. They have cleared and made the farm they now occupy, and are familiar with pioneer life. This union has been honored with five accessions, viz.: John, Walter, Abner, Adolphus, Emma and Mattie. Adolphus died September 10, 1861; John was married, September 17, 1879, to Lydia Lord, daughter of J. H. Lord. They have three children, namely, Orvil, Zulu and Clark. Abner was married, October 9, 1879, to Sarah Holly. They have one child. The younger Mr. Reeds are all farmers. They have the attributes of the forefathers' energy and enterprise, integrity and prosperity.

CYRUS A. REED.

This gentleman was the descendant of an old New England family. His father, Abner Reed, was born in Massachusetts in 1783, and afterward removed to Greene County, Ohio, where Abner Reed was united in marriage with Miss Cynthia Adams, who was also a native of Massachusetts, and came with her parents to Greene County, when seven years old. Six children were the fruits of this union, of whom Cyrus, the subject of this sketch, was fourth. He was born on the 24th of April, 1824, in Greene County, Ohio, where he grew to manhood, working on his father's farm and acquiring proficiency in the science of farming, which, in later years, he adopted as his vocation, amassing thereby a comfortable fortune. On the 26th of September, 1850, he was united in marriage with Miss Sarah H. C. Lawrence, and very soon afterward, with his young wife, left home and friends to locate in the wilderness of Indiana, and bear his part in the development of Randolph County.

He located upon a tract of 420 acres of land that had been previously purchased of the Government by his father. Upon this tract no improvements existed; it was covered with a heavy growth of timber, and he saw before him years of hard work. But he was not a man to quail before such a prospect. He was struggling for a home, and the interest of his loved ones, and his desire to provide well for them nerved his arm and animated him in all his protracted struggle with the forest and the hardships incident to pioneer life. The future years brought a rich reward for his industry, and a fine farm was developed by him from the forest in which he first settled, and a beautiful home took the place of the log cabin, in which he and his devoted wife entered upon their new life in the wilderness. During their struggle in the forest, and while their fortunes were changing little by little for the better, their little home was made more cheerful and happy by the presence of children, who came to bless their wedded life. Mary E. was the eldest, then came Cynthia A., Alice J., Horace G., Emma F., Annie E. and William L., respectively.

Mr. Reed acquired a good common-school education in youth, and builded upon this by observation and experience in later years, gaining a good store of general information. His success as a farmer is largely due to the enthusiasm which he threw into his work, and the exclusiveness with which he confined his attention to that pursuit, always avoiding speculation and uncertain enterprises. In his associations with his fellow-men, he was frank, sincere and manly; always actuated by a high sense of honor and right, and too noble to take a mean advantage of them under any circumstances. He built up a reputation for honesty and integrity that was never assailed, and found his way into the hearts and affections of all with whom he had dealings. On the 21st of March, 1879, he died at the home he had made in the woods—the home that still bears so many evidences of his enterprise and taste. His death was an irreparable loss to his loving family, and a blow to the community in which he resided. He was a public-spirited man, and took an active part in the public improvements of his township and the county at large. He was prominent as an Odd Fellow, and had filled all the offices of the subordinate lodge, and at the time of his demise was District Deputy Grand Patriarch of the Encampment. In an obituary notice published by his brethren in the lodge, one who knew him said: "As a husband and father few, if any, have ever been more kind and affectionate. He was truly an example of an amiable and confiding, mild and gentle disposition toward his family and friends, of whom he had many." Mr. Reed was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which his family are also members.

The homestead is occupied by his wife, an estimable lady, together with her children, Emma and her husband, and Annie E. and William L. Mrs. Reed is the daughter of John B. Lawrence, who was born in the State of New York, in 1791, and married Amelia Bickers, who was born in 1800, in the State of Maryland. They were married on the 8th of February, 1816, in Greene County, Ohio. They had a family of eleven children, five of whom are now living. Sarah H. C. grew to maturity in Greene County, and at the age of twenty-four years was married to Mr. Reed. To a common-school education she adds the accomplishments of a bright intellect, and the virtues of a noble Christian lady, and is a favorite with all who know her. Of their children only Annie and William now remain unmarried. Mary E., the eldest daughter, is deceased; Cynthia is married to J. C. Devoss; Alice J. to William D. Campbell; Horace G. to Eliza J. Woolpert, and Emma T. to T. J. Leavell.

GEORGE SITES, farmer, P. O. Fairview, was born in Hardy County, Va., December 10, 1804. He is the son of Frederick and Mary (Bargdoll) Sites, both natives of Virginia. His grandfather, Nicodemus Bargdoll, served in the Revolutionary war. Mr. Sites settled in Greene County, Ohio, in 1832, and came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1837, locating in Green Township. He was married, June 5, 1832, to Susanna Ketteman, a native of Virginia. They have had eleven children, six of whom are now living, viz.: Annie M. E., Mary S., Rhoda, Lydia A., Sylvester D. and Isaac A. Mrs. Sites is the daughter of Jacob and Annie M. Ketteman. Mr. Sites is a successful farmer, and has 240 acres of fine land in Section 15. One of his sons is a minister, and all his family are members of the German Reformed Church.

ASAPH B. WEBB, was born in Greene County, Ohio, November 4, 1811. His father was Samuel Barrack Webb. He was born in one of the Eastern Colonies in 1758, and died in Ohio, in 1845, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years. His mother's maiden name was Mary Bull. She was born in 1775, and died in 1847, at the age of seventy-two years. His father was born during the French and Indian war, while the French and English nations were contending in a fierce struggle for supremacy upon the Western Continent, and there is a tradition to the effect that the father of Samuel B. Webb, or the great-grandfather of the present generation of Webbs, served in that war. Samuel B. Webb left his home before he was seventeen years old to enter the Revolutionary army. He served through the war, and received an honorable discharge. He took part in some of the principal battles of the Revolution; participated in the siege of Yorktown, and witnessed the surrender of Cornwallis. He served again in the war of 1812. He belonged to the Army of the Center, and was with Gen. Pike, at Toronto, when the British magazine exploded, resulting in the death of that brave officer. He was at the storming of Fort George, and accompanied the army on its second invasion of Canada. At the close of the war he was honorably discharged. Asaph B. Webb was reared in his native county in Ohio. He received a good education, mainly by his own unaided exertions, and by the light of the hickory bark torch. Many a night did he study until near midnight, lying flat upon his back, with his head toward the fire, holding his slate and arithmetic so the torch-light could fall upon them, and shielding his head from the heat of the fire by a board. Thus did he become one of the best mathematicians of the common schools. He removed to Jay County, Ind., in 1849, and to Emmettsville, Randolph County, in 1851. He was a prominent country school teacher until near the meridian of life, and was also engaged in mercantile and agricultural pursuits. He served three terms as Justice of the Peace, and one term as Trustee of Green Township. He married his first wife, Margaret Rook, August 20, 1837. Her parents were Samuel and Eleanor Rook. By the first marriage, Mr. Webb and wife had seven children—three sons and four daughters. Mary Eleanor was born May 26, 1838. She married William Williamson, and now resides at Chester, Wayne Co., Ind. Samuel Harrison was born February 28, 1840. In 1861, he enlisted in Company G, Eighth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, three months' service, but before his term had expired he became a veteran by re-enlisting in the three years' service. While in the three months' service, he took part in the battle of Rich Mountain and minor engagements. He was afterward with Gen. Curtis during his campaign in Missouri and Arkansas, and was wounded at the battle of Pea Ridge, Ark. He was with Gen. Grant during his Mississippi campaign, and participated in the battle and siege of Jackson, the battles of Port Gibson, Champion Hills and Black River Bridge, and the siege of Vicksburg. At Vicksburg he distinguished himself in the terrible assault made upon the fortifications. At one time he seized the old flag when it was falling from the nerveless grasp of its third bearer, and carried it at the head of the column to the very walls of the fort. He was with Gen. Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley, during the campaign that resulted in the disorganization of Early's army. But he sacrificed his life on his country's altar in the final struggle at Cedar Creek. He lived long enough to know that the victory had been gained by the Union arms. He died October 22, 1864, aged twenty-four years seven months and twenty-four days. Thomas J. was born June 3, 1843. In 1862, he enlisted in the Sixty-ninth Indiana Infantry, and fell in his first battle, Richmond, Ky., August 29, 1862, aged nineteen years two months and twenty-six days. Malinda N. was born January 6, 1845; Isabella was born November 14, 1846, and died August 16, 1847. William W. was born July 23, 1848, and died July 23, 1849; Margaret, wife of Mr. Webb, died May 18, 1849, in the thirty-fourth year of her age. On the 1st of January, 1850, Mr. Webb was married to Phebe R. Kelley. She was born in Southern Ohio October 29, 1819. She is the daughter of Jason and Phebe R. Havens. Her mother's maiden name was Harris. The children by the second marriage are as follows: Lycurgus H., born November 19, 1850, died August 27, 1862; A. Benton, born March 17, 1852, a school teacher by profession. He is at present located at Washington, Wayne Co., Ind. He married Lucy L. Conn, March 23, 1882; Prudence was born November 14, 1854, and died October 3, 1855; Laura R. was born March 22, 1856. She married John V. Thornburg, and now resides near the old home. Lucetta D. was born November 3, 1857, she married Henry Bickner and resides at Ridgeville; Lola was born September 29, 1860. She is a successful school teacher and is at present located at Emmettsville. She was married to Frank R. Thornburg, October 30, 1881. Mr. Webb, the subject of this memoir, died December 20, 1872, aged sixty-one years. His widow married Jacob Rook, January 19 1880.

MONROE TOWNSHIP.

For years the settlements seemed to find White River an impassable barrier. For half a generation after settlers had begun to pour into the southern half of the White River Valley, scarce a solitary pioneer had ventured across the stream into that uncouth wilderness. In fact the first entry within the bounds of Monroe Township was not made until seventeen years had passed away after the first entry in the valley of White River. The entries, even at that time, throughout that region, were few and scant enough, as given below:

John Rody, S. E. S. E. 17, 20, 12, 40, April 10, 1833; Jeremiah B. Reed, N. E. S. E. 34, 21, 12, 40, October 21, 1833; Philip Baughn, W. S. E. 26, 21, 12, 80, June 10, 1834; Morgan Mills, S. E. S. E. 8, 20, 12, 40, October 2, 1834; Bernard Kerr, W. N. W. 35, 21, 12, 80, August 5, 1834; Joseph Smith, N. W. S. W. 2, 20, 12, 40, January 22, 1835; Henry Rash, N. E. S. E. 17, 20, 12, 40, March 23, 1835; Abraham Garst, S. E. 14, 20, 12, 80, June 17, 1835. Monroe was mostly taken between 1835 and 1838 inclusive, chiefly during the years 1836 and 1837. Two entries, forty acres each (as above), were made in the 1833, three in 1834 and three in 1835 to June 17. Eight entries, embracing 440 acres—five forties and three eighties—comprise all the entries up to June 17, 1835, throughout the entire extent of Monroe Township. It may be interesting to know where these eight pioneer entries were: John Rody, one mile south of Morristown, forty acres; Jeremiah B. Reed, on West Branch of Elkhorn, five miles northwest of Farmland, forty acres; Philip Baughn, on same branch of Elkhorn, one and a half miles below Reed's, eighty acres; Morgan Mills, one-half mile north of Morristown, forty acres; Bernard Kerr, on Elkhorn, right below Reed's, eighty acres; Joseph Smith, at the Methodist Episcopal Church, on West Branch of Elkhorn, above Reed's, forty acres; Henry Rash, just south of Morristown, forty acres; Abraham Garst, one mile southwest of Farmland, and one and a half miles northeast of the mouth of Cabin Creek, eighty acres. Three of them were near Morristown—one north and two south of it. Four were above the West Branch of Elkhorn to its junction with the East Branch. One was southwest of Farmland. About that time it would seem that several had come in, perhaps selecting their claims and settling previous to making entries of their land. From one who came in in 1835, we obtain the following statement of settlers living in the region in 1835: Jeremiah B. Reed, near Rehoboth Meeting-House; James Howry, north of Rehoboth; Mr. Carr, north of Rehoboth, on the Isaac Thornburg place; Samuel Smith, on the Adams farm, north of Rehoboth; Philip Booker, across from Abram Hammer's; Isaac Garringer, on the State road, north and south; Jonathan Flood, in 1836, near Hopewell Church, a Protestant Methodist minister; John F. Wood, William Wood, in northwest corner of township; Moses Marks, north of Parker; John Baughn, in the edge of Delaware County, who was married twice, and has had twenty-six children—seventeen by his first wife and nine by the second—and is still living, seventy-three years old; John B. Mills, north of Shiloh, date not known; Andrew Cortner, west of Shiloh, date not given. Other settlers on Elkhorn, northwest of Farmland were: Messrs. Hammer, Booker, Adams, Garringer, McCarney, Peter Hester, etc., etc. Eli Hiatt came in and settled one-half mile south of Farmland in 1836. Isaac Garringer "planted his stakes" on Elkhorn, three miles northwest of Farmland, about the same time. Peter Hester came on Bush Creek in 1830, perhaps the first on Bush Creek. Mr. Bowers bought out Mr. Hester soon after. On Elkhorn, in 1836 (or thereabout), were Jonathan Reeples, Jeremiah Reed, Abraham Hammer, Joseph Smith (where Harrison Morris now lives), Mr. Carr (where Isaac Thornburg now resides). Philip Booker came on Bush Creek about the same time that Peter Hester did. Henry Adams settled near Abraham Hammer's in 1835. Alfred McCarney, one and a half miles north of Hammer's, 1835; Jacob Wright, one-half mile south, 1835; Jacob Windermaker, one-half mile north of Rehoboth. John Craig came in 1845; resides now at Rehoboth. Joseph Howrey, east of Rehoboth; Joseph Smith, an old man, south of Rehoboth; James Wood, Mr. Sawyer and William Wood, northwest part of the township; Peter Hester, William Vineyard, William Paxson, Henry Saley, Mr. Overhulser, William Gray and Eli Jarnagin (the last three in Green Township). In fact, Green Township was settled before Monroe, 640 acres being settled in 1832, in six entries; thirteen entries made in 1833, comprising 920 acres; seven entries made in 1834, including 600 acres; and eight entries in 1835, covering some 400 acres—or thirty-four entries in all, with about 2,560 acres; or, in both townships, forty-two entries, with 3,000 acres. And of the whole number, only five contained 160 acres, and they were all in Green Township; twenty-two were forty acres each, and fifteen were eighty acres each.

Monroe Township lies between White and Mississinewa Rivers, except a slight fraction of the extreme southeast corner, which is south of White River. Most of the township slopes toward the Mississinewa, upon the head-waters of Elkhorn, Bush and Campbell Creeks, affluents of that river. Bush Creek is in the northeast, Elkhorn in the north and Campbell in the northwest. The township has Green Township on the north, Franklin and White River on the east, White River and Stony Creek on the south, and Delaware County on the west. It lies in Townships 20 and 21 north, Ranges 12 and 13 east, with sections as given below:

Township 20, Range 12—Sections (whole or part) 1 to 5, 8 to 17 inclusive.

Township 21, Range 12—Sections (whole or part) 25 to 29, 32 to 36.

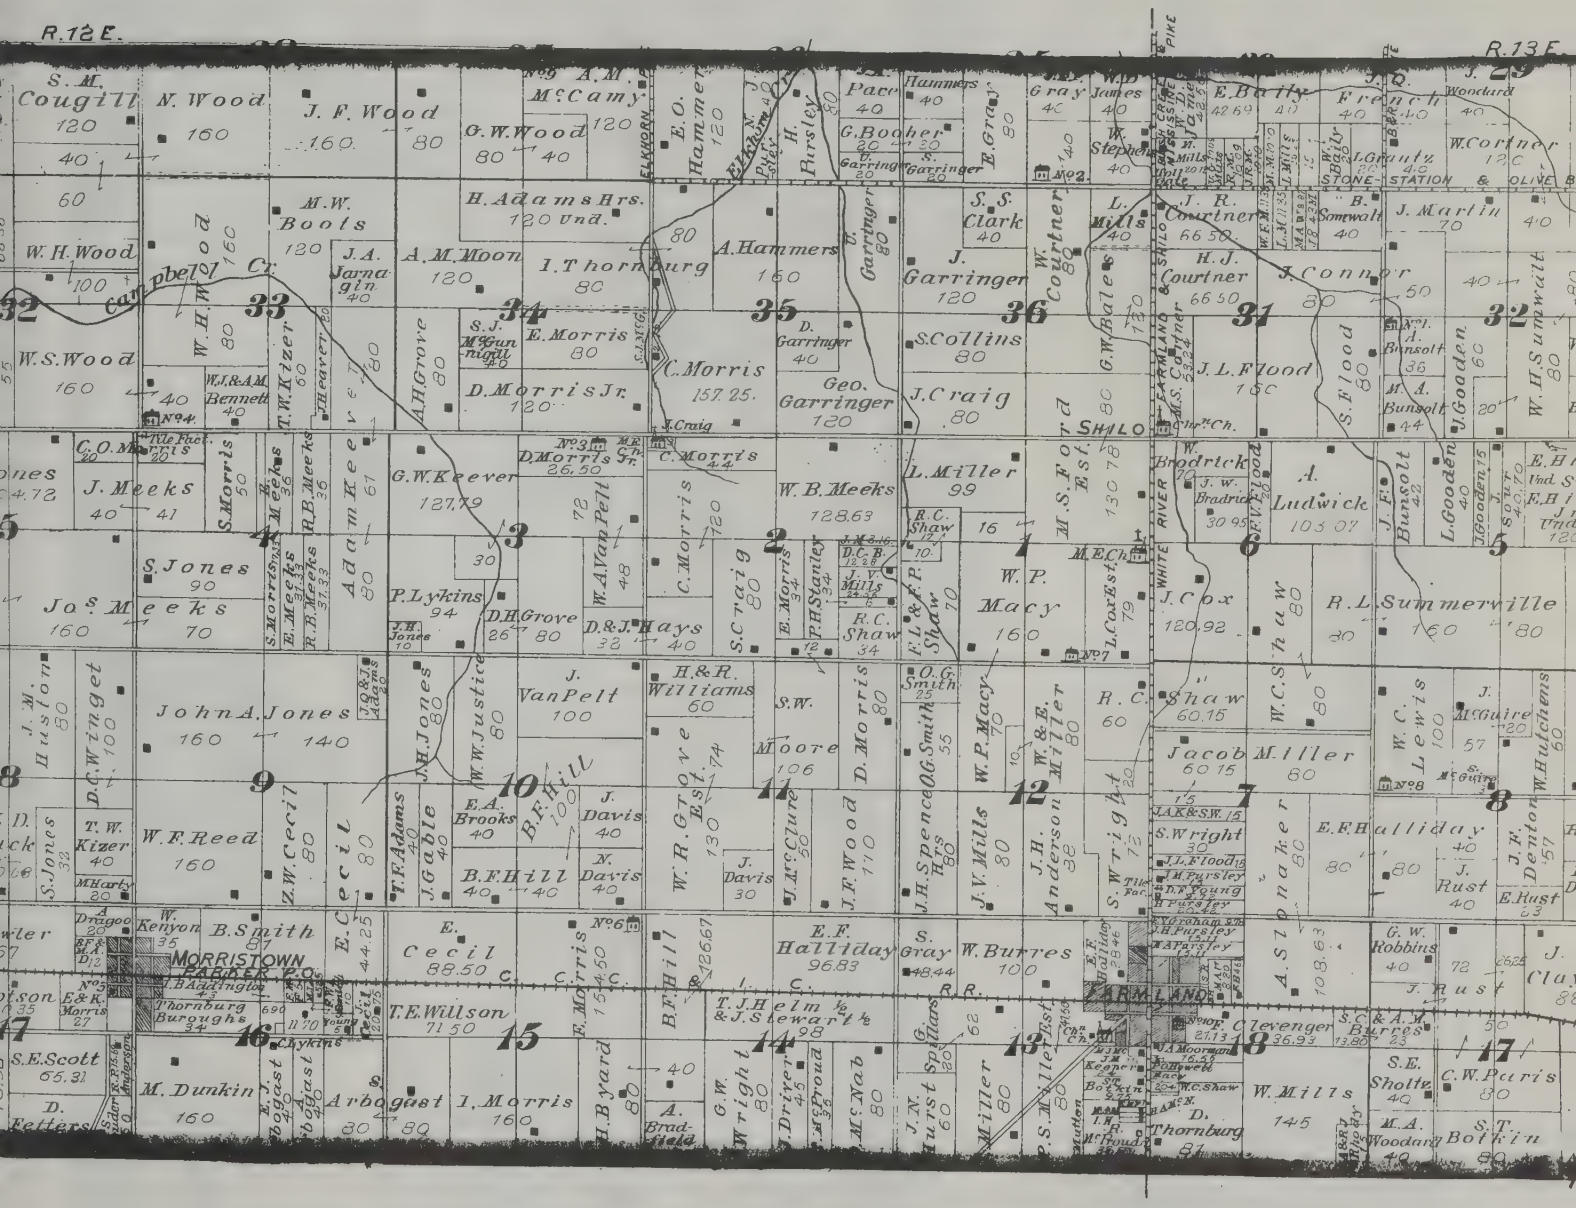
Township 20, Range 13—Sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 17, 18.

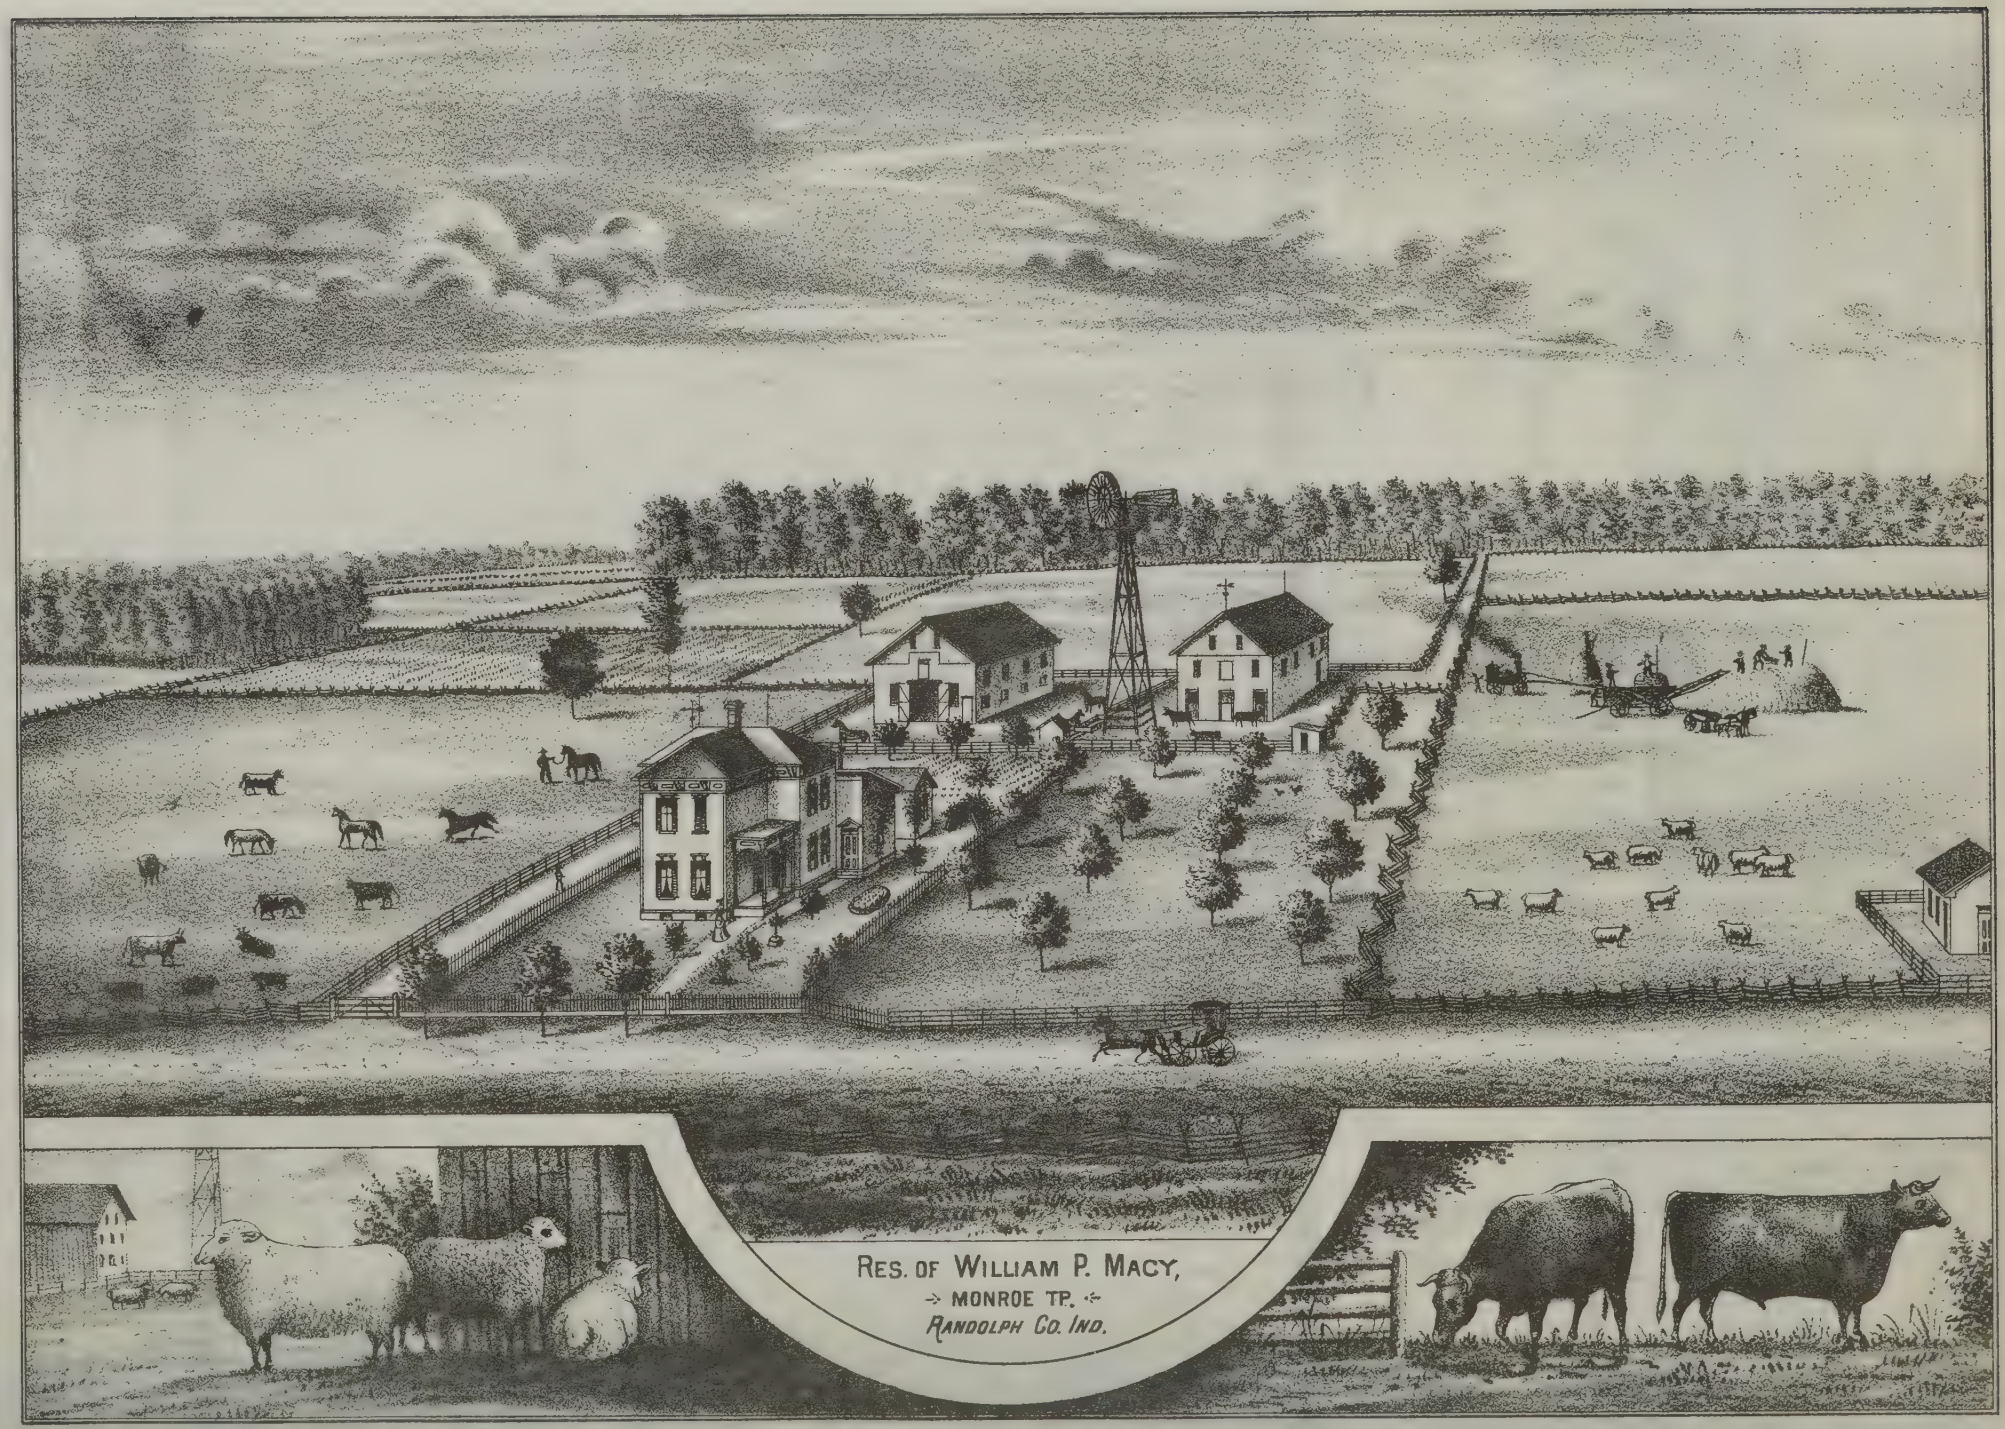
Township 21, Range 13—Sections (whole or part) 29, 30, 31, 32.

Monroe contains twenty-four sections and eleven parts of sections, being four and a half miles from north to south, and six and five-eighths miles east and west, embracing about 19,000 acres. The greater part lies in the Mississinewa Valley, only one mile wide at the southern part, draining to White River, and even that has scarcely any streams—only Big Run on the east side of the township, and Phillips' Run in the extreme west, being large enough to find a place on the county map.

The Mississinewa Valley seems well occupied by streams. Campbell Creek, Mud Creek, Bush Creek, Elkhorn (with several branches) and some others draining and watering the northern part of the township.

MAP OF MONROE TOWNSHIP





RES. OF WILLIAM P. MACY,
MONROE TP.
RANDOLPH CO. IND.

The township, like much of the county, is level, or moderately rolling, comprising a fine body of land, which, though late in settlement from difficulty of access, has richly rewarded its hardy and enterprising settlers. The surface was originally covered with a heavy growth of timber of the kinds common in the region, much of which still remains, to furnish, in these latter days of increased demand and improved market facilities, a rich source of wealth to the present owners of the farms located in the township. The experience of the early settlers has been akin to that of those who braved the hardships and the perils of the earlier settled portions of the county, with the exception, in fact, that no Indians were found roaming the wilds at this later period. The native occupants had left the region long years before, and only wild animals remained in the tangled woods to give activity and sustenance, and pleasure and sport as well, to the wide-awake men and boys who first penetrated that backwoods region and made their homes within its bounds. The condition of that country was, indeed, for many years, primitive enough. The soil, in truth, was fertile, and abundant crops rewarded the energetic settlers; but the facilities of transportation were but meager, and the inhabitants had to be contented with what they could themselves produce, and but a scanty supply of "foreign" luxuries.

The "Bee-Line" Railroad, the pioneer road of the region, and almost of the State, has done wonders for this section; and the steady growth of the two towns, Farmland and Morristown, has raised up for the region a good and substantial market for the surplus products of the farm, and furnished the residents with ready means of obtaining all needful supplies of commodities from abroad. Within a few years past, the construction of pikes has been entered upon, and the next ten years will doubtless witness a grand transformation in this respect, by which time it is to be hoped the traditional "dirt road," with its fathomless seas of mud, will have come to be a thing of the past.

As to intellectual and moral improvement, this region was on a par with the rest of the county. Log churches and private cabins furnished the pioneer preachers the opportunity of expounding the words of life to the assemblies of that early day, and the "greased paper" schoolhouses, with spilt-pole benches, puncheon desks and floors, and wide-mouthed, back-wall chimneys, opened their doors to receive the urchins from the rude cabins of "auld lang syne," which said urchin, now grown up into active life, are the stirring men and the loving women of the busy, bustling, present day. All over that township, as elsewhere, throughout the county, are now found the neat frame or brick churches, the successors of the log meeting-houses of forty-five and forty years ago, in which the early settlers worshiped the "God of their fathers," not less acceptably, indeed, in their deerskin hunting-shirts and their homespun clothing, and with their bare feet or their moccasins, than do their more stylish, but not more sincere and loving children and grand-children of the modern time.

The first school in the southwest part of Monroe is mentioned in the account of Thomas Wallace. In the northwest part of the township, on Campbell Creek, Jacob Jones came in 1838, three miles north of Parker. At that time, James and William Wood and George Burkett had already settled in the same region, coming in 1836.

The first school in that region was in Delaware County, in 1839, one and a half miles west of Mr. Jones'. The first school in that neighborhood in Randolph was taught by old Mr. Flood, a brother to Rev. Jonathan Flood.

The first meeting-house in the neighborhood was in Delaware County, built in 1841; but there was a log house used for meetings before that, and the first Sabbath school was held in the log house, Jacob Jones being Superintendent then, and also after the new house was built. The society is there still, and the house, too. The church is strong and vigorous, with many members. A large cemetery is in connection with the meeting-house. The first person buried there was an old man, a soldier of 1812, by the name of Lewallyn, in 1841. Amos Meeks came in 1839, and died in 1876.

ENTRIES BY SECTIONS.

Township 20, Range 12—Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, mostly school land for Bloomington University. Section 5, entered 1838–50. Section 9, entered February 18, 1856, by James Harris. Section 17, entered 1850, by Thomas W. Reece.

Township 20, Range 13—Sections 5, 6, school land; Section 7, 1836–41; Sections 8, 18, 1836–37; Section 17, 1833–38.

Township 21, Range 13—Sections 28, 29, 32, in 1836; Sections 25, 26, 27, 33, 34, 36, in 1836–37; Section 30, 1834–37; Sections 29, 31, 1836–37; Section 32, 1836–39.

The entries in Monroe were made between 1833 and 1850 inclusive.

MORRISTOWN, PARKER POST OFFICE.

Location, Sections 16 and 17, 20, 12, in the western part of Monroe Township, near Delaware County line, on the Bee-Line Railroad. William E. Harris, Joseph Lewis, Allen W. Lewis, proprietors. T. C. Puckett, surveyor. Recorded November 15, 1851. Eighty lots. Streets—Franklin, Main, Fulton, north and south; Howard, Railroad, Washington, east and west. Lots eight rods by four rods. Streets four rods wide, except Railroad street, 104 feet, and Fulton street (at the edge of the town) two rods wide.

Morristown (John Jones' Addition)—John Jones, proprietor. Eight lots. Recorded April 2, 1857. Location, upon the Bee Line Railroad, west of Farmland. Distances—Arba, thirty miles; Bloomingsport, twenty-five and a half miles; Lynn, twenty-three and three-fourths miles; Ridgeville, sixteen miles; Farmland, four and a half miles; Fairview, eight miles; Windsor, two and a half miles; Losantsville, twelve miles; Winchester, thirteen miles; Huntsville, fifteen miles; Union City, twenty-two and a half miles; Deerfield, eighteen miles.

Morristown seems to have been laid out some months before Farmland was, November 15, 1851, and Farmland July 28, 1852. Nevertheless, the younger town has outstripped her elder sister.

The first store in Morristown was owned by Andrew Devoss and Milton Harris.

The first smith shop was by Joseph Thornburg.

The first shoemaker was Peter Deal, in 1854, and he works at the trade there yet.

The first cabinet shop was opened by William Fleming in 1854.

The first saw-mill was by W. W. Jones, in 1853 or 1854.

The merchants have been Devoss & Harris, Thomas Aker & Harvey Harris, Thomas Lewis, Brown & Meeks, James Russell, Mr. Lake Andrews, Joshua Rector, Thomas Johnson, Thornburg & Gunkel, Dotson, Devoss, Dotson & Devoss, Daugherty, Daugherty & Scott, Scott, Brown, Dotson, N. C. Simmons, J. H. Byrd, etc.

Blacksmiths—Thornburg, Knapp, Henry Knapp, Errick, Friddle.

Cabinet shops—Fleming, Sutton.

Pump-maker—Thomas Aker.

Drug stores—Edward Reece and Noah Basley, during the war; Chriss & Petty, Baughn & Petty, Petty, Petty & Friddle, Shaw & Williamson, Fertich, Wood & Rynard.

Shoe shops—Messrs. Deal, Gwynn (the latter in 1877).

Wagon repair shop—B. F. Dragoo, set up 1875.

Meat shop—B. F. Dragoo, summer of 1881.

The first physician was Martin Connor, in 1854. The physicians have been Messrs. Connor, Marion, Gench, Orr, Rogers.

Postmasters have been Devoss, Davison, King, Deal, Dotson, Hinchman.

Railroad agents have been Devoss, Davison, Russell, Lake, Rector, Hinchman.

Grain-dealers have been Devoss & Harris, Jacobs, Thornburg, Brotherton, Jacobs & Barger, Lumpkin & Linsay, Dotson, Daugherty, Scott & Meeks, Hinchman & Bowersox.

At one time there were two saw-mills—one for two years, by G. E. Willson. There has been at least one saw-mill all the time.

There has been a grist-mill for several years, operated by various parties—Daugherty & Howard, Howard & Huston, Howard & Brother, A. Shaw & Company. The mill is now run by J. H. Bowersox. The propelling power is steam.

Parker is a small but somewhat energetic place, injured somewhat by being so close to Farmland on the east and Selma on the west. However, it holds a share of the business. There are three religious societies—Methodist, Christian and Friends.

Hotel-keepers have been John Jones, John King, Andrew Knapp, Friddle, Brown, Hinchman.

Martin Phillips keeps a barber shop.

There may be other places of business not here mentioned.

The name of the post office is Parker.

FARMLAND.

Location, Section 13, 20, 12, and Section 18, 20, 13, on Bee-Line Railroad, west of Winchester, one mile north of White River, in Monroe Township. Recorded July 28, 1852. Henry D. Huffman, William Macy, proprietors. One hundred and fifty-two lots. Streets—Mulberry, Main, Plum, north and south: William, Railroad, Henry, east and west.

Peter S. Miller's Addition—Ten lots. Peter S. Miller, proprietor. Recorded October 29, 1870.

Macy & Groom's Addition—David Macy, Robert H. Grooms, proprietors. Grooms, five lots, south; Macy, eight lots, east. Location, south and east of Farmland. Recorded Jan. 24, 1862.

The first store was owned by Jonathan and Aaron Macy, standing where Stanley's store now is. Jonathan Macy is dead, and Aaron Macy resides at Earlham, Iowa.

Wesley Keener built a house and sold it to Miller & Ford, who kept a store in it for many years. Miller is dead, and Ford is in Iowa.

J. Macy & Sons had a tin shop in 1855, which has continued ever since, being now owned by David Macy. Another tin shop was started in 1851, by Ludwic. Jonathan Macy started also a smith shop, hiring hands to run it.

The first hotel was in 1858, by Price Thomas, but it soon ran through.

Jonathan Macy sold his dwelling house for a hotel. The proprietor kept a good house. His wife was a good manager, and he let her control the business, which was indeed a sensible thing.

Macy sold his store to Joel Thornburg, who, for a time, carried on a large business.

Stanley & Robbins took the place next. Stanley bought out Robbins, and is there now.

The first grain-buyers were Miller & Ford and Macy & Sons The latter quit, but Miller & Ford kept on. Stanley Robbins also undertook the business. Before the war, Thornburg & Burris bought grain for three or four years, and quit.

James S. Davis began in about 1871, and continues still.

Jonathan Macy began a hardware store in 1867, continuing four years. He sold out to Shaw & Johnson. In two years, Shaw bought Johnson out, and sold an interest to Wood, and in two years more, Shaw sold his share to Marks, and the establishment is Wood & Marks.

Mr. Barker set up a harness shop about 1870, and has kept on to the present time.

George Watson has owned a grocery in Farmland for twenty years.

The first physician was Dr. Keener, in 1850. Since then have been Pleasant Hunt, Dr. Davis, Dr. Smith, Dr. Rogers, [moved to Morristown]. Dr. Keener is there still.

Mrs. Moore began a millinery store in 1869, which has gradually been enlarged into a general dry goods store.

Business at present may be described as follows:

Stores, two—J. S. Davis, Stanley & Harbour.

Groceries, two—George Watson, extensive, twenty years (James Bates, keeps dry goods also).

Jewelry—Watson keeps it with his grocery business.

Silversmith—Davison.

Smith shops, two—William Willson, Andrew Leverton.

Agricultural implements—Extensive establishment, kept by W. B. Carter.

Livery stable—Kept by Smith.

Mills—One grist-mill was burned, and another has been set up by Stanley & Harbour. Saw-mill, one was owned by J. E. Willson. It has been removed, but there is one half a mile north.

There is no lumber-dealer.

Grain dealers are James S. Davis, for ten years; Stanley & Harbour, began in 1878; Thornburg & Sable, 1880.

Stove store—Grimes, two years.

Hardware—Wood & Marks.

Millinery—Mrs. Moore, also dry goods store.

Harness shop—Barker.

Hotels—Watson House, Taylor House.

Barber shops—"Bob" Fletcher (colored), had a shop for many years; he became dissipated, got into the "calaboose," and "cleared out." Mr. Spillars (white) has had a shop for two years.

Stock-traders—George Robbins, Elias Holliday, both dealers in hogs, cattle, sheep; James Hewitt, etc.

Physicians—[See statement as to doctors].

Attorneys—J. A. Moorman, L. C. Devoss.

Tailor shop—J. Mayer.

Meat market—John Grooms.

Shoe-makers—Ken Mull, John Mull.

Shoe store—J. H. Stinson.

Carpenters—David & J. P. Wasson, Samuel Wright.

Clergymen—John A. Moorman, Methodist Episcopal; Charles Bacon, Methodist Episcopal; Benjamin Morris, Friend; —— Wright, Friend; Samul McNees, Christian.

Undertakers—N. L. Oren, Nathan Gray.

Postmaster—George Watson.

Railroad agent—A. Williams.

Furniture—N. E. Gray.

Dentist—J. J. Pretlow.

Druggists—L. A. Gable, Robbins & Meredith.

Tin shop—David Macy.

Distances—Morristown, four and a half miles; Fairview, ten and four-fifths miles; Ridgeville, twelve miles; Winchester, nine miles; Union City, twenty miles; Spartansburg, twenty-one miles; Lynn, nineteen and a half miles; Windsor, five and four-fifths miles; Huntsville, eleven miles; Bloomingsport, eighteen miles; Losantsville, thirteen and a half miles; Arba, twenty-six miles; Pittsburg, twenty-two miles; Deerfield, fourteen miles.

Farmland was organized as a town in 1867, with five wards, and officers as follows: Trustees, Pleasant Hunt, C. H. Stanley, J. A. Henning, Aaron Shaw, L. W. Jouls; Assessor and Marshal, Lynn Thornburg; Clerk and Treasurer, S. T. Botkin. Ordinances adopted July 9, 1867. Liquor license fixed at from $50 to $100, and shows from $2 to $8, July 15, 1867. Racing in streets was fined from $3 to $10. Tearing down notices, etc., $1 to $3, May 18, 1863. Pitching horseshoes forbidden; penalty, $1 to $5. September, 1869, show license raised to $10.

Since that time, the officers have been as follows:

Trustees—First Ward, Pleasant Hunt, W. S. Robbins, C. S. Moore, S. T. Foster, J. H. B. McNees, D. Jones, S. C. Grimes; Second Ward, C. H. Stanley, S. S. French, H. A. Bond, G. W. Hester, John W. Ralston, J. H. Stinson, M. W. Diggs, J. T. Walling, D. C. Harbour; Third Ward, J. A. Henning, C. H. Stanley, J. C. Bates, W. W. Willson, G. B. Watson, W. B. Huff, Fourth Ward (change made to three wards in 1879), Aaron Shaw, A. McIntyre, Thomas Helm, W. J. Davison; Fifth Ward, L. W. Jones, L. A. Gable, George O. Jobes, J. S. Davis, W. B. Carter, E. T. Spence.

Assessors—Lynn Thornburg, G. B. Watson, H. G. N. Howard, J. W. Macy, M. W. Diggs, W W. Wertz, George Spillars.

Marshals (as Assessors)—Jethro Macy, D. Jones.

Clerks—S. T. Botkin, A. B. Barnett, S. Barnum, E. R. Robbins.

Treasurers (as Clerks) and M. W. Diggs.

Present officers—Trustees, S. C. Grimes, D. C. Harbour, W. B. Huff; Marshal, D. Jones; Treasurer, M. W. Diggs; Clerk, E. R. Robbins.

Until the commencement of the Bee-Line Railroad, but little improvement had been made north of White River. The great route of travel from Winchester westward had for more than thirty years extended along the south side of the River. Windsor, Maxville, Winchester, were all on that side, and there seemed no prospect and no hope for the north side. But the laying of the route of the railroad through the wilderness on the north side of White River changed the whole aspect of things; and the land-owners were quick to reap their advantages therefrom. Three towns were laid out on the route of the railroad in that region—Morristown, Farmland and Royston. The latter was just one mile east of Farmland, and the success of Farmland was of course the doom of Royston. Royston never saw the light. Morristown has grown somewhat, but Farmland has risen to the dignity of a flourishing and important local center, being now, after Union City and Winchester, and perhaps Ridgeville, the largest town in Randolph County, and one of the four places in the county whose future seems to be assured, the fourth being Ridgeville. Ridgeville, in fact, has apparently greater advantages of situation than Farmland. The elements of a town would seem to have existed at the former location from the first. A good mill site, the head of navigation on the Mississinewa, and of trade and commerce for that region; while Farmland was in the vast wilderness, on the wrong side of White River, and absolutely nothing to show for itself; yet Ridgeville lay there, helpless and hopeless. And it was not until two railroads had stretched their iron tracks across her site that she seemed to awake to the possibilities of the situation, and that she appeared to think it worth while to try to be something in the world. Whether she will be able to make up in the future for her negligence in the past, time alone can tell.

ROYSTON.

Location, S. E. S. W. 17, 20, 13, one mile east of Farmland, on Bee-Line. Recorded September 27, 1851. Elisha Doty, proprietor. T. C. Puckett, surveyor. Thirty-three lots. Town extinct.

The history of Royston has not been written by another, neither do we write it. If it ever had a life and activity of its own, they have been lost—lost—lost. And it is well; for two towns so near as Royston and Farmland could not dwell in the same land in peace. So Royston, timid little sister, has gathered up her skirts and left.

It is somewhat remarkable that, of the three projected railroad towns within the bounds of Monroe Township, the earliest should be totally extinct, having had, perhaps, never any more than a paper existence, and the youngest of the three should be the one that has come to be the "Queen of the Isles" and mistress of the situation. But, as often heretofore, so now the Scripture is fulfilled, "the last shall be first," and we might add, as in this case it appears, the first shall be—nowhere.

BIOGRAPHY.

William Broderick came to Randolph County in 1853, having been born in Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1809. He married Mary Dungan in 1836, who was born in 1814. They have had ten children—three grown and two married. He resides some two miles north of Farmland, Monroe Township. He is a professing Christian, and a member of the Republican party. He has been all his life a farmer, and, though not rich in this world's goods he is rich in those nobler and better treasures—a clear reputation, a steadfast character, the consciousness of duty done, and an unfailing hope and assurance of a treasure in the skies.

Jacob Driver (brother-in-law of Morgan Mills) was born in Butler County, Ohio, in 1806; married Margaret McNees in 1825; came to White River in 1821 (with his father, John Driver, who came in that year, and died in 1824, his wife also dying in the same year). Jacob Driver settled first on the "Old Purchase," but in 1834 he entered eighty acres in the "New Purchase," and settled upon that. He had twelve children—eight now living, and six married. His wife died in 1869. He has belonged to the Christian [New-Light] Church forty years. He is a Republican in politics. Indeed, in Monroe Township, to state the thing is scarcely necessary, since Democrats in that locality are very rare. A few years ago, at one election, only a single Democrat voted in the Farmland Precinct. In other townships in the county the balance has been some of the time almost as strongly the other way.

James Driver was born in 1796, in Butler County, Ohio. He came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1821; married Sarah Rudy; had eight children, and died in 1870, seventy-four years old. His wife died in 1878. He emigrated to Missouri, and to Minnesota, and, after awhile, returned to Indiana. His widow died in Illinois, on her way to Indiana.

Elias F. Holliday, Farmland, was born in New Jersey in 1824. He came to Wayne County, Ind., in 1832; married Jane Ringo in 1836; moved to Randolph in 1851; resides in Farmland, and has five children. He was a merchant from 1851 to 1861; was County Treasurer from 1861 to 1865, and County Commissioner from 1876 to 1882. He has been a farmer, stock-trader, merchant, etc. He has for thirty years been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a sterling Republican, as are also all of his relatives. Mr. Holliday is a worthy citizen, respected and confided in by all who know him.

Joseph Hewitt, Farmland (mentioned also in Stony Creek), was born in Ross County, Ohio, in 1808. His father, William Hewitt, came from Ireland in 1784, having been born in 1767. William Hewitt came with two of his uncles, one of whom lived to the age of one hundred and ten and the other to one hundred and fifteen years. He died in 1850, eighty-four years old. Joseph Hewitt married Sarah Putman in 1830, and came to Randolph County, near Neff Post Office, in 1841. They had ten children, all grown and married, and nine are living yet. Joseph Hewitt has been a farmer all his life, as also a heavy stock-dealer. He has owned 250 head of hogs at one time, and 100 head of cattle. For years he was the only trader in the region, being perhaps the first, or nearly so. It was a troublesome and difficult task, in those rugged times, to handle cattle and swine, driven, through mud and snow, and sleet and floods, to the distant markets—to Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, and even to Philadelphia and Baltimore, and sometimes to New York and Boston. To follow the stock business then required energy and "grit" in a high degree. Joseph Hewitt has been a man highly esteemed, very useful and greatly beloved, often chosen arbitrator; active in religion, and in every good thing. He joined the Methodist Church forty years ago, and belongs to it still. He now resides at Farmland, enjoying a pleasant and vigorous old age, and still engaged in active employment. In his earlier years, he was a Jackson Democrat, but went with the Republican party, and clings to that organization still.

Abram Hammer was born in Pennsylvania in 1817; came to Licking County, Ohio, in 1828, and to Randolph County, Ind., in 1838. He married Nancy Harbour (daughter of Rev. Elijah Harbour, of Green Township) in 1839. They have had five children, all living and four married. He settled on land entered by his father, and now owns 200 acres, being prominent among the farmers of the township. He is a member of the United Brethren Church, and in politics a Republican. His wife is a Methodist, as was her worthy father before her. Mr. Hammer has a fine, comfortable residence, with substantial improvements, and has reason to thank a kind Providence for the blessing vouchsafed upon his energetic labors, and for his success in causing "the wilderness to bud and blossom like the rose."

Eli Hiatt was born near Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1801; was raised in Highland County, Ohio, till ten years old, and then in Clinton County, Ohio. He came upon Greensfork, two miles west of Lynn, near Cherry Grove, in 1825; changed to Sparrow Creek in 1829, owning there 134 acres of land; moved south of Farmland in 1837, and west of New Dayton in 1863. His wife died thirty-three years ago, and he has lived a widower ever since. They had eight children; seven are living, and all the seven are married. His mother died when he was a babe, and he was raised by his grandfather, Dan Bales, who came to Randolph County in 1826, and entered land in the region. Settlers at that time were (in Cherry Grove) Joseph Thornburg (came perhaps in 1815 or 1816), Jacob Bales (came perhaps in 1815 or 1816), Curtis Bales (came perhaps in 1815 or 1816). Stephen Hockett came before the above. Paul Beard and Jesse Johnson lived near Lynn. Eli Hiatt died in the fall of 1880, aged seventy-nine years. He was a Friend and a Republican.

Aaron Macy, Farmland, is the son of Jonathan Macy; was born in Henry County, Ind., in 1829; removed to Farmland in 1852, and has three children.

David Macy, Farmland, was born on Lost Creek, Tennessee, in 1816; married Priscilla Luellen in 1836; moved to Farmland in 1860; has had ten children, one of them being "Chet" (John Winchester) Macy, Clerk of Randolph Circuit Court. He has been for years, and still is, a business man in Farmland; is a stanch Friend, a sterling Republican, and a worthy and estimable citizen.

Jethro Macy, Farmland, was born in Henry County, Ind., in 1825, and now resides in Farmland. He has been married four times—Rebecca Allen, Rachel Allen, Abigail Macy, Ann Kigni. They have had five children. He came to Randolph County in 1854.

Joseph Macy was born in North Carolina in 1808; came to Randolph County, Ind., in 1820; married Sarah Hobson, and has had ten children. He was a Friend, a farmer, and a very worthy and estimable man. He died in 1880, seventy-two years of age.

William Macy, son of Joseph Macy, was born in North Carolina in 1802; married Lucy Diggs in 1829; emigrated to Randolph County, Ind., and, not long ago, to Wisconsin, and afterward to Iowa. He was a physician and a Republican, as also, in former times, an Abolitionist. He raised a large family, being the father of Capt. William W. Macy, ex-Sheriff of Randolph County. He was one of the proprietors of the town of Farmland in 1853. Mr. Macy died at Adel, Iowa, of pneumonia, aged seventy-nine years, one of the pioneers of Randolph, and well worthy of that noble band of men.

Moses Marks was born June 21, 1818, in Ross County, Ohio; his father was John Marks and in the family there were seven girls and two boys. Mr. Marks came to Monroe Township, Randolph County, Ind,, in 1845, when that region was still covered with forests. He had married before leaving Ross County, Ohio. his wife's name being Mary Jane Jameson, and they have had four children, two of whom are now living. He was brought up a farmer boy, and when grown, took up the carpenter trade following it for some ten years, before coming to Randolph and somewhat afterward. For six years, he was engaged in clearing a farm in the Randolph woods. In 1852, he entered the Methodist itineracy, having joined that church in 1839. After traveling circuit for nine years, he located, in 1861, returning to the labors of the farm, engaging, also, somewhat in preaching and riding circuit one year. His wife died March, 1880. In politics, he was, in old times, a Democrat, voting for Van Buren, Polk, Cass and Pierce. At the rise of the Republican party, he joined it, voting for Fremont, Lincoln, Grant, Hayes and Garfield. He used to belong to F. & A. M., but does not at the present time. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. His oldest son, John S. Marks, was a member of the Forty-first Indiana (Second Cavalry), dying at Corinth, Miss., June, 1862. Mr. Marks is a genial companion and friend and an estimable and useful citizen.

Thomas Wallace was born in 1807, in Tennessee, and came to Ohio when a boy. In 1835, he married Frances Hayes. They came to Randolph County in 1838, settling one mile north of Windsor, entering eighty-eight acres of land and buying 280 acres second-hand. They have had but one child. He died in 1870, and was buried in Windsor Cemetery. T. W. was a Methodist, a Whig, an Abolitionist, a Republican, a good man and a worthy and prominent citizen. The settlers when they came were Jacob Brower, four miles east; John Stucker, one-half mile east; Jacob Jones, on Campbell Creek; Amos Meeks, also on Campbell Creek, five or six miles north of Wallace's. After Wallace came were Samuel Shimer, in 1839, one mile north of Parker; Huston Harris, 1842, nearer Parker; Milton Harris, 1842, south of Parker; George Hutchens, east of Parker. His wife is still living, an active, energetic old lady, on the old homestead. The first school in the neighborhood was during the second winter after they came. The house was a log cabin, one-fourth of a mile up the river, and the teacher was John Boyse, a young man, who marrying shortly, soon lost his wife by death, and did not long survive her.

JOSEPH B. BRANSON.

Joseph B. Branson was born April 15, 1830, in Chatham County, N. C., and in the fall of 1837 removed with his parents, Levi and Rachel Branson, to Washington, Wayne County, Ind. After remaining there about a year, the family removed to Miami County, Ind., when that county was but sparsely settled, and many representatives of the Indian tribes still lingered there. In 1840, the father died, and the mother, with her family, returned to Wayne County. At a later date, she married David Maxwell, of Union County, Ind., where the subject of this sketch continued to reside with his mother and stepfather until 1851. In that year he came to Randolph County, where he has ever since resided. He engaged in the house-carpenter's trade, and for ten years or more, continued in that line of employment. He was reared on a farm, and, after a successful experience as a builder, he resumed agricultural pursuits in 1862, and has since continued to cultivate his large farm with very satisfactory and profitable results. In addition to the pursuit of farming, he has a half interest in a hardware store in the thriving little town of Farmland, and is associated with the mercantile interests of that place. Has been identified with the growth and development of this county for more than thirty years, and has always been a liberal, public-spirited citizen, ready to encourage all enterprises of public benefit, and contribute generously when such enterprises appealed to the public generosity. During the late civil war he was especially active in assisting the families of soldiers, and performed many deeds of kindness and charity during that trying period, known only to the recipients, and by them gratefully remembered. His life has been honorable and upright, and in all his dealings with his fellow-men he has won and retained their confidence and good will by his fairness and unselfishness. In his political affiliations, he is a very pronounced Republican, and has accomplished no small amount of good for the party by his influence in its behalf. He has never been ambitious for office, but once consented to serve as Justice of the Peace, and discharged the duties of that office with ability and honor. He was reared under the influences of the Society of Friends, with which society he is now identified. His maternal grandparents, James and Marian Mendenhall, were of the same religious order. Mr. Branson has been twice married, first, in the spring of 1854 to Miss Catharine, daughter of Peter S. and Catharine Miller, who came to Randolph County from Pennsylvania in 1839. This union was blessed by six children—Wellington, Mary D., Naomi M., Ida B., Viola A. and Flora A. On the 23d of August, 1876, his wife died, leaving a void in the family circle and in the hearts of her loved ones that could never be filled. Two years and three months after her demise, Mr. Branson was united in marriage with Mrs. Matilda Hawkins, widow of Simeon Hawkins, of Hamilton County, Ind. Mrs. Branson is the daughter of John and Angelina Morris, who lived near Noblesville, Ind. She is an estimable lady, and shares with her husband the affectionate regard of a large circle of friends.

WILLIAM BAILY, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in Liverpool, Eng., October 23, 1843. He came to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1858, and from thence removed to this county in the year 1853. He was married to Elizabeth Morris September 13, 1866. They have two children—Sarah T. and David N. Mrs. Baily was born June 30, 1848. They were both educated in the log schoolhouse so familiar in pioneer days. He served in the war for the Union three years in Company K, Thirty-sixth Regiment Indiana Infantry, and six months in Company A, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Regiment. Mr. Baily worked at type-making in his early life, but for a number of years has been engaged in farming and stock-raising. Is a member of the Methodist Church. Has a farm of 100 acres of valuable land, and is a worthy citizen of the neighborhood in which he resides.

SAMUEL T. BOTKIN is a resident of Farmland, Monroe Township. He was born in West River Township, Randolph County, July 14, 1830. His father, Jonathan Botkin, was a native of Virginia, and emigrated from thence to Tennessee, and from there to Randolph County in 1815. In 1854, Samuel T. was married to Miss Mary A. Byrd, of Wayne County, Ind. They had born to them four children—Alonzo R., Jonathan H., Clara B. and Henry S. Mrs. Botkin died May 27, 1864. June 11, 1865, Mr. Botkin was married a second time to Martha L. McIntire. Her people were originally from Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Botkin have two children—Edgar T. and William T. Mr. Botkin was educated in the common schools of the country and by self-culture. He has been practically engaged (clerking) in the mercantile business for thirty-two years. During all of that time he has not been distrusted by either his employers or customers. His reputation for fair dealing is widely known and favorably commented upon. He is a member of the fraternity of Freemasons, Lodge No. 308, at Farmland, and the Independent Order of I. O. O. F., No. 208, of Farmland. He rests his hopes in future happiness in the doctrine of Methodism, and choses the Republican party to manage the Government in which he lives. He owns a farm of 169 acres, and is much interested in bringing it up to a high state of cultivation.

WILLIAM B. CARTER is a resident of Farmland, and is a hardware merchant. He was born in Clinton County, Ohio, December 11, 1835, and was educated in the common schools of Ohio. He is a son of Wilson and Judith Carter. Before engaging in the sale of hardware he was for many years a farmer and agent for the sale of agricultural implements. Mr. Carter married Marticia Mendenhall, of Wayne County. She is a daughter of William and Rebecca (Coffin) Mendenhall. Her father died in November, 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have four children living—Ann Maria, Millicent B., Mary E. and Miriam. Mr. Carter is a member of the Friends Church, of F. & A. M., No. 308, Farmland, and I. O. O. F., No. 208, of Farmland. By close attention to business and true energy he has surrounded himself and family with all the necessaries of life. He owns a good farm and a dwelling and business house in Farmland. He belongs to the Republican party, and is an esteemed and enterprising citizen.

JOHN CONNOR, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in this county March 5, 1831. His father, Thomas Connor, was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1802, and moved to this county in 1820. Mr. Connor was married to Elizabeth A. Hester in March, 1854. They had ten children, eight living—Henry H., Josephine, Olive M., Ann B., Etta E., Florence E., Mary L. and John Carlos. The parents of Mrs. Connor formerly came from Ohio, Highland County, and they came to this county at an early date. Mr. Connor was educated in the old time schoolhouse of this county, and cut the first road through Farmland from north to south. He is a member of the Church of Friends. Owns a good farm of 130 acres. Republican in politics, and, although a pioneer, is vigorous, industrious and a good citizen.

J. S. DAVIS.

James S. Davis was born August 9, 1838, in Lawrence County, Ohio, and in infancy removed with his father, Hugh M. Davis, to Clark County, in the same State. His father was a brick and stone mason, and worked at his trade during the greater part of the time, teaching school in the winter. Until thirteen years of age, James remained near Springfield, Ohio, receiving in the meantime, the benefits of the common schools of that locality. In 1851, being then thirteen years of age, he came to Randolph County, Ind., with his parents, and from that time until he attained his majority he was engaged as a farm hand during the farming season, attending school in the winter. In the fall of 1858, he went to the State of Missouri, where he remained a year, returning to his home near Farmland at the end of that time, and entering Liber College, in Jay County. He taught school in the latter county during the ensuing winter, and in the spring of 1861, enlisted in Company C, of the Nineteenth Regiment, Indiana Volunteer Infantry. But the part he might have taken in defense of the Union, and for which his patriotism inspired him, was prevented by sickness. He was taken ill soon after the regiment reached Washington City, and when their removal was ordered he was declared unable to accompany them, and was left behind by the order of the Surgeon. He was visited in the hospital by Mrs. Caleb Smith, whose husband was Secretary of the Interior at that time, and was taken to the Secretary's home, where he remained during convalescence. At the end of seven months after his enlistment, he was discharged for physical disability, and returned to his home. He again adopted the vocation of school teaching, which he continued in the winter, interspersed with other employment in the summer, until 1869. In that year he embarked in mercantile pursuits at Farmland, and has ever since been one of the leading merchants of that town. Like many who to-day occupy similar positions, he started in life without any capital save what he had earned by hard work, and by a careful saving of his small earnings was first enabled to engage in business. In the meantime, by energy and industry, he has accumulated a comfortable estate, and occupies a prominent place in the mercantile lists of the town in which he is located. He is a man in whom energy and determination are prominent features, and to these characteristics he owes much of the success that has crowned his efforts.

He was married, in June, 1862, to Miss Lyde Ruble, daughter of Samuel and Rowena Ruble, who were among the early settlers of Randolph County. By this union they are the parents of two children—Mattie R. and Bonnie J., both of whom are now living.

In his political affiliations Mr. Davis is a Republican. He was elected Trustee of Monroe Township in 1866, and built at Farmland the second graded schoolhouse in the county. Like many innovations of a progressive nature, his action was condemned at first, and he had but few supporters. But when the school was completed, and the citizens saw how truly he had their real interests at heart, their protests turned to approbation, and their indorsement of his action found expression in repeated re-elections to the office of Trustee, which he occupied for seven consecutive terms of one year each.

In private as well as public life he is known as a man of honor and integrity, and to his personal associates he is a valued friend. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as is also his wife. He is identified with the Masonic fraternity at Farmland, having attained the Master Mason's degree. He is enterprising and public-spirited, and a worthy and highly respected citizen of the community in which he resides.

FLORIN V. FLOOD, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, December 19, 1843; he removed to this county with his parents in 1853, and was married to Julia A. Jones, who was born in Randolph County, Ind., February 11, 1848. They have six interesting children living—Robert W., Linna B., Nora C., Sarah E., Nancy N. and Julia V. Mr. Flood was educated in the common schools of the county, and has gained much useful information by reading. He enlisted in Company C, Nineteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, participating in the terrible conflicts around Petersburg, where he received a painful wound in the right arm, on the 19th of June, 1864. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, of Farmland Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 208, and a Republican from principle.

MATTHEW W. DIGGS, harness and saddlery, Farmland. Matthew W. Diggs was born June 20, 1840, in this county. His father, Armsbee, originally came from Guilford County, N. C., where he was born June 18, 1795. The father of Mr. Diggs settled in Randolph County in 1817. He settled on the farm on which he lived at the time of his death, he having cleared it from a wilderness to a cultivated and pleasant home. Mr. Diggs was married, May 4, 1863, to Ruth Diggs, who was born January 3, 1839. He was educated in the common schools of this county; followed the occupation of farming until 1865, when he engaged in harness and saddlery, in Farmland. His stock is well selected; worth $1,500, his sales reaching $3,500; is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, I. O. O. F., No. 208; ardent temperance man, and a Republican. He owns two town lots on which is one dwelling and a business building, worth $2,000. He has held the office of Town Councilor two terms, and Treasurer one term.

NATHAN E. GRAY, Farmland, was born April 21, 1841, in Randolph County, this State. His father, Edward Gray, was a native of Franklin County, Va. The family emigrated to Ohio in 1831, and from thence to this, Randolph County, where they now live. Mr. Nathan E. Gray was married to Lucinda H. Ross, September 13, 1866; they have five children—Nancy M., Laura B. and Sarah Olive, who are twins, Eliza L. and Charles E. Mrs. Gray was born in Holmes County, Ohio, in 1842, and came to this State in 1865 to engage in school teaching. Mr. Gray was educated in the common schools of the State, which did not, at that time, afford the best facilities for acquiring an education. The mother and father of Mrs. Gray were originally from Butler County, Penn., where they were born respectively in the years 1807 and 1802. Mr. and Mrs. Gray are members of the Methodist Church, and are considered worthy citizens. He followed farming until two years last past, when he engaged in the furniture and undertaking business in Farmland. He is a Republican in politics, and is considered a conscientious, law-abiding citizen.

ELIAS F. HALLIDAY, farmer and County Commissioner; is the son of William H. and Phebe (Freeman) Halliday, and was born in Morristown, N. J., January 17, 1824. He is the second son of a family of ten children, of whom seven are now living. His father was born in the State of New York in the year 1798, and his mother was born in New Jersey, 1799. They lived in Newark, N. J., until the year 1832, when they removed to this State and settled in Henry County. They lived here for about ten years, when they removed to Franklin County, Ohio, where Mrs. Halliday (Elias' mother) still lives, and where William died August, 1862. Elias was eight years of age when his parents came to this State. At the age of fourteen, he entered the store of Mark E. Reeves, of Washington, Wayne Co., Ind., where he remained for eight years in the capacity of a clerk. He was married to Jane Ringo, daughter of Peter and Margaret Ringo, of Centerville, Wayne Co., Ind., in the year 1846. After marriage, he entered into the general mercantile business in Washington, Wayne Co., and remained until 1852, when he removed to this county, and settled in Maxville, where he again entered the goods business. He remained here until 1861, when he was elected to the office of County Treasurer, and re-elected in 1863. As a business man, Mr. Halliday displayed that tact and enterprise which has characterized him through life. He was careful to look after his business in detail, and was eminently successful. After his term of four years as County Treasurer expired, he purchased a piece of land (30 acres) adjoining Farmland, and moved on it, where he still resides. He is owner and proprietor of 325 acres of excellent land situated in Monroe Township, this county. In addition to farming, Mr. Halliday is extensively engaged in buying and shipping all kinds of stock. He was first elected to the office of County Commissioner in the year 1876, and has held the office continuously ever since, his term expiring next December. As a county official, he has served the people faithfully and honestly, and will retire from office with the universal judgment, "Well done, good and faithful servant." During his term as Commissioner, a county jail has been erected at a cost of $35,000, and five excellent iron bridges at a cost of $20,000, besides many other acts of interest to the county. Mr. Halliday is ever alive to the best interests of the county, and he has done much to bring Randolph to the front rank as one of the best counties in the State. Mr. and Mrs. Halliday are the parents of seven children, of whom five are now living. Their two sons, William R. and Waldo M. are both married, and reside in Lynn, this county, where they are engaged in a general mercantile business. They also have a daughter married and living in Farmland; the other two sons are at home with their parents. Mr. H. has a fair education notwithstanding his early advantages were very poor. He is a stanch Republican, and is a member of both the orders of F., & A. M., and I. O. O. F. He and his good wife have been acceptable members of the M. E. Church for over thirty years. Mr. Halliday is one of Randolph County's substantial, honored and useful citizens, of the strictest integrity and honesty of purpose. He and his family are honored and respected by all who know them.

DEMPSEY C. HARBOUR, merchant, Farmland. Dempsey C. Harbour was born, September 13, 1854, in this county; his father, Elijah E. Harbour, was born in Fayette County, Ohio, October 16, 1831, and came to this county in 1835. Mr. Harbour was married to Alice Branson September 13, 1876, to whom one child was born, Branson E. His wife deceased April 26, 1878, and he was married the second time to Edith A. Stanley, September 19, 1880. His wife's father, Pleasant A. Stanley, was born in Union County, Ind., in 1827; moved to this county, and has been dead six years at this date. Mr. Harbour was educated in the graded schools of this county; he has followed the mercantile business from boyhood; is a member of the M. E. Church and of Farmland Lodge, No. 208, A., F. & A. M. He is a Republican in politics, a member of the firm of Stanley & Harbour, general merchandise, and is affable in conversation, courteous in business and honest in his dealings.

HENDERSON HINCHMAN, hotel and railroad agent, Parker. This worthy gentleman was born January 9, 1831, in Rush County, Ind. He moved to Madison County, this State, at six years of age; from thence to Delaware County, in October, 1865, and located in this county in April, 1870. He was united in marriage to Emily Miller December 27, 1855, who was born December 11, 1836. Mr. H. was educated in the common schools of Madison County, this State. He has followed farming, milling, merchandising, hotel keeping, and at present is railroad agent of the Bee Line at Parker; he is a member of the Christian Church, of the I. O. O. F., Parker Lodge, 170; he has five children living—Elnora A., Harriet, Minnie, William and Mary B. Mr. H. owns the hotel at Parker, and does a thriving business.

JOHN A. JONES, farmer, P. O. Parker, was born August 22, 1835, in Virginia, and came to this county in September, 1838. His father, Jacob Jones, was born January 1, 1797, and came to this county at an early period in its history. Mr. J. was married to Martha J. Williams January 9, 1858, who was born August 5, 1840. They have eight children—Laura A., born

September 27, 1861; James L., June 3, 1864; India O., November 20, 1867; Jacob M., February 20, 1869; Cordelia J., May 24, 1872; Richard H., March 5, 1874; John O., February 11, 1875; and Mary, May 18, 1879. Mr. J. was educated in the common schools of his county, and has been very successful in farming. In 1862, he was elected as Justice of the Peace of Monroe Township, and still holds the position at this period. He is is a member of the M. E. Church and of Selma Encampment, No. 64, and of Parker Lodge, No. 170, I. O. O. F. He owns a fertile farm of 300 acres of land, which is well cultivated and supplied with good buildings. He is a Republican in politics and a social and companionable citizen.

JAMES M. KEENER, physician, Farmland. James M. Keener, M. D., was born October 18, 1817, in Knox County, Tenn. His father, Jonathan, was born in West Virginia, in April, 1780; moved to Tennessee at an early date, and removed from thence to this county in 1829. Dr. Keener was united in marriage to Juliet Johnson April 29, 1855. They have one child, Attie J. Jacob Johnson, the father of Mrs. Keener, was born in New Jersey March 24, 1777, from whence he moved to Dayton, Ohio, and from thence to this county in 1830; her mother, formerly Mary Edwards, was born February 6, 1780, in Morristown, N. J., historic for its glorious scenes of the patriot cause of the Revolution Dr. Keener was educated in the old log schoolhouses that nestled here and there amidst the wilds of Indiana; he studied medicine for three years under the tutorship of Dr. Botkin, of Winchester, and soon after, by his indomitable will and close application, built up a lucrative practice; he practiced medicine when the county was a wilderness, the Indian trail his only road. He is a member of the State and county medical societies, of the Christian Church and of the A., F. & A. M., No. 308, of Farmland; his father was a soldier of the war of 1812, fought under Gen. Jackson, where he learned to early love the principles which Old Hickory taught. Dr. Keener inherited the politics of his father, but is now an earnest, consistent Republican. Although now sixty-three years of age, he is robust, muscular and active as many of much younger years; has a good practice, and is recognized as a leading physician and worthy citizen.

ANDREW J. LEVERTON, blacksmith, Farmland, was born September 27, 1846, in Maryland, and came to Indianapolis, Ind., in March, 1860; from thence to this county in January, 1869. He was married to Martha J. Somerville, December 27, 1873, who was born January, 1852. They have one child, born September 29, 1880. His father, Arthur Leverton, was born in Maryland March 17, 1802; emigrated to Indianapolis in 1860; from thence to Wayne County, Ind., in 1863, and deceased July 4, 1880. The father of Mrs. Leverton, Robert Somerville, was born September 18, 1818, and still resides in this county. Mr. Leverton was educated in the common schools of Maryland, and is now engaged in blacksmithing in Farmland. He is a Republican in politics, a member of the Christian Church, and faithful in business.

COLUMBUS W. LEWIS, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born in Wayne County, Ind., May 19, 1818; he came to this county in 1824, and married, at an early date, Jane L. Neely, to whom six children were born, of whom two are living—Charlotte M. and Salina M. He lost his first wife by death, and was married the second time to Malinda A. Segraves, formerly Spence, November 1, 1877. Her father came to this county in 1845. The father of Mr. Lewis, Richard Lewis, was born in North Carolina in 1786, removed to Wayne County, Ind., in 1811. He held the position of Captain under Gen. Harrison, and was engaged in the Indian wars of 1811-12. Mr. Lewis was educated in the old log cabin schoolhouse of pioneer days, and has followed farming for a living. He is a member of the Christian Church, a Republican in politics, and, at this date, the cares of sixty-four years seem to hang but lightly on the frame of this early pioneer.

HARVEY A. McNEES was born in Randolph County, Ind., August 9, 1838. He obtained a fair common-school education, and launched out in the cold world while quite young. He was engaged for many years in clerking in a dry goods and notion store. When Sumter was attacked and the flag dishonored, he enlisted for the defense of the Union in Company K, Nineteenth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry. In August, 1863, after having served some over two years, he had a sunstroke which incapacitated him for further military duty, and he was accordingly discharged. Since he retired from the army, he has been engaged in various occupations. He was married in March, 1864. At present, he is a resident of Farmland, Randolph Co., Ind.

W. P. MACY.

William P., son of David Macy, was born in Henry County, Ind., October 20, 1837. He was reared on a farm, attending the district schools in the winter and assisting his father during the balance of the year. When thirteen years of age, he accompanied his parents to Howard County, Ind., where his father was engaged in mercantile pursuits at the town of West Liberty. The son occupied the position of clerk in his father's store, and in his sixteenth year removed with his parents to Randolph County. His father opened a dry goods store at Farmland, in connection with which he operated a tin store. The latter establishment was afterward purchased by the son, and conducted successfully for about two years, at the end of which time he purchased a farm southwest of Farmland, and engaged in agricultural pursuits. Subsequently he purchased and removed to a farm on Bear Creek, in Franklin Township, but about four years later returned to Farmland, and again engaged in the tin business. About this time, however, he was appointed by the Treasurer of Randolph County to collect delinquent taxes, and the greater portion of his time was employed in the duties of this position. In 1870, he purchased the farm upon which he now resides, and has ever since devoted his time to its cultivation and improvement. Mr. Macy is one of that class of men whose energy and untiring industry have proved the key to success. He began life without capital, and by hard work and good management has accumulated a comfortable fortune, and now ranks among the wealthy and influential men of his township. He has always been guided by strict principles of honor in his dealings with the world, and was always above taking an unfair advantage. His possessions are the accumulated results of years of honest toil, and no sudden favor of fortune has ever transpired to augment his success. He occupies a high place in the regard of all who know him, and is recognized as one of the best citizens of the community in which he resides.

He was married, in 1856, to Demiss K. Hoogland, daughter of Isaac Hoogland, an early settler and highly respected citizen of Randolph County. The bride of his youth was the companion and helpmeet of the years that followed, and still lives to share with him the prosperity that has crowned his labors. They are the parents of nine children, all of whom, save John C., now survive. Emma V., the eldest, is the wife of Frank L. Shaw, and lives in Monroe Township; Charles C. married Elizabeth A. Stump, and lives in Green Township; Effie L. married E. S. West, and also lives in Green Township. Rosa F., Mary L., Eddie E., Sallie I. and Lulu H. remain at home.

Mr. Macy is a member of the Masonic Lodge at Farmland, and has advanced to the Master Mason's degree. In politics, he is an enthusiastic Republican, but has never aspired to office, and never occupied an elective position. He is a member of the M. E. Church, and his family are members of the same church.

JUDGE PETER S. MILLER.

Peter S. Miller was born at Farmersburg, Dauphin Co., Penn., on the 6th of February, 1808. He was the son of Peter and Catharine (Schneider) Miller, who were of German nativity. The subject of this sketch was cast upon his own resources at the age of fifteen, by the death of his father, and the necessity of earning his living thus early thrust upon him made him strong and self-reliant, and developed within him the qualities of true manhood. He first found employment in a large merchant mill, known as the "Burkley Mills," where he remained several years, acquiring in the meantime a thorough knowledge of the miller's trade. Subsequently, he accepted a position in a dry goods store, where he remained until nineteen years of age; he then associated himself with Peter Segar, and together they erected a steam flouring mill, which they conducted successfully for several years. In 1839, having sold his interest in this mill, Mr. Miller came, with his wife and family, to Indiana, and located in Randolph County, where he continued to reside until his decease. He purchased the property known as the Bales farm, about a mile above the mouth of Cabin Creek. On this property there was an old grist mill, which he repaired and put in operation, running it successfully for about five years, and finally selling it to William R. Marine, from whom it passed to John Bond and Zimri Bond, and is now known as the "Bond Mill." The farm consisted of 240 acres, and after selling the mill Mr. Miller gave his attention entirely to the improvement of this estate, and proved himself an excellent farmer. During his residence on the farm, he was elected Justice of the Peace, and at the expiration of his term was elected Judge of the Probate Court of Randolph County. In both positions he discharged his duties with eminent ability and to the satisfaction of his constituency. After serving four years on the Probate bench, he resumed the pursuit of farming, but in 1852 erected a storeroom at Farmland, and embarked in mercantile pursuits there with D. R. Ford, under the firm name of Miller & Ford. About twelve years later, Mr. Ford was succeeded in the firm by John Oakerson, and at a still later date Judge Miller sold his own interest to Thomas Kearns, and accepted the office of Postmaster and agent of the "Bee-Line" Railroad at Farmland. Two years later, he purchased a half-interest in the drug store of Dr. Henning. Shortly afterward, he purchased the interest of his associate, and erected a storeroom of his own. At a later date, he associated L. A. Gable with him as a partner, and, after conducting a successful mercantile business for about four years, determined to abandon mercantile pursuits and retire to his farm. In 1856, he purchased a farm adjoining Farmland, upon which he erected a comfortable residence. Here he resided, surrounded by his family, and here, in 1876, he died. He was a zealous and consistent member of the Christian Church, and was known as a good man, in the best sense of that term. Throughout his life, he was a hard worker—energetic, industrious and enterprising, and in his business transactions scrupulously honest. He was the friend of progress and public improvement, and all enterprises inaugurated with the view of promoting the public welfare were sure of his encouragement and support; he was one of the first friends of the Indianapolis & Bellefontaine (now C., C., C. & I.) Railroad, and served as a Director until the change in the organization of the road. Politically, he was at first a Whig, but upon the organization of the Republican party he embraced its principles, and was, until his death, one of its unwavering adherents. He was identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was an active and zealous member of that fraternity. At the age of nineteen years, on the 25th of September, 1827, Mr. Miller was united in marriage with Miss Catharine Moyer, daughter of Jacob and Catharine Moyer, of Berks County, Penn. By this union they were the parents of thirteen children, viz.: Morgan, Mary Ann, Catharine, Francis, James, Elizabeth, Maria L., Caroline, Elisha A., Abigail, Rachel, Ellen and Matilda, of whom nine survived their father and are now married. The mother still resides at the old homestead, loved and respected by all who know her.

JOHN A. MOORMAN was born Aug. 19, 1820, in Richmond Co., North Carolina. His father, Carlton Moorman, was a native of the same county, and grew to manhood there. In 1819, he married Miss Rebecca Webb, a native of North Carolina, and in April, 1822, came with his wife and son to Indiana, identifying himself with the pioneer history of Randolph County. They located near the present site of Farmland, at a time when the region was almost completely a wilderness, and educational and religious privileges limited. The father was possessed of ample means, and gave his children access to all the sources of instruction then extant in the neighborhood. During the boyhood of his son John, these sources of information were never more than country schools of the crudest order, and the latter is indebted to his own studious mind, more than to schools, for a fund of information and a store of knowledge. At the age of sixteen years, the subject of this sketch accepted a position in the store of Goodrich Brothers, at Winchester. He remained with this firm about four years, and at the end of that time, in 1840, he was united in marriage with Miss Nancy, daughter of John and Rachel Hiatt. Immediately after his marriage, he located upon a farm in White River Township, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits for the ensuing seven years. In 1847, death visited his home, and the faithful wife was called from the love of her family and the embraces of dear ones, to an eternal rest, leaving three children—Luther L., Orange W. and Nancy E. to mourn her loss. The home circle was broken, and the father sold the property where the first seven years of his wedded life had been passed, investing in a piece of unimproved land. Shortly after the decease of his wife, he entered the seminary at Winchester, where he spent one term in study. In 1849, he was united in the ties of matrimony to Miss Mercy Shaw, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth Shaw, of Wayne County, Ind., and again engaged in the pursuit of farming, which he continued until after the close of the war. In 1866, he sold his farm and moved to the town of Farmland, where for the next ten years, he was associated with the firm of Robbins & Stanley. In 1877, he retired from active business life, except that he still conducts a profitable insurance business, and discharges the duties of the office of Notary Public.

In the great political issues that have marked the past, Mr. Moorman has taken an active and conscientious part. In 1838, before he had attained his majority, he was a very pronounced Abolitionist, and worked zealously for the success of the principles of that party. In 1842, he was nominated by that party for the office of Treasurer of Randolph County, and although he received the entire vote of his party in this county, it was not sufficient to elect him, while the Whigs and the Democrats both had tickets in the field, opposed to the platform upon which he stood. In 1856, he joined hands with those who organized the Republican party, and entered with new zeal into the work of this organization. In 1860, he was nominated by this party as the Representative from this district to the State Legislature. He was elected by a flattering majority, and went into the halls of the State Capitol without legislative experience, and at a time when a dark war cloud hovered over the land, threatening daily to break and scatter its horrors broadcast. And in the stormy scenes and the heated discussions that took place subsequently, he took a bold, honorable and manly part, always acting with the Republicans, and by every means possible assisting to sustain and encourage Gov. Morton in the trials thus thrust upon him. When in 1862, the famous "Military Bill" was introduced, Mr. Moorman was one of the Republican "bolters," or one among those who, to break the quorum and prevent revolutionary legislation, ran away, until the session should expire by limitation. We have no apology to offer for his conduct or that of his companions. They saved Indiana the disgrace of removing from her Governor his power over the military forces of the State, and investing it in three State officers known to be inimical to the Government. Owing to the expiration of this session by limitation, no action was had on the appropriation bills, and Gov. Morton was compelled to borrow money upon his own credit, until the next General Assembly convened, and sustained his action, making the necessary appropriations. At the close of his first term in 1861, Mr. Moorman returned to his home, and was immediately elected his own successor for the session of 1862–63. He had a voice in the proceedings which resulted in the election of Hon. Henry S. Lane to the United States Senate, and other important legislation which characterized the period in which he served. At the close of the session in 1863, he tendered his resignation, and was appointed by Gov. Morton as First Lieutenant and Quartermaster of the One Hundred and Seventeenth Regiment Indiana Volunteers. He accompanied this regiment to the field, acting as its Quartermaster until the expiration of its term of service, in the spring of 1864, excepting a short time when he served as Division Quartermaster. From the close of this term of service until 1876, he remained in private life. But in the Centennial campaign the Republicans of this district again nominated him to represent them in the General Assembly of the State. He was elected, and took part in all the legislation of that session, voting favorably to the bill for the erection of the new State House. At the close of this session, he retired from political life with a record of which he and his posterity may feel justly proud. He served the cause of the Union in many substantial ways, and boldly stood forth for the right against powerful opposition. In all he did, he was actuated by motives of honesty and patriotism, and to him and those with whom he was associated in the dark times of 1861 to 1864 is due the gratitude of a loyal people.

In 1836, at the age of sixteen years, Mr. Moorman identified himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Later in life, he attached himself to the Wesleyan Methodist Church, which denomination he found to be peculiarly in harmony with his anti-slavery views. He entered the ministry of this church, and for a number of years traveled as a supply. Later, upon the dissolution of the church in this county, he re-united with the M. E. Church, and has ever since labored as a local minister in that denomination. During this period, he has been an active worker in all the temperance organizations, from the Washingtonian Society to those of the present day. During the existence of the Sons of Temperance, he served the order in various official capacities, and was Grand Patriarch of Indiana for the term of one year. In 1858, he became an Odd Fellow, and after passing the chairs of the subordinate lodge and Encampment, was elevated to the office of Grand High Priest of the Grand Encampment of Indiana.

In all the relations of life, social, private and public, Mr. Moorman has maintained the same reputation for probity and integrity, and by an honorable life and Christian example, has endeared himself to all with whom he has been associated, and wielded an influence in the community which, though quiet, is no less potent. His wife, to whom he was wedded in 1849, is still spared to share with him the triumphs and disappointments, the pleasures and pains of his later years. To bless this second union, there were seven children, viz.: Malinda, Emma, Melvina, Calvin, William, Rosa and John, of whom all now survive, save William. Orange W., a son by the first marriage, is engaged in business at Indianapolis, and Calvin resides in Delaware County, Ind. With these two exceptions, all the children reside in Randolph County.

JOSEPH MEEKS, farmer, P. O. Parker, was born December 29, 1834, in the State of Virginia; he came here, to this county, in 1837, and was married to Elizabeth Shroyer April 16, 1860. He received the rudiments of an education in the common schools of that day, and has engaged in farming and stock-raising from boyhood. He has two children—Martin A. (born January 8, 1861) and Cora A. (August 12, 1867). His father, Amos Meeks, was originally from Virginia, coming to this State in pioneer days; deceased April, 1876. He buys and sells $500,000 worth of stock annually; owns a beautiful farm of 390 acres of land, well cultivated, and on which are erected fine buildings. He is a member of the M. E. Church, and an honest, industrious citizen.

CYRUS S. MOORE, merchant, Farmland, was born in Randolph County, Ind., December 21, 1833. His father's name was William, who was born in Virginia; came to Ohio in the year 18—, and from thence to this county. Mr. M. has been married twice; the first time to Jane Taylor, May 14, 1856, who was born ; the second time to Emma R. Lamb, October 17, 1867. She was born May 12, 1838, in Wayne County, Ind. Her maiden name was Jobes, and she was married the first time to William Lamb, in August, 1854, whom she lost by death. Mr. Moore was educated in the common schools of this county, and is a man who gains much information by reading and observation. He followed farming until twenty-one years of age, and has since been engaged in buying stock and merchandising. He and Mrs. Moore own town property of the value of $1,200, and a well-selected stock of goods worth $6,000, with annual sales reaching $15,000. Those who call on Mr. and Mrs. Moore will find it to their advantage to deal with them, as they are social and accommodating. Mr. Moore is a member of I. O. O. F., No. 208, of Farmland, and he and his wife consistent members of the Friends Church.

ENOS R. ROBBINS, druggist, Farmland. The subject of this sketch was born June 22, 1853, in Darke County, Ohio, and came to this county, with his parents, in September, 1853. His father, Solomon Robbins, was born in North Carolina in November, 1811. His mother, formerly Mary Shepherd, was born in Pennsylvania April 13, 1818. Mr. Robbins was married, July 24, 1875, to Alfaretta Bates. They have three children—Melvin E., Thomas D. and Jessie Maybelle. He was educated in the graded and ungraded schools of this county. He has been a member of the Christian Church, and is a Republican in politics. He is also a member of F. & A. M., Lodge No. 308, of Farmland, and has followed the business of a druggist from boyhood. He is a member of the firm of Robbins & Merridith, druggists. They carry a stock of $3,000, and their annual sales reach $7,000. He is considered a reliable business man.

JOHN R. SCOTT, merchant, Parker, was born May 8, 1829, in the State of Delaware. He came to Franklin County, Ind., in 1853; from thence to Delaware County, and in 1873 settled in this county. He was married to Miss Sarah E. Cozatt November 16, 1854, and they have five children living—Alpharetta E., John H., Winfield, Annie E. and Harriet. His father, John Scott, was born in Delaware, and deceased there October 16, 1844. The father of Mrs. Scott, Henry Cozat, was originally from Kentucky, settled in Ohio and died there in 1852. Mr. Scott was educated in the common schools of Maryland and Delaware, and has followed successfully farming, milling and merchandising. He is a member of the M. E. Church, of the I. O. O. F., No. 170, Parker Lodge. He owns sixty-six acres of land, a dwelling and business house; he has a well-selected stock of goods, with an increasing trade; his card is John R. Scott, dealer in dry goods, groceries and notions, Parker, Ind.

REUBEN C. SHAW.

Reuben C. Shaw was born March 14, 1826, in the city of Boston, Mass. His father, David E. Shaw, was the captain of an ocean vessel and a man of strong character; he died young, however, and his children grew up without the care and protection of a father, though the guidance of their young lives was left to the safe hands of a noble mother, whose precepts, early instilled, have borne good fruit in the later years of the lives of her children, and she still lives to see them occupying their stations among the best citizens of the community in which they are severally located.

Reuben C., the subject of this sketch, received a good education in the schools of his native city, and when a young man entered upon an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, learning also the higher branches of architectural drawing and designing and stair-building, serving three years for his board and $120 for the entire term. In 1847, he was united in marriage with Miss Rebecca P. Smith, who was born on Cape Cod; her father was a seafaring man for forty years, and for thirty years of that period was the captain of a vessel. In 1849, Mr. Shaw started across the plains to California, where he spent some time in mining, but did not give his attention exclusively to this pursuit. The reports of the topographical survey under Gen. Fremont had then been recently published, and it was his enthusiasm in geology more than a desire for the acquisition of gold that drew him thither. In 1852, he started homeward, making the entire journey by water, and, surviving the perils of Cape Horn, reached his home in safety, and resumed his former occupation. In 1855, he started for the West with his wife and eldest son, hoping here to find better opportunities for advancing his fortunes than were offered in the overcrowded cities of the East. Randolph County, Ind., happened to be on his route, and in passing through it the many evidences of thrift and prosperity observable throughout the farming community suggested to his mind that the days of log-cabins would soon be past, and that the prospects here for a mechanic of his guild were very favorable. He located a mile north of Farmland, then a very unpretentious village, and purchased forty acres of land, combining the pursuit of farming with his trade. His life was all before him then, and he had his fortune to earn while he was in his prime; and with this thought in view, he bent his energies to his work with a decision that erelong returned good results. His course was ever forward, and his property began to accumulate. The little farm of forty acres gradually widened, by sundry purchases, and he now owns 181 acres of well-tilled land. The management of his farm has been largely intrusted to his sons, his own time having been taken up by his trade, in the erection of houses and the construction of bridges throughout the county. His success merits commendation and his course is worthy of emulation. Like many of our most substantial citizens, he began poor, and by his own energy and industry has accumulated a competence, now ranking among the wealthy men of his township. In the accumulation of property, he has been guiltless of any sordid propensities, and his disposition to enjoy life has been a marked feature of his character. His home is a model of convenience and comfort, surrounded with all the appointments that good taste could suggest. The best of books are to be found in his library, and from his perusal of them he has derived benefits beyond the value of money. He is an enthusiastic geologist, and during a period of forty years or more has collected a cabinet of rare and valuable specimens, in which he feels a justifiable pride. In his intercourse with the world, he has established the reputation of an honest man, and for his integrity and correct principles he is universally respected among those who know him. In his political relations, he is enthusiastically a Republican. He has used his influence for the success of his party from 1856 to the present time, and always unselfishly. He has never sought office, nor would he ever permit his name to be used as a candidate for any elective position. In April, 1881, however, without his knowledge or consent, he was appointed by the Circuit Court as a member of the Board of Drainage Commissioners of the county, to serve for a term of three years. His appointment for the long term indicated the confidence of the court in his ability and eminent fitness for the place, and the work in which he is engaged is one that will have an important bearing upon the future prosperity of this county. His wife is an excellent woman, and to her superior ability and excellent management Mr. Shaw acknowledges his indebtedness for much of his success. While he was absent, working at his trade, she would direct and manage the affairs of the farm, and by her careful economy and watchfulness over his interests has proved herself a helpmeet in the truest sense. Their wedded life has been blessed by five children, all of whom have grown to honorable and useful maturity, and are now living in sight of their father's house. Walter C., the eldest son, served one year during the late war as a member of the Second Indiana Battery. He married Eliza J. Macy, and now conducts a farm near his father's. Sylvera B. married Hamilton L. Penery; Josephine W. married Oliver H. Warren; Frank L. married Emma Macy; and Frederick P. married Ella C. Friar.

CHARLES H. STANLEY, merchant, Farmland, of the firm of Stanley & Harbour, was born in Wayne County, Ind., June 22, 1826. His father, Charles H. Stanley, originally came from England; at the age of eighteen, went to Virginia, and removed to Wayne County, this State, at an early period of its history. Mr. Stanley was married twice, the first time to Margaret A. Williams, who was born in Wayne County, Ind., December 18, 1828. They had two children, one living—Albert M. Mrs. Stanley deceased December 11, 1854. He was married the second time to Mary L. Johnson, formerly Jones, December 25, 1861. She was born September 27, 1838. They have three children living—Ora C., Daniel P. and Daisey M. Mrs. Stanley's parents were formerly from Virginia, and came to this county about the year 1839. Mr. Stanley was educated in the common schools of the county; is a member of Farmland Lodge, A., F. & A. M.; owns 220 acres of land, valuable mill, and town property. The firm carries a stock of $10,000 merchandise, their annual sales reaching $25,000. He had two brothers in the war for the Union—James M. and Benjamin F.. James M. being killed at Vicksburg. Mr. Stanley is a good business man. Through care and frugality he has succeeded well in life. He is Republican in politics, and is held in high regard by his fellow-citizens for his honor and integrity. The firm card is Stanley & Harbour, dealers in general merchandise, wool and grain.

WILLIAM H. SUMWALT, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born October 4, 1817, in Baltimore, Md. He came to Dayton, Ohio, in 1820, and from thence to this county in 1825. He was married to Rachel Shearer, of Ohio, November 13, 1845, who deceased May 12, 1877. They had six children, of whom five are living—Jemima E., Thomas J., Benjamin F., Francis A. and Joseph A. His father, John Sumwalt, took part in the war of 1812, and assisted in the defense of Baltimore against the attack of the British. Mr. Sumwalt was educated in the common school of the county; owns a good farm of 260 acres, which he cleared by his own industry; is a member of the Methodist Church, and of I. O. O. F., No. 208, of Farmland. He is Republican in politics, and esteemed by all who know him.

ISAAC THORNBURG, farmer, P. O. Farmland, was born November 7, 1833, in Clinton County, Ohio, and came to this county in the year 1833. He was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Malissa Clevenger, September 28, 1854, who was born in this county May 3, 1834. They had twelve children, of whom five are living—Thomas W., Sarah A., Zephora E., Elmer E. and Alva A. Mr. T. was educated in the common schools of early days, and has followed the occupation of farming. His father Alexander, was originally from Ohio, and came to Delaware County, this State, at an early date, and died in Iowa January, 1882. The father of Mrs. Thomburg, Wesley Clevenger, was originally from Kentucky, and came to this State some years ago. Mr. Thornburg is a worthy member of the Christian Church; owns a fertile farm of 160 acres of land; Republican in politics, and is a gentleman of more than ordinary intelligence and hospitality.

WILLIAM H. WOOD, farmer, P. O. Parker. This esteemed citizen was born October 28, 1835, in Ross County, Ohio; he came, with his parents, to this county at three years of age, and received the rudiments of his education in the rural district school, near where he now resides. He was united in marriage, November 10, 1859, to Margaret C. Mark, who was a native of Fayette County, Ohio, and born April 7, 1839. He and wife are worthy members of the M. E. Church, and are generally respected. He owns a valuable farm of 500 acres of land, and is noted for his industry. His father, James Wood, was born in Maryland in 1807, emigrated to Ross County, Ohio, in 1836; deceased June 24, 1862. Moses Mark, the father of Mrs. Wood, was a native of Ross County, born June 21, 1817; came to this county in 1840, and for one of his age is very active. Mr. Wood has an interesting family of three children—Oscar M., born November 15, 1860; Carrie M., January 21, 1867; and Emma O., February 3, 1876.

FRANCIS M. WOOD, hardware, Parker, was born September 11, 1844, in Morrow County, Ohio. He was united in the holy bonds of matrimony June 3, 1877, to Martha J. Hawkins, who was born in Evansville, Ind., February 2, 1850. Mr. W. was educated in the common schools of Ohio, and at present is engaged in the hardware business. He has a well-selected stock of goods usually kept in a country store, and from his increasing trade, is giving general satisfaction. Those who call on him will find him to be a courteous gentleman. He has two interesting children—Thomas M., born March 26, 1878, and Alice, August 2, 1879, deceased Eebruary 27, 1880; Fred E. Wood, born September 22, 1880; Annettie Wood, born December 28, 1881.

SAMUEL WRIGHT, carpenter, Farmland, was born in this county September 29, 1832. His father, Emson Wright, was a native of Virginia, where he was born November 15, 1797; he came to Clinton County, Ohio, at an early date, and removed to this county in the spring of 1819. Mr. Wright was married, February 7, 1856, to Lucinda A. Pursley, who was born in this county March 18, 1838, deceased June 21, 1879. They had four children, of which three are living—Martha E, Charles C. and Laura E. James Pursley, the father of Mrs. Wright, was born in Virginia, 1807; his father, Jesse, served in the Revolution and in the war of 1812. Mr. Wright was educated in the common schools of the county, is a member of A., F. & A. M., No. 308, Farmland. Served through the war for the Union in Company A, Eighty-four Indiana Infantry. He followed farming till the age of nineteen, since he worked at his trade. He is a member of the Christian Church, and owns a fertile farm of 131 acres of land; is a Republican in politics, and an industrious citizen.
